2821. The Accused also spoke to other Bosnian Serb leaders about the chance to create “our independent state and our Army”.⁹³¹⁴ In this regard, the Accused also spoke about the preparation of their constitution and laws which would create “the basis to receive the Army on our territory”.⁹³¹⁵

2822. The Accused at Bosnian Serb Assembly sessions reported on the progress of international negotiations with respect to the situation in BiH and his view on what conditions and developments were unacceptable to Bosnian Serbs and what he viewed as attempts to prevent the Serbs from creating a state and exercising their right to self-determination.⁹³¹⁶ In March 1992, the Accused complained about the manner in which Bosnian Muslim leaders were conducting negotiations but stated that “[f]ortunately we have not been relying on those talks but have created preconditions for the security of the Serb people in their ethnic space within BiH [...] we have not passed the opportunity to complete all the actions necessary for the protection of Serb people”.⁹³¹⁷

2823. In March 1992, the SDS Executive Board confirmed the objective of creating a Serb state in BiH, with its own army and media.⁹³¹⁸ Doyle testified that at the conferences he attended the general understanding was that “the overall objective of Serbs was to join physically the territories that the Serbs controlled in Bosnia to the territory of Serbia to create a Greater Serbia”.⁹³¹⁹ Okun also testified that the goal of the Bosnian Serb leadership was to create an ethnically Serb state in BiH.⁹³²⁰ The difficulty of this objective of ethnic separation was that BiH was highly intermixed.⁹³²¹ Vitomir Žepinić, for example, warned Plavšić that if they tried to separate the ethnic communities “there would be violence and thousands of innocent civilians would be killed”.⁹³²²

2824. Krajišnik in March 1992 wrote to Cutileiro and emphasised that the Bosnian Serbs were opposed to the independence of BiH and the creation of a unitary state which could have “catastrophic consequences” and he advocated the creation of “three-national state entities”.⁹³²³ Krajišnik also expressed their fear about becoming a national minority in a fundamentalistic Muslim BiH.⁹³²⁴

2825. On 17 May 1992, the Accused, Krajišnik, and Mladić attended a meeting with the SAO Romanija and heads of neighbouring municipalities in Sokolac where the political and security situation was discussed and the Accused indicated that “[w]e are looking for results from the army [...] [w]e want our people to be kept safe”.⁹³²⁵ The Accused went on to recall that creating a separate Serb state and taking that state out of BiH remained the priority and that they should

Similarly, other witnesses testified that (i) the SDS had “a policy of ethnically cleansing the territories which they conquered and removing the non-Serb populations from most of those territories”; (ii) the identical pattern in which the Bosnian Muslim population was moved out of areas where the SDS was in power meant that it “could not have happened spontaneously” and that it was a planned, organised, and systematic operation in accordance with the policy of the SDS and that the local authorities were simply implementing the instructions they had been given; (iii) the forced expulsions could not have occurred without there being a policy or participation by Bosnian Serb authorities. continue with the transformation of the JNA.⁹³²⁶ Krajišnik at this meeting indicated that the “time is ripe for a demarcation of the areas between Croats, Serbs, and Muslims because [...] a common state with them is no longer possible, not because we do not want that but because that is what they want. The Muslims leadership has imposed the war on us even though the Serbs wanted a political solution of all problems”.⁹³²⁷

2826. Even in August 1992, Krajišnik spoke about Serbs wanting a unified state: “We have our plan, which we must carry out by political, military, and other means, depending on the situation”.⁹³²⁸

2827. At a meeting of the 1st Krajina Corps in September 1992, attended by Mladić and Bogdan Subotić, and the commanders and presidents of municipalities, it was also noted that the temporary ceasefire “cannot replace the aims of our struggle to create a new Serbian Republic”.⁹³²⁹ At this meeting, a conclusion was reached to “[e]liminate sectarian feelings towards other nations” based on certain conditions, including their contribution to the advancement of the Serbian Republic.⁹³³⁰

2828. In October 1992, the Accused outlined how before the international recognition of BiH they were able to declare their republic “a sovereign and independent state” and that he, along with Buha, and Koljević had insisted in meetings with diplomats on a constituent entity for the Serbian people.⁹³³¹ He expressed his view that the criteria for establishing provinces in BiH were unacceptable and noted that Serbs would only be a temporary majority in one or two provinces.⁹³³² During this speech, the Accused also outlined his view on the position to be taken during negotiations and that one of the provinces would be a Serbian state called Republika Srpska.⁹³³³

continued to make similar speeches emphasising this right.⁹³³⁴ The declaration of unification also decided that a co-ordinating committee would consist of the presidents of the republics, the presidents of the assemblies of the republics and the prime ministers of the republics.⁹³³⁵

2830. In November 1992, Koljević stressed that “we should finish everything that’s necessary militarily as soon as possible, because that’s going to improve our political and diplomatic position” and that once fighting calmed down, the media scrutiny and pressure would reduce and they would be able to postpone a political solution based on the territory they held.⁹³³⁶

2831. In June 1993, the Accused spoke about recognition of the Bosnian Serb legitimate right to self-determination, that BiH would certainly be divided into three parts, and that Bosnian Muslims should be satisfied with the division because of the municipalities which they would obtain, but if they continued with the war the Bosnian Muslims could lose everything because the Bosnian Serbs would not allow themselves to be “subjugated and dominated” by Muslims.⁹³³⁷

2832. The Chamber recalls that, at a meeting with international negotiators on 11 January 1993, Krajišnik stressed the Bosnian Serb objective of territorial continuity and named three conditions from the Bosnian Serb Assembly: (i) BiH must be a “composite state community”; (ii) the Bosnian Serbs must have relations with other “states”; and (iii) they must have territorial continuity.⁹³³⁸ Mladić told Okun and Owen that the Bosnian Serbs wanted “peace with justice” for all three peoples but that the Bosnian Muslims could not “beat”, “exterminate”, or “cause [the Serbs] to disappear”.⁹³³⁹ The following day, at a plenary meeting, the Accused expressed his reservations about the ICFY’s constitutional principles and stated he could not accept them but that he would convey the ICFY’s proposals to the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁹³⁴⁰

2833. At a meeting with VRS commanders on 29 January 1994, the Accused stated that while everyone was aware of the Bosnian Serb objectives, “appropriate statements” should be issued to hand trump cards to other parties; he instructed not to make “war-mongering statements” but instead to discuss peace.⁹³⁴¹ The Chamber recalls that in April 1994, UNPROFOR representatives went to Pale to speak to the Accused, who declared that the right bank of the Drina will be the Bosnian Serbs'.⁹³⁴²

2834. The Chamber recalls that on 7 July 1994, the Contact Group unveiled a new peace plan under which 51% of BiH would be administered by a newly formed Bosnian-Croat Federation and that 49% be administered by the Bosnian Serbs.⁹³⁴³ On 19 July 1994, at the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused spoke about the Contact Group's proposed plan stating that the acceptance of the plan would not be a guarantee for peace.⁹³⁴⁴ The Bosnian Serbs rejected the plan stating that the plan was unfair and their demands were not met and in a later referendum in Bosnian Serb-held territory, 96% of voters rejected the plan.⁹³⁴⁵

2835. The Accused met with Ronald Hatchett in 1994 to discuss a proposal to end the war and asked Hatchett to bring back the proposal to the highest level that he could reach in the United States of America.⁹³⁴⁶ The Accused proposed that: (i) BiH would remain a single country; (ii) it would be comprised of two autonomous republics; (iii) each republic would have its own constitution and government; and (iv) he would be willing to accept a division of BiH which would give Bosnian Serbs 49% of the territory so long as it was contiguous and that there would be some trade of areas held by Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs.⁹³⁴⁷

beast”.⁹³⁵⁰ The Accused made a similar observation in an interview when he said that if they were treated as animals or “wild beasts in a cage” they could not be expected to “act in a tolerant and correct manner”.⁹³⁵¹

2837. Through Directive 7, issued on 8 March 1995, the Accused continued to call on the VRS to “by force of arms, impose the final outcome of the war on the enemy, forcing the world into recognising the actual situation on the ground and ending the war”.⁹³⁵² In this same directive, the Accused called for full support for the creation of a “free and unified Serbian state”.⁹³⁵³ The Chamber recalls that at a press conference in April 1995 in the context of further international negotiations, the Accused stated that if peace was not possible through political means, the Bosnian Serbs would put an end to the war by military means.⁹³⁵⁴

2838. The Chamber recalls that the Dayton peace talks began in November 1995 and even though the Accused had been removed from the RS negotiating team he played a central consultative role in regards to RS negotiations.⁹³⁵⁵ These talks concluded in the Dayton Agreement, however, the RS delegation was unsatisfied with specific details of the agreement and refused to attend the final plenary session of the peace talks as well as the ceremonial initialling of the peace agreement.⁹³⁵⁶ The Dayton Agreement was initialled by Tuđman, Slobodan Milošević, and Izetbegović on 21 November 1995 and signed on 14 December 1995.⁹³⁵⁷

(2) Conclusion

2839. The Chamber finds based on this evidence that the Accused as early as September 1991 was identifying territories which were to be claimed by Bosnian Serbs. It is clear that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership advocated and worked towards a territorial re-organisation which would allow the Bosnian Serbs to claim control and ownership of a large percentage of the territory in BiH. In terms of establishing control over this territory, the Accused worked towards the creation of parallel institutions, organs of government, and military and police structures which could gain or retain control of those areas. The Chamber’s findings with respect to the creation of these parallel structures will be further elaborated in Section IV.A.3.ii.

2840. Having considered this evidence, the Chamber finds that from November 1991 the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership spoke against Bosnian Muslims being allowed to stay in Bosnian Serb claimed territory and emphasised the importance of taking control of power and the creation of separate municipalities and municipal structures. The Chamber considers the Accused's statement in February 1992 and the supporting statements of both Koljević and Krajišnik to be highly probative in terms of explaining the changing objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership. The Chamber finds that this speech by the Accused confirms that until late 1991, the Bosnian Serbs were still hopeful of maintaining Yugoslavia, but when it became apparent that this objective was slipping away, they changed course and made preparations for the creation of their own sovereign Serb entity in BiH which would include its own political, civilian, and military structures.

2841. The Accused's rhetoric and discussions with international representatives also made it clear that he advocated the separation of people and believed that co-existence with the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats was not possible. His rhetoric also emphasised that they were fundamentally different people who had been forced to live together. The Chamber finds that this ideology was repeated and used by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership as justification for the creation of ethnically homogeneous entities in BiH and for minimising the number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who would remain in Bosnian Serb claimed territory. The Chamber notes that these sentiments were in contrast with public statements the Accused had made in 1990 when the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership continued to emphasise the unity of Yugoslavia and the existence of a common state.

2842. The Chamber further finds that the Accused made extensive use of maps to highlight the territorial claims of the Bosnian Serbs. These territorial claims included strategically significant areas where Bosnian Muslims were a majority prior to the conflict. The Accused defended these claims and noted that they only seized territories to which they had a right. This rhetoric was also linked with the stated position of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership that they had no interest in living with Bosnian Muslims.

2843. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership repeatedly referred to and re-asserted the historic territorial claims of the Bosnian Serbs. In making these arguments and territorial claims, reference was also made to the historic crimes committed against the Bosnian Serbs, which meant they were no longer a majority in BiH and in areas which they claimed as a "birthright". The Chamber finds that the Accused's position with respect to these historic territorial claims was endorsed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly and formed a core aspect of the Bosnian Serb objectives in including these territories in the RS. The Chamber finds that constant references to historic crimes committed against Bosnian Serbs were used as a means of justifying their territorial acquisitions which they viewed as belonging to them. The Chamber also finds that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership referred back to historic attacks they faced from their “enemies” and the manner in which the Serbs became a minority in BiH to justify their objective of creating a Bosnian Serb State.

2844. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership also spoke about the importance of controlling Bosnian Serb claimed territories and how significant the factual situation on the ground in terms of controlling territory was for the purposes of international negotiations. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership emphasised the Serb nature of the land which they claimed and controlled and the importance of those territorial claims in preventing the Islamisation of those areas.

2845. The Chamber further finds that the strategic objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were also communicated to and formed a core element in the military strategy of the VRS which was to create the RS. These speeches and statements also demonstrate that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership supported and endorsed the territorial acquisitions which had been achieved militarily by Serb Forces. The Chamber finds that while these military operations were described by the Bosnian Serbs as being “defensive” or for the purposes of “liberation”, their purpose and effect was to take control of Bosnian Serb claimed territory in BiH and to expand the area which would be included in the RS. The Accused supported these military successes and viewed them as a means of defining Bosnian Serb territory and creating their own state which they would not relinquish.

2846. While the Accused publicly claimed that he had no influence over the issue of war, it was clear that he envisaged that in a war, there would be bloodshed and all the communities would flee towards their “fully homogeneous” areas. In contrast to public statements where the Accused foreshadowed what could happen, the Accused was simultaneously calling for seizing power in Bosnian Serbs claimed territories which would result in the population movements which he envisaged. The Chamber finds that the Accused was not simply foreshadowing what he thought could happen, he was outlining the pattern which was actually put into practice. The Chamber also finds that the Accused and Bosnian Serb leadership were aware and put on notice that the objective of ethnic separation would result in violence given the extent to which the population in BiH was intermixed and yet still proceeded to pursue this objective.

2847. The Chamber finds that in international settings and press conferences, the Accused defended the actions of Bosnian Serbs and spoke in favour of the interests of minorities and denied the suggestion that people would be forced from their homes. However, despite these public statements, the Chamber finds that the evidence demonstrates that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were informed when municipalities were taken over by Serb Forces and were also aware that their territorial claims and the military manner in which those claims were asserted resulted in the displacement of thousands of non-Serbs. The Bosnian Serb leadership was also informed about the drastic demographic changes which resulted in Serbs becoming a majority in a number of municipalities. The Accused himself acknowledged the new demographic and territorial realities which they had created and that in undertaking military operations to expand their territory the Bosnian Muslim population had been concentrated in small areas. This demonstrates yet again the difference between the public statements made by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership and the reality on the ground, of which they were fully aware.

2848. The Chamber also finds that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were aware that some of the territory which they took over and controlled were areas where Serbs had not been a majority but the Accused emphasised that these municipalities had to be taken for strategic and/or historic reasons.

2849. The Chamber notes that there were some speeches, statements, and announcements by the Accused which placed the blame on the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats for the separation of people and claimed that in contrast the Bosnian Serbs were not creating “an ethnically clean state”. However, the Chamber finds that these statements and announcements were used as a means of creating a narrative, particularly for the international audience in which the Bosnian Serbs would not be blamed for the separation and the movement of people. In this regard the Chamber notes for example that the Accused made it clear that the Bosnian Serbs were making preparations for their own “ethnic space” in BiH regardless of the tone of negotiations between the parties to the conflict at that time. The Chamber finds that this is indicative of the position taken by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership and that their public statements often directly contradicted the plans which they had for ethnic separation.

2850. The Accused also issued public announcements which promised respect for the rights of all citizens, promised the free movement of people, prohibited the forcible detention or movement of people, and guaranteed the right of return of refugees. However, the Chamber finds that these public announcements were also in stark contrast to the reality on the ground which was marked by the unlawful detention and forced movement of thousands of people.⁹³⁵⁸ The Chamber finds that these public announcements were also issued by the Accused following repeated protests at an international level about the treatment of non-Serbs in Bosnian Serb controlled territory. The Chamber finds these announcements were issued as means of easing that political pressure but did not translate into a real improvement in the situation on the ground given that the pattern of mistreatment, detention, and forcible transfer continued. The Chamber also finds that these expulsions were discussed at Bosnian Serb Assembly sessions by deputies who warned that they could only talk about these issues amongst themselves but could not speak about it to the rest of the world.

2851. The Chamber also finds that these announcements were inconsistent with the Accused's continued emphasis and rhetoric on the importance of a division of BiH along ethnic lines and the dangers and impossibility of living with Bosnian Muslims. The Chamber finds that while the Accused did envisage some minorities in the state the Bosnian Serbs were creating, his position was that this number should be kept at a minimum and that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats should have their own entities in BiH and should be moved out of Bosnian Serb territory. The Chamber finds that the Accused disseminated propaganda about demographics and the Bosnian Muslim birth-rate as a further justification for ethnic separation even after he had issued public announcements guaranteeing that nobody would be forced to leave Bosnian Serb territory.

2852. The Chamber also finds that the Bosnian Serb policy on refugees was connected with its goal of achieving ethnic geographic continuity of the Serb population and did not make provision for the return of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. The Chamber finds that with respect to the right of refugees to return, the Accused was aware that from a legal perspective they could not declare a ban on their return but that they should insist that it occur on a reciprocal basis. The Chamber finds that this is instructive in terms of interpreting statements or declarations which ostensibly guaranteed the right of return of refugees. It demonstrates that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were conscious of making public statements which were in accordance with international expectations and obligations, but which were at odds with the reality on the ground.

2853. The Chamber finds that there was a clear disjuncture between the public announcements and statements made to international representatives and the continued speeches and policy of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership which advocated ethnic separation and the creation of an ethnically homogeneous Bosnian Serb state. In this regard the Chamber finds that the Accused spoke about the importance of the Strategic Goals to the creation of their state and how they had succeeded in forcing acceptance of the division of BiH along ethnic lines. The Chamber also finds that the Accused continued to advocate a military solution to achieving the Bosnian Serb objectives and issued orders in this regard towards creating a unified Serbian state.

2854. The Chamber also finds that the Bosnian Serb leadership was conscious of the international attention and were warned by Jovanović that they should be conscious of taking steps which would be construed as “ethnic cleansing” but that they should still persist with ensuring that their territory was as ethnically homogeneous as possible. It was also clear from these meetings and speeches that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were not only aware of but also supported the demographic changes and ethnic homogenisation which had occurred in Bosnian Serb claimed territory. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership in 1994 and 1995 continued to speak about removing Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the state they had created and the continued importance of the unification of all Serbian lands.

2855. In the course of international negotiations into 1993, 1994, and 1995, the Accused continued to emphasise the territorial objectives of the Bosnian Serbs and the territories which were still in dispute but were vital to the Bosnian Serb interests. The Accused also adhered to the basic position that the Bosnian Serbs wanted a separate Serb entity in BiH. The Chamber also finds that in speeches before the Bosnian Serb Assembly the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership spoke strongly against having “enemies” in their state and also indicated that they would not allow certain areas to be allocated to Bosnian Muslims. The Chamber finds that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership adhered to a primary objective of partition and separation from Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who would have their own entities in BiH and that the Bosnian Serbs would control territory which was “nearly 100% Serbian”.

2856. Even until 1995 the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats continued to be portrayed as the enemies of the Bosnian Serbs and their state. The evidence also shows the importance that the Bosnian Serb leadership and the Accused placed on territorial acquisition and control.

(E) Strategic Goals

(1) Analysis of evidence

2857. The Chamber recalls that during the 16th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 12 May 1992, the Accused presented the Strategic Goals.⁹³⁵⁹ The Strategic Goals were adopted by the Bosnian Serb Assembly at the same session.⁹³⁶⁰ These goals were:

- a. separation from the other two national communities and the separation of states;
- b. creation of a corridor between Semberija and Krajina;
- c. creation of a corridor in the Drina Valley thus eliminating the Drina as a border between Serbian states;
- d. creation of a border on the Una and Neretva Rivers;
- e. division of the city of Sarajevo into Serbian and Muslim parts; and
- f. access of the SerBiH to the sea.⁹³⁶¹

2858. The Accused stated that the Assembly of BiH had neglected all other tasks and moved towards “gaining independence for Bosnia and Herzegovina as a unitarist state under Muslim domination” and that the Muslim and Croatian national communities with the assistance of opposition parties “decided to enclose us in their own state, to make us wake up in a foreign state”, which forced the Serbian people to exercise their “right to self-determination and set up our own state”.⁹³⁶² The Accused also stated that they would finally “finish the job of the freedom struggle of the Serbian people. That job is not finished. Anything in history that is not properly finished does not die but it returns to the agenda again, each time with many more casualties.”⁹³⁶³ The Accused also cautioned against the “Serbian megalomania of trying to include as many of our enemies in our areas as possible”, and that while their brave people had taken as much as they could, this “could put us in danger of including in our state too many of our enemies, who will again work against that state”.⁹³⁶⁴

⁹³⁶⁰ P955 (SerBiH Assembly Decision on Strategic Goals of Serbian People in BiH, 12 May 1992). Prstojević was evasive as to whether the Bosnian Serb leadership had established a goal of division from Bosnian Muslims and why. In addition his evidence was marked by indicators that he was trying to mislead the Chamber. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence with respect to this issue to be reliable. Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13244, 13247 (11 March 2011), T. 13619–13620 (17 March 2011), T. 13748, 13850–13851 (21 March 2011).

2859. With respect to the first of the Strategic Goals, the separation of the national communities, the Accused emphasised that separation from their “enemies” was necessary and that their goal was the “separation of states”.⁹³⁶⁵ In this regard the Accused stated that their enemies had attacked them at every opportunity in the last century and would continue to do so if they lived in the same state.⁹³⁶⁶

2860. In a similar fashion the Accused explained the importance of each of the Strategic Goals by reference to the interests of the Serbian people.⁹³⁶⁷ The second Strategic Goal outlined by the Accused was the importance of a corridor between Semberija and Krajina to allow for an integration of Serbian lands with unimpeded flow from one part of the state to another.⁹³⁶⁸ With respect to the Strategic Goal of creating a corridor, Krajišnik stated that the “size of the corridor depends on you. Whether it will reach to the Sava river or be five kilometres wide, if it is five kilometres wide we will not be able to defend it, but if it is 30 km we will defend it”.⁹³⁶⁹

2861. With respect to the third Strategic Goal the Accused stated that the belt along the Drina must belong to the SerBiH and that this would not only be strategically useful to them but also damaging to the “interests of our enemy” and would prevent the Muslims from connecting to the ⁹³⁶⁵ P956 (Transcript of 16th Session of SerBiH Assembly, 12 May 1992), e-court p. 9. The Chamber places no weight on Brown’s opinion that the implementation of the first Strategic Goal would involve the creation of a Serb state and the movement of a significant part of the non-Serb population out of that state. P3914 (Ewan Brown’s expert report entitled “Military Developments in the Bosanska Krajina – 1992”, 27 November 2002), para. 1.43. See also Patrick Treanor, T. 14052 (1 June 2011); P2561 (Map of BiH re six strategic objectives). The Chamber places no weight on Treanor’s opinion as to the reasons behind the Strategic Goals or the way in which the Strategic Goals formed part of the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership. For example, see Patrick Treanor, T. 14019, 14051, 14054, 14067–14068 (1 June 2011), T. 14378 (7 June 2011). The Chamber also does not rely on Bulatović’s understanding that the first Strategic Goal did not involve physical separation of people or his belief that the expulsions did not result from any policy. “Muslim International”.⁹³⁷⁰ Part of the fear of the Bosnian Serbs was to prevent the creation of the so called “green transversal”.⁹³⁷¹ The Accused also spoke about the “elimination of the Drina as a border between two worlds. We are on both sides of Drina, and our strategic interest and our living space are there”.⁹³⁷² This objective was also reflected at a municipal level, where in Foča for example, Stanić stated the Bosnian Serb position that “the Drina would never become a border but a windpipe between two lungs”.⁹³⁷³

2863. At this session, Mladić advocated a path which would involve fighting and waging war.⁹³⁷⁵ Mladić stressed that there would be victims, but that the other option was one of chaos, passivity and empty talk and would be the “path to our extinction”.⁹³⁷⁶ Mladić also stated that “we cannot cleanse nor can we have a sieve to sift so that only Serbs would stay, or that the Serbs would fall through and the rest leave” and that he did not know how the Accused and Krajišnik would be able to explain this to the world and it would be “genocide”.⁹³⁷⁷

2864. Mladić stated that there are ways of neutralising the Muslims which do not mean that they have to be expelled or drowned.⁹³⁷⁸ In this regard, Mladić identified a common enemy and described them as Muslim and Croatian “hordes” and that they had to determine whether “to throw both of them out employing political and other moves, or to organise ourselves and throw out one by force of arms, and we will be able to deal somehow with the other”.⁹³⁷⁹ At the same session, Mladić also spoke about the importance of defining their goals and the territory of SerBiH and having the forces to achieve this.⁹³⁸⁰ He also said that their goal should be to have “a state of our own where we have left our mark, the bones of our fathers, and that is the goal we must fight for”.⁹³⁸¹ Mladić stated that if “we have taken something in this war that was not ours, we need to keep hold of it so that in political negotiations we can get those things that were ours, and that we cannot get in any other way”.⁹³⁸² Mladić advocated that the actions of the Bosnian Serbs should remain secret and recommended that they adopt a common rhetoric towards the public.⁹³⁸³ He also stressed the importance of identifying enemies and that on this basis, “we must make our move and eliminate them, either temporarily or permanently”.⁹³⁸⁴

2865. Towards the end of the same session on 12 May 1992, Krajišnik acknowledged that “we will surely go to war” and that “it will be possible to solve this thing with Muslims and Croats only by war” but that they should select the political solution because it would not look good if the conclusion of Assembly was that they had chosen the option of war.⁹³⁸⁵

2866. Other deputies supported the Strategic Goals and indicated that in order for them to be realised they could be “developed further and presented as variations” and that the borders would be established “when we make them a fact” and that peace could “only be achieved by war”.⁹³⁸⁶ They also emphasised the importance of finding a way to “keep in peace what we have won in war” and in areas where they were a minority there would need to be a resettlement of the population.⁹³⁸⁷

2867. At this session, Brđanin explained that in areas where Serbs were a majority, “most of them are still asking whether they should injure the Muslims, whether they can hold certain posts, whether loyal Muslims and loyal Croats exist”.⁹³⁸⁸ Brđanin was one of the Bosnian Serb leaders who engaged in anti-Muslim rhetoric and this rhetoric created a great deal of animosity, mistrust and hatred towards the Bosnian Muslim population.⁹³⁸⁹ For example, Brđanin said that he did not know why the Muslims were pickling cabbage for the winter because they would not be there to eat it.⁹³⁹⁰ Brđanin at a meeting for Serb unity in August 1994 attended by Krajišnik said “[t]hose leftist forces which are offering us co-existence again must know that it is the obligation of Serbs over the next hundred years to wipe their feet from the foul non-Christians who have befouled this soil of ours”.⁹³⁹¹ Krajišnik then took the stand and praised the words and patriotism of those who had spoken before him.⁹³⁹²

2868. On 7 May 1992, a week before being presented before the 16th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Strategic Goals were discussed in the presence of the Accused, Mladić, and Krajišnik.⁹³⁹³ Krajišnik acknowledged that he had taken part in adopting the Strategic Goals and that the first goal was the most important and that the remaining goals were sub-items of this goal.⁹³⁹⁴ Mladić also stated that he had “read, mulled over for a long time and discussed with the most select circle of comrades whom we convened, the strategic goals that are of substance”.⁹³⁹⁵

2869. At this same session a deputy from Brčko referred to the tasks set by the Accused, and noted that one of the first priorities “is establishing communication between Semberija and the Bosnian Krajina” and that while military operations had been completed to some extent, there were still Bosnian Muslim forces in Brčko, and that Brčko “remains uncompleted”.⁹³⁹⁶ He noted that in order to have “definitive clearing of the area it will be necessary to have many more forces there” and called on the Accused and Krajišnik to promote general mobilisation of the Serbian people and referred to the “conquests that are currently necessary”.⁹³⁹⁷

2870. At this same session, Dragan Kalinić, the health minister, spoke in favour of choosing the “option of war” and that their enemy was perfidious and “cannot be trusted until they are physically, militarily destroyed and crushed, which, of course, implies eliminating and liquidating their key people”.⁹³⁹⁸ He further noted that “only what has been conquered militarily can be really and truly ours” and that there was no point in making maps until they had “succeeded in defining and marking our territory militarily”.⁹³⁹⁹

2871. Kalinić also noted that since they were in closed session, he could make it clear that when they called for cease-fires this was only done to demonstrate that they were in favour of negotiations and a peaceful solution but these statements were for “external, public use” and that cease-fires could be used to consolidate their armed forces.⁹⁴⁰⁰ Kalinić also spoke in favour of the destruction of radio and television facilities and medical facilities “so that the enemy has nowhere to go for medical help”.⁹⁴⁰¹ Bosnian Serb leaders often proposed cease-fires at times when they already controlled a large percentage of the territory in BiH.⁹⁴⁰²

2872. A deputy who spoke in favour of the Strategic Goals noted that in Bosanka Krupa, “there are no more Muslims in the Serbian Municipality of Bosanska Krupa” and that they had been “evacuated” and that it was unlikely that they would have a place to return to given that the Accused told them “the happy news that the right bank of the Una is the border”.⁹⁴⁰³

2873. These Strategic Goals were also communicated to and discussed during Crisis Staff meetings at a municipal level.⁹⁴⁰⁴ On 18 May 1992, the SDS Municipal Board in Prijedor was informed about developments at the Bosnian Serb Assembly and informed about the main guidelines for future activities which related to the Strategic Goals.⁹⁴⁰⁵

2874. The Strategic Goals were more than mere theoretical objectives and they were concretely discussed at meetings. For instance, at a meeting of 1st Krajina Corps commanders and Banja Luka leaders on 2 June 1992, the implementation of the second goal, i.e. creating a corridor between Semberija and Krajina,⁹⁴⁰⁶ was discussed.⁹⁴⁰⁷ At the same meeting which was attended by the Accused and Mladić, Brđanin stated that “everything in the ARK is done at the [Crisis Staff] level”.⁹⁴⁰⁸ The Accused also referred to the Strategic Goals at a meeting with Bosnian Serb representatives on 10 June 1992 at which he said that “[w]e have full control of many of our

The Chamber places no weight on Donia’s opinion that the Strategic Goals were published again in 1993 given an “assessment of the leaders that these were important goals that should be publicly known and that they had not changed”. It also places no weight on his assessment about the significance of and the ideological basis for the Strategic Goals. Robert Donia, T. 3073–3075 (31 May 2010).

territories”, that Bosnian Serbs had strong support from the Serbian DB, and that they had formed their own army.⁹⁴⁰⁹

2875. At another meeting in June 1992 of the Bosnian Serb military and political leadership, the Accused noted that the Bosnian Serb Assembly had defined the strategic aims and further reiterated the importance of those objectives and that the Bosnian Serbs had to protect their territories militarily.⁹⁴¹⁰ He also noted that “the birth of a state and the creation of borders does not occur without war” and that according to the map they had 66% of the territory in BiH.⁹⁴¹¹ At this same meeting, Ostojić reported that there were no Muslims in Bratunac.⁹⁴¹²

2876. On 17 June 1992, Mladić issued an order raising the combat readiness of the Birač Brigade and emphasising that the order was to allow for full control over Birač, to secure the corridor between Romanija and Semberija, and maintain a link with Serbia.⁹⁴¹³ In November 1992, Mladić issued Directive 4 to “cleanse the free territory of RS of the remaining enemy groups and paramilitary formations”.⁹⁴¹⁴ One of the tasks of Directive 4 was addressed to the Drina Corps which was instructed “to inflict the heaviest possible losses” on the “enemy” and force them to leave certain areas such as Birač, Žepa, and Goražde with the Bosnian Muslim population.⁹⁴¹⁵

2877. On 8 November 1992 at a meeting of Corps Commanders attended by the Accused and Mladić, Krajišnik expressed his admiration for the military successes and noted that they had a “disproportionate engagement of the army in relation to the strategic objectives”.⁹⁴¹⁶ Krajišnik also reminded the attendees of the progress made in relation to the Strategic Goals and noted that the most important objective had been assigned to Milenko Živanović, namely to mop up the Drina and repeated that the most important task was the “separation from the Muslims” and that the “Muslims must not stay with us”.⁹⁴¹⁷

Milenko Živanović, T. 42585–42590 (30 October 2013).

2878. At a session of the Bosnian Serb Government on 20 March 1993, a debate on the draft law on the territorial organisation of municipalities was held, during which the criteria for the establishment of municipalities was decided.⁹⁴¹⁸

2879. At a meeting of 19 June 1993 in Pale with members of the Supreme Command with, inter alios, Krajišnik, Koljević, Lukić, Mladić, and Milovanović in attendance, the Accused gave an update as to developments in relation to the Strategic Goals and the territorial situation in BiH.⁹⁴¹⁹ In June 1993, Mladić issued Directive 5 and noted that given the developments, a unified BiH was no longer an option.⁹⁴²⁰ Directive 6 was issued by the Accused in November 1993 and included specific instructions with respect to the strategic goals of the VRS.⁹⁴²¹ Directive 6 referred to the goals of (i) liberating Sarajevo; (ii) defining the borders of RS on the Neretva River and gaining access to the sea; (iii) defining the borders of RS in the Una River basin; and (iv) expanding the borders of RS in the north-east and establishing firmer ties with Serbia.⁹⁴²²

2880. Bosnian Serb leaders, including the Accused, discussed the Strategic Goals openly with international representatives who were told that RS would be ethnically “pure”⁹⁴²³ and that their aim was to redistribute the population in BiH to allow Bosnian Serb control of a “single continuous block of territory” which also included “traditionally Serb-inhabited areas”.⁹⁴²⁴

2881. The Chamber also recalls that during the negotiation process at the ICFY, Bosnian Serbs pushed for an agenda consistent with the Strategic Goals and identified the areas of BiH they wanted to be under Bosnian Serb control while the Bosnian Muslims maintained their position for the creation of a unitary state with centralised powers.⁹⁴²⁵ The position of the Bosnian Croats was to take BiH out of the FRY, to declare independence, and to establish their own state called the Community of Herceg-Bosna with territorial contiguity with Croatia.⁹⁴²⁶

2882. In January 1993, the Accused reported to the Bosnian Serb Assembly on disputes the Bosnian Serb leadership had at international negotiations with respect to disputed territories in municipalities including Prijedor, Sanski Most, Ključ, Rogatica, and Srebrenica.⁹⁴²⁷ The Accused also noted that in municipalities including Zvornik, Vlasenica, and Rogatica the municipal authorities agreed to the legitimate division of those municipalities before the war with the effect that “there are areas that are [i]ndisputably Serb, Croat or Muslim”.⁹⁴²⁸

2884. On 1 October 1993, the Accused held a meeting with VRS generals, during which he declared: “Our fundamental ideology is Serbdom and the Serbian state”.⁹⁴³² Mladić asked that further goals of the war and tasks of the army be defined at the level of the state and the Supreme Command.⁹⁴³³

2885. In December 1993, Krajišnik noted that at the beginning of the war the Strategic Goals were “one of the most important documents” and that the Bosnian Serb Assembly endorsed these objectives and “organised the people to implement them”.⁹⁴³⁴ He also noted that the first and most important objective had been achieved and that the RS now existed with its own state organisation and territory.⁹⁴³⁵ Krajišnik noted that in the first months of the war, efforts were directed towards “establishing full unity throughout the territory of [RS]” and that they had created the organisational and personnel conditions to allow the state to function normally and to allow “a more stable defence and the liberation of Serbian ethnic spaces”.⁹⁴³⁶ Krajišnik noted that in defining the borders of the RS in accordance with their strategic objectives they “did not violate the like rights of the Muslim and Croat communities” and what remained was to struggle for “just borders of our Republic, to be internationally recognised”.⁹⁴³⁷

2886. At a meeting in Belgrade on 13 December 1993 with the Bosnian Serb and Serbian leadership in attendance,⁹⁴³⁸ the Accused stated that the end of the conflict was close and that the Bosnian Serbs were holding 75% of the territory, some of which he noted would have to be returned as the international community would not allow it.⁹⁴³⁹ The Accused then listed the Strategic Goals.⁹⁴⁴⁰

2887. At the 37th Bosnian Serb Assembly Session on 10 January 1994, the Accused stated: “We can consider ourselves as winners after occupying this land, since the land is 100% Serbian now. Therefore, even if we come down to around 50%, we should be more than happy and satisfied, it is Dušan’s empire.”⁹⁴⁴¹ In this speech the Accused also stated that their first Strategic Goal was separation and not the occupation of 60% of the land and they had also achieved their second objective, which was to have a contiguous territory connected by a corridor.⁹⁴⁴² The Accused later that month delivered a speech in which he stressed that they had not lost any vital territories and had “kept everything that was important for the Serbian people”.⁹⁴⁴³ During a meeting with VRS leaders, the Accused recalled the substance of the six Strategic Goals and declared that “they have been defined with the highest level possible of brazenness”.⁹⁴⁴⁴

2888. At a meeting with VRS commanders held on 29 January 1994, the Accused stated that the “plan” was, inter alia, the following: (i) do everything to maintain the Croat/Muslim schism; (ii)

Brđanin testified that the second Strategic Goal was absolutely necessary, otherwise, those in the ARK would not have survived; the separation was an unavoidable consequence and the Accused insisted that the Bosnian Serbs should only defend the regions where they were the majority; and that the Accused never wanted to take any territory that did not belong to Bosnian Serbs. Radoslav Brđanin, T. 43687 (18 November 2013) (private session). The Chamber does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Brđanin’s testimony was marked by evasiveness and in addition the witness had a self-interest in portraying these measures in a positive light.

separate from the Croats and the Muslims; (iii) let the boundaries of the territory of the Muslims be clearly “detained” if they do not want to stay in Yugoslavia;⁹⁴⁴⁵ and (iv) be in conflict everywhere with the Muslims and the Croats.⁹⁴⁴⁶ The following day, at a meeting of the Supreme Command, the Accused reiterated that their task was to defeat the Muslims and that they should be careful that the Muslims do not end up in the Bosnian Serb state.⁹⁴⁴⁷

entire territory in which there is probably about a million or a million and two hundred thousand Muslims, if there are still so many out there. Here I mean not only those who were killed but also those who fled; in order that we achieve and realize it. It is very hard to imagine. [...] We must defeat them everywhere we can and keep the territory. If possible, we should try to expand the territory; [...] and we should force them to agree to a kind of political and military capitulation [...] the starting point will be the actual situation on the ground.⁹⁴⁴⁸

2890. The Accused further stated “[f]rom the very beginning, I accepted entirely the view of all the commanders and [G]eneral Mladić. We must change the rhetoric. We must speak on TV, we must participate in live TV shows; we must motivate people for chivalry and prepare them for victories; and, of course, we must nurture their anger toward the enemy”.⁹⁴⁴⁹ With respect to the Bosnian Muslims, the Accused also said:

We prepared ourselves better during the time of peace than they. We knew what they are doing but they did not know what we are doing. They were astonished by the way we organized defense of the municipalities. We were organized; [G]eneral Kovačević knows that, because we were supported by [G]eneral Adžić. He worked on distribution of ammunition, he knew about it. General Subotić also knew about it.⁹⁴⁵⁰

The Accused also stated that he was certain that no territory except in Sarajevo would have to be returned.⁹⁴⁵¹

2891. At a meeting of Bosnian Serb and Serbian officials in Belgrade on 27 February 1994, the Accused initially declared that the Bosnian Serbs might agree for the Muslims to have 33.3% of the territory, the Croats 14 or 15%, and the Bosnian Serbs 52 or 53%; he then stated that the Bosnian Serbs could be satisfied with 49% of the territory.⁹⁴⁵²

2892. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in March 1994, Ostojić identified four areas which he described as extremely sensitive in terms of establishing “geographic continuity of the Serbian population” in the RS.⁹⁴⁵³ The areas included Rogatica, Vlasenica, Bratunac, Prijedor, Ključ, and Sanski Most.⁹⁴⁵⁴ The Accused at this session again emphasised the importance of the actual physical control of territory and that there would be a division of BiH into three based on ethnicity and that he had been discussing before the war and making plans about which areas would form part of their state.⁹⁴⁵⁵

2893. At a meeting on 8 May 1994 with members of the Supreme Command, including Krajišnik, Koljević, Mićo Stanišić, and Mladić, Plavšić stressed the importance of Posavina—that the percentage is less important but that it could not “exist in two parts”.⁹⁴⁵⁶ Mićo Stanišić responded: “49–51%, there is importance, especially if an association is to be entered in with them”.⁹⁴⁵⁷ The strategic goals referred to in Directive 6, including the operations to reach the Neretva River and gaining access to the sea, as well as reaching the right bank of the Una River, were also discussed at this meeting.⁹⁴⁵⁸

2894. Even into 1995 the Accused continued to emphasise the Strategic Goals and stated that the “Drina should be clean” and that the “corridor must be wide”.⁹⁴⁵⁹ Krajišnik also shared this objective about a clear Drina.⁹⁴⁶⁰ In another interview in May 1995, the Accused maintained that they had not given up and would never give up on the Strategic Goals and that they would “seek to achieve them either through political or military means”.⁹⁴⁶¹

(2) Conclusion

2895. The Chamber finds that the Accused played a central role in formulating, promoting, and disseminating the Strategic Goals. In promoting the Strategic Goals, the Accused continued to emphasise not only the interests of the Serbs to self-determination but also the threat they faced from the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who he continued to identify as their historic enemies. Through these speeches, the Accused continued to disseminate propaganda against the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats which allowed him to promote the measures envisaged by the Strategic Goals. The Accused's rhetoric was also picked up by other deputies in the Bosnian Serb Assembly who similarly spoke about the danger posed by their enemies and used this to advocate taking military measures to protect their interests.

2896. The Chamber further finds that the Accused promoted the implementation of the Strategic Goals as a means of creating a Bosnian Serb state and warned against including "too many of our enemies" in the state which they would create. In doing so the Accused emphasised the first Strategic Goal and the importance of separation from the other two ethnic communities in BiH. The Accused was adamant that this ethnic separation was necessary and acknowledged that the "freedom struggle" of the Serbs had not been finished and would result in many casualties and again made reference to the historic crimes committed against the Serbs. The Chamber finds that the first Strategic Goal and the separation of the national communities was the most important to the Bosnian Serb leadership and their objectives.

2897. The Accused, in promoting the Strategic Goals, and more specifically the third Strategic Goal, emphasised the importance of eliminating the Drina as a border between Serbian states. The Chamber finds that this Strategic Goal was a practical elucidation of the ideology of Serbian unity and the non-separation of Serbs which was repeatedly promoted by the Accused.

2898. The speeches of other Bosnian Serb deputies and Bosnian Serb leaders demonstrate that they supported the Strategic Goals and the approach advocated by the Accused. It is also clear that war, the military conquest of territory, and the movement and resettlement of the population were envisaged by the Bosnian Serb leadership in the implementation of the Strategic Goals. The Accused promoted and shared the objective of creating a Bosnian Serb state which was ethnically pure and creating contiguous Serb areas which would require a redistribution of the population.

2899. The Chamber also finds that the Strategic Goals not only reflected the objectives of the Accused and Bosnian Serb leadership but were also viewed as instructions to be followed at a municipal level in order to achieve those objectives. In this regard, the Strategic Goals were communicated to and discussed by municipal bodies and also formed the basis for military operations by the VRS. The Accused, in meetings with Bosnian Serb military and political leaders, continued to emphasise the importance of their Strategic Goals and that the creation of their Serb state required war and the military protection of territories.

2900. The Chamber also finds that there was a clear difference between what the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were willing to say about the Strategic Goals in closed or confidential settings versus what they generally said to international representatives. The Accused in private meetings was far more candid about their willingness to pursue their territorial objectives even at the cost of lives and the displacement of thousands of people. The Accused went so far as to say that they had to motivate their people and “nurture their anger toward the enemy”.

2901. The Chamber also finds that the Accused received and also gave updates about developments and progress made towards the achievement of their Strategic Goals, including territorial control and the separation of people. He welcomed these territorial gains and spoke about the victory of the Bosnian Serbs in achieving their objectives and how they had retained control of all vital territories and continued to emphasise that they did not want Bosnian Muslims in their state.

2902. The Chamber therefore finds that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership not only formulated and promoted the Strategic Goals, they also took steps to ensure they were implemented through military operations and that organisational structures were created to allow for the creation of a Serb state.

2903. The Chamber finds that the Strategic Goals continued to be the central element with respect to the Bosnian Serb objectives for the duration of the conflict in BiH and the Accused continued to emphasise their importance into 1995.

ii. Bosnian Serb political and governmental structures

2904. The Prosecution alleges that the Bosnian Serb political and governmental organs played a crucial role in the implementation of the alleged common criminal purpose of the Overarching JCE, that the Accused had a pivotal role in establishing and maintaining these organs, and exercised authority and control over them.⁹⁴⁶² In this regard, the Prosecution argues that the Accused as the leader of the Bosnian Serbs exercised ultimate authority over these organs.⁹⁴⁶³ In this section the Chamber will consider the creation of the political and governmental organs and the extent of the ⁹⁴⁶² Prosecution Final Brief, para. 208.

Accused's involvement in this process as well as the manner in which those organs were used towards achieving the objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership.

(A) Authority over political and governmental structures

(1) Analysis of evidence

(a) SDS

2905. The SDS party had a hierarchical structure and, from 1990 to 1995, the Accused was at the head of this structure as the ex officio president of the SDS Main Board.⁹⁴⁶⁴ The Accused implemented his policies and the policies of the Bosnian Serb leadership through, inter alia, the structures of the SDS.⁹⁴⁶⁵ The SDS policies were communicated to the SDS Municipal Boards through members of the Main Board.⁹⁴⁶⁶ SDS Municipal Boards were obligated to implement the instructions issued by the Main Board or Executive Board.⁹⁴⁶⁷ While municipal organs had some independence with respect to local issues they were obliged and expected to obey and implement the policies and decisions of the SDS at the higher level and the Accused insisted on respect for his own personal authority.⁹⁴⁶⁸ It was difficult for other Bosnian Serb officials, particularly at a municipal level to openly contradict the Accused who had "undisputed authority".⁹⁴⁶⁹ For example, the Accused said that he would "dismiss the idiots [...] who are not implementing the SDS policy”.⁹⁴⁷⁰ The Accused issued express instructions to the SDS Municipal Boards including a mandatory directive with respect to the structure and activities of all SDS Municipal Boards.⁹⁴⁷¹

2906. Top and local levels in the SDS communicated in both directions, and municipal leaders, members of Executive and Municipal Boards of the SDS would frequently visit, write to or phone the Accused to speak about municipal matters.⁹⁴⁷² For example, the Chamber found that there was a very close relationship between the Bijeljina branch of the SDS and the SDS party in Pale, and that the SDS leadership, including the Accused and Krajišnik, often visited Bijeljina.⁹⁴⁷³ Similarly, the Chamber found that a line of communication existed between the Municipal Board of the Bratunac SDS and the SDS leadership, including the Accused.⁹⁴⁷⁴ Another example can be found in Sanski Most where the SDS was extremely well-structured and disciplined, so that orders came from the top and were implemented without any objections.⁹⁴⁷⁵ When there were problems in Banja Luka for example, the Accused told Krajišnik that they, along with Koljević, needed to visit to “establish some order there, separate the soldiers from the people, and appoint some sort of command for these soldiers and some sort of board for the people”.⁹⁴⁷⁶

2907. The Accused also emphasised the importance of local SDS boards⁹⁴⁷⁷ and in an interview, he indicated that the political life of Serbs in BiH “had been fully revived and established, which was the main purpose of setting up the party”, and that in all places where Serbs lived they had set up municipal organisations with municipal and local boards.⁹⁴⁷⁸ The Accused also took an active role in determining the organisational structure of the SDS at a municipal level and the appointment of personnel.⁹⁴⁷⁹ On 31 October 1991, the Accused emphasised the importance of strong SDS leaders who would implement directions from the leadership, stating that whoever is “not able to be the boss in the municipality, to carry out the mobilisation and even to the full if necessary, should resign immediately”.⁹⁴⁸⁰

2908. The Chamber recalls that as early as February 1991, the SDS had considered specific actions to be taken should BiH move towards independence.⁹⁴⁸¹ The SDS envisaged that in such a case municipal authorities were to ensure that only Yugoslav (federal) law would apply, suspending the implementation of republican regulations.⁹⁴⁸² This policy was adopted by the SDS Deputies’ Club and was made public in a document dated 10 June 1991.⁹⁴⁸³ The Accused in a conversation with Žepinić in September 1991, stated that “[e]verything we did so far and everything we are doing now is strictly according to the Law.”⁹⁴⁸⁴ At a meeting of the SDS Municipal Board on 12 April 1991, it was agreed that instructions would be requested from the SDS headquarters “regarding the referendum, our behaviour and functioning” and that the regional redrawing of municipal borders, which was occurring in Banja Luka, was “fully supported, and those questions should be posed in our areas as well”.⁹⁴⁸⁵ It was also noted that the Presidency of Bratunac should meet with the Accused urgently with respect to the questions raised.⁹⁴⁸⁶ The Accused and Krajišnik took a leading role in using the SDS structures to call on all Serbs in BiH to boycott the referendum on the independence of BiH as it was against their interests.⁹⁴⁸⁷

2909. The Accused led the SDS deputies out of the SRBiH Assembly on 15 October 1991; the HDZ and SDA delegates then reconvened without the Serb delegates and passed a declaration of sovereignty.⁹⁴⁸⁸ Subsequently there was a meeting of the SDS Political Council, at which statements were made that it was necessary to “shed the illusion that a form of coexistence with the Muslims and the Croats can be found”.⁹⁴⁸⁹ Koljević stated that they could not lose the momentum and had to announce their plebiscite the next day and that they should emphasise this was a peaceful act in contrast to the decision on the sovereignty of BiH, which was described as an act of “political violence”.⁹⁴⁹⁰ The Accused and other Bosnian Serb leaders, including Krajišnik, emphasised the illegal and unconstitutional nature of the declaration of sovereignty by BiH and the threat it posed to Serb interests.⁹⁴⁹¹ At this meeting, the following items were also discussed: (i) the aim of creating a Greater Serbia; (ii) the activation of parallel government bodies such as a Serb Assembly; (iii) the intensification of the process of regionalisation; and (iv) the military organisation at a local level.⁹⁴⁹²

2910. With respect to the referendum the Accused said in an intercepted conversation that not only was this an illegal decision but through this action, the Bosnian Muslims “set everything up for us just perfectly; it’s all fallen right in place”.⁹⁴⁹³ In this regard the Accused said they would be strong and establish their own state and that BiH would consist of three sovereign nations.⁹⁴⁹⁴

2911. On 16 October 1991, the SDS issued its “Announcement to the Serbian people” in which it stated that the SDA and HDZ had breached the constitutional order and reiterated its support for federal institutions, including the JNA.⁹⁴⁹⁵ In an intercepted telephone conversation that day, the Accused assured SDS officials in Banja Luka: “We’ve worked out a scenario. We won’t make a single move today. If necessary, we’ll do it tomorrow, [...] it would be very useful. Everything’s been worked out. You don’t need to worry. [...] They can only start fighting us, killing us, but everyone knows what’s gonna happen then!”⁹⁴⁹⁶

2912. The SDS Deputies’ Club met again on 18 October 1991, and the Accused rejected the decision of the BiH Assembly because the Bosnian Serb deputies had not participated.⁹⁴⁹⁷ The Accused noted that a “team made up of the leading men of the party, the Government and the Political Council has been working day and night” and that he had decided to impose a state of emergency in the SDS.⁹⁴⁹⁸ This state of emergency, which was declared by the Accused, was binding on all its members, bodies and officials.⁹⁴⁹⁹ The Accused emphasised that there needed to be maximum discipline that they had to listen to their leaders and there was no room for a “single wrong step”.⁹⁵⁰⁰ As part of this state of emergency, the Accused ordered that there should be daily meetings of the municipal boards and that they would receive daily instructions on the measures to be taken.⁹⁵⁰¹ Following the Accused’s order, an emergency meeting of the SDS Municipal Board of Bratunac was held where Miroslav Deronjić informed those present about the SDS Main Board instructions and said that they imposed a duty to “act accordingly”.⁹⁵⁰² The next day, Jovan Tintor from Vogošća stated in a telephone conversation that following the plenary session, only Serb Assembly decisions would be binding on the Serb population and that parallel institutions would be formed.⁹⁵⁰³

2913. The Accused was the undisputed authority within the SDS for the duration of the war.⁹⁵⁰⁴ Some people who resisted the Accused were expelled from the Main Board.⁹⁵⁰⁵ On 24 June 1991, the Accused told a Bosnian Serb leader in Prijedor that if the party could not organise themselves, he will do it for them by introducing new people into the Prijedor SDS party leadership.⁹⁵⁰⁶ In September 1991, the Accused intervened to replace the local SDS President in Prijedor, Srdo Srdić, with Simo Mišković, who promised to follow the policies of the SDS Main Board.⁹⁵⁰⁷ The Accused spoke with an SDS member in Banja Luka on 11 January 1992. When the Accused was faced with the suggestion that there were some individuals in the Krajina who wanted to act independently on certain issues, he insisted on party discipline and stated “they cannot. We have all of that in the plans. We have all moves in the envelopes. They must not do it before we do it in the whole of Bosnia. Why are they playing smart? They’re explaining my policy to me”.⁹⁵⁰⁸ The Accused also insisted that he would expel and discipline those who did not follow the SDS policies or acted without his approval or the approval of the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁹⁵⁰⁹ The Accused also spoke about having a council of ministers, and said “we have plans for everything” and that in the Krajina they had to “synchronise their work with the party”.⁹⁵¹⁰ He also spoke about the importance of pursuing the Serbian policy in a synchronised fashion otherwise “the Serbs would not have a state”.⁹⁵¹¹

(b) Bosnian Serb Assembly and governmental structures

2914. The Chamber found that on 24 October 1991, the Bosnian Serb deputies of the SRBiH Assembly met and decided to establish a separate assembly, which was constituted the same day.⁹⁵¹² Krajišnik explained that the Bosnian Serb deputies in the SRBiH Assembly were prompted to form the Bosnian Serb Assembly due to what they saw as a violation of the sovereignty of the Bosnian Serbs and a threat to their existence in BiH “where they had lived from time immemorial”.⁹⁵¹³ Krajišnik also expressed the right of the Serbs to self-determination and remaining in their “historical and ethnic territories”.⁹⁵¹⁴

2915. Krajišnik was elected as the first president of the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁹⁵¹⁵ On the same day the Bosnian Serb Assembly decided that the Bosnian Serbs would remain in the joint state of Yugoslavia and called for the conduct of a plebiscite to confirm this decision.⁹⁵¹⁶ In November 1991, Brđanin was quoted in a newspaper article as having stated that all directors and managers in the ARK who did not participate in the plebiscite should be urgently dismissed from their positions.⁹⁵¹⁷ Following the publication of this article, the Accused said that Brđanin was “out of order” in his statement about the dismissals of directors, but that he “wanted to get [him] off the hook” for the statement and ultimately told Brđanin that “it has to be done, but you mustn’t say that” out loud.⁹⁵¹⁸

2916. The Accused was also involved in organising steps to be taken to carry out the plebiscite.⁹⁵¹⁹ After the decision of the Constitutional Court of BiH and the Bosnian Serb Presidency declaring the plebiscite of Serb people unconstitutional and illegal, the plebiscite was launched and the Accused stated that the Serbs no longer had any duties towards the BiH Constitution, that they had obligations towards the Constitution of Yugoslavia which guaranteed their right to self-determination and the right for the people to organise themselves.⁹⁵²⁰

there. [...] However, we don't want to stop the Croatian and Muslim peoples from reorganising themselves, meaning that their links to Yugoslavia would be weaker than ours."⁹⁵²³

2918. The Bosnian Serb Assembly functioned as the central body representing Bosnian Serbs and was the mechanism through which other institutions and political structures were set up.⁹⁵²⁴ This included a Council of Ministers, which was established on 21 December 1991 and replaced by the Bosnian Serb Government on 24 March 1992.⁹⁵²⁵ In January 1992 the Accused spoke about how their republic had already started functioning, had its own authorities, structures organs and a Council of Ministers and that all Yugoslav institutions including the JNA "will back us up [...] Nobody can do anything about that. They cannot do anything, because that is 60% of the territory they would not be able to control as an independent state".⁹⁵²⁶

2919. In addition, the National Security Council ("SNB") was established on 27 March 1992.⁹⁵²⁷ The Accused described the SNB as an advisory body to the Bosnian Serb Assembly which would be composed of "all the important organs and institutions" of the Serbian people.⁹⁵²⁸ The SNB was responsible for military matters during the war and matters relating to security.⁹⁵²⁹ The SNB served, until the creation of the Presidency in May 1992, as the de facto Presidency of the SerBiH. The Accused was the ex officio president of the SNB,⁹⁵³⁰ and the decisions of the SNB were made under the control of the Accused.⁹⁵³¹

2920. At a meeting held in the Presidency of the SFRY in Belgrade on 9 December 1991, the Accused stated that Europe "does not accept legality but the factual status. Therefore we have to be wise enough and prepare both legality and the factual status".⁹⁵³² The Accused declared: "We

2921. On 11 December 1991, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a recommendation that SDS deputies in municipal assemblies in BiH in which the SDS did not have a majority establish “municipal assemblies of the Serbian people”.⁹⁵³⁴ The recommendation stated that the assemblies would be composed of SDS deputies and “other deputies of Serb nationality who make a statement on joining the Assembly”.⁹⁵³⁵ Attached to the recommendation was a model decision on the establishment of “municipal assemblies of the Serbian people” to be adopted by individual municipalities.⁹⁵³⁶ These decisions were to be verified by the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁹⁵³⁷

2922. Municipal level leaders reported to the municipal bodies on developments at a republican level including the formation of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and noted that the assembly had been created as a means of resisting attempts to divide the Serbian people.⁹⁵³⁸ The SDS Municipal Board in Prijedor, for example, was informed on 28 October 1991, that Serb assemblies had to be formed in all the municipalities, that they were establishing their own state with their own forces and preparations had to be made for the plebiscite of the Serb people and military organisation.⁹⁵³⁹ The SDS Municipal Board in Prijedor also referred to the position of the Accused that given the secession of BiH arranged by the SDA, they were forced “to form ethnic communities in our ethnic territories”.⁹⁵⁴⁰ They also discussed the importance of establishing control over their territories.⁹⁵⁴¹

regarding independence and the SRBiH Assembly voted to hold such a referendum on 29 February and 1 March 1992.⁹⁵⁴⁴

2924. On 9 January 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly proclaimed the SerBiH.⁹⁵⁴⁵ This proclamation noted that the territory of the SerBiH was composed of the SAOs and “additional territories, not precisely identified but to include areas where the Serbs had been in a majority before the genocide of World War II”.⁹⁵⁴⁶ The area which would comprise the territory of the SerBiH would include all areas where a majority of Bosnian Serbs had voted in the plebiscite to remain in Yugoslavia.⁹⁵⁴⁷ On 13 January 1992, the Council of Ministers identified the priorities emerging from the declaration of the promulgation of the SerBiH of 9 January 1992, which included defining the ethnic territory and the establishment of government organs in the territory.⁹⁵⁴⁸ The Accused and Krajišnik participated in the discussion on the execution of these tasks.⁹⁵⁴⁹

2925. In an intercepted conversation on 13 January 1992, the Accused informed Kuprešanin, President of the ARK Assembly, that “[w]e have a complete concept of a polycentric development. Therefore, centres must exist, and the centres will be developed more powerfully” and that “not a single move should be made which will not be a hundred percent agreed on”.⁹⁵⁵⁰ In another conversation, the Accused also spoke of the territorial claims of the Bosnian Serbs and in particular that regionalisation should not disrupt the authority of the Bosnian Serb state, namely that “I want Serbs to organise themselves in those Krajinas [...] but that the unified Serbian [BiH] still exist”.⁹⁵⁵¹

2926. On 17 January 1992, at a session of the Council of Ministers, a draft programme of its work was presented.⁹⁵⁵² It called for the adoption of the Constitution and for the organisation of the territory in such a way so as to “enlarge the territory of the regions and encompass a larger number of inhabitants wherever possible in order to consolidate the regions both ethnically and economically.”⁹⁵⁵³ At that same session it was decided that draft legislation to enable the SerBiH to start functioning would be prepared by 15 February 1992.⁹⁵⁵⁴ The Bosnian Serb Assembly also authorised the Council of Ministers and other Bosnian Serb representatives, including Krajišnik, to prepare a Constitution and “other relevant documents in order to regulate further state organisation of the Serbian people” in BiH.⁹⁵⁵⁵ Krajišnik was elected to the commission appointed to prepare a Constitution.⁹⁵⁵⁶ The Accused and Krajišnik discussed the timing of the announcement of the Bosnian Serb Constitution.⁹⁵⁵⁷

2927. On 26 January 1992, during an extraordinary session convened to discuss how to respond to the moves towards the independence of BiH,⁹⁵⁵⁸ the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a series of conclusions. This included a conclusion that the decision to hold the referendum on the independence of BiH was brought about illegally and that it was therefore not mandatory for the Serb people.⁹⁵⁵⁹ The Chamber recalls that the referendum on the question of independence was held on 29 February and 1 March 1992. It was largely boycotted by the Bosnian Serbs and yielded an overwhelming majority of votes in favour of independence.⁹⁵⁶⁰

2928. One of the Bosnian Serb deputies spoke about the immense duties they had “because we are setting up our own state” and called on the Bosnian Serb Assembly to set deadlines for the completion of this plan.⁹⁵⁶¹ The Accused was also asked to “give us an order [...] that the Serbs should occupy their territories so that no other forces could enter them”.⁹⁵⁶²

2929. In February 1992, before the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused spoke about the Bosnian Serb strategic aims beginning to materialise and the importance of establishing internal borders “as wide as possible”, and that if those internal borders are wider than the external borders of BiH they would be able to say “[w]ho cares about external borders”.⁹⁵⁶³ In March 1992, the Accused called for frequent sittings of the Bosnian Serb Assembly to “accelerate our preparations for the events that will follow”⁹⁵⁶⁴ and “because we are now entering the final stage of a process”.⁹⁵⁶⁵

2930. The Bosnian Serb Assembly also concluded that the “[p]lace of the Republic of the Serbian People in [BiH] is in the common state of all Serbian people. Democratic transformation of Yugoslavia must be [a] parallel process with the state organisation of the Serbian people into the Serbian federation or alliance of the Serbian states.”⁹⁵⁶⁶ On 15 February 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly discussed a draft constitution, according to which the SerBiH would become part of federal Yugoslavia, and not BiH.⁹⁵⁶⁷ On 28 February 1992, the SDS Deputies’ Club recommended that the Bosnian Serb Assembly pass the constitution that day as “a form of protection against the referendum”; the Bosnian Serb Assembly then unanimously adopted the Bosnian Serb Constitution.⁹⁵⁶⁸ The Constitution provided for equal rights and freedoms before the law for all citizens of the republic regardless of, inter alia, their race, ethnicity and beliefs.⁹⁵⁶⁹

2931. On 24 March 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly elected Branko Đerić as the Prime Minister, Aleksa Buha as Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mićo Stanišić as Minister of Internal Affairs in the Bosnian Serb Government.⁹⁵⁷⁰ As recalled earlier, while the Bosnian Serb Constitution provided that the prime minister propose candidates for ministerial positions to the Assembly, in fact it was the SDS and the SDS President that chose the nominees.⁹⁵⁷¹ For instance, the Accused, as president of the SDS, asked that Đerić nominate Mićo Stanišić and Buha.⁹⁵⁷²

2932. With regard to Ministers Mićo Stanišić and Mandić, Đerić testified that they kept visiting the Accused and failed to attend government’s sessions as they felt that “the government could be pushed aside” and “thought themselves as belonging to the top leadership”.⁹⁵⁷³ As described by Đerić, the SerBiH was a “party state” where the Accused as the president of the SDS held all the power, took control of all functions of the SDS and was practically the government too.⁹⁵⁷⁴ Đerić added that “the government was there just as a kind of technical attachment, not a body that should create policies” and that it was a state in which the government did not have any opposition.⁹⁵⁷⁵ The Accused himself said: “But, believe me, the Government is mine. I am responsible for its functioning. I appoint and propose”.⁹⁵⁷⁶

2933. On 28 February 1992, Koljević proposed that the Assembly be convened immediately after the referendum and “divide up the Television” and steps be taken to establish a Bosnian Serb newspaper.⁹⁵⁷⁷ These proposals were accepted by the SDS Deputies’ Club.⁹⁵⁷⁸ Similar measures had already been taken to establish a separate structure for Bosnian Serb propaganda and the media. For example in September 1991 the SDS Executive Board adopted the decision on the appointment of the Commission for Information and Propaganda.⁹⁵⁷⁹ On 27 September 1991, in an intercepted phone conversation, the Accused issued an instruction to replace the Bosnian Muslim director of Radio Banja Luka, stating “replace him immediately. Appoint a man of yours. These are war times.”⁹⁵⁸⁰ In October 1991, the Accused advocated the creation of their own radio television network which would unite Serbian information as well as their own news agency.⁹⁵⁸¹

2934. On 7 April 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly declared the independence of the SerBiH and Plavšić and Koljević resigned from their positions in the Presidency of BiH.⁹⁵⁸² The Ministry of Defence was set up around April 1992.⁹⁵⁸³

However, the Chamber does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard given that his testimony was marked by multiple contradictions and indicators of partiality and bias. Krajišnik testified that it was inaccurate to say that the Bosnian Serb Government and the Ministerial Council were subordinated to him or the Accused and that these structures were answerable to the Bosnian Serb Assembly. Momčilo Krajišnik, T. 43358–43359 (13 November 2013). While the Chamber accepts that these structures may not have been formally subordinated to the Accused, the evidence demonstrates that he did play a significant and influential role in the way in which they operated.

2935. On 8 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government established a Central Commission for the Exchange of Prisoners of War and Arrested Persons.⁹⁵⁸⁴ At a session of the Bosnian Serb Government on 20 March 1993, it decided to dissolve the Central Commission for the Exchange of Prisoners, due to problems including “private arrangements and smuggling in the exchange of prisoners”.⁹⁵⁸⁵ The Bosnian Serb Government decided to form a new Commission for the Exchange and Release of Prisoners of War and Civilians which would answer directly to the government and would be more systematic and organised and would co-operate with other relevant government bodies in order to address the accommodation of exchanged prisoners in the RS.⁹⁵⁸⁶

2936. A three-member Presidency was established on 12 May 1992, composed of Plavšić, Koljević, and the Accused, with the Accused elected the President of the Presidency. On or around 2 June 1992, the Presidency was enlarged to five members to include the Prime Minister, Đerić, and the President of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, Krajišnik. On 6 July 1992 the members of the Presidency allocated tasks among themselves and the Accused was charged with military issues.⁹⁵⁸⁷ On 17 December 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly replaced the structure of the Presidency by establishing a single president structure. The Accused was elected to the position of President of the SerBiH. Plavšić and Koljević were elected as Vice-Presidents.⁹⁵⁸⁸ During its operations in 1992, the Accused exercised the most authority in the Presidency.⁹⁵⁸⁹ When international observers met with the top level of the Bosnian Serb leadership, including Krajišnik, Koljević and Plavšić, they all deferred to the Accused, and he was seen as “undoubtedly and indisputably the leader of the Bosnian Serbs”.⁹⁵⁹⁰

2937. The Accused attended and addressed almost every session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁹⁵⁹¹ The Accused’s speeches were often met with explicit approval and praise by

Bosnian Serb representatives.⁹⁵⁹² For example, at a session on 25 February 1992, Kuprešanin said that the Accused “as the President of the SDS, is truly the leading figure among the Serbian people. And five of his sentences are enough to change the entire course of the session”.⁹⁵⁹³ On another occasion, after the Accused spoke about the need to centralise the authority, a deputy said “things that are ordered by [the Accused], the Assembly, the Presidency, the Minister of Defence and the Army General, must be carried out to the last man”.⁹⁵⁹⁴ Mladić also spoke after the Accused and stated: “I support everything he said [...] I am much more optimistic now than I was ever before”.⁹⁵⁹⁵

2938. While the Bosnian Serb Assembly operated in a democratic fashion, the Accused was described as “the greatest authority”, who had “the best ideas and the best solutions for all issues crucial to the Serbian people in BiH.”⁹⁵⁹⁶ The Accused emphasised the supremacy of the Bosnian Serb Assembly but at the same time stated that he would not allow a few people to “jeopardise the entire project” and that once the SDS had adopted a policy, anything outside of that policy would be treason and that maximum discipline was needed.⁹⁵⁹⁷

2939. Defence witnesses testified that (i) the Accused was a weak president with very little power; (ii) the Accused did not have “unquestionable power”; (iii) the Accused was a democrat who did not dominate the state or the SDS; and (iv) the local SDS leadership was completely autonomous.⁹⁵⁹⁸ However, the Chamber notes that the evidence of Zametica, Kondić and Sojić in this regard is expressed in general terms and is based on their own feeling, impression, opinion, and in some cases incomplete information. The Chamber does not therefore find their evidence to be of much weight in this regard. In addition the evidence of Šojić, Poplašen, and Tadić was marked by contradictions, evasiveness or indicators of partisanship and bias. The Chamber therefore does not find their evidence to be reliable in this regard. In addition the Chamber finds that this evidence is outweighed by the volume of reliable evidence discussed above which on the contrary demonstrates the power and control of the Accused.

(2) Conclusion

2940. Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber finds that the Accused, as the president of the SDS Main Board, had de jure and de facto authority over the SDS party and its members. From 1990 to 1995 the Accused was at the head of the SDS and he exerted great control and authority over its institutions and direction. In addition, as the President of the SNB, President of the Presidency and subsequently President of the RS, the Accused was the highest civil servant within the SerBiH and later the RS. The Accused had great authority over the Presidency, the Government and its key members and, as a result of his position and gravitas, had great influence at the Bosnian Serb Assembly. The SDS operated with strict respect for the hierarchical structures which ran from the Main Board and Executive Board to the Municipal Board structures. The Chamber also finds that the Accused enforced discipline within the party and was the most powerful and influential authority within the party. These SDS party structures facilitated communication between the higher level leaders including the Accused and the municipal SDS leaders.

2941. The Chamber further concludes that from 1991 the Accused, the SDS, and the Bosnian Serb leadership planned for and developed measures to be taken should BiH move toward independence. When the SRBiH Assembly passed a declaration of sovereignty on 15 October 1991 in the absence of the Serb delegates, these plans were further developed and ultimately put into practice.

2942. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership responded vehemently to what they viewed as an illegal and unconstitutional move towards independence. The Chamber finds that the Accused and SDS structures played a crucial role in this period in developing a response to further the objectives and interests of the Bosnian Serbs. When confronted with the possibility of BiH independence, the SDS discussed the objective of Serb unity, activating parallel government structures, intensifying the process of regionalisation, and furthering military organisation at a local level.

2945. For example, the Bosnian Serb Assembly passed decisions which reflected the position of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership that the Serb people would remain in the joint state of Yugoslavia. It also organised a plebiscite of the Bosnian Serb people to confirm that decision and then endorsed the result of that plebiscite and declared that areas where Serbs had voted to remain in Yugoslavia would remain part of the territory of Yugoslavia. When Brđanin threatened dismissal of directors and managers who did not participate in the plebiscite, the Accused cautioned him against making such statements publicly but did not condemn the substance of the statements themselves. The Chamber finds that this evidence demonstrates that the Accused worked towards full participation in the plebiscite as a means of showing public support for the policies of the Bosnian Serb leadership.

2946. The Chamber finds that when it became apparent that the objective of remaining in a joint state with Yugoslavia was no longer possible, the Bosnian Serb Assembly approved preparations for the formation of a separate Serb Republic. In this regard, the Chamber also finds that from late 1991 through until mid-1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly played a central role in forming other parallel Bosnian Serb institutions and structures, such as the Council of Ministers and the SNB. It also worked towards the drafting of a constitution for the Serb State they wanted to create. The Chamber finds that the creation of parallel structures at a municipal level was also propagated by the Bosnian Serb Assembly, which called for example the establishment of “municipal assemblies of the Serbian people”. The Chamber finds that the Accused led the discussions during the Bosnian Serb Assembly sessions where these decisions were made. The Accused directly promoted the measures which corresponded with his objectives.

2947. The Chamber finds that the Accused was at the forefront in explaining and promoting the policies which led to the conclusions taken by the Bosnian Serb Assembly and other Bosnian Serb political structures. He also promoted the importance of the Bosnian Serb Assembly itself and explained that it needed to sit often in order to accelerate their preparations for the creation of a Bosnian Serb state. The Chamber also finds that the Accused took on a very active role in the creation of the structures which would support the existence of a separate Bosnian Serb state. For example, the Accused and the SDS played the central role in the selection of ministers in the SerBiH. In addition the Chamber finds that the evidence demonstrates that the Accused exercised a high degree of control over the Bosnian Serb Government and its key members.

2949. The proclamation of the SerBiH in January 1992 by the Bosnian Serb Assembly was confirmation of the territorial objectives and ideology of the Bosnian Serb leadership which sought the creation of a separate Serb state. This proclamation also made reference to historic crimes committed against the Bosnian Serbs which has been discussed above. The Chamber finds that the territorial delimitation of Bosnian Serb claimed territories was also intimately linked to this discourse on these historic crimes, given the view that the Bosnian Serbs had only become a minority in certain areas because of the crimes committed against them in World War II.

2950. From late 1991, it was clear that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership had prepared “moves” which they would implement in order to achieve their objectives and had clearly calculated when they would take action. The Accused made it clear that there needed to be agreement and uniformity in the timing of these moves. He also emphasised the importance of SDS structures at a local level, including SDS municipal and local boards.

2951. The Accused was also the leading figure and authority in the Bosnian Serb Assembly and insisted on the greatest discipline in following the policies of the SDS in order to achieve their objectives. The evidence demonstrates that the deputies in the Bosnian Serb Assembly showed a high level of respect and adherence to the policies and measures which were promulgated by the Accused and that the Accused also exercised considerable influence over the Bosnian Serb governmental organs.

(B) Regionalisation and creation of SAOs

(1) Analysis of evidence

2952. The Chamber recalls its discussion on the process of regionalisation which began with the establishment of communities of municipalities organised by the SDS in early 1991.⁹⁵⁹⁹ In January 1991, SDS presidents of municipal assemblies in Bosnian Krajina began preparations for the formation of the ZOBK which was approved by the SDS regional board in April 1991.⁹⁶⁰⁰ On 11 April 1991, the SRBiH Assembly recommended municipal assemblies to stop issuing decisions in connection with regionalisation.⁹⁶⁰¹ However, municipalities with large Serb majorities voted to affiliate with the ZOBK, which held its founding assembly on 25 April 1991.⁹⁶⁰² At the constitutive session of the ZOBK, it was said that this community had been established “regardless of ethnic affiliation” and that unity of Yugoslavia was affirmed as one of their objectives in creating this community of municipalities.⁹⁶⁰³

2953. In May 1991 two other communities of municipalities were created in Romanija and in Eastern and Old Herzegovina.⁹⁶⁰⁴ In September 1991, these communities of municipalities were renamed SAOs.⁹⁶⁰⁵ The Chamber recalls that the SAOs Semberija-Majeвица, Northern Bosnia, and Birač were formed between September and November 1991.⁹⁶⁰⁶ On 21 November 1991, the Bosnian Serb Assembly certified the proclamation of the SAOs in BiH.⁹⁶⁰⁷

2954. On 30 September 1991 the SDS Deputies' Club held a session which was attended by Krajišnik and the Accused.⁹⁶⁰⁸ At this meeting the Accused declared that he wanted to ask the representatives from the Krajina to inform their municipalities that all those who could report to the army do so and that the Serbs were preparing for regionalisation.⁹⁶⁰⁹ On 7 October 1991, the Accused referred to the SAOs as assisting "so that there is no tension, and that each is the master of his own, and that there is peaceful co-existence among the peoples here".⁹⁶¹⁰ The Accused had discussed the issue of regionalisation with Izetbegović, but Izetbegović's position was that regionalisation could not be carried out because the population in BiH was intermixed.⁹⁶¹¹ The Chamber recalls that while the SDA opposed these moves towards regionalisation in BiH, the Accused and SDS leaders spoke in favour of it for economic reasons, by reference to their view that there was a concentration of power in Sarajevo.⁹⁶¹² The Chamber took judicial notice that despite these justifications, among the functions the SDS assigned to the ZOBK was the organisation of its defence in times of war or imminent threat of war.⁹⁶¹³

2955. The Accused also took an active role in instructing authorities regarding decisions to be implemented and measures to be taken in the Bosnian Krajina area.⁹⁶¹⁴ For example, on

12 October 1991, in a conversation with Mišković in Prijedor, the Accused instructed that the party should be in “full mobile state” and that units should be on duty 24 hours a day.⁹⁶¹⁵

2956. The Chamber found that in late 1991, the SDS started implementing a policy of “regionalisation”, which involved taking steps towards the creation of “regions” in which Serbs were the relative majority.⁹⁶¹⁶ In September 1991, in a conversation with Slobodan Milošević, the Accused expressed that the goal of the Bosnian Serb leadership was regionalisation, or cantonisation, and that their aim was to take half of Sarajevo and to have strong links with Yugoslavia.⁹⁶¹⁷ On 16 September 1991, the SDS Executive Board approved the appointment of a Regionalisation Staff.⁹⁶¹⁸ This body was tasked with monitoring the implementation of the decision on the proclamation of autonomous regions and this decision was distributed to the municipal boards of the SDS.⁹⁶¹⁹ For example on 25 September 1991, the Sarajevo SDS Main Board decided to implement the decision and conclusions of the republican levels SDS organs with respect to regional organisation and appointed individuals who would co-ordinate the implementation of the decision.⁹⁶²⁰ This included the promulgation of autonomous regions as part of Yugoslavia and the separation of settlements in some municipalities and their integration into another municipality.⁹⁶²¹ The Accused also convened a plenary of Bosnian Serb officials in September 1991 to discuss these issues.⁹⁶²²

2957. At a meeting of the SDS Executive Board in November 1991, attended by the Accused, there was discussion of a report on “regionalisation” and that conditions should be created which would allow every region to “include and incorporate the national and territorial treasures” with the aim of creating a Serb BiH within Yugoslavia.⁹⁶²³ The pursuit of regionalisation, according to Krajišnik, was used by the SDS in response to the attempts of the HDZ and SDA to discuss independence of BiH.⁹⁶²⁴ Regionalisation was leverage, in his view, to suggest to the SDS’s coalition partners that the three parties should reach an overall agreement on the whole of BiH: its status within Yugoslavia as well as its internal organisation.⁹⁶²⁵

⁹⁶¹⁸ See para. 75. Sejmenović testified that in his assessment the SDS pursued regionalisation in order to create ethnically Serb regions in BiH and that the position taken at a Republic level by the SDS with respect to ethnic separation were also mirrored at a municipal level. However, the Chamber considers this to be his own opinion and therefore does not consider this evidence to be of much weight. Mevludin Sejmenović, T. 20457, 20464 (27 October 2011).

2958. The Chamber recalls that on 16 September 1991, the ZOBK was transformed into the ARK.⁹⁶²⁶ The ARK was vested with both executive and legislative powers within its area of jurisdiction and acted as an intermediate level of authority between the SerBiH and the municipalities.⁹⁶²⁷ As the ARK was a voluntary association, the ARK Statute made provision for other municipalities to join, and typically these decisions were taken only by Bosnian Serb delegates at a municipal level.⁹⁶²⁸ In addition while the ARK was established as a multi-ethnic institution, in practice the ARK Assembly was a Serb body.⁹⁶²⁹ Brđanin was chosen by the Accused to lead the ARK and held this position until the ARK was abolished.⁹⁶³⁰ The Accused was in regular contact with Brđanin and instructed him that he should not call him about “every trivial matter” but that he could call about issues which he could not resolve.⁹⁶³¹ The Accused instructed Brđanin “You have power in your hands, and you have presidents of municipalities through whom you can exercise this power, until we achieve autonomy [...] You should execute power vigorously and to the fullest. Not a single bird should be allowed to fly over Krajina [...] You must establish all that. I’ve seen what was written and sent. All of that must be implemented. Take care of that. Call each and every municipality president and keep checking if it has been implemented and accomplished”.⁹⁶³²

2959. On 18 October 1991, three days after the SRBiH Assembly session at which the SDA and HDZ adopted a declaration of sovereignty of BiH, the Accused informed the leaders of the Krajina municipalities, including Grahovac and Brđanin, to come urgently as very important decisions were going to be made.⁹⁶³³ On 21 October 1991, Grahovac, as President of the ARK Executive Council, initiated a meeting with the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Babić in Banja Luka to discuss the situation following the 15 October 1991 SRBiH Assembly session.⁹⁶³⁴ Following the plebiscite of the Serbian people on 9 and 10 November 1991, the Bosnian Serb Assembly issued a decision which verified the declared SAOs as part of BiH, a federal entity in Yugoslavia.⁹⁶³⁵

2960. The Chamber recalls that the Bosnian Serb Assembly approved on 21 December 1991 the appointment of Jovan Čizmović as the co-ordinator of activities of the executive bodies of the SAOs.⁹⁶³⁶ In addition on 24 February 1992, the SDS Executive Board assigned “coordinators” for the SAOs.⁹⁶³⁷ The SAOs had their own governmental, institutional, and political structures.⁹⁶³⁸

2961. At a meeting on 5 February 1992, attended by municipal leaders from the Bosanska Krajina, Semberija and Northern Bosnia SAOs, there was discussion about the SDS position with respect to regionalisation, the establishment and definition of Serb territories in BiH, and Serbia’s objective of preserving Yugoslavia and ensuring Serbs live in a single state.⁹⁶³⁹ In February 1992, at a meeting with Mladić, Adžić discussed the preparations that needed to be carried out in the Krajina but stressed that these plans were to be kept “strictly secret” and that “trustworthy people” were to be used to implement them.⁹⁶⁴⁰

2962. By early 1992, there was increasing tension between the leadership in Pale and the ARK authorities.⁹⁶⁴¹ The ARK authorities were moving towards independence and wished to establish the Krajina as a state within a state, or a “constituent entity” of Yugoslavia; the Accused strongly opposed this position, maintaining that Yugoslavia should be preserved and that the Krajinas should not advocate for changes to the borders.⁹⁶⁴² On 23 February 1992, the Accused told Kuprešanin to remind the representatives of the Krajina who wanted an independent state “of their loyalty to the initial Assembly”.⁹⁶⁴³ Kuprešanin also opposed the independence of the ARK and urged the Accused to attend an ARK Assembly session to resolve the issue.⁹⁶⁴⁴ The Accused agreed and attended an ARK Assembly session on 29 February 1992, during which he stated that “it would be a crime against the Krajina if it were declared a republic. Those who advocate such childish ideas are exposing the Serbian people to trouble”.⁹⁶⁴⁵ At the same session, all 148 of the ARK deputies in attendance voted to accept the Bosnian Serb Constitution in full, and the status of Kuprešanin stated that individuals in Krajina did not respect the Accused or the SDS, before or during the course of the war. D4011 (Witness statement of Vojislav Kuprešanin dated 11 November 2013), para. 29. While the Chamber finds that there were certainly tensions between the Accused and Krajina leaders, the Chamber does not find Kuprešanin’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that his testimony was marked by multiple contradictions, evasiveness, indicators that he was trying to mislead the Chamber and lacked sincerity. His demeanour and testimony also indicated partiality and bias through his attempts to protect the Accused and distance him from any responsibility.

the ARK was incorporated therein accordingly.⁹⁶⁴⁶ A separate Krajina state never resulted because ultimately the leadership opted for the integration of all of the Krajinias.⁹⁶⁴⁷

2963. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in September 1992, a deputy stated: “Since we are at war, we must adopt a system which will best defend ourselves and create our own state. At a time when we had to destroy a unitary Bosnia, the SAO regions and districts were politically and territorially the best solution”.⁹⁶⁴⁸ The Accused also spoke about the creation of SAOs as one of the ten measures which were taken before the war which they had “brainstormed” together and which were carried out after “Alija made a mistake”.⁹⁶⁴⁹ The Accused spoke on multiple occasions about his responsibility for developing the process of regionalisation.⁹⁶⁵⁰ At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session, Kuprešanin stated that the reason for the creation of regions was to “destroy Alija’s state”.⁹⁶⁵¹ In an interview in January 1995, the Accused confirmed that the SDS played the greatest role in “introducing Serbian awareness and discarding the inferior position of a dignified nation with its own sovereignty and state”.⁹⁶⁵² He went on to state that “[w]e had a list of the actions and steps to take, but we always waited for the Muslims to make a mistake and after they made one, we created a union of municipalities and the Serbian autonomous areas next, followed by the regions and eventually our assembly, and finally Republic”.⁹⁶⁵³

(2) Conclusion

2964. The Accused argues that the concept of regionalisation and division of municipalities was something envisaged and provided for by the constitution.⁹⁶⁵⁴ Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber finds that the process of regionalisation was a precursor towards creating and identifying Bosnian Serb claimed territory in BiH, whether or not this was provided for by a constitutional provision. This process of regional organisation along ethnic lines was a means of responding to and opposing the proposed independence of BiH. Regionalisation, and specifically the delineation of the SAOs, was a means of identifying which Bosnian Serb territories and settlements in BiH could be separated and remain a part of Yugoslavia in the event of BiH independence. This process of regionalisation was also an early means of identifying strategically significant territorial areas. Structures were also created in order to have co-ordination between the SAOs and the higher authorities within the SDS.

2965. The Chamber finds that the Accused and the SDS played a leading role in this process. The Accused himself spoke about the creation of SAOs as one of the measures which the Bosnian Serb leadership had “brainstormed” and implemented before the war to respond to moves towards independence by BiH. He emphasised that regionalisation and the creation of SAOs were the first steps which eventually led to the creation of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and the RS. The Chamber also finds that the Accused opposed the independence of the ARK and was successful in ensuring that the authorities in the ARK adhered to the SDS policies and supported the creation of the RS and the unity of the Bosnian Serbs.

(C) Split in the MUP and creation of a Bosnian Serb MUP

(1) Analysis of evidence

2966. In July 1991, at a meeting of SDS Deputies’ Club attended by the Accused, Mićo Stanišić and Mandić took the floor and focused on the Serbs being thrown out of the MUP; they complained that some people in charge were not doing their jobs as required.⁹⁶⁵⁵ After these speeches the Accused reacted forcefully, and said it was necessary for there to be a balance in the personnel of the MUP and that developments at the MUP should not be permitted without his knowledge.⁹⁶⁵⁶ In 1991, there were also problems with Bosnian Muslim personnel clandestinely being sent to Croatia for training without the knowledge of the official MUP.⁹⁶⁵⁷

2967. In July 1991, the Accused had also warned Izetbegović that if the Bosnian Serb demands were not met, they would establish a parallel state which would include a parallel police.⁹⁶⁵⁸

2968. The Accused was in regular contact with Mandić and other Bosnian Serb leaders and discussed personnel issues at the MUP and in September 1991, the Accused told Mandić that they had to be in touch almost daily.⁹⁶⁵⁹ The Accused insisted that all nominations had to come from the party level and took an active role in identifying those SDS members who should be nominated.⁹⁶⁶⁰ The Accused was also informed about personnel problems and warned that this could lead to conflict.⁹⁶⁶¹

2969. At the municipal level, a division of the police structures based on personnel disagreements was already envisaged by Bosnian Serb leaders as early as September 1991.⁹⁶⁶² On or around 6 September 1991, the Accused informed Brđanin that there would be a meeting the following day where important decisions would be made and that he or someone from the Krajina should attend.⁹⁶⁶³ On 17 September 1991, the Accused instructed Simović to relay an important message to Žepinić regarding the separation of the MUP, stating that “as of tomorrow, we are withdrawing all our ministers and all our officials in [the MUP]”; further the Accused stated that he was going to confront Izetbegović that evening and said “we are going to [...] break apart and then we are going to establish our own [SUP] [...] and we’ll make the government separately, we’ll make everything separately”.⁹⁶⁶⁴

2970. Around 21 September 1991, the Accused wrote a letter to all Municipal Boards of the SDS informing them that there were rumours about the mobilisation of Bosnian Muslim police, which would result in a Bosnian Muslim police force and would create conditions for a civil war.⁹⁶⁶⁵ The Municipal Boards were instructed by the Accused to follow developments closely in this regard.⁹⁶⁶⁶

2971. In an intercepted conversation on 8 October 1991 the Accused was informed about problems in Višegrad.⁹⁶⁶⁷ The Accused spoke about the option of establishing “our public security station” and that in negotiations “[w]e will say, here you are, if you can solve it within that deadline, if you cannot we have our own in our area”.⁹⁶⁶⁸ The Accused also gave an instruction to give “seven days to bring things to an end and punish the culprits” and “[i]f not, we shall proceed to organise parallel organs of power...[w]ith a view to protecting the Serbian people”.⁹⁶⁶⁹ The Accused also inquired whether the towns were separated and whether the mixed town centre could not be separated.⁹⁶⁷⁰ In December 1991, Mandić and the Accused discussed the preparations for the creation of a separate Serb MUP.⁹⁶⁷¹

2972. The Chamber recalls that from early January 1992, employees of the SJB in Zvornik were instructed by the SDS to gather support and prepare for the formation of a Serb SJB.⁹⁶⁷²

2973. On 11 February 1992, at a meeting in Banja Luka, Mićo Stanišić, Mandić, and other Bosnian Serb leaders were informed that the Bosnian Serb Assembly had decided to form a separate Serb MUP.⁹⁶⁷³ This was a means of ensuring that Bosnian Serb authority was felt in territories which they claimed.⁹⁶⁷⁴ Stanišić at this meeting spoke about the need to work towards organising a Serb MUP starting at the municipal and regional levels and moving towards a Serb ministry.⁹⁶⁷⁵ At this meeting there were also discussions about the problems in the MUP of the

SRBiH.⁹⁶⁷⁶ Župljanin indicated that with respect to the Banja Luka CSB not a single new Muslim or Croat employee would be hired until the status of Serb police who had fled from Croatia had been resolved.⁹⁶⁷⁷ Mićo Stanišić claimed that the MUP was being divided by the Muslims, through the actions of the SDA, and not the Serbs.⁹⁶⁷⁸

2974. At this meeting a resolution was passed to create a steering committee, a “Serbian advisory board” within the MUP under the direction of Mandić “to carry out all preparations necessary for the functioning of the Serbian MUP” following the adoption of the Bosnian Serb constitution.⁹⁶⁷⁹ Part of the preparation for separation included the arming of Serb police officers and Serb police stations.⁹⁶⁸⁰ The CSBs and SJBs reassigned stockpiled weapons belonging to the reserve police force to the new Serb MUP.⁹⁶⁸¹ A separate Serb MUP would be organised at state, regional, and municipal levels.⁹⁶⁸²

2975. Following this meeting, Mandić wrote to the CSBs and SJBs and asked them to act in accordance with the conclusions reached at the meeting in Banja Luka and to set up and have a meeting of senior MUP executives in their areas.⁹⁶⁸³ After this order, each centre distributed the stockpile of weapons for the reserve police force to members of the Serb MUP.⁹⁶⁸⁴ In Bijeljina for example, following the 11 February 1992 meeting, the SJB in Bijeljina was instructed by Mandić to begin preparations for the purpose of creating a Bosnian Serb MUP.⁹⁶⁸⁵

2976. This was the second of two meetings on this topic, the first having taken place in Sarajevo.⁹⁶⁸⁶ The meeting was not held secretly and Mandić personally informed Delimustafić about it.⁹⁶⁸⁷ The minutes and conclusions of the meeting were forwarded to Delimustafić.⁹⁶⁸⁸

2977. By March 1992, there were further problems given the failure to carry out the 1990 coalition agreement regarding personnel issues in the MUP which resulted in proposals for its re-organisation.⁹⁶⁸⁹ The Accused on 6 March 1992 emphasised the Bosnian Serb demands with respect to the re-organisation of the MUP and protested about appointments where the legal procedure had not been followed.⁹⁶⁹⁰ There were also complaints received from a municipal level about the divisions in the SJB which were blamed on the SDA⁹⁶⁹¹ The Accused wanted the Serb collegium in the MUP to reach agreement on its own personnel.⁹⁶⁹² In March 1992, the Accused spoke about announcing their withdrawal from the MUP and that they had already obtained the badges.⁹⁶⁹³

2978. On 24 March 1992, the Accused spoke at the Bosnian Assembly about following forthcoming instructions so that the sovereign authority of the “Serbian Assembly and Serbian people be established on the ground as soon as possible”.⁹⁶⁹⁴ In this regard the Accused spoke about having their own separate MUP and that the then newly established municipalities should set up police stations and their organs as soon as possible.⁹⁶⁹⁵ Mićo Stanišić was also in contact with municipal level leaders in March 1992 and discussed the splitting of police structures.⁹⁶⁹⁶ He also reported on steps taken to establish “police stations in our parts” to Đerić.⁹⁶⁹⁷

2979. The law on the establishment of the Serbian MUP was passed on 27 March 1992.⁹⁶⁹⁸ The Law on Internal Affairs provided for the structure and duties of the organs of the MUP.⁹⁶⁹⁹ The Chamber recalls that at the end of March 1992, a decision was adopted by the Bosnian Serb Assembly, calling on the Bosnian Serb police to separate by 1 April 1992.⁹⁷⁰⁰ On 30 March 1992, Mićo Stanišić addressed the members of the police unit of the SAO Romanija stating that as of that day, the SerBiH had their own police force.⁹⁷⁰¹ On 31 March 1992, Mandić sent a dispatch to all SJBs and CSBs indicating that the Bosnian Serb Assembly had promulgated the Law on Internal Affairs.⁹⁷⁰²

2980. Mandić's dispatch indicated that when this law came into force on 1 April 1992, all CSBs and SJBs on the territory of the SerBiH would be abolished and their functions taken over by organisational units of the Bosnian Serb MUP.⁹⁷⁰³ Mandić in a later intercepted conversation said "when I sent that dispatch and fucked the MUP to pieces" and "[y]ou have your state, we have ours. The Muslims should work on their own, fuck them".⁹⁷⁰⁴ Mandić sent this dispatch following the instructions of the Bosnian Serb political leadership.⁹⁷⁰⁵

2981. On 31 March 1992, Delimustafić, in response to Mandić's dispatch of 31 March 1992,⁹⁷⁰⁶ wrote a letter to the MUP administrations of all SDBs, CSBs, and SJBs stating that the dispatch reflected problems in the leadership and appealed to all MUP workers to continue to work responsibly and noted that the greatest number of MUP workers wish to remain in a united MUP.⁹⁷⁰⁷ Žepinić was also opposed to the split in the MUP given his view that the split would "inevitably lead to an armed conflict" in BiH.⁹⁷⁰⁸ Žepinić at a meeting attended by the Bosnian Serb leadership was criticised by Mićo Stanišić for "destroying" their idea of dividing the MUP and Žepinić said that the division could not be done peacefully.⁹⁷⁰⁹

Mandić later testified that the political leadership was not aware of his dispatch and he was simply following the decisions of the Assembly, the Law on Internal Affairs, and the Cutileiro Plan. Momčilo Mandić, T. 4474 (1 July 2010) The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable and notes that this is directly contradicted by his prior testimony that this dispatch was sent following instructions from the political leadership. The Chamber noted that Mandić in his testimony in this case was evasive and was marked by indicators of bias. Similarly the Chamber does not rely on Mandić's evidence about the effect or motivation for the division of the MUP given that this evidence was marked by efforts by Mandić to distance himself from responsibility for the events in BiH. 2982. The BiH MUP was then divided and allowed for the creation of the Bosnian Serb MUP. Employees of the abolished CSBs and SJBs who wished to work in the Bosnian Serb MUP were obliged to swear an oath of allegiance before taking up employment.⁹⁷¹⁰ After the dispatch of 31 March 1992, Mandić issued a further explanation on how the new MUP would be organised across the territory of the BiH.⁹⁷¹¹

2983. On 1 April 1992, it was reported that Mandić had invited all Serb police officers to put themselves at the disposal of a “MUP of Serbian Republic” pursuant to the Constitution of the SerBiH.⁹⁷¹² On 1 April 1992, the SRBiH MUP collegium issued a dispatch that in order to prevent a further deterioration of the security situation that the existing MUP “should be transformed peacefully and without any excesses” and that equipment of the SJB and SDB should not be seized by any nation unilaterally and that employees should not be dismissed because of their national or political affiliations.⁹⁷¹³ On 3 April 1992, Župljanin sent a dispatch indicating that the reorganisation of the MUP organs and their security services had begun in line with the dispatch from the Bosnian Serb MUP Collegium dated 2 April 1992.⁹⁷¹⁴

2985. The Chamber further recalls that Bosnian Serb SJBs were formed in municipalities including Bijeljina,⁹⁷²⁰ Bratunac,⁹⁷²¹ Brčko,⁹⁷²² Foča,⁹⁷²³ Rogatica,⁹⁷²⁴ Vlasenica,⁹⁷²⁵ Zvornik,⁹⁷²⁶ Ključ,⁹⁷²⁷ Prijedor,⁹⁷²⁸ Sanski Most,⁹⁷²⁹ Hadžići,⁹⁷³⁰ Ilidža,⁹⁷³¹ Pale,⁹⁷³² and Vogošća.⁹⁷³³

2986. In a decision issued on 25 April 1992, Mićo Stanisić ordered that CSB heads were allowed to take over the employees from the former MUP and assign jobs within the CSBs and SJBs, however, they had to inform the Minister of the Interior of all such decisions. Furthermore, all heads of CSB had to obtain prior approval from the MUP before assigning posts at the higher levels, such as the head of the SJBs.⁹⁷³⁴

2987. In May 1992, there was a meeting between the Accused, RS MUP officials and the Chiefs of the CBSs at which the existing situation, the problems on the ground, and the work of the MUP were discussed.⁹⁷³⁵ The Chiefs of the CSBs were informed that a MUP had been formed and of the applicable procedure, and the Accused used this opportunity to inform those present about the general situation and issues, emphasising that the MUP had to function according to the legal provisions.⁹⁷³⁶ A bulletin of daily events was compiled on the work between April and December 1992 in order to provide the Accused and the RS Prime Minister with information on the security situation. In addition, the Accused received 80 reports on security issues.⁹⁷³⁷

2988. The Accused, as President, also had the power to issue orders for the deployment of the police during the war.⁹⁷³⁸

(2) Conclusion

2989. The Accused's argues that there were multiple factors which contributed to the ultimate division of the MUP, particularly personnel disagreements with the SDA.⁹⁷³⁹ He also argues that the Cutileiro Plan envisaged all constituent entities having their own police forces.⁹⁷⁴⁰

2990. Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber finds that prior to the conflict in BiH there were already disputes, personnel issues and divisions between the Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim personnel in the MUP.⁹⁷⁴¹ The Chamber finds that the Accused himself had warned that if the Bosnian Serb demands were not met, a parallel police structure could be created. The Chamber finds that the Accused closely monitored developments in the MUP. The Chamber concludes however that, even if such a division was also influenced by personnel disagreements or was provided for by the Cutileiro Plan, the ultimate split in the MUP structures was precipitated by a decision of the Bosnian Serb leadership and formed a core part of their objective to create a separate Bosnian Serb state with parallel structures. The Chamber finds that Mandić took a leading role in ensuring that this division was carried out at a municipal level and in detailing how this new Bosnian Serb MUP was to be structured. It also finds that the creation of a separate Bosnian Serb MUP was a means of undermining the proposed independence of BiH. The Chamber finds that the directives with respect to the division of the MUP structures and the creation of the Bosnian Serb MUP were communicated to and implemented at a municipal level.

2991. The Chamber further finds that the separation of the BiH MUP and creation of a Bosnian Serb MUP was also a crucial step in the take-over of municipalities as it created a separate police structure which would allow Bosnian Serb authority to be maintained in those municipalities. The Chamber also finds that the Accused spoke in favour and promoted the creation of this separate police structure as a means of achieving their objective of sovereignty of the Serb people in the territories which they claimed. Following the division of the BiH MUP, the Accused was informed about developments and the functioning of the Bosnian Serb MUP. The Chamber recalls its finding that the separate Bosnian Serb MUP, as a component of the Serb Forces, were involved in the violent take-over of Municipalities and in crimes committed against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats upon which the Chamber has entered findings above.

⁹⁷⁴⁰ Defence Final Brief, paras. 176–179.

⁹⁷⁴¹ While the Chamber finds that these disputes did play a role in the decision to ultimately divide the MUP, the Chamber does not find Mandić's evidence that it was the SDA and these personnel issues which contributed most to the division of the MUP to be reliable: Momčilo Mandić, T. 4917 (8 July 2010); Momčilo Mandić, C2 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 9406. See also P1115 (Video footage of interview with Momčilo Mandić, July-August 1994, with transcript). In reaching that conclusion the Chamber found that Mandić's evidence was marked by evasiveness, inconsistencies and indicators of bias. In addition it was clear that he had an interest in downplaying his own role and the real reason for the division of the MUP.

(D) Variant A/B Instructions and take-over of power

(1) Analysis of evidence

(a) Distribution and contents of the Instructions

2992. Above, the Chamber found that the Variant A/B Instructions were issued by the SDS Main Board on 19 December 1991.⁹⁷⁴² They were distributed by the Accused at a meeting on or around 20 December 1991.⁹⁷⁴³ This meeting was held in Sarajevo and attended by hundreds of high ranking Bosnian Serbs, including Krajišnik, Plavšić, Koljević, members of the Main Board and Executive Board, deputies, municipal representatives, and members of the government.⁹⁷⁴⁴

2993. This document was adopted without any discussion, vote, or amendment and was presented as a set of measures which were to be practically implemented.⁹⁷⁴⁵ The stated purpose of these instructions was to “carry out the results of the plebiscite at which the Serbian people in Bosnia and Herzegovina decide to live in a single state” and to “increase mobility and readiness for the defence of the interests of the Serbian people”.⁹⁷⁴⁶ The Chamber further recalls that Serb-majority municipalities were designated Variant A, while Serb-minority municipalities were designated Variant B.⁹⁷⁴⁷ The instructions were a means of creating Serb authority in both Variant A and Variant B municipalities.⁹⁷⁴⁸ According to the instructions, the tasks laid out therein were to be ⁹⁷⁴³ See paras. 49, 132. The Chamber also notes that on cross-examination Grujić was confronted with his prior testimony where he claimed the Variant A/B instructions came directly from the Accused, but he retracted from this and said he did not know whether the Accused was directly involved or not. Branko Grujić, T. 40369–40371, 40405–40407, 40417–40418 (25 June 2013); P6415 (Excerpt from Branko Grujić's testimony before Belgrade District Court, 30 November 2005), p. 3.

But see KDZ192, T. 19508–19509, 19516–19517 (27 September 2011). KDZ192 agreed with the Accused's suggestion that the Variant A/B Instructions were not binding but then distanced himself from his answer when questioned by the Chamber. The Chamber notes that KDZ192's evidence was marked by contradictions and indicators of bias and partiality and does not rely on his evidence in this regard.

⁹⁷⁴⁷ See paras. 49, 132. See also Dorothea Hanson, T. 14504 (9 June 2011). The Chamber does not rely on Hanson's opinion that in practice, the instructions essentially mapped out the take-over of power.

⁹⁷⁴⁸ Radomir Nešković T. 14326–14327 (7 June 2011). The Chamber places no weight on Nešković's own assessment that the instructions were a means of subjugating the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to Serb implemented over the entire territory of the SRBiH or in every municipality where Serbs lived, in their entirety in Variant A municipalities and partially in Variant B municipalities.⁹⁷⁴⁹

2994. Before the Accused distributed the document, he spoke about the position of the Bosnian Serbs, the threat posed by Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, the secession and the disintegration of Yugoslavia, but did not actually go into the details of the document.⁹⁷⁵⁰ The fear of Bosnian Muslim and Croat dominance “was a key element that contributed to the emotional atmosphere” which prevailed during the meeting and nobody wanted to be seen as a traitor by questioning the instructions.⁹⁷⁵¹ The Accused called out individuals on a list and distributed copies of the instructions and approximately 100 people were given these instructions to read and return.⁹⁷⁵² The instructions were numbered as they knew which Bosnian Serb municipal leaders were supposed to be given copies of the document.⁹⁷⁵³ The Accused also discussed these instructions at a meeting of the SDS Deputies’ Club, which was attended by municipal representatives.⁹⁷⁵⁴ On 18 December 1991, the day before the Variant A/B Instructions were distributed, the Accused told Krajišnik in an intercepted phone conversation that he was “working on something”, “some measures and so on”.⁹⁷⁵⁵

2995. The Variant A/B Instructions required SDS municipal boards in the first level to “establish immediately Crisis Staffs of the Serbian People in the municipality”.⁹⁷⁵⁶ The instructions also specified that the composition of these Crisis Staffs should include all members of the SDS municipal board secretariat, SDS candidates in certain municipal organs (for Variant A municipalities) or SDS candidates in every municipal organ (for Variant B municipalities), deputies of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, and members of the SDS Main Board from the municipality.⁹⁷⁵⁷ The Chamber recalls that instructions also provided that the Commander of the Crisis Staff was, in

The Chamber places no weight on Čavoški's opinion in this regard given that it falls outside the scope of his expertise. In addition the Chamber also found his testimony was marked by contradictions, evasiveness and clear indicators of partiality and bias which undermined his evidence as an expert and does not find his evidence in this regard to be reliable.

Variant A municipalities, the president of the municipal assembly or the chairman of the municipal executive board and, in Variant B municipalities, the president of the SDS municipal board.⁹⁷⁵⁸

2996. The Variant A/B Instructions also called for, in the first level, convening and proclaiming an assembly of the Serbian people to be composed of Serbian representatives in the municipal assembly and presidents of SDS local boards.⁹⁷⁵⁹ In this phase, preparations were to be undertaken for the establishment of municipal government organs such as an executive committee, administration organs, a misdemeanour court and an SJB and for the preparation of a list of nominees to take on duties in these organs.⁹⁷⁶⁰ This first level also required preparations for the take-over of “staff, buildings and equipment of security services centres and their integration” into newly established organs.⁹⁷⁶¹

2997. The first level of the instructions also required an estimate of the number of active and reserve police, TO units, and civilian protection units and to bring these units “to full manpower” and take necessary action for their engagement depending on developments.⁹⁷⁶² The instructions also provided that these units would be activated by order of the municipal Crisis Staffs and also called for a replenishment of wartime units.⁹⁷⁶³ The instructions also required preparations to be taken to allow for the protection and evacuation of children, pregnant women, the elderly and sick.⁹⁷⁶⁴

2998. The Variant A/B Instructions also contained provisions to establish “constant communication and cooperation” between the SDS municipal boards and local boards and to provide for daily meetings of the SDS municipal board to constantly monitor the situation on the ground.⁹⁷⁶⁵

reserve and TO units.⁹⁷⁶⁶ This second level also provided for the take over of “staff, buildings and equipment of security services centres and [to] place them at the disposal of the newly established organs of the interior”.⁹⁷⁶⁷ In Variant B municipalities, the Crisis Staff was tasked with organising the defence of Serbs and to constantly monitor the political, military and security situation and to respond in a timely fashion.⁹⁷⁶⁸

3000. For Variant B municipalities there was a further provision which required that members of the “other nations” who had expressed loyalty to Yugoslavia be “proportionately represented in government organs”.⁹⁷⁶⁹ Also in Variant B municipalities there was an additional instruction for predominantly Serb local communes and settlements to establish “secret warehouses and depots” to store food, raw materials and manufacturing components.⁹⁷⁷⁰

3001. The second level of the Variant A/B Instructions was to be activated pursuant to an order of the Accused “in accordance with a specifically defined secret procedure”.⁹⁷⁷¹

(b) Implementation of the Instructions at the municipal level

3002. The Variant A/B Instructions were communicated from SDS leaders to municipal leaders and SDS municipal boards which discussed and implemented the variant which was applicable to their respective municipality.⁹⁷⁷² The Chamber also recalls its finding that the implementation of these instructions were viewed by the recipients as mandatory.⁹⁷⁷³ Those who received the document had to decide the best way to implement the instructions at a municipal level.⁹⁷⁷⁴ There are also municipal decisions on the record which specifically reference the Variant A/B Instructions.⁹⁷⁷⁵ The Chamber recalls that after the Variant A/B Instructions were distributed by the

However, the Chamber notes that when KW317 was confronted with a prior interview where he confirmed that he did attend a meeting where they were instructed to implement the second phase of the Variant A/B Instructions. In light of this qualification the Chamber does not find KW317’s evidence in this regard to be of much weight.

3003. The Chamber further recalls that the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions resulted in the formation of municipal Crisis Staffs and Serb municipal assemblies, and the declaration of Serbian municipalities.⁹⁷⁸⁶ For example, the Chamber recalls that the decision to form the Serbian Municipality of Zvornik directly cited to the Variant A/B Instructions.⁹⁷⁸⁷ From late 1991, municipalities established Crisis Staffs and some were re-established or re-formed in around April or May 1992.⁹⁷⁸⁸ These Crisis Staffs were formed and in existence between 1991 and 1993 in the Municipalities.⁹⁷⁸⁹ direct evidence about the discussion of the Variant A/B Instructions per se, it found that Crisis Staffs and other Bosnian Serb municipal structures were created in late 1991 or early 1992. The Chamber is satisfied given the timing and pattern of events in these municipalities, that these structures were also created pursuant to the Variant A/B Instructions.

(c) Monitoring of developments and implementation of Instructions

3005. The Accused also followed up on the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions. For example in an intercepted conversation on 21 December 1991, the Accused asked Krajišnik “who will implement what we issued last night?” and Krajišnik replied that it would be the Council of Ministers.⁹⁷⁹⁹ When the Accused observed that the Council of Ministers would not be able to “run from municipality to municipality and say do this, do that”, Krajišnik replied: “He won’t run either” and the Accused countered with “[B]ut he must run.”⁹⁸⁰⁰ From the context of the conversation the Chamber finds that the Accused and Krajišnik were speaking about Jovan Čizmović. His role is discussed in further detail below.

3006. On 26 December 1991, Krajišnik informed the Accused that he had been to a Novi Grad Municipal Assembly session in which voting had been blocked.⁹⁸⁰¹ In an intercepted conversation on 27 December 1991, the Accused was asked by Bjelica whether he would come to Sokolac and was informed: “We’re doing the job here, everything is normal” and the Accused asked whether Tupajić was doing a good job in the municipality.⁹⁸⁰²

3007. In January 1992, in an intercepted conversation, the Accused asked Miroslav Stanić, the president of the SDS in Foča, about the situation there.⁹⁸⁰³ The Accused specifically asked Stanić “[c]an they introduce independence in Foča”, to which Stanić replied that they would not and they had told journalists who visited them that “we’ll never allow that”.⁹⁸⁰⁴ Stanić proceeded to tell the Accused that they had formed a “Serb municipality and you have that information” and that if “things should go differently on the fifteenth, we’ll have a public promotion”.⁹⁸⁰⁵ The Accused expressed his agreement and said: “Yes, yes, and take complete control over your affairs”; to which

Stanić agreed and said that “everything [is] as it is in the instructions”.⁹⁸⁰⁶ The Accused expressed his satisfaction and said: “Good, good. That’s very important [...] never again in history will they [...] if we give in now, we’ll never have a chance and if, if we succeed, we will have succeeded for all times”.⁹⁸⁰⁷

3008. The Accused was kept informed of the implementation of the instructions. As such, in an intercepted conversation on 10 February 1992 between the Accused and Vitomir Žepinić, the plan to divide the Bratunac municipality and establish a separate Serb municipality was discussed and encouraged by the Accused.⁹⁸⁰⁸ Similarly, the previous day, Krajišnik informed the Accused of a meeting he had recently attended in Novi Grad, and the discussions he had about forming the Rajlovac municipality.⁹⁸⁰⁹

3009. There was direct communication between the municipal Boards and their representatives and the Accused with respect to the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions and people came from the field to see the Accused.⁹⁸¹⁰ Municipal leaders would frequently visit the Accused or would communicate in writing or by phone with respect to municipal issues.⁹⁸¹¹ The Accused also had regular contact with Bosnian Serb municipal leaders and made frequent visits to municipalities.⁹⁸¹²

KDZ605 stated that he heard that Deronjić went to Pale, met with the Accused to “discuss and organise the takeover of Bratunac”. However, the Chamber is not satisfied that it can rely on this unsourced second hand-hear say to establish that this meeting did take place or what was discussed at this meeting.

⁹⁸⁰⁹ P5753 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and Momčilo Krajišnik, February 1992), p. 1. On 11 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a law according to which the municipality of Rajlovac included certain areas. 3010. The Accused invited representatives of Crisis Staffs to report on their work.⁹⁸¹³ He was in contact with municipal leaders and questioned them on how the local authorities and structures were functioning.⁹⁸¹⁴ The Accused was regularly informed about, and gave instructions with respect to, specific developments at a municipal and regional level.⁹⁸¹⁵ When there were problems in a specific municipality, Nešković or other Bosnian Serb officials would be sent by the Accused or by the Main Board. Nešković would then provide a brief verbal report on the work he had done even though the Accused had already been informed from municipal sources about these developments.⁹⁸¹⁶

of a Crisis Staff, Executive Board and Municipal Assembly, and was requested to provide further instructions with respect to the formation of war presidencies.⁹⁸²⁰

3012. The Accused sent commissioners to various locations when the municipal authorities were not functioning.⁹⁸²¹ Jovan Čizmović, who was a member of the Council of Ministers, was appointed as republic level co-ordinator of the activities of the SAOs and the ARK and had the duty of monitoring the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions.⁹⁸²² In an intercepted conversation on 21 December 1991 the Accused gave Čizmović the “full authorisation to visit all our municipalities” and indicated that the municipalities would identify the problems they were facing and that it would be good to hear advice from Čizmović.⁹⁸²³

3013. In another intercepted conversation on 16 January 1992, Čizmović reported to the Accused that he had spoken to Bijeljina and that they were “prepared for full-cooperation” and that he had prepared a questionnaire for Northern Bosnia to allow them to identify what they had managed to do and how far they had come and to what extent they were prepared to “implement the first level of the instruction” and any problems they were facing or needed help with.⁹⁸²⁴ Čizmović indicated that he was prepared to form a team with the help of the Accused to provide professional help with any problems the municipalities faced.⁹⁸²⁵

3014. In another intercepted conversation on 22 January 1992 between the Accused and Čizmović, there was discussion on sending experts and teams to assist municipalities to deal with problems and Čizmović said: “It’s the same situation with Bijeljina [...] I’ve finished with them, too”.⁹⁸²⁶ Čizmović reported about measures taken in Doboj and Bijeljina and indicated that he still had to “see about Birač, Romanija and Herzegovina. [...] But I’ll see to it that that should be finished within this short time, too”.⁹⁸²⁷

3015. In another phone conversation, Čizmović indicated, and the Accused, agreed that “movements which are taking place here shouldn’t be seen as some sort of secession” but as an alternative “to a situation, if there should be a need for a reaction, that everything should be on a hair-trigger”.⁹⁸²⁸ The Accused said that it would allow them to react within two hours.⁹⁸²⁹ The Accused responded positively to Čizmović’s reports that: “Tonight we also established the Crisis Staff, which will act when nobody can get together, when they can assemble more quickly [...] So, that’s working. Because the objective must be carried out, instructions must be carried out”.⁹⁸³⁰ At the 6th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 26 January 1992, Čizmović spoke and called for the urgent operationalisation and declaration on the establishment of the SerBiH and stated that the “[t]asks set out in the instructions of 19 December 1991 should be carried out”.⁹⁸³¹

3016. In February 1992, the Accused addressed the Bosnian Assembly and stressed the importance of co-operation with regional structures and leaders and the development of their strategic objectives.⁹⁸³² This included creating a questionnaire to be used to check the progress of municipalities with respect to “preparations”.⁹⁸³³ The Accused spoke about Čizmović visiting municipalities, including Bijeljina and Banja Luka, with a questionnaire to check on preparations at the municipality level and to check on their loyalty.⁹⁸³⁴

3017. In March 1992, the Accused wrote to all the presidents of the municipalities to inform them that a Republic Operations Centre had been established and that the task of the municipalities was to urgently connect their own information centres with district centres, to provide personnel and ensure that other requirements were met so as to monitor the situation on the ground.⁹⁸³⁵ The Accused noted that the district centres were already connected by telephone and radio communication with the republic centres and it was also necessary to co-operate with the SJBs continuously to allow for the transmission and receipt of information 24 hours a day.⁹⁸³⁶ The Accused stated that consultative meetings would soon be held to go over technical and organisational issues related to the work of municipal and district centres.⁹⁸³⁷

3018. Municipal leaders also requested assistance from the higher level Bosnian Serb institutions. For example, in July 1992, the President of the Executive Committee in Foča informed Đerić that the political and security situation in Foča remained critical and requested assistance to find the best solution.⁹⁸³⁸ Similarly, in September 1992 the Command of the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade reported to the Accused about disputes and difficulties in co-operation with the civilian authorities in Sokolac.⁹⁸³⁹ The Accused was also informed of the situation with regard to the institutions in Bratunac and, for example, in a speech to the Bosnian Serb Assembly in September 1992 he spoke about the need to ensure the functioning of authorities.⁹⁸⁴⁰

3019. The Chamber received evidence that described disruptions of road systems at different locations or breakdown of telecommunications between the RS institutions and the local levels, from March until December 1992.⁹⁸⁴¹ demonstrate that notwithstanding disruptions in telecommunications from March until December 1992, it was still possible for the leadership of the SDS, including the Accused, and RS institutions to communicate with lower levels and that generally obstacles were overcome.⁹⁸⁴³ More specifically, with respect to the RS MUP, CSBs, and SJBs, there were always communication channels with most communication by fax and telephone and daily communication between the CSB and SJBs. If there were limited interruptions, for example if the telephone lines were down, there would be communication by courier.⁹⁸⁴⁴

The Chamber notes that Mladenović testified that communications with Pale were non-existent, however, it does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber notes multiple contradictions and extreme evasiveness in Mladenović’s evidence. More specifically Mladenović testified that while communication was non-existent they did receive some communication including orders and warnings from the Accused to adhere to the Geneva Conventions. Radojica Mladenović, T. 36612 (4 April 2013).

However, considering the communications above, the Chamber finds that even if there was some disturbance in the telephone lines during the war, it was still possible to establish a line of communication between Novo Sarajevo and Pale.

3022. The Chamber recalls that on 14 February 1992, the Accused at an extended session of the SDS Main Board and Executive Board activated the second level of the Variant A/B Instructions.⁹⁸⁴⁶ The presidents of SDS municipal boards, presidents and members of regional boards, presidents of assemblies, and executive boards of municipalities were invited to this meeting.⁹⁸⁴⁷ This discussion and instruction to implement level two were conveyed to SDS structures at a municipal level.⁹⁸⁴⁸

3023. The Accused called for the “second level” to be introduced and to “intensify the functioning of the government at any cost and on every single millimetre of our territory”.⁹⁸⁴⁹ At this meeting, the Accused said that they needed to be wise and united “in order to take the last drop of the power into our hands, in a humane way of course, carry it out in a humane way, a just way towards both Muslims and Croats who live there, that is particularly important, that there would be no fleeing from our areas”.⁹⁸⁵⁰ The Accused in this regard noted that “our image with foreign monitors” had to change and if Bosnian Serbs defended themselves too aggressively they would “lose an awful lot of points”.⁹⁸⁵¹ The Accused said that “stage number two should also be converted, the one we’ve talked about, the one you have [...] in order to have authorities in the field functioning, that a bird cannot fly over really.”⁹⁸⁵²

3024. At this session, the Accused spoke about the Bosnian Serb strategic objectives.⁹⁸⁵³ He also noted the importance of international opinion and sympathy and that they should not be the aggressors, and stated that they “seek nothing that belongs to somebody else” and that they should defend what was theirs but not “in an aggressive way, in a combat way” but defend it with firm conviction that their rights had been repeatedly violated and that they would be dominated in a unitary BiH.⁹⁸⁵⁴ In contrast the Accused also stated that he and the Serbs wanted to “let everything go to fucking hell and that we take the express way” but that they needed to find a balance between power and tactfulness in order to achieve their goal.⁹⁸⁵⁵ For example he noted that for international political reasons they could not organise their assembly “without a major provocation” and that they knew exactly where they were heading.⁹⁸⁵⁶

3025. The Accused emphasised that he, Koljević and Krajišnik were of the opinion that “it would be more important to gain the real situation, the factual situation on the ground” for the purposes of international negotiations.⁹⁸⁵⁷ The Accused also emphasised that they would have a right to “introduce the stage number two in functioning of your areas and, relying on your own forces, to absolutely defend yourselves from the independent BiH”.⁹⁸⁵⁸ He also explained that according to their “scheme” there would be a municipal board and a local board structure so that not “a single Serbian house should be left without contacts with the party”.⁹⁸⁵⁹ The Accused explained that they had their “moves ready”, that the deputies knew about it and that whenever the Bosnian Muslims did something foolish they would “disclose our next move, which is ten times more powerful than theirs”.⁹⁸⁶⁰

3026. Mladenović at this meeting spoke on behalf of the Bosnian Serb Executive Committee of Foča and reported that “we did everything that the centre had requested us to do, and considering the instructions we received in this field when setting up the Serbian Assembly and Executive Committee”.⁹⁸⁶¹ Mladenović continued by saying that “we wish to finally round up the Serbian territory of Foča Municipality” within the SAO of Herzegovina and that he found it necessary to “establish Serbian municipalities regardless of the borders of existing municipalities”.⁹⁸⁶²

3027. Following the activation by the Accused of the second level of the Variant A/B Instructions, the Chamber recalls that, for example, on 24 February 1992 the SDS Municipal Board in Bratunac discussed the implementation of this second level.⁹⁸⁶³ On 2 March 1992, the SDS Municipal Board of Foča sent a letter addressed to the office of the President of the SDS Crisis Staff in Sarajevo indicating that they were facing pressure in Foča but they were “ready to carry out any order”.⁹⁸⁶⁴ The Chamber also recalls that the Serbian Municipality of Zvornik was proclaimed on 15 March 1992 and decided to join the SAO Majeвица-Semberija.⁹⁸⁶⁵ On 13 March 1992, the President of the Executive Board of the SDS required all SDS Municipal Board to assess the possibility of establishing Serbian municipalities and the projected territory that would become part of these Serbian municipalities.⁹⁸⁶⁶

(c) Activation of Crisis Staffs and other structures

3028. On 4 April 1992, the Accused, as President of the SNB, issued an announcement that the Crisis Staffs should be activated.⁹⁸⁶⁷ The Accused, made an announcement that the “rump” presidency of BiH, operating without any Serbs, issued highly irresponsible and illegal instructions to raise the TO, civilian protection, and reserve police and that by doing so, the “rump” Presidency acknowledged the collapse of the constitutional and legal order and instigated chaos, violence, and civil war.⁹⁸⁶⁸ He called upon the population to disregard these moves by the BiH Presidency and ordered that Crisis Staffs and Serb TO be activated in response to Bosnian Muslim mobilisation in specified areas with the purpose of maintaining peace, order, and safety of civilians of all nationalities.⁹⁸⁶⁹

Šojić testified that Crisis Staffs were only established following the example of the SDA and HDZ and not pursuant to any instructions and that they were formed spontaneously at the initiative of local authorities and they were not controlled at the republican level. Dragan Šojić, T. 31752-31754 (19 December 2012). However, the Chamber notes that the evidence of Šojić was marked by evasiveness, contradictions, and indicators that he was trying to mislead the Chamber. 3029. On 26 April 1992, Đerić on behalf of the Bosnian Serb Government issued instructions for the work of Crisis Staffs in the SerBiH.⁹⁸⁷⁰ These instructions provided that in wartime conditions the Crisis Staffs would take over “all the prerogatives and functions of the municipal assemblies” when they were not in a position to meet.⁹⁸⁷¹ The Chamber recalls that the 26 April 1992 instructions provided that the Crisis Staffs “shall co-ordinate governmental functions for the purpose of the defence of territory, safety of the population and its property, establishment of authority and organisation of all other aspects of life and work”.⁹⁸⁷² They also provided that the Crisis Staff was to create conditions to allow the municipal executive board to exercise power.⁹⁸⁷³ The Crisis Staffs were also required to work in accordance with the Constitution, law and decisions of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Bosnian Serb Government and the Presidency.⁹⁸⁷⁴

3031. The Accused gave explicit instructions on how the Crisis Staffs and the TO would be structured, including who would be the highest ranking officials in these structures namely the presidents of municipalities and executive boards.⁹⁸⁷⁷ For example at a meeting of the SNB on 27 April 1992, it was concluded that “comprehensive instructions for crisis staffs should be drafted in which the manner of political work on the ground and organisation of the functioning authorities will be presented”.⁹⁸⁷⁸ The SNB also concluded that material and equipment would be provided for

Subotić stated that Crisis Staffs were operating independently and that this decision related to the provision of instructions relating to respect for international humanitarian law and the laws and customs of war. D3695 (Witness statement of Bogdan Subotić dated 16 June 2013), para. 270. The Chamber does not find Subotić’s

the defence of the SerBiH and that the Crisis Staffs needed to inform the government about developments.⁹⁸⁷⁹ The Accused emphasised that these steps were for defensive purposes and that peace was in their interests and would benefit them politically.⁹⁸⁸⁰ He also stressed that the Bosnian Muslims did not have the forces required to take-over the extensive territory held by Bosnian Serbs and these “Serbian areas” would never be incorporated in their state.⁹⁸⁸¹

3032. Crisis Staffs operated to some extent independently in each municipality, but ultimately they had direct contact with the Presidency and followed the SDS party line.⁹⁸⁸² For example in Hadžići, the Crisis Staff President, Ratko Radić had a very good relationship with the Accused—he often visited Pale and got instructions from the Accused.⁹⁸⁸³ The Chamber also recalls that all important decisions of the SDS Main Board that needed to be implemented in Sokolac were sent to the SDS Municipal Board of Sokolac and the Crisis Staff was informed of these decisions.⁹⁸⁸⁴ The Chamber also recalls that the Rogatica Crisis Staff for example had direct, oral and written contact with the Presidency and ministries of the SerBiH, the Government, the army, and the police.⁹⁸⁸⁵

3033. Similarly in Sanski Most, policy formulated by the SDS leadership at the republican level would come down to the municipal Crisis Staff to implement.⁹⁸⁸⁶ The Sanski Most Crisis Staff was directly subordinated to the ARK Crisis Staff, which was subordinated to the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused.⁹⁸⁸⁷ The Chamber notes that Vlado Vrkeš, the deputy president of the Crisis Staff, was in charge of implementing policies from the Republic level⁹⁸⁸⁸ and was close to the Accused.⁹⁸⁸⁹ In April 1992, Kuprešanin said in an intercepted conversation to General Kukanjac that they were waiting for the Accused to return from Europe to tell them what to do next

The Chamber notes however, that Radić sometimes would push ideas by exaggerating the extent to which the Accused had agreed to them. Tihomir Glavaš, T. 11796 (14 February 2011), T. 11949 (16 February 2011). The Chamber places no weight on Glavaš’s impression that the Accused left the municipalities of Ilidža and Hadžići to care for themselves.

and “when [the Accused] comes whatever he tells us we will do. He is now for us the supreme commander and we have no other commander”.⁹⁸⁹⁰

3034. As found above, by early April 1992 the SNB was issuing instructions to, and receiving reports from, municipal Crisis Staffs and TOs.⁹⁸⁹¹ On 28 April 1992, Branko Đerić and the Accused attended a meeting of the SNB where the reports on the work of Crisis Staffs and municipal organs of government were adopted. At this same meeting there was also discussion of the need to keep the Crisis Staffs more fully informed about developments and for the Crisis Staffs to also inform the Bosnian Serb Government about developments.⁹⁸⁹²

3035. In this regard the Chamber found that the Bijeljina Crisis Staff kept the SDS Main Board informed of its activities.⁹⁸⁹³ In addition the Chief of the Bijeljina SJB reported to Mićo Stanišić on the situation in the municipality,⁹⁸⁹⁴ and an almost daily report system was operating between the Bijeljina CSB and the Bosnian Serb MUP.⁹⁸⁹⁵ Similarly the Chamber found that the Rogatica Crisis Staff had direct, oral, and written contact with the Presidency and ministries of the SerBiH, the Government, the army, and the police.⁹⁸⁹⁶ For example, during negotiations in April and May 1992 between the Rogatica Crisis Staff and the Bosnian Muslim leadership regarding the demarcation of territory and division of power within the municipality, the SDS representatives said they would report to the Main Board of the SDS in Pale.⁹⁸⁹⁷ The Chamber also found that in

The Chamber notes that Hanson testified about the involvement and role of Crisis Staffs in take-overs and the arming of the population, connections between the Crisis Staffs and the military and police and detention of non-Serbs: However, the Chamber considers that these conclusions fall outside the scope of her expertise and will not rely on her evidence in this regard. The Chamber notes the evidence of Kezunović that, considering power cuts and continuous interruption in communication, he did not know whether the CSB from locations such as Bijeljina were able to deliver daily reports to the ministry. Dragan Kezunović, T. 15067–15069 (21 June 2011). However, considering the evidence presented and Kezunović’s unsubstantiated speculation, the Chamber gives little weight to his evidence in this regard. Cvijetin Simić testified that because of the conflicts the whole area of Bijeljina did not have telephones working for several months and that it was cut off from the outside world until May 1992. Cvijetin Simić T. 35713 (20 March 2013). The Chamber finds that it stands in contradiction with accepted evidence that demonstrates that communication existed. Further, the Chamber found that Simić’s evidence was marked by indicators which led to the conclusion that he withheld information from the Chamber, was evasive, and lacked sincerity. The Chamber shall therefore no rely on this portion of this evidence.

3036. In addition Crisis Staffs were also established in SAOs, including the SAO Semberija and Majevisa, ARK, and SAO Birač.⁹⁸⁹⁹ The Chamber recalls that the ARK Crisis Staff was formally established on 5 May 1992 by a decision of the ARK Executive Council; however, it had been functioning since January 1992.⁹⁹⁰⁰ On 9 July 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff was renamed the ARK War Presidency.⁹⁹⁰¹

3037. The Chamber recalls its finding that the ARK Crisis Staff acted as an intermediary regional body between the republican-level authorities and the ARK Municipalities by co-ordinating the implementation of instructions sent by the republic-level authorities in the ARK Municipalities.⁹⁹⁰² In addition, municipal Crisis Staff presidents in the ARK regularly gave reports to the ARK Crisis Staff with respect to events within their area of responsibility and received directives from the ARK Crisis Staff.⁹⁹⁰³ The Chamber also found that decisions and conclusions of the ARK Crisis Staff were binding on the ARK Municipalities and were implemented by the municipal Crisis Staffs.⁹⁹⁰⁴

3038. On 11 June 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued a statement setting forth the composition of municipal Crisis Staffs/War Presidencies in the ARK and placing responsibility on these structures for leading the defence and establishing co-operation with organs in other municipalities and the command of armed units.⁹⁹⁰⁵ In addition members of the ARK Crisis Staff were regularly briefed about military developments.⁹⁹⁰⁶ The ARK Crisis Staff was also involved in organising contact with Pale to discuss defining territory.⁹⁹⁰⁷ The Chamber also recalls its findings with respect to the involvement of the ARK Crisis Staff in the dismissal and movement of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from ARK municipalities and the implementation of ARK Crisis Staff policy at a municipal level.⁹⁹⁰⁸ For example, the ARK Crisis Staff issued a decision that all leading positions, involving access to information, protection of public property and other positions of importance for the functioning of the economy could be occupied exclusively by persons of Serb nationality.⁹⁹⁰⁹

3039. On 29 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff concluded that all Muslims and Croats would be able to move out of the ARK on the condition that Serbs living outside the SAOs be allowed to move into SerBiH and the ARK.⁹⁹¹⁰ This would help carry out the exchange of population or resettlement of people in an organised manner.⁹⁹¹¹ The ARK Crisis Staff also decided to oppose the forceful movement of population and to prevent any such attempts.⁹⁹¹² However, the Chamber finds that the wording of this conclusion was completely at odds with the forcible nature of the movement of the non-Serb population from municipalities in the ARK.⁹⁹¹³

3040. After receiving the Bosnian Serb government instructions on the work of the Crisis Staffs, the Bosanski Novi Crisis Staff re-organised itself on 20 May 1992 to “take over the prerogatives and functions” of the Municipal Assembly.⁹⁹¹⁴ Similarly on 5 June 1992, the Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff wrote to the President of the SerBiH Presidency and stated: “The Crisis Staff has performed the function of Municipal Assembly in war conditions.”⁹⁹¹⁵ The letter also indicated that the Crisis Staff co-ordinated and organised a variety of municipal services, including accommodation for “all refugees from the occupied territory and people who were left homeless”, mobilisation, and accommodation of fighters from other areas.⁹⁹¹⁶

3041. From 1993 onwards, when municipal authorities acted autonomously and failed to follow regulations, these issues were discussed and addressed by the Bosnian Serb Government.⁹⁹¹⁷ The Bosnian Serb Government was also conscious of controlling the parallel organs of government at a municipal level to ensure that the Bosnian Serb Government was the only authorised executive organ in RS.⁹⁹¹⁸

3042. In 1994, the Accused reminded the Bosnian Serb Assembly about the Variant A/B Instructions, and said “remember how we used to work before the war. Not everything was as clear as day in the municipalities where we were majority and in those where we were minority. Do you remember the Instruction A and instruction B? We had Crisis Staffs, and it was clear that they were the authority”.⁹⁹¹⁹ In 1995, the Accused recalled that pursuant to the Variant A/B Instructions in areas where the Bosnian Serbs were a majority they controlled everything at a municipal level and that when they were in a minority they “set up secret government, municipal boards, municipal assemblies, presidents of executive boards” and also established military units.⁹⁹²⁰ The Accused recalled that the JNA had been involved in the distribution of weapons to Serbian areas and that the SDS had “organised the people and created the army” and that with the help of the police “liberated and created the space”, sometimes with the help of the JNA.⁹⁹²¹

(f) War Presidencies / War Commissions

3043. At a joint session of the SNB and the Bosnian Serb Government, on 22 April 1992, it was concluded that the Government was to appoint a war presidency and war executive boards in all municipalities where executive boards “are not functioning”.⁹⁹²² On 23 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government decided to abolish the Crisis Staffs.⁹⁹²³ The Chamber recalls that the Bosnian Serb Government concluded that “the conditions for functioning of the regular governing organs should be created as soon as possible” and War Presidencies established in municipalities.⁹⁹²⁴ After the Crisis Staffs were disbanded, they were transformed into War Presidencies or War Commissions.⁹⁹²⁵

3044. On 31 May 1992, the Presidency issued a decision constituting War Presidencies and provided for the structure of these bodies including who would be members, including a republican commissioner.⁹⁹²⁶ The Chamber further recalls that the republican commissioner, who would be a member of the War Presidencies, was to be appointed by the SerBiH Presidency and have the “right and duty [...] to ensure permanent coordination and implementation of the policies and measures that are established and adopted by the republican state organs and the Main Staff of the [VRS]”.⁹⁹²⁷

3045. This decision also stated that the War Presidency “shall organise, coordinate and adjust activities for the defence of the Serbian people and the establishment of legal organs of authority in the municipality”; “shall perform all the functions of the assembly and the executive organ until there is a possibility for these organs to convene and work”; and “shall create and secure conditions for the work of military organs and units on the defence of the Serbian people”, inter alia.⁹⁹²⁸ This decision also provided that Crisis Staffs in municipalities were to cease operating when the War Presidencies were constituted.⁹⁹²⁹

3046. On 31 May 1992, the SDS Executive Board informed the SAOs that the Crisis Staffs were to be abolished and that War Commissions/Presidencies were being established instead and instructed the SAOs to ensure the implementation of this decision.⁹⁹³⁰ On 2 June 1992, at a meeting of commanders of the 1st Krajina Corps and ARK leaders, the Accused referred to the need to immediately introduce a threat of war and referred to the issuance of the decree on War Presidencies.⁹⁹³¹

3047. The Chamber recalls that on 10 June 1992, the Presidency issued a decision establishing War Commissions in SerBiH municipalities “which are either affected by war or are facing imminent threat of war”.⁹⁹³² These War Commissions were to supersede Crisis Staffs and War Presidencies.⁹⁹³³ The War Commissions were tasked with maintaining very close co-operation with the legal authorities, to convey directives issued by the War Presidency of the Republic, to convey information about problems and the work of the municipal bodies and to co-operate with the authorities to create military organs and units.⁹⁹³⁴ The Chamber notes for example that War Presidencies existed at least in Bijeljina, Vogošća, Brčko, Ključ, Zvornik, Sanski Most, Ilidža, Hadžići, and Prijedor.⁹⁹³⁵ War Commissions existed at least in Foča, Pale, Zvornik, Vlasenica, Bratunac, Novo Sarajevo, Vogošća, and Ilidža.⁹⁹³⁶

3048. From June 1992 onwards, the Accused confirmed the appointment of or himself appointed members of the War Presidency or War Commission in municipalities including Bijeljina,⁹⁹³⁷ Foča,⁹⁹³⁸ Ilidža,⁹⁹³⁹ Rogatica,⁹⁹⁴⁰ Novo Sarajevo,⁹⁹⁴¹ Vlasenica,⁹⁹⁴² and Zvornik.⁹⁹⁴³ With respect to 3050. In November 1994, the Accused spoke about introducing a state of war, and stressed that this did not mean that military rule would be introduced; rather, civilian powers would be concentrated and implemented through operational bodies in the municipalities, thereby “ensuring more effective functioning of the state”.⁹⁹⁴⁶

(g) Take-over of power in the Municipalities

3051. As mentioned above, in March 1992 the Accused advocated that Bosnian Serbs take power into their own hands in Bosnian Serb claimed territories and that the structure of BiH would depend on the conditions they could establish on the ground.⁹⁹⁴⁷ The Accused emphasised that their right to self-determination “will happen according to the actual conditions which are up to you to create”.⁹⁹⁴⁸ In this regard the Accused spoke about when to “reveal our next move” and that it “will all be happening in a flash and the set up of the de facto situation based on our documents”.⁹⁹⁴⁹ He explained that there would be “no signing before we have achieved what we want, and you all know our strategic plans. [...] The ultimate strategic goal must still remain a secret”.⁹⁹⁵⁰ The Accused said they did not “plan to attack anybody but our plan is to defend ourselves and the army is at our disposal for that purpose”; they had the “right to use the army for the final countdown and for the final establishment of authority” and that if a border was established unjustly they would “establish a just border”.⁹⁹⁵¹

3052. The Accused also warned against the perception that Bosnian Serbs were taking “other people’s land through war” and that they should not mention war, but establish their authority and defend that and state that they did not plan to attack anybody.⁹⁹⁵² The Accused spoke about “[p]eace at any cost, wherever it is possible”.⁹⁹⁵³ The Accused stated that they did not need war, and they could accomplish what they wanted by political means but once they had achieved their goals if they were attacked they would defend themselves, including against genocide, and had “the right to use the army for the final countdown and for the final establishment of authority”.⁹⁹⁵⁴

3053. On 15 April 1992, the Accused attended a meeting of the SNB in which it was proposed that a state of imminent threat of war be declared.⁹⁹⁵⁵ The imminent threat of war was declared on 15 April 1992.⁹⁹⁵⁶ On 24 April 1992, the SNB met with the Bosnian Serb Government and adopted a decision to form a TO Staff composed of current municipal TO commanders with the Accused responsible for its realisation.⁹⁹⁵⁷ In addition, it was decided to compile instructions on the use of national symbols and to procure uniforms and insignia for the TO.⁹⁹⁵⁸ At this meeting it was concluded that a group of lawyers would be tasked with preparing the basic laws in order to set up a legal system for the SerBiH.⁹⁹⁵⁹ On 17 April 1992, the Accused issued a decision that all Serb employees who had been appointed from an SDS list be withdrawn from their positions in bodies and organisations of the “former Republic of BiH” and the City of Sarajevo.⁹⁹⁶⁰ This decision also provided that all these employees be appointed to bodies and organisations in the SerBiH.⁹⁹⁶¹

3054. While the Accused called on leaders at the Bosnian Serb Assembly to “do whatever is necessary on the ground to establish the de facto situation” he also stated that there should be “full respect for citizens of other nationalities” and that “no one must be harmed, regardless of their religion, nation”.⁹⁹⁶² The Accused also acknowledged that there would probably be resettlement but that “none of it should occur under pressure”.⁹⁹⁶³ When the SerBiH was proclaimed, this proclamation provided that the constitution of this entity would “guarantee the full equality of peoples and citizens before the law and their full protection against any form of discrimination”.⁹⁹⁶⁴ Krajišnik had also spoken previously about creating a state which would be the home for the entire Serbian people and “for all others who so wish”.⁹⁹⁶⁵

3055. Bogdan Subotić also made an announcement that Bosnian Muslims who wished to remain in RS would have the same rights, and those who did not wish to should go to their own people of their own free will.⁹⁹⁶⁶ He spoke in favour of clear borders between ethnic communities.⁹⁹⁶⁷ Đerić testified that the Bosnian Serb leadership took into account that a certain percentage of Serbs, Croats and Muslims would live in each constituent unit in BiH and worked towards “preserving the equality of people who remained in their original places of residence” on a reciprocal basis and that the Accused in his speeches did not question the rights or freedoms of other ethnic communities to live in RS.⁹⁹⁶⁸ The Accused also spoke about ensuring that Muslims and Croats have equal rights and privileges in the state they were building on the “condition that they are not hostile and that they leave the weapons”.⁹⁹⁶⁹ The Accused continued to emphasise that Muslims and Croats living in the RS would always have their rights protected as a minority group.⁹⁹⁷⁰ He also emphasised the enormous responsibility of the SDS to defend the “Serbian Republic” and that their state should

The Chamber does not find Čeklić and Bajagić’s evidence that the Accused never proposed removing Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and always insisted on co-existence to be reliable. “rest on rule of rights and humanity”.⁹⁹⁷¹ The Accused called on the SDS members to “constantly monitor our behaviour, so that the glory of our just battle would not be tarnished by inhumane actions” with special attention to “just behaviour towards civilians of other nationalities”.⁹⁹⁷² In practice these words were not carried out or followed.⁹⁹⁷³

3056. The Chamber notes that Krajišnik stated at one of the sessions: “I have discussed this [the creation of a unified Serb state] openly, even though this is being recorded and even though the journalists might write it down”.⁹⁹⁷⁴ Similarly when the Accused invited Mladić to brief the Bosnian Assembly on the military situation and their intentions, he qualified that by asking that he present “what can be said at a place like this”.⁹⁹⁷⁵ This is indicative that what was said at these sessions was often for public consumption and included rhetoric which the Chamber has approached with caution and weighed in light of the other evidence received.

3057. The Accused said that in certain municipalities, such as Bijeljina and Pale, where Bosnian Muslims accepted co-existence and were “not showing the will to fight against the Serbs and against their state”, they were living peacefully and well.⁹⁹⁷⁶ The Accused stated that Muslims in Bijeljina and Pale were not being bothered or considered second-class citizens and that the government officials were trying to convince them that they had nothing to fear.⁹⁹⁷⁷ In this regard, the Accused also mentioned that in Sanski Most, Ključ, and Prijedor, while there was some fighting caused by “Muslim extremists”, once they were eliminated those who remained were not willing to fight the Serbs.⁹⁹⁷⁸ However, the Accused characterisation of what was happening in those municipalities does not accord with the Chamber’s factual findings in section IV.A.1 about the conditions which Bosnian Muslims faced in those municipalities at the time.

3058. The Accused also visited Rogatica in March 1992 and met with municipal level leaders.⁹⁹⁷⁹ On 25 March 1992, the Accused was informed that Rajko Kušić had threatened to attack Rogatica unless the municipality and SJB were unconditionally divided into Serb and Muslim parts within two hours.⁹⁹⁸⁰ This letter further indicated that in accordance with the Accused’s instructions, “the factual division on the ground should be and is already there, however the official division must be accompanied by laws issued by relevant Serbian Ministries, as well as party agreements at the highest level”.⁹⁹⁸¹ The Accused was informed that it would be dangerous to “be the originator of the war situation when the Serbian people are not sufficiently prepared”.⁹⁹⁸²

3059. On 24 March 1992 the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a decision which verified the decisions of municipal assemblies which had proclaimed newly established Serbian Municipalities.⁹⁹⁸³ These municipalities included Vogošća, Srebrenica, Bratunac, Prijedor, Višegrad, Foča, Brčko, and Zvornik.⁹⁹⁸⁴ The SAOs were also required to report on the establishment of Serbian Municipalities.⁹⁹⁸⁵ At the same session the Accused said:

at a desired moment, and this will be very soon, we can form whatever we want. There are reasons why this could happen in two or three days. Such are the forecasts but I cannot tell you the reasons now. At that moment, all the Serbian municipalities, both the old ones and the newly established ones, would literally assume control of the entire territory of the municipality concerned. The Zvornik municipality takes control of everything that constitutes the Serbian Municipality of Zvornik. Then at a given moment, in the next three or four days, there will be a single method used and you will be able to apply it in the municipalities you represent, including both things that must be done as well as how to do them. How to separate the police force, take the resources that belong to the Serbian people and take command. The police must be under the control of the civilian authority, it must obey it, there is no discussion about that – that’s the way it must be.⁹⁹⁸⁶

3060. The Accused also stated: “Newly established municipalities must establish their organs as soon as possible, have their stamps made and start to work. The police, that is, our organs must be positioned at the border.”⁹⁹⁸⁷ At this session, the Bosnian Serb Assembly instructed the Government to prepare and submit to the Assembly for adoption an operational plan “of assuming power and rendering operational the authorities in the territory of the Serbian Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina”.⁹⁹⁸⁸

3061. The Accused also emphasised that in the period when the State was being created, the deputies would have to be the “pillars of our power” in their locations and “remain in permanent contact with presidents of municipalities and work on the establishment of local government”.⁹⁹⁸⁹ The Accused also acknowledged that the president of the municipality was who “carried out our plans”.⁹⁹⁹⁰

3062. On 27 March 1992 when the Bosnian Serb Assembly promulgated the Constitution of SerBiH, the Accused delivered a speech in which he addressed criticism that they had taken steps “with undue haste” and stated that “we are clean before God, because we have not made a single move which was not provoked”.⁹⁹⁹¹ He also stated that the Serbs had responded to “non-democratic measures democratically” and formed its state unit legitimately based on the law exercising their right to self-determination.⁹⁹⁹² The Accused also spoke about the possibility that all three peoples in BiH may flourish “if [the declaration of BiH independence] passes without bloodshed”.⁹⁹⁹³ The Accused also said that a war in BiH would not solve anything but that if war did break out “you will get the plans”.⁹⁹⁹⁴

3063. There was a break in the Bosnian Serb Assembly sessions and the 16th session was held on 12 May 1992 and was described by Krajišnik as the “first war session”.⁹⁹⁹⁵ The Accused spoke about how the Bosnian Serbs had tried to avoid war, that they had no need to organise themselves militarily because their policies were being realised politically.⁹⁹⁹⁶ He explained that the political maneuvering of the Bosnian Muslims and the recognition of BiH resulted in war, and that Serbs had been attacked in Sarajevo, Zvornik and Bijeljina.⁹⁹⁹⁷ He went further and stated that the Bosnian Serbs in “areas bordering other national communities, it has to fight for its survival against genocide”.⁹⁹⁹⁸ The Accused also claimed that Serbs had been “very cautious not to take what is not ours, not to fight more than is necessary”, that they would mark their borders and “defend them until they are recognised” and that the “factual situation will be decisive”.⁹⁹⁹⁹ In addition, at a session in September 1992, he emphasised that without publicly saying so, their internal borders between Muslims and Croats “are to be thicker” than their borders with Serbia and Serbian Krajina.¹⁰⁰⁰⁰

3064. The Chamber recalls that on 18 May 1992, the Rogatica Serb Municipal Assembly abrogated the original agreement on the division of the municipality alleging that the Bosnian Muslim side had avoided attempts to implement that agreement.¹⁰⁰⁰¹ This was one day after the Accused, Mladić, and Krajišnik held a meeting with representatives of municipalities, including Rogatica, and discussed the creation of a Bosnian Serb state in BiH, stating that the time had come for the demarcation of areas between the national groups.¹⁰⁰⁰²

3065. At a meeting held in Belgrade on 11 July 1992, the Minister of the Interior noted that the government was “preparing a new political and territorial division of the Serbian Republic which will replace the previous necessary forms, such as autonomous Serb areas and regions, with districts”.¹⁰⁰⁰³ The Accused at a meeting of the Presidency of SerBiH August 1992 said that the European Community would accept the “factual state of affairs” and that therefore they “should not make a single concession in military terms”.¹⁰⁰⁰⁴

3066. The Accused in September 1992 acknowledged the responsibility of municipal authorities in defining borders and the importance of the government and the Presidency visiting municipalities in order to restore order.¹⁰⁰⁰⁵ Krajišnik acknowledged the presence of presidents of executive boards and presidents of local SDS branches who attended Bosnian Assembly sessions as it was the “best way to keep our people aware of what is going on. We have seen that the people were leaving Assembly sessions with a clear vision of what they are supposed to do.”¹⁰⁰⁰⁶

3067. On 20 December 1992, at a meeting of the Supreme Command attended by the Accused, Koljević, Krajišnik, Mladić, and Stanišić, Koljević addressed the issue of the truce, claiming that they should refrain from offensive operations to earn the world's trust, to which the Accused responded that nothing is over yet, that they must strengthen the army, reinforce and reorganise their borders, and prove that the Muslims do not want peace to be established.¹⁰⁰⁰⁷

3068. In April 1993, the Accused stated that as a result of the war they had created new entities which would have to be recognised and noted for example that nobody could now "return the 50,000 Serbs from Zvornik to Zenica, or to central Bosnia".¹⁰⁰⁰⁸ The Accused continued to speak about the RS as something they had "created by our own strength, own weapons, own politics".¹⁰⁰⁰⁹ In January 1994, the Accused acknowledged the contribution of the SDS party as the "main political force", the army, police, TO, SDS members, municipal level structures and leadership to the preservation of the RS.¹⁰⁰¹⁰

3069. In November 1994, the Accused continued to speak about this reality on the ground which had to be retained.¹⁰⁰¹¹ This sentiment was also reflected in statements made by Mladić that they would "impose by the force of arms the final settlement of the war on the enemy" which would then mean the international community had to recognise the actual situation on the ground.¹⁰⁰¹² The Accused stated that their strategic goal was to separate themselves and not to take the whole of BiH but insisted that they should be prepared to resist attempts to take back as much Serb territory as possible and to establish new borders.¹⁰⁰¹³

3070. The Accused continued to speak about their right to claim territories on the basis that "[w]e have created new realities". He then cited to the example of Zvornik, where there had previously been a Bosnian Muslim majority, but he noted that Serbs from other locations had arrived and occupied the municipality while the Bosnian Muslims had left "for Europe and I do not know where else".¹⁰⁰¹⁴ He noted that in this scenario they would claim Zvornik "based on the right which comes out of a new reality" which had been created through the war and that if they wanted "to give Zvornik to the Muslims then you have to wage a new war in order to expel these Serbs back to Zenica. We request Zvornik according to this right. We use the same right to ask for our state. And we will get it.”¹⁰⁰¹⁵

3071. The Accused also observed that the SDS “endured the armed struggle in a superior manner. [...] With such, well organised defence, the majority of our people has been saved. [...] We should always remember that the people themselves and the SDS fought and set up the frontlines in 45 days, from 5 April to 20 May”.¹⁰⁰¹⁶

(2) Conclusion

3072. The Prosecution argues that the Variant A/B Instructions established the bodies which were the primary instruments through which the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were able to assert control over territories and remove non-Serbs.¹⁰⁰¹⁷ It also alleges that the Accused supervised the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions and issued specific guidelines in that regard.¹⁰⁰¹⁸ With respect to the Variant A/B Instructions, the Accused contends that there was “absolutely nothing wrong with this document” and that it only envisaged defensive measures in response to moves towards the independence of BiH.¹⁰⁰¹⁹

3073. Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber finds that the Variant A/B Instructions was a core document in terms of furthering the objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership from December 1991 onwards. The instructions reduced to writing the practical measures and steps which had to be taken at a municipal level in order to achieve those objectives. The Chamber finds that the Variant A/B Instructions reflected the ideology and objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership which have been discussed above.

3074. The Chamber finds that the Accused played the leading role in the distribution and promotion of the Variant A/B Instructions. In doing so the Accused re-emphasised the interests of the Bosnian Serbs and also repeated the threats which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and the independence of BiH posed to those interests. The manner in which the Variant A/B Instructions were distributed demonstrates a high level of organisation, planning, and co-ordination to ensure that all key Bosnian Serb leaders at a municipal level received those instructions.

¹⁰⁰¹⁸ Prosecution Final Brief, paras. 123, 129.

¹⁰⁰¹⁹ Defence Final Brief, paras.75–78. The Accused also makes a suggestion that there are inconsistencies “that may bring into question its authenticity or origin, and dispute its conspiratorial nature”. Defence Final Brief, para. 75.

3075. The Chamber also finds that accepted evidence demonstrates that not only were the Variant A/B Instructions distributed, they were subsequently discussed and implemented at a municipal level and were considered mandatory. The instructions formed the basis on which Bosnian Serb Crisis Staffs, Bosnian Serb municipal assemblies, and other parallel municipal structures were established in the Municipalities. These instructions provided the basis for the declaration of Serb municipalities and not only called for the creation of Crisis Staffs, it also specified their structure, composition, and functions.

3076. The Chamber notes that in Variant B municipalities, the instructions did make provision for the proportional representation of “other nations” in government organs, but this included a proviso that this only applied to those who expressed loyalty to Yugoslavia. The Chamber finds that this is a reflection of the position taken at the time by the Bosnian Serb leadership and that such statements promising protection of the rights of other ethnicities were highly conditional on them accepting and following the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership.

3077. The Chamber also finds that in addition to forming the basis for the creation of parallel political structures, the Variant A/B Instructions also included provisions directed towards the military organisation of the Bosnian Serb population at a municipal level. This involved taking steps to ensure that police, reserve, and TO structures were prepared and ready to be engaged depending on developments. The Crisis Staff was tasked with taking a central role in making these military preparations.

3079. The Chamber finds that while municipalities had some autonomy in terms of the precise manner in which they implemented the Variant A/B Instructions, they were considered to be mandatory. The Accused took an active role in monitoring the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions and also following developments which occurred at a municipal level and difficulties municipal authorities faced. In this regard the Accused not only was in direct contact with municipal leaders he also specifically tasked Bosnian Serb officials with monitoring developments and problems at a municipal level in general and the implementation of the Variant A/B

Instructions in particular. He co-ordinated efforts to ensure the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions and sent Bosnian Serb officials to provide assistance to municipalities in this regard. The evidence also demonstrates that this system of monitoring was also a means of ensuring discipline and checking loyalty to the party leadership and programme of action which they had developed.

3080. The Chamber also finds that a direct and regular line of communication existed between the Bosnian Serb authorities at a municipal level and the Bosnian Serb leadership or RS authorities, including the Accused. This line of communication allowed the Bosnian Serb leadership and the Accused to monitor developments at a municipal level and to issue precise directions with respect to the establishment and maintenance of Bosnian Serb authority.

3081. The evidence above also demonstrates that the Accused took very seriously the precise implementation of these instructions at a municipal level. The evidence, including intercepted conversations, also shows that municipal level leaders were in contact with the Accused and reported on progress in developments in the municipalities and how they were following the Variant A/B Instructions. The Accused emphasised the importance of these instructions in achieving the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership, namely the creation of a separate Bosnian Serb state.

3082. The Chamber also finds that the SDS structures were the core mechanism through which the SDS policies which had to be implemented were communicated from the SDS Main Board to the SDS Municipal Boards. The Accused played a leading role in insisting on party discipline and the imperative to implement SDS policy and the importance of following the timing of the measures which had to be taken. The Chamber finds that these moves were designed and implemented to ensure that Bosnian Serb structures were created and these structures could be quickly activated when necessary in order to take-over power in the municipalities.

3084. While the Chamber notes that the Accused spoke in terms of taking power in a “humane way” with respect to the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, it is clear that he said this in the context of trying to “change [the Bosnian Serbs’] image with foreign monitors”.¹⁰⁰²⁰ In addition instructions which were given to Crisis Staffs also required the humane treatment of civilians and respect for POWs. Despite these statements and orders, the Accused also clearly stated that he was prepared to “let everything go to fucking hell and that we take the express way”¹⁰⁰²¹ but he spoke about taking a tactful approach in order to achieve their goals given the importance of international opinion and not being seen as the aggressors. The Chamber finds that this is indicative of the approach taken by the Accused that while he envisaged the use force and violence to take-over power he was cautious about the way in which this would be portrayed at an international level. The international image and ensuring political points were not lost were very important to the Accused, but the Chamber does not find that there was a genuine concern about the manner in which power was taken.

3085. On the contrary, the Chamber refers to its factual findings in section IV.A.1, which demonstrates that the manner in which Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs took over power in the Municipalities and the way in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were treated during and after the take-overs was anything but humane. The Chamber recalls its legal finding that Serb Forces were involved in a widespread and systematic attack directed against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH which was characterised by a widespread and systematic campaign of violence, including through acts of murder, persecution, and forcible displacement. While the Accused was making these public statements about the protection of minorities, Bosnian Muslims continued to be forced out of municipalities in BiH where Bosnian Serbs had taken-over the territory. The Chamber also finds a disjuncture between the Accused’s public statements and his private discourse in this regard.

3086. The Chamber also finds that by April 1992, the work and function of Crisis Staffs were further elaborated by instructions which provided for them to take on the central role in wartime conditions at a municipal level, particularly with respect to defence. It was also clear that the Crisis Staffs were to work in accordance with decisions of the higher level authorities, including the Presidency, the Bosnian Serb Assembly and Bosnian Serb Government and were also a crucial structure in ensuring that the higher level authorities were informed about developments on the ground.

3087. The Chamber finds that the Accused played a central role in instructing how the Crisis Staffs would function and be structured and this demonstrates one of the ways in which the ¹⁰⁰²¹ See para. 3024.

Accused exercised his authority over the Crisis Staffs. The Chamber does not find that isolated and limited acts of insubordination at the municipal level negated the Accused's overall clear authority over Crisis Staffs. In this regard, the Chamber notes that, in September 1992, the Accused acknowledged that "some municipal officials behaved unlawfully" and that the Bosnian Serb Assembly needed to point out these incidents and to take measures to arrest and punish them.¹⁰⁰²² The Accused added "we must visit municipalities and restore order even at the risk of introducing extraordinary measures, making replacement, arrests, appointments and naming others who, with the help of deputies, will be able to pull the municipality out of a crisis".¹⁰⁰²³ The Chamber finds this shows that on the limited occasions where municipal officials failed to follow directions, the Accused had the authority and the means to rectify such situations.

3088. From May 1992, War Presidencies and War Commissions took over the functions of the Crisis Staffs and the leading role at a municipal level and were the link to the higher level authorities. The Accused himself in 1994 and 1995 recalled the central role which the Variant A/B Instructions and the Crisis Staffs played during the conflict in order to create parallel Serb structures and military units, which ultimately took control of territory and power at a municipal level.

3089. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that the Variant A/B Instructions were formulated, distributed, and ultimately followed at a municipal level. The Accused was intimately involved in this process through his distribution of the instructions and his subsequent involvement in monitoring the implementation of those instructions. The Chamber further finds that the Variant A/B Instructions were used to create parallel Bosnian Serb structures and bodies at a municipal level. The instructions also provided for the military organisation of the Bosnian Serbs at a municipal level. The Variant A/B Instructions were a crucial initial step towards establishing Bosnian Serb authority in Bosnian Serb claimed territory. As discussed in Section IV.A.1 of this Judgement, following the creation of these parallel structures, Serb Forces were able to take-over power in the Municipalities. Following these take-overs, the parallel structures including the Crisis Staffs and Bosnian Serb municipal assemblies were able to maintain power in the Municipalities.

3090. The Chamber finds that one of the first steps in the Bosnian Serb objective of creating a separate state was the expansion and delineation of territory. The parallel municipal structures which were created pursuant to the Variant A/B Instructions, played a pivotal role in this process of territorial expansion and delineation of territory.

¹⁰⁰²³ D456 (Transcript of 20th session of RS Assembly, 14–15 September 1992), p. 15.

3091. The Chamber finds that the Accused played a central role in promoting this territorial delineation and the steps that needed to be taken in order to establish the borders of the SerBiH in accordance with their territorial and strategic aspirations. The Accused actively encouraged and supported the division of municipalities on ethnic lines. He also emphasised the importance of taking control and power of territory in establishing the de facto situation which would form the basis for the creation of their state. The Chamber also finds that the Accused played a leading role in the separation of municipal structures and the establishment of parallel Serb structures which would allow this objective to be achieved. The steps taken with respect to the creation of the SerBiH were also informed by the objectives of the unity and non-separation of the Serb people which has been previously discussed.

3092. The Chamber finds that what the Accused said at the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 18 March 1992 is particularly instructive as it underscores that he and the Bosnian Serb leadership had clearly made plans which would allow for the rapid seizing of power at a municipal level when the time was right.¹⁰⁰²⁴ This speech also demonstrates that the Accused was adamant that the Bosnian Serbs would achieve what they wanted, that they clearly had strategic objectives which had to remain secret but which would be realised. The Chamber finds that this objective was the seizure and control of Bosnian Serb claimed territory in a manner which would allow for the creation of an ethnically homogeneous state.

3093. The Chamber also finds that while the Accused expressed caution and emphasised that the steps they would take were defensive for the purposes of international opinion, he clearly envisaged that if their objectives could not be achieved politically they would use military means and if there was war he would issue plans about how to proceed. The Chamber notes that when war did break out the Accused repeated his emphasis on the need to protect the Bosnian Serbs from genocide and characterised their fight as one which was defensive in order to achieve their objectives.

3094. The Chamber notes textual provisions, including the Bosnian Serb Constitution, included protections for the rights of all people. The Accused also spoke about the full respect for the rights of other nationalities and that the probable resettlement of people should not occur under pressure. Other Bosnian Serb leaders also spoke about respecting the rights of non-Serbs who decided to remain in the SerBiH. However, the Chamber finds that there was a clear disjuncture between what was written on paper, what the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership said in public, and the way in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were treated in practice following the formation of the SerBiH. In this regard the Chamber refers to its extensive factual findings with respect to the crimes which were committed against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities and which resulted in the creation of a largely ethnically homogeneous state.

3095. The Chamber finds that these public announcements, speeches, and decisions were often for the consumption of international public opinion and to show that the Bosnian Serb state which was being created was one which respected the law and the rights of all people. The Chamber does not find that either the statements of the Accused or the Bosnian Serb leadership in this regard were genuine; in fact, they were completely disingenuous, having regard to the reality of what was happening on the ground in the Municipalities. The Chamber also refers to its findings below with respect to the Accused's knowledge of crimes which were being committed in BiH. The Chamber notes for example its finding above, that while the Accused made these public statements about the protection of minorities, Bosnian Muslims continued to be forced out of municipalities in BiH. In addition, the Chamber finds the evidence above demonstrates that the Bosnian Serbs were aware that some of their speeches were being recorded and could be reported on by journalists and in that context were cautious in terms of what was said.

3096. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership continued to emphasise that they wanted to create a reality on the ground, which then in negotiations could be used to claim territory which they viewed as belonging to them. The Accused used this factual control of territory and the creation of a "new reality" as a means of securing international recognition for the RS. It was also clear that the Accused acknowledged the military manner in which this "reality" was created and gave credit to the Serb Forces for their role in achieving this objective of territorial control.

(A) VRS

3097. The Chamber noted above that the Army of SerBiH was established on 12 May 1992 and was renamed the VRS on 12 August 1992.¹⁰⁰²⁵ It was formed from parts of the JNA, TO, and volunteer units.¹⁰⁰²⁶ It inherited both officers and soldiers from the JNA, many of whom were of Bosnian Serb origin, as well as a substantial amount of weaponry and equipment.¹⁰⁰²⁷

¹⁰⁰²⁵ See para. 160. For ease of reference the acronym "VRS" will be used throughout this section to also cover the period prior to 12 August 1992, when the Army of SerBiH was renamed the VRS.

(1) Supreme commander

3098. As noted above, whether in the three-member or the five-member Presidency, the Accused was in charge of military affairs.¹⁰⁰²⁸ As the RS President the Accused was the Supreme Commander of the VRS,¹⁰⁰²⁹ a position that he held until July 1996.¹⁰⁰³⁰ The Accused's position as the Supreme Commander of the VRS was clearly recognised by the civilian and military Bosnian Serb leadership.¹⁰⁰³¹ During the time period relevant to the Indictment, the Accused was the highest authority in the VRS chain of command.¹⁰⁰³²

3099. In an interview on 6 January 1995, the Accused stated that "all speculations about the army not obeying the civilian authority are out of place. As the supreme commander, I get all the respect from the officers and soldiers. [...] I want them to 'argue' with me about various solutions because it helps me to make the right decision, but when I make a decision, they carry it out brilliantly".¹⁰⁰³³ The Accused cited the example of an order he gave to "cut the territories taken by the Muslims on the Bihać battlefield, and to pursue and destroy them, I was absolutely sure that our army would comply. [...] Whatever the Supreme Command decides gets fully done".¹⁰⁰³⁴

(2) Command and control system

3100. The Chamber notes that, on 15 June 1992, in his capacity as the President of the Presidency, the Accused established a system of command and control in the VRS, which included a Main Staff—directly subordinated to him—that had command and control over the operative groups.¹⁰⁰³⁵

3101. During the first months of the conflict, the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić did not deal with issues that related to military affairs and warfare and Mladić enjoyed freedom in devising and executing military operations while claiming that he was fully subordinate to the Bosnian Serb political leadership.¹⁰⁰³⁶ However, this restraint on the part of the Bosnian Serb political leadership waned starting in June 1992 when they began to gradually limit Mladić and eventually the “political power was on top”.¹⁰⁰³⁷

3102. On 30 November 1992, the Accused established the Supreme Command for the purpose of co-ordinating and improving the efficiency of the command system of the VRS.¹⁰⁰³⁸

3103. In a report, prepared by the Main Staff, analysing the combat readiness of the VRS in 1992, it is noted that the VRS had evolved into the “highest strategic organisational formation of the Serbian people in the former [BiH], capable of realising the strategic and other tasks assigned to it by the Supreme Command.”¹⁰⁰³⁹ It further stated that the VRS has been under a single control and command structure, despite the fact that initially we had a large number of different armies and paramilitary formations. This unity has been attained by following well-known principles, such as: unity, continuity, flexibility, efficiency, ¹⁰⁰³⁵ P3035 (Decision on Army of SerBiH, 15 June 1992), p. 3; P4917 (Richard Butler’s expert report entitled “VRS Main Staff Command Responsibility Report”, 9 June 2006), paras. 2.0–2.1. In 1992, the Main Staff was subordinated to the Presidency. The Chamber recalls that on 17 December 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly replaced the structures of the Presidency by establishing a single President and two vice-Presidents; from then on the VRS Main Staff was subordinated to the President of the RS. See para. 98. The Chamber also notes the evidence that while the formal conditions for establishing the army were created on 19 May 1992, it took a while to pass the bylaws and implement regulations on the ground. See Momčilo Mandić, T. 5202 (15 July 2010). However, the Chamber notes that already on 14 May 1992 the Accused was involved in discussions as to the establishment of the command and control system. ¹⁰⁰³⁶ [REDACTED]. John Wilson stated that he attended a meeting on 25 May 1992, in relation to opening the Sarajevo airport and in the presence of Plavšić, Mladić stated that he was subordinated to the political leadership. operationability [sic] and security, with subordination and a single command having a crucial bearing on relations in the control and command process.¹⁰⁰⁴⁰

3104. The strategic level of command was within the remit of the Supreme Command and the Main Staff whereas the operative level of command was at the corps level.¹⁰⁰⁴¹ However, as shown below, the Accused's involvement went beyond planning strategy and in several cases he was involved in the operational level as well.

3105. The military chain of command went from the Accused to the Commander of the Main Staff and then down to the corps commands and brigades.¹⁰⁰⁴² The Main Staff would prepare proposals for operations for the Accused; he would then consider them and issue instructions.¹⁰⁰⁴³ In the context of the SRK, Stanislav Galić testified that he could receive orders from both the Accused, as the Supreme Commander, and Mladić, as commander of the Main Staff.¹⁰⁰⁴⁴ Similarly, in a meeting between Milovanović and Bogdan Subotić, the former confirmed to the latter that the Accused, as the Supreme Commander, had the ultimate say and that in a situation where there is a standing order by Mladić the military subordinates had to obey it unless and until they received an order from the Accused.¹⁰⁰⁴⁵

3106. The Accused stated in 5 April 1993 that:

Subotić also stated that this chain of command was only formed after 12 May 1992 and that before this date the Accused had no formal control of the military. See also Petar Škrbic, T. 25971–25972 (7 March 2012); P1029, (Witness statement of John Wilson 4 November 2008), para. 127. The Chamber notes that according to Kuprešanin there was no co-ordination or subordination between the civilian authorities and the military authorities, as they each operated independently with their own chains of command, whereas, according to KDZ490 the SDS party in Sanski Most had enormous influence over the VRS, especially after October 1992, since the VRS Light Brigades were directly financed by the municipality budgets, except for former JNA officers who were still paid by the JNA. Vojislav Kuprešanin, T. 43518–43520 (14 November 2013); P3634 (Witness statement of KDZ490, undated), pp. 13, 38 (under seal) (testifying, inter alia, that when the SDS wanted to remove Colonel Basara, Commander of the 6th Sana Brigade, because he was “too soft for the SDS”, the SDS in Sanski Most exercised pressure on General Talić to remove him). See also P6510 (Excerpt of Vojislav Kuprešanin's interview with OTP), e-court p. 7. However, the Chamber notes that the Main Staff of the VRS, when it found it necessary, reminded the commanders of corps and brigades that they could receive assignments and orders only from the Main Staff of the VRS and the Accused, as the Supreme Commander. P3041 (VRS Main Staff Report, 31 March 1994), p. 5. See also Manojlo Milovanović, T. 25632 (1 March 2012); P4494 (Eastern Bosnia Corps Order, 1 April 1994), pp. 5–6.

¹⁰⁰⁴⁵ Bogdan Subotić, T. 40061 (19 June 2013).

The Main Staff of the Army of Republika Srpska has performed the functions of the Staff of the Supreme Command and at the same time that of the superior command for operational and some joint tactical formations, which presupposed the agreement of the Supreme Command in respect of all tasks and objectives of the armed struggle. This relationship between the command structures and the organs of the government and the Supreme Command made it impossible for the Main Staff to make decisions absolutely on its own, rather every operational battle was politically endorsed on the basis of interests of the Serbian people, and approved by the highest authorities of Republika Srpska.¹⁰⁰⁴⁶

3107. The military reporting chain in the VRS followed a hierarchical structure with the information originating from the lower military units being reported, up the chain of command, to the Accused.¹⁰⁰⁴⁷ The Chamber recalls its finding that while there were disruptions in telecommunications in 1992, the RS authorities were still able to communicate,¹⁰⁰⁴⁸ and notes that the VRS had at its disposal a superior communication system.¹⁰⁰⁴⁹ In its report analysing the combat readiness of the VRS in 1992, the Main Staff concluded with “a high degree of certainty” that the existing communication system met the needs of command co-ordination and reporting at all levels, from the Supreme Command, the Supreme Commander, the Main Staff to lower levels.¹⁰⁰⁵⁰ The Chamber also observes that Mladić and other members of the Main Staff had direct telephone contact with the Accused,¹⁰⁰⁵¹ and that Mladić also visited the Accused frequently.¹⁰⁰⁵²

3108. The Accused received regular reports from the army¹⁰⁰⁵³ and even during 1992, while the communication was more limited he received reports based on the modes of communication which

The Accused received, for example, military intelligence information reports,¹⁰⁰⁵⁶ reports about the situation in Rogatica in May 1992,¹⁰⁰⁵⁷ reports concerning military formations in the ARK following a visit of Bogdan Subotić there in September 1992,¹⁰⁰⁵⁸ and a report from the Command of the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade about disputes and difficulties in co-operation with the civilian authorities in Sokolac.¹⁰⁰⁵⁹

3110. The level of knowledge of the Accused regarding military issues was also apparent when he informed Bosnian Serb institutions about military developments in RS.¹⁰⁰⁶⁰

3111. Occasionally, the Accused visited VRS units in the field.¹⁰⁰⁶¹ For example, the Accused was in the SRK command post at the time of the operation to take over Dobrinja in June 1992,

The Chamber does not accept Milinić's suggestion that the RS President's Office request to the VRS Main Staff showed that the Main Staff ignored the Accused and did not inform him about developments. The Chamber notes that the testimony of Milinić was marked by contradictions, bias, and indicators that he lacked candour. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard. Rather, the Chamber finds that this request is indicative of the extent to which the Accused was kept informed by the VRS about developments.

given the importance of the operation, and, as consequence, the Accused was aware of developments in this operation.¹⁰⁰⁶²

3112. Considering the above, the Chamber rejects the Accused's arguments that there was no communication with VRS units in the field and finds that such communications did exist.¹⁰⁰⁶³ As will be discussed in further detail below, the Chamber also rejects the Accused's argument that Mladić did not report to him.¹⁰⁰⁶⁴ With regard to the argument that there was a phenomenon of false reporting in the VRS,¹⁰⁰⁶⁵ the Chamber notes a few instances, in late 1994 and 1995, in which the issue was raised,¹⁰⁰⁶⁶ but is not satisfied that the evidence demonstrates a phenomenon of false reporting within the VRS, nor that such alleged false reports could affect the Chamber's finding regarding the authority of the Accused over the VRS.

(3) Relationship between the Accused and Mladić

3113. The Prosecution argues that the Accused had firm control over Mladić by virtue of his de jure powers as President and Supreme Commander.¹⁰⁰⁶⁷ While the Prosecution admits tensions existed between Mladić and the Accused, it asserts that their disagreement did not concern the common purpose of the Overarching JCE but emerged from Mladić's complaints about the Accused undercutting the chain of command.¹⁰⁰⁶⁸ The Prosecution ultimately argues that the heated discussions and arguments between the Accused and Mladić were not a sign of an existing

The Chamber notes, for example, the Accused's reference in fn. 1123 to D325 (VRS Main Staff analysis of combat readiness and army activities in 1992, April 1993), p. 39, concerning the problem of understaffing in respect of officers and critical specialities in communications which affected the communication system and the battle readiness. However, the Chamber also notes that it was stated afterwards in the analysis that “[d]espite its being undermanned the signals corps has on the whole efficiently performed its tasks of providing good quality and uninterrupted communications links, whereby it has contributed to more successful control and command in all our units and commands.”

See also P3872 (UNPROFOR report, 10 June 1995), p.1 (reporting that “Stanisic appeared certain, on the basis of information supplied by the UN, that Mladic was withholding a few things from him about the situation with the [UN] hostages”); para. 4860. In the Chamber's view, the Accused's statement to Zametica that “[t]hey just send me lies”, following reading an intelligence report from Tolimir, was to indicate the Accused's dissatisfaction with the quality of the report. Zametica recalled in this context that the Accused said that in his view Tolimir was using only newspapers articles for his intelligence report. John Zametica, T. 42443–42444 (29 October 2013).

rift, but were rather healthy and constructive conversations within a superior-subordinate relationship.¹⁰⁰⁶⁹

3114. In response, the Accused argues that he had no control over the VRS, and that there were de facto two commanders throughout the war: Mladić, who retained operative command of the military authorities as the commander of the VRS, and himself, who retained political and strategic command of the civilian authorities as the Supreme Commander.¹⁰⁰⁷⁰ The Accused further argues that from the beginning, there was a lack of co-operation, mistrust, and a chasm between Mladić and him and as a result, the Accused had little to no control over VRS operations.¹⁰⁰⁷¹

3115. As discussed earlier, on 12 May 1992, the VRS was established pursuant to a decision adopted unanimously at the 16th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly; Mladić who had assumed command of the JNA 2nd Military District two days earlier, was appointed as its Commander.¹⁰⁰⁷² The Accused himself explained in April 1995 how he had sought out Mladić and supported his appointment:

I asked for Mladić. General Ninković, then a colonel, and General Perišić had visited me before that, and I had noticed Mladić's blunt statements in the newspapers. He was already in Knin then. I took an interest in him, and together with Mr. Krajišnik, I went to General Kukanjac's office and listened to him issuing orders and commanding around Kupres and Knin. We spent countless nights in the office of General Kukanjac at that time. President Krajišnik was already President of the Assembly, and I was just the president of the Party, I did not have any state function. We asked for Mladić and said that they should set up the headquarters as they saw fit, we wouldn't interfere.¹⁰⁰⁷³

3116. From the outset of their relationship, the Accused had authority to control the VRS, including over Mladić as its commander.¹⁰⁰⁷⁴ During the same 12 May 1992 Bosnian Serb Assembly session at which he was appointed Commander of the Main Staff, Mladić affirmed that "the President of the [SerBiH] should have command and control over the army".¹⁰⁰⁷⁵ Mladić himself referred to the Accused as the "Supreme Commander".¹⁰⁰⁷⁶

3117. International observers noted that while Mladić did what the Accused or the Bosnian Serb Assembly directed him to do with respect to the VRS, there were occasions where Mladić did not necessarily do what he was ordered to do.¹⁰⁰⁷⁷ While Mladić sometimes expressed different opinions in the context of international meetings, the Accused often took the lead and Mladić allowed himself to be persuaded by the Accused or deferred to him in the context of these meetings and indicated that he would do what the Accused said.¹⁰⁰⁷⁸ International observers noted that there was a “moderately healthy” relationship between the Accused and Mladić.¹⁰⁰⁷⁹

3118. According to Harland and Rupert Smith, the Accused and Mladić, as well as other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership, acted like a collective leadership; despite the existence of some tension between the political and military leadership, this tension was not destructive and they were “joined at the hip” and conducted themselves in a single direction.¹⁰⁰⁸⁰

3119. Michael Rose, who spent much of his time in Sarajevo meeting with the Accused and Mladić, testified that “it was clear” that they were at the peak of the pyramid of control of the Bosnian Serb forces.¹⁰⁰⁸¹ He also testified that the relationship between the Accused and Mladić “was, as one would expect in a confused and brutal situation, of varying intensity” but that “generally speaking, the military were in support of the civil power, and they did not replace it”.¹⁰⁰⁸² Throughout his time in BiH, he observed nothing to suggest there was disunity between the

During his time in Sarajevo, Bell heard that there was tension between the Accused and Mladić, which increased towards the latter part of the war when the Accused began wearing a military uniform. Bell was told by an UNPROFOR source that, especially in the final year of the war, the military was less inclined to take orders from the political leadership and supported Mladić more. See P1996 (Witness statement of Martin Bell dated 8 March 2010), paras. 113–114.

military and political arms of the Bosnian Serb leadership; thus, according to Rose, the hierarchy was functioning adequately.¹⁰⁰⁸³

3120. Wilson also testified that there seemed to be a very comfortable relationship between the Bosnian Serb civilian leadership and Mladić.¹⁰⁰⁸⁴ While Mladić was a strong personality, and capable of independent action, he would repeatedly say that he was a soldier with no political ambitions and ultimately he did “what his political masters told him to do”.¹⁰⁰⁸⁵

3121. At the end of 1992, Mladić also stressed that he and the Accused had a “natural relationship” and there were no differences between them; they were united and struggling for the same objectives.¹⁰⁰⁸⁶ Whenever it was considered necessary, the Presidency would call on Mladić or his deputy to brief them on developments.¹⁰⁰⁸⁷ Mladić visited the Accused frequently.¹⁰⁰⁸⁸ He and other members of the Main Staff had direct telephone contact with the Accused.¹⁰⁰⁸⁹

3122. However, during the same period, international observers noted that Mladić was increasingly powerful and they speculated that the Accused might “be on the way out”.¹⁰⁰⁹⁰ At this time, the Accused had informed international observers that he wanted to move Mladić but this was unlikely to succeed.¹⁰⁰⁹¹

3123. Mladić also gave the impression to international observers that nothing of military significance could or would happen in Bosnian Serb-controlled BiH without his specific Milinić stated that the Accused did not have control of the VRS and that he was not viewed as their supreme commander and that neither the Main Staff of the VRS nor Mladić respected the Accused and the Accused was powerless. However, the Chamber notes that the testimony of Milinić was marked by contradictions, bias, and indicators that he lacked candour. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard. See also fn. 10056.

approval.¹⁰⁰⁹² At a meeting with Mladić on 4 May 1993, General Panić and Bulatović suggested that Mladić take the floor after the Accused at the Bosnian Serb Assembly session the following day where the Vance-Owen Plan was scheduled to be discussed and put to a vote, as “Mladić has the greatest influence on the Serbian people”, greater even than the Accused.¹⁰⁰⁹³

3124. In 1993 and 1994, the Accused and Mladić denied any rift between them. In August 1993, Mladić emphasised that he had never taken a decision by himself and that “all claims about some rift in military and political leadership are untrue”.¹⁰⁰⁹⁴ In June 1993, Plavšić attempted to “inflict damage” on the Accused by referring to a conflict between him and Mladić in public, however, according to Milovanović, there were never any open conflicts between the Accused and Mladić, “not even then or after that”.¹⁰⁰⁹⁵ They may have had “harsh exchanges of opinion” when discussing major joint tasks, but for him, this was a normal aspect of the relationship between the military and political leadership.¹⁰⁰⁹⁶ Further, the Accused wrote to Mladić in April 1994 and emphasised the importance of the VRS respecting his authority and the decisions of the political leadership.¹⁰⁰⁹⁷ At a 4 August 1994 briefing by commanders of the VRS, the Accused was recorded as saying: “Everyone is looking to find a rift among individuals in the leadership, especially between me and Mladić. They will fail at that, because Mladić and I talk about things as brothers [...] and our aim is to move together towards the same goal.”¹⁰⁰⁹⁸

day, the Accused told Milovanović not to come between him and Mladić, namely that he should not “be between the hammer and the nail, I am the supreme commander and I am ordering; order them to withdraw and tell Mladić to report to me from the airport”.¹⁰¹⁰⁰ In the same conversation, the Accused told Milovanović that if Mladić was preventing him from executing his orders, “you are then obliged to inform me and I will replace him [...] you are to carry out my executive orders because I am your supreme commander. Mladić has to carry out every one of my orders; if he hasn’t, I will replace him and arrest him.”¹⁰¹⁰¹

3126. The Accused suggested that Milovanović replace Mladić as commander of the Main Staff on a number of occasions.¹⁰¹⁰² On 6 August 1993, the Accused presented Milovanović with a “fait accompli” in front of a large group of journalists, stating that he would hand over the army to Milovanović as commander of the Main Staff in place of Mladić; however, Milovanović said he would deny it without an Assembly decision to that effect.¹⁰¹⁰³ In December 1993, the Accused was openly critical of Mladić to Milovanović because he was upset that he never knew Mladić’s whereabouts; he asked Milovanović to meet with him in Pale and stated again that it would be better if Milovanović were in command of the VRS.¹⁰¹⁰⁴ Milovanović refused and stood by Mladić, who remained as commander of the Main Staff until the end of the war.¹⁰¹⁰⁵

3127. In September 1993, there were clear tensions between the Accused and Mladić, including during their exchanges in Bosnian Serb Assembly sessions in relation to a number of issues.¹⁰¹⁰⁶ The Accused’s authority remained clear, however, and the Accused himself emphasised the authority he held, stating: “I have issued an order to the general who is under my command, that is not testing, that is an order”, “I am the Commander-in-Chief and I am ordering necessary measures wrong move he might make could wreck the entire country, the entire nation. He must be cautious now and not fall for their provocations”).

to be taken”.¹⁰¹⁰⁷ The Accused also stated that of the civilian authorities, only he had the possibility of controlling the army and the army had to get “used to the fact that they are under the command and control of the civilian authority”.¹⁰¹⁰⁸ The Accused further stressed at this meeting that if he did not continue to trust Mladić, he could and would have dismissed him, describing him as “the glorious fighter from Krajina”.¹⁰¹⁰⁹

3128. In November 1993, UNPROFOR reported that the Serbs seemed to be “directionless”, noting that the Accused is “blocked by Serbia and by the international community at large” and Mladić is “frustrated and is becoming increasingly bellicose”.¹⁰¹¹⁰ They observed that Mladić was more dangerous as he was feeling ineffective as a military commander and marginalised as an individual.¹⁰¹¹¹

3129. There were similar disagreements and tension between the Accused and Mladić during meetings in 1994.¹⁰¹¹² On 26 April 1994, Milovanović spoke with Gvero over the phone in relation to an agreement with UNPROFOR whereby heavy weapons were to be withdrawn, or put under the control of UNPROFOR, and the Accused had ordered the weapons to be withdrawn; Milovanović told Gvero, “[f]uck it, pardon my French, you put my balls in a vice. [...] Well, because [the Accused] has ordered weapons to be withdrawn, Mladić doesn’t allow it”.¹⁰¹¹³ Milovanović further stressed that “here’s what’s important, it’s important that [the Accused] is making me pull out heavy weapons 20 km”.¹⁰¹¹⁴ In May 1994, Mladić proposed to the SDC that some generals who he believed to support the Accused be pensioned off.¹⁰¹¹⁵ In September 1994, Gvero complained about not having enough “real contacts with the state leadership”,¹⁰¹¹⁶ and that the Accused was taking decisions without the approval of the Main Staff.¹⁰¹¹⁷ In October 1994, Mladić was informed that the Accused did not know what to do with him.¹⁰¹¹⁸

3130. The Chamber notes that although the Accused and Mladić may have had their differences, in the spring of 1995, they maintained their superior and subordinate relationship within the chain of command.¹⁰¹¹⁹ At a session of the Supreme Command on 31 March 1995, Mladić stated that he and the Accused had the greatest responsibility for the army, with the Accused “as the Supreme Command” and Mladić as “[his] right hand in the army.”¹⁰¹²⁰ While Mladić also complained that the Accused had stripped him of his authority to make unilateral promotions of lower-ranking officers,¹⁰¹²¹ Mladić affirmed that the Accused, as the Supreme Commander, had the right to give orders.¹⁰¹²²

3131. Furthermore, in a speech at the 50th Bosnian Serb Assembly session on 15 and 16 April 1995, the Accused reassured the attendees that despite rumours of a split between he and Mladić: “How can there be a split between the Supreme Commander and his subordinate commander? There is no split”, but further stated “[i]f there is a split, it is clear who will have to go”.¹⁰¹²³ The Accused further stated he had not resorted to firing Mladić or any of his assistants, and that on the whole, he had a good personal relationship with Mladić and that “he and his Main Staff members [...] respect and recognise me”.¹⁰¹²⁴ Mladić responded later that despite the Accused’s public statements about replacing Mladić “at the stroke of a pen”, Mladić had made a commitment when he was sworn in and he requested that the Assembly and the deputies “take a vote of confidence in me and the Main Staff” and reassured them that “we’ll work together”.¹⁰¹²⁵

A few days earlier on 28 March 1995, Mladić wrote to the Accused asking him to order the Minister of Defence to annul an order he issued without consulting the Main Staff regarding promotions and that the Minister of Defence not take away the Main Staff commanders’ “right to approve promotions up to the rank and authority which they have so far had”. 3132. However, further tensions between the VRS and the Bosnian Serb leadership were apparent during meetings in the spring of 1995.¹⁰¹²⁶ On 29 April 1995, the Accused addressed a letter to the VRS Main Staff accusing them of preparing a coup d'état, and summoned them to a meeting in Pale.¹⁰¹²⁷ On 1 May 1995, the Accused met with the officers of the Main Staff and Corps commanders in Pale and complained about the actions and Mladić's recent behaviour and the tension between the military and political leadership.¹⁰¹²⁸

3133. In the summer of 1995, the Accused communicated directly with Milovanović on a few occasions and forwarded him reports he received and decisions he made; this caused suspicion among the other generals.¹⁰¹²⁹ Milovanović reported this to Mladić, and cautioned the Accused that the "system of command was being duplicated"; however, Milovanović never refused any of the Accused's orders and merely forwarded them to Mladić.¹⁰¹³⁰ If no response was received, then Milovanović would act on the Accused's order.¹⁰¹³¹ By August 1995, Mladić was more vocal and arrogant in his interactions with the Accused, and Mladić claimed that he was in charge.¹⁰¹³² The Accused complained about the army, the difficulties in influencing the Main Staff and stated that the army, as a state organ, needed to be under the command of the state and not Mladić.¹⁰¹³³ There were also fears of a military coup but the Accused continued to speak in the capacity of the Supreme Commander of the VRS and in the interests of Serb unity.¹⁰¹³⁴ instructions from Slobodan Milošević, so the Accused had to act to prevent it.¹⁰¹³⁵ The Accused told Đurđević that he had called a meeting of all senior officers, including Mladić, and had confronted them with the plan; afterwards the Accused had a one-on-one conversation with Mladić where, according to the Accused, the two of them had patched up their differences, at least so as to be civil and respectful of each other.¹⁰¹³⁶ The Accused told Đurđević that Mladić had promised to work together with the Accused and other RS political leaders.¹⁰¹³⁷ However, according to Đurđević, the Accused still did not seem to be “speaking very warm terms about Mladić” and he told Đurđević that he would have to pension Mladić off.¹⁰¹³⁸ The next day, on 15 July, in a meeting with Slobodan Milošević and Mladić, Akashi remembered Mladić being “under very tense pressure”.¹⁰¹³⁹ Akashi recalled that the absence of the Accused at this meeting gave rise to some speculation about the relationship between the Accused and Mladić, but Akashi had no actual knowledge of what was taking place.¹⁰¹⁴⁰

3135. On 2 August 1995, pursuant to a decision issued by the Accused, in his capacity as President and Supreme Commander, the Main Staff was renamed as the VRS General Staff and would be called the Supreme Command Staff in “times of war”.¹⁰¹⁴¹ According to this decision, on 4 August 1995, Mladić was appointed as Special Advisor to the Supreme Commander, and removed as VRS commander.¹⁰¹⁴² In response, on 5 August 1995, Mladić sent a notice to the corps commands, stating that the Accused’s decision to rename the Main Staff and to take over the authority of direct leadership and command of the VRS was unconstitutional and highly dangerous and could bring into question the results they had already achieved; he further stressed that such a decision could lead to the collapse of the VRS.¹⁰¹⁴³

3136. On 5 or 6 August 1995, Milovanović authored a petition that was sent to the Bosnian Serb Assembly and the Accused in his capacity as RS President on behalf of 18 generals.¹⁰¹⁴⁴ The petition stated the generals' unanimous refusal to implement the Supreme Command's order to reorganise the Main Staff.¹⁰¹⁴⁵

3137. However, even following Mladić's removal as Main Staff commander, both the Accused and Mladić re-affirmed their subordinate-superior relationship. In an interview on 16 August 1995, the Accused stated that "[t]here is no conflict, the competence is very clear"; he was the President and Commander-in-Chief of the army and that Mladić was the second in the hierarchy, despite mutual criticism and disagreements.¹⁰¹⁴⁶ Furthermore, at an SDC session on 23 August 1995 with the FRY leadership, during which Slobodan Milošević attempted to pressure Mladić to support peace and issue a statement which was contrary to the Accused's position at the time, Mladić refused and instead stated that he would leave this to the politicians as he was "only a soldier of the people" and "not an elected representative".¹⁰¹⁴⁷

3138. On 27 August 1995, the Accused abrogated his decision of 2 August 1995 to re-organise the Main Staff, including the decree appointing Mladić as Special Advisor to the Supreme Commander.¹⁰¹⁴⁸ Following the annulment of his decision, the Accused sent a letter to the VRS Main Staff generals, requesting that they "trust the state leadership" and the importance "finally for us to respect each other" and establish a relationship based on mutual respect.¹⁰¹⁴⁹

3139. However, on 5 September 1995, Akashi reported further miscommunication and discord between the Accused and Mladić, stating that “the pronouncements of the ‘RS’ civilian leadership and the [VRS] military leadership are clearly at odds” and that there had been a noticeable rupture in the RS power structure.¹⁰¹⁵⁰

3140. The Chamber received evidence from Defence witnesses that the relationship between the Accused and Mladić was always one of intolerance and that the Accused had de jure control over Mladić, but that he did not have control over him in fact.¹⁰¹⁵¹ Furthermore, Defence witnesses testified that within the VRS structure, there was always a duality of command between Mladić and the Accused, starting with Mladić’s appointment as commander of the Main Staff and throughout the conflict.¹⁰¹⁵² According to Mandić, there was a lack of trust and co-operation between the Accused and Mladić from the beginning and that Mladić did not respect orders issued by the Accused or other members of the Presidency.¹⁰¹⁵³

3141. However, the Chamber notes that the evidence of these witnesses, namely of Kuprešaniin, Zametica, Kozić, Kovač, and Ninković, in this regard is expressed in general terms and is often based on their own impression or opinion. The Chamber does not therefore find their evidence to be of much weight in this regard. In addition the Chamber finds that this evidence is outweighed by the volume of reliable evidence discussed above. Therefore, in light of all the evidence, the Chamber finds that while there may have been a lack of trust and periods of discord between the Accused and Mladić, the Accused and Mladić acted as a collective leadership and conducted themselves in a single direction. The Chamber therefore finds that the Accused maintained his role as Mladić's superior, had de jure control over him, and exercised such control in fact throughout the conflict.

(4) Accused's powers

3142. The Accused, as the President, had the power to organise and implement plans for defence, order mobilisation, and command and control the army.¹⁰¹⁵⁴ In addition, as the Supreme Commander, the Accused had the power to issue regulations, to define the organisation of the VRS, to appoint, promote, and dismiss officers of the VRS, to establish a system of command, and to monitor the implementation of orders.¹⁰¹⁵⁵ The Accused had also the power to issue decrees, instructions, orders, and requests related to the general planning for the preparation of the army, the mobilisation of the army, and its deployment.¹⁰¹⁵⁶

3143. In application of these powers, the Accused, for example, issued instructions to different units in the VRS and occasionally sent direct orders to corps and brigade commanders to answer directly to him.¹⁰¹⁵⁷

¹⁰¹⁵⁵ See para. 167; P2603 (SerBiH Law on the Army, 1 June 1992), art. 174 (stating, inter alia, that the RS President is the Commander-in-Chief of the VRS).

¹⁰¹⁵⁷ See, e.g., P846 (Radovan Karadžić's Order to VRS, 7 February 1994) (which was relayed via P4493 (VRS Main Staff Order, 7 February 1994); Stanislav Galić, T. 38033 (9 May 2013) (stating that the SRK commander would receive information and directives directly from the Supreme Command and the Accused); P2276 (VRS Main Staff Order, 9 July 1995); P4925 (Supplement to Directive 6, 12 December 1993); P2645 (Radovan Karadžić's order to VRS Main Staff, MUP, and Ministry of Defence, 20 May 1992) (the Accused ordered the creation of a military police company within the SRK); D43 (Radovan Karadžić's Order to VRS Main Staff, 16 April 1993); P4495 (Radovan Karadžić's Order to VRS Main Staff and RS MUP, 29 March 1995); D4812 (Radovan Karadžić's Order, 15 January 1994); P1503 (Radovan Karadžić's Order re Nedžarići, 1 July 1992); P1299 (VRS Main Staff request for information from SRK, 26 April 1995); D4739 (Letter from Radovan Karadžić to all local civilian and police authorities, 31 October 1992).

See also P1493 (Letter from Ratko Adžić to Radovan Karadžić, 12 June 1992) (by which the Accused was informed of the progress of battles around Sarajevo and was asked to use "his influence" for additional weaponry to be provided).

meeting of the Supreme Command, on 7 May 1993, to be directly in charge of approving operations; that all offensive operations be halted; and that any action should be approved by the Supreme Command personally.¹⁰¹⁵⁹

3145. The Accused also exercised his power to order the VRS to carry out mobilisation.¹⁰¹⁶⁰ For example, already on 20 May 1992, the Accused issued a decision on the general mobilisation of all military conscripts and the requisition of material for the needs of the VRS and noted that this decision would be delivered to the “competent organs of all municipalities” of the SerBiH.¹⁰¹⁶¹ This decision was delivered and acted upon at the municipal level.¹⁰¹⁶²

3146. The Accused exercised his power to promote VRS officers¹⁰¹⁶³ and to reassign VRS officers.¹⁰¹⁶⁴ As mentioned above with regard to his relationship with Mladić, the power to dismiss officers was acknowledged by the Accused himself when he stated at the Bosnian Serb Assembly that if he did not trust Mladić he would have dismissed him and added: “I have the authority to do that.”¹⁰¹⁶⁵

¹⁰¹⁵⁹ P1483 (Ratko Mladić’s notebook, 2 April–24 October 1993), pp. 89–90. The Chamber notes John Zametica’s evidence that he did not think that the Accused was “particularly involved” in “day-today operative and tactical level”, that the Accused was “largely uninterested” in the operation and tactical conduct of warfare, but notes that at the same time Zametica testified that he “never asserted that [the Accused] had not been involved” whatsoever. John Zametica, T. 42457–42458, 42522 (29 October 2013). The Chamber does not find that Zametica’s qualified observation regarding the involvement of the Accused in operative and tactical level affects the Chamber’s conclusion in this regard.

The Chamber notes that, while the Accused’s decree is dated 14 July 1995, according to a memorandum of the Drina Corps “the handover of duties of the Drina Corps Commander was carried out on 13 July 1995”. However, it finds that this minor inconsistency with regard to the date does not affect the substance of the document of the Drina Corps, according to which reassignments were made “[p]ursuant to the Decree of the President of Republika Srpska”. 3147. The Accused also assisted the VRS in his capacity as RS President. In April 1994, following a letter from the Main Staff informing that there were volunteers from the SRS who had been operating in two municipalities without the knowledge or consent of the VRS,¹⁰¹⁶⁶ the Accused reminded the municipal authorities that this interfered with the system of single command and control. The Accused also required to be informed about developments so he could take measures.¹⁰¹⁶⁷

3148. The Chamber observes that Mladić took note in 1994 that while subordination was good at the Main Staff and corps level, insubordination was found at the lower levels,¹⁰¹⁶⁸ and it also observes that in 1995 lack of co-operation and certain acrimony existed between the civilian and military authorities.¹⁰¹⁶⁹

3149. The Chamber notes that according to Božidar Vučurević officers of the VRS turned to Belgrade rather than to the RS.¹⁰¹⁷⁰ The Chamber finds that Vučurević was not forthright in this regard and does not accept his evidence. The Chamber also notes that Momir Bulatović testified that the Accused told Milošević that “he did not understand why the VRS took Jajce, a Muslim town that they would never be able to preserve” and that Bulatović “believe[d]” that the Accused’s statement to Milošević referred to the lack of the Accused’s control over military operations.¹⁰¹⁷¹ The Chamber does not find that Bulatović’s interpretation of the Accused’s statement has any weight as Bulatović was not present when it was made.

3150. Finally, Colm Doyle testified that he informed the Accused, via one of the Accused’s officials, of a planned attack against a TV station in Sarajevo and that the Accused replied that the attack will not take place. However, the TV station was bombed, and Doyle relayed information to the Accused that he “was going to hold him personally responsible” for the attack.¹⁰¹⁷² When the Accused met with Doyle later that day he said to Doyle that he had not ordered the attack, that he had condemned it, and that he “didn’t control all of the military all of the time.”¹⁰¹⁷³ The Chamber finds the Accused’s statement to Doyle regarding his lack of continuous control over the military to be of minimal weight. The Accused had a clear interest in distancing himself from, and minimising his involvement in, the attack after Doyle told the Accused that he would be held personally responsible for it and that he was going to condemn this attack on television.

3151. In addition, the Chamber finds that the limited evidence regarding the Accused’s lack of control over the VRS¹⁰¹⁷⁴ is not only of minimal weight in and of itself, but that, in any event, it is inconsistent with the overwhelming evidence to the contrary, described above.

(5) The issuance of military directives in pursuance of the Strategic Goals

3152. Above, the Chamber found that the Strategic Goals, which embodied the fundamental objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership were communicated to the VRS and formed a core element of its military strategy.¹⁰¹⁷⁵ They were the basis for the military operations that were formulated in the seven main VRS military directives issued between June 1992 and March 1995.¹⁰¹⁷⁶

3153. These directives constituted “the highest level of political-military direction” for the conduct of the war.¹⁰¹⁷⁷ They were “act[s] of command used by the highest echelons of command” that delegated long-term tasks and assignments.¹⁰¹⁷⁸ They regulated the actions of the military forces by setting tasks in the form of guidelines governing the division of responsibilities between

The Chamber notes that Doyle’s testimony could be interpreted as referring to the Accused’s authority over paramilitary forces. However, considering the features of the attack described by Doyle and the knowledge of the Accused about the attack the Chamber concludes that, in this context, the Accused was referring to regular military forces rather than paramilitaries.

¹⁰¹⁷⁴ The Chamber also notes evidence of a rift in August 1994 between the RS leadership and the FRY concerning negotiations, which included a message from the FRY leadership to the VRS to refuse obedience to, and not to be manipulated by, the RS leadership. P1486 (Ratko Mladić’s notebook, 31 March–3 September 1994), pp. 277–279. However, the Chamber notes that this message was not accepted by the VRS officers and did not affect the hierarchical control of the RS leadership over the VRS. P1486 (Ratko Mladić’s notebook, 31 March–3 September 1994), pp. 283, 286 (according to which Milovanović qualified this rift as “not ideological conflicts, but conflicts in the struggle for power” and Miletić stated that “[d]emanding that the officers turn against the Serbian leadership is against the people, and that is the biggest crime”).

the army, police, and civilian protection.¹⁰¹⁷⁹ They identified objectives, forces and resources that should be used in achieving the objectives, and contained basic guidelines.¹⁰¹⁸⁰

3154. There were three methods of drafting directives: the “complete” method, the “shortened” method, and the method that did not include any consultation with the organs and commands.¹⁰¹⁸¹ The complete method entailed that the Commander of the Main Staff first opened the discussion, the corps commanders then gave a briefing, and the chiefs of sectors of the Main Staff—such as security, logistics, training, and morale—in turn also provided input.¹⁰¹⁸² During this analysis, conclusions would be made related to the level of accomplishment of the tasks defined for the previous year, before moving on to define the tasks for the following year.¹⁰¹⁸³

3155. On this basis, the Commander of the Main Staff, Mladić, would formulate the basic principles and the command organs would submit proposals to him.¹⁰¹⁸⁴ He would then adopt the proposals, and the operative organ would integrate the adopted proposals into a unified text,¹⁰¹⁸⁵ this text would then be forwarded to the Accused, as Supreme Commander.¹⁰¹⁸⁶ The Accused would provide guidelines and revisions would be made pursuant to his instructions.¹⁰¹⁸⁷ Directives were either signed by the Accused as Supreme Commander or by Mladić as the Commander of the Main Staff but in any event, the Accused examined and approved all of the seven directives mentioned above.¹⁰¹⁸⁸ Once signed, the directive was finalised and could not be altered or amended by others who might receive it.¹⁰¹⁸⁹ Once finalised, the directive would be forwarded to the assistant commanders and the chiefs of sectors would receive copies.¹⁰¹⁹⁰

3156. Thereafter, Mladić would produce a further executive order or directive effectively operationalising the directive.¹⁰¹⁹¹ The Main Staff was then responsible for disseminating the directive to subordinate units in accordance with the directive.¹⁰¹⁹²

(6) Conclusion

3157. The Chamber concludes that from May 1992 the Accused had continuous de jure authority and control over the VRS, which he exercised in fact, while serving as the President of the SNB, President of the Presidency, and later President of the RS and Supreme Commander. The Accused was regularly informed of the developments in the VRS and in the field. The Accused was involved at the strategic level and, when he desired, at the operational level as well.

(B) Bosnian Serb MUP

3158. The Minister of the MUP was the head of the MUP.¹⁰¹⁹³ The Chamber recalls that Mićo Stanišić was Minister of the MUP from 24 March 1992 until the end of 1992 and again from January 1994 until July 1994 and that Tomislav Kovač was acting Minister from September 1993 until January 1994.¹⁰¹⁹⁴

3159. The Chamber recalls that the Law on Internal Affairs, issued on 23 March 1992, established a network of CSBs to carry out the work of the Bosnian Serb MUP.¹⁰¹⁹⁵ The CSBs were located in Banja Luka (for the ARK), Trebinje (for the SAO Herzegovina), Doboј (for the SAO of Northern BiH), Sarajevo (for the SAO of Romanija-Birač), and Bijeljina (for the SAO of Semberija) and coordinated the functions of the SJBs.¹⁰¹⁹⁶ The SJBs, which were established within the territory of each municipality, were tasked with dealing with all public security matters.¹⁰¹⁹⁷ The Chamber further recalls that the SBP, commanded by Goran Sarić, functioned as a combat unit and was divided into five detachments located in Banja Luka, Trebinje, Doboј, Sarajevo, and Bijeljina.¹⁰¹⁹⁸

PJPs, which participated in combat activities, were organised by the CSBs at the regional level and their detachments were located at each of the five CSBs.¹⁰¹⁹⁹

(1) Accused's powers

3160. As Supreme Commander of the VRS, the Accused had the authority to issue orders for the deployment of the police and define the basis for the organisation and size of the police force during times of war in order to protect the rights and duties of the RS and its citizens.¹⁰²⁰⁰ The Presidency declared an “imminent threat of war” on 15 April 1992.¹⁰²⁰¹ In addition, the Chamber recalls that on 15 May 1992, Mićo Stanišić issued an order formalising the co-operation of the Bosnian Serb MUP and VRS, such that the MUP personnel would be organised into “war units” and be re-subordinated to the VRS during their participation in combat activities.¹⁰²⁰² Therefore, the Chamber finds that the Accused had de jure authority over the MUP.

3161. Branko Đerić testified that Mićo Stanišić took his orders directly from the Accused and that the Accused was in charge of the “use of the police”.¹⁰²⁰³ He explained that as Minister of the MUP, Stanišić should have implemented government decisions; instead he ignored the government and failed to attend government sessions.¹⁰²⁰⁴ The Prosecution points to one example of Stanišić receiving instructions from the Accused in an intercepted conversation from 18 April 1992.¹⁰²⁰⁵ In this intercepted conversation, the Accused and Stanišić discussed the whereabouts of a team of European observers and then moved on to discuss the arming of a group of people preparing for an attack on Foča.¹⁰²⁰⁶ The Accused told Stanišić to stop the chain of weapon delivery and inform Hadžići and Ilidža not to cross over to Kiseljak.¹⁰²⁰⁷

3162. In addition, the Accused issued an order with respect to the deployment of police forces into combat. On 20 May 1992, the Accused ordered that manpower in SRK units was to be replenished by agreement with the MUP and SJBs in, inter alia, Ilidža, Vogošća, Novo Sarajevo, Rajlovac, 3163. Municipal Crisis Staffs and War Presidencies issued orders to MUP units. For example, the Crisis Staff in Sanski Most issued orders to the SJB.¹⁰²¹⁰ The Banja Luka CSB instructed its subordinate SJBs to implement decisions of the ARK War Presidency.¹⁰²¹¹ The Chamber further notes that the Bratunac Crisis Staff issued the decision that the Bratunac TO and SJB would take over the defence of the Serbian municipality of Bratunac and issued decisions authorising the SJB to disarm citizens, and that members of the SJB assist other Serb Forces with actions against Bosnian Muslims during the take over of Bratunac.¹⁰²¹² In Foča, the SJB acted alongside the TO during the take-over.¹⁰²¹³ The Rogatica Crisis Staff ordered the implementation of the division of the Rogatica SJB.¹⁰²¹⁴ In Vlasenica, the Crisis Staff was involved in the co-ordination of the take-over of the town, which was carried out with police acting alongside other Serb Forces, and its aftermath, which involved the police confiscating weapons from non-Serbs and arresting those who refused to surrender their weapons.¹⁰²¹⁵ The Vlasenica Crisis Staff also commanded a Special Police Platoon,¹⁰²¹⁶ and was able to issue orders to the Chief of the SJB in Vlasenica.¹⁰²¹⁷ In Hadžići, the police implemented a decision of the Crisis Staff to arrest and detain all Bosnian Muslim men of military age.¹⁰²¹⁸ The Vogošća Crisis Staff also had the authority to provide

(2) Communication and Bosnian Serb MUP reporting system

3164. The Chamber recalls that the system of reporting within the MUP consisted of daily reports and other reports about more significant security information.¹⁰²²¹ Information was collected from the municipal level by the SJB, then sent to the regional level of the CSB, and finally sent to the Bosnian Serb MUP.¹⁰²²² The information was also sent from the MUP to the Bosnian Serb Government, including to the Presidency.¹⁰²²³

3165. The Chamber received evidence that there were some difficulties in communication during the first year of the conflict in 1992.¹⁰²²⁴ However, there were always communication channels between the Bosnian Serb MUP, CSBs and SJBs.¹⁰²²⁵ Communication between the CSB and the ministerial level was on a daily basis, with communication several times a day if there was a problem or every couple of days if there were no real developments.¹⁰²²⁶ Mandić testified that the police, in the absence of a special problem, were not bound to report regular activities to the ¹⁰²¹⁹ See para. 2372. In early March 1992, Tintor, on behalf of the Vogošća Crisis Staff, sent a dispatch to the Vogošća SJB and Kemo Šabović, prohibiting the SJB from conducting any investigations in Serb villages in connection with the alleged killing of a young Bosnian Muslim by a Serb.

Accused but reported to the Prime Minister.¹⁰²²⁷ In addition, the Chief of the Bijeljina SJB reported to Mićo Stanišić on the situation in the municipality.¹⁰²²⁸

3166. Until the end of 1992, the SDB did not send any reports to the RS President; this was done through the MUP. Only from 1993, were SDB reports sent to the state leadership of the RS (President, President of the Assembly, Prime Minister, and other government bodies as required).¹⁰²²⁹ The Accused received the information verbally and via written reports multiple times per month.¹⁰²³⁰

(3) Conclusion

3167. The Chamber finds that the Accused had de jure authority over the Bosnian Serb MUP from at least 15 April 1992, which he exercised in fact, in his position as President of the Presidency, and later President of the RS, and Supreme Commander of the VRS. Although the evidence of his involvement in the day to day operations of the MUP is limited, the evidence establishes that he had the ability to re-deploy police officers and give instructions to Mićo Stanišić and lower level MUP officials. In addition, the evidence establishes that while the communication system was sometimes interrupted, the Accused frequently received reports from the MUP.

3168. The Chamber further finds that Crisis Staffs and War Presidencies played a role in commanding or co-ordinating the tasks of MUP units in the Municipalities. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the Accused exercised authority over such institutions and played a central role in instructing how they would function.¹⁰²³¹ In light of the co-operation between MUP units and Bosnian Serb authorities, the TO, and the VRS, the Chamber finds that the Accused supported the use of MUP units during combat activities throughout the Municipalities.

(C) Territorial Defence

3169. In the second half of 1991, in the context of the conflict in Croatia, the Accused issued instructions to the SDS and to municipalities in which SDS was in power, to mobilise all citizens into the TO and to subordinate them to the command of the JNA.¹⁰²³² The Accused monitored this mobilisation effort.¹⁰²³³

3170. As long as the JNA officially operated in BiH territory, the Accused supported the mobilisation of armed forces that operated under the JNA's command.¹⁰²³⁴ With regard to the mobilisation and the arming of Serbs who were not subordinated to the JNA, the Accused's position at that time was that the SDS would not arm the Serbs but would not prevent them from acquiring weapons in other ways.¹⁰²³⁵ However, the Chamber also recalls that the SDS in Bijeljina, Bratunac, Rogatica, Vlasenica, Ključ, and Hadžići provided Serbs with weapons while the JNA still operated in BiH.¹⁰²³⁶

3171. On 27 March 1992, before the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused gave instructions to the newly-formed Serb municipalities to "organise the people so that they can defend themselves" as a TO and place them under the command of the JNA present at that time.¹⁰²³⁷

3172. Following the declaration of a state of imminent threat of war in mid-April 1992, the Presidency of the SerBiH decided that a SerBiH TO "shall be formed as the armed force of [SerBiH]",¹⁰²³⁸ led and commanded by municipal, district and regional staffs and the republican

Bogdan Subotić also stated that given that during this early phase, the central authorities did not establish control over the TO, the appointment of a Chief of the TO for SerBiH was an attempt to centralise the command. staff of the SerBiH.¹⁰²³⁹ The TO was subordinated to Minister of Defence Bogdan Subotić until the appointment of the commander.¹⁰²⁴⁰ In addition, a general mobilisation of the TO was ordered.¹⁰²⁴¹

3173. The SNB decided that the Accused, as the President of the SNB, would co-ordinate the command of the TO forces.¹⁰²⁴² The SNB adopted decisions on the appointment of the acting commander of the TO and the chief of staff of the TO,¹⁰²⁴³ the procurement of uniforms and insignia for the TO with instructions on markings,¹⁰²⁴⁴ and the securing of salaries for members of the TO.¹⁰²⁴⁵ On 24 April 1992, it was decided to charge the Accused with the responsibility of establishing a Town TO Staff.¹⁰²⁴⁶ Subotić asked, on 27 April 1992, for assistance from the Military Command in filling “most vital personnel” posts in the TO and also for the provision of uniforms.¹⁰²⁴⁷

3174. In a report of 5 June 1992 from the Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff to the Accused, it was stated that the Crisis Staff had mobilised about 900 people over the previous two months, including about 700 in the Lukavica and Tilava areas and about 200 in Grbavica.¹⁰²⁴⁸ In addition, as found above, on 16 April 1992, following an order by the Presidency of the SerBiH, the Bratunac Crisis Staff issued an order for general mobilisation and also required military conscripts assigned to Bratunac

The Chamber notes the evidence of Subotić that the attempts of the “central authorities” to procure military uniforms for TO members were only aimed at “providing logistical support for the TO units” and not commanding them. D3695 (Witness statement of Bogdan Subotić dated 16 June 2013), para. 272. However, the Chamber finds that this evidence is not consistent with evidence regarding the creation of a hierarchical command structure nor with Subotić’s own statement with regard to P5565 (Request of the Ministry of Defence for Personnel, 27 April 1992) in relation to which he testified that this was part of “our efforts to organize an efficient command and control over the TO units up until the formation of the VRS.” D3695 (Witness statement of Bogdan Subotić dated 16 June 2013), para. 271. TO units to immediately respond to the mobilisation.¹⁰²⁴⁹ Similarly, the SAO Birač Crisis Staff ordered, on 29 April 1992, mobilisation in the entire SAO of Birač.¹⁰²⁵⁰

3175. The VRS reported that during the period before 20 May 1992 “the municipal authorities and party leaderships, primarily of the [SDS], mobilised the Serbian TO as a self-organised defence form of the Serbian people.”¹⁰²⁵¹ It also reported that in 1992 infantry units “grew on a massive scale out of the territorial defence and other units” and that they were only used at the beginning of the war “according to the decisions of crisis staffs and similar administrative bodies”.¹⁰²⁵²

3176. On 12 May 1992, after the formal establishment of the VRS, the SerBiH TO was directly integrated into the VRS. The Accused, as the President, was to determine the organisation of the integrated SerBiH TO units and staff.¹⁰²⁵³ The Accused participated in the creation of the VRS by organising the manpower at the local level and facilitating the transfer of personnel and supply from the JNA.¹⁰²⁵⁴

3177. Based on the above the Chamber finds that the Accused was instrumental in the creation of the SerBiH TO and local TO units in mid-April 1992 and that he had de jure authority over the TO. In addition, given the Accused’s authority over Crisis Staffs,¹⁰²⁵⁵ the Chamber finds that the Accused also had de facto authority over the TO.

(D) Paramilitary units

(1) Accused’s initial attitude towards paramilitary units

3178. As stated above, while the JNA was operating in BiH, the Accused’s position was that the SDS would not arm the Serbs but would not prevent them from acquiring weapons in other ways.¹⁰²⁵⁶ However, the Chamber notes that already at the end of 1991 the SOS, commanded by Duško Šaović, was formed and received orders from the SDS in Sanski Most.¹⁰²⁵⁷

3179. Mandić testified that in March and April 1992 the municipalities controlled and coordinated the activities of the paramilitary formations active in their respective territories.¹⁰²⁵⁸ At around the same time, the Accused stated before the Bosnian Serb Assembly that “[w]e know that our people have armed themselves. We don’t know the various ways and means by which this was done, but we do know that the people have enough weapons”.¹⁰²⁵⁹ He added, however, that they did not have paramilitary units and called for the urgent creation of Crisis Staffs and for the organisation of TOs to be placed under the command of the JNA or reserve officers.¹⁰²⁶⁰

3180. In mid-April 1992, following a question by Vance about the presence of Arkan and Serb irregulars in BiH, the Accused and Koljević claimed to have never seen Arkan and that “somebody” invited Arkan to Bijeljina after a problem was caused by a Serb in a café, following which “Muslims even sent a cable thanking Arkan”.¹⁰²⁶¹

3181. During an interview that was published on 23 April 1992, the Accused was asked how he justified that “Arkan Serbian militia are still seizing control of large sections of Bosnian territory”, to which he responded that “[t]hose militias are paramilitary groups. They arrived in Bosnia to respond to the infiltration by units of regular Croatian army in Her[z]egovina”.¹⁰²⁶² When he was asked whether he agreed to disband the paramilitary forces he answered that the Bosnian Serbs did not have an armed force and that “[w]e have always asked the Serbs not to mobilize, unlike the Muslims”.¹⁰²⁶³

3182. The Chamber recalls that the Bijeljina Crisis Staff invited Arkan to the municipality and that the take-over of Bijeljina on 1 and 2 April 1992 was carried out, inter alios, by the local TO, the police, the JNA, and Arkan’s men who operated under the supervision of the Bijeljina Crisis

¹⁰²⁵⁶ See paras. 3169–3170.

¹⁰²⁵⁷ See para. 1925. The Chamber recalls that in April 1992, the Crisis Staff decided to integrate the SOS as a special unit of the TO and notes that the order was never executed because the SOS refused to be placed under the TO’s command. See para. 1928; KW540, D4449 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Stanišić & Župljanin), T. 3325 (under seal). The Chamber finds, therefore, that the SOS in Sanski Most remained a paramilitary formation.

Staff.¹⁰²⁶⁴ Davidović stated that although Mićo Stanišić knew what Arkan and his staff were doing in Bijeljina, Stanišić dared not interfere because of Arkan's links with the Serbian MUP.¹⁰²⁶⁵ In April 1992, Mandić was also aware of Arkan's involvement in Bijeljina and that Arkan had "introduced order".¹⁰²⁶⁶

3183. Starting in early April 1992, Arkan's men also operated in Zvornik municipality, in conjunction with the police, the Zvornik TO, and the JNA.¹⁰²⁶⁷ In Bratunac, in mid-April, Arkan's men operated together with the Serb Forces that consisted of JNA troops, TO members, and local reservists.¹⁰²⁶⁸ In Ilidža, they co-operated with the local forces in April 1992.¹⁰²⁶⁹ At the beginning of May 1992, Arkan's men participated in the attack on Brčko in conjunction with Serb units of the JNA, active and reserve police officers, soldiers, military reserves, and a TO battalion.¹⁰²⁷⁰ Similarly, after Rogatica was attacked on or about 22 May 1992, Arkan's men were posted in Borike ready to start operations as soon as Kušić, who commanded the Rogatica Brigade, so ordered.¹⁰²⁷¹

3184. The Chamber notes the evidence that Arkan was not subordinated to the RS authorities. Milan Martić testified that Arkan was close to the federal SDB and that "he was practically there in that capacity".¹⁰²⁷² Martin Bell testified that "Arkan took orders from nobody";¹⁰²⁷³ however, he noted that Arkan "couldn't have got across the border through the roadblocks without some collusion somewhere and somebody letting his men across".¹⁰²⁷⁴ John Wilson stated that Arkan's

The Chamber noted that the local authorities in Zvornik faced difficulties in controlling the actions of the paramilitaries but that, in some cases the paramilitary formations carried out their illegal activities with the knowledge and consent of members of the Bosnian Serb authorities. See paras. 1286, 1288.

¹⁰²⁶⁸ See para. 714. The Chamber noted that the municipal authorities faced problems with paramilitaries and volunteers who arrived in Bratunac, tried to take power, terrorised the population and did not accept the command structures or local authorities. See paras. 750–751, 754.

¹⁰²⁶⁹ See para. 2142.

While the Chamber accepts Bell testimony that according to men “enjoyed cooperation with Mladić by the fact that they were able to move about freely in an otherwise relatively tightly controlled area.”¹⁰²⁷⁵

3185. With regard to the events in Zvornik in early April 1992,¹⁰²⁷⁶ KW317 testified that while there was an attempt of the SDS to negotiate with the Muslims in Zvornik, Arkan and his group arrived and took control over the situation. Arkan rejected the idea of negotiating and he launched an attack without the authorisation of the local authorities in Zvornik. KW317 added that they had no means of contacting the Accused and he was not aware of anything that would suggest that the Accused knew of Arkan’s attack on Zvornik, let alone approved it.¹⁰²⁷⁷ Similarly, Šešelj testified that the Accused had no role to play in the events in Zvornik in early April 1992 and did not have any power to exert any influence.¹⁰²⁷⁸

3186. However, as depicted above, Arkan’s men were in contact and co-operated with RS authorities. In addition, Kuprešanin testified that when he and other deputies from ARK called an extraordinary session of the ARK Assembly to receive explanations from the Accused about recent events involving Croatian and Muslim forces in the ARK Municipalities, Arkan interrupted the session while the Accused was not present and stated that he had come with 300 volunteers; he demanded that the republican authorities authorise him to defend the municipalities given that the VRS was not doing so.¹⁰²⁷⁹

3187. The Chamber recalls that when Davidović reported to Mićo Stanišić that some of Arkan’s men had taken over the SUP in Bijeljina, Stanišić commented that he knew, that nothing else could be done, and that’s “how it ha[d] to be”.¹⁰²⁸⁰ Stanišić also told Davidović that Arkan’s men were in Bijeljina and Zvornik “helping to liberate territory that they believed should become part of the [RS]”.¹⁰²⁸¹ The evidence also shows that at the same period, after Arkan had entered Bijeljina, Davidović was at a meeting in Belgrade where further activities of the Serbian MUP were his observations there were paramilitary groups operating in BiH, it finds however that Bell was not in a position to conclude that such groups were under no one’s control.

¹⁰²⁷⁵ P1029 (Witness statement of John Wilson 4 November 2008), para. 128. Wilson stated that Mladić commanded not only the VRS, but the TO and paramilitaries, except, for example, Arkan’s men.

discussed.¹⁰²⁸² Arkan arrived at this meeting, which was also attended by the Accused, Momčilo Krajišnik, and Mićo Stanišić.¹⁰²⁸³

3188. Davidović also testified that during a meeting with the Accused and Mladić around May 1992 at the Lukavica barracks, some of Arkan's men arrived. According to Davidović, Mladić was angry and the Accused stated, “[i]t’s all right, we asked them to come. They should help with the liberation of Sarajevo. And, if they can do it, let them do it. Let them take whatever they can take.”¹⁰²⁸⁴

3189. However, in an interview in November 1993, the Accused claimed that not a “single soldier from Serbia was fighting at the beginning of the war, only Arkan was in Bijeljina, but only briefly, however, and not at our invitation”.¹⁰²⁸⁵ When asked whether Arkan was also in Ilidža, the Accused replied in the negative stating “[w]e have Šešelj’s and Arkan’s followers but they are our boys, however, who are only wearing their symbols.”¹⁰²⁸⁶

3190. In addition to Arkan’s men the Chamber noted that Mauzer’s Panthers, whose commander was also the commander of the SAO Semberija TO, operated in Bijeljina with the support of the Presidency of the Bijeljina Municipal Assembly and under the supervision of the Bijeljina Crisis Staff. During the take-over in April 1992, Mauzer’s Panthers operated in conjunction with the local TO, the police, and the JNA.¹⁰²⁸⁷ In April 1992 Mauzer’s unit also operated in Zvornik,¹⁰²⁸⁸ and at the beginning of May 1992 participated in the attack on Brčko, in co-operation with Serb units of the JNA, active and reserve police officers, soldiers, military reserves and a TO battalion.¹⁰²⁸⁹

The Chamber also found that it was only after paramilitaries started undermining the authority of the local institutions by forming their own parallel authorities and also attacking Bosnian Serbs that the municipal authorities sought to exercise some real control over paramilitary units, and that there were difficulties in controlling Mauzer and his unit which opposed the attempts by Davidović and Andan to restore order in the municipality. However, following demands by Mauzer for his expulsion and the arrest of one of Arkan’s men by Davidović’s unit, Davidović’s authority was obstructed by the Bijeljina Crisis Staff and his unit was ordered to leave for Belgrade. See paras. 632–633, 637–638.

3191. With regard to Šešelj's men, the Chamber noted that in April 1992 they operated in conjunction with the Serb Forces in Bratunac.¹⁰²⁹⁰ Šešelj's men also operated in Zvornik,¹⁰²⁹¹ in Hadžići in co-operation with the TO,¹⁰²⁹² in Novo Sarajevo with the VRS and the police,¹⁰²⁹³ and took part in combat activities in Vogošća alongside the Bosnian Serb authorities.¹⁰²⁹⁴

3192. In addition, on or about 22 May 1992,¹⁰²⁹⁵ Šešelj's men were involved in the attack on Rogatica.¹⁰²⁹⁶ The Chamber notes Šešelj's testimony that all members of the SRS who went to BiH as volunteers joined the VRS or the TO and that the SRS party never sponsored or supported paramilitaries,¹⁰²⁹⁷ but finds his testimony in this regard to be unreliable.¹⁰²⁹⁸ The Chamber also recalls that Šešelj met with the Accused a few times each year during the war.¹⁰²⁹⁹

3193. The White Eagles also operated in conjunction with the Serb Forces in Bratunac in April 1992.¹⁰³⁰⁰ In addition, they operated in Rogatica in March 1992 with the JNA and TO;¹⁰³⁰¹ in Zvornik in April 1992 with the Zvornik TO and the JNA;¹⁰³⁰² and in Ilidža with the co-operation of the local forces.¹⁰³⁰³ The Chamber found that the White Eagles took part in the main attack on the town of Foča that commenced on the morning of 8 April 1992, in conjunction with soldiers from Serbia and Montenegro and the Foča Tactical Group.¹⁰³⁰⁴ The White Eagles also participated at the

¹⁰²⁹⁸ The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable given the interest of Šešelj in minimising his own involvement in this regard. In addition, the Chamber notes that in a later interview Šešelj said that he was a true friend of the Accused "as long as [the Accused] pursues this kind of politics" and that he will not tell the interviewer "anything that someone else might use against [the Accused] or that might put him in an unpleasant situation." beginning of May 1992 in the attack on Brčko in conjunction with Serb units of the JNA, active and reserve police officers, soldiers, military reserves and a TO battalion.¹⁰³⁰⁵

3194. The Chamber found that members of the Yellow Wasps would regularly report to the Zvornik Crisis Staff, had close co-operation with, and were issued arms by the TO and were subsequently under the command of the Zvornik Brigade.¹⁰³⁰⁶

3195. Plavšić acknowledged during a session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, in November 1992, in the presence of the Accused,¹⁰³⁰⁷ that following the call of the “president of the Republic” for volunteers, she sent letters in order to gather anyone who wanted to fight for the Serb cause in RS, and that she sent letters, inter alios, to Šešelj and Arkan.¹⁰³⁰⁸ Mandić testified that Plavšić “was an advocate of having all paramilitary units from territories where Serbs lived outside BiH coming to the assistance of their brethren [...] in the religious war being waged there”,¹⁰³⁰⁹ and was the “bridge” between Bosnian Serbs and the people who came from other states to the conflict.¹⁰³¹⁰

3196. Milorad Dodik testified in broad terms that paramilitary groups which operated in BiH were not under the control of the RS authorities.¹⁰³¹¹ Similarly, Momir Bulatović testified that the expulsions that were suffered by “all ethnic groups” was the result of the “collective mentality of ¹⁰³¹⁰ Momčilo Mandić, T. 4660–4661 (6 July 2010). According to Mandić, while Đerić supported Plavšić, he and Mićo Stanišić opposed Plavšić’s approach to paramilitaries. Momčilo Mandić, T. 4625–4626 (5 July 2010). The Chamber notes that Davidović testified that he heard from many sources that the Accused invited those who wanted to fight for RS to report as volunteers in BiH and join units of the army. See Milorad Davidović, T. 15473–15474 (28 June 2011). The Chamber rejects this portion of Davidović’s evidence as it is based on unattributed hearsay. The Chamber also notes Redžić’s assessment that the paramilitaries were formed by leaders of the SDS. Izet Redžić, P3189 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 5070–5071. The Chamber notes that Redžić was the president of the Executive Board of Vlasenica, but, as he could not elaborate the basis for his assessment, the Chamber does not place any weight on his assessment.

the population” and that it was impossible for any political leader to “control the population”.¹⁰³¹² The Chamber, however, does not find that these broad statements have any weight.¹⁰³¹³

3197. The Chamber finds, to the contrary, that the fact that paramilitary formations, such as Arkan’s men, Šešelj’s men, Mauzer’s Panthers, and White Eagles were able to move freely in “an otherwise relatively tightly controlled area”¹⁰³¹⁴ and to operate in concert with local forces and authorities, in several of the Municipalities throughout BiH, supports the conclusion that such co-operation was approved by the Bosnian Serb leadership.

3198. With regard to Arkan’s men and Šešelj’s men specifically, the Chamber concludes that the Accused knew that they were operating in BiH during the spring of 1992 and that they were invited by the RS Presidency to operate in conjunction with local authorities and forces.¹⁰³¹⁵ The Chamber also notes the Accused’s direct interaction with Arkan and Šešelj and, moreover, that in May 1992 the Accused invited, without Mladić’s knowledge, Arkan’s men to participate in operations in the Sarajevo area.¹⁰³¹⁶

(2) Disbandment of paramilitary forces

3200. On 2 June 1992, at a meeting of commanders of the 1st Krajina Corps and Banja Luka political leaders, which the Accused attended, there was agreement that paramilitary formations should be dissolved.¹⁰³¹⁸

3201. On 3 June 1992, the Eastern Bosnia Corp Command issued an order, pursuant to the decision on the formation of the VRS, that certain volunteer units, including Mauzer’s Panthers, be ¹⁰³¹² See D3051 (Witness statement of Momir Bulatović dated 25 February 2013), para. 20.

¹⁰³¹³ The Chamber notes that Dodik’s evidence was marked by contradictions, indicators of insincerity and partisanship which undermined the reliability of his evidence in this regard. With regard to Bulatović’s evidence, the Chamber finds his statement to be broad, general and unsubstantiated.

However, the Chamber also notes that such orders were not necessarily enforced or were selectively enforced against non-Serbs. See paras. 855, 2053.

transformed into units of the VRS and that Mauzer be appointed Assistant Chief of Staff.¹⁰³¹⁹ Similarly, as found above, on 13 June 1992, the Accused banned the formation and operation of armed groups and individuals which were not under the control of the VRS on the territory of the RS.¹⁰³²⁰ The Accused also stated that he was “disowning” groups that continued to operate independently and that those groups would suffer the strictest sanctions for their operations.¹⁰³²¹

3202. As a result Arkan’s men left BiH, though they returned from time to time.¹⁰³²² In addition, Mauzer’s Panthers were formally incorporated in the VRS as a “Special Brigade”¹⁰³²³ that functioned as a separate unit under Mauzer’s authority.¹⁰³²⁴ The Accused was aware that Mauzer’s Panthers were incorporated in the VRS as a “Special Brigade”.¹⁰³²⁵

3203. As described earlier, in June 1992, the Accused and Mladić visited Zvornik after the Zvornik Government and Crisis Staff building was encircled by paramilitary formations and a member of Captain Dragan’s unit threatened the President of the Municipality.¹⁰³²⁶ On 30 June 1992, Grujić reported to the Accused and Mladić that in addition to “major accomplishments” there were also many problems from paramilitary formations which broke free after Arkan’s withdrawal and called for their removal.¹⁰³²⁷ Marko Pavlović reported that the “[v]olunteer formations enjoyed exceptional success” and were led by Arkan and Šešelj, and that “Arkan’s withdrew orderly, but some that stayed broke free of his control”.¹⁰³²⁸ At this meeting, the Accused stated that it would be a shame to abolish Captain Dragan's training centre at Diviči and that it would be easiest to "put the incident behind us".¹⁰³²⁹

3204. The Chamber notes the Accused's efforts to disband certain paramilitary groups, including through the assistance of the Federal SUP. After the Accused complained at an international peace conference about being unable to control paramilitaries in BiH who had come from Serbia, it was proposed that a group of Federal SUP officers go and assist the Bosnian Serb MUP to deal with problems with paramilitaries and Milorad Davidović was tasked to lead the investigative team.¹⁰³³⁰ According to Davidović, the Accused had called on him to assist in preventing crime.¹⁰³³¹ Davidović was instructed by Pavle Bulatović to arrest and prosecute paramilitaries who were found to engage in looting and robbing and was also requested by Mladić to take all measures envisaged by law against these persons.¹⁰³³² Davidović acknowledged that he was given complete autonomy by the Accused in planning operations and arresting individuals.¹⁰³³³

3205. Similarly, the Chamber found that in the summer of 1992, following increasing security problems related to paramilitaries in north-east BiH, including in Brčko, the Accused requested that a special unit be sent to Brčko, and the Bosnian Serb MUP requested support from the Federal SUP and Davidović to stabilise the security situation.¹⁰³³⁴

3206. However, the Chamber notes that according to Davidović, while some members of armed groups were arrested, the continued support for armed groups by local authorities, Crisis Staffs, and "high-ranking functionaries" made investigative measures difficult.¹⁰³³⁵ He also testified that while Mladić was always against paramilitary formations, he was unable to confront them because "they were protected by those whose existence suited them."¹⁰³³⁶ In Davidović's view, it was only when paramilitaries turned against the Bosnian Serb authorities and stopped sharing their "booty" that the local authorities wanted to have them removed.¹⁰³³⁷

3207. For example, Davidović testified that measures were taken in Bijeljina only after paramilitaries established parallel authorities which posed a threat to the local Bosnian Serb authorities.¹⁰³³⁸ The Chamber notes in this regard that the Accused issued on 30 August 1992 a decision addressed to the War Presidency of the Bijeljina municipality, indicating that all decisions of the municipality of Bijeljina pertaining to military matters would be suspended. He also ordered the civilian authorities to “investigate personal responsibility of officials who issued the illegal decisions in times of war”, with a report to be sent to the Presidency on what had been done.¹⁰³³⁹

3208. The Chamber found that Davidović planned the operation to arrest paramilitary groups in Zvornik in co-operation with Andan and special units of the MUP and that, on 29 July 1992, Žučo, the commander of the Yellow Wasps, was arrested and brought to Bijeljina.¹⁰³⁴⁰ During this operation, other leaders and members of the Yellow Wasps were arrested, as were municipal leaders who had links with or collaborated with the Yellow Wasps, including Pavlović.¹⁰³⁴¹ However, when the 30 day remand period expired,¹⁰³⁴² Davidović was told that pressure was exerted on the authorities by the Accused and Krajišnik who ordered that the Yellow Wasps be released.¹⁰³⁴³

3209. In contrast, Mandić testified that following this operation the leader of the Yellow Wasps, Vucković, was tried and sentenced for a war crime.¹⁰³⁴⁴ Mandić added that at the initiative of the Accused and the Prime Minister, the police and army arrested and handed over to competent organs a dozen men belonging to paramilitary units who had “committed crimes in the Podrinje area between Zvornik and Bratunac and Bijeljina”.¹⁰³⁴⁵ Mandić confirmed that Brano Grujić testified in ¹⁰³⁴² The Chamber recalls that when a person was arrested by the military police and a criminal report was given to the Prosecutor’s Office, the person could be initially detained by the military police for three days. The military prosecutor could then recommend to the investigative judge that the accused be detained for one month, during which an investigation would begin, and then a panel of judges could decide to extend detention for another two months. See para. 305.

Belgrade that the Accused asked Mićo Stanišić and Karišik to send a special unit to arrest the Yellow Wasps because the local forces could not arrest them.¹⁰³⁴⁶

3210. However, as found above, in July 1992, even though the Yellow Wasps did not place themselves under the joint military command of the VRS, members of the Yellow Wasps went to Pale and received weapons from the Pale SJB after which Žučo, their commander, met with Plavšić.¹⁰³⁴⁷ Žučo also spoke to the Minister of Defence about the status of his group and Bogdan Subotić confirmed that all those who received orders from VRS officers were part of the VRS whether they were reservists, volunteers, or paramilitaries.¹⁰³⁴⁸ Subotić alerted these units that they needed to fully comply with the rules and regulation of the VRS, including those relating to uniforms, insignia and command structures.¹⁰³⁴⁹

3211. Branimir Tešić testified that the VRS and the civilian authorities had problems with paramilitaries and that the “police often brought them [into] the station, took away the items they had stolen and expelled them to Serbia.”¹⁰³⁵⁰

3212. The Chamber notes that at the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly dated 24 and 26 July 1992, the Accused emphasised to the Assembly the importance of the effective elimination of paramilitary and “para-state” factions.¹⁰³⁵¹ He also stated that at that stage, the priority was to introduce order, by virtue of, inter alia, placing all special police units which were being misused by some, under the single command of the Bosnian Serb MUP, rather than under the command of “local lords”.¹⁰³⁵² Mandić confirmed that at that session the Accused highlighted the problem of paramilitary formations and explained that paramilitaries were an armed force not under the control of any state organ or the army.¹⁰³⁵³

3213. On 27 July 1992, in talks with Mladić and Mićo Stanišić, Tolimir stated that crime was a problem and that persons prone to crime must be removed from the military police but reiterated that paramilitaries were “[t]he biggest problem”.¹⁰³⁵⁴ The following day, Mladić ordered that paramilitary formations must join the regular VRS units, that individuals and groups who had been involved in criminal acts were not to be included into units, and that all paramilitary groups should be disarmed by 15 August 1992.¹⁰³⁵⁵ The order, which was relayed to the Accused,¹⁰³⁵⁶ also stated that paramilitary organisations rarely entered the area of combat activities, but usually followed VRS units when liberating parts of the territory and were mainly motivated by looting.¹⁰³⁵⁷

3214. On 6 August 1992, the Accused issued an announcement that the Presidency's order to subordinate all groups to the single command of the army and police has been implemented "apart from a few renegade groups".¹⁰³⁵⁸ He conveyed the information that the MUP had arrested "groups and individuals who defied the law and looted and committed arson" and praised those units that had subordinated themselves to the single command of the VRS and were "fighting courageously for the freedom of their Serbian BiH".¹⁰³⁵⁹

3215. At a "military-political consultation meeting" held on 2 September 1992 in Bijeljina, the Accused was informed that paramilitaries and parallel authorities were still an issue.¹⁰³⁶⁰ He reminded all those present that there should be maximum military discipline and training and stated that municipal authorities should not take too many things in their own hands.¹⁰³⁶¹ On 8 November 1992, representatives from the Bijeljina civilian and military authorities alerted Mladić that paramilitaries had to be dealt with.¹⁰³⁶²

3216. In September 1992, following an update from Manojlo Milovanović that a high-ranking official of the SDS, Rajko Dukić,¹⁰³⁶³ formed a paramilitary unit in Milići, the Accused ordered

Milovanović to “route” Dukić’s unit.¹⁰³⁶⁴ However, the Chamber notes that in 1994 the Accused awarded him the “Order of Nemanjići”.¹⁰³⁶⁵

3217. On 12 September 1992, the SRK informed its subordinate units including the Višegrad Brigade and Rogatica Brigade of the tasks it received from the VRS Main Staff on 7 September 1992, which included the task to eliminate the creation of any paramilitary unit.¹⁰³⁶⁶

3219. Notwithstanding, around the end of October 1992, the Accused informed Milovanović that “400 volunteers from Serbia will also be taking part in defending the [Višegrad Hydroelectric] Power Plant [...] under the command of Professor Košuti [...] and that [the VRS is] to take them on and bring them into combat.”¹⁰³⁶⁹

3220. During a Bosnian Serb Assembly session on May 1993, attended by the Accused, Vladimir Lukić stated that they had naively “raised paramilitaries” and called them “brotherly assistance” but “they were slowly less and less engaged in fighting and more and more in looting”.¹⁰³⁷⁰ Similarly, a Bosnian Serb leader from Sarajevo noted that in certain municipalities “chaos, disturbances, looting and stealing was the greatest where [paramilitaries] were stationed”.¹⁰³⁷¹ Complaints were also raised that while certain individuals were arrested, they were released.¹⁰³⁷² During the session, Mladić criticised the audience about how they asked him to let Mauzer “do as he likes” and stated that “you found your patron in Arkan, who brought you together to tell you how you should vote”.¹⁰³⁷³

3221. On 28 August 1993, in an order focused on the organisation of the VRS, the Accused instructed the Main Staff and MUP to create a plan to seize uniforms from people who were not members of the army or police and who were committing crimes and other illegal activity in uniforms.¹⁰³⁷⁴

3222. The Chamber notes that in 1994 the Accused awarded Mauzer’s Panthers and personally promoted Vojkan Đurković, a member of Arkan’s men.¹⁰³⁷⁵

3223. Davidović testified that while some paramilitaries were arrested the measures were not successful because the paramilitaries continued to have the support of the local authorities, Crisis Staffs and “high-ranking functionaries” and as a result they were released and continued with their actions.¹⁰³⁷⁶ He also testified that Mladić was always against paramilitary formations; could not confront them; and said that “they were protected by those whose existence suited them.”¹⁰³⁷⁷

3224. In April 1994, following a letter from the Main Staff reporting that there were volunteers from the SRS who had been operating in two municipalities without the knowledge or consent of the VRS, the Accused reminded the municipal authorities that this interfered with the system of single command and control and that it was necessary to inform him about developments so he could take measures.¹⁰³⁷⁸

¹⁰³⁷⁶ Milorad Davidović, T. 15519–15520 (28 June 2011). The Chamber notes Andan’s “impression” that the Accused was not dealing with the problems of paramilitary formations adequately. However, since this impression is based on his position that “the leadership itself was not timely informed of certain things”, the Chamber does not find it to be of great weight. See Dragomir Andan, T. 40883 (5 July 2013). See also P6434 (Excerpt from Dragomir Andan’s interview with OTP), pp. 3–4 (stating “I also think that I stood in the way of a few politicians [...] I think that this went all the way to [...] [the Accused]”). The Chamber also recalls its finding regarding the proceedings against Đurković. See para. 676. The Chamber found that Đurković was arrested after he expelled a Bosnian Muslim but that he was released when he provided documents which suggested that he was authorised and had orders to expel Bosnian Muslim residents from Bijeljina. The Chamber also found with regard to the proceedings against Đurković in 1995 that the evidence led on this issue was inconclusive.

3225. The Accused informed Mladić in April 1994 that he had ordered the MUP and other municipal authorities to assist the VRS in preventing the organisation of paramilitary units and that the strictest measures would be taken.¹⁰³⁷⁹

3227. In September 1995, in a letter from Mladić to the Accused, the former asked that Arkan and his paramilitary units be expelled from the RS and that the Accused "revoke his decision that gave Željko Ražnjatović the power to make arrests, mistreat, disarm and take away VRS members and civilians with his paramilitary units including /his authority/ to use firearms on persons who oppose or resist him."¹⁰³⁸³

3228. In the autumn of 1995, the Accused attended an event in Bijeljina where he inspected the ranks of Arkan's men under the escort of Arkan, and said: "I am deeply thankful and I congratulate you, and I hope that we will meet again in peace and you will always have a place in the heart of those who you have defended".¹⁰³⁸⁴ Arkan responded on behalf of his unit by saying that "we are ready if you call us and that we will be back to defend our ancient homeland, to defend our women and children, to defend the Serbian territory and our Orthodox religion".¹⁰³⁸⁵ According to Mihaljović this event was a product of Arkan's manipulation that surprised the Accused and that

The Chamber notes also the evidence that on 19 September 1995 it was agreed in Bijeljina that Arkan will get paid by the "Republican Government" for liberating Teočak. See P6210 (Report of Eastern Bosnian Corps, 20 September 1995). However, the Chamber does not grant this evidence any weight as it is based on an unknown and uncorroborated "reliable source" which "has not been verified". See P6210 (Report of Eastern Bosnian Corps, 20 September 1995), p. 2.

See also P2854 (Letter from Party for Serbian Unity to Radovan Karadžić, 16 April 1994) (in which Arkan states that "[a]s always we, with all our available forces, stand to protect Serbian people. We are expecting your call so we can join armed forces of [RS]").

Arkan used this event to legitimise his presence in RS given the stance taken by the Main Staff and the VRS with respect to units not under the VRS command.¹⁰³⁸⁶ However, considering the evidence and the behaviour of the Accused, who gave documents to Arkan at this event, the Chamber is not convinced by the argument that the Accused was manipulated or taken by surprise.

3229. The Chamber notes the general statement of Nikola Poplašen that the Accused “argued for all Serbian forces to be placed under single command” and that “[i]ndividual incidents did occur, but this was not [...] with the approval or knowledge of the Serbian authorities”,¹⁰³⁸⁷ but finds this statement to be in contradiction with the clear evidence that at least some paramilitary formations operated in RS with the consent of the authorities.¹⁰³⁸⁸ Similarly, the Chamber notes the evidence of Bulatović that when he spoke to the Accused, the Accused was not in favour of the presence of paramilitaries in BiH but did not have the ability to remove them.¹⁰³⁸⁹ However, the Chamber notes in this regard that at a Supreme Defence Council session in August 1992, Bulatović said “[l]et’s be honest, we needed those paramilitary formations for a while. They are now a great burden and a problem.”¹⁰³⁹⁰ This is also corroborated by evidence that in BiH, given a poor response to mobilisation, the military forces were reinforced by volunteers and paramilitaries.¹⁰³⁹¹

(3) Conclusion

3230. In light of the above, the Chamber finds that, in mid-1992, following the creation of the VRS, the Accused sought to have paramilitary groups integrated in and subordinated to the regular army or otherwise be disarmed and dissolved.¹⁰³⁹² However, his attitude towards these groups shifted depending on the group and according to the Bosnian Serb interests.

3231. With regard to Arkan’s men, for instance, the Chamber finds that the Accused knew that they were invited by the RS Presidency to operate in conjunction with local authorities and forces and that in the spring of 1992 they were indeed operating in BiH.¹⁰³⁹³ The Accused had direct ¹⁰³⁹¹ Aleksandar Vasiljević, T. 34699–34700 (4 March 2013).

¹⁰³⁹² The Chamber also notes that evidence that the co-operation between Bosnian Serb authorities and paramilitary formations existed as long as the paramilitaries’ objectives were aligned with those of the Bosnian Serb leadership. See paras. 3208, 3220, 3223.

¹⁰³⁹³ See paras. 3181, 3195.

contact with Arkan in 1992 and 1995,¹⁰³⁹⁴ and in May 1992 he invited, without Mladić's knowledge, Arkan's men to participate in operations in the Sarajevo area.¹⁰³⁹⁵ While Arkan's men left BiH in mid-1992, the Accused supported their presence and activities in BiH in 1995.¹⁰³⁹⁶ The Chamber also notes that it was important to Arkan that his actions in BiH would be approved by the Bosnian Serb authorities.¹⁰³⁹⁷

3232. Similarly, the Accused knew that Šešelj's men were invited by the RS Presidency to operate in conjunction with local authorities and forces in the spring of 1992,¹⁰³⁹⁸ and he met with Šešelj a few times each year during the war.¹⁰³⁹⁹

3233. In addition, the Accused was aware that Mauzer's Panthers was incorporated in 1992 in the VRS as a "Special Brigade" and, in 1994, he awarded Mauzer's Panthers.¹⁰⁴⁰⁰

3234. The Chamber therefore finds that during the spring of 1992, following the withdrawal of the JNA from BiH, the Accused supported the operational co-operation of military forces and local authorities with Arkan's men, Šešelj's men, and Mauzer's Panthers. These paramilitary groups were able to operate in several municipalities, in an otherwise relatively tightly controlled area,¹⁰⁴⁰¹ in concert with the military forces and the local authorities.¹⁰⁴⁰²

3235. The Accused's shifting approach to paramilitaries is further demonstrated by his approach to Captain Dragan's training centre,¹⁰⁴⁰³ and his order to have the Yellow Wasps released after they were arrested by Davidović.¹⁰⁴⁰⁴

considering the creation of the VRS, the Accused endeavored to disband paramilitary groups in general. However, the Accused still tolerated and even supported the activities of certain paramilitary groups, namely, Akran's men, Yellow Wasps and Mauzer's Panthers.

iv. Knowledge and acts of named alleged JCE members

3237. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused worked together with other Serb military and political leaders to achieve the objective of the alleged Overarching JCE to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb-claimed territory in BiH from at least October 1991 to 30 November 1995, in concert with Momčilo Krajišnik, Ratko Mladić,¹⁰⁴⁰⁵ Slobodan Milošević, Biljana Plavšić, Nikola Koljević, Mićo Stanišić, Momčilo Mandić, Jovica Stanišić, Franko Simatović, Željko Ražnatović (Arkan), and Vojislav Šešelj.¹⁰⁴⁰⁶ According to the Prosecution, while the membership in the JCE fluctuated over time, each member made a significant contribution to achieving the common criminal purpose.¹⁰⁴⁰⁷

3238. In response, the Accused argues that there was no criminal plan or design in the first place and second, that at no point in time did any of the alleged JCE members have, let alone share, any common mental state to carry out an agreed criminal plan or design.¹⁰⁴⁰⁸

3239. The Chamber has considered the involvement of the named alleged JCE members in earlier sections of this Judgement in the context of the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership and the creation of and authority over the Bosnian Serb political and governmental structures and military and police structures.¹⁰⁴⁰⁹ In this section, the Chamber will consider their further knowledge and acts in relation to the common purpose of the alleged Overarching JCE. As a part of this analysis, the Chamber will examine the relationship between the Accused and alleged JCE members where necessary.

¹⁰⁴⁰⁵ The Prosecution alleges that Mladić joined the alleged JCE as of May 1992. See Indictment, para. 6.

¹⁰⁴⁰⁶ See Prosecution Final Brief, para. 84; Indictment, paras. 9–14. (A) Momčilo Krajišnik

3240. As discussed above, Momčilo Krajišnik was a member of the SDS Main Board from July 1991 and was in the core leadership of the party.¹⁰⁴¹⁰ The Chamber recalls that Krajišnik was also elected as the first president of the Bosnian Serb Assembly in October 1991¹⁰⁴¹¹ and by virtue of his position, he was also a member of the SNB which was established on 27 March 1992.¹⁰⁴¹² The Chamber further recalls that the original three-member Presidency, comprised of the Accused, Plavšić, and Koljević, was enlarged to five members to include Krajišnik and Branko Đerić, and on 6 July 1992, Krajišnik was assigned to deal with issues related to commissioners and the economy.¹⁰⁴¹³

3241. Krajišnik was described as the Accused's "closest associate" and they had a close relationship before the SDS was even formed; this relationship continued throughout the conflict.¹⁰⁴¹⁴ For instance, the Accused personally insisted on Krajišnik's appointment as president of the Bosnian Serb Assembly.¹⁰⁴¹⁵

3242. Koljević, Plavšić, Krajišnik, and the Accused were considered to be the four most powerful leaders in the RS, with Krajišnik and the Accused at the top.¹⁰⁴¹⁶ There was very little divergence of views between the Accused and Krajišnik¹⁰⁴¹⁷ and these two were characterised as the "Alpha and Omega" of the Bosnian Serb government.¹⁰⁴¹⁸

3244. The Accused, Koljević, and Krajišnik led political negotiations on behalf of the Bosnian Serbs and had the support of the SDS Executive Board.¹⁰⁴²³ The Accused would often seek the advice of Krajišnik during negotiations.¹⁰⁴²⁴ Krajišnik emphasised that there was no difference between the Accused, Koljević, and himself who worked as a team in negotiations; Krajišnik tended to repeat “the established, party line” in negotiations.¹⁰⁴²⁵

3245. Furthermore, Krajišnik had “great authority” among the Bosnian Serb municipal leaders and influenced how power should be exercised at the municipal level.¹⁰⁴²⁶ As the President of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, Krajišnik was noted as a “skillful leader” of the local deputies.¹⁰⁴²⁷ The Accused described Krajišnik to Slobodan Milošević as a “great Bosnian patriot” and told him that Krajišnik “would not give one foot of Bosnian land” and wanted all of BiH to remain in Yugoslavia.¹⁰⁴²⁸ The Chamber recalls that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership, including

Krajišnik, formulated and promoted the Strategic Goals; for Krajišnik, the goal of separating from the Bosnian Muslims was the most important task.¹⁰⁴²⁹

3246. Between April and May 1992 the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, Plavšić, Đerić, and Bogdan Subotić met often to discuss a number of issues pertaining to the conditions in municipalities and decisions were issued as a result of these meetings.¹⁰⁴³⁰ Krajišnik was also informed about events and operations in the Municipalities.¹⁰⁴³¹ For instance, the Chamber notes that Krajišnik visited Bijeljina, often with the Accused, and that there was a close relationship between the Bijeljina branch of the SDS and the SDS in Pale.¹⁰⁴³² Krajišnik and the Accused also visited Sanski Most on the occasion of the formation of the SDS there.¹⁰⁴³³

3247. In May 1992, the Accused, Mladić, and Krajišnik held a meeting with representatives of municipalities, including Rogatica, and discussed the creation of a Bosnian Serb state in BiH.¹⁰⁴³⁴ Krajišnik also had close connections with Kušić, commander of the Rogatica Brigade, who was involved in the take-over of Rogatica and in the mistreatment and crimes against Bosnian Muslim civilians there.¹⁰⁴³⁵

¹⁰⁴²⁹ See paras. 2865, 2868, 2877, 2885, 2895–2903. According to Kecmanović, however, Krajišnik stressed respect for “other ethnicities, religions and customs”. D3645 (Witness statement of Nenad Kecmanović dated 27 May 2013), paras. 32–33. The Chamber however recalls its earlier finding that Kecmanović’s evidence was marked by evasiveness, contradictions, partisanship and indicators that his testimony lacked sincerity and candour. His testimony was also marked by indicators that he was seeking to protect the Accused. The Chamber therefore does not consider that it can rely on his evidence in this regard.

3249. During a January 1994 RS Assembly session, Krajišnik and the Accused were exalted by a member of the Assembly for “standing on top of the Serbian liberation movement and war” and described as their “highest leaders”.¹⁰⁴³⁸

(B) Nikola Koljević

3250. The Chamber recalls that Koljević was a member of the SNB, one of the interim bodies that served as the de facto Presidency of the SerBiH in 1992, and functioned as one of the acting presidents of the SerBiH.¹⁰⁴³⁹ Koljević was subsequently elected by the Bosnian Serb Assembly to the three-member RS Presidency on 12 May 1992.¹⁰⁴⁴⁰ As stated above, the Presidency was enlarged to five members and on 6 July 1992, Koljević was allocated the task of international relations as well as information and propaganda-related issues.¹⁰⁴⁴¹ On 17 December 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly replaced the structures of the Presidency by establishing a single president and two vice-presidents of the Republic, electing the Accused to the position of President of the RS and Koljević as one of the Vice-Presidents.¹⁰⁴⁴²

3251. As early as October 1990, in a meeting before Serb representatives in Banja Luka, Koljević identified the purpose of establishing the SDS in furtherance of the unity of the Serb people and the promotion of Serb interests.¹⁰⁴⁴³

3252. The Chamber recalls Koljević’s acknowledgement that the process of re-organising municipalities was with the aim of creating “homogeneity of certain areas” and that he repeatedly called for the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims and the homogeneity of territories, claiming it was impossible for Serbs to live with anyone else.¹⁰⁴⁴⁴ Koljević was particularly extreme in his views and continued to repeat at important meetings that it was impossible for Bosnian Serbs, Muslims, and Croats to live together.¹⁰⁴⁴⁵ Koljević also made a statement at the 34th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly in 1993 about the aim being the “spiritual and moral revitalisation of

See also KDZ240, T. 16116 (5 July 2011) (closed session); P1029 (Witness statement of John Wilson dated 4 November 2008), para. 139 (stating that Koljević tended to be more on the periphery of the Bosnian Serb leadership). However, given this is a personal opinion from Wilson, the Chamber placed no weight on that aspect of his evidence.

Serbhood”.¹⁰⁴⁴⁶ Koljević also discussed his views with the Accused and other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership in private conversations.¹⁰⁴⁴⁷

3253. Koljević was closely involved in negotiations with international representatives.¹⁰⁴⁴⁸ In January 1992, Koljević warned of the danger of an Islamic republic being created.¹⁰⁴⁴⁹ In this regard, Koljević met with Tuđman and noted that they had a common interest of separating people, that an independent BiH did not suit them as it would separate them from their “mother lands”, and that they advocated a sovereign Muslim, Serb, and Croat BiH.¹⁰⁴⁵⁰ At the same meeting, Koljević also suggested that an agency be established to regulate the exchange of property.¹⁰⁴⁵¹ During another meeting related to the ICFY in September 1992, the Accused and Koljević reiterated that the Bosnian Serbs and the Bosnian Croats would not accept a unitary BiH state; a state based on one-man, one-vote.¹⁰⁴⁵²

3254. In April 1992, Koljević proposed that Bogdan Subotić set up a separate Ministry of Defence, which he accepted and thereafter, Subotić started organising and preparing drafts of the Law on Defence and Law on the Army.¹⁰⁴⁵³

3255. In May 1992, Koljević spoke to Bosnian Muslims in Pale and when they asked for guarantees that they could stay in their homes, he replied that “Serbs don’t want to continue living with you here.”¹⁰⁴⁵⁴ Koljević also visited units on the ground and attended meetings in inter alia Bratunac, Foča, Vlasenica, and Pale.¹⁰⁴⁵⁵

I mean, how good the objective we have chosen is” and Koljević and Plavšić further agreed on the idea of separation and the treatment of Bosnian Muslims “with indifference”).

¹⁰⁴⁴⁸ See paras. 2694, 2699–2700, 2703. Koljević and the Accused also discussed such meetings and negotiations with international representatives in private conversations. See, e.g., P5878 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and Nikola Koljević, 27 August 1991), pp. 5–9.

3256. Finally, on 14 March 1995, the Accused issued a decision to form a State Committee for Co-operation with the UN and International Humanitarian Organs, appointing Koljević as its President.¹⁰⁴⁵⁶

(C) Biljana Plavšić

3257. Plavšić was also a member of the SNB, one of the interim bodies that served as the de facto Presidency of the SerBiH in 1992, and functioned as the other acting president of the SerBiH, along with Koljević.¹⁰⁴⁵⁷ Plavšić was subsequently elected by the Bosnian Serb Assembly to the three-member RS Presidency on 12 May 1992.¹⁰⁴⁵⁸ When the Presidency was enlarged to five members on 6 July 1992, Plavšić was allocated the task of, inter alia, dealing with contacts with UNPROFOR, except for military issues, and questions related to refugees and humanitarian aid.¹⁰⁴⁵⁹ Plavšić was in charge of issues related to detention centres, including co-ordinating with the ICRC and other international organisations on this issue.¹⁰⁴⁶⁰ On 17 December 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly replaced the structures of the Presidency by establishing a single president and two vice-presidents of the Republic, electing the Accused to the position of President of the RS and Plavšić as one of the Vice-Presidents.¹⁰⁴⁶¹

3258. The Chamber recalls that Plavšić attended the first session of the Council of Ministers on 11 January 1992, during which the declaration on the promulgation of the SerBiH was discussed, including the priorities of defining the ethnic territory, establishing government organs in the territory, and the economic disempowerment of the current authorities.¹⁰⁴⁶² In another meeting, Plavšić emphasised the unity of the Serb people and their right to self-determination and thereafter continued to make similar speeches emphasising this right.¹⁰⁴⁶³

3259. Plavšić and the Accused communicated about preserving the common state of Yugoslavia and necessary steps to take to further Serb interests.¹⁰⁴⁶⁴ The Chamber recalls that in May 1992,

Plavšić spoke of the entitlement of the Serbs to 70% of the territory and that Bosnian Serbs “were used to living in wide spaces” while Muslims typically lived in cities.¹⁰⁴⁶⁵ Plavšić further stated that “if it takes the lives of 3 million people to solve this crisis, lets get it done and move on”.¹⁰⁴⁶⁶

3260. On 4 April 1992, a commission consisting of Plavšić and Fikret Abdić, among others, as well as high-ranking army officials visited Bijeljina to assess the situation there.¹⁰⁴⁶⁷ Plavšić visited the Bijeljina Serb Crisis Staff and congratulated Arkan for saving the Bosnian Serbs and was filmed kissing and hugging Arkan.¹⁰⁴⁶⁸ When, in the course of the visit, Plavšić asked Arkan to hand over control of Bijeljina to the JNA, he replied that he had not yet finished his “business” there.¹⁰⁴⁶⁹ On 23 April 1992, Plavšić was in contact with Arkan’s men and left a message for him asking whether it was possible for her to visit.¹⁰⁴⁷⁰ Plavšić also asked whether they could “possibly bring the merchandise” and the member of Arkan’s men she spoke with responded “understood, understood”.¹⁰⁴⁷¹

3261. Plavšić openly supported paramilitary units, or “weekend warriors” as she called them, and during a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in November 1992, she openly invited them—including Arkan’s men and the White Eagles—to “send their volunteers to help the defence of the Serbian people in [RS]”.¹⁰⁴⁷² As stated above, Plavšić was an advocate of having all paramilitary units from territories where Serbs lived outside BiH come to assist them and was the “bridge” between Bosnian Serbs and the people who came from other states to assist in the conflict.¹⁰⁴⁷³ Mićo

Stanišić and Plavšić clashed over this issue.¹⁰⁴⁷⁴ According to Mandić, Mićo Stanišić arrested paramilitary units and Plavšić would intercede on their behalf and have them released.¹⁰⁴⁷⁵

3262. The Chamber also recalls that in mid-April 1992, Plavšić visited the Alhos factory in Zvornik and met with Bosnian Serb local leaders, including members of the Zvornik Crisis Staff.¹⁰⁴⁷⁶

3263. In meetings attended by the Accused in May or June 1992, as well as in a television interview in July 1992, Plavšić acknowledged that there were detention facilities run by Bosnian Serbs in BiH, including in Pale, Iliđža, Banja Luka, and Prijedor; however she qualified that those in detention were only able-bodied men of military age who actively participated in “rebellions”, assisted such rebellions, or financed the purchase of weapons.¹⁰⁴⁷⁷

3264. On 7 July 1992, Plavšić was informed in writing that there had been “forced and wilful” efforts to move Bosnian Muslims out of Pale, resulting in a large number of criminal acts.¹⁰⁴⁷⁸ Plavšić was informed by the UN that on 30 September 1992, approximately 300 Bosnian Muslim civilians were expelled by Serbs from the area of Grbavica in Novo Sarajevo; when questioned about the situation, Plavšić deferred any response.¹⁰⁴⁷⁹

3265. In meetings with international representatives, Plavšić openly stated that it was impossible for Bosnian Serbs to co-exist with the other communities, particularly the Bosnian Muslims, and that it was better to separate the communities; she also emphasised the importance of partitioning the territory so that the Serbs would be left in control of a single continuous block of territory.¹⁰⁴⁸⁰

According to Đerić, he never approved of Plavšić’s statements or actions with respect to paramilitaries and Đerić did not consider that this “was the way things should be done”. At a meeting with a delegation from Greece in March 1994, in the presence of Mladić, Plavšić expressed her disapproval of the Accused's appeasement and "diplomatic juggling" displayed at international negotiations.¹⁰⁴⁸¹

(D) Ratko Mladić

3266. The Chamber recalls that Ratko Mladić was appointed Commander of the VRS Main Staff on 12 May 1992, after being selected by the Accused.¹⁰⁴⁸² The Main Staff was the highest operative body of the VRS.¹⁰⁴⁸³

3267. As the Commander of the VRS Main Staff, Mladić commanded the VRS in compliance with the authority that the President delegated to him; he issued regulations, orders, and instructions relating to the implementation of orders that the President had issued.¹⁰⁴⁸⁴ The Accused selected Mladić for this role and promoted him to the rank of Colonel-General on 28 June 1994.¹⁰⁴⁸⁵ Mladić remained in this position throughout the conflict until 8 November 1996.¹⁰⁴⁸⁶

3268. Mladić was in contact with and received instructions from the Accused and Krajišnik.¹⁰⁴⁸⁷ In one conversation in May 1992, Mladić told Krajišnik that he would "stop by to get new instructions [...] So we'll arrange for what we should do next".¹⁰⁴⁸⁸

3269. Mladić was informed of military developments and take-overs throughout the Municipalities, as well as crimes which occurred there, during his time as Commander of the Main Staff. For example, the take-over of Rogatica beginning on or about 22 May 1992 was planned and executed by the SRK and Mladić was informed of it.¹⁰⁴⁸⁹ In May 1992, Mladić was informed that “Foča has been finished” and later in September 1992, that the percentage of Serbs in Foča was 99%.¹⁰⁴⁹⁰ Furthermore, Batković camp was established in Bijeljina following an order from Mladić to set up a camp for “war prisoners” in June 1992.¹⁰⁴⁹¹ On 6 June 1992, Mladić issued an urgent directive to secure communications from Sarajevo to Zvornik and mop up or cleanse the zone of “remaining enemy groups”, also stating that the maltreatment of the unarmed civilian population was prohibited.¹⁰⁴⁹² Mladić was also kept informed of events during the take-over in Vlasenica and was consulted during the armed conflict in Ilidža.¹⁰⁴⁹³

3270. On 1 July 1992, Mladić paid tribute to all members of the VRS for having successfully organised and implemented the co-ordinated “operation for breakthrough, expansion and cleansing of [the] corridor in Bosanska Posavina, between Eastern and Western Bosnia”.¹⁰⁴⁹⁴ Mladić specifically congratulated the units of the Eastern Bosnia Corps and the 1st Krajina Corps for their unified efforts to support the position of the VRS Main Staff to realise its military and political goals for the “preservation of Serbianhood” in BiH.¹⁰⁴⁹⁵

3271. On 3 August 1992, Mladić ordered that inter alia Omarska, Trnopolje, and Manjača be prepared for upcoming visits from foreign journalists and members of the ICRC.¹⁰⁴⁹⁶ Furthermore, in a meeting with Jovi Banjac in September 1992, Mladić was informed that only 5,000 Bosnian Muslims remained in Ključ, and that another 1,500 were leaving on that same day.¹⁰⁴⁹⁷

3272. The Chamber also recalls that in meetings with international representatives, Mladić spoke about the genocide committed against Serbs in World War II in areas including Srebrenica and Sarajevo.¹⁰⁴⁹⁸ Furthermore, the Chamber recalls that Mladić agreed with the Accused when he said in January 1993 that they could not live together with Bosnian Muslims anymore and that therefore Bosnian Muslims would be transferred out of Bosnian Serb territory.¹⁰⁴⁹⁹ Mladić continued to make statements into 1994 about the necessity to fight against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian

Croats to the end that they vanish completely or disappear.¹⁰⁵⁰⁰ Finally, the Chamber recalls the notice Mladić issued to the Main Staff in August 1995 in which, inter alia, he praised the VRS for thwarting “a planned and prepared genocide of the Serbian people, protecting the greater part of Serbian territories, and achieving victory after victory in the liberation of occupied historically and ethnically Serbian areas”.¹⁰⁵⁰¹

3273. The Chamber also recalls that Mladić was involved in defining, adopting, and carrying out the Strategic Goals.¹⁰⁵⁰² Mladić advocated that the actions of the Bosnian Serbs should remain secret and recommended the adoption of a common rhetoric towards the public.¹⁰⁵⁰³ He also stressed the importance of identifying a common enemy and that on this basis, “we must make our move and eliminate them, either temporarily or permanently”.¹⁰⁵⁰⁴ In relation to carrying out the Strategic Goals, the Chamber recalls that Mladić issued important military directives, such as Directive 4 in November 1992 and Directive 5 in June 1993.¹⁰⁵⁰⁵

(E) Slobodan Milošević

3274. Slobodan Milošević was the President of the Republic of Serbia.¹⁰⁵⁰⁶ Milan Babić described Milošević as “the president of all Serbs, not only those in Serbia”¹⁰⁵⁰⁷ and was referred to by Jovica Stanišić as the “main boss”.¹⁰⁵⁰⁸ He had control over the JNA.¹⁰⁵⁰⁹

3275. (vii) developments in Krajina;¹⁰⁵²⁰ and (viii) issues pertaining to recognition of the independence of BiH.¹⁰⁵²¹

3276. The Chamber recalls that from 1990 and into mid-1991, the political objective of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership was to preserve Yugoslavia and to prevent the separation or independence of BiH, which would result in a separation of Bosnian Serbs from Serbia; the Chamber notes that Slobodan Milošević endorsed this objective and spoke against the independence of BiH.¹⁰⁵²²

3277. The Chamber found that based on a conversation between the Accused and Milošević on 24 October 1991, it was also clear that Slobodan Milošević was attempting to take a more cautious approach while the Accused was adamant that the goal of the Bosnian Serb leadership was to ensure that they would establish full authority in their territories and that they would announce their own Bosnian Serb Assembly.¹⁰⁵²³ The Chamber also found that while Milošević expressed reservations about excluding Bosnian Muslims, the Accused was adamant that there were not even 10% of Bosnian Muslims who supported Yugoslavia and that they could not take such a risk.¹⁰⁵²⁴

3278. The Chamber recalls that in December 1991, Milošević told the Accused that he should not give in to Izetbegović and that they had to stick to their line and that “if they want to fight, we’ll fight” given that the Serbs were stronger.¹⁰⁵²⁵ They also spoke about the unconstitutional nature of the decision changing the status of BiH.¹⁰⁵²⁶

3279. On 26 December 1991, the Accused and Krajišnik spoke about their political strategies and the issues of sovereignty in BiH, regionalisation, and their mutual disappointment with Slobodan Milošević.¹⁰⁵²⁷ The Accused in this regard stated that they would have to pursue their own policy even if it meant “splitting with Milošević”.¹⁰⁵²⁸ In January 1992, Milošević told the Accused in an intercepted phone conversation that he would not describe the Accused as one of his “satellites”.¹⁰⁵²⁹

3280. In March 1992, in a meeting with international representatives, Slobodan Milošević described the situation in BiH as similar to “dynamite”, and if anyone favoured one of the parties, there would be hell but he had called the Accused and told him to “cool it”.¹⁰⁵³⁰ Milošević also said that Yugoslavia hoped for intensive links with BiH.¹⁰⁵³¹ Later in the war, in meetings with international representatives, Milošević also made assurances that he would speak to the Bosnian Serbs, that he continued to condemn “ethnic cleansing” but that the world was “satanizing” the Serbs without condemning actions by the other parties.¹⁰⁵³²

3281. Beginning in 1992, Slobodan Milošević was informed by international representatives about the expulsion of Muslims in BiH; he responded that everything that would happen in BiH would be horrendous and the responsibility for these acts remained with those who decided to separate BiH and that he had no authority as far as the Bosnian Serbs were concerned.¹⁰⁵³³ In September 1992, in meetings with international representatives, leaders of the FRY expressed the view that the international representatives were justified in asking them to pressure the Accused.¹⁰⁵³⁴

3282. The Accused in September 1992 acknowledged the support given by “leading figures both in Serbia and in Yugoslavia” who strongly supported the Bosnian Serbs in achieving their goal, even if it was temporarily within BiH, but on the condition that the Bosnian Serbs defined “the borders towards the Muslims and Croats”.¹⁰⁵³⁵ By January 1993, deputies in the Bosnian Serb

Assembly called on Slobodan Milošević and the Serbian people to do more to help their brothers in the RS.¹⁰⁵³⁶

3283. In May 1993, Slobodan Milošević addressed the Bosnian Serb Assembly and confirmed the solidarity of Serbia with the Bosnian Serbs but stressed that the assembly should accept the Vance-Owen Plan to avoid the disastrous consequences of the war continuing.¹⁰⁵³⁷ He acknowledged that the war had been imposed on the Serbs who simply defended themselves.¹⁰⁵³⁸ On this point, the Accused disagreed and stated that he felt deceived by Milošević and explained that the Vance-Owen Plan was catastrophic for the Serbs, that they would live in enclaves and areas like Zvornik would be “Turkish”, and that there was a danger that they would be bombed whether or not they signed.¹⁰⁵³⁹

3285. In October 1993, Perišić discussed personnel issues related to officers from the FRY who had been engaged in the VRS and there was discussion of whether the FRY should pull out their personnel from the RS.¹⁰⁵⁴³ At this meeting, Slobodan Milošević said that “Mladić needs to come here so that we can hear what he has to say”.¹⁰⁵⁴⁴

3286. The Chamber recalls that Slobodan Milošević attended a meeting held at the Presidency of Serbia on 8 November 1993, with among others, the Accused, Krajišnik, Martić, Mladić, and Perišić, where the following common objectives were discussed: (i) unconditionally strengthen the integrity of Serbia, (ii) set up the RS as a completely independent state; and (iii) ensure Serbs have complete power in the Krajina.¹⁰⁵⁴⁵

3287. At a meeting in December 1993, with Slobodan Milošević, Jovica Stanišić and others, the Accused stated that the end of the conflict was close and that the Bosnian Serbs were holding 75% of the territory; he acknowledged that some of this territory would have to be returned as the international community would not allow it.¹⁰⁵⁴⁶ The Accused listed the Strategic Goals at this meeting.¹⁰⁵⁴⁷ This meeting was convened to improve the “operational and tactical position” of the Bosnian Serbs and to discuss help from Serbia.¹⁰⁵⁴⁸ Milošević agreed with a proposal from Mladić and suggested that “the operation” should be planned and the forces prepared but only following negotiations in Brussels.¹⁰⁵⁴⁹ He also promised to provide fuel supplies from the state reserves for the operations.¹⁰⁵⁵⁰ Milošević offered further assistance, stating that Perišić will “give everything that does not jeopardise combat readiness of units” in Serbia.¹⁰⁵⁵¹ Perišić further stated that they would help with weapons while Jovica Stanišić spoke about a special combat group which could be deployed;¹⁰⁵⁵² these units included the Red Berets and Arkan’s men.¹⁰⁵⁵³ The following day, continuing the meeting, Stanišić and Perišić confirmed that that they would provide manpower of a few hundred men.¹⁰⁵⁵⁴

3288. At a meeting in Belgrade on 15 March 1994 attended by Jovića Stanišić, Martić, Mladić, and the Accused, Slobodan Milošević stated that “[a]ll members of other nations and ethnicities must be protected” and that “[t]he national interest of the Serbs is not discrimination”.¹⁰⁵⁵⁵

3289. International observers noted that Milošević had a dominant influence over the Bosnian Serb leadership and played a role in convincing them to accept certain proposals during international negotiations.¹⁰⁵⁵⁶ However, by July 1994, there were rifts in the relationship between the RS and Serbia, and Slobodan Milošević complained about criticisms directed against Serbia.¹⁰⁵⁵⁷ In private meetings, Milošević was extremely angry at the Bosnian Serb leadership for rejecting the Vance-Owen Plan and he cursed the Accused.¹⁰⁵⁵⁸

3290. The Chamber notes that while originally Milošević had similar interests to those as the Bosnian Serbs, when their interests diverged, his influence over the Bosnian Serb leaders also reduced.¹⁰⁵⁵⁹ Milošević also questioned whether the world would accept that the Bosnian Serbs who represented only one third of the population of BiH would get more than 50% of the territory and he encouraged a political agreement.¹⁰⁵⁶⁰ He stated that the Serbs had won the war, and that there were “hardly any” Bosnian Muslims in RS.¹⁰⁵⁶¹ By August 1994, leaders in Serbia criticised Bosnian Serb leaders of committing “crimes against humanity” and continuing “ethnic cleansing” and the war for their own purposes.¹⁰⁵⁶²

3291. At a meeting held on 22 August 1994 between Slobodan Milošević and Akashi, it was clear to Akashi that Milošević’s break with the Accused was “serious” and stemmed from differences that arose over a long period of time.¹⁰⁵⁶³ Milošević gave the impression that he was “a politician who is more in command of the overall situation” while the Accused was “a local leader wrapped up in the emotions of an ongoing civil war”.¹⁰⁵⁶⁴ At the meeting, Milošević made it clear that there was a difference of views emerging in the Bosnian Serb leadership on the execution of the war.¹⁰⁵⁶⁵ Specifically, Milošević stated that Krajina Serbs were well aware that a solution based on negotiations was the only way out and this is why they had not accepted the Accused's suggestion to merge with the RS.¹⁰⁵⁶⁶

3292. Given the difference of opinion between the Bosnian Serb and the Serbian leaderships, in 1993 and 1994, the FRY reduced its support for the RS and encouraged the Bosnian Serbs to accept peace proposals.¹⁰⁵⁶⁷ In this regard the FRY leadership was on notice about some of the extreme views held by the Bosnian Serb leadership and they could not support those views, including with respect to ethnic cleansing.¹⁰⁵⁶⁸

3293. During a meeting held on 20 September 1994 with Mladić, Perišić, and others, Milošević stressed that there had been a break between Pale and Serbia and reminded them that Serbian policy was defined in Belgrade, not Pale.¹⁰⁵⁶⁹ He declared that the war must end and that the Bosnian Serbs' biggest mistake was to want a complete defeat of the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁰⁵⁷⁰ During the course of this meeting, Milošević further expressed his disapproval of the Bosnian Serb leadership's disunity from the Bosnian Serbs in Krajina, stating that "the crazy doctor may think that Serbia must toady up to him—it's not going to happen".¹⁰⁵⁷¹

3294. By November 1994, Perišić noted that the Bosnian Serbs accounted for 20% of the population but held more than 70% of the territory which, in his view, was unsustainable; however, according to Perišić, the Bosnian Serbs wanted "to preserve this at all cost", but loss of territory was inevitable.¹⁰⁵⁷² Slobodan Milošević referred to the Accused's belief that they could "wage an infinite war and they won't give up on anything".¹⁰⁵⁷³ Milošević noted however that "our biggest advantage is that the territories, which are to be allocated to Serbs by the peace plan, are already in the Serbian hands so that nobody has to be removed from them".¹⁰⁵⁷⁴ He also explained that when they tried to convince the Accused and Krajišnik that they would be forced to do certain things, they replied that it was better to be forced than to accept.¹⁰⁵⁷⁵ Milošević noted that the Bosnian Serb political leadership would “sacrifice many lives in order to preserve their vanity and to prove that they are not the ones who accepted the peace plan because a half of BiH is too little for them”.¹⁰⁵⁷⁶ He spoke about the Bosnian Serbs wanting to take even more territory by force even while they already controlled half of BiH and described this as “complete madness”.¹⁰⁵⁷⁷

3295. Milošević tried to reason with the Bosnian Serbs saying that he understood their concerns, but that it was most important to end the war and that they would achieve any objectives denied them by the plan when peace talks resumed.¹⁰⁵⁷⁸ When the RS did not accept this plan, Milošević imposed a blockade on the Drina River and suspended political and economic relations with the Bosnian Serb leadership; Milošević even wanted to remove the leaders from Pale and have them replaced by exerting influence on the deputies and the Bosnian Assembly.¹⁰⁵⁷⁹

3296. By May 1995, it appeared to international representatives that the split between Slobodan Milošević and the Accused was complete.¹⁰⁵⁸⁰ At a 3 May 1995 meeting with Milošević, Milinović, Akashi, Banbury, and Kirudja, among others, Milošević stated: “I have good personal relations with Mladić. However, as long as Karadžić and Krajišnik are there, they will not accept a peaceful solution.”¹⁰⁵⁸¹ Kirudja observed that Slobodan Milošević still exerted influence over officials in the RS and RSK, including Mladić.¹⁰⁵⁸² This influence appeared to vary over time, but Kirudja was under the impression that Milošević considered Mladić to be loyal to him even after ¹⁰⁵⁸¹ P3804 (Witness statement of Charles Kirudja dated 17 November 2010), para. 145. The Chamber notes that from the context of the conversation, Milošević is referring to the Bosnian Serbs when he said “they”.

the relations between Belgrade and Pale deteriorated.¹⁰⁵⁸³ Milošević also criticised Martić, and Kirudja noted that the Accused and Martić were aligned at the time.¹⁰⁵⁸⁴ According to Kirudja, Milošević seemed to be “playing his usual game of switching his support for RSK leaders as the situation best suited his aims at the moment” and that Milošević’s control over RSK or RS officials seemed to vary with time, depending on events in the region.¹⁰⁵⁸⁵ When Martić aligned himself with the Accused, both Martić and the Accused fell out of favour with Milošević.¹⁰⁵⁸⁶

3297. In November 1995, Slobodan Milošević addressed the Supreme Defence Council of the FRY, spoke about the leadership in Pale being the biggest obstacle to solving the problems in BiH, and criticised them for rejecting plans for the territorial division of BiH.¹⁰⁵⁸⁷ Milošević told the Bosnian Serb leadership that they were not entitled to have more than half the territory in BiH, stating that there is no way that more than that could belong to us! Because, we represent one third of the population. [...] We are not entitled to in excess of half of the territory – you must not snatch away something that belongs to someone else! [...] How can you imagine two thirds of the population being crammed into 30% of the territory, while 50% is too little for you?! Is it humane, is it fair?!

(F) Mićo Stanišić

3298. Mićo Stanišić was a member of the Preparatory Committee that established the SDS.¹⁰⁵⁸⁹ He was also a member of the Council of Ministers and the SNB.¹⁰⁵⁹⁰ On 24 March 1992, Mićo Stanišić was appointed Minister of the MUP.¹⁰⁵⁹¹ Stanišić served in this position until the end of December 1992 when he was relieved of his duties by the Bosnian Serb leadership, specifically at the request of Plavšić and Koljević.¹⁰⁵⁹² Stanišić went to Belgrade until he was appointed by the Accused again as Minister of the Bosnian Serb MUP during an interim six month period between January and July 1994.¹⁰⁵⁹³

3299. Mićo Stanišić was considered to be in the top leadership of the RS and had a very close relationship with the Accused, as well as his support.¹⁰⁵⁹⁴ According to Branko Đerić, Mićo Stanišić and Mandić were the “President’s men” and Stanišić took orders directly from the Accused.¹⁰⁵⁹⁵ Stanišić also reported to the Accused.¹⁰⁵⁹⁶

3300. The Chamber refers to Section IV.A.3.a.ii.C regarding the split in the MUP and the creation of a Bosnian Serb MUP and Mićo Stanišić’s involvement therein.¹⁰⁵⁹⁷ It recalls that the ultimate split in the MUP structures was precipitated by a decision by the Bosnian Serb leadership which formed part of their decision to create a separate Bosnian Serb state with parallel structures. Mićo Stanišić was involved in the decision making and promulgation of this idea from as early as February 1992, where he spoke of the need to work towards organising a Bosnian Serb MUP starting at the municipal and regional levels and moving towards a Serb ministry.¹⁰⁵⁹⁸ The Chamber also found that the creation of a separate Bosnian Serb MUP was a means of undermining the proposed independence of BiH. Finally, the Chamber found that the directives with respect to the division of the MUP structures and the creation of the Bosnian Serb MUP were communicated to and implemented at a municipal level and were a crucial step in the take-over of the

Municipalities, as it created a structure which would allow Bosnian Serb authority to be maintained through a separate police structure.¹⁰⁵⁹⁹

3301. Furthermore, the Chamber recalls that Mićo Stanišić also ordered that CSB heads were allowed to take-over the employees from the former MUP and assign jobs within the CSBs and SJBs, however, they had to inform the Minister of the Interior of all such decisions.¹⁰⁶⁰⁰ Furthermore, all heads of CSB were required to obtain prior approval from the MUP before assigning posts at the higher levels, such as the head of the SJBs.¹⁰⁶⁰¹ In addition, on 15 May 1992, Stanišić issued an order formalising the co-operation of the Bosnian Serb MUP and VRS, such that MUP personnel would be organised into war units and re-subordinated to the VRS during their participation in combat activities.¹⁰⁶⁰²

3302. In April 1992, Davidović was sent with others from Belgrade to help set up the Bosnian Serb MUP and to establish a special purpose unit under the direction of Mićo Stanišić.¹⁰⁶⁰³ Those who went to assist the Bosnian Serb MUP were to act with Bosnian Serb MUP IDs in order to conceal their identity and the fact that the FRY was assisting in the war.¹⁰⁶⁰⁴ On arrival in Pale, Davidović reported to and then met with Mićo Stanišić and Mandić.¹⁰⁶⁰⁵ Also, surplus weapons from the Federal SUP were sent to the Bosnian Serb MUP and were controlled by Mićo Stanišić and Momčilo Mandić.¹⁰⁶⁰⁶ These weapons were transported from Belgrade to Pale in JNA helicopters in around April 1992 and consisted of uniforms, flak jackets, and automatic weapons.¹⁰⁶⁰⁷

The Chamber recalls that Davidović was later tasked to lead a special unit of the Federal SUP to address problems with paramilitaries in northeastern BiH and arrived in Bijeljina on 27 June 1992; while Davidović's unit came from the Federal SUP in Belgrade it was re-subordinated to the command of the Bosnian Serb MUP. But see D3695 (Witness statement of Bogdan Subotić dated 16 June 2013), paras. 18, 67. The Chamber notes that Subotić's evidence was marked by evasiveness and bias which undermined his credibility. The Chamber therefore does not rely on his evidence that no arms came from outside to arm the Bosnian Serbs and that he was not aware of any organised arming in the first year of the war. The Chamber does find, however, that the Accused proposed that Subotić be promoted for his organisation of the arming and training of Bosnian Serbs in RS for their "defence and survival" particularly in relation to attacks from Croatia. D3704 (Radovan Karadžić's clarification

3303. In Bijeljina, the Chief of the Bijeljina SJB reported to Mićo Stanišić on the situation in the municipality, and an almost daily reporting system was operating between the Bijeljina CSB and the Bosnian Serb MUP.¹⁰⁶⁰⁸ The Chamber recalls that Mićo Stanišić informed Milorad Davidović that Arkan's forces were in Zvornik and Bijeljina and "helping to liberate territory [that] they believed should become part of [the RS]".¹⁰⁶⁰⁹ In addition, Mićo Stanišić was informed that Arkan's men had taken over the Bijeljina SUP, and Stanišić commented that he knew, that nothing else could be done, and that's "how it ha[d] to be".¹⁰⁶¹⁰ In April or May 1992, after Arkan entered Bijeljina, the Accused met with Krajišnik, Mićo Stanišić, Frenki Simatović, Arkan, Pero Mihajlović, and Davidović in Belgrade to discuss "further activities" of the SDB.¹⁰⁶¹¹

3304. At the end of May 1992, Bosnian Serb leaders from Zvornik informed Mićo Stanišić and Mandić about the situation in the municipality, including the actions of the paramilitaries.¹⁰⁶¹² Mićo Stanišić was also informed in May 1992 about the situation in Ilidža, and in particular, that they had received reinforcements which included "Arkanovci and Šešeljevci" to which Stanišić responded: "Good".¹⁰⁶¹³ In June 1992, the Accused received a report on the combat situation in Ilidža from Mićo Stanišić and the Accused instructed him "don't hurry, just proceed according to your plan".¹⁰⁶¹⁴

3305. In an interview in October 1992, Mićo Stanišić stressed that the Bosnian Serb MUP assisted the VRS in combat operations, yet at the beginning of the conflict, the "burden of defence was borne by the police" and due to its organisation and dedication, "we established most of our borders, exactly like what they look like today".¹⁰⁶¹⁵ Finally, during an Assembly meeting in November 1992, Stanišić affirmed his allegiance to the Accused and the SDS stating that he had always followed the policies of the SDS Presidency and he would not allow himself to be separated from them.¹⁰⁶¹⁶

(G) Momčilo Mandić

3306. Momčilo Mandić was the Deputy Minister of the Bosnian Serb MUP between 1991 and May 1992, and was then appointed the first RS Minister of Justice from May to November 1992.¹⁰⁶¹⁷ Mandić left his position and went to Belgrade in November 1992 due to a conflict with Plavšić and Koljević.¹⁰⁶¹⁸

3307. All decisions relating to staffing policies at the Bosnian Serb MUP required Mandić's approval and he consulted with the Accused and regional leaders in selecting candidates.¹⁰⁶¹⁹ Mandić worked with the support and approval of the Accused.¹⁰⁶²⁰

3308. The Chamber refers to Section IV.A.3.a.ii.C regarding the split in the MUP and creation of a Bosnian Serb MUP and Mandić's involvement therein.¹⁰⁶²¹ The Chamber found that Mandić took a leading role in ensuring that this division was carried out at a municipal level and in detailing how the new Bosnian Serb MUP was to be structured.¹⁰⁶²²

3309. Through the Ministry of Justice, Mandić was given the responsibility for the exchange of detainees through the Central Commission for the Exchange of Prisoners of War and Arrested Persons established by the Bosnian Serb Government on 8 May 1992.¹⁰⁶²³ Mandić was directly involved in organising the exchange of detainees.¹⁰⁶²⁴

¹⁰⁶²¹ The Chamber also recalls that Mandić and the Accused discussed the preparations for the creation of a separate Bosnian Serb MUP early on. See para. 2971 (referring to P5806 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and Momčilo Mandić, 3 December 1991), p. 2).

¹⁰⁶²² See paras. 2990.

¹⁰⁶²³ See paras. 124–128. In June 1992, Mandić spoke to Krajišnik about criticism they had received about prisoner exchanges, and the fact that they were holding 400 prisoners at Kula Prison. See also P1129 (Letter from BIH Commission for Exchange of POWs to Central Commission for Exchange of Persons, undated).

¹⁰⁶²⁴ See paras. 2111, 2160, 2417. In August 1992, Mandić and a Serb journalist visited Planjo's House in Vogošća, and were asked by one of the detainees about possible exchanges; Mandić replied that there was no need for any 3310. Mandić was advised about Bosnian Muslims being driven out of Ilidža in May 1992 and he further informed Prstojević that he was aware that Prstojević was issuing ultimatums to Bosnian Muslims and evicting them from settlements.¹⁰⁶²⁵ In a conversation with Prstojević in June 1992, Mandić said:

It has come to our attention and that of the Government that you are issuing ultimatums to some Turks; evicting people from certain settlements and people respond badly to it [...] Well please do not do anything like it, consult with Đerić first and those people up there, because this is very bad publicity for us [...] You have to be a little bit more flexible there and not touch those Muslims who are willing to listen and who are loyal. We cannot ethnically cleanse Ilidža or any other place. At least that is the attitude of the Government and political leadership and all.¹⁰⁶²⁶

Mandić continues and says that they should “place two or three Muslims somewhere” so that they could say that they were employing everyone who was loyal to the Serb state, regardless of nationality.¹⁰⁶²⁷ The Chamber finds that it is clear from this conversation that what was important to the Bosnian Serb authorities was maintaining a certain appearance regarding what was said in public, rather than the protection of the non-Serbs.

3311. Mandić was also aware that the Crisis Staffs used detainees for forced labour, including digging trenches and fortifying barracks on the frontlines.¹⁰⁶²⁸ He was involved in providing detainees from Kula Prison and Planjo’s House to perform forced labour in Ilidža and Vogošća.¹⁰⁶²⁹

(H) Jovica Stanišić

3312. Jovica Stanišić was the head of the SDB, which was part of the Serbian MUP.¹⁰⁶³⁰

3313. Stanišić and the Accused were in regular contact and discussed and co-ordinated a number of issues including political and military developments in BiH and Croatia.¹⁰⁶³¹ There was also co-

Jovica Stanišić was opposed to the multi-ethnic character of the Federal SUP and was of the view that its role could be handled by the Serbian MUP. P2848 (Witness statement of Milorad Davidović dated 22 June 2011), para. 38. The Chamber recalls that Davidović was tasked to lead a special unit of the Federal SUP and while Davidović’s unit came from the Federal SUP in Belgrade it was re-subordinated to the command in RS MUP. ordination pertaining to the involvement of the JNA¹⁰⁶³² and recruiting volunteers.¹⁰⁶³³ Stanišić also liaised between the Accused and Slobodan Milošević.¹⁰⁶³⁴

3314. In May 1991, the Accused met with Jovica Stanišić and others including Franko Simatović at the Accused's apartment in Sarajevo, where among other issues they discussed maps of BiH.¹⁰⁶³⁵ The Accused and Jovica Stanišić were also involved in creating an account which could be used for "fictitious payments" relating to weapons and ammunition which had been procured in FRY for the RS and which evaded the embargo.¹⁰⁶³⁶ Stanišić told the Accused in November 1991 that he hoped to have a chance to work with him.¹⁰⁶³⁷ On 4 December 1991, Jovica Stanišić asked the Accused when he should send "men", to which the Accused responded, "[a]s soon as possible".¹⁰⁶³⁸

3315. Jovica Stanišić invited Arkan to visit the Serbian MUP and Arkan called Stanišić directly occasionally.¹⁰⁶³⁹ Jovica Stanišić attended meetings with the Accused, Slobodan Milošević, and others throughout the conflict to discuss providing assistance from Serbia to the Bosnian Serbs, including in the form of personnel, such as units of the Red Berets and Arkan's men.¹⁰⁶⁴⁰ According to Davidović, the Pale authorities, which included the Accused, Krajišnik, Mićo Stanišić, and Mladić, consulted the authorities in Belgrade—Slobodan Milošević, Jovica Stanišić, and later Perišić—“about everything”; this was “common knowledge as they did not have enough resources of their own”.¹⁰⁶⁴¹

3316. Stanišić spoke about the possibility of an all-out war and that they would “exterminate them completely”.¹⁰⁶⁴² In 1994, Stanišić told RSK MUP officials that he supported the objective to “fight to achieve the common goals of all the Serbian lands”.¹⁰⁶⁴³

3317. The authorities in Serbia were also involved in establishing multiple training camps for Bosnian Serbs including special police units of the RS and a camp run by Captain Dragan.¹⁰⁶⁴⁴ The Accused supported the work of these training camps.¹⁰⁶⁴⁵

(I) Franko Simatović

3318. Franko Simatović, also known as “Frenki”, served under Jovica Stanišić in the SDB, as part of the Serbian MUP.¹⁰⁶⁴⁶ The Chamber recalls that units such as the Red Berets and Arkan’s men were directly subordinated to the Serbian MUP and to Franko Simatović.¹⁰⁶⁴⁷

3319. In a conversation on 28 January 1992 with the Accused regarding plans to meet, Simatović told the Accused: “You’re the main man there doctor, and that’s how it stays”.¹⁰⁶⁴⁸ As stated above, Simatović also attended the meeting in April or May 1992 with the Accused, Mićo Stanišić, Arkan, and others to discuss “further activities” of the SDB.¹⁰⁶⁴⁹

3320. Simatović was also responsible for monitoring the training of Serb Forces, including units trained in camps run by Captain Dragan.¹⁰⁶⁵⁰

(J) Željko Ražnatović (Arkan)

3321. Željko Ražnatović, also known as Arkan, was the commander of a Serbian paramilitary group named after him.¹⁰⁶⁵¹

3322. Arkan's men were involved in operations in Bijeljina, Bratunac, Brčko, Rogatica, Sokolac, Vlasenica, Zvornik, Ilidža, and Pale in spring of 1992.¹⁰⁶⁵² Arkan himself was personally involved in the take-over operations in Bijeljina and Zvornik.¹⁰⁶⁵³ Arkan also trained members of the Mauzer's Panthers who operated in Bijeljina, Zvornik, and Brčko.¹⁰⁶⁵⁴

3323. The Chamber recalls that after successfully taking over Bijeljina on 4 April 1992, Arkan was welcomed there and "treated like a god"; some of his men were given official positions and based themselves in the local SDS building.¹⁰⁶⁵⁵ The Chamber recalls that Plavšić was in communication with Arkan beginning in April 1992.¹⁰⁶⁵⁶ She congratulated Arkan for saving the Bosnian Serbs in Bijeljina and was filmed kissing and hugging him.¹⁰⁶⁵⁷

3324. Arkan's men were also involved in killings of Bosnian Muslim civilians in Bijeljina and Zvornik in April 1992.¹⁰⁶⁵⁸ Arkan's men and Mauzer's Panthers were also involved in mistreating Bosnian Muslims in Bijeljina, Bratunac, Rogatica, Vlasenica, Zvornik, and Hadžići, including in detention centres; these units also looted property of Bosnian Muslims and were involved in expelling Bosnian Muslims from Bijeljina and Zvornik after the take-overs in those municipalities.¹⁰⁶⁵⁹

3325. Arkan attended meetings and had direct contact with the Accused.¹⁰⁶⁶⁰ As noted above, Arkan wrote to the Accused in 1994 to inform him that his men supported the Accused's "heroic resistance" against NATO and that "[a]s always we, with all our available forces, stand to protect Serbian people" and that they were expecting the Accused's call to join the VRS to "protect Serbian nationality and Orthodoxy".¹⁰⁶⁶¹ In the autumn of 1995, at an event in Bijeljina, Arkan repeated his commitment to the Accused to return to defend the "Serbian territory and our Orthodox religion" if called by the Accused.¹⁰⁶⁶² On this occasion, the Accused awarded Arkan a certificate to congratulate him and thank him and his unit for their efforts in defending the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁰⁶⁶³

(K) Vojislav Šešelj

3326. Šešelj was the leader of the SRS and of the "Serbian Chetnik Movement".¹⁰⁶⁶⁴ In May 1991, Šešelj praised the Accused as "the true leader of the Serbian people" in BiH, stating further that he enjoyed their "undivided trust" and that the SRS supported the policies of the SDS.¹⁰⁶⁶⁵ Šešelj stated that BiH was fundamentally Serbian and that either Muslim fundamentalists should leave or the Muslims should accept this and become loyal citizens of Serbia.¹⁰⁶⁶⁶ Also in May 1991, the Accused in an interview spoke of Šešelj and his "political force" but said that they differed in terms of the choice of method.¹⁰⁶⁶⁷

3327. Šešelj met with the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership on several occasions during the war in BiH.¹⁰⁶⁶⁸ In May 1992, Šešelj spoke about contacting the Accused with respect to the withdrawal and deployment of his men.¹⁰⁶⁶⁹ Šešelj sent large groups of SRS volunteer fighters from Serbia to assist in Serb operations in Croatia and BiH.¹⁰⁶⁷⁰ Šešelj acknowledged that his men were in BiH and were in all areas for the “protection of the Serbian people” and the defence of their borders.¹⁰⁶⁷¹ Slobodan Milošević approved of the SRS’s action in sending volunteers.¹⁰⁶⁷²

3328. Šešelj’s men were involved in operations in Bratunac, Zvornik, Hadžići, Novo Sarajevo Vogošća, Brčko, and Rogatica in April and May 1992.¹⁰⁶⁷³ Furthermore, Šešelj made public statements about the participation of SRS volunteers in the take-over of Bijeljina and specifically the significant contribution of Mirko Blagojević as the commander of the SRS units to the “liberation” of Bijeljina.¹⁰⁶⁷⁴ In May 1993, Šešelj proclaimed Mirko Blagojević a “Vojvoda” in recognition of his participation in operations in municipalities including Bijeljina.¹⁰⁶⁷⁵

3329. The SRS and Šešelj advocated the idea of a homogeneous Greater Serbia which involved the unification of all Serb lands and the removal of the non-Serb population.¹⁰⁶⁷⁶ In March 1992, Šešelj spoke about the prospect of great bloodshed in BiH and called upon the Bosnian Serbs to preserve all their ethnic areas.¹⁰⁶⁷⁷ In a speech, Šešelj said that the “Muslims and Croats do not represent a threat for us for a long time already. Only, brothers and sisters Serbs, there should not be hesitating, waiting [...] the next time they strike, we should finish them off, so they never strike back”.¹⁰⁶⁷⁸ Šešelj also spoke about BiH being undoubtedly Serbian, and that if “any Muslim

In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered that Šešelj had a clear self-interest in testifying in this regard and his evidence was marked by political statements which undermined his credibility in this regard.

3330. In May 1992, Šešelj spoke about the “traditional enemies” of the Serbs and the need for them to be united to prevent a “new genocide against the Serbian people” and of the revenge Serbs would take against Muslims if they repeated history again.¹⁰⁶⁸⁰ Šešelj, on behalf of the SRS, also expressed his support for the formation of the SerBiH and his view that the Bosnian Serb authorities should demarcate Serb territory, proclaim its own TO and police in territories under its control, and simultaneously “liberate” those areas which were not under Serb control.¹⁰⁶⁸¹

v. Accused’s knowledge of crimes and measures he took to prevent and punish them

(A) Knowledge of crimes committed throughout the Municipalities

3331. The Prosecution argues that from the beginning of the conflict in 1992, the Accused was notified of crimes committed against non-Serbs in the Municipalities by Serb Forces.¹⁰⁶⁸² The Accused acknowledges that he received information from the VRS, the MUP, and municipal bodies but argues that the information rarely referred to illegal activities at the local level, and when it did, the Bosnian Serb leadership reacted immediately.¹⁰⁶⁸³

3332. At the outset, the Chamber notes that the Accused received information about occurrences in the Municipalities from a number of sources. As President of the RS, he received reports and attended Bosnian Serb Assembly sessions where representatives would report on the situation in their municipalities.¹⁰⁶⁸⁴ He also met regularly with municipal representatives and obtained reports in this manner.¹⁰⁶⁸⁵ His close associates also regularly visited the field and communicated with municipal leaders.¹⁰⁶⁸⁶ Furthermore, the Bosnian Serb leadership followed international coverage of the events in BiH during the conflict.¹⁰⁶⁸⁷ Finally, the Chamber notes that from the beginning of the conflict in 1992, the Accused was informed by international representatives, such as Okun, Mazowiecki, and UNPROFOR officials of the forcible displacement of non-Serb civilians¹⁰⁶⁸⁸ and that the issue of “ethnic cleansing” was also often raised with the Accused in media interviews.¹⁰⁶⁸⁹ The Chamber will assess below the evidence pertaining to the information that the Accused received about specific municipalities.

3333. In relation to Bijeljina, when at least 45 non-Serb civilians were killed by Serb Forces on 1 and 2 April 1992 the Accused was informed of the event.¹⁰⁶⁹⁰ On 4 April 1992, members of the BiH presidency and high ranking army officials assessed the situation in Bijeljina municipality,¹⁰⁶⁹¹ and the Accused made a public announcement referring to the “regrettable” incidents in Bijeljina but blamed the BiH Presidency for instigating chaos by calling for mobilisation.¹⁰⁶⁹²

3334. At a meeting of the Bosnian Serb Presidency on 23 June 1992, the Accused expressed his view that Mauzer and Blagojević’s paramilitary units, which were active in Bijeljina, were very extreme, and that all units should be placed under a single command of the army or the police.¹⁰⁶⁹³ Meanwhile, at a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in late June 1992, the Accused said that the Bosnian Muslims who continued to live in Bijeljina, forming 20% of the population, were not considered “second class citizens” and that the government officials were actually trying to persuade them that they had nothing to fear.¹⁰⁶⁹⁴ The Chamber recalls that in fact during the summer of 1992, Serb Forces instilled fear in the Bosnian Muslims who remained in Bijeljina and that Bosnian Muslims were forcibly expelled from Bijeljina by members of the Bijeljina Crisis Staff, SDS, Mauzer’s unit, special police units, and Vojkan Đurković, while others were sent to Batković camp.¹⁰⁶⁹⁵

3335. The Accused was later informed by the Bijeljina SJB on 29 July 1992 about the criminal behaviour of paramilitary groups during and after the take-over of Bijeljina, which resulted in rapes, thefts, robberies, killings, and the displacement of Bosnian Muslim and Serb civilians.¹⁰⁶⁹⁶ Živan Filipović, former chief of the Bijeljina Municipal TO Staff, testified that the Accused and Mladić attempted to “shake off these paramilitary formations which only caused damage, both to the people and the army and the political sphere”.¹⁰⁶⁹⁷ After the Accused complained to the Prime Minister of the FRY that Serbian paramilitaries were out of control, Davidović was sent to Bijeljina in early July 1992 to investigate the situation.¹⁰⁶⁹⁸ Moreover, on 2 September 1992 the Accused was among the attendees who participated in a meeting with military and political officials in Bijeljina.¹⁰⁶⁹⁹ The Accused acknowledged that the chief of the party, the MUP and the president of the municipality had been involved in crime “here and there”.¹⁰⁷⁰⁰

3336. In relation to Zvornik, Colm Doyle passed on information to the Accused that he received from Martin Bell of the BBC that on 10 April 1992, 25,000 people were leaving the municipality.¹⁰⁷⁰¹ The Accused “seemed to be a little bit alarmed” and then advised Doyle that he did not trust or believe the BBC.¹⁰⁷⁰² At a mid-April 1992 meeting with international humanitarian organisations and members of the SDS and JNA, the Accused placed the blame for events in Zvornik on irregular paramilitaries who he claimed were not under the control of the SDS.¹⁰⁷⁰³ At a meeting held on 30 June 1992 between representatives of the Zvornik municipality, the Accused, Mladić and other officials,¹⁰⁷⁰⁴ Branko Grujić, a representative of the Interim Government of Zvornik, stated that “[w]e have successfully implemented the President’s decision to settle Divič and Kozluk with our children.”¹⁰⁷⁰⁵ Marko Pavlović said that they were active in moving out Muslims, and had also moved people for the sake of their “heroes” who had fled from Kovačevići.¹⁰⁷⁰⁶ The Chamber recalls that in fact, most of the inhabitants of Divič and Kozluk

In this regard, the Chamber recalls that following the attack on Zvornik by the Bosnian Serb Forces on 8 April 1992, approximately 10,000 people, the majority of whom were Bosnian Muslim, left Zvornik. See paras. 1250, 1360.

Branko Grujić testified that the note in Mladić’s notebook is incorrect as he never uttered the words attributed to him and he insisted that it was a local decision to remove the Bosnian Muslims and the Accused did not allow forcible transfer. Branko Grujić, T. 40418–40420 (25 June 2013). The Chamber recalls that that Grujić’s evidence was marked by multiple contradictions, evasiveness, and bias. See paras. 4237, 4239, 4255, 4270, 4279, 4283, 4308, 4357, 4441, 4572. In light of this, the Chamber does not believe his denial as to the content of Mladić’s notes. The Chamber further notes that Grujić testified that the BCS word “iseljavanje” in Exhibit P1478 was incorrectly translated as “evicting” when it means “moving out at their request”. Branko Grujić, T.

were Bosnian Muslims and that after they were relocated, Bosnian Serbs who had fled their homes in other areas settled there.¹⁰⁷⁰⁷

3337. On 5 July 1992, the Accused stated that he had ordered an immediate investigation into the displacement of Bosnian Muslim civilians from Zvornik and had been told that the Bosnian Muslim inhabitants of Kozluk had requested approval to move to third-countries because they felt like hostages.¹⁰⁷⁰⁸ He further advised that the Zvornik authorities possessed written evidence that they left of their own free will and added that they could return anytime they wanted.¹⁰⁷⁰⁹ The Chamber considers that the implication that the Accused learned that Bosnian Muslims were removed from Zvornik with the assistance of the Interim Government of Zvornik in order to settle Bosnian Serbs who had fled from elsewhere indicates that the Accused was aware of the forcible nature of the movement. This is corroborated by the fact that the Accused was informed that the Bosnian Muslims who fled Kozluk had felt like hostages. The Accused was later made aware of further efforts to remove Bosnian-Muslim civilians held in the collection centre in Divič in September 1992.¹⁰⁷¹⁰ On 21 January 1993, the Accused commented that the number of inhabitants in Zvornik remained the same but it changed from being 50% non-Serb to completely Serb, with more than 24,000 Serbs from Zenica and Central Bosnia having arrived.¹⁰⁷¹¹ On 10 April 1993, the Accused attended a celebration marking “the day of the liberation of Zvornik”.¹⁰⁷¹²

3338. The Chamber also received evidence that the Accused knew that Neđeljko Prstojević, President of the Ilidža Crisis Staff, was involved in “ethnic cleansing” in Ilidža. In June 1992, after being relieved of his military command responsibilities due to his involvement in expelling Bosnian Muslims from Ilidža, Prstojević managed to return to Ilidža and continue this practice after he met with the Accused in Pale.¹⁰⁷¹³ Furthermore, on 2 July 1992, in an intercepted telephone conversation, Mandić confronted Prstojević about his involvement in forcing Bosnian Muslims out of Ilidža and advised him that the information about this had “already reached the top”.¹⁰⁷¹⁴ In addition, at a July 1992 Bosnian Serb Assembly session, in the Accused's presence, Prstojević boasted about Iliđa's achievements in extending Bosnian Serb territory and driving Bosnian Muslims out of "territories where they had actually been [a] majority".¹⁰⁷¹⁵

3339. On 6 June 1992, the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused, attended a briefing about Bratunac in which it was indicated that there were no Bosnian Muslims remaining in Bratunac and that it was a "fully liberated town".¹⁰⁷¹⁶ On 30 June 1992, the Accused was further informed by Ljubislav Simić, President of Bratunac, that from a situation where the Bosnian Muslims were the majority before the conflict, only two remained in the municipality.¹⁰⁷¹⁷ Simić also reported on looting by the army.¹⁰⁷¹⁸

3340. On 23 June 1992, the Accused was informed of events in Bosanski Novi regarding the 9,000 Bosnian Muslims who left after being subjected to intimidation and a policy of harassment and discrimination at the hands of the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁰⁷¹⁹

3341. The Accused, in July 1992, acknowledged that there had been a number of "traitors" who had committed inhumane acts and that they would be tried and punished by law, but suggested that the most severe acts were rare and that there were more frequent examples of unlawful acquisition of property.¹⁰⁷²⁰ The Accused characterised this as a consequence of the "inter-ethnic and religious war" and that some individuals were involved in taking the property of both Muslims and Serbs.¹⁰⁷²¹ The Accused stated that these crimes occurred without the knowledge of regular soldiers and affected their morale.¹⁰⁷²²

3342. On 17 July 1992, the Bosnian Serb MUP wrote a report to the Accused and the Prime Minister.¹⁰⁷²³ It stated that almost all paramilitaries lacked a unified command and engaged in looting, which posed a major threat to public peace and order.¹⁰⁷²⁴ The report also stated that the Ljubislav Simić, T. 37303–37304 (16 April 2013). The Chamber views Simić's evidence in this regard with caution given the problems with his credibility identified earlier in this Judgement at footnote 2268 and that he had an interest in distancing himself from such a statement.

army, Crisis Staffs, and War Presidencies had requested that the army round up as many Bosnian Muslim civilians as possible.¹⁰⁷²⁵ The Accused had already received information in May and June 1992 that Serb Forces were engaged in looting and that there were problems with robberies “of even Serbian people”.¹⁰⁷²⁶

3343. On 19 July 1992, the Accused wrote, inter alia, to the Novo Sarajevo, Pale, Ilidža, Hadžići, Rajlovac, and Sokolac municipalities, requesting that they, in co-operation with the SJBs, make an inventory of all housing facilities which were left vacant following the “voluntary departure” of the Bosnian Muslim population and that pursuant to a Presidency decision those facilities would be given for the temporary use of Bosnian Serbs from Sarajevo.¹⁰⁷²⁷

3344. The Accused was informed on 28 July 1992 that paramilitary groups frequently followed VRS units into inhabited areas in order to loot after combat was completed in those areas.¹⁰⁷²⁸

3345. On 16 August 1992, Doyle mentioned to the Accused that he was familiar with the practice of non-Serbs being forced to leave their homes and that some of these people were forced to pay money for permission to leave. The Accused agreed that this was not legal and should not happen.¹⁰⁷²⁹

organisations about the killings and “he simply couldn’t believe that something like that had indeed happened”.¹⁰⁷³¹

3347. On 25 August 1992, the Accused acknowledged his awareness of the “so called practice of ethnic cleansing” and that “the majority of those displaced are undoubtedly Bosnian Muslims”.¹⁰⁷³² He wrote a letter explaining that he had issued an order that the forced transfer of the civilian population must be prevented and any written statements by refugees that they would not return were considered legally invalid.¹⁰⁷³³ However, he stated that the civilian population must be allowed to move freely out of a war zone if that was their desire under the Geneva Conventions, blaming the failure on the part of the international community to understand the deep-rooted antagonism and hatred between the three ethnicities in BiH, which caused people to leave their communities in droves.¹⁰⁷³⁴

3348. At an international press conference in September 1992, the Accused again acknowledged that there was “ethnic cleansing” in BiH and stated that this was not part of a policy, emphasising that people were leaving the territory out of fear and that if there were examples of expulsion by force this was to be condemned.¹⁰⁷³⁵ At this same press conference when confronted with allegations and reports of atrocities being committed by Bosnian Serbs, the Accused claimed the reports were not honest and did not report on what the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were doing. He also questioned whether these acts were part of a policy and stated that in an “inter-ethnic and inter-religious war”, there was no need for a command to kill, given that the three ethnic communities had “been antagonised during centuries”.¹⁰⁷³⁶

3349. At a meeting attended by the Accused and Koljević on 30 September 1992, Lord Owen indicated that there was outrage with respect to a story in the New York Times regarding killings in Brčko in May and June 1992.¹⁰⁷³⁷ The Accused refuted allegations that his forces had massacred 3,000 Muslims at a camp near Brčko and called on the U.S.A. to provide evidence of these accusations.¹⁰⁷³⁸ While the number of persons killed as reported in the New York Times appears exaggerated, the Chamber has found that a large number of non-Serb men were indeed executed by Serb Forces at the Luka Camp in Brčko between at least 9 May and 16 May 1992.¹⁰⁷³⁹

3350. At a meeting of the Serbian leadership on 8 September 1992 with the Accused and Mladić in attendance, General Simonović stated that “ethnic cleansing” had been done more by paramilitary formations than by the VRS.¹⁰⁷⁴⁰

3351. On 19 October 1992, in reporting to members of the RS Presidency and VRS commanders on the Geneva peace talks, according to Mladić, the Accused stated that there had been a lot of discussion on “ethnic cleansing” and reminded the members that RS authorities must not participate in it.¹⁰⁷⁴¹ He then said: “We find it important to make a distinction between what is done by irresponsible individuals and what is done by the authorities.”¹⁰⁷⁴²

3352. In November 1992, Milojević, an Assembly official, complained at a Bosnian Serb Assembly session attended by the Accused, that a proposed citizenship law could be interpreted to allow “all the Muslims and Croats we expelled” to be citizens of the RS.¹⁰⁷⁴³

3353. On 26 November 1992, Owen and Vance wrote to the Accused, advising him that they had received credible reports about “renewed ethnic cleansing” by Bosnian Serb Forces in the Banja Luka area.¹⁰⁷⁴⁴

3355. Throughout the ICFY negotiations in Geneva from December 1992 to September 1993, the Bosnian Serbs were confronted with reports of ethnic cleansing committed by the Serbs in BiH.¹⁰⁷⁴⁶ During these negotiations, Lord Owen made very clear allegations about detention centres, military operations conducted against civilian populations, and the physical process of “ethnic cleansing” of areas.¹⁰⁷⁴⁷ Lawrence Eagleburger, former U.S. Secretary of State, around January 1993, spoke in direct terms to all the parties about the nature of their activities and said that they would be held accountable.¹⁰⁷⁴⁸

3356. On 2 April 1993, the Accused was present at the Bosnian Serb Assembly when it was reported that Foča was completely under Bosnian Serb control.¹⁰⁷⁴⁹ At the same session, he acknowledged that “we could not swear that there are no crimes” and that Serbs who committed crimes should be tried. However, the Accused claimed that he had only heard of 18 allegations of rape, but the propaganda had turned this into 18,000 cases of rape.¹⁰⁷⁵⁰ On 10 January 1994, the Accused commented that Bosnian Muslims had planned to build a big Islamic centre in Foča but by then it belonged 100% to the Bosnian Serbs, and that “it will never be theirs again.”¹⁰⁷⁵¹

3357. During a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in May 1993, at which the Accused was present, Vladimir Lukić stated that they had naively “raised paramilitaries” and called them “brotherly assistance” but “they were slowly less and less engaged in fighting and more and more in looting”.¹⁰⁷⁵² Other deputies spoke about the problems they faced in municipalities with respect to disturbances, looting, and stealing where there were paramilitaries.¹⁰⁷⁵³

3358. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session held in late summer 1993, at which the Accused was present, Mladić said, “we cannot allow leaving the mosques with two minarets there”.¹⁰⁷⁵⁴ Similarly another deputy complained to the Accused that if a proposed peace agreement went through and Bosnian Muslims were granted a right to return to their territory they would have to compensate them for everything that they destroyed and burned, including the 17 mosques which they had “flattened”.¹⁰⁷⁵⁵

3359. In April 1994, Akashi requested the Accused to allow the ICRC to evacuate Bosnian Muslims from Prijedor.¹⁰⁷⁵⁶ In response to Akashi’s request, the Accused stated that the situation in Prijedor was an unfortunate development for the Serbs. While he accepted that the situation could have been predicted—he noted that civilians in the town had, at the beginning of the war, slaughtered each other—he maintained that the present situation had been prompted by a Muslim massacre of six Serb policemen from the town.¹⁰⁷⁵⁷ The Accused agreed to the evacuation as suggested.¹⁰⁷⁵⁸

3360. The Accused continued to receive information about crimes—predominantly mass expulsions, as well as mistreatment, including beatings, rapes, robberies, killing and forced labour—being committed against non-Serbs in Bijeljina and other municipalities from 1994.¹⁰⁷⁵⁹

3361. Even into 1995, the Accused was aware of, and involved in, arrangements made with respect to regulating the movement of non-Serbs out of Bosnian Serb territory which was described as being in accordance with the right to freedom of movement.¹⁰⁷⁶⁰

3362. In an interview in July 1995, the Accused stated that Muslims in places like Bijeljina were completely safe but that there “is some intimidation by terrorist elements, by extreme Serbs who have lost everything in central Bosnia. But the authorities protect our citizens, regardless of whether they are Muslims or Croats. Therefore, what is happening is not ethnic cleansing, but ethnic displacement, people who want to leave.”¹⁰⁷⁶¹

3363. Based on the evidence set forth above, the Chamber finds that the Accused was promptly and well informed of the forced displacement of non-Serb civilians from the Municipalities by Serb Forces from as early as April 1992. He continued to learn of such displacements throughout the conflict. In addition, he learned of other types of criminal activity committed against the non-Serb population by Serb Forces, including killings, rapes, and property related offences, from the beginning of April 1992 onwards.¹⁰⁷⁶²

(B) Knowledge of inadequate conditions and mistreatment of non-Serbs in detention centres

3364. During the conflict, information about occurrences in many detention facilities was forwarded to the Accused, prime minister, and the relevant ministers, namely the Ministers of Defence, Interior, and Justice.¹⁰⁷⁶³

3365. The Accused was present at a 24 April 1992 joint session of the SNB and Bosnian Serb Government, where it was decided that the Ministry of Justice would be responsible for the exchange of detainees.¹⁰⁷⁶⁴ On 8 May 1992, the Government decided to form the “Central Commission for the Exchange of Prisoners-of-War, Arrested Persons and the Bodies of those Killed”.¹⁰⁷⁶⁵ According to Mandić, the impetus for establishing the Commission was to provide “rule of law and legal security” for people detained, many of whom were civilians from conflict areas.¹⁰⁷⁶⁶ The Chamber considers that this evidence demonstrates that the Accused knew early on in the conflict in BiH that civilians were being detained by Serb Forces.

3366. Allegations of large-scale detention of civilians were reported in the international press in May and June 1992 and John Wilson raised these allegations with Plavšić in the presence of the Accused.¹⁰⁷⁶⁷ Plavšić acknowledged the existence of camps but said that they were only for military aged persons who were detained so they would not fight the Serbs and made counter-claims that the Bosnian Presidency was holding prisoners.¹⁰⁷⁶⁸

3367. In June and July 1992, the Bosnian Serb leadership requested several reports on detention camps and prisoners.¹⁰⁷⁶⁹ On 17 July 1992, the Bosnian Serb MUP wrote a report to the Accused and the Prime Minister, indicating, inter alia, that the conditions in detention centres were poor.¹⁰⁷⁷⁰ On 22 July 1992, it was reported to the government that there had been occurrences of unlawful treatment of detainees.¹⁰⁷⁷¹

3368. On 25 July 1992, the Accused received a report from the ICRC following a visit to the Manjača camp.¹⁰⁷⁷² The Accused was informed that: (i) the authorities at the camp refused to notify the ICRC about the identity of the detainees; (ii) the ICRC's visit was terminated prematurely when it was observed that two detainees had been subjected to ill treatment during the visit; (iii) the ICRC observed frequent and widespread traces of severe beatings; (iv) the general living conditions including food, hygiene, clothing and accommodation were "absolutely insufficient"; (v) many detainees showed marked weight loss and signs of anaemia.¹⁰⁷⁷³ The Accused was also informed about the medical conditions and concerns with respect to the detainees and that a list of detainees who allegedly died during detention would be submitted to the "Higher Authorities" with a request to open an investigation.¹⁰⁷⁷⁴

3369. Several news articles criticising the detention centres in BiH were released in a British publication, the Guardian, in late July 1992.¹⁰⁷⁷⁵ Also in late July, the Accused appeared on ITN and responded to allegations and reports about Omarska; during the broadcast, he said to the media: "come and see for yourselves".¹⁰⁷⁷⁶ On 30 July 1992, the Accused responded directly to the Guardian in a letter, stating that it was "completely false" that Bosnian Serbs had organised concentration camps or that they were holding civilian prisoners.¹⁰⁷⁷⁷

3370. At the London Conference in August 1992, there was an agreement between the parties on a program of action with respect to humanitarian issues.¹⁰⁷⁷⁸ It included recognition of the "acute problem of the unlawful detention of civilians and the deplorable conditions in which they were held".¹⁰⁷⁷⁹ This agreement recognised that the primary objective should be to secure the release and return of those detained. If this was not possible the agreement provided for other options including “repatriation to areas under the control of their respective ethnic authorities” or relocation.¹⁰⁷⁸⁰

3371. The Chamber found that around 9 August 1992, Karadžić visited Kula prison with representatives of the media and the ICRC, and that the food was better that day and only clean rooms were shown.¹⁰⁷⁸¹ He released ten detainees, some of whom were above the age of 60 and others were ill.¹⁰⁷⁸²

3372. Doyle encountered the Accused in the lobby of a hotel in Brussels on 16 August 1992 when the Times had published a photograph of an emaciated detainee in the Omarska camp. The Accused appeared to be taken aback by the news.¹⁰⁷⁸³

3373. On 17 August 1992, the Report of the Commission for Inspecting Collection Centres and Other Facilities for Captives in the ARK was issued.¹⁰⁷⁸⁴ It provided a sanitised version of the conditions in the camps, failing to mention the detention of any civilians and noting that most of the camps, especially Manjača, had inadequate premises with insufficient food, beds, and blankets.¹⁰⁷⁸⁵ It also alluded to difficulties with security due to poor co-ordination between the army and the police.¹⁰⁷⁸⁶

3374. As a result of further reports received by the Accused from international representatives, Mandić tasked Avlijaš with drafting a report on the situation in camps from Sarajevo to Prijedor.¹⁰⁷⁸⁷ The report was issued on 22 October 1992 and was sent, inter alia, to the RS Presidency.¹⁰⁷⁸⁸ It included information on several detention centres in BiH, including in Vlasenica, Zvornik, Prijedor, Sanski Most, and Banja Luka.¹⁰⁷⁸⁹ It also noted that SJBs in Zvornik, Hadžići, and Ilidža were detaining people without any authorisation in law.¹⁰⁷⁹⁰

3375. The Chamber concludes that the Accused became aware of the detention of civilians in April 1992 and inadequate conditions in Bosnian Serb run detention facilities by at least May 1992. It further finds that the Accused sanctioned the forcible removal of civilians who were detained in these facilities either within BiH or to third countries. The Chamber notes the Accused's argument that during the rare visits by the RS authorities to Vlasenica, they were informed that the civilian population was well-treated, citing evidence that detainees at the Sušica camp told international representatives that they had received fine treatment in the camp.¹⁰⁷⁹¹ The Chamber also notes that on or about 21 June 1992, Dragan Nikolić and Goran Tešić entered the Sušica camp and took two detainees out for questioning and beat them to death; a false report was subsequently prepared to suggest that the two detainees died of natural causes.¹⁰⁷⁹² The Chamber accepts the Accused's submission that he and other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership did not learn of every single act of mistreatment of the non-Serb population throughout the Municipalities. However, the evidence establishes that the Accused was overall promptly and well-informed of crimes committed against non-Serbs in the Municipalities as described above.

(C) Misleading statements made by the Accused

3376. The Accused frequently minimised the extent of criminal activity in the Municipalities when speaking to the international media, negotiators, and to the public. Indeed, the Accused admitted to the Bosnian Serb Assembly that it was necessary to be cunning when faced with questions from the media and when dealing with international negotiators.¹⁰⁷⁹³ The Accused claimed that civilians were leaving of their own free will and had signed voluntary declarations that they wanted to leave.¹⁰⁷⁹⁴ The Accused made statements to the international media that the Bosnian Serb authorities did not participate in "ethnic cleansing", they were trying to stop this practice, and that acts of "ethnic cleansing" were being perpetrated by groups or individuals who did not originate from the Bosnian Serb authorities.¹⁰⁷⁹⁵ For example, in a 23 April 1992 media interview, when questioned about the fate of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats living in Serb areas, the Accused said that there were "very few such people" and that in any event they had signed an agreement with the UNHCR to allow the return of people to their homes.¹⁰⁷⁹⁶ However, by that time, the Accused knew that thousands of non-Serb civilians had been expelled from Bosnian Serb controlled territory,¹⁰⁷⁹⁷ and he continued to learn of such expulsions during the conflict.¹⁰⁷⁹⁸

3377. The Accused also shifted blame for the crimes away from Bosnian Serbs. For example, he often stated that: (i) his interlocutors had been misinformed; (ii) their sources were biased; (iii) crimes and terrible things had happened historically and were continuing to happen to Bosnian Serbs as well; (iv) everybody was guilty; (v) he had warned that the declaration of BiH independence would provoke a terrible war; and (vi) the international community was responsible.¹⁰⁷⁹⁹ In addition, Bosnian Serb leaders when confronted with allegations of rape and expulsion of Bosnian Muslims sometimes would also suggest that these abuses had been committed by Bosnian Muslims who were masquerading as Serb soldiers but did not deny that these crimes were happening.¹⁰⁸⁰⁰

3378. Throughout the conflict, the Accused boasted to the Bosnian Serb Assembly about the proper conduct of the Serb Forces, when he knew it was not true. In a television interview on 20 August 1992 regarding the release of detainees from detention centres, the Accused spoke of only releasing prisoners of war who were too ill or weak to go back into battle, after initially offering to close all of the camps.¹⁰⁸⁰¹ He stated that “we don’t have people in prisons that have been removed from their own homes. Those people have been captured in the battle-field”.¹⁰⁸⁰² The Accused claimed in a speech in December 1992 that “there were no civilians in our prisons”, that no institution which inspected their prisons found any civilians or women, and that they had released a large number of detainees.¹⁰⁸⁰³ However, prior to that time, the Accused had been informed by Bosnian Serb government commissioned reports as well as by international representatives and the media that civilians were detained and many detention centres had inadequate or worse conditions.¹⁰⁸⁰⁴ On 8 January 1993, the Accused also stated that “no soldier of ours would be allowed to rape a woman in the presence of another soldier” and described these stories as “terrible lies”.¹⁰⁸⁰⁵

3379. On 2 April 1993, the Accused stated that the UN could present evidence of war crimes, but that it was for the RS to investigate and prosecute matters itself, and that their army could never have committed crime.¹⁰⁸⁰⁶

3380. On 9 January 1994, the Accused went so far as to say to the Bosnian Serb Assembly that “[c]ontrary to the lies and slander of international propaganda-mongers, the Serbian army maintained the knightly character and military honour, worthy of it.”¹⁰⁸⁰⁷

3381. The Chamber finds that the Accused minimised what he knew about criminal activity committed by Serb Forces and misled international interlocutors and the public with respect to that activity in Bosnian Serb claimed territory in the Municipalities.

(D) Prevention of criminal activity

3382. The Prosecution argues that the orders issued by the Accused to address crimes committed against non-Serbs were “simply window dressing designed to disguise [his] role in supporting the very crimes he was purporting to address”.¹⁰⁸⁰⁸ The Accused argues that he made legitimate efforts to prevent the commission of crimes and ensure Bosnian Serb Forces adhered to international humanitarian law.¹⁰⁸⁰⁹

(1) Unlawful detention and inadequate conditions in detention facilities

3383. In relation to the treatment of detainees, on 8 June 1992, the SRNA broadcasted an appeal by the Accused to local authorities and prominent Serbs to, inter alia, ensure protection for all wounded and ill individuals irrespective of what side of the conflict they were on and to treat all prisoners humanely.¹⁰⁸¹⁰ On 13 June 1992, the Accused issued an order to the VRS and MUP to apply and respect the international law of war and authorised the Minister of Defence to prepare instructions on the treatment of captured prisoners,¹⁰⁸¹¹ which the Minister did.¹⁰⁸¹² In addition, the Chamber found that in June and July 1992, the Bosnian Serb leadership requested several reports on detention facilities and detainees.¹⁰⁸¹³

3384. On 1 July 1992, the Accused asked Mandić to release a Croat who the Accused believed was detained at Kula prison.¹⁰⁸¹⁴ The Chamber finds that this is indicative of the Accused's ability to secure the release of detainees when he felt like it. The Chamber also received evidence that Krajišnik and Mandić also intervened on behalf of detainees with whom they had personal connections.¹⁰⁸¹⁵

3385. The Chamber recalls that around 15 July 1992, a high-ranking delegation of Bosnian Serbs from Banja Luka and Prijedor visited Omarska and were received by Drljača.¹⁰⁸¹⁶ Following the delegation visit, the Accused called Kuprešanin to suggest that he influence the municipal authorities in Prijedor to close the "investigation centres" in the municipality.¹⁰⁸¹⁷ Kuprešanin subsequently asked the authorities of Omarska and Keraterm to close the facilities and to improve the living conditions for the detainees until their disbandment.¹⁰⁸¹⁸

3386. Vulliamy visited Omarska on 5 August 1992.¹⁰⁸¹⁹ He was told later by survivors from Omarska that the detainees who appeared to be in “better condition” were brought out to the tarmac area between the hangar and the canteen where the journalists would see them during their visit.¹⁰⁸²⁰ The Chamber recalls that the authorities at detention facilities such as Omarska, Trnopolje and Manjača transferred the majority of their detainees to other locations during this time period and further cleaned up the facilities.¹⁰⁸²¹ Furthermore, soon after the Accused agreed to open up the camps to international visitors, Keraterm was closed, with the detainees being moved to Trnopolje or Manjača by 5 August 1992.¹⁰⁸²²

3387. On 6 August 1992 at a session of the RS Presidency, attended by the Accused, the treatment of detainees held in Serb controlled territory was discussed. It was concluded that the MUP would be ordered to examine the behaviour of all civilian authorities and individuals guarding detainees and report back to the MUP and the Presidency.¹⁰⁸²³ At this meeting it was stressed that international conventions on the treatment of prisoners of war should be followed to ensure the humane treatment of prisoners of war given that “they are in prisons and not concentration camps”.¹⁰⁸²⁴ The decision was relayed to SJB Chiefs in a number of municipalities who were

¹⁰⁸²⁰ Edward Vulliamy, T. 21088 (9 November 2011). The Chamber recalls that the day after the international journalists visited Omarska, Sejmenović was taken out of Omarska by Kuprešanin. Kuprešanin had been instructed by the Accused to get Sejmenović a suit and allow him time to recuperate, and then he was planning round-table discussions for Sejmenović to speak publicly about the situation in Bosnian Krajina. See para. 1787.

See also para. 1804. See also D4725 (Report from Slobodan Avljaš to RS Ministry of Legislation and Administration, 31 August 1992). The Chamber notes that Idriz Merdžanić, a Bosnian Muslim doctor who was detained at Trnopolje from 26 May until 30 September 1992, testified that after the Accused promised at the London Conference to allow journalists to visit detention centres, he ordered to have the camps “prepared” for the journalists’ visits and suggested that the killing incident in Room 3 at Keraterm on or about 24 and 25 July 1992 occurred as a result of this. Idriz Merdžanić, T. 21394–21396 (16 November 2011). See Scheduled Incident B.15.1. The Chamber considers Merdžanić’s evidence to be speculative as he was not in a position to know about specific orders issued by the Accused. Therefore, the Chamber will not rely on his evidence in this regard.

obliged to provide reports in accordance with the RS Presidency decision by 20 August 1992.¹⁰⁸²⁵ The SJB Chiefs were also informed about the RS Presidency order to release all civilians and to allow them freedom of movement.¹⁰⁸²⁶

3388. On 7 August 1992, the Accused wrote to Branko Đerić about reports they had received regarding detention facilities, including Manjača, and stated the ICRC and Mladić had been informed.¹⁰⁸²⁷ The Accused also noted his expectation that the government would, on the basis of these reports, “take immediate measures for the improvement of the living conditions in the jails that are operated by civilian authorities on our territory”.¹⁰⁸²⁸ The Accused wrote to the ICRC with respect to these reports, and gave his re-assurance that the ICRC would be enabled to work without disturbance in RS and that he accepted “the majority of [their] remarks and recommendations for improvement of living conditions on these locations”.¹⁰⁸²⁹ The Accused also accepted the ICRC suggestion to release all persons older than 60 years of age from detention and stated that they were ready to speed up the exchange of prisoners through a system of exchange commissions.¹⁰⁸³⁰

3389. On 8 August 1992, at a session of the RS Presidency, it was concluded, inter alia, that: (i) visits by representatives of the ICRC to all prisons must be arranged; (ii) all detainees above the age of 60 or seriously ill or wounded should be released; and (iii) amnesty should be declared for persons who have committed minor offences or were misled into committing such offences.¹⁰⁸³¹

3390. On the same day, in a letter to, among others, the Accused, Tomislav Kovač, then Deputy Minister for Police Affairs and Tasks, identified the problems of detention of non-Serbs and proposed “that the status of these people be legally changed in compliance with international conventions on refugees, prisoners of war”, given the failure to properly categorise civilians, prisoners of war and those who had committed criminal acts.¹⁰⁸³² On 9 August 1992, the

The Chamber does not find Subotić’s evidence that the only places of detention were under local authority and that he was not informed about the detention of civilians to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 9869 and more specifically that his evidence with respect to this issue was marked by evasiveness and contradictions and attempts to distance himself from the detention of civilians.

government responded to the letter immediately and established the Commission for Inspecting Collection Centres and Other Facilities for Captives in the ARK, which released its report on 17 August 1992.¹⁰⁸³³ The Commission was tasked with determining the status of persons detained in prisons in the RS “in accordance with international conventions, and to speed up the procedure of categorising such persons”, inspecting those facilities and submitting a report to the government of the Republika Srpska.¹⁰⁸³⁴ Slobodan Avlijaš and Goran Šarić, as representatives of the Commission, visited Bileća, Trebinje, and Gacko and submitted a report to the Bosnian Serb government on 22 August 1992.¹⁰⁸³⁵

3391. According to the minutes of the 30th session of the RS Presidency held on 6 September 1992, the Accused accepted a proposal from the Military Prosecutor’s Office attached to the command of the 1st Krajina Corp to pardon some detainees held at Manjača camp.¹⁰⁸³⁶ The proposal stated that the detainees were suspected of having committed crimes and asked that they be exempted from further prosecution; however the minutes do not indicate the reason for the request.¹⁰⁸³⁷

3392. On 8 September 1992, the Accused sent a strictly confidential telegram to the presidents of all municipalities in RS instructing them to ensure “respect of international humanitarian law with regard to the treatment of prisoners of war” and that civilians who had not committed crimes should “not be kept in prisons and collection centres against their will” and that they should ensure their safe passage to territory where they seek refuge from the war.¹⁰⁸³⁸ He also indicated that officials must accommodate the ICRC and the High Commissioner for Refugees.¹⁰⁸³⁹

3393. In a meeting with international representatives in September 1992, the Accused agreed to “support any humanitarian issue” and “clean up” detention facilities but also in exchange requested that Bosnian Serbs, who he viewed as “hostages”, be allowed to leave Sarajevo.¹⁰⁸⁴⁰ On

11 September 1992, the Accused granted amnesty from criminal prosecution to 69 detainees who were being held at Manjača and Trnopolje.¹⁰⁸⁴¹ The Accused stated, a few days later, at a Bosnian Serb Assembly session that dealing with humanitarian issues would assist the Bosnian Serbs as they would get credit at an international level, and in this regard the disbandment of Trnopolje and Manjača camps would suit them so long as those detained were sent somewhere and did not return to the battlefield.¹⁰⁸⁴²

3394. An agreement between representatives of the Accused, Izetbegović, Mate Boban, and representatives of the SDA, SDS, and BiH Presidency was reached on 30 September and 1 October 1992.¹⁰⁸⁴³ They, inter alia, agreed to release all civilian detainees who were not suspected of having committed crimes.¹⁰⁸⁴⁴ The document lists several scheduled detention centres under Bosnian Serb control, including Manjača, Trnopolje, Batković camp, and Kula Prison.¹⁰⁸⁴⁵

3395. The Accused, in October 1992, informed Mladić, Mićo Stanišić and Mandić that he had received information that some local authorities had ignored his instruction to allow unfettered access for the ICRC to detention facilities. The Accused demanded that they inform their subordinates to respect his instruction to allow access and that he would order a thorough investigation of all cases of failure to comply.¹⁰⁸⁴⁶

3396. On 1 October 1992, Kuprešanin wrote to the Accused and requested a pardon to allow for the release of some Bosnian Muslim detainees who were being held at Manjača who had not participated in “the rebellion” against the RS.¹⁰⁸⁴⁷ On 7 October 1992, pursuant to a decision of the RS Presidency, Kuprešanin authorised ten detainees who had been released and pardoned to be permitted to leave the territory of RS through the ICRC in Banja Luka.¹⁰⁸⁴⁸ On 13 November 1992, the Accused issued an amnesty from prosecution in respect of numerous detainees who were held at Manjača.¹⁰⁸⁴⁹ The Chamber considers that this further demonstrates the Accused's ability to intervene in matters related to detention.

3397. It was not until 27 October 1992, that the Bosnian Serb Government officially decided that the existing illegal camps and assembly centres were to be dissolved as soon as possible and that the existing penal institutions legally formed in large centres in Republika Srpska were to be used, since the conditions there were suitable for legal treatment of prisoners and inmates.¹⁰⁸⁵⁰

3398. On 4 December 1992, the Accused indicated that he would order the release of all detainees held in Manjača provided that they be transferred to third countries.¹⁰⁸⁵¹ The Chamber found above that this is what indeed happened.¹⁰⁸⁵²

3399. Having considered the evidence recounted above of the Accused's efforts to end the unlawful detention of non-Serb civilians and to ameliorate the conditions in detention centres, the Chamber notes that while the Accused was aware of the large-scale detention of civilians as early as April 1992, it was not until June 1992 that he issued orders on the protection of detainees and requested reports.¹⁰⁸⁵³ By that time, many civilians were already unlawfully detained in appalling conditions. The Chamber further finds that the Accused had the authority to order the closure of detention centres and order the release of detainees as evidenced by how quickly his instructions to close Omarska, Keraterm and later Manjača and his instructions to release specific detainees were followed by the relevant authorities. However, by the time the Bosnian Serb Government officially decided to close all "illegal camps" on 27 October 1992, the make-shift detention facilities used throughout the Municipalities by Serb Forces to detain non-Serbs had already largely served their purpose of facilitating the process of the forcible removal of non-Serbs. The Chamber considers that the Accused could have intervened much sooner if he had had the will to do so. However, instead of exercising his authority to close make-shift detention centres, he spent months denying that the conditions in these centres were appalling and that civilians were included among the detainees. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that Batković camp, Kula Prison and the Rasadnik detention facility remained in existence during the war and that they continued to unlawfully detain non-Serb civilians.¹⁰⁸⁵⁴

(2) Forced removal of non-Serbs and protection of non-Serbs remaining in Serb controlled territory

3400. With respect to forced displacement of non-Serb civilians, in advance of the London Conference, the Accused issued an instruction to the VRS and MUP, on 19 August 1992 ordering that the forced resettlement of civilians should be prevented and that “any certificates of sale of property or statements that refugees will not return shall be considered as legally invalid and are declared null and void”.¹⁰⁸⁵⁵ On 21 August 1992, the Accused pledged to prevent “ethnic cleansing” and punish persons involved in expelling the civilian population.¹⁰⁸⁵⁶ On 25 August 1992, on the eve of the London Conference, the Accused stated, in a letter to the international community, that he had issued the 19 August 1992 instruction, but that the civilian population must be allowed to move freely out of a war zone if that was its desire, blaming the failure on the part of the international community to understand the deep-rooted antagonism and hatred between the three ethnicities in BiH, which caused people to leave their communities in droves.¹⁰⁸⁵⁷ The Chamber considers that the Accused’s comments in the 25 August letter were an attempt to downplay the forced nature of the movement of the population that was occurring, whereas by that time thousands of non-Serbs had already been expelled from Bosnian Serb claimed territory by Serb Forces. This suggests that the Accused’s 19 and 21 August orders were not genuine efforts to stop “ethnic cleansing”, and were rather designed as an attempt to cast a positive light on the actions of the Bosnian Serbs in view of the commencement of the London Conference.

3401. In August 1992, the Accused issued instructions to the presidents of all municipalities to keep accurate records on the temporary use of abandoned flats by refugees and prevent any abuse in this regard.¹⁰⁸⁵⁸ However, the Chamber recalls that the transfer of abandoned non-Serb housing to Serb refugees had the effect of ensuring that non-Serbs who had fled their homes did not return to Serb held territory.¹⁰⁸⁵⁹

3402. Furthermore, the Accused issued orders for the protection of non-Serbs remaining in Serb controlled territory. On 11 July 1992 at the 38th session of the Bosnian Serb Government, a working group was formed to prepare regulations on the treatment of civilians of all ethnicities in the RS in accordance with constitutional rights and international conventions and obligations.¹⁰⁸⁶⁰ On 14 July 1992, the Accused instructed the presidents of the municipalities in the Goražde area to ensure that all Bosnian Croat and Bosnian Muslim inhabitants in villages who surrendered their weapons and did not intend to fight should enjoy the full protection of the RS state.¹⁰⁸⁶¹ He issued a similar order on 23 July 1992 that Serb authorities must act in accordance with the law and international humanitarian law and all inhabitants who surrender weapons and agree to live peacefully must be permitted to stay and be protected by the RS.¹⁰⁸⁶² However, the Chamber notes that during this time period, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to leave Bosnian Serb claimed territory in the Municipalities through threats, coercion, or as a result of physical force.

3403. On 3 April 1994, the Accused issued an order to the Bosnian Serb MUP and VRS authorities to, inter alia, investigate criminal activity committed in the RS with particular attention to Prijedor, which was subsequently distributed to all RBD centres and Drina Corps units.¹⁰⁸⁶³ On 4 July 1994, the Accused conveyed to the municipal authorities in Prijedor that they should ensure full protection for the non-Serb population.¹⁰⁸⁶⁴ There had been incidents in mid-1994 of individuals attacking non-Serbs and their property, causing them to apply to municipal authorities to organise their collective departure abroad.¹⁰⁸⁶⁵ The Accused instructed the highest authorities of the municipality to publicly condemn such cases of assaults on non-Serbs and to maintain law and order, punish the perpetrators, and take measures to protect all citizens and their property against looting, including the property of individuals who had left or been killed.¹⁰⁸⁶⁶ A state commission was to be set up to deal with each registered case.¹⁰⁸⁶⁷ The Chamber considers by this time there were so few non-Serbs remaining in Prijedor after the overwhelming majority had already been expelled during 1992 that his instructions in this regard were rendered otiose.

3404. In response to concerns about the “ethnic cleansing” in Bijeljina in late 1994, the Accused explained to UNPROFOR that the authorities in Bijeljina intended to replace the Chief of Police given that he was providing unsatisfactory security for the population,¹⁰⁸⁶⁸ and later claimed that people leaving Bijeljina were being forced from their homes by criminal elements.¹⁰⁸⁶⁹ While the Chief of Police was replaced in Bijeljina, the UNHCR office continued reporting on the arrival of “large numbers of refugees who had been forced to leave the Bijeljina area” including over 2,000 people between 18 August to 4 September 1994.¹⁰⁸⁷⁰ On 9 September 1994, Vieira de Mello requested that the Accused allow Akashi and UNPROFOR to verify the humanitarian conditions in these regions and pressed for the arrest of Vojkan and his gang, who the Accused suggested might be acting under Arkan’s instructions in the area.¹⁰⁸⁷¹ On 15 September 1994, the Accused was told by international negotiators that his response to the crisis in Bijeljina was “insufficient [...] as the cleansing itself was apparently continuing” and that by the time investigations were completed “there would be nobody left to expel”.¹⁰⁸⁷² On 26 September 1994, the Accused said to international negotiators that Serbs in Bijeljina were “fighting for their own land” and that “ethnic cleansing” would be an inevitable outcome of the international community’s failure to establish any legal mechanism allowing the population to exchange their homes and move into cantons in which their nationality would be dominant.¹⁰⁸⁷³ The Chamber considers that the Accused’s statements to the international negotiators demonstrate his knowledge that “ethnic cleansing” was directly linked to the Bosnian Serb objective to establish a Bosnian Serb state and that he was not interested in preventing it.

The Chamber recalls that on 23 September 1994, the Security Council passed Resolution 941 in which it noted that UNHCR and the ICRC had reported grave violations of international humanitarian law in Banja Luka, Bijeljina, and other areas of BiH under Bosnian Serb control, which it described as “ethnic cleansing”. See para. 403.

¹⁰⁸⁷³ P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), para. 140; David Harland, T. 2113–2114 (7 May 2010). The Chamber notes that Gordan Milinić testified that the Accused formed a commission to examine the situation in Bijeljina in October 1994 and that the Bosnian Muslims living in Bijeljina told the Commission that they preferred to leave and the Presidency received letters of gratitude from Bosnian Muslims who emigrated. D3682 (Witness statement of Gordan Milinić dated 8 June 2013), para. 13; Gordan Milinić, T. 39771–39772 (12 June 2013). The Chamber notes that testimony of Milinić was marked by contradictions, bias and indicators that he lacked candour. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard.

(3) Other crimes

3405. With respect to crimes more generally, including looting and property related crimes, when the Bosnian Serb government was informed on 27 February 1993 that public law and order in the Republic was extremely bad, it put the MUP, Ministry of Defence and the Military Security Service in charge of protecting the citizens and their property.¹⁰⁸⁷⁴ In May 1993, the Accused also issued an order for the security and protection of all places of worship in Banja Luka and called for the immediate execution of this order and a report on measures taken.¹⁰⁸⁷⁵ At a session of the Bosnian Serb Government on 11 July 1993, in which the Accused participated, the “need for a swift drive against crime”, including killing, robbery, and profiteering was discussed.¹⁰⁸⁷⁶ On 28 August 1993, in an order focused on the organisation of the VRS, the Accused instructed the Main Staff and MUP to create a plan to seize the uniforms of people who were not members of the army or police and who were committing crimes and other illegal activity in the uniforms.¹⁰⁸⁷⁷

3406. Furthermore, Mićo Stanišić made efforts to remove criminals from the MUP. On 17 April 1992, Mićo Stanišić wrote to municipal CSBs and SJBs warning them that there had been reports of MUP members appropriating property and collaborating with persons with a history of organised crime and requesting that measures, including termination of employment and criminal prosecution, be taken against perpetrators.¹⁰⁸⁷⁸ On 23 and 24 July 1992, Stanišić ordered that members of the MUP who had been criminally prosecuted or against whom criminal proceedings were being conducted should be dismissed from duty and placed at the disposal of the VRS.¹⁰⁸⁷⁹

3408. Furthermore, on 27 July 1992, Stanišić issued an order stating that, in accordance with an order by the Accused, it was necessary to immediately remove individuals from the MUP who had been held criminally responsible for crimes or were known to have committed crimes during the war in BiH.¹⁰⁸⁸¹ On 12 September 1992, Zoran Cvijetić issued a document to all SJBs, advising that despite Stanišić's orders to remove criminals from the ranks of the MUP, a number of SJBs had not taken the problem seriously enough and that it was necessary for them to analyse the involvement of MUP employees in criminal acts and dereliction of duty so that it could be reported to the MUP.¹⁰⁸⁸² In an interview in October 1992, Mićo Stanišić acknowledged that some individual members of the MUP had been expelled from their ranks because of acts which they had committed but he claimed that the number of such cases were rare but were taken seriously.¹⁰⁸⁸³ He also spoke about measures taken to deal with war profiteering and that most of the acts occurred at the beginning of the war when "there was a kind of legislative vacuum".¹⁰⁸⁸⁴

3409. In addition, members of the government, VRS, JNA and MUP, including Mićo Stanišić, issued orders to various divisions in the Bosnian Serb MUP or VRS on crime prevention, to ensure compliance with international humanitarian law, prevent the abuse of detainees and mistreatment of civilians, and to report crimes or illegal camps on 24 April 1992,¹⁰⁸⁸⁵ 26 April 1992,¹⁰⁸⁸⁶ 30 April 1992,¹⁰⁸⁸⁷ 10 June 1992,¹⁰⁸⁸⁸ 23 June 1992,¹⁰⁸⁸⁹ 10 August 1992,¹⁰⁸⁹⁰ 17 August 1992,¹⁰⁸⁹¹ 19 August 1992,¹⁰⁸⁹² 21 August 1992.¹⁰⁸⁹³ On 24 August 1992, Mićo Stanišić sent a dispatch to all CSBs and SJBs, requiring data by 30 August 1992 on all detention camps, prisons or collection centres, their location, the number of persons detained and who ordered the establishment and detention of people at the camps.¹⁰⁸⁹⁴ On 14 May 1993, pursuant to an order by the Accused, Mladić ordered that the Geneva and Hague Conventions and other provisions of “the international law of war” be observed in all respects.¹⁰⁸⁹⁵

3410. The Chamber considers that while the Accused and his subordinates issued orders during the conflict regarding respect for international humanitarian law, the rampant criminal acts being committed against non-Serbs in the Municipalities continued. The Accused continued to learn about the commission of serious crimes committed by Serb Forces against non-Serbs throughout the conflict and yet he continued to issue the same type of generic orders.¹⁰⁸⁹⁶ He made no efforts to ensure that these orders were implemented on the ground so as to generate a positive effect on the prevention of crime. The Chamber therefore finds that these orders are not reflective of genuine efforts to prevent such crimes.

(E) Investigation and prosecution of crimes committed against non-Serbs

3411. The Prosecution submits that the Accused supported a policy of non-prosecution of crimes committed against non-Serbs, which resulted in a climate of impunity for crimes committed against non-Serbs.¹⁰⁸⁹⁷ The Accused submits that the RS was committed to proper military and civilian prosecutions but that with the chaos of war and difficulties associated with institution building, there were reasonable delays.¹⁰⁸⁹⁸

3412. The Chamber recalls that the Bosnian Serb civilian courts were established on 16 May 1992 in some Bosnian Serb Municipalities and that the military courts began to function in August 1992.¹⁰⁸⁹⁹ On one occasion in 1993, the Accused claimed to have the ability to stop criminal proceedings. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in the fall of 1993, the Accused advised that whenever there was an indication that someone had committed a criminal act it should be forwarded to the authorised body but that “if it is the state interest to stop it, we will see that, we will stop it just before the trial, but all of you will know that. All of you will know why something was postponed or why it was stopped for the interest of the state. However, it is not to be stopped without being investigated [...]”¹⁰⁹⁰⁰ Furthermore, the evidence demonstrates that the Accused was able to intervene in proceedings as he had a military judge removed from his position in 1994 after the judge refused to follow instructions from the Accused about how to rule on a case.¹⁰⁹⁰¹ In light of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Accused had influence and authority over the courts.¹⁰⁹⁰²

3413. In July 1992, the Accused assured international representatives that “war criminals” would be subjected to legal procedures.¹⁰⁹⁰³ However, Branko Đerić stated that when he advocated that procedures be put in place to prevent and try crimes in 1992, the Accused blocked such efforts and “thought that this could be dealt with later”, and the MUP and Ministry of Justice did not implement government decisions that crimes be prosecuted.¹⁰⁹⁰⁴ In addition, the Accused, in a meeting with Milorad Davidović and Mladić in the spring of 1992, said that while they should be trying to prevent looting and stealing by the Bosnian Serb MUP, it was more important to avoid conflicts between Serbs, even at the expense of not punishing criminal offences.¹⁰⁹⁰⁵ According to Branko Đerić, Mandić and Mićo Stanišić were the “President’s men”, taking orders directly from the Accused, and Đerić was dissatisfied with their work insofar as it related to security as they ignored government decisions with respect to prevention and prosecution of criminal activity.¹⁰⁹⁰⁶

3414. As discussed in greater detail below, there was a systemic failure to investigate and prosecute crimes committed against non-Serbs and few cases in which Bosnian Serbs committed crimes against non-Serbs reached military courts.¹⁰⁹⁰⁷ The cases prioritised by the military courts in Bijeljina and Banja Luka in August 1992 pertained to failure to respond to mobilisation and desertion by Bosnian Serb Forces and cases involving Serb victims.¹⁰⁹⁰⁸ The 10 July 1992 logbook for the prosecutor’s office in Ključ shows that criminal reports were filed against Bosnian Muslims, with only few being filed against Bosnian Serbs.¹⁰⁹⁰⁹ Furthermore, it was reported that most cases under investigation in the Military Court in Sarajevo in November 1993 pertained to crimes against the VRS.¹⁰⁹¹⁰

3415. In relation to crimes committed by Bosnian Serbs against non-Serbs, authorities either failed to investigate or actively prevented investigations or prosecutions.¹⁰⁹¹¹ In Zvornik, municipal authorities were made aware of the massacre at Drinjača Dom Kulture but nothing was done to investigate nor was there anything done to investigate the crimes committed at Karakaj Technical School.¹⁰⁹¹² Bratunac municipal authorities and police learned that civilians were brought to the hangar of Vuk Karadžić School and heard rumours some may have been killed but the Bratunac SJB Chief forbade the police from investigating.¹⁰⁹¹³ The Prijedor Crisis Staff and SJB, as well as the Banja Luka CSB and VRS were aware of the Room 3 massacre at Keraterm, however there was no investigation into the shootings or mention of the incident in reports on Keraterm.¹⁰⁹¹⁴ Sokolac municipal authorities became aware of the killings at Novoseoci on 22 September 1992 the same day but no investigation was carried out.¹⁰⁹¹⁵ Municipal authorities were aware of the crimes committed in the Luka Camp in Brčko.¹⁰⁹¹⁶ Slobodan Avlijaš visited Brčko and was informed that approximately 226 non-Serb civilians were killed in Brčko and buried in mass graves and subsequently prepared a report which indicated that the victims were killed in combat.¹⁰⁹¹⁷ However, there was never an investigation because according to Ristanić, it was impossible at the time.¹⁰⁹¹⁸ Crimes committed in Vlasenica were widely known and criminal reports were filed but there were no criminal or disciplinary proceedings.¹⁰⁹¹⁹ While the police organs and courts were fully organised and constituted in Novo Sarajevo they were not active in prosecuting individuals or protecting individuals.¹⁰⁹²⁰ Batko was committing crimes over a period of months there and the military police and prosecutor's office had the capacity to arrest and prosecute him but did not do so.¹⁰⁹²¹

situation at the time was satisfactory since the courts were then attached to commands and corps.¹⁰⁹²⁷

3418. The Chamber notes that in response to specific events, the Accused and other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership or Serb Forces sometimes called for criminal investigations. The Chamber notes the Accused's efforts to disband certain paramilitary groups, including through the assistance of the Federal SUP.¹⁰⁹²⁸ Furthermore, on hearing of the Korićanske Stijene incident, the Accused requested an investigation and on 31 August 1992, Mićo Stanišić ordered Župljanin, the chief of the Banja Luka CSB, to investigate the massacre.¹⁰⁹²⁹ However, Župljanin was advised by Drljača that an investigation could not be carried out because the officers who had participated in the convoy and incident were currently deployed in the battlefield.¹⁰⁹³⁰ The Chamber recalls that none of the policemen involved in the incident were held accountable for their involvement in the killings.¹⁰⁹³¹ Rather the intervention squad involved in the killings was disbanded and subsequently returned to active combat.¹⁰⁹³²

3419. On 6 April 1993, Prime Minister Vladimir Lukić, with the support of the Accused, demanded the Command of the SRK and the Main Staff of the VRS to investigate allegations of looting, killing, arson and rape in Novo Sarajevo committed by the VRS.¹⁰⁹³³ On 20 December 1994 Bogdan Subotić, on behalf of the Office of the RS President, ordered a thorough investigation of an incident involving members of special police and members of military police of the 2nd Krajina Corps.¹⁰⁹³⁴ In February 1994, the Accused was notified about a meeting of the municipal leaders, MUP, and military and judicial organs due to "a very bad situation regarding public law and order in Trebinje municipality" and that military security organs failed to execute ¹⁰⁹³¹ See para. 1845. The Chamber notes that Subotić testified that everybody "did their part of the job" with respect to the investigation. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable because Subotić's evidence was marked by indicators that he was seeking to minimise his own knowledge of the investigation which followed this incident and in light of the fact that none of the perpetrators were ever held accountable.

3420. During the conflict, there were some prosecutions of Serbs for crimes committed against non-Serbs.¹⁰⁹³⁷ However, the calls for investigations and the prosecutions were insufficient in light of the sheer number of serious offences which were not investigated and went unpunished.

¹⁰⁹³⁸ On 1 January 1994, the Accused ordered an inspection into the military prosecution system in Bijeljina after receiving reports of flaws in the system, primarily relating to the release of persons detained under reasonable that they were sufficient to hold persons accountable for the very serious offences which had been committed in the Municipalities against non-Serbs in light of the fact that so many crimes against non-Serbs went without investigation. In any event, the most serious crimes had already been committed by that time.¹⁰⁹³⁹

3422. In fact, the Accused was more concerned with punishing offences committed against Bosnian Serb Forces than the non-Serb civilian population. This is demonstrated by the fact the Accused made efforts to ensure that crimes committed against Serbs were investigated and documented. On 17 June 1992, the Accused created the State Documentation Centre for Investigation of War Crimes against Serb People and appointed its head.¹⁰⁹⁴⁰ On 13 July 1992 the Presidency concluded that the work of the Commission for War Crimes Committed against the Serbian People of BH be urgently activated.¹⁰⁹⁴¹ On 14 July 1992 the Government decided that measures be taken for the Commission to be activated for the establishment of war crimes perpetrated against the Serbs.¹⁰⁹⁴² On 6 August 1992, at a RS Presidency session, it was decided that the Commission for Investigating War Crimes Committed against the Serbian People must

On 8 August 1994, the Accused ordered the VRS Main Staff to submit a report on problems in the military disciplinary tribunals and proposals to improve their function D1421 (Radovan Karadžić's order to VRS Main Staff, 8 August 1994). On 6 September 1994, the Accused directed that criminal offences against life, limb, and property and the offence of war profiteering should be given priority and detention measures "applied to the maximum in the punishment of these offences" and instructing the Court and Prosecutor's Office to urgently review all murder cases currently being tried in military courts and to submit analysis to him so that he could take further measures as President of the Republic. D2993 (Radovan Karadžić's instruction to Supreme Military Court and Supreme Military Prosecutor's Office, 6 September 1994). The Military Prosecutor's Office of the VRS conveyed similar instructions to the Intelligence and Security Sector of the VRS Main Staff with reference to instructions from the President. D2998 (Supreme Military Prosecutor's Office report, 8 September 1994) On 11 September 1994, the Accused instructed the organs of military security to review murder cases and report any irregularities observed to the Office of the President of the Republic. In a session on 15 September 1994, the RS Government, with the support of the Accused, authorised the MUP and the Ministry of Justice and Administration to collect information on crimes against humanity and other crimes violating international law, irrespective of the ethnicity of the victims of those crimes. D3364 (Witness statement of Dušan Kozčić dated 7 April 2013), para. 18; D3373 (Excerpt from minutes of 4th session of RS Government, 15 September 1994), p. 2. On 15 December 1994, the Accused ordered the VRS Main Staff to issue instructions to security and military police organs setting forth their duty to act in accordance with requests and orders by military prosecutors' offices and military courts. commence its work.¹⁰⁹⁴³ Mladić issued an order on 25 September 1992 that information about victims of crimes committed by the “Croatian-Muslim coalition” should be reported.¹⁰⁹⁴⁴ On the same day, Plavšić ordered that all SAOs spread the word to their municipalities that it was necessary to urgently set up commissions to gather information on crimes perpetrated against the Serbs by the Croats and Muslims.¹⁰⁹⁴⁵

3423. On 28 September 1992, the Presidency concluded that the Committee for Investigation of Crimes against Serbian People should intensify its work.¹⁰⁹⁴⁶ On 14 December 1992 the Banja Luka CSB Department Chief wrote to all SJBs to inform them that a meeting of senior criminal investigators from all centres would occur the following week in Bijeljina, at which the process of documenting crimes against the Serb civilians, their property, and Orthodox cultural and religious property would be analysed.¹⁰⁹⁴⁷ At sessions of the Bosnian Serb Government on 6 April and 26 to 27 May 1993, the work of the “State Documentation Centre for the Investigation of Crimes Against Serbs” was discussed, as was the “special importance” to instigate criminal proceedings against individual and group perpetrators of “crimes and genocide against the Serbian people”.¹⁰⁹⁴⁸ In March 1995, the Accused advised the Bosnian Serb Assembly that after reviewing data prepared by the Ministry of Justice and the Republican Prosecutor’s Office on cases in civilian courts in 1994, that “on the whole, the situation in the domain of penal policy is unsatisfactory” and stated that “this might have far-reaching detrimental consequences for the overall defence capability of the Republic and the continued successful conduct of the war”; he proposed that the Assembly adopt a conclusion that civilian and military courts step up their work and pass more stringent sentences, especially with respect to criminal offences against the Serb Forces.¹⁰⁹⁴⁹

¹⁰⁹⁴⁹ D1427 (Radovan Karadžić’s letter to RS National Assembly, 10 March 1995), p. 1. In this regard, the Chamber notes that on 17 May 1995, following a meeting of the Government’s Commission for gathering data on international crimes committed in the RS, Marko Lugonja on behalf of the Intelligence and Security Department of the SRK Command sent out a request to the Commands of all SRK units to “gather all the data and evidence in the zones of your units on war crimes against humanity and international law committed by the enemy against the Serbs and Serbian people. was no cover-up of crimes in the MUP, including the CSBs and SJBs;¹⁰⁹⁵¹ (iii) there were problems in finding witnesses to proceed with a prosecution, especially in cases involving Muslim or Croat victims;¹⁰⁹⁵² (iv) there were purported issues deriving from the jurisdiction of the civilian and military systems, including confusion on the part of civilian and military authorities and inefficiency;¹⁰⁹⁵³ and (v) that investigations and prosecutions were made difficult due to lack of resources.¹⁰⁹⁵⁴

3425. Having considered all of the evidence, the Chamber finds that there was a systemic failure to investigate and prosecute criminal offences committed against non-Serbs in the Municipalities during the conflict. The Chamber rejects the evidence presented that the justice system treated all ethnicities the same in light of the compelling evidence demonstrating a lack of investigation and prosecution of the serious criminal acts committed against non-Serbs which were brought to the attention of authorities, as opposed to a clear willingness to investigate and prosecute crimes committed against Serbs.¹⁰⁹⁵⁵ In addition, lack of resources and difficulties with the determination of jurisdiction or finding witnesses does not explain or justify the lack of proceedings initiated against Serbs alleged to have committed crimes against non-Serbs because the evidence establishes that in most cases in 1992, absolutely nothing was done to investigate or prosecute the horrific crimes which were known to authorities. The Chamber considers that the inadequate level of investigations and prosecutions of crimes committed against non-Serbs is consistent with the Accused's position that such matters could be delayed during the conflict.¹⁰⁹⁵⁶

(F) Rewarding of those who committed crimes against non-Serbs

3426. The Prosecution submits that the Accused rewarded officials who had committed crimes against non-Serbs rather than punish them.¹⁰⁹⁵⁷ The Accused submits that there is no evidence that he rewarded an official who he knew had committed a crime and that proposals for promotions came from below.¹⁰⁹⁵⁸

3427. The Law on the Army provided the Accused with the exclusive competence to, inter alia, decide on the initial commission of officers, promote officers to the rank of Major General and above, and decide on the admission into service, subsequent appointment, transfer, and termination of service of officers with the rank of General.¹⁰⁹⁵⁹ It also authorised him to effect “exceptional promotion” with respect to those officers who did not meet the ordinary criteria of rank promotion and to raise the rank of those officers who were found to have exhibited courage and excelled in command and control skills.¹⁰⁹⁶⁰

3428. The Accused promoted several officials who he knew had committed criminal acts against non-Serbs or held extremist views. On 24 August 1992 the Accused appointed Jovan Tintor, then president of the Vogošća Crisis Staff,¹⁰⁹⁶¹ as a presidential advisor and in April 1995 praised him before the Bosnian Serb Assembly for giving “everything for this Party, for this people”.¹⁰⁹⁶² Tintor had been involved in the expulsion and mistreatment of non-Serbs from Vogošća, and surrounding areas.¹⁰⁹⁶³ He also held extremist views which were known to the Accused.¹⁰⁹⁶⁴

3429. The Accused awarded Mauzer’s Panthers on 9 January 1994.¹⁰⁹⁶⁵ The Accused was aware that Mauzer’s Panthers, a paramilitary group active in Bijeljina, was involved in planning and executing the forcible displacement of Bosnian Muslim civilians, committed killings and other crimes against non-Serb civilians in Bijeljina in 1992.¹⁰⁹⁶⁶

3430. The Accused also awarded Miroslav Deronjić on 9 January 1994 and later appointed him as Civilian Commissioner for Srebrenica on 11 July 1995.¹⁰⁹⁶⁷ Deronjić was the President of the SDS and chief of the Bratunac Crisis Staff and oversaw a policy of discrimination against Bosnian Muslims and was involved in operations leading to their expulsion from Bratunac and killings.¹⁰⁹⁶⁸ On 6 May 1992, it was reported to the Accused and Mladić that Deronjić was “killing all Muslims by slitting their throats”.¹⁰⁹⁶⁹

3431. The Accused personally promoted Vojkan Đurković to the rank of major and awarded him a medal at a ceremony in Bijeljina in 1994 although the Accused knew that he had participated in “ethnic cleansing” of non-Serbs during the conflict.¹⁰⁹⁷⁰ Furthermore, at a meeting of the VRS Main Staff on 5 April 1995, the Accused acknowledged that Vojkan had worked illegally.¹⁰⁹⁷¹

3432. In November 1993 and June 1994, the Accused promoted and awarded medals of bravery to members of the intervention squad, as well as high officials who were implicated in the Korićanske Stijene, such as Drljača, Paraš, Milutin Čađo.¹⁰⁹⁷² On 3 September 1992, the 1st Krajina Corps reported to the VRS Main Staff that Drljača was responsible for the incident at Korićanske Stijene and that it had caused indignation among citizens and members of the 1st Krajina Corps, creating a “dark stain”, but that it was fortunate that the “international community did not find out about it in more detail”.¹⁰⁹⁷³ Drljača was also the chief of the SJB in Prijedor and established Omarska by written order.¹⁰⁹⁷⁴

In addition one of the other Bosnian Serb leaders referred to in the notebook was “Rodoljub Đukanović”. In light of Miroslav Deronjić’s position as SDS President at the time, the Chamber finds that the reference is indeed to Miroslav Deronjić.

3433. The Chamber finds that the evidence that the Accused rewarded or promoted his subordinates, who he knew had committed crimes, demonstrates that the Accused was indifferent to whether they participated in criminal activity directed at non-Serbs during the conflict as long as the core objectives of the Bosnian Serbs were fulfilled.

b. Existence of a common plan shared by a plurality of persons

i. Common plan

3434. In this section the Chamber refers to its factual findings with respect to the Overarching JCE discussed above and will assess whether those facts establish that a common criminal purpose existed, and if so, when it came into existence and what was entailed in that common plan. The Chamber will also assess whether a plurality of persons acted pursuant to that common plan.

3435. The Chamber found that from 1990 and into mid-1991, the political objective of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership was to preserve Yugoslavia and to prevent the separation or independence of BiH.¹⁰⁹⁷⁵ The central themes of this objective were to preserve the unity of the Serb people and to ensure that Bosnian Serbs would not become a minority in an independent BiH.¹⁰⁹⁷⁶ The Chamber also found that in October 1991, when it became clear to the Bosnian Serb leadership that BiH was pursuing the path to independence and the Bosnian Serbs' objective of preserving Yugoslavia had been undermined, the focus shifted and plans were developed for the creation of a Bosnian Serb state.¹⁰⁹⁷⁷ The process of regionalisation and the creation of SAOs were the first steps in this process,¹⁰⁹⁷⁸ and were followed on 24 October 1991 by the decision of the Bosnian Serb deputies in the SRBiH Assembly to establish a separate assembly, which was ¹⁰⁹⁷⁵ See para. 2651.

¹⁰⁹⁷⁶ See para. 2652. See also para. 2942.

¹⁰⁹⁷⁷ See paras. 2654, 2711, 2941–2951. The Chamber recalls that it considered the Accused's statement in February 1992 about creating a "sovereign area of the Serbian people", and the supporting statements of both Koljević and Krajišnik, to be highly probative in terms of explaining the changing objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership. See paras. 2819–2820, 2840. The Chamber notes that during his testimony Jovanović tried to downplay any knowledge of statements made by the Bosnian Serb leadership regarding their aspirations in BiH and characterised them as "euphoric statements". The Chamber also noted that the witness showed indicators of bias during his testimony. The Chamber therefore does not rely on Jovanović's opinion or assessment about the goal of the Accused or the Bosnian Serb leadership. Similarly the Chamber has had regard to this credibility assessment and does not rely on Jovanović's assessment and characterisation of the Accused's rhetoric during the war. It also does not find his evidence regarding the objective of "Greater Serbia" to be reliable. Vladislav Jovanović, T. 34268–34271, 34296, 34301 (26 February 2013), 34347–34348, 34351–34352 (27 February 2013); D3015 (Witness statement of Vladislav Jovanović dated 22 February 2013), para. 54. See also D3026 (Article from Yugoslav Daily Survey entitled "Montenegrin President: Decisive Step towards Peace in Bosnia", 21 June 1993), p. 1.

¹⁰⁹⁷⁸ See paras. 2964–2965. Pašić stated that the Accused did not participate in the establishment of the communities of municipalities and was opposed to it and was not aware that the Bosnian Serb leadership used regionalisation as a means of grouping "Serbian" territories. D3849 (Witness statement of Radomir Pašić dated 5 July 2013), paras. 28–29, 32. However, the Chamber notes that Pašić's testimony was marked by evasiveness and indicators of insincerity which undermined the reliability of his evidence in this regard.

constituted the next day.¹⁰⁹⁷⁹ From that point on, there came into existence a plan which entailed the creation of parallel governmental structures to be followed by the physical take-over of Bosnian Serb claimed territory.¹⁰⁹⁸⁰ Physical control of territories was a core element of this plan and the plan envisaged a territorial re-organisation which would allow the Bosnian Serbs to claim control of a large percentage of the territory in BiH.¹⁰⁹⁸¹ These territorial claims were closely linked to the ideology promoted by the Bosnian Serb leadership, as they tried to revive historical territorial rights and focused on the perceived threats faced by the Bosnian Serbs from Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who were portrayed as their historic enemies.¹⁰⁹⁸²

3436. The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership intended that these take-over operations be achieved militarily and that Bosnian Serbs maintain control over this territory through parallel structures of authority.¹⁰⁹⁸³ This plan to take physical control of Bosnian Serb claimed territory in the Municipalities through military means required the mobilisation and co-ordinated actions of the Serb Forces.¹⁰⁹⁸⁴ Earlier in this Judgement, the Chamber found that the use of force was envisaged to take-over power and there was no genuine concern about the manner in which power was taken.¹⁰⁹⁸⁵

3437. Once the Bosnian Serb Assembly was set up, the Accused issued the Variant A/B Instructions in December 1991 to ensure preparations at the municipal level for the establishment of an ethnically homogeneous separate state. The Chamber found above that these instructions were central in terms of furthering the objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership from December 1991 onwards.¹⁰⁹⁸⁶ The Chamber found that the structures and organs created pursuant to the Variant A/B Instructions—first and foremost the Crisis Staffs—played a central role in preparing for, and carrying out, the Bosnian Serb take-overs in the Municipalities and in maintaining Bosnian Serb authority and power after the take-overs were completed.¹⁰⁹⁸⁷ These ¹⁰⁹⁸⁷ See paras. 3072–3096. Defence witnesses testified inter alia that Crisis Staffs (i) were established at various levels in BiH and were simply a means of responding to a crisis situation; (ii) were by no means “a secret system of command and control”; (iii) operated independently and did not receive instructions from the SDS leadership; and (iv) did not plan for the persecution of non-Serbs. D4194 (Witness statement of Sveto Kovačević dated 7 December 2013), paras. 10, 23; D4027 (Witness statement of Nikola Poplašen dated 11 November 2013), para. 5. While the Chamber did find that Crisis Staffs were created at different levels in BiH and also by Bosnian Muslims, the Chamber does not find the remainder of the evidence of these witnesses to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the manner in which the Crisis Staffs were created pursuant to the Variant A/B Instructions and the manner in which they were used to establish Bosnian parallel structures were also created in such a way that the objectives, plans, and instructions of the Bosnian Serb leadership were easily communicated to Bosnian Serb leaders at a municipal level.¹⁰⁹⁸⁸

3438. On 12 May 1992, six months after the issuance of the Variant A/B Instructions, and after the second level of those instructions had been activated, the Accused presented the Strategic Goals before the Bosnian Serb Assembly. The Chamber found earlier that these Strategic Goals not only reflected the objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership but were also viewed as instructions to be followed at a municipal level in order to achieve those objectives.¹⁰⁹⁸⁹

3439. The Chamber finds that there was nothing in the Variant A/B Instructions or the Strategic Goals which called for the commission of crimes per se. However, the Chamber found that ethnic separation and the creation of a largely ethnically homogeneous entity were some of the core aspects of the Strategic Goals and that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership planned the military implementation of these goals which necessarily entailed the take-over of territory and the forcible movement of the non-Serb population to achieve that objective.¹⁰⁹⁹⁰ Therefore, it is clear that the Variant A/B Instructions and Strategic Goals created the basis, and laid the foundations, for the structures through which a criminal purpose could be achieved. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber also had regard to the manner in which the Variant A/B Instructions and Strategic Goals were implemented throughout the Municipalities and the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership with respect to ethnic separation. This involved a widespread and systematic pattern of crimes committed by Serb Forces against non-Serbs throughout the Municipalities, which is discussed in further detail below.

3440. The Chamber finds that the planned take-over of Bosnian Serb claimed territories went beyond the establishment of authority; it also entailed the removal of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in order to create a largely ethnically homogeneous entity.¹⁰⁹⁹¹ This was founded on the ideology that Bosnian Serbs could not co-exist with Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.¹⁰⁹⁹²

Serb authority and control over municipalities and their involvement in crimes committed against non-Serbs. It also noted that the evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by contradictions, evasiveness, and indicators of bias which undermined the credibility of their evidence in this regard.

¹⁰⁹⁸⁹ See paras. 2899–2903.

¹⁰⁹⁹⁰ See paras. 2895–2903.

¹⁰⁹⁹² See paras. 2839–2956, 2895–2896. See also paras. 2670–2673.

3442. The Chamber found that a vast number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities were forcibly displaced from the homes, villages, and towns in which they were lawfully present to other locations in BiH or third countries. Victims were given limited time to leave their homes, loaded onto trucks, buses, or trains and transported out of the Municipalities. The Chamber found that in many cases Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to leave following attacks against their villages or after the take-over of towns by Serb Forces. Many others were first arrested, and then unlawfully detained in detention facilities and transported out of the Municipalities. These expulsions resulted in drastic changes to the ethnic composition of towns and by 1995, almost no Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats remained in many of the Municipalities.

3443. In particular, the Chamber found that, in a similar pattern throughout the Municipalities, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs were involved in the systematic forced movement of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities, including in creating an environment of fear in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats had no choice but to leave the Municipalities.¹⁰⁹⁹⁴ The Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were displaced as a result of, or following physical force, threat of force, or coercion, or that they fled out of fear. This fear was caused by ongoing violence and various crimes committed against non-Serbs including inter alia killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, unlawful detention, rape and other acts of sexual violence, discriminatory measures, and wanton destruction of villages, houses and cultural monuments.¹⁰⁹⁹⁵

3444. Further, the similar manner and the short time period in which these crimes were committed support the conclusion that these crimes were committed during the course of well planned and coordinated operations which involved the military take-over of Municipalities and the expulsion of non-Serbs. The Chamber found that most of the crimes were committed between April to October 1992 in each of the Municipalities but then continued through to the end of the conflict.

¹⁰⁹⁹³ See Section IV.A.2.v: Genocide: Count 1.

¹⁰⁹⁹⁴ See Section IV.A.2.iii: Deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer): Counts 7 and 8.

The Chamber found that many of the attacks on towns and villages in the Municipalities were carried out in an organised and co-ordinated fashion and involved members of the Serb Forces. These attacks and the crimes which were committed during and after the take-overs followed a similar pattern across the Municipalities.¹⁰⁹⁹⁶

3445. Having regard to the clear systematic and organised pattern of crimes which were committed in each of the Municipalities by members of the Serb Forces, over a short time period, the Chamber finds that these crimes were not committed in a random manner, but were committed in a co-ordinated fashion.

3446. The Accused disputes that there was a systematic expulsion of non-Serbs from the RS by arguing that the Prosecution disregarded the majority of municipalities where non-Serbs were protected and that this undermines the theory that there was a common plan.¹⁰⁹⁹⁷ The Chamber does not consider that there is any merit to this argument, given that the Chamber found that the twenty municipalities in which these crimes were committed, and in relation to which the Chamber was tasked with entering findings, were of strategic importance to the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership and formed part of Bosnian Serb claimed territory. Even if there were no crimes committed in other municipalities in BiH, not covered by the Indictment, it would not affect the Chamber's conclusion that crimes were committed in a systematic and organised manner in the Municipalities.

3447. Having weighed the evidence discussed above in light of the systematic and organised manner in which crimes were committed in each of the Municipalities, the Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that between October 1991 and 30 November 1995 there existed a common plan to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory through the crimes as set out in more detail below. The Chamber finds that starting in October 1991, the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership agreed on how they would respond to the declaration of sovereignty in BiH and the measures they would take to create their own ethnically homogeneous state.

ii. Plurality of persons

3448. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused worked together with other Bosnian Serb military and political leaders to achieve the objective of the common plan.¹⁰⁹⁹⁸ While the Prosecution submits that the membership of the alleged JCE fluctuated over time, it argues that each member made a significant contribution to achieving the common criminal purpose.¹⁰⁹⁹⁹ The Prosecution then proceeds to list the named members of the alleged Overarching JCE and their respective contributions to the common plan.¹¹⁰⁰⁰

3449. Beginning in late 1991, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić were intimately involved with the Accused in developing the policies and plans which formed the foundation of the common plan as defined above. They made speeches on the themes of preventing the independence of BiH and that Bosnian Serbs could not live with Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, and ultimately advocated the separation of the three peoples and the creation of a separate Serb state.¹¹⁰⁰¹ For Krajišnik, the goal of separating from the Bosnian Muslims was the most important task and he often recalled that the main Bosnian Serb objective was to create their own, “ethnically pure” state.¹¹⁰⁰² Krajišnik and Plavšić both spoke of ethnic cleansing as something that was necessary to achieve the goals of the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹¹⁰⁰³ Krajišnik and Plavšić specifically agreed with the Accused that Bosnian Muslims should be transferred out of Bosnian Serb territory given that they could not live together.¹¹⁰⁰⁴ Plavšić went as far as to state that “if it takes the lives of 3 million people to solve this crisis, lets get it done and move on”.¹¹⁰⁰⁵ In addition, Koljević repeatedly called for the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims and the homogeneity of territories, claiming it was impossible for Serbs to live with anyone else.¹¹⁰⁰⁶ Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić also participated in formulating and promoting the Strategic Goals, and took steps to ensure they were implemented, and that organisational structures were created through which the criminal purpose could be achieved.¹¹⁰⁰⁷

3450. In addition to their participation in the creation of the common plan and agreement with the political objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership, the roles held by Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić throughout the conflict are indicative of their further contributions to the common plan. Together with the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić were considered the top most powerful leaders in the RS.¹¹⁰⁰⁸ Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić were three of the five members of the RS Presidency; Krajišnik was President of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and

Koljević and Plavšić were Vice-Presidents of the RS; all three were appointed to deal with important issues throughout the conflict, relating to detention centres, communications with international organisations, as well as information and propaganda.¹¹⁰⁰⁹

3451. Krajišnik had great authority among the Bosnian Serb municipal leaders and had the ability to issue orders and influence how power should be exercised at the municipal level.¹¹⁰¹⁰ Plavšić herself openly supported Serbian paramilitary units and invited them to BiH to support the war efforts and was a link between these units and the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹¹⁰¹¹ The Chamber further found that Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić attended meetings and events throughout the Municipalities and were informed of crimes committed during and after the take-over of the Municipalities and in detention facilities there; furthermore, they were specifically informed of efforts to forcibly remove non-Serbs from the Municipalities which was the very result intended by the Bosnian Serb leadership from the inception of their plan.¹¹⁰¹²

3452. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that together with the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić shared the intent to effect the common plan to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory, and through their positions in the Bosnian Serb leadership and involvement throughout the Municipalities, they contributed to the execution of the common plan from October 1991 until at least 30 November 1995.

3453. Turning to Mladić, beginning on 12 May 1992 when the Accused recruited and appointed him as Commander of the Main Staff, he commanded the highest body of the VRS pursuant to the authority delegated to him by the Accused, and issued regulations, orders, and instructions, implementing orders issued by the Accused.¹¹⁰¹³ Given his position and influence, Mladić was closely involved with, and was kept well-informed of, military developments throughout the Municipalities, including during the take-over of towns by units of the VRS and in detention facilities where non-Serbs were held between April 1992 and November 1995.¹¹⁰¹⁴ As stated above, the Chamber found that Mladić shared the objective with the Bosnian Serb leadership that Bosnian Serbs could not co-exist with Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and agreed with and promoted the plan to create a separate Bosnian Serb state and in particular took steps to ensure that the Strategic Goals were implemented. The Chamber therefore finds that Mladić shared the intent to effect the common plan and contributed to the execution of the common plan through his role as Commander of the Main Staff and close involvement in operations by VRS units during which there were forced expulsions of non-Serbs and other crimes committed in the Municipalities. Furthermore, the Chamber found that despite periods of tension and disagreements between the Accused and Mladić on certain aspects, the Accused maintained his role as Mladić's superior and had de jure control over him, and exercised such control over him in fact throughout the conflict; thus, any temporary disagreements between the Accused and Mladić did not undermine their agreement or Mladić's contributions to the common plan at any point between his appointment on 12 May 1992 until at least 30 November 1995.¹¹⁰¹⁵

3454. With respect to Mićo Stanišić and Mandić, Stanišić was the Minister of the MUP in 1992 and Mandić was the Deputy Minister of the MUP until May 1992, and subsequently, the RS Minister of Justice from May to November 1992; both were closely involved in the creation and development of the Bosnian Serb MUP from as early as 1992.¹¹⁰¹⁶ The Chamber found that the directives with respect to the division of the MUP structures and the creation of the Bosnian Serb MUP were communicated to and implemented at a municipal level. These were crucial steps in the take-over of Municipalities, as a separate police structure would allow Bosnian Serb authority to be maintained in the Municipalities.¹¹⁰¹⁷ The creation of this separate Bosnian Serb MUP was a means of achieving the objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership, and Mićo Stanišić and Mandić contributed to the execution of the common plan through their involvement in this process.

3455. In addition, as head of the MUP, Mićo Stanišić was informed of operations throughout the Municipalities during which there were forced expulsions of non-Serbs and other crimes committed.¹¹⁰¹⁸ Mandić was responsible for the exchange of detainees through the Central Commission for the Exchange of Prisoners of War and Arrested Persons and was informed of non-Serbs being forcibly moved out of the Municipalities.¹¹⁰¹⁹ Both Mićo Stanišić and Mandić were considered the "President's men"; Stanišić affirmed his allegiance to the Accused and the SDS stating that he had always followed the policies of the SDS Presidency and he would not allow himself to be separated from them.¹¹⁰²⁰ Furthermore, Mandić made statements during the conflict that demonstrated his participation in the shared common plan, including when he stressed "we should split Bosnia in two parts” and that Muslims and Croats would have rights after “we clean them out”.¹¹⁰²¹

3456. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that through their participation in the creation of the Bosnian Serb MUP structure, its very goal being to achieve Bosnian Serb authority in the Municipalities, together with the fact that through their positions as Minister and Deputy Minister of the MUP, and later Minister of Justice, Mićo Stanišić and Mandić were closely involved with the units carrying out the operations to forcibly remove non-Serbs from the Municipalities as well as the commission of other crimes. As such, the Chamber finds that Mićo Stanišić and Mandić contributed to the execution of the common plan until the end of 1992. Given that both Mandić and Mićo Stanišić left their positions at the end of 1992, the Chamber cannot find that they were members of the Overarching JCE after this period.

3457. Turning to Arkan and Šešelj, both provided and trained units of men who were involved in operations throughout the Municipalities during which forced expulsions of non-Serbs and other crimes occurred. In addition, the Chamber found that Arkan communicated with Plavšić during the conflict and the Accused and Mićo Stanišić were informed of the involvement of Arkan’s men in the take-over of Municipalities and crimes committed by his units.¹¹⁰²² Arkan was invited by the RS Presidency to participate in military operations in the Municipalities; Arkan was also openly praised by Plavšić and the Accused for his contributions to the efforts to defend the Bosnian Serbs throughout the conflict.¹¹⁰²³ Even as he left BiH, Arkan repeated his commitment to the Accused to return to defend the “Serbian territory” if called upon by the Accused.¹¹⁰²⁴

3458. Regarding Šešelj, he was in frequent contact with the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership and supported the policies of the SDS. More specifically, Šešelj advocated for a homogeneous Greater Serbia which involved the unification of all Serb lands and the removal of the non-Serb population; as such he clearly shared the common plan. He sent large groups of SRS volunteer fighters to assist the Bosnian Serbs in BiH in the implementation of the common plan throughout the conflict and contributed to the execution of the common plan as such.¹¹⁰²⁵

¹¹⁰²⁴ See para. 3325.

¹¹⁰²⁵ See paras. 3327–3330. Šešelj also stated there was no joint criminal enterprise between the Accused, himself, and other individuals to expel Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and that the Accused did not have an antagonistic attitude towards Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. D3665 (Witness statement of Vojislav Šešelj dated 1 June 2013), paras. 31–35, 39, 41; D3667 (Transcript of Vojislav Šešelj’s press conference, 26 March 1992), p. 20; Vojislav Šešelj, T. 39600–39605 (10 June 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence 3459. The Chamber therefore finds that Arkan and Šešelj both contributed to the common plan as envisaged by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership by providing and training men who were involved in operations throughout the Municipalities during which there were forced expulsions of non-Serbs and other crimes were committed.

3460. With regard to the evidence presented in this case in relation to Slobodan Milošević and his membership in the JCE, the Chamber recalls that he shared and endorsed the political objective of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership to preserve Yugoslavia and to prevent the separation or independence of BiH and co-operated closely with the Accused during this time. The Chamber also recalls that Milošević provided assistance in the form of personnel, provisions, and arms to the Bosnian Serbs during the conflict.¹¹⁰²⁶ However, based on the evidence before the Chamber regarding the diverging interests that emerged between the Bosnian Serb and Serbian leaderships during the conflict and in particular, Milošević's repeated criticism and disapproval of the policies and decisions made by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership,¹¹⁰²⁷ the Chamber is not satisfied that there was sufficient evidence presented in this case to find that Slobodan Milošević agreed with the common plan.

3461. Finally, with respect to Jovica Stanišić and Franko Simatović, head and deputy head of the SDB, respectively, the Chamber recalls that Arkan's men and the Red Berets were subordinated to them and that they sent units to BiH which were involved in take-over operations in the Municipalities during the conflict; Stanišić and Simatović were also involved in establishing and monitoring training camps for Bosnian Serbs.¹¹⁰²⁸ However, the Chamber is not satisfied that there was sufficient evidence presented in this case to find that Jovica Stanišić and Franko Simatović agreed with the common plan.

3462. The Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused, Momčilo Krajišnik, Nikola Koljević, Biljana Plavšić, Ratko Mladić,¹¹⁰²⁹ Mićo Stanišić,¹¹⁰³⁰ Momčilo to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considered that Šešelj had a clear self-interest in testifying in this regard and his evidence was marked by political statements.

¹¹⁰²⁶ See paras. 3275–3288.

¹¹⁰²⁷ The Chamber notes that the relationship between Milošević and the Accused had deteriorated beginning in 1992; by 1994, they no longer agreed on a course of action to be taken. Furthermore, beginning as early as March 1992, there was apparent discord between the Accused and Milošević in meetings with international representatives, during which Milošević and other Serbian leaders openly criticised Bosnian Serb leaders of committing “crimes against humanity” and “ethnic cleansing” and the war for their own purposes. See paras. 3280, 3289–3297.

¹¹⁰²⁸ See paras. 3312, 3314–3315, 3317–3320.

¹¹⁰²⁹ The Chamber finds that Ratko Mladić was a member of the Overarching JCE from 12 May 1992.

¹¹⁰³⁰ The Chamber finds that Mićo Stanišić was a member of the Overarching JCE until the end of 1992.

Mandić,¹¹⁰³¹ Željko Ražnatović (Arkan), and Vojislav Šešelj were members of the Overarching JCE and that they formed a plurality of persons who acted pursuant to the common plan that existed between October 1991 and 30 November 1995 as defined above.

iii. Scope of common plan

3463. In concluding that a common plan existed to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory in the Municipalities from October 1991 to 30 November 1995, the Chamber had regard to its findings that in internal discussions among Bosnian Serb leaders it was clear that the forcible movement of the population had occurred and had taken place in accordance with instructions received from the highest level of the Bosnian Serb leadership and was well planned.¹¹⁰³² The Chamber also had regard to its findings that the Accused and the other members of the Overarching JCE were not only informed about the forcible take-over of towns and municipalities by Serb Forces, but were also aware that this had led to massive demographic changes through the forcible displacement of non-Serb civilians and resulted in ethnic homogenisation, which they supported.¹¹⁰³³ The Chamber found that the Overarching JCE members, including the Accused, promoted and shared the objective of creating a Bosnian Serb state which was ethnically pure and contiguous Serb areas that would require a re-distribution of the population.¹¹⁰³⁴

¹¹⁰³¹ The Chamber finds that Momčilo Mandić was a member of the Overarching JCE until the end of 1992.

¹¹⁰³² The Chamber notes that Defence witnesses testified, inter alia, that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership (i) pursued policies which tried to preserve peace; (ii) tried to accommodate and respect the rights of non-Serbs; and (iii) did not support or plan the forcible movement of the population or the commission of crimes against non-Serbs. Kosta Čavoški, T. 37052 (11 April 2013); Dragomir Keserović, T. 40914–40915, 40944–40946 (8 July 2013); D4194 (Witness statement of Sveto Kovačević dated 7 December 2013), paras. 5, 9, 15–16, 37; D4063 (Witness statement of Novak Kondić dated 23 November 2013), paras. 5–7; D4166 (Witness statement of Mikan Davidović dated 1 December 2013), para. 7; D3861 (Witness statement of Radovan M. Karadžić dated 14 July 2013), paras. 5, 10–11; D3051 (Witness statement of Momir Bulatović dated 25 February 2013), paras. 16, 18–18A, 46; Momir Bulatović, T. 34540–34541 (28 February 2013), T. 34560–34561 (1 March 2013); D4027 (Witness statement of Nikola Poplašen dated 11 November 2013), paras. 18, 21; D3089 (Witness statement of Milivoje Kićanović dated 3 March 2013), paras. 18–19; D3072 (Witness statement of Pero Marković dated 1 March 2013), para. 28; D4313 (Witness statement of Gojko Kličković dated 7 February 2014), paras. 3–8; D3146 (Witness statement of Božidar Vučurević, 22 March 2013), para. 5. However, the Chamber finds that their testimony was marked by contradictions, evasiveness, and clear indicators of partiality and bias, or was based on their own unfounded assessment or impressions. The Chamber found that these factors undermined their evidence and does not find their evidence in this regard to be reliable. While Ronald Hatchett also testified that the Accused was committed to ending fighting and saving civilians, this observation was only limited to his own assessment during meetings with the Accused in 1994 and is thus of limited weight. D2741 (Witness statement of Ronald Hatchett dated 13 January 2013), paras. 10–12.

¹¹⁰³³ See paras. 2846, 2850, 2852, 3363. Dodik testified that he never heard anyone at a Bosnian Serb Assembly or meeting speak about the permanent removal of Bosnian Croats or Muslims from BiH and that the Accused sought to resolve conflicts peacefully and the crimes in BiH were committed by paramilitaries. Milorad Dodik, T. 36842–36843, 36914 (9 April 2013). The Chamber notes however that Dodik's evidence was marked by contradictions, indicators of insincerity, and partisanship which undermined the reliability of his evidence in this regard.

3464. The Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference to draw from all of the evidence analysed earlier in this Judgement is that the crimes of deportation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and persecution (forcible transfer and deportation) were intended to achieve the objective of the Overarching JCE and that the Accused and other members of that JCE shared the intent for these crimes. With respect to forcible transfer and deportation as underlying acts of persecution, the Chamber also finds that the Accused and the other members of the Overarching JCE shared the specific intent to discriminate on the basis of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.¹¹⁰³⁵

3465. Similarly, the Chamber also had regard to the manner in which the take-over of Municipalities was carried out by Serb Forces and the number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who were residing in the Municipalities prior to their take-over. With respect to the widespread practice of unlawfully arresting and detaining non-Serbs prior to removing them from Bosnian Serb claimed territory, the Chamber notes that there were repeated attempts by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership to justify the existence of detention facilities in which they knew that civilians were detained. Promises were also made to international representatives to improve conditions and release detainees.¹¹⁰³⁶ However, the Chamber finds, in light of its factual findings with respect to the Municipalities, that these assurances were completely at odds with the reality on the ground. This reality involved the unlawful arrest and detention of thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats following the forcible take-over by Serb Forces of villages, towns, and municipalities, before they were ultimately transferred to other locations.¹¹⁰³⁷ The Chamber finds that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership were not only aware of these detention facilities but used unlawful detention at these facilities as a core element in achieving their objective of the permanent removal of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory. They also used the unlawful detention of civilians to secure the “exchange” of Bosnian Serbs detained by Bosnian Muslims. The Chamber therefore finds that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership shared the intent to unlawfully detain Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as one of the means through which they could achieve their objective of ethnic separation. The Chamber therefore finds that the only reasonable inference from this evidence is that the crime of persecution, through the underlying acts of unlawful detention and the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures, was intended to achieve the objective of ¹¹⁰³⁵ In addition, based on all the evidence, the Chamber finds that the Accused was aware that his conduct as discussed further below was part of a widespread and systematic attack directed against a civilian population.

¹¹⁰³⁶ See Section IV.A.3.a.v.B: Knowledge of inadequate conditions and mistreatment of non-Serbs in detention centres.

¹¹⁰³⁷ See Section IV.A.3.a.v.B: Knowledge of inadequate conditions and mistreatment of non-Serbs in detention centres.

the Overarching JCE and that the Overarching JCE members, including the Accused, shared the intent for these crimes. With respect to these underlying acts of persecution, the Chamber also finds that the Accused and the Overarching JCE members shared the specific intent to discriminate against the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats on the basis of their identity.¹¹⁰³⁸

3466. Thus the scope of the Overarching JCE includes the crimes of deportation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), persecution (forcible transfer and deportation), and persecution through the underlying acts of unlawful detention and the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures (“JCE I Crimes”). However, having considered all of the relevant evidence, the Chamber finds that it is insufficient to demonstrate that the only reasonable inference is that the other acts of persecution charged in Count 3 of the Indictment or the crimes of murder and extermination charged in Counts 4, 5, and 6 of the Indictment were included in the common plan or intended by the Accused. In coming to this conclusion, the Chamber has considered not only the evidence of the Accused’s intent for the JCE I Crimes, but also that the Accused received information about the perpetration of crimes committed by Serb Forces against non-Serbs throughout the conflict, including that Serb Forces killed approximately 45 non-Serb civilians in Bijeljina in April 1992 and approximately 200 non-Serb detainees at Korićanske Stijene in August 1992 and continued to act in furtherance of the common plan. The Chamber is of the view that another reasonable inference available on the evidence is that while the Accused did not intend for these other crimes to be committed, he did not care enough to stop pursuing the common plan to forcibly remove the non-Serb population from the Municipalities. While the Chamber considers that these other crimes resulted from the campaign to forcibly remove the non-Serb population from the Municipalities, the Chamber does not find them to be an intended part of the common plan. The Chamber will therefore consider below whether the Accused is responsible for these crimes pursuant to the third form of JCE liability below.

c. Accused’s contribution to the Overarching JCE

i. Submissions of the Parties

3467. Having found that the Overarching JCE existed from October 1991 and continued until at least 30 November 1995, the Chamber will now assess whether the Accused’s significantly contributed towards that JCE during this time period. In making that assessment the Chamber has limited itself to the Accused’s conduct during the period of the Overarching JCE. Any conduct which falls outside the temporal scope of the Overarching JCE has only been considered, if at all, for the purpose of establishing the Accused's intent to participate in the JCE. It can now turn to each of the alleged contributions through which the Prosecution alleges the Accused implemented the Overarching JCE.

¹¹⁰³⁸ In addition, based on all the evidence, the Chamber finds that the Accused was aware that his conduct as discussed further below was part of a widespread and systematic attack directed against a civilian population.

3468. In paragraph 14 of the Indictment, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused significantly contributed to achieving the objective of the Overarching JCE through the commission of crimes in one or more of the following ways:

(a) Formulating, promoting, participating in, and/or encouraging the development and implementation of SDS and Bosnian Serb governmental policies intended to advance the objective of the JCE;

(b) Participating in the establishment, support and/or maintenance of Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and Bosnian Serb Forces through which the objective of the JCE was implemented;

(c) Disseminating, encouraging and/or facilitating the dissemination of propaganda to Bosnian Serbs intended to engender in Bosnian Serbs fear and hatred of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats or to otherwise win support for and participation in achieving the objective of the JCE;¹¹⁰³⁹

(d) Directing, encouraging, facilitating, and/or authorising Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs, SDS officials and members, and Serb Forces to carry out acts in furtherance of the objective of the JCE;

(e) Participating in the design or formulation of acts carried out by Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs, SDS officials and members, and Serb Forces in furtherance of the objective of the JCE;

(f) Obtaining, facilitating, encouraging and/or supporting the participation of JNA/VJ forces and Serbian paramilitary forces to further the objective of the JCE;

(g) Failing to take adequate steps to ensure that Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and/or Bosnian Serb Forces would act to protect Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats residing in areas under their control;

(h) Facilitating and/or encouraging the commission by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs of crimes that furthered the objective of the JCE by failing to take adequate steps to prevent and/or investigate such crimes, and/or arrest and/or punish the perpetrators of such crimes;

(i) Engaging in, supporting, and/or facilitating efforts to deny or provide misleading information about crimes against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and about the role Serb Forces had played in those crimes to representatives of the international community, non-governmental organisations, the media, and the public; and ¹¹⁰³⁹ The Prosecution submits that this included claims (i) that Bosnian Serbs were in jeopardy of oppression, including genocide, at the hands of Bosnian Muslims and Croats; and (ii) that territories on which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats resided were Bosnian Serb land. See Indictment, para. 14(c).

(j) Directing and/or authorising the restriction of humanitarian aid to Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat enclaves located in territory controlled by Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and/or Bosnian Serb Forces in an effort to create unbearable living conditions for inhabitants there in furtherance of the objective of the JCE.¹¹⁰⁴⁰

3469. The Prosecution argues that the Accused led the Overarching JCE in translating the pro-Serb ideology into SDS and governmental policies designed to further the objective of the permanent forcible removal of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory.¹¹⁰⁴¹ The Prosecution submits that the Accused was the key figure in creating power structures that would transform policy into action by transforming the SDS bodies into RS structures and laying the groundwork for the creation of the Bosnian Serb MUP, Crisis Staffs, Bosnian Serb Government and Presidency, TO brigades, and the VRS.¹¹⁰⁴²

3470. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused dominated, guided, and directed the actions of the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and Serb Forces throughout the period of the Indictment.¹¹⁰⁴³ The Prosecution further argues that the Accused disseminated propaganda to incite Bosnian Serb fear and hatred of Muslims and Croats, which had the effect of encouraging his subordinates to follow his example.¹¹⁰⁴⁴ The Prosecution also argues that the Accused obtained, facilitated, and encouraged the participation of JNA forces in arming Serbs and in the take-over of the Municipalities; the Accused further oversaw and encouraged the participation of Serb paramilitaries in pursuit of the common purpose.¹¹⁰⁴⁵

3471. The Prosecution argues that the Accused, by denying the commission of crimes, justifying them, and/or misleading the international community and the media, created an environment of impunity, through which he encouraged the ongoing implementation of the common plan¹¹⁰⁴⁶ The Prosecution further submits that the Accused (i) failed to take adequate steps to ensure that Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and/or Bosnian Serb Forces would act to protect non-Serbs in Serb claimed territory, and (ii) by doing so, in turn facilitated and/or encouraged the commission of crimes in furtherance of the common purpose of the Overarching JCE.¹¹⁰⁴⁷

With regard to whether the Accused's contribution to the Overarching JCE through obtaining, facilitating, encouraging, and/or supporting the participation of the JNA/VJ forces and Serbian paramilitary forces, the Chamber has included the VJ/JNA and Serbian paramilitary forces under the definition of Serb Forces. See Indictment, para. 14(f). See also para. 159.

¹¹⁰⁴⁷ See Prosecution Final Brief, para. 601; Indictment, para. 14(g), 14(h).

3472. In response, the Accused argues, inter alia, that he never had the objective of expelling Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Serb areas of BiH and that he did everything humanely possible to avoid the war.¹¹⁰⁴⁸ The Accused further alleges that he did not promote hatred against other peoples and that, in fact, he always promoted respect for the Geneva Conventions and insisted on humane treatment of non-Serb civilians and prisoners of war.¹¹⁰⁴⁹ Furthermore, he concedes that at a state level, there were plans to defend Serbs or to protect Serb territory, but that there were never any plans or instructions on harming, expelling, or disenfranchising non-Serbs.¹¹⁰⁵⁰ According to the Accused, the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs were not created or maintained for the purpose of committing crimes against non-Serbs.¹¹⁰⁵¹ The Accused also contends that he had no control over the VRS and that he did not support or use paramilitaries to implement the common plan.¹¹⁰⁵² The Accused argued inter alia that the Strategic Goals were not the basis for the expulsion or destruction of non-Serbs in RS and were merely political goals to be realised through negotiations.¹¹⁰⁵³ The Accused submits that he did not promote a climate of impunity for crimes committed against non-Serbs.¹¹⁰⁵⁴ Furthermore, the Accused argues that there was no JCE and moreover, that he did not possess the intent to further any common plan of the JCE or to commit crimes.¹¹⁰⁵⁵ Finally, according to the Accused, his only “significant contribution” is shown in his efforts to maintain peace, legal order, and the security for all citizens in BiH.¹¹⁰⁵⁶ of humanitarian aid to the Eastern enclaves in an effort to create unbearable living conditions, the Accused furthered the common purpose of the Overarching JCE.¹¹⁰⁵⁸

3474. However, the Chamber does not consider restrictions on humanitarian aid to be relevant to the Accused's alleged contribution to the achievement of the objective of the Overarching JCE for the following reasons. The Chamber recalls that the crime base for which the Accused ultimately faces responsibility in relation to the Overarching JCE mainly pertains to events in 1992 and 1993 in twenty municipalities in BiH defined by the Chamber earlier in this Judgement as the "Municipalities". Above, the Chamber found that the crimes of murder, extermination, persecution, deportation, and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) were committed in the Municipalities by Serb Forces during and after their take-over and in detention facilities there. The Chamber did not receive any evidence of restrictions of humanitarian aid into the Municipalities, which would have contributed to the creation of unbearable living conditions forcing the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat populations from these Municipalities to move out. The evidence that the Chamber did receive was that there were restrictions on humanitarian aid going into the Eastern BiH enclaves—Bihać, Goražde, Žepa, and Srebrenica from the spring of 1993 until the summer of 1995.¹¹⁰⁵⁹ The Chamber is not satisfied that such restrictions can attach in any meaningful way to the Accused's alleged contribution to the common purpose of the Overarching JCE, which was implemented through the commission of crimes committed in the Municipalities primarily in 1992 and 1993; therefore well before the period of these restrictions elsewhere in BiH.

ii. Analysis

3475. The Chamber found that the Accused was at the forefront of developing and promoting the ideology of the SDS. This ideology included the non-separation of Serbs, the identification of historical Serb territories, and the creation of a unified Serb nation. These principles formed a core element of the policies of the SDS and informed the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹¹⁰⁶⁰ As the Chamber found above, while the political objectives themselves were not criminal, they created the basis and laid the foundations for the structures through which a criminal purpose could be achieved.¹¹⁰⁶¹ The Chamber finds that the Accused, first as President of the SDS, and then in turn as President of the SNB, Presidency, and RS, played the most important role in laying the ground work for that criminal implementation through the creation of, and support for, the structures and bodies which carried out that plan. He did so by developing an ideology which was loaded with Serb nationalism and emphasising the unity of Serbs and the importance of creating an ethnically homogeneous Serb state.¹¹⁰⁶² The Chamber finds that the Accused was central in outlining the goals of the Bosnian Serb leadership and the measures which would have to be taken to establish Bosnian Serb authority in territories which they claimed.¹¹⁰⁶³

3476. The Chamber found that the Accused envisaged a separation of the Bosnian Serbs from non-Serbs in BiH and that war in BiH would result in “population homogenisation” and that he called for the creation of ethnically based entities in BiH.¹¹⁰⁶⁴ The Accused also encouraged the identification of Serb areas from which Bosnian Muslims would be excluded.¹¹⁰⁶⁵ Not only did the Accused formulate and promote these policies, the Chamber finds that he was adamant that he would not allow anything to stop the Bosnian Serbs from achieving their objectives.¹¹⁰⁶⁶

3477. The Chamber also found that the Accused was pivotal in making careful preparations to allow the Bosnian Serbs to respond to any move towards independence by BiH with the creation of its own parallel structures and take-over of power at a municipal level.¹¹⁰⁶⁷ The Accused’s involvement in this regard included formulating policies and actively promoting the creation of the parallel governmental, military, police and political structures that were used to gain or retain control of Bosnian Serb claimed territory.¹¹⁰⁶⁸ These parallel structures were designed to support the existence of a separate Bosnian Serb state and allow for the furtherance of the objective of the Overarching JCE.¹¹⁰⁶⁹

3478. For example, the Accused was responsible for the distribution and promotion of the Variant A/B Instructions, which the Chamber has found formed the basis on which Bosnian Serb Crisis Staffs, Bosnian Serb municipal assemblies, and other parallel municipal structures were established in the Municipalities.¹¹⁰⁷⁰ The Accused actively monitored the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions, followed developments which occurred at a municipal level, and co-ordinated efforts to ensure they were implemented.¹¹⁰⁷¹ He issued precise directions with respect to the establishment and maintenance of Bosnian Serb authority and emphasised the importance of the Instructions in achieving the objective of creating a Bosnian Serb state.¹¹⁰⁷² In this regard the Chamber found that the Accused instructed how the Crisis Staffs would function and be structured and this was one of the ways in which the Accused exercised his authority over them.¹¹⁰⁷³

3479. The Accused was instrumental in the formation of, and support for, the Bosnian Serb Assembly and used this as the formal means through which the Bosnian Serb ideology and objectives were officially sanctioned and disseminated.¹¹⁰⁷⁴ The Chamber also found that the Accused had influence and authority as the leading figure in the Bosnian Serb Assembly.¹¹⁰⁷⁵

3480. Throughout the existence of the Overarching JCE, the Chamber found that the Accused was at the apex of a number of political, governmental, and military structures and was not only instrumental in establishing these structures, but he was also able to use his power and influence over them in order to further the objective to permanently remove the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb-claimed territory. The Chamber found that the Accused demanded and enforced the strictest of discipline within the SDS in its adherence to the policies which he had developed.¹¹⁰⁷⁶ In this regard, the Chamber found that the Accused had de jure and de facto authority over the SDS party and its members and exerted the greatest control and authority over its institutions.¹¹⁰⁷⁷

3481. The Chamber finds that through insisting on this strict discipline and relying on his extensive authority, the Accused was more easily able to direct, encourage, facilitate, and authorise actions which furthered the objective of the Overarching JCE. The Chamber also found that the SDS party structures, which the Accused supported, facilitated communication between the higher level leaders, including the Accused, and the municipal SDS leaders.¹¹⁰⁷⁸ The Chamber finds that this was a crucial link in the chain to ensure that the Accused's policies were effectively disseminated and that he could monitor the way in which they were implemented at a municipal level. There was a direct and regular line of communication between the Bosnian Serb authorities at a municipal level and the Bosnian Serb leadership or RS authorities, including the Accused. This line of communication allowed the Accused to monitor developments at a municipal level and to issue precise directions with respect to the establishment and maintenance of Bosnian Serb authority.¹¹⁰⁷⁹

3483. The Chamber further recalls its finding that the Accused formulated, promoted, and disseminated the Strategic Goals and that he tied the promotion of these goals to the threat faced from the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who he continued to identify as their historic enemies and to minimising the number of those “enemies” who would remain in their state.¹¹⁰⁸² The Chamber found that the Accused was steadfast in emphasising that ethnic separation was necessary in the promotion of these Strategic Goals.¹¹⁰⁸³ Further, he received and gave updates about developments and progress made towards their achievement, including territorial control through military operations and the separation of people.¹¹⁰⁸⁴

3484. The Accused also activated the second level of the Variant A/B Instructions which were intimately linked to the physical control of Bosnian Serb claimed territory.¹¹⁰⁸⁵ The Chamber Kecmanović stated that the Accused and Krajišnik were among those who shared the view that it was necessary to find a solution to conflicts in BiH through political negotiations and to avoid or stop war at all costs and that the Accused did not view Bosnian Muslims and Croats as enemies. D3645 (Witness statement of Nenad Kecmanović dated 27 May 2013), para. 35; Nenad Kecmanović, T. 39124–39125 (31 May 2013). The Chamber however notes that Kecmanović’s evidence was marked by evasiveness, contradictions, partisanship and indicators that his testimony lacked sincerity and candour. His testimony was also marked by indicators that he was seeking to protect the Accused. The Chamber therefore does not consider that it can rely on his evidence in this regard.

found that while the Accused envisaged the use of force to take-over power he was cautious about the way in which this would be portrayed at an international level. However, there was no genuine concern about the manner in which power was taken and there was a clear disjuncture between the Accused's public statements to international observers and his private discourse in this regard.¹¹⁰⁸⁶ There was an even greater disparity between his assurances given in speeches and orders and the reality on the ground. What transpired in the Municipalities were widespread crimes committed by Serb Forces against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and this resulted in the creation of a largely ethnically homogeneous state which corresponded to the objective of the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹¹⁰⁸⁷

¹¹⁰⁸⁶ See paras. 3084–3085. Defence witnesses stated that the Accused was very moderate and tolerant both in speeches he gave in the lead-up to the war and through his policies and that he insisted on respect for minorities and the peaceful resolution of problems. Savo Čeklić, T. 41230–41231, 41239 (11 July 2013); D3126 (Witness statement of Jovan Nikolić dated 10 March 2013), para. 60; D3853 (Witness statement of Zvonko Bajagić dated 5 July 2013), para. 41; D4077 (Witness statement of Anđelko Grahovac dated 23 November 2013), para. 10; D3724 (Witness statement of Branko Grujić dated 22 June 2013), para. 44; Branko Grujić, T. 40373–40374 (25 June 2013); D3692 (Witness statement of Jovan Ivanović dated 9 June 2013), para. 33; D3528 (Witness statement of Milan Martić dated 7 May 2013), paras. 23, 70–71; D3051 (Witness statement of Momir Bulatović dated 25 February 2013), para. 12; D2549 (Witness statement of Branko Radan dated 3 December 2012), para. 20. The Chamber notes that the evidence of the relevant witnesses were marked by evasiveness, contradictions and/or indicators of insincerity and therefore does not find their evidence that the Accused did not intend to commit crimes and always called for respect of minorities to be reliable. However, the Chamber finds that the Accused did speak in terms which portrayed himself publicly as the peaceful negotiator but he insisted that this peace was conditional on following the objectives of the Bosnian Serbs. The Chamber also places no weight on Filipović's personal opinion that the Accused prevented "bigger bloodshed in BiH" through his policies. 3486. The Chamber finds that this rhetoric was used by the Accused to engender fear and hatred of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and had the effect of exacerbating ethnic divisions and tensions in BiH.¹¹⁰⁹² The Accused used fear and hatred to promote the historical territorial claims of the Bosnian Serbs and to garner support for the idea of creating a largely ethnically homogeneous Bosnian Serb state on this land.¹¹⁰⁹³ The Chamber also found that the Accused's position with respect to these historic territorial claims was endorsed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly and formed a core aspect of the Bosnian Serb objectives in including these territories in the RS.¹¹⁰⁹⁴

3487. The Chamber finds that these speeches and statements went beyond mere rhetoric and formed a core element in the policies and plans developed by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership. The Chamber also found that the Accused disseminated propaganda about demographics and the Bosnian Muslim birth-rate as a further justification for ethnic separation.¹¹⁰⁹⁵ The Chamber found that this ideology was repeated and used by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership as justification for the creation of ethnically homogeneous entities in BiH and to decrease the number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who remained in the Bosnian Serb state.¹¹⁰⁹⁶ The Chamber finds that the Accused persisted with promoting the objectives of ethnic separation and the territorial claims of the Bosnian Serbs into 1995.¹¹⁰⁹⁷

3488. The Chamber found that the Accused was instrumental in the creation of the SerBiH TO and local TO units in mid-April 1992 and that he had de jure and de facto control over the TO.¹¹⁰⁹⁸ The Chamber also found that the Accused was closely involved in giving instructions for mobilisation of the TO at a municipal level and the creation of the Bosnian Serb TO which was used to take-over and maintain Bosnian Serb authority in the Municipalities.¹¹⁰⁹⁹ The Accused also took a leading role in the co-ordination of TO forces and their subsequent integration into the VRS.¹¹¹⁰⁰

3489. The Accused, as the highest authority in the VRS chain of command,¹¹¹⁰¹ had the power to organise and implement plans for defence, order mobilisation, and command and control the army.¹¹¹⁰² The Accused exercised his powers, for example, by ordering the VRS to carry out general mobilisation, which was delivered and acted upon at the municipal level, and by reassigning VRS officers.¹¹¹⁰³ He was key in planning strategy and was closely involved in examining and approving the VRS military directives, which were issued in furtherance of the Strategic Goals.¹¹¹⁰⁴

3490. The Chamber also found that the Accused's involvement in the command of the VRS as Supreme Commander went beyond planning and strategy as he was involved at the operational level as well. For example, the Accused issued instructions based on proposals for operations he received from the Main Staff and occasionally sent direct orders to the corps and brigade commanders to answer directly to him.¹¹¹⁰⁵

3491. The Accused was central in promoting the creation of a separate police structure.¹¹¹⁰⁶ This reflected his objective of creating a separate Bosnian Serb state with parallel structures and this separate police structure was a means of achieving the objective of sovereignty of the Serb people in the territories which they claimed.¹¹¹⁰⁷ In addition, as Supreme Commander of the VRS and the President of the RS, the Accused had de jure authority over the MUP during times of war, which he exercised in fact directly, as well as through the municipal Crisis Staffs.¹¹¹⁰⁸

3492. Turning to whether the Accused obtained, facilitated, encouraged, and/or supported the participation of JNA forces and Serbian paramilitary forces, the Chamber found that the VRS was formed from parts of the JNA, TO, and volunteer units and inherited both officers and soldiers from the JNA, many of whom were of Bosnian Serb origin, as well as a substantial amount of weaponry and equipment.¹¹¹⁰⁹ The Accused participated in the creation of the VRS by organising the manpower at the local level and facilitating the transfer of personnel and supply from the JNA.¹¹¹¹⁰ Furthermore, following the withdrawal of the JNA from BiH, the Accused supported the operational co-operation of military forces and local authorities with Arkan's men, Šešelj's men, and Mauzer's Panthers.¹¹¹¹¹

3493. The Chamber now turns to consider the Prosecution's submission that the Accused failed to make meaningful efforts to exercise his authority to prevent or punish crimes committed by his civilian and military subordinates and that these failures significantly contributed to the Overarching JCE.¹¹¹¹² The Chamber recalls that for an Accused to contribute to a JCE by omission, he must have had a legal duty to act, and that the failure to act pursuant to that legal duty significantly contributed to the JCE.¹¹¹¹³ The Chamber found that during the time period relevant to the Indictment, the Accused was the highest authority in the VRS chain of command.¹¹¹¹⁴ Prior to its establishment, the Accused had de jure authority over the TO and took steps to create a hierarchical command and control structure, which included some municipal Crisis Staffs over which he had authority.¹¹¹¹⁵ According to the Bosnian Serb Constitution and the Law on the Army, as Supreme Commander, the Accused had the authority to, inter alia: (i) appoint, promote, and dismiss VRS officers in accordance with the law; (ii) appoint and dismiss presidents, judges, and assistant judges of military courts and military prosecutors; (iii) issue regulations prescribing internal order and relations in the military service; and (iv) issue regulations on military training and discipline.¹¹¹¹⁶ The Chamber also found that the Accused had de jure authority over the MUP, which he exercised in fact.¹¹¹¹⁷ The Chamber finds that in light of his position of authority over the VRS, TO, Crisis Staffs, and MUP, the Accused had a legal duty to prevent and punish crimes committed by them.

3494. The Chamber will now consider the efforts made by the Accused to ensure the protection of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats residing in areas of Bosnian Serb control and to prevent and punish crimes committed by his subordinates. The Chamber recalls that the Accused established the military courts and that the civilian courts existed during the conflict; however the Chamber found that the system functioned in a discriminatory manner, with a lack of attention to crimes committed against non-Serbs.¹¹¹¹⁸ The Chamber found that the inadequate level of investigations

See also D434 (Radovan Karadžić's Order on the application of laws of war, 13 June 1992) (in which the Accused issued an order, imposing a duty on the "competent superior officer" to initiate proceedings to punish persons who violate the laws of war).

and prosecutions of crimes committed against non-Serbs was consistent with the Accused's position that such matters could be delayed during the conflict.¹¹¹¹⁹

3495. The Chamber found that the Accused made minimal efforts to prevent or punish the crimes of forcible displacement and deportation after he learned about such crimes repeatedly throughout the conflict, starting from as early as April 1992.¹¹¹²⁰ This is unsurprising given that he established and co-ordinated the political and military structures which implemented the goal of the Bosnian Serb leadership to create an ethnically homogeneous state and intended for these very crimes to be committed. For example, within a few months of being presented with information that non-Serb civilians were being expelled from Zvornik in early April 1992, the Accused ordered an investigation and then advised international representatives that Bosnian Muslim inhabitants in Zvornik had requested to move out because they felt like hostages. However, the Chamber found that the Accused had also been informed that the municipal authorities in Zvornik had participated in the expulsion of non-Serb civilians in order to allow Serb refugees to settle there and also blamed paramilitaries for these events. He therefore clearly knew that the expulsion was forced but took no actions to punish the perpetrators of such acts. He later celebrated the "liberation" of Zvornik and the fact that there were almost no non-Serbs remaining there in 1993.¹¹¹²¹

3496. The Accused continued to learn about instances of "ethnic cleansing" throughout the conflict.¹¹¹²² However, it was not until 19 August 1992 that he issued an instruction to the VRS and MUP ordering that the forced resettlement of the civilians should be prevented and that "any certificates of sale of property or statements that refugees will not return shall be considered as legally invalid and are declared null and void" and 21 August 1992 that he pledged to prevent "ethnic cleansing" and punish persons involved in it.¹¹¹²³ On 25 August 1992, the Accused wrote a letter to the international community explaining that he had issued the 19 August 1992 instruction and stated that the civilian population must be allowed to move freely out of a war zone if that was the desire of the civilian population, under the Geneva Conventions, blaming the failure on the part of the international community to understand the deep-rooted antagonism and hatred between the three ethnicities in BiH, which caused people to leave their communities in droves.¹¹¹²⁴ The Chamber considers this latter statement to be an attempt by the Accused to cover up and minimise the forced nature of the removal of non-Serbs from the Municipalities and indicates that his orders to prevent such forced removal were not intended. This finding is supported by the fact that he continued to share the intent to forcibly remove non-Serbs from the Municipalities until 30 November 1995.

3497. It is further supported by comments that the Accused made in response to information he received from international representatives about “ethnic cleansing” in Bijeljina in late 1994. On 26 September 1994, the Accused said to international negotiators that Serbs in Bijeljina were “fighting for their own land” and that “ethnic cleansing” would be an inevitable outcome of the international community’s failure to establish any legal mechanism allowing the population to exchange their homes and move into cantons in which their nationality would be dominant.¹¹¹²⁵ The Chamber found that these statements demonstrated that “ethnic cleansing” was directly linked to the Accused’s objective to take-over Serb claimed land and that he was not interested in preventing it.¹¹¹²⁶

3498. With respect to the crime of unlawful detention, the Chamber found that the Accused was aware of the unlawful detention of non-Serb civilians from conflict areas by 24 April 1992.¹¹¹²⁷ On 8 June and 13 June 1992, the Accused issued an appeal to local Bosnian Serb authorities and an order to the VRS and MUP, respectively, to ensure protection for all detainees.¹¹¹²⁸ Furthermore, members of the government, VRS, JNA, and MUP, including Mićo Stanišić, issued orders to their subordinates to, inter alia, prevent abuse of detainees and mistreatment of civilians and report illegal camps from April to August 1992.¹¹¹²⁹ In mid-July, the Bosnian Serb government received reports from the MUP that conditions in detention centres were poor and that there had been occurrences of unlawful treatment of detainees.¹¹¹³⁰ On 25 July 1992, the Accused received a report from the ICRC following a visit to the Manjača camp, informing him that the conditions there were “absolutely insufficient” and that there was evidence that detainees were being subjected to ill treatment.¹¹¹³¹ But it was only when the international media started reporting on the inhumane conditions in the detention centres in Prijedor in July 1992 and following a Bosnian Serb delegation to visit the camps, that the Accused made efforts to close them down.¹¹¹³² Meanwhile, on 30 July 1992, the Accused continued to present to the public that the allegations made by the

Guardian that the Bosnian Serbs had organised concentrations camps or were holding civilian prisoners were “completely false”.¹¹¹³³

3499. The Chamber notes that it was concluded at a session of the RS Presidency on 6 August 1992, that the MUP would be ordered to examine civilian authorities and individuals guarding detainees and report back to the Presidency. The decision was relayed to SJB Chiefs in a number of municipalities who were obliged to provide reports in accordance with the RS Presidency decision by 20 August 1992. The SJB Chiefs were also informed about the RS Presidency order to release all civilians and to allow them freedom of movement.¹¹¹³⁴ From August to October, the Accused made further efforts to reduce the number of civilians who were unlawfully detained in Serb controlled detention centres.¹¹¹³⁵ In October 1992, the Accused informed Mladić, Mićo Stanišić, and Mandić that he had received information that some local authorities had ignored his instruction to allow unfettered access for the ICRC to detention facilities and demanded that they inform their subordinates to respect his instruction to allow access and that he would order a thorough investigation of all cases of failure to comply.¹¹¹³⁶ On 27 October 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government officially decided to close all illegal camps as soon as possible and in December 1992, pursuant to the Accused’s order, all detainees held in Manjača were released on the condition that they be transferred to third countries.¹¹¹³⁷ The Chamber considers that prior to the Accused’s intervention in Prijedor to close the camps with the worst conditions in August 1992, the measures taken to prevent or punish the unlawful detention of civilians were completely inadequate. The Chamber further considers that after that point, he began to take measures to close the temporary detention centres in the Municipalities, however, these measures did not have much effect until closer to the end of 1992. The Chamber further notes that ultimately, while many civilians were released from detention by the end of 1992, detention centres remained in existence for the duration of the war and continued to hold non-Serb civilian detainees.¹¹¹³⁸

3500. The Chamber now turns to consider whether the Accused was able to do more to prevent and punish crimes committed by his subordinates. The Chamber recalls that Momčilo Mandić, Minister of Justice, and Mićo Stanišić, MUP Minister, ignored government decisions with respect to prevention and prosecution of criminal activity and answered more to the Accused than to the government.¹¹¹³⁹ This implies that the Accused had the ability to influence Mandić and Stanišić to ensure that their respective ministries functioned to prevent and punish crimes more effectively. Furthermore, the fact that the Accused, when he chose to act to remedy the situation in detention centres, was able to influence the closure of camps, shows that had he wanted, he could have used this influence more effectively and quickly to prevent crimes.

3501. The Chamber considers that the Accused's failure to exercise his authority to adequately prevent or punish crimes committed against non-Serbs signalled to Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs that criminal acts committed against non-Serbs were tolerated throughout the period of the Overarching JCE. In light of this, his failure to take adequate steps to prevent and punish criminal activity committed against non-Serbs in the Municipalities had the effect of encouraging and facilitating the JCE I Crimes. The Chamber further finds that the Accused's failure to prevent and punish crimes committed by Serb Forces against non-Serbs and his tolerance for such crimes demonstrate a failure on his part to take adequate steps to ensure that Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs would act to protect Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats residing in areas under their control.

3502. In addition, the Chamber found that during the spring of 1992 the Accused supported the operational co-operation of military forces and local authorities with Arkan's men, Šešelj's men, and Mauzer's Panthers. While the Accused took actions to have paramilitary formations disbanded, these actions were initiated in mid-1992, after all the take-overs had already been completed in the Municipalities with the active involvement of these paramilitaries. These take-overs resulted in the forcible removal of thousands of non-Serbs. The Chamber also found that the Accused's attitude towards certain paramilitary formations after the creation of the VRS was flexible and shifted according to Bosnian Serb interests and concluded that he tolerated or even supported the co-operation of Arkan's men, Šešelj's men, Mauzer's Panthers, and the Yellow Wasps with Serb Forces.¹¹¹⁴⁰ The Chamber finds that this had the effect of encouraging and facilitating the JCE I Crimes committed by Serb Forces.

3503. Above, the Chamber found the many different ways in which the Accused, having been informed of crimes in the Municipalities, provided misleading information to representatives of international organisations, the public, and to the media in relation to these crimes.¹¹¹⁴¹ He covered up, for instance, the severity of the conditions in detention facilities,¹¹¹⁴² and he deflated criticism expressed by internationals in relation to claims of “ethnic cleansing” by claiming that non-Serbs were leaving “out of fear”.¹¹¹⁴³ The Chamber found a clear disjuncture between the manner in which the Accused defended the actions of the Bosnian Serbs in international settings and press conferences and the reality on the ground, of which he was fully aware.¹¹¹⁴⁴ In statements and speeches, the Accused created a narrative for an international audience in which the Bosnian Serbs would not be blamed for the movement of the non-Serb population.¹¹¹⁴⁵

3504. At the same time that he was learning about crimes committed against non-Serbs and not taking sufficient steps to prevent or punish them, the Accused was providing misleading information to international observers on the ground and the media. By his denials that Bosnian Serbs were committing crimes in the Municipalities and his disingenuous portrayal of the reality on the ground, of which he was in fact fully aware, the Accused created an environment in which Bosnian Serbs could continue to commit the crimes through which the common purpose of the Overarching JCE was implemented.

iii. Conclusion

3505. In the preceding paragraphs, the Chamber identified the various ways through which the Accused, in his functions as Supreme Commander, SDS President, SNB President, President of the Presidency, and President of the RS, participated in furthering the objective of the Overarching JCE, namely the permanent removal of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory. Considering the totality of the Chamber’s findings in this regard, and the extent of the Accused’s contribution by virtue of the functions and positions he held at the time, and the impact of his conduct—through his acts and omissions—on the implementation of this JCE, the Chamber finds that the Accused significantly contributed to the Overarching JCE.

d. Link to crimes committed by non-members of the JCE

3506. In order to hold the Accused criminally responsible for crimes committed by non-members of the JCE, there must be a link between the Accused or another JCE member and the criminal conduct. This link is established if the Accused or another JCE member used the non-member in accordance with the common purpose of the JCE to carry out the actus reus of the crimes included therein.¹¹¹⁴⁶ This may be inferred from the close co-operation of the accused, or any other JCE member, with the non-member in order to further the common criminal purpose. The non-member of the JCE need not share the intent of the members of the JCE.¹¹¹⁴⁷ It is also not necessary to establish the existence of an additional understanding or agreement between the accused and the non-member to commit that particular crime.¹¹¹⁴⁸

3507. The Chamber found that the Crisis Staffs, paramilitaries, and members of the TO, MUP, and VRS carried out crimes in furtherance of the common plan of the Overarching JCE during the take-over of the Municipalities.¹¹¹⁴⁹

3508. The Chamber found that the Accused had de jure and de facto authority over the SDS party and its members from at least October 1991 until 1995.¹¹¹⁵⁰ It also found that the municipal Crisis Staffs and Serb municipal assemblies were formed as a result of the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions, which the Accused had issued and distributed to high ranking Bosnian Serbs, and the implementation of which he monitored through meetings and discussions with municipal leaders.¹¹¹⁵¹ Crisis Staffs had direct contact with the Presidency and followed the SDS party line.¹¹¹⁵² The Accused was instrumental in creating and activating the Crisis Staffs.¹¹¹⁵³ They played a central role in preparing for and carrying out the take-over of the Municipalities by Serb Forces and in maintaining Bosnian Serb authority and power after the take-overs were completed.¹¹¹⁵⁴ Crisis Staffs were tasked with making military and security preparations and the Accused gave explicit instructions on how the Crisis Staffs and the TO would be structured, including who would be the highest ranking officials in these structures, namely the presidents of municipalities and executive boards.¹¹¹⁵⁵ The Chamber also found that the Variant A/B Instructions required that all active and reserve police, TO, and civilian protection units be brought “to full manpower” and provided that the units would be activated by order of the municipal Crisis Staffs.¹¹¹⁵⁶ The Accused announced in March 1992 that while they did not plan to attack anyone, they had the “right to use the army for the final countdown and for the final establishment of authority”.¹¹¹⁵⁷ During this time, he was preparing for the take-over of power in the Municipalities. In addition, the Chamber found that Krajišnik, a member of the Overarching JCE, had “great authority” among the Bosnian Serb municipal leaders and influenced how power should be exercised at the municipal level.¹¹¹⁵⁸

3509. The Chamber found that the Accused had de jure and de facto authority over the TO from mid-April until mid-May 1992 when the TO units were transformed into the VRS.¹¹¹⁵⁹ The Chamber found that from May 1992, the Accused had de jure control over the VRS, which he exercised in fact continuously as the President of the SNB, President of the Presidency, and President of the RS.¹¹¹⁶⁰ Furthermore, the Chamber found that the Accused had de jure authority over the Bosnian Serb MUP, which he exercised in fact.¹¹¹⁶¹ Mićo Stanišić, a member of the Overarching JCE, was the head of the MUP from 24 March 1992 until the end of December 1992.¹¹¹⁶²

3510. With respect to paramilitary forces, the Chamber found that armed groups, including groups from Serbia, were at times invited by Crisis Staffs to assist in combat activity in the Municipalities, and acted in concert with units of the Serb Forces.¹¹¹⁶³ In other instances, paramilitary forces were invited by JCE members, notably Plavšić,¹¹¹⁶⁴ or were affiliated with other members of the Overarching JCE, namely Arkan and Šešelj.¹¹¹⁶⁵ The Chamber found that the Accused supported the operational co-operation of military forces and local authorities with Arkan’s men, Šešelj’s men, Mauzer’s Panthers, and White Eagles as long as the objectives of these groups were aligned with those of the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹¹¹⁶⁶

3511. The Accused and other members of the JCE used their authority and influence over Crisis Staffs, TO, VRS, Bosnian Serb MUP, and paramilitaries to carry out the crimes envisaged by the common plan of the Overarching JCE. Furthermore, at times, paramilitaries, local Serbs, JNA, MUP, TO, and VRS units acted at the behest of the Crisis Staffs, which were under the Accused’s authority and influence, to commit crimes in furtherance of the common plan. Therefore, the Chamber finds that the crimes that were found to be committed by Serb Forces in the Municipalities are imputed to the JCE members or to the Accused. The Chamber finds that such a link existed based on the identity of the perpetrators, which takes into consideration their affiliation, uniforms, and vehicles; the behaviour and utterances of the perpetrators while the crimes were committed; and the identity of the victims. This finding is also based on the assessment of the context in which the crimes were committed, including the timing and the correlation with the actions taken and crimes committed by other Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb authorities who acted in furtherance of the common plan.

e. Accused's responsibility for crimes outside the scope of the Overarching JCE

3512. The Chamber found that the common purpose of the Overarching JCE was to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory through the commission of the crimes of deportation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), and persecution through forcible transfer, deportation, unlawful detention, and the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures. The Chamber turns now to consider whether the Accused is responsible pursuant to the third form of JCE liability for the other acts of persecution charged in Count 3 of the Indictment or the crimes of extermination and murder charged in Counts 4, 5, and 6 of the Indictment in relation to the Overarching JCE, which have been proven beyond reasonable doubt. The crimes in question are:

- i. Persecution, as a crime against humanity through killings, cruel and/or inhumane treatment (through torture, beatings, physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, and the establishment of and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities), forced labour at the frontline and use of non-Serbs as human shields, appropriation or plunder of property, and the wanton destruction of private property, including cultural and sacred sites;¹¹¹⁶⁷
- ii. murder as a crime against humanity and/or a violation of the laws or customs of war;¹¹¹⁶⁸ and
- iii. extermination as a crime against humanity.¹¹¹⁶⁹

3513. The Chamber must determine whether it was reasonably foreseeable to the Accused that any of these crimes might be committed if he acted in furtherance of the common plan of the Overarching JCE and whether he willingly took that risk.¹¹¹⁷⁰ The Chamber recalls that the assessment of what was reasonably foreseeable to the Accused must be made on the basis of his individual knowledge and that what may be foreseeable to one member of a JCE may not be foreseeable to another.¹¹¹⁷¹ It is not necessary for the purposes of JCE III liability that an accused be aware of the past occurrence of a crime in order for the same crime to be foreseeable to him. However, it must be established that the possibility of any of these crimes being committed was sufficiently substantial as to be foreseeable to the Accused.¹¹¹⁷²

3514. The Chamber recalls that in coming to the conclusion that the Accused shared the intent to commit the crimes encompassed by the Overarching JCE, the Chamber found, inter alia, that the Accused: (i) knew that the forcible take-over of towns and municipalities by Serb Forces led to massive demographic changes through the forcible displacement of non-Serb civilians;¹¹¹⁷³ and (ii) promoted and shared the objective of creating an ethnically pure Bosnian Serb state and the creation of contiguous Serb areas which would require a redistribution of the population.¹¹¹⁷⁴ Furthermore, the Chamber found that the Accused contributed to the commission of those crimes by participating in the Overarching JCE through promoting an ideology of ethnic separation, using a rhetoric that amplified historical ethnic grievances and promoting propaganda to that effect, establishing the institutions used to carry out the objective of the common plan, and creating a climate of impunity for criminal acts committed against non-Serbs.

3515. The Chamber notes that the geographical scope of the common plan of the Overarching JCE was broad and it was implemented in a manner that involved many groups and individuals spanning several levels of the Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs. There was no genuine concern about the manner in which power in the Municipalities was taken. Furthermore, the Chamber found that there was an environment of extreme fear in which the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat population was forced to leave the Municipalities in circumstances that included displacement by physical force, threat of force or coercion, or fear of ongoing violence, killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, unlawful detention in terrible conditions, rape and other acts of sexual violence, discriminatory measures, and destruction of villages, homes, and cultural monuments.¹¹¹⁷⁵ In several municipalities, the Chamber found that non-Serbs left because they were being terrorised and conditions made it impossible for them to continue living in the area.¹¹¹⁷⁶ In many cases Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave or fled following killings in and/or attacks against their villages or following the take-over of towns or villages by Serb Forces and in many cases they were first arrested and detained before being transported out of the Municipalities.¹¹¹⁷⁷ Based on the nature of the common plan and the manner in which it was carried out, the Chamber considers that it was foreseeable to the Accused that Serb Forces might commit violent and property-related crimes against non-Serbs during and after the take-overs in the Municipalities and the campaign to forcibly remove non-Serbs.

3516. In addition, the evidence of the Accused's knowledge of criminal activity in the Municipalities demonstrates that the Accused was well aware of this environment in which the forcible displacement of non-Serbs occurred. The Chamber notes the Accused learned of the killings of non-Serb civilians in early April 1992 in the town of Bijeljina immediately after their occurrence.¹¹¹⁷⁸ Furthermore, on 23 June 1992, the Accused was informed that Bosnian Muslims were subjected to intimidation and a policy of harassment and discrimination at the hands of the Bosnian Serbs, causing thousands to leave.¹¹¹⁷⁹ In addition, he frequently discussed or was informed of the violent criminal behaviour of armed groups during the take-over of some municipalities.¹¹¹⁸⁰ For example, on 29 July 1992 he was told about the criminal behaviour of paramilitary groups during and after the take-over of Bijeljina, which resulted in rapes, thefts, robberies, killings, and the displacement of Bosnian Muslim civilians.¹¹¹⁸¹ On 22 August 1992, the Accused was informed of the incident at Korićanske Stijene in which approximately 200 non-Serb men were killed by Serb Forces and thrown down a ravine at Mount Vlašić on 21 August 1992.¹¹¹⁸² The Accused was also aware that paramilitaries, volunteers, and other irregular armed groups were being used to further the common purpose of the Overarching JCE, and were difficult to control.¹¹¹⁸³ The Chamber considers that in light of his knowledge of crimes committed in the Municipalities, the Accused was aware of the environment of extreme fear in which non-Serbs were forced to leave and of other acts of violence committed by Serb Forces against non-Serbs during the campaign of forcible displacement.

3517. The Accused was also told about looting, particularly of Bosnian Muslim homes, on several occasions,¹¹¹⁸⁴ and knew that paramilitary groups involved in the JCE I Crimes were notorious for pillaging and stealing.¹¹¹⁸⁵

¹¹¹⁸⁵ See paras. 3220, 3357.

3518. The Chamber found that the Accused intended the unlawful detention of civilians.¹¹¹⁸⁶ The Chamber notes that thousands of individuals, including women, children, and elderly people were detained for extended periods of time before they were ultimately transferred out of the Municipalities. In several of these detention facilities, Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and Serb Forces deliberately established and perpetuated inhumane living conditions.¹¹¹⁸⁷ The Chamber found that the Accused knew early on in the conflict in BiH that civilians were being detained by Serb Forces.¹¹¹⁸⁸ The Accused was told by international representatives of the large scale detention of civilians as early as May 1992.¹¹¹⁸⁹ On 17 July 1992, the Bosnian Serb MUP wrote a report to the Accused and the Prime Minister, indicating, inter alia, that the conditions in detention centres were poor.¹¹¹⁹⁰ On 22 July 1992, it was reported to the Bosnian Serb Government that there had been occurrences of unlawful treatment of detainees.¹¹¹⁹¹ On 25 July 1992, the Accused received a report from the ICRC following a visit to the Manjača camp, informing the Accused, inter alia, that two detainees had been subjected to ill treatment during the visit, frequent and widespread traces of severe beatings were observed, and that the general living conditions were “absolutely insufficient”.¹¹¹⁹² At the London Conference in August 1992, the “acute problem of the unlawful detention of civilians and the deplorable conditions in which they were held” was recognised.¹¹¹⁹³ In light of this evidence, the Chamber considers that the Accused knew that the conditions in many of the detention centres where non-Serbs were detained were poor while others were inadequate at best.

3519. The Chamber also notes that prior to the outbreak of armed conflict in April 1992, the Accused was well aware of the ethnic animosity between Bosnian Serbs, Bosnian Croats, and Bosnian Muslims and played on these historic antagonisms in order to further the objective of the Overarching JCE and its common plan.¹¹¹⁹⁴ The Accused knew that leading up to the outbreak of armed conflict, ethnic tensions were rising.¹¹¹⁹⁵ Furthermore, during the conflict, the Accused frequently dismissed the commission of crimes by armed groups, blaming this ethnic animosity.¹¹¹⁹⁶ For example, at an international press conference in September 1992, in response to a question about a report alleging atrocities, including executions, and brutal “Nazi-like” conditions, the Accused said that in an “inter-ethnic and inter-religious war”, there was no need for a command to kill, given that the three ethnic communities had “been antagonised during centuries”.¹¹¹⁹⁷

3520. Having assessed all the evidence on the information available to the Accused prior to and during the execution of the common plan of the Overarching JCE, the Chamber considers that the Accused knew that the common plan, whereby thousands of non-Serb civilians were expelled en masse from their homes during and after the forcible take-over of towns and villages, and detained in facilities throughout the Municipalities, occurred in a context of inter-ethnic animosity and violence. Furthermore, he knew that a climate of impunity for crimes committed against non-Serbs existed in Bosnian Serb claimed territory, particularly in 1992.¹¹¹⁹⁸ In light of these factors, he ought to have known that the non-Serb population was vulnerable to violent crimes that might be perpetrated by Serb Forces.

3521. On the basis of the foregoing, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that it was foreseeable to the Accused that persecution through torture, beatings, physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, and the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities as cruel or inhumane treatment, killings, forced labour at the frontline, the use of non-Serbs as human shields, the appropriation or plunder of property, and the wanton destruction of private property, including cultural and sacred sites, might be committed by Serb Forces used to carry out the objective of the common plan, during the execution of the common plan, with discriminatory intent. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that it was foreseeable to the Accused that murder might be committed by Serb Forces used to carry out the objective of the common plan, during the execution of the common plan. Finally, the fact that the Accused knew that the common plan was executed across a large geographic scope which involved numerous protagonists from civilian and military units, and was directly made aware of mass killings at the beginning of April 1992, demonstrates that he knew of the possibility that killings on a large scale might be committed by Serb Forces used to carry out the objective of the common plan. Therefore, the Chamber finds that the possibility that extermination might be committed by Serb Forces was sufficiently substantial as to be foreseeable to the Accused. These crimes will hereinafter be referred to as “JCE III Crimes”.

¹¹¹⁹⁸ See Section IV.A.3.a.v: Accused’s knowledge of crimes and measures he took to prevent and punish them.

3522. The Accused's continued participation in the Overarching JCE until 1995 demonstrates that he acted in furtherance of the common plan with the awareness of the possibility that the JCE III Crimes might be committed either by members of the Overarching JCE or Serb Forces who were used by him or other members of the Overarching JCE to carry out the common plan,¹¹¹⁹⁹ during the execution of the common plan, demonstrating that he willingly took that risk.¹¹²⁰⁰

3523. The Chamber is satisfied that the JCE III Crimes which have been found to be proven beyond reasonable doubt are sufficiently linked to the Accused because they were found to have been carried out by members of the Serb Forces who were used by the Accused or another JCE member to carry out the JCE I crimes.¹¹²⁰¹ The Chamber has found that the JCE III Crimes were committed either during or after the take-overs of Municipalities during the campaign to forcibly remove the non-Serb population or in connection with unlawful detention in a scheduled detention facility. The Chamber has also considered the context in which the crimes were committed, including the timing and the correlation with the actions taken and crimes committed by other Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb authorities who acted in furtherance of the common plan.

f. Conclusion: Accused's individual criminal responsibility

3524. The Chamber found above that the Overarching JCE came into existence in October 1991 and continued until at least 30 November 1995, that the Accused significantly contributed to the Overarching JCE, and shared the intent with respect to the JCE I Crimes. In addition the Chamber found that the Accused acted in furtherance of the Overarching JCE with the awareness of the possibility that the JCE III Crimes might be committed either by members of the Overarching JCE or Serb Forces who were used by him or other members of the Overarching JCE to carry out the common plan, and that he willingly took that risk. The Chamber therefore finds that the Accused bears individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 7(1) of the Statute for persecution, a crime against humanity (Count 3); extermination, a crime against humanity (Count 4); murder, a crime against humanity (Count 5); murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war (Count 6); deportation, a crime against humanity (Count 7); and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), a crime against humanity (Count 8). The Chamber will address the issue of cumulative convictions in Section IV.F below.

¹¹¹⁹⁹ See para. 3511.

¹¹²⁰¹ Judge Morrison dissenting with respect to Scheduled Incident B.12.2.

3525. In addition to the Accused's liability through participation in a JCE, the Prosecution also alleges that the Accused is individually criminally responsible for planning, instigating, ordering, and/or aiding and abetting the crimes relevant to the Municipalities component through certain acts and omissions.¹¹²⁰² It also charges the Accused with individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 7(3) of the Statute.¹¹²⁰³ However, having considered all of the evidence and in light of the findings made above, the Chamber finds that commission through JCE pursuant to Article 7(1) most accurately and appropriately reflects the Accused's responsibility for the crimes in the Municipalities component as charged in the Indictment. The Chamber will therefore not analyse the Accused's responsibility under the other modes alleged by the Prosecution in the Indictment.

B. SARAJEVO COMPONENT

1. Facts

a. Chronology of events in Sarajevo

3526. In this section of the Judgement the Chamber will discuss the situation in the city of Sarajevo and the relevant events that occurred therein during the conflict in BiH. The section also refers to various shelling and sniping incidents, including the casualties resulting therefrom. Some of these are specifically charged in the Indictment under Schedules F and G while others are not. Those that are listed in Schedules F and G are discussed in later parts of the Judgement in more detail. The Chamber notes that shelling and sniping incidents not listed in Schedules F and G of the Indictment are only relevant to the pattern and the nature of the campaign.¹¹²⁰⁴

3527. The city of Sarajevo, capital of BiH, lies in a valley, stretching from east to west along both banks of Miljacka River.¹¹²⁰⁵ Hills and mountains overlook Sarajevo to the south and the north; from these elevations, it is possible to have unobstructed and clear views of the distinguishable features of the city and to see into its streets.¹¹²⁰⁶

3528. In 1991, Sarajevo was made up of ten municipalities: Stari Grad (Old Town), Centar (Centre), Novo Sarajevo, Novi Grad, Vogošća, Ilidža, Pale, Ilijaš, Hadžići, and Trnovo.¹¹²⁰⁷ According to the 1991 census, Sarajevo had 527,049 inhabitants of whom approximately 49% were Bosnian Muslims, 30% were Bosnian Serbs, and 7% were Bosnian Croats.¹¹²⁰⁸ Before the conflict, it was the largest and most important political, cultural, industrial, and commercial centre of BiH.¹¹²⁰⁹ Citizens of Sarajevo took pride in the city's diversity, referring to themselves as "Sarajlijas" or Sarajevans.¹¹²¹⁰ Sarajevo was well-known as a multi-ethnic, multi-religious city, with a long history of religious and cultural tolerance.¹¹²¹¹ The great majority of the urban areas of Sarajevo were ethnically mixed.¹¹²¹²

3529. A number of important JNA installations, including the Viktor Bubanj Barracks, the Maršal Tito Barracks, the Jusuf Džonlić Barracks, and the Jajce Barracks, were located in Sarajevo.¹¹²¹³ The Command of the 2nd Military District of the JNA was located in Bistrik, at one end of Dobrovoljačka street, across from the Gavrilo Princip Bridge.¹¹²¹⁴

3530. Starting in September 1991, various JNA units withdrew from Slovenia and parts of Croatia and subsequently assumed position in barracks throughout BiH, including those located in and around Sarajevo; the retreating JNA units brought a significant amount of weaponry and ammunition.¹¹²¹⁵ The Bosnian Muslim leadership did not look at this development favourably.¹¹²¹⁶

3531. While nationalist propaganda increased during the course of 1991,¹¹²¹⁷ up until late 1991, the inhabitants of Sarajevo lived relatively peacefully together.¹¹²¹⁸ Inter-ethnic tensions started to appear in late 1991 and gradually escalated.¹¹²¹⁹

3532. In the early months of 1992, the JNA, which by then had become a Serb-dominated army, began distributing weaponry and ammunition to Bosnian Serbs at the barracks around Sarajevo.¹¹²²⁰

3533. On or about 1 March 1992, during a Serb wedding ceremony held at a historic Orthodox Church located in the old part of Sarajevo, Ramiz Delalić and Suad Šabović, two Bosnian Muslims, shot and killed the father of the bridegroom who was carrying a Serb flag and wounded a priest.¹¹²²² Soon after, on the orders of Rajko Dukić, the President of the SDS Executive Board, barricades were erected at strategic locations in and around Sarajevo by armed Serbs in civilian clothes and black masks.¹¹²²³ Muslims for their part erected barricades in front of the Assembly building later that evening.¹¹²²⁴ The barricades blocked all passages in and out of the city and cut off parts of the town.¹¹²²⁵ Soon after the erection of the barricades, Momčilo Mandić asked Čedomir Kljajić, the Chief of Police Affairs in Sarajevo, to accompany him to the office of the Accused and the headquarters of the SDS, located in the Holiday Inn at the time.¹¹²²⁶ After arriving at the Holiday Inn, Kljajić observed that Dukić was issuing instructions to those manning the Serb barricades via the telephone.¹¹²²⁷ In the early afternoon, Serbs who were manning a barricade near the main entrance to the city came under gunfire from a nearby building.¹¹²²⁸ When Colm Doyle, the head of the ECMM in Sarajevo,¹¹²²⁹ approached one of the Serb barricades and asked for it to be dismantled, he was told that the barricade would be dismantled only on the orders of the Accused.¹¹²³⁰ At another barricade, while negotiating the passage of ECMM monitors to the airport, Doyle came under Serb gunfire.¹¹²³¹ During the night of 1 March 1992, there was considerable shooting in the city and as a result, three people were killed.¹¹²³²

3534. The following day, the SDS leadership formally demanded that the BiH government (i) arrest the perpetrators of the killing of the Serb at the wedding ceremony;¹¹²³³ (ii) divide Sarajevo RTV into separate Muslim, Serb, and Croat channels and crack down on the Sarajevo-based broadcaster JUTEL; (iii) stop seeking international recognition for BiH until such time that all three parties reach agreement with respect to the constitutional arrangement of BiH; (iv) order an immediate halt to the media campaign which describes the independence and sovereignty of BiH as a fait accompli; (v) urgently resume participation in the Peace Conference on Yugoslavia, under the auspices of the EC;¹¹²³⁴ (vi) immediately effect personnel changes in the MUP so as to comply with the inter-party agreement on the division of power; (vii) order MUP to avoid violent confrontation with Bosnian Serbs, in particular those manning the barricades; and (viii) dissolve the BiH Presidency Crisis Staff headed by Ejup Ganić.¹¹²³⁵ Later that day, Plavšić instructed Velibor Ostojić, the Minister of Information of BiH, to prevent confrontation at the barricades as negotiations were underway.¹¹²³⁶

3535. On 2 March 1992, in an intercepted telephone conversation, Dukić informed Mićo Stanišić that he and Plavšić had spoken to Čengić and Izetbegović, respectively, about the Muslim barricades in front of the Assembly building; Dukić then told Stanišić that Serb barricades in Sarajevo should not be removed so long as the Muslim barricades remained in place.¹¹²³⁷ In the same conversation, Stanišić informed Dukić that he had visited all the check-points and commented that “Sarajevo is ours [...] a hundred percent”.¹¹²³⁸ Dukić replied to this by saying “Mićo, we have done a big thing.”¹¹²³⁹

3536. On the same day, a special meeting of the BiH Presidency was convened during which it was decided that many of the demands made by the SDS should be met.¹¹²⁴⁰ The Presidency also called for the barricades to be dismantled and for citizens to return to everyday life.¹¹²⁴¹ After the special meeting of the BiH Presidency, Plavšić, Franjo Boras, the Bosnian Croat member of BiH Presidency, and Vitomir Žepinić, the Deputy MUP Minister, spoke with Dukić and convinced him to make arrangements for the removal of the Serb barricades.¹¹²⁴² On 2 March 1992, more people were killed or injured in Sarajevo, some of them in close vicinity of the barricades.¹¹²⁴³

control the situation, mixed units, involving Bosnian Muslims, Bosnian Serbs, and JNA troops would patrol Sarajevo.¹¹²⁴⁷ The following day, Muslim barricades were dismantled.¹¹²⁴⁸

3538. On 20 March 1992, representatives of the SDA concluded that division of Sarajevo RTV into ethnic channels as well as any appointment of non-Muslims to the posts of general manager and editor-in-chief of Sarajevo RTV would run contrary to the interests of Bosnian Muslims.¹¹²⁴⁹

3539. Around the same time, Serb units began moving artillery onto the hills around Sarajevo.¹¹²⁵⁰ Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs once again set up barricades in and around Sarajevo, inhibiting the movement of the population.¹¹²⁵¹

3540. At the end of March or the beginning of April 1992, JNA forces took control of Sarajevo airport and began using it exclusively to move JNA personnel and their families out of BiH.¹¹²⁵² By this time, the activities of JNA personnel in the barracks contributed to the tensions.¹¹²⁵³ In early April 1992, residents of Sarajevo demonstrated for peace in large numbers in front of the Assembly building.¹¹²⁵⁴ However, during the protest they came under sniper fire which was said to have come from the direction of Holiday Inn.¹¹²⁵⁵

In November 1991, Jure Pelivan, the Prime Minister of BiH, informed Doyle of his serious concerns about JNA involvement in illicit transfers of armament into BiH and characterised the build-up of JNA forces in BiH territory as a “military occupation”. P946 (ECMM report re meeting with Prime Minister Pelivan, 27 November 1991). The evidence on the identity of those who targeted the protesters with gunfire is inconsistent.

3541. During the night of 4 April 1992, Bosnian Muslim units attacked and took control of the MUP building in Sarajevo, expelling the Bosnian Serb employees.¹¹²⁵⁶ Soon after, BiH police and TO forces surrounded the 2nd District Command building complex and the Sarajevo Military Hospital which was at the time run by the JNA.¹¹²⁵⁷ Around the same date, Bosnian Muslims began attacking JNA forces and installations in Sarajevo.¹¹²⁵⁸ On 6 April 1992, extensive gunfire erupted, with each side accusing the other of having started the hostilities.¹¹²⁵⁹ Armed Muslims detained and mistreated Žepinić on several occasions, prompting him to eventually leave for Belgrade.¹¹²⁶⁰ A number of Serbs had their houses searched and ransacked, were mistreated by armed Bosnian Muslim units, faced harassment at their workplace, were purged from employment, or were prevented from entering and departing Sarajevo.¹¹²⁶¹ Following these events, some Serb families left for parts of Sarajevo where Serbs were in the majority while others moved to Pale.¹¹²⁶² Around the same period, a large number of Bosnian Muslim civilians began moving into areas of Sarajevo which were under the control of the BiH government.¹¹²⁶³

3542. By 10 April 1992, the security situation in Sarajevo had deteriorated; the command of the 2nd Military District reported that mortar fire had again been directed against features in the city and that all movements and all roads to the city were being controlled by Green Berets, armed civilians, and BiH MUP forces.¹¹²⁶⁴ On 12 April 1992, the leaders of all three parties agreed to an immediate and total cease-fire in BiH, including in Sarajevo.¹¹²⁶⁵ They also agreed that Bosnian Serbs should have a greater role with respect to Sarajevo RTV broadcasts.¹¹²⁶⁶ The following day, however, during a meeting with Doyle and Sarajevo RTV management, Bosnian Serb representatives claimed that the agreement concerning Sarajevo RTV essentially required that all the assets which belonged to the station be divided between the three ethnic groups.¹¹²⁶⁷ As a result, the meeting did not lead to any progress.¹¹²⁶⁸ The next day, Serbs from Pale warned the employees at Sarajevo RTV that if the station did not get off the air, it would be targeted.¹¹²⁶⁹ Doyle, having been informed of this threat, immediately contacted the Accused who then assured him that this attack would not take place.¹¹²⁷⁰ Shortly after, however, mortar fire targeted the Sarajevo RTV building, killing a number of people.¹¹²⁷¹ The Accused later admitted to Doyle that the bombing had been carried out by Bosnian Serbs but insisted that the attack did not have his permission.¹¹²⁷²

3543. On 16 April 1992, the Accused told Herbert Okun, who was an adviser to the Special Envoy of the Secretary General at the time,¹¹²⁷³ that the situation in Sarajevo was urgent and that people were fighting because the ethnic groups could not and did not want to live together.¹¹²⁷⁴ Around the same time, the JNA's 216th Mountain Brigade was relocated to Grbavica in anticipation of the withdrawal of JNA units from the barracks in the city.¹¹²⁷⁵ In the preceding months, on the basis of Kukanjac's directives, the JNA had already moved most of its heavy weaponry, ammunition and explosives from Sarajevo to Serb-held positions on the elevations outside the city.¹¹²⁷⁶

3544. On 20 April 1992, Kukanjac reported that BiH MUP and TO forces had made specific plans to attack JNA installations in Sarajevo.¹¹²⁷⁷ On the same day, SerBiH Prime Minister Branko Đerić prohibited Bosnian Serb units from firing heavy artillery at the city unless the SerBiH Minister of Defence authorised such fire due to “exceptional conditions”.¹¹²⁷⁸ Despite this order, Serbs engaged in the shelling of Sarajevo.¹¹²⁷⁹ Two days after Đerić’s order concerning the use of heavy artillery and the day before his planned meeting with Carrington, Cutileiro, and Izetbegović, the Accused issued his so-called “peace platform”.¹¹²⁸⁰ With this document, the Accused proposed, amongst other things, (i) an unconditional and immediate cease-fire; (ii) the continuation of the EC Peace Conference on Yugoslavia; (iii) prioritisation of drawing of maps of Sarajevo and the constituent states; and (iv) clarification of the role of the JNA in BiH.¹¹²⁸¹

3545. On 25 April 1992, after giving Martin Bell, a BBC war correspondent,¹¹²⁸² a tour of the frontlines in Trebević, the Accused stated: “If we didn’t have hope for political solutions we would already free Sarajevo”.¹¹²⁸³ In late April 1992, Bosnian Serbs, backed by the JNA, again shelled various neighbourhoods in and around the city.¹¹²⁸⁴ At the same time, armed Serb units, supported by JNA tanks, attacked Muslim neighbourhoods around the airport, forcing the inhabitants of the affected areas to seek refuge in Sarajevo.¹¹²⁸⁵

3546. Around the same period, Hasan Efendić, the Commander of the BiH TO, ordered his forces to capture weapon and ammunition depots in BiH territory, blockade the JNA barracks, and capture JNA personnel.¹¹²⁸⁶ Soon after, Bosnian Muslims blockaded the JNA barracks and installations in Sarajevo, including the complex in Bistrik where Kukanjac and his entire staff, numbering 400 persons, were still stationed.¹¹²⁸⁷ By the end of April 1992, Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb

military formations as well as criminal bands were engaged in fierce clashes in the city; the shelling and sniping activities by both sides also increased exponentially.¹¹²⁸⁸ The fighting ebbed somewhat when Lord Carrington arrived in the city to broker a cease-fire.¹¹²⁸⁹

3547. On 2 May 1992, in a letter to Doyle, Đerić indicated that given the attacks launched by the BiH TO, the Bosnian Serbs were unwilling to remove heavy artillery from around Sarajevo and threatened to take possession of radio and television relays which were being used by broadcasters from the Muslim side to propagate “informative terror”.¹¹²⁹⁰

3548. On the same day around noon, Green Berets and HOS units attacked the JNA social centre in downtown Sarajevo, seriously wounding its director.¹¹²⁹¹ Subsequently, units from the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment of the JNA were dispatched to the social centre in order to evacuate the JNA personnel there, some of whom were wounded.¹¹²⁹² However, these units were ambushed by Bosnian Muslims.¹¹²⁹³ An armoured battalion from Grbavica as well as an anti-sabotage detachment, which had been hitherto securing the Military Hospital, were dispatched to rescue the ambushed units but they too were attacked on their way.¹¹²⁹⁴

Lukavica Barracks.¹¹²⁹⁵ At around the same time, the Military Hospital also came under Bosnian Muslim attack.¹¹²⁹⁶ In response to the attacks against the JNA social centre and the Military Hospital, Kukanjac ordered the use of artillery against the city centre.¹¹²⁹⁷

3550. In the morning hours of 3 May 1992, members of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment were captured by Green Berets and the HOS.¹¹²⁹⁸

3551. On 3 May 1992, General MacKenzie, the Commander of UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo, Doyle, Ganić, and General Aksentijević of the JNA began negotiating the release of Izetbegović.¹¹²⁹⁹ During these negotiations, it was agreed that under the supervision and guarantee of the ECMM and UNPROFOR, Izetbegović would be released by the JNA and that in return, Bosnian Muslim forces would allow Kukanjac to leave his headquarters in downtown Sarajevo and move to Lukavica Barracks, on the Serb side of the confrontation lines.¹¹³⁰⁰

3552. MacKenzie and Doyle then travelled to Lukavica Barracks where Izetbegović had been detained in order to persuade him to accept the exchange agreement.¹¹³⁰¹ While MacKenzie and Doyle were at the barracks, Kukanjac contacted Izetbegović by telephone and indicated that there would be no exchange unless his entire staff, along with their equipment, were also removed from Bistrik and taken to safety.¹¹³⁰² Despite the reservations expressed by MacKenzie and Doyle as to the feasibility of the plan to move such a large number of JNA personnel through Muslim-controlled parts of the city, Izetbegović accepted Kukanjac's proposal, assuming personal responsibility for their safety.¹¹³⁰³ Later that day, Izetbegović and MacKenzie, along with a large convoy of empty trucks belonging to the 2nd Military District, departed for downtown Sarajevo in order to pick up Kukanjac and his personnel; after the convoy arrived in Bistrik, the trucks were loaded with JNA personnel and equipment.¹¹³⁰⁴ It was then decided that the convoy should drop off Izetbegović and his daughter near the Presidency building and then proceed to the Lukavica Barracks with Kukanjac and his personnel.¹¹³⁰⁵ Shortly after embarking on its route on Dobrovoljačka street, however, Muslim forces intercepted and attacked the convoy's rear, killing at least 14 JNA members, including two Colonels, and taking a large number of prisoners.¹¹³⁰⁶ At this point, Izetbegović emerged from the vehicle he was in and addressed the attackers, explaining to them that he had promised safety to the convoy.¹¹³⁰⁷ Following Izetbegović's intervention, the convoy proceeded to a location where Izetbegović and his daughter were transferred to an APC bound for the Presidency building.¹¹³⁰⁸ From there, the rest of the convoy travelled to Lukavica Barracks.¹¹³⁰⁹ Soon after, a battalion from the 216th Mountain Brigade of the JNA was ordered to move from Lukavica Barracks to Dobrovoljačka street where the incident had taken place; before the battalion arrived, however, Bosnian Muslims took away the dead and the captured JNA soldiers and disappeared from the scene.¹¹³¹⁰ In the days that followed, Doyle and MacKenzie successfully negotiated the release of the JNA personnel.¹¹³¹¹

3554. Sometime later, representatives of the BiH Presidency and the JNA reached an agreement for the withdrawal of all JNA units from BiH.¹¹³¹⁴ With this agreement, the JNA undertook to return all equipment, armament, and ammunitions of the TO which had been left in its custody and stored in the military barracks around town.¹¹³¹⁵ Soon after, the JNA units were evacuated from the Military Hospital; medical equipment and medicines were, however, left behind.¹¹³¹⁶

3555. On 11 May 1992, the JNA declared that its personnel would be evacuated from the Maršal Tito Barracks, Viktor Bubanj Barracks, Jusuf Džonlić Barracks, and Gavriilo Princip Barracks and that the following day the weaponry and ammunition in these barracks would be handed over to the TO forces from each the four municipalities in which these barracks were located.¹¹³¹⁷

3556. By mid-May 1992, after several weeks of intense urban combat, the frontlines in Sarajevo were established.¹¹³¹⁸ “Serb irregulars” completely surrounded the city and controlled all the traffic.¹¹³¹⁹ Using the heavy artillery and sniper rifles made available to them by the JNA, they regularly targeted the city, including its civilian areas, from the surrounding hills.¹¹³²⁰ The shelling became particularly intense and widespread on 14 May 1992, prompting John Wilson, the Chief of the UNMOs in Sarajevo,¹¹³²¹ to conclude that several thousand shells had fallen on the city that day.¹¹³²² As a result of the continued shelling, the number of civilian casualties increased significantly; economic life came to a halt and there were growing shortages of food, medicine and

On 12 May 1992, Mladić was appointed as the Commander of the newly-established VRS and by late May was interacting with representatives of the international community.¹¹³²⁸ On 19 May 1992, Mladić appointed Colonel Tomislav Šipčić as the SRK Commander and the SRK was assigned to the greater Sarajevo area, the former zone of responsibility of the 4th JNA Corps.¹¹³²⁹ The SRK's main forces were positioned around what was colloquially called the inner ring of Sarajevo, in particular in the areas of Ilidža, Nedžarići, and Grbavica.¹¹³³⁰ The inner ring extended from the northern bank of Miljacka River in Marin Dvor, across the river and westward to Dobrinja, then upwards to the neighbourhood of Alipašino Polje, nearing the Stupska Petlja in the west of city of Sarajevo, northward to the areas of Sokolja Dol and Zuca, and following eastward to complete the circle near Grdonj and Debelo Brdo near Grbavica.¹¹³³¹ Auxiliary forces of the SRK addition, there were a number of their command posts and military targets within the city.¹¹³³⁸ The frontline within Sarajevo city was between 42 and 64 kilometres long, depending on the period.¹¹³³⁹

3558. During the latter part of May 1992, Bosnian Serbs on average fired several hundred shells a day at Sarajevo.¹¹³⁴⁰ In late May and early June 1992, the city of Sarajevo was subjected to heavy shelling by the SRK, with a variety of artillery and from various positions. The events immediately preceding and following these bombardments, as well as the related findings, are outlined in more detail in another section of the Judgement.¹¹³⁴¹

3559. Following the above mentioned shelling incidents, the city of Sarajevo continued to be subjected to shelling and sniping attacks.¹¹³⁴² These attacks persisted throughout the summer of 1992, which was deemed by Bell to have been one of the worst periods of the conflict in Sarajevo.¹¹³⁴³ At the same time, the food had become scarce in Sarajevo.¹¹³⁴⁴ The markets were empty and the humanitarian operations were very limited.¹¹³⁴⁵

3560. On 29 June, the Sarajevo airport in Butmir, which up until that point had been under the control of the Bosnian Serbs, was handed over to UNPROFOR, to be used by UNPROFOR exclusively.¹¹³⁴⁶ On 17 July 1992, a 14-day cease-fire agreement was signed in London by the representatives of three warring sides, including the Accused.¹¹³⁴⁷ On 22 July, Mladić issued Directive 2, referring to the cease-fire agreement and instructing all units to “respect the agreed fortnight cease-fire” but to stay in full combat readiness.¹¹³⁴⁸

3561. On 3 August 1992, Directive 3 was issued by Mladić in which he instructed the units to “keep Sarajevo firmly under blockade and prevent its breaking” and then ordered the SRK specifically to “gradually tighten the encirclement of Sarajevo”.¹¹³⁴⁹ Hussein Abdel-Razek, the Sector Sarajevo commander between 21 August 1992 and 20 February 1993,¹¹³⁵⁰ testified that, upon his arrival in Sarajevo, he immediately assessed the city as a dangerous place, with constant sniping and shelling and no working infrastructure and utilities.¹¹³⁵¹ Following the London Conference,¹¹³⁵² the Accused and Koljević agreed, on 28 August 1992, to group together Bosnian Serb heavy weapons around Sarajevo and place them under the supervision of UN monitors, regardless of the actions of the other side.¹¹³⁵³ However, this agreement was never fully implemented.¹¹³⁵⁴ was “very unpleasant” and there was daily random shelling of various parts of the city.¹¹³⁵⁷ In early October 1992, following the resumption of humanitarian flights, aid was slowly starting to arrive in Sarajevo; however, it was being delivered far below the minimum required to satisfy basic needs.¹¹³⁵⁸ The difficulties in delivery arose because the city was subjected to heavy shelling and sniping at this time and because Bosnian Serb forces blocked UNHCR convoys.¹¹³⁵⁹ On 7 October UN officials protested to Koljević and Plavšić about “recent” artillery attacks on Sarajevo.¹¹³⁶⁰ The UN reported on 8 October that the mood of people in Sarajevo has reached the lowest level since April 1992 due to the continued shelling and lack of utilities.¹¹³⁶¹ On 9 October 1992, the RS Presidency held a session in which it decided to halt the bombing of Sarajevo and do so through the Main Staff.¹¹³⁶² Thus, on 10 October, Galić issued an urgent order to all SRK units to stop firing on Sarajevo as of 3 p.m. that day, instructing them they could open fire only in case of “great necessity”, and not before having been given permission from him or his deputy.¹¹³⁶³ However, on 26 October, Galić reported on the fighting between the ABiH and the SRK around Hrasnica.¹¹³⁶⁴ On 31 October, a major attack was launched by the Bosnian Serbs from the north and south of the centre of Sarajevo; the first few rounds caught people in the open and caused a number of casualties.¹¹³⁶⁵ According to Tucker, this attack had the objective of cutting the city into eastern and western halves and relieving the pressure on Grbavica.¹¹³⁶⁶ After that attack, which according to Tucker was a major military offensive, the Bosnian Serbs carried out mainly defensive or retaliatory operations, trying to pressure the other side to accept the status quo.¹¹³⁶⁷ his permission to respond to fire.¹¹³⁶⁸ According to Abdel-Razek, while the shelling incidents were numerous in the period of August through to October, November was relatively quiet.¹¹³⁶⁹ On 19 November, Mladić issued Directive 4, in which he instructed the SRK to keep Sarajevo and Igman under “full blockade” and “tighten the circle”.¹¹³⁷⁰

3564. In a meeting on 20 November 1992 with the Accused, Morillon of UNPROFOR protested the “deliberate obstruction” of UNHCR and UNPROFOR convoys by Bosnian Serb forces over the previous three weeks.¹¹³⁷¹ The Accused responded that the Bosnian Serbs were “predisposed to be obstructive” because UNPROFOR was smuggling weapons and rations to the ABiH and UNHCR was delivering more aid to the Bosnian Muslims than the Bosnian Serbs.¹¹³⁷² On 22 November, the SRK lodged a protest with the UN, complaining about the ABiH putting pressure on SRK positions and causing civilian casualties.¹¹³⁷³ On 27 November, Morillon and Tucker met with the Accused, Koljević, and Mladić.¹¹³⁷⁴ Morillon had a private discussion with the Accused, during which the latter agreed that the demilitarisation of Sarajevo could be a catalyst for peace throughout BiH.¹¹³⁷⁵ Morillon also noted his belief that the Bosnian Serb authorities were interested in progress.¹¹³⁷⁶

“involved the worst sustained shelling of Sarajevo since the start of the war” by the Bosnian Serbs; while it concentrated around Oteš and Stup, in the west of Sarajevo, the city was also shelled by the Bosnian Serbs with the aim of breaking the people’s and their leaders’ will to resist.¹¹³⁷⁸ According to Tucker, more than 1,500 rounds of explosives were fired per day at that time and the fight for Oteš involved house to house fighting as well as support by Bosnian Serb infantry and artillery.¹¹³⁷⁹ By 7 December, Oteš and parts of Stup were captured by the Bosnian Serbs but the fighting in the surrounding areas petered out only around 19 December.¹¹³⁸⁰ Thereafter, the intensity of the shelling in the city reduced.¹¹³⁸¹ On 13 December, a three year old, Anisa Pita, was shot and wounded in her right leg on the porch of her residence in Širokača.¹¹³⁸² In mid-December, the UN attempted to negotiate a cessation of hostilities agreement, which involved the withdrawal of heavy weapons around Sarajevo, but while signed by Mladić and Petković on 22 December, it was eventually not accepted by the Bosnian Muslim side.¹¹³⁸³ At midnight on 24 December, Bosnian Serbs opened a 20 minute barrage of fire on Sarajevo from all around the city, and against random civilian targets.¹¹³⁸⁴ The same happened at midnight on 7 January 1993.¹¹³⁸⁵

3566. In January 1993, the ABiH was preparing for an offensive¹¹³⁸⁶ and the city continued to be shelled, including the Old Town where a shell fell on people queuing for water, killing a number of people.¹¹³⁸⁷ KDZ185 testified that when he arrived to Sarajevo, the shelling was heavy, with a daily average of 1,200 shells being fired.¹¹³⁸⁸ In January and February, the winter was at its coldest, with severe shortages of electricity, gas, and oil, and morale in the city was at its lowest.¹¹³⁸⁹ Humanitarian convoys “continued to be harassed” and prevented from reaching the civilian population.¹¹³⁹⁰ In an attempt to escape the deprivation in the city at this time, hundreds of civilians attempted to cross the airport to Butmir and Mt. Igman each night and would be shot at by Bosnian Serbs and killed or injured.¹¹³⁹¹

3567. According to the SRK report of 4 February 1993, the ABiH fired ten shells on Ilidža, resulting in the wounding of a child; however the SRK did not respond.¹¹³⁹² On 11 February 1993, the Bosnian Muslim authorities announced that they would refuse to accept further aid in Sarajevo because the Bosnian Serbs were refusing to allow relief convoys into the eastern enclaves.¹¹³⁹³ UNHCR immediately suspended all aid flights into Sarajevo.¹¹³⁹⁴ On 12 February, the SRK reported that after the ABiH fired another ten shells on SRK-held territory, its units responded to the attack.¹¹³⁹⁵ On 14 February, the ABiH launched an infantry attack on the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks also resulting in the SRK response.¹¹³⁹⁶

3568. By 3 March 1993 the warring parties had signed a BiH-wide cease-fire agreement,¹¹³⁹⁷ according to which (i) the hostilities in Sarajevo and elsewhere were to cease, (ii) UNPROFOR was to monitor the confrontation lines in Sarajevo and the removal of heavy weapons (weapons above 12.7 mm calibre) from Mojmiilo, Dobrinja, Lukavica, Gornji Kotorac, Vojkovići, Hrasnica, Sokolovići, Butmir, Ilidža, Oteš, Stup, and Nedžarići, (iii) civil infrastructures were to be restored, and (iv) Blue Routes were to be established in order to ensure freedom of movement for civilians and humanitarian aid.¹¹³⁹⁸ This cease-fire was signed contrary to Galić's wishes.¹¹³⁹⁹ Additionally, the ABiH never intended to respect it.¹¹⁴⁰⁰ Instead it mounted an attack designed to cut the SRK's main re-supply line along the Pale road in response to which, on 21 March 1993, the SRK shelled the whole of Sarajevo, including civilian targets and the Old Town; around 2,400 shells fell that day.¹¹⁴⁰¹ The next day the ABiH shelled Ilidža while the SRK was engaging in an offensive operation in Stup.¹¹⁴⁰²

3569. On 2 April 1993, General Manojlo Milovanović, Chief and Deputy Commander of the VRS Main Staff,¹¹⁴⁰³ issued an order setting out in detail the procedures for checking UNPROFOR and humanitarian aid convoys.¹¹⁴⁰⁴ On 11 April 1993, the RS Prime Minister Vladimir Lukić wrote a

According to those procedures, before a convoy could move, a request had to be made to the VRS Main Staff via the VRS Liaison Group headed by Indić and had to list, inter alia, the number of personnel and the type of vehicles in the convoy, the type and quantity of cargo transported, the route the convoy was taking, and the convoy's expected letter to the UN Secretary General protesting the use of humanitarian convoys to transport ammunition to ABiH units in Butmir, Sokolović Kolonija, and Hrasnica and stating that the RS government had issued an order to “strictly control all humanitarian convoys”.¹¹⁴⁰⁵

3570. On 4 April 1993 the ABiH forces fired six shells on Grbavica resulting in the VRS protesting to the UN about cease-fire violations by the ABiH.¹¹⁴⁰⁶ On 17 April, a nine year old girl was shot and wounded while playing in front of her house in Sedrenik.¹¹⁴⁰⁷

3571. In early May 1993, fighting between the ABiH and the SRK along the confrontation line continued.¹¹⁴⁰⁸ On 6 May, the Security Council passed Resolution 824 which established Sarajevo as one of the safe areas, along with Tuzla, Žepa, Goražde, Bihać, and Srebrenica; it also provided for an immediate cease-fire and declared that the safe areas should be free from armed attack by all parties or any other hostile acts.¹¹⁴⁰⁹ Further, it declared that all parties should respect the rights of UNPROFOR and international humanitarian agencies to free and unimpeded access and demanded full co-operation with UNPROFOR.¹¹⁴¹⁰ Nevertheless, the ABiH launched a number of attacks on 15 May, which were responded to by the SRK.¹¹⁴¹¹ Galić testified that on that day the SRK response was restrained as one of the neighbourhoods from which the ABiH opened fire was a densely populated area.¹¹⁴¹² On the same day, Galić ordered the SRK to ensure the unhindered time of arrival. If the VRS Main Staff approved the convoy, the VRS Liaison Group would inform the relevant SRK units and its soldiers at relevant check-points would inspect the convoy “completely and thoroughly” to ensure that it was carrying only the type and quantity of cargo specified in the request. If a convoy appeared at a check-point unannounced, or without a declaration of what it was carrying, or using a different route to the one requested, it would “not be allowed to pass” and would be turned back until it complied with the correct procedures. See D2163 (VRS Main Staff Order, 2 April 1993), paras. 3, 5; Stanislav Galić, T. 37573 (23 April 2013), T. 38025 (9 May 2013); Dragomir Milošević, T. 32894–32895 (30 January 2013), T. 33237–33238 (5 February 2013); D2774 (Witness statement of Milenko Indić dated 19 January 2013), paras. 161–162; Milenko Indić, T. 32423–32424 (22 January 2013); KW570, T. 32218–32219 (18 January 2013); D2845 (SRK instructions, 22 August 1993), p. 1; Adrianus van Baal, T. 8419–8420, 8439 (27 October 2010); P1818 (Witness statement of Adrianus van Baal dated 26 October 2010), para. 69; D2164 (VRS Main Staff Order, 9 April 1993); D3408 (SRK combat report, 5 April 1993), para. 7; D3261 (VRS Main Staff Order, 27 February 1994); D3469 (SRK combat report, 24 April 1993), para. 5.

passage of humanitarian aid to Sarajevo and to adhere to the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocols.¹¹⁴¹³

3572. When David Harland, a Civil Affairs Officer for the UNPROFOR and later a political advisor to the Commander of the UNPROFOR BiH Command in Sarajevo,¹¹⁴¹⁴ arrived in Sarajevo in June 1993, the city seemed eerily empty, with burnt out cars on the streets, anti-sniping barricades made of containers and constant background noise of gunfire; its buildings were peppered with damage from shelling and gunfire.¹¹⁴¹⁵ On 1 June, two shells exploded in the suburb of Dobrinja during a football game resulting in a large number of casualties.¹¹⁴¹⁶ On 3 June, the SRK command reported that the ABiH opened sniper and mortar fire on a number of SRK-held areas, including civilian targets in Ilidža, resulting in the wounding of four soldiers and the killing of two women; Galić testified that the SRK did not respond to the attacks due to the cease-fire in force at the time.¹¹⁴¹⁷ On 15 June, another general cease-fire was signed and, on 17 June, the SRK command reported that the ABiH shelled SRK positions and that the ABiH forces would not be observing the cease-fire.¹¹⁴¹⁸ In a meeting with Andreev of UNPROFOR on 22 June 1993, Mladić acknowledged the urgency of “unblocking” Sarajevo for both sides and promised that all humanitarian convoys would be able to pass across RS territory but that the Bosnian Serbs would continue to check convoys at Sarajevo airport.¹¹⁴¹⁹ On 25 June, Mladić issued Directive 5, in which he instructed VRS units to thwart the “unblocking of Sarajevo” to be followed by “quick and rigorous operations to liberate the axis Sarajevo-Kijevo village-Trnovo village-Rogovo pass-Kalinovik” and the area around Igman and Bjelašnica; the code-name for the operation was “Lukavac 93”.¹¹⁴²⁰ Lukavac 93 was thus launched by the SRK, Drina Corps, and Herzegovina Corps, with the SRK engaged in the area of Jahorina-Igman-Bjelašnica axis.¹¹⁴²¹ The SRK launched attacks with the aim of capturing Mt. Igman as the connection between Sarajevo and the rest of the BiH went across and underneath Sarajevo airport through to Mt. Igman.¹¹⁴²² Due to these attacks, Izetbegović asked that the talks in Geneva, set for July, be postponed, while NATO threatened the Bosnian Serb side with air strikes.¹¹⁴²³ Michael Rose, who was the Commander of the UNPROFOR BiH Command in Sarajevo from January 1994 to January 1995,¹¹⁴²⁴ testified that the capture of Mt. 3573. On 5 July 1993, the SRK command reported to the VRS Main Staff that the ABiH opened fire on a number of frontlines resulting in three dead and two wounded soldiers; Galić testified that SRK units did not respond in this instance as they were “preparing”.¹¹⁴²⁶ On 10 July, the SRK command reported that the ABiH opened infantry and mortar fire; it also noted that SRK units in all sectors were in full combat readiness and firing.¹¹⁴²⁷ On 11 July, Munira Zametica, a 48 year old woman was shot dead while collecting water from the Dobrinja river in Dobrinja.¹¹⁴²⁸ On 12 July, a shell exploded in Dobrinja near a water pump where people were queuing for water, resulting in a number of casualties.¹¹⁴²⁹ On 18 July, the SRK command reported that its units were engaged in the Lukavac 93 operation while the ABiH opened infantry and mortar fire on a number of SRK-held positions, as well as on Grbavica and Ilidža, killing two civilians.¹¹⁴³⁰ According to Galić, the ABiH was at this time trying to attack on the confrontation lines within Sarajevo and slow down the Lukavac 93 attacks taking place outside Sarajevo.¹¹⁴³¹ On 30 July, in a meeting with UNPROFOR, Milovanović expressed concern about the smuggling of weapons and ammunition in humanitarian convoys.¹¹⁴³² That day, UNPROFOR reported that its freedom of movement across RS territory was being affected by “misunderstandings, bureaucracy and over zealous check-points”.¹¹⁴³³

3574. The SRK eventually managed to capture and take control of Mt. Igman and Bjelašnica.¹¹⁴³⁴ Following a meeting with Briquemont, Andreev, Mladić, Plavšić, and Krajišnik on 5 August 1993, the Accused agreed to the withdrawal of the SRK forces from Mt. Igman, despite Mladić’s protests, and on 14 August an agreement was signed according to which UNPROFOR was to monitor the vacated territory, which, together with the airstrip, became a demilitarised zone (“DMZ”).¹¹⁴³⁵ However, neither party respected the DMZ—the ABiH was present in the northern part of the zone while there were some Bosnian Serb troops in the southern part; the DMZ was properly demilitarised only at the beginning of 1995.¹¹⁴³⁶

3575. On 11 August 1993, the military commanders of the three warring sides in BiH signed the Military Agreement for Peace in BiH, eventually leading to a follow-up agreement allowing UNMOs freedom of movement throughout BiH and turning the administration of Sarajevo, with the exclusion of Pale, to the UN.¹¹⁴³⁷ This was followed up by an order from Galić to all SRK units not to open fire on Sarajevo “at any cost” and to remove “possible troublemakers” and “soldiers eager for adventure and provocations especially against UNPROFOR” by giving them secondary duties.¹¹⁴³⁸ On 13 August, SRK command reported that the ABiH was launching mainly infantry attacks along various axes but that SRK units were not responding to provocations, “except for repulsing heavier attacks”.¹¹⁴³⁹ On 19 August, the SRK command, having listed ABiH activities, reported that all units were in full combat readiness and were “not responding to provocations unless forced to do so, and then only with infantry weapons and sniper rifles.”¹¹⁴⁴⁰ On 31 August, Dragomir Milošević proposed opening several routes for the delivery of humanitarian aid to Sarajevo.¹¹⁴⁴¹

3576. On 2 September 1993, the SRK command again reported on the ABiH opening small arms and sniping fire on SRK positions and on Grbavica from, inter alia, Sedrenik; the SRK units returned fire on Sedrenik using a 12.7 mm anti-aircraft machine gun.¹¹⁴⁴² On 3 September, Nafa Tarić, a 35 year old woman and her eight year old daughter were shot and wounded by a single bullet in the centre of Sarajevo.¹¹⁴⁴³ On 4 September, Galić reported to the VRS Main Staff that some of the soldiers were exhausted and that “considering that they respond only in exceptional circumstances, the question [...] is, how long can they restrain themselves”.¹¹⁴⁴⁴

3577. KDZ450 testified that the period between October 1993 and February 1994 was a “very difficult period” for the city for a number of reasons, including the volume and intensity of shelling and sniping activity, which impeded the supply of humanitarian aid to the city.¹¹⁴⁴⁵ Following the rejection of the Owen-Stoltenberg plan by the Bosnian Muslim side at the end of September 1993,¹¹⁴⁴⁶ the situation in Sarajevo deteriorated and shelling was on the increase.¹¹⁴⁴⁷ Francis Roy Thomas, a senior UNMO in Sarajevo between 15 October 1993 and 14 July 1994,¹¹⁴⁴⁸ testified that, upon his arrival in Sarajevo on 15 October 1993, there was an unsuccessful attempt by the ABiH to take the Pale road, which was the Bosnian Serb’s connection between Pale and Lukavica.¹¹⁴⁴⁹ On

16 October, UNPROFOR reported that convoy deliveries to Sarajevo had increased recently; however, distribution to the civilian population had been very limited because large quantities of aid had been diverted to the military or stockpiled by Bosnian Muslim authorities while a smaller amount had been diverted to the black market.¹¹⁴⁵⁰ On 19 October, ABiH soldiers, disguised as Bosnian Serbs, shot at the UNPROFOR BiH Commander and also began using tanks to fire from the city in an attempt to draw retaliatory fire.¹¹⁴⁵¹ On 29 October, Dragomir Milošević issued an order to the SRK units to intensify sniping against ABiH forces and that each brigade should set up a platoon-strength sniper group of 31 soldiers, each of whom should be supplied with sniper rifles.¹¹⁴⁵² In late October and early November 1993, Sarajevo was heavily bombarded, with some 500 shells falling on the Old Town on 27 October alone.¹¹⁴⁵³

3578. On 3 November 1993, UNPROFOR reported that the Bosnian Serbs were causing more difficulties for the humanitarian aid supply to Sarajevo than they had for some time, and that convoys carrying food, medicine, and equipment had been delayed.¹¹⁴⁵⁴ On 11 November, the Accused issued Directive 6, in which he ordered the VRS to create objective conditions for the achievement of the VRS “war goals”, including the “liberation of Sarajevo”; one of the tasks of the SRK units was to “prevent the deblockade of Sarajevo”.¹¹⁴⁵⁵ This was followed up by a supplement to the directive, sometime in December of the same year, in which the Accused ordered the VRS to seize Žuč and Mojmiilo in order to ensure “the most favourable position for dividing the town”.¹¹⁴⁵⁶

3579. The shelling of the city, including on heavily populated areas, continued in November and December, often reported by the UNMOs as random SRK fire with no discernible target.¹¹⁴⁵⁷ On 2 November, Ramiza Kundo, a 38 year old woman, was shot and wounded while carrying water in the west end of Sarajevo.¹¹⁴⁵⁸ UNPROFOR reported that in mid-December the ABiH was launching “heavy infantry attacks” from Sarajevo on Serb-held territory.¹¹⁴⁵⁹ On 26 December UNMOs also reported increased sniping activity in the city resulting in the wounding of women and children.¹¹⁴⁶⁰

3580. In early January 1994, Sarajevo, including many of its residential areas, experienced heavy shelling again, resulting in a large number of civilian casualties.¹¹⁴⁶¹ In a meeting with the Accused on 3 January 1994, De Mello of UNPROFOR stated that the Joint Declaration on the provision of humanitarian relief, signed by the Accused,¹¹⁴⁶² was being “totally disregarded” by Bosnian Serb forces at check-points and that the “petty harassment” of convoys had become intolerable, indicating that the Bosnian Serbs had a deliberate strategy to “grind UNPROFOR to a halt”.¹¹⁴⁶³ The Accused denied that this strategy existed but reiterated that humanitarian convoys had to be checked for weapons and ammunition.¹¹⁴⁶⁴ On 6 January, Sanija Dževlan, a 32 year old woman, was shot and wounded while riding her bicycle in Dobrinja.¹¹⁴⁶⁵ On 22 January, three shells landed in Alipašino Polje, resulting in the deaths of six children.¹¹⁴⁶⁶ On his arrival in Sarajevo, on 23 January 1994,¹¹⁴⁶⁷ Rose was told that there was indiscriminate shelling within the city centre by the Bosnian Serbs.¹¹⁴⁶⁸ At that time, the intensity of the shelling was approximately 1,500 to 2,000 shells per day, going both ways, and sniping was also common.¹¹⁴⁶⁹ According to Thomas, the high casualty rate in this period was partly caused by the fact that the Bosnian Serbs were shelling areas known to be used by civilians to avoid dangerous areas exposed to sniper fire.¹¹⁴⁷⁰

3581. On 26 January, Galić issued an order in which he outlined a two-stage operation in Sarajevo; in the first stage the SRK units were ordered to prevent the “de-blocking” of Sarajevo and the linking of ABiH units from Sarajevo with ABiH units outside of Sarajevo by engaging in “decisive defence” and through improving the SRK’s strategic-tactical position by capturing features such as Debelo Brdo, Mojmiilo, Grdonj, Hum, and Čolina Kapa.¹¹⁴⁷¹ In the second stage, which was to start in the spring of 1994 and last 20 to 30 days, the SRK was to continue the above activities, prevent any supplies from getting into the city, prevent any medical evacuation, and “liberate the Serb part of the City of Sarajevo”.¹¹⁴⁷² Despite the above, the humanitarian situation in Sarajevo began to improve; during a meeting with Rose on 30 January, the Accused stated that he had in the preceding days instructed the civilian and the military authorities to “ease further” the movement of UN convoys.¹¹⁴⁷³

3582. On 4 and 5 February 1994, two shelling incidents took place, one in Dobrinja and the other at Markale market in the centre of Sarajevo, resulting in a large number of casualties.¹¹⁴⁷⁴ On 9 February, as a result of these two incidents and particularly the Markale incident,¹¹⁴⁷⁵ a cease-fire negotiated by Rose was agreed upon by both sides whereby WCPs would be established, as well as a TEZ, a 20 kilometre circle around the city, from which both sides would withdraw all heavy weapons by 21 February.¹¹⁴⁷⁶ The cease-fire was to start on 10 February and UN troops were to be positioned on key terrain between the warring parties.¹¹⁴⁷⁷ In subsequent negotiations, the Accused and Yasushi Akashi, Special Representative of the Secretary General from January 1994,¹¹⁴⁷⁸ agreed that there would be seven WCPs for SRK weapons, which would be located at the outskirts of the city, while one WCP would be set up in the city itself for ABiH weapons; all would be monitored by the UNPROFOR soldiers.¹¹⁴⁷⁹ While the Bosnian Serbs attempted to negotiate a protocol to the agreement, under which they would be entitled to redeploy the weapons in case of an attack by the ABiH, this was not accepted by the UN.¹¹⁴⁸⁰

3583. As a result of the above cease-fire agreement, delivery of aid to Sarajevo improved.¹¹⁴⁸¹ On 17 February, UNPROFOR reported that the humanitarian situation was relatively good, with a steady flow of food; however, the civilian population was receiving less than a third of the aid delivered as some of it was diverted to the military, some appeared on the black market, and the majority could not be accounted for.¹¹⁴⁸²

3584. As agreed, by 21 February, the sites suspected of containing heavy weapons were inspected and found to be clear; according to Rose, during the withdrawal process, the Serbs produced a far greater number of weapons than the other side, reflecting the disparity between the two sides.¹¹⁴⁸³ However, both sides were also disingenuous in complying with the agreement; for example, the SRK positioned a number of inoperative weapons around Sarajevo for the purpose of handing them

3585. On 24 February 1994, Andreev, De Mello, and Koljević agreed in principle to the creation of Blue Routes within Sarajevo for the delivery of humanitarian aid.¹¹⁴⁸⁶ The routes included the Dobrinja-Butmir route for Bosnian Muslim civilians, the Lukavica-Ilidža route for Bosnian Serb civilians, and the pedestrian crossing in downtown Sarajevo at the Bratstvo Jedinstvo Bridge.¹¹⁴⁸⁷

3586. As a result of the cease-fire agreement, Sarajevo was relatively calm for the rest of February; there were almost no war-related civilian deaths in the city in the last three weeks of February and few casualties later on.¹¹⁴⁸⁸ While the ABiH continued to fire at SRK positions

Galić testified that the SRK honoured the agreement to the “last letter”. However, in anticipation of the agreement, Galić had already issued an order on 9 February for the SRK units to move defective weapons to fire positions around Sarajevo in order to then remove them once the agreement was signed and in order to have working weapons remain in their positions. He also ordered that this operation be conducted during the night. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37448 (18 April 2013), T. 37952–37959 (8 May 2013); P6303 (SRK Order, 9 February 1994); D2802 (SRK combat report, 20 February 1994). Accordingly, and in light of all the other evidence listed in this footnote, the Chamber does not accept Galić’s evidence that he complied with the agreement to the “last letter”.

immediately following the cease-fire, the SRK forces kept abiding by the cease-fire and eventually the ABiH stopped its firing as well.¹¹⁴⁸⁹ To Rose and Thomas, this indicated that the Bosnian Serb side had absolute control over its heavy weaponry.¹¹⁴⁹⁰

3587. March 1994 was an encouraging time for Sarajevo as the cease-fire continued to hold.¹¹⁴⁹¹ By 15 March, the trams started operating again, which signified the beginning of better living conditions.¹¹⁴⁹² Life in Sarajevo improved as utilities were restored, including running water, and for the first time people started hoping for a return to normality.¹¹⁴⁹³ On 17 March, the Blue Routes Agreement was negotiated between the parties under which several routes, including the Airport Routes, were opened on 23 March for the movement of civilians from both sides and to re-supply the city with humanitarian aid.¹¹⁴⁹⁴ KDZ450 testified that the combination of the cease-fire, the TEZ, and the opening of the Blue Routes contributed to a significant improvement in the freedom of movement of convoys.¹¹⁴⁹⁵ Rose confirmed that the flow of aid “improved immensely” in February as a result of the TEZ.¹¹⁴⁹⁶ He recalled that aid came to a halt during the crisis in Goražde in April 1994,¹¹⁴⁹⁷ but that after April 1994 aid flowed into Sarajevo “more or less unblocked”.¹¹⁴⁹⁸

Harland also agreed that the opening of the Blue Routes led to “substantial relief of the humanitarian situation” in Sarajevo.¹¹⁴⁹⁹

3588. By 19 March, however, the level of sniping in the city started increasing.¹¹⁵⁰⁰ According to Adrianus van Baal, the Chief of Staff of UNPROFOR BiH Command at the time,¹¹⁵⁰¹ sniping activity continued during this time despite the cease-fire agreement—it was specifically directed at trams in Sarajevo.¹¹⁵⁰² Both Thomas and KDZ450 testified that after the creation of the TEZ, sniping became an important factor in the war and that the Serbs resorted to sniping because they lost the advantage of their heavy weapons and because the ABiH was undertaking “tunneling” towards the Serb lines at the time.¹¹⁵⁰³

3589. In March 1994, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats formed a federation which tilted the military balance against the Bosnian Serb side; this signified a massive change in the strategic situation in BiH, leading in particular to the unwillingness of the Bosnian Muslims to sign up to any peace accord which they felt was unjust and would reward the Bosnian Serbs.¹¹⁵⁰⁴ On 21 March, Galić complained to the UN about violations of the cease-fire agreement by the ABiH, consisting ¹¹⁵⁰¹ P1818 (Witness statement of Adrianus van Baal dated 26 October 2010), para. 5.

¹¹⁵⁰² Van Baal testified that the SRK’s focus on trams was due to Milovanović being opposed to the running of the trams. According to Van Baal, Milovanović even stated at one of their meetings that trams would be targeted if allowed to operate. See P1818 (Witness statement of Adrianus van Baal dated 26 October 2010), paras. 36, 40–45; Adrianus van Baal, T. 8444–8451 (27 October 2010); D825 (Manojlo Milovanović’s book entitled “My View of the War in Bosnia 1992–1995”), p. 31. However, Van Baal made no record of this statement by Milovanović in his notes, which were taken contemporaneously during the meeting in question. See D1090 (Handwritten notes of Adrianus van Baal). In addition, during his testimony before the Chamber, Milovanović denied that he ever made such a statement to Van Baal. He testified that he told Van Baal that the UN should encourage Bosnian Muslims to put a stop to urban transport otherwise he could not guarantee that “some idiot won’t open fire”. See Manojlo Milovanović, T. 25689–25691 (1 March 2012). Given that Van Baal did not record Milovanović’s statement in his contemporaneous diary despite it being such a striking threat, the Chamber is not persuaded by Van Baal’s evidence that this is what transpired in his meeting with Milovanović. Instead, the Chamber accepts Milovanović’s evidence as to the statement he made to Van Baal.

mostly of infantry fire.¹¹⁵⁰⁵ On 27 March, UNPROFOR protested to the ABiH about an attack on SRK positions, calling it a direct violation of the cease-fire.¹¹⁵⁰⁶

3590. In mid-April, the TEZ was being openly violated.¹¹⁵⁰⁷ According to Anthony Banbury, a Civil Affairs Officer in UNPROFOR and later an assistant to Akashi,¹¹⁵⁰⁸ April 1994—during the crisis in Goražde—¹¹⁵⁰⁹ was a particularly bad period for Sarajevo, with a prevalence of sniping and mortar attacks, and very little gas, electricity, and water in the city.¹¹⁵¹⁰ The period of May and June 1994, however, was generally quiet around Sarajevo.¹¹⁵¹¹ On 28 May 1994, UNPROFOR reported that there had been a “major influx” of humanitarian and commercial goods into Sarajevo, leading to rapid deflation in food prices and the opening of new shops.¹¹⁵¹²

3591. On 25 May, the VRS Main Staff reported to the Accused that the ABiH opened sniper fire in the area of the Vrbanja Bridge and Zlatište and ordered the SRK units to respect the cease-fire.¹¹⁵¹³ On the same day, a bus was shot at in Dobrinja resulting in the wounding of two women.¹¹⁵¹⁴ June was marked by fighting in other parts of BiH and the failure of peace talks in Geneva, which in turn resulted in the Bosnian Serb side cutting off electricity and gas to Sarajevo and halting aid convoys into the city.¹¹⁵¹⁵ Thus, from around the middle of June 1994, the humanitarian situation in Sarajevo began to deteriorate again.¹¹⁵¹⁶ In his book, Rose wrote that in this period the Bosnian Serb leadership “lapsed into a state of lunacy, blocking convoys and cutting off communication with the world”.¹¹⁵¹⁷ In response to a protest from Akashi about these restrictions, the Accused wrote on 24 June that UNPROFOR was taking little notice of the convoy procedures by carrying “undeclared goods and equipment”.¹¹⁵¹⁸ In a meeting on 27 June with Banbury and Rose, Krajišnik stated that improvements in the quality of life in Sarajevo had angered many Bosnian Serbs living outside Sarajevo and that the Bosnian Serb side was about to send a letter to UNPROFOR stating that the Airport Routes were being misused and therefore had to be closed.¹¹⁵¹⁹ Despite these threats, all the Blue Routes remained open and were heavily used in late June and early July 1994.¹¹⁵²⁰

3592. On 8 June 1994, following the talks in Geneva, the parties signed an Agreement on the Cessation of Offensive Actions, which was to last for one month.¹¹⁵²¹ This prompted Galić to issue a declaration to the SRK units encouraging them to respect the agreement.¹¹⁵²² However, by the end of June sniping activities on both sides had increased.¹¹⁵²³ On 19 June, a tram was shot at while travelling on Zmaja od Bosne street, resulting in casualties.¹¹⁵²⁴ On 26 June, Sanela Muratović, a 16 year old girl, was shot and wounded while walking in the west end of Sarajevo

3593. According to Rose, during the summer of 1994, the ABiH violated the cease-fire on more occasions than the SRK but this did not result in NATO air strikes against the ABiH because by the end of summer NATO changed its position that it would respond to violations by both sides.¹¹⁵²⁶ In the meantime, incidents of sniping in the city increased in the months of July and August, particularly on trams.¹¹⁵²⁷ On 22 July, Seid Solak, a 13 year old boy was shot and wounded while walking in the Čengić Vila area of Sarajevo.¹¹⁵²⁸ On 23 July, the SRK command reported to the VRS Main Staff that the ABiH had opened infantry fire on SRK lines on various axes.¹¹⁵²⁹ On the same day, Milovanović issued an order to the SRK to “carry out all necessary preparations” for the closure of the Airport Routes to civilians and humanitarian traffic.¹¹⁵³⁰ On 26 July, citing the smuggling of weapons into the city as the reason, the Bosnian Serbs, under the orders of the Accused, decided to close the airport to commercial convoys using the Airport Routes; this resulted in Rose feeling obliged to close the airport, for security reasons, to all civilian traffic thus stopping the humanitarian airlift.¹¹⁵³¹ On 27 July, the SRK command reported a number of infantry attacks by the ABiH, noting that SRK units responded both with infantry fire and mortars.¹¹⁵³² According to Rose, for the first time in many months the situation in Sarajevo was “moving backwards”.¹¹⁵³³

the TEZ and from the outer ring.¹¹⁵³⁵ On 2 August, while the ABiH attack continued, resulting in SRK casualties, the SRK sent a request to the UN to recover the weapons in the northwestern part of its area; however, the response was negative.¹¹⁵³⁶ On the same day, De Mello reported to Annan that the situation in Sarajevo was “dire” following the closure of the Airport Routes as only two UNHCR convoys were permitted entry to Sarajevo in July 1994, the humanitarian airlift had not yet resumed, and UNHCR warehouses had emptied.¹¹⁵³⁷ On 5 August, the Bosnian Serbs seized a number of heavy weapons from a WCP in Ilidža and in response NATO launched air strikes, targeting an SRK anti-tank gun located in the TEZ; when threatened with more strikes, the Bosnian Serbs returned the weapons the next day.¹¹⁵³⁸ Violations of the TEZ by the ABiH continued following the air strikes.¹¹⁵³⁹ On 10 August, the SRK command reported that its units were responding to attacks, including with sniper rifles.¹¹⁵⁴⁰ On 11 August, after the humanitarian airlift had resumed, fire was opened on a UNHCR aircraft at the Sarajevo airport from ABiH controlled territory, resulting in the closure of the airport and the cancellation of UNHCR flights.¹¹⁵⁴¹

14 August, the Anti-sniping Agreement was signed at Sarajevo airport under which both sides agreed to issue, within the next 24 hours, orders explicitly forbidding sniping activities against military personnel, civilians, and UN personnel.¹¹⁵⁴⁴ Dragomir Milošević issued such an order to the SRK units on 18 August, instructing all the troops to immediately stop sniping activities and activities from other weapons.¹¹⁵⁴⁵ There was a marked effect after this agreement was signed as the sniping incidents stopped almost immediately and went down from about 100 per week to about 10 per week; this lasted for about one month before a gradual increase in incidents occurred once again.¹¹⁵⁴⁶ Also in mid-August, the UN reported that the ABiH was violating the cease-fire agreement by firing on the SRK from within the TEZ.¹¹⁵⁴⁷

3596. On 19 August, at a meeting with Rose, Mladić, Tolimir, Koljević, Krajišnik, and Buha, the Accused explained that the Airport Routes had been closed not to stop the delivery of humanitarian aid to Sarajevo but to prevent the smuggling of black market goods and weapons.¹¹⁵⁴⁸ He also stated that he would not consider reopening them until the Bosnian Muslims released all Bosnian Serb POWs, and that he would close them for 30 days for every Bosnian Serb killed by sniping in Sarajevo.¹¹⁵⁴⁹ Nevertheless, according to Rose, there was an improved flow of aid to Sarajevo following the Anti-Sniping Agreement.¹¹⁵⁵⁰ The civilian population had also been growing food in community and private gardens, which was sold in city shops at moderate prices.¹¹⁵⁵¹ However, there had been no progress on reopening the Airport Routes and consequently the city was receiving most of its supplies via the tunnel in Butmir.¹¹⁵⁵²

3597. On 8 September 1994, in a meeting with the Accused, Koljević, and Zametica, UNPROFOR again called for the reopening of the Airport Routes.¹¹⁵⁵³ The Accused agreed to consider a step-by-step process for opening the Airport Routes, starting with civilian traffic first, then humanitarian traffic, and then commercial traffic.¹¹⁵⁵⁴ In the meantime, UNPROFOR was reporting that humanitarian flights were landing at Sarajevo airport and that UNHCR land convoys were delivering food; as a result, by 15 September, 100% of food needs in Sarajevo were met.¹¹⁵⁵⁵ That same day, Brinkman of UNPROFOR protested to the ABiH over the opening of fire from ABiH positions at a convoy travelling on one of the open Blue Routes.¹¹⁵⁵⁶

3598. By mid-September 1994, the quiet period came to an end as the ABiH forces launched an attack against the Bosnian Serb side on the Pale-Ilidža road which was easily repelled by the SRK but then led to the SRK blocking convoys into Sarajevo again.¹¹⁵⁵⁷ The UN reported that the heaviest fighting since February 1994 erupted in Sarajevo on 18 September, with a large number of shells exchanged between the two sides; according to the UN report, the ABiH initiated the fighting by firing mortars from residential areas within the city while the SRK responded in a restrained manner.¹¹⁵⁵⁸ Rose immediately wrote to both sides requesting them to immediately halt the military action and stop violating the TEZ.¹¹⁵⁵⁹ Following the offensive, the supply of humanitarian aid was interrupted and the humanitarian situation deteriorated.¹¹⁵⁶⁰ In a meeting on 20 September with Rose and in the presence of the Accused, Milovanović, and Koljević, Krajišnik stated that “it would be difficult to stop Serb soldiers from shooting at airplanes” if certain demands were not met, including that UNPROFOR formally recognise Bosnian Serb ownership of the airport, pay rent, and end the movement of Bosnian Muslim government delegations.¹¹⁵⁶¹ The Accused indicated that he wanted these demands included in an agreement which would supplement the Airport Agreement.¹¹⁵⁶²

3599. On 21 September, the SRK reported that the ABiH had opened infantry, sniper, and some mortar fire on SRK positions on both that day and the preceding day.¹¹⁵⁶³ On 22 September, following two sniping incidents in the city—one against a civilian and another against a UN soldier—Rose called for another air strike against a Bosnian Serb tank in the TEZ to the west of Sarajevo, which was followed by a Bosnian Serb attack on an UNPROFOR tank, wounding the driver.¹¹⁵⁶⁴ In a meeting with the UN the next day, Mladić demanded an apology and told General David Fraser, who was in Sarajevo from April 1994 to May 1995 working as an assistant to the UNPROFOR commander of Sector Sarajevo,¹¹⁵⁶⁵ that no convoy would pass through the Bosnian Serb territory without an apology; this materialised on the ground as all Serb check-points were closed for larger vehicles.¹¹⁵⁶⁶ This decision of the VRS Main Staff to stop the movement of all humanitarian organisations in the territory of the RS led the RS Minister of Health to draft a complaint to the Main Staff noting a shortage of medical supplies and humanitarian aid in RS territory.¹¹⁵⁶⁷ On 25 September, Mladić informed UNPROFOR, via a liaison officer, that the safety of aircraft flying into Sarajevo airport could no longer be guaranteed; consequently, flights into Sarajevo were suspended.¹¹⁵⁶⁸

3600. On 2 October 1994, in a meeting with the Accused, Zametica, Tolimir, Koljević, Krajišnik and Buha, De Mello insisted on reopening Sarajevo airport for humanitarian flights but the Accused reiterated his position that the airport would not reopen until the Airport Agreement was renegotiated and that the Airport Routes would remain closed until all Bosnian Serb POWs in Tarčin were released.¹¹⁵⁶⁹ However, he agreed to re-establish freedom of movement for humanitarian convoys travelling on the other Blue Routes.¹¹⁵⁷⁰ During a subsequent meeting on 5 October 1994, which was also attended by Akashi and Rose, Akashi agreed to ask the UN headquarters if there was any way to acknowledge that UNPROFOR “took over” the airport from the Bosnian Serbs in return for which the Bosnian Serbs would reopen Sarajevo airport to both UNPROFOR and UNHCR flights.¹¹⁵⁷¹

3601. On 6 October 1994, the ABiH conducted an operation on Mt. Igman, going through the DMZ and killing a number of SRK soldiers and four Serb nurses located there; it also established positions in the area, contrary to the August 1993 agreement.¹¹⁵⁷² As a result, in the days that followed, the SRK opened sniper fire on Sarajevo and shelled the city, targeting civilians.¹¹⁵⁷³ Having lodged a strong protest with the ABiH, Rose also had a meeting with Mladić and Tolimir on 10 October in which Mladić threatened to operate against Sarajevo and restrict the freedom of movement of the UN if ABiH units were not cleared out of the DMZ.¹¹⁵⁷⁴ On 8 October, a tram was shot at on Zmaja od Bosne street, resulting in casualties.¹¹⁵⁷⁵ On 27 October, Milošević issued a warning to SRK units, stating that the “enemy does not respect any rules or principles of humanity” and that even though the SRK tried to “obey all Geneva conventions until now [...] if the enemy continues in the same way, they will force us that as of today we respond on [sic] every bullet fired [...] by firing at the selected target under the Muslim control in Sarajevo”.¹¹⁵⁷⁶ On 31 October, foreign media reported that ABiH forces had opened fire at UN planes at Sarajevo airport, but that the airlift had not been suspended.¹¹⁵⁷⁷

3602. By November 1994, the ABiH forces were still positioned on Mt. Igman and launched an offensive from there, targeting both Bosnian Serbs and one UNPROFOR observation post.¹¹⁵⁷⁸ According to Rose, this did not result in NATO air strikes because by that time NATO was no longer willing to launch strikes against the Bosnian Muslims.¹¹⁵⁷⁹

3603. On 17 November, Dragomir Milošević informed UNPROFOR that the SRK was imposing additional measures on convoy movement, including the inspection of all humanitarian convoys crossing SRK frontlines.¹¹⁵⁸⁰ On 18 November, a woman and her seven year old son were shot at while walking on Zmaja od Bosne street, resulting in the death of the boy and injuries to the woman.¹¹⁵⁸¹ On 19 November, Gobilliard met with the Accused and Krajišnik, among others, and the Accused threatened that if the ABiH continued to fire from within the TEZ, the Bosnian Serbs would retaliate.¹¹⁵⁸² The situation in Sarajevo deteriorated and the number of reported cease-fire violations increased, although, according to Rose, that number was exaggerated as the civilian casualties in fact decreased.¹¹⁵⁸³ At the same time, however, there was a “total halt” in the movement of convoys, the volume of humanitarian supplies was very low, and the arrival of humanitarian flights depended on the good will of the Bosnian Serbs; the Sarajevo population was being “strangled” as the Bosnian Serbs wanted to apply as much pressure on the city as possible before the winter set in.¹¹⁵⁸⁴ On 23 November, a tram was shot at while travelling on Zmaja od Bosne street, resulting in the wounding of two women.¹¹⁵⁸⁵

3604. At the beginning of December 1994, the SRK shelled Sarajevo’s downtown area with wire-guided missiles from within the TEZ.¹¹⁵⁸⁶ On 5 December, at a meeting between Rose and Andreev on one side and Gvero and Tolimir on the other, Gvero connected the opening of the airport to assurances from NATO that it would not bomb targets in Bosnian Serb territory.¹¹⁵⁸⁷ The effectiveness of the WCPs began to deteriorate and on 6 December VRS members forcibly removed a number of weapons from various sites around Sarajevo.¹¹⁵⁸⁸ On 8 December, Andreev wrote to the Accused protesting the Bosnian Serb forces' refusal to provide the necessary security guarantees for UNPROFOR and UNHCR flights into Sarajevo airport.¹¹⁵⁸⁹ On 10 December, UNPROFOR reported that the first convoys in almost a month had arrived in Sarajevo.¹¹⁵⁹⁰ On 12 December, Rose met with Krajišnik, Koljević, Gvero, and Tolimir and told the participants at this meeting that the "endless bureaucracy and checks" of the convoys were unacceptable.¹¹⁵⁹¹ They, in turn, gave assurances that regular convoys would run until a more permanent agreement on convoy procedures was reached.¹¹⁵⁹² According to Banbury, around mid-December, the Bosnian Serbs eased restrictions on freedom of movement in order to come across as the more reasonable party in peace negotiations with President Carter.¹¹⁵⁹³ delivery of humanitarian aid resulting in the re-opening of the Blue Routes, including the Airport Routes.¹¹⁵⁹⁶ As a result, the situation in Sarajevo improved, and January and February 1995 were relatively peaceful.¹¹⁵⁹⁷ There was also a substantial improvement in the humanitarian situation and more than 5,000 people were using the Airport Routes daily.¹¹⁵⁹⁸

3607. Yet, towards the end of February 1995 there was an increase in sniping incidents in the city, including the sniping of civilians.¹¹⁵⁹⁹ On 27 February, a tram was shot at while travelling on Zmaja od Bosne street, resulting in a number of casualties.¹¹⁶⁰⁰ In March the situation deteriorated in other parts of BiH, and the COHA was beginning to collapse, largely due to ABiH activities, which then led to the resumption of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo on a regular basis.¹¹⁶⁰¹ On 3 March, another tram on Zmaja od Bosne street was shot at, resulting in casualties, while Tarik Žunić, a 14 year old boy, was shot at in the Sedrenik area while walking home from school.¹¹⁶⁰² On 5 March, Mladić told General Rupert Smith, commander of UNPROFOR BiH Command,¹¹⁶⁰³ that the SRK's increase in sniping in Sarajevo was in response to Serb casualties suffered in the military offensives launched by the ABiH, which to Smith was an explicit recognition that sniping was used by the SRK as a punitive measure rather than for any military gain.¹¹⁶⁰⁴ On 8 March

1995, Directive 7 was signed by the Accused, ordering the SRK to, among other things, prevent the lifting of the blockade of Sarajevo “from without” by using “decisive defence”.¹¹⁶⁰⁵ As a result, the conditions in Sarajevo deteriorated with an alarming upsurge in military activity, including a substantial increase in sniping activities against civilians causing the tram service to be stopped.¹¹⁶⁰⁶ In this period, Grbavica was sniped by the ABiH, resulting in the deaths of two Serb girls; this in turn led to increased shelling in Sarajevo and prompted the Accused to close the Blue Routes.¹¹⁶⁰⁷ Thus, on 12 March 1995, the city was subjected to the heaviest shelling since September 1994, while the number of sniping casualties in the period up to 18 March was the highest since August 1994.¹¹⁶⁰⁸ According to Smith, the bulk of the shelling and sniping in this period came from the Bosnian Serb side and, in his view, was aimed at harassing the population at large.¹¹⁶⁰⁹ On 14 March, Akashi met with the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, and Koljević, and the Accused reiterated the Bosnian Serb policy that the Airport Routes would close for one month for every Bosnian Serb killed by sniping in Sarajevo.¹¹⁶¹⁰ Subsequent attempts to negotiate the reopening of the Airport Routes failed.¹¹⁶¹¹ On 25 March 1995, Smith met with Koljević who

At a meeting on 5 April 1995, Koljević stated that another Bosnian Serb man had been killed by sniper fire, which meant that the Airport Routes had to close for a total of 90 days. openly admitted that the Bosnian Serb side's intention now was to pursue the end of the war through military means; in Smith's view, given that the Serbs lacked manpower, they were going to do this by relying on fire-power.¹¹⁶¹² By the end of March, there was a widespread resumption of fighting in Sarajevo.¹¹⁶¹³ On 29 March, UNPROFOR reported that an increase in Bosnian Serb firing at UN aircraft at Sarajevo airport led to the suspension of flights between 17 and 24 March.¹¹⁶¹⁴

3608. By April 1995 it became clear that the peace talks were going nowhere as a result of which the COHA was no longer operative, the TEZ was being violated by both sides, and the situation in Sarajevo escalated with a daily average of firing incidents close to 1,000.¹¹⁶¹⁵ On 5 April, the Accused indicated to Smith that a decision had been made to start a counter-offensive and that the Bosnian Serb Forces would employ weapons they had not used yet.¹¹⁶¹⁶ On 7 April, a modified air bomb exploded in Hrasnica inflicting civilian casualties.¹¹⁶¹⁷ On 8 April, the Bosnian Serbs halted the humanitarian airlift, alleging that the UN was violating the Airport Agreement by smuggling arms to the ABiH and subsequent attempts to negotiate the reopening of the airport failed.¹¹⁶¹⁸ In

¹¹⁶¹⁸ P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), para. 173. On 19 April 1995, in a meeting between Smith, Aguilar, Harland, Krajišnik, Mandić, and Stanišić, Krajišnik stated that he agreed “in principle” to the resumption of the humanitarian airlift, but that the details were in the hands of Koljević, who was in charge of humanitarian aid. See P881 (David Harland's note re meeting in Pale on Sarajevo Airport, 20 April 1995), p. 2; P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), para. 173. mid-April, two members of UNPROFOR were killed by sniper fire.¹¹⁶¹⁹ On 21 April, Akashi and Smith met with both sides separately to negotiate an extension of the COHA; however, while both sides expressed a desire to extend it, they demanded that it be done on their terms so no mutual agreement was reached.¹¹⁶²⁰ According to Akashi, while the Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Croats were in favour of “some kind of continuation” of the COHA, the Bosnian Muslims were against it.¹¹⁶²¹ During this meeting, the Accused told Akashi that the Airport Routes would remain closed as long as sniping against Bosnian Serbs continued.¹¹⁶²² Akashi and Smith had two more rounds of these meetings on 30 April and 1 May but no progress was made; afterwards, Smith reported that the Bosnian Muslim side refused the continuation of COHA but promised it would exercise restraint while the Bosnian Serb side unanimously decided to resolve the situation by military means.¹¹⁶²³ At the meeting of 30 April, which was attended, among others, by Akashi, Smith, Janvier, Koljević, and Krajišnik, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs would not uphold the Airport Agreement as long as the Anti-Sniping Agreement was not being upheld by the other side.¹¹⁶²⁴ According to Harland, from this point there was no resumption of humanitarian airlift until the end of the war.¹¹⁶²⁵ The Airport Routes also did not reopen until the end of the war.¹¹⁶²⁶ Consequently, by May 1995, the humanitarian situation in Sarajevo was rapidly deteriorating.¹¹⁶²⁷

While Harland, Fraser, KDZ304, and KDZ182 testified that one of those two French soldiers was killed by the SRK while erecting anti-sniping barriers, Edin Garaplija gave evidence that he was in fact shot by Nedžad Herenda, a member of the Bosnian Muslim Ševe unit. As discussed later, the Chamber considers this to be an accurate reflection of the events. The witnesses all agree that the other UN soldier shot in this period was shot by the ABiH in the area of Dobrinja. See para. 4505, fn. 15085.

3609. In response to Bosnian Serb mortar attacks on civilian areas of Sarajevo on 7 and 8 May 1995, Smith requested that NATO conduct air strikes but his request was denied; Smith informed the Accused of his reasons behind the request during their meeting on 9 May, at which point the Accused did not deny that civilian areas were attacked.¹¹⁶²⁸ On 12 May, an ABiH offensive around Sarajevo started and the SRK suppressed the ABiH attacks displaying military prowess and dominant fire power.¹¹⁶²⁹ By mid-May, the TEZ had largely collapsed and both sides were using their heavy weapons liberally, particularly around the confrontation lines.¹¹⁶³⁰ In late May, there was an outbreak of fighting along the confrontation lines and both sides withdrew heavy weapons from the WCPs; the Bosnian Serb side then used them to shell civilian areas in Sarajevo, as a result of which, on 24 May, Smith issued an ultimatum that they would be subject to air strikes if they did not cease firing their heavy weapons on that day.¹¹⁶³¹ On the same day, two modified air bombs exploded in Safeta Zajke street and Majdanska street, killing and injuring a number of people.¹¹⁶³² The Bosnian Serbs did not return the weapons as instructed by Smith and air strikes were launched on 25 May; this led to further shelling of Sarajevo, as well as a number of UN personnel being detained around BiH and a crisis point in the relationship between the UN and the Bosnian Serb side.¹¹⁶³³ On 26 May, yet another modified air bomb exploded, this time on Safeta Hadžića street, injuring a number of people.¹¹⁶³⁴ On 27 May, an incident between the UN and the SRK soldiers took place on the Vrbanja Bridge, deepening the crisis even further.¹¹⁶³⁵ On 27 May, at a meeting of Akashi's staff, Banbury wrote that they were "paralysed on everything" including humanitarian aid.¹¹⁶³⁶ On 28 May, UNPROFOR reported that, in response to NATO air strikes, the Bosnian Serbs blocked land access to Sarajevo and severely restricted UNPROFOR's freedom of movement.¹¹⁶³⁷ On 26 May, Dragomir Milošević issued an order to SRK units to establish a "full blockade" of UNPROFOR and to disregard UN requests for food and water.¹¹⁶³⁸ According to Harland, at this time the Bosnian Serbs sought to impose a "total blockade" on Sarajevo and cut off its food supply completely.¹¹⁶³⁹ Following these events the WCPs ceased to exist.¹¹⁶⁴⁰

3610. Due to the total blockade on its freedom of movement, UNPROFOR fortified the road over Mt. Igman so that at least some humanitarian aid could be provided to Sarajevo.¹¹⁶⁴¹ Until the end of the war, this road was the only viable route for the delivery of humanitarian aid to Sarajevo.¹¹⁶⁴² However, this road was also used by ABiH forces at night, as a result of which the SRK forces fired on vehicles using that route at night.¹¹⁶⁴³ On 6 June UNHCR reported that a third of the civilian population of Sarajevo (approximately 100,000 people) was totally dependent on aid, that Sarajevo airport would be completely emptied of supplies by the following day, that the bakery would run out of flour on 8 June, that only 15% of the aid target would be achieved by 10 June, by which point there would be no aid to distribute to the civilian population.¹¹⁶⁴⁴ However, on 8 June,

UNHCR and UNPROFOR met with the Accused and Koljević and successfully negotiated an agreement to deliver humanitarian aid to Sarajevo by land through the Sierra 1 check-point.¹¹⁶⁴⁵

3611. In the last months of the conflict, the balance of power evolved and the ABiH was able to attack in much greater strength and with better equipment.¹¹⁶⁴⁶ According to Akashi, at that juncture the BiH government, supported by the US government, did not want a long-term cease-fire as that would have made Bosnian Serb territorial gains permanent.¹¹⁶⁴⁷ On 16 June 1995, the ABiH started a series of large-scale attacks, trying to break out of Sarajevo; they saw some success in the early stages, but were pushed back with heavy casualties.¹¹⁶⁴⁸ As a result, the SRK retaliated and the situation in Sarajevo deteriorated, with a number of civilians killed at water lines and market places and the SRK firing modified air bombs at the city.¹¹⁶⁴⁹ On the same day two modified air bombs exploded in different parts of Sarajevo, injuring a number of people.¹¹⁶⁵⁰ On 17 June 1995, noting the ABiH offensive, the Accused declared a state of war in the zone of responsibility of the SRK.¹¹⁶⁵¹ Its aim was to “enable the full engagement of human and material potential” in defence of the RS and to “take all necessary measures to achieve the defined aims” of defeating the enemy.¹¹⁶⁵² The situation was becoming desperate and the morale was very low as the SRK adopted a new strategy to clench their grip on urban Sarajevo in response to every hill taken by the

ABiH outside of Sarajevo.¹¹⁶⁵³ UNPROFOR's freedom of movement inside Sarajevo was also limited due to proliferation of ABiH check-points.¹¹⁶⁵⁴ In a letter to the Accused dated 15 June, Akashi described the situation in Sarajevo and the eastern enclaves as a "developing disaster" where "humanitarian supplies and relief personnel are prevented from reaching their destinations, warehouses are empty, [and] whole families are crying out for food".¹¹⁶⁵⁵ At the end of June and the beginning of July, Sarajevo experienced heavy fighting since the SRK was responding to the continued offensives of the ABiH by indiscriminately shelling and sniping downtown areas, resulting in civilian casualties.¹¹⁶⁵⁶ On 24 June, UNPROFOR reported that the first food convoys in more than four weeks had reached Sarajevo but would satisfy the needs of only 20% of the civilian population.¹¹⁶⁵⁷

3612. Throughout July 1995 the situation in the battlefield around Sarajevo was relatively quiet as the Bosnians Serbs focused their attention on Srebrenica, but the shelling and sniping in the city continued unabated, having no apparent military value.¹¹⁶⁵⁸ According to Harland, in early July the humanitarian situation in Sarajevo had become "desperate" and the "civilian population's morale was very low, as was UNPROFOR's".¹¹⁶⁵⁹ Despite the agreement reached on 8 June 1995, the Bosnian Serb authorities continued to obstruct convoys.¹¹⁶⁶⁰ Thus, UNPROFOR and UNHCR again resorted to using the Mt. Igman road in early July 1995 to provide aid, mainly flour, to Sarajevo.¹¹⁶⁶¹ However, Bosnian Serb forces, mainly the units of the Ilidža Brigade, regularly attacked convoys using this route.¹¹⁶⁶² On 15 July, UNPROFOR reported that civilians in Sarajevo were surviving on whatever food they had stockpiled, on what they could grow in vegetable gardens, and whatever goods were brought into Sarajevo through the tunnel.¹¹⁶⁶³ On 19 July, in a meeting with Smith, Mladić agreed to allow UNPROFOR and UNHCR to move convoys into Sarajevo using a route from Kiseljak.¹¹⁶⁶⁴ However, on 30 July, Mladić informed Smith that the Bosnian Muslims had attacked convoys using this route the day before in order to make the route impossible to use, leaving Mt. Igman as the only alternative.¹¹⁶⁶⁵ Mladić also stated that use of the Mt. Igman route by the ABiH was “illegal” and something which the Bosnian Serbs would “never accept”.¹¹⁶⁶⁶ In another meeting with Mladić on 31 July, Smith emphasised the need to reopen Sarajevo airport for the delivery of humanitarian aid and to simplify procedures for checking convoys.¹¹⁶⁶⁷ Mladić responded that the airport could not be opened until ABiH forces withdrew from Mt. Igman and that convoy procedures would be simplified in proportion to the “growth of mutual trust” between UNPROFOR and the VRS.¹¹⁶⁶⁸

3613. On 8 August 1995, the VRS Main Staff issued an urgent order instructing all the corps to warn their units to save ammunition of all calibres as much as possible.¹¹⁶⁶⁹ On 18 August, Milošević issued an order to all SRK units to use “all means to prevent a new offensive to lift the blockade of Sarajevo”.¹¹⁶⁷⁰ On 21 August, in a meeting with Koljević, Pedauye of UNPROFOR emphasised the importance of opening Sarajevo airport before the onset of winter.¹¹⁶⁷¹ Koljević, noting that the Bosnian Muslims were using the tunnel under the airport for military purposes, responded that the Bosnian Serbs were prepared to open the airport only if humanitarian activities were separated from the military ones.¹¹⁶⁷²

3614. On 28 August 1995, the second Markale market incident took place which led to NATO air strikes, as described later in this judgement.¹¹⁶⁷³ On 2 September 1995, Harland and Smith decided to open the airport for anyone wanting to cross it.¹¹⁶⁷⁴ When they informed Krajišnik of this intention, Krajišnik threatened to shoot any vehicle that crossed the airport without Bosnian Serb approval.¹¹⁶⁷⁵ UNPROFOR ignored the threat, which was never carried out—as a result, traffic began to flow in and out of Sarajevo for the first time since 1992.¹¹⁶⁷⁶ On 14 September, the Accused and Holbrooke agreed on a framework for a cease-fire agreement according to which both the ABiH and the VRS were first to stop all operations within and around the TEZ in Sarajevo, the VRS was to remove its heavy weapons outside of the TEZ while the ABiH was to place its heavy weapons under the control of the UN, and NATO was to cease the air strikes; the framework also envisaged that after all of these steps were completed, an agreement would be signed on cessation of hostilities, first in Sarajevo and then in the rest of BiH.¹¹⁶⁷⁷ At a meeting on 20 September, Smith informed Dragomir Milošević that as part of the cease-fire UNPROFOR required “full and unhindered” freedom of movement, including the removal of Bosnian Serb check-points on roads into Sarajevo.¹¹⁶⁷⁸ On 25 September 1995, Sarajevo trams started working again.¹¹⁶⁷⁹ At meetings on 6 and 8 October, Krajišnik, Dragomir Milošević, and Indić, among others, proposed the opening of several routes into Sarajevo for the delivery of humanitarian aid.¹¹⁶⁸⁰ Following these developments, the situation improved and a cease-fire was agreed upon on 12 October.¹¹⁶⁸¹ The fighting subsided by 14 October 1995.¹¹⁶⁸²

b. Sniping

3615. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused, together with a number of others, participated in a joint criminal enterprise to establish and carry out a campaign of sniping against the civilian population of Sarajevo between April 1992 and November 1995 the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population.¹¹⁶⁸³ In order to illustrate that campaign¹¹⁶⁸⁴ the Prosecution presented, inter alia, detailed evidence in relation to 16 sniping incidents listed in Schedule F of the Indictment.¹¹⁶⁸⁵ These incidents included sniping of trams as well as sniping of individual victims who found themselves on the streets of Sarajevo, all alleged to have been perpetrated by the “Sarajevo Forces”.¹¹⁶⁸⁶ In addition, the Prosecution also brought general evidence going to the nature of sniping in Sarajevo and a number of unscheduled sniping incidents, in order to establish a pattern of conduct by the Bosnian Serb military and political authorities.¹¹⁶⁸⁷

3616. In response, the Accused argues that there is no evidence that the SRK was tasked with opening sniper fire against civilians; instead the SRK sniping practice was strictly “military on military” and the victims of sniping incidents were simply caught in the exchange of fire and shot

¹¹⁶⁸⁶ Sarajevo Forces are defined in the Indictment as (i) members of JNA operating in and around Sarajevo until about 20 May 1992, (ii) members of the VRS, in particular the SRK, and (iii) members of other forces operating in or with responsibility over the Sarajevo area. See Indictment, para. 18.

by stray bullets.¹¹⁶⁸⁸ The Accused does concede, however, that civilian deaths may have occurred during the war due to “uncontrolled sniper[s]” but argues that there was an attempt by the SRK not to harm civilians.¹¹⁶⁸⁹ In addition, the Accused claims that ABiH snipers opened fire on their own civilians.¹¹⁶⁹⁰ The Prosecution argues in turn that the Accused’s suggestions that ABiH forces fired on their own civilians are implausible and not supported by reliable evidence, while his claims that the victims were caught in exchanges of fire are also unsupported by the evidence.¹¹⁶⁹¹

i. Sniping in general

3617. With respect to sniping, the Chamber heard from two experts in this case, namely Patrick van der Weijden, a trained sniper himself, commissioned by the Prosecution,¹¹⁶⁹² and Mile Poparić, a ballistics expert, commissioned by the Accused,¹¹⁶⁹³ both of whom have produced an expert report for the purpose of this case.¹¹⁶⁹⁴ a bullet fired from a sniper weapon, which is “grossly erroneous” since sniper fire and ordinary small arms fire are “essentially very different” even though the difference between the two has become “imperceptibly blurred”.¹¹⁶⁹⁸ However, contrary to Poparić’s position, the Chamber considers that for the purpose of entering factual and legal findings on the sniping incidents alleged in the Indictment, which are charged as murder, unlawful attacks on civilians, and terror, the distinction between a popular sniper and a professional military sniper is not important. What matters instead is the identity of the perpetrators, regardless of their level of training or the specific weapons they used, and whether their actions satisfied the elements of the crimes charged.¹¹⁶⁹⁹ Accordingly, the Chamber’s use of the term “sniper” throughout this judgement will be in line with the above-described popular use of the term, encompassing both professional military sniper teams and hidden shooters operating alone and targeting individuals and objects.

3619. The Chamber also heard that in an urban setting, large buildings or factories offer multiple possibilities to establish shooting positions, making it difficult for the enemy to locate the shot.¹¹⁷⁰⁰ In those situations, snipers will prefer to stay away from the windowsills or if possible shoot through loopholes created by using a hole shot in the wall.¹¹⁷⁰¹ They will also choose positions on either side of the frontline but not right on it.¹¹⁷⁰² Van der Weijden also testified that in built up areas the shooting ranges of a sniper are at an average of 75 metres while long shots are possible only from dominating positions, with an overview from above.¹¹⁷⁰³ He further noted that sniper rifles are usually fitted with magnifying scopes of varying sizes, making it possible to identify whether individuals are combatants or civilians, even at ranges of over two kilometres.¹¹⁷⁰⁴ In terms of judging a distance when shooting, in a relatively static situation, where the frontlines remain unchanged for weeks or months as in Sarajevo, a sniper can choose an object for target practice and then set the settings on his scope for future shots at the same distance.¹¹⁷⁰⁵ As for machine guns, which can also be used for sniping, the typical scope would have a magnification of

¹¹⁷⁰⁴ According to Van der Weijden, a sniper can distinguish between civilians and combatants through a number of indicators, including the target’s size, the way in which he or she moves, clothing, sex, age, and actions. A sniper can also use a rangefinder on his rifle to identify children, noting that if children are hit at great distance with the use of the rangefinder, they would have been identified as such in order to be hit. four and, if the machine gun was placed on a tripod and used in a static frontline, the sniper would have relatively accurate fire up to 1,500 metres.¹¹⁷⁰⁶

3620. In terms of target identification, Van der Weijden testified that in an urban battle zone, more civilians are present and most targets will only be visible for a short moment.¹¹⁷⁰⁷ Thus, strict rules of engagement are usually provided to guide the sniper.¹¹⁷⁰⁸ He has to be extremely careful when taking his shots and must positively identify his target as the enemy beforehand.¹¹⁷⁰⁹ As for the targets themselves, Van der Weijden explained that it is easy for people unaccustomed to shooting to get confused about the origin of fire as the bullet usually strikes before the sound of the shot reaches the victim.¹¹⁷¹⁰ He also explained that being exposed to sniping causes great anxiety to the population as they never feel safe and never know exactly when or from where the shot would come.¹¹⁷¹¹

ii. Sniping in Sarajevo

(A) Nature of sniping in the city

3621. The Chamber heard that sniping within Sarajevo was constant throughout the conflict, resulting in many civilian casualties and the setting up of anti-sniping barriers all over the city to protect civilians.¹¹⁷¹² Fraser testified that during his time there both sides conducted sniping

¹¹⁷⁰⁸ P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled “Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo ‘92–’94”), p. 5. According to Van der Weijden, the sniper is permitted to shoot a civilian only if that civilian poses an immediate threat to the sniper or his comrades; however, if the sniper is not sure that there is such a threat, he should not use force. activities which usually ended up in a tit-for-tat type of exchange.¹¹⁷¹³ Both sides, according to Fraser, were also indiscriminate and would shoot at men, women, and children.¹¹⁷¹⁴ This was confirmed by KDZ182 who told the Chamber that both sides would kill innocent people, including women, children, and the elderly, in order to show they were in control and to exert pressure through the reporting of the media.¹¹⁷¹⁵ However, both KDZ182 and Fraser, as well as many other witnesses, testified that the Serbs shot more, particularly in the Sedrenik and the so-called “Sniper Alley”¹¹⁷¹⁶ areas.¹¹⁷¹⁷ Harland also stated that both sides sniped but because the Bosnian Serbs held the higher ground around Sarajevo, they had a lot more opportunity and capacity to do so.¹¹⁷¹⁸ Van Baal testified that the SRK used sniping as a “means of repression and terror”—the sniping was carried out without any discrimination and citizens, women, and children were targeted “at unexpected places and unexpected times”.¹¹⁷¹⁹ Rose himself testified that the presence of snipers in Sarajevo made normal life impossible and that there was an atmosphere of fear in the city.¹¹⁷²⁰ Tucker testified that when he arrived to the city in October 1992 there was constant sniper fire and intense periods of small arms fire around the perimeters of the city.¹¹⁷²¹ Richard Mole, a senior

UNMO in Sarajevo between 16 September and 26 December 1992,¹¹⁷²² testified that during his time in Sarajevo there was continual background noise of small arms and artillery fire in the city.¹¹⁷²³ Even when Sarajevo was “calm”, the Bosnian Serbs would engage in sniping in order to put pressure on the city.¹¹⁷²⁴ A number of local citizens of Sarajevo confirmed the above, testifying that the civilians in the city were continuously targeted by Bosnian Serb sniper fire no matter where they were, and that certain areas, such as Marin Dvor and Sedrenik, were particularly dangerous as far as sniper fire was concerned.¹¹⁷²⁵ In addition, when in operation, the Sarajevo trams and the people onboard were also subjected to sniper fire from the Bosnian Serb side.¹¹⁷²⁶ Confirming the evidence above about the targeting of civilians, the demographic expert Ewa Tabeau produced reports in which she analysed civilian deaths in Sarajevo and came to the conclusion that in the period between 1 April 1992 and August 1994, an absolute minimum of 503 civilians died as a result of sniper or firearm fire, while another 2,215 were wounded.¹¹⁷²⁷ As for the period between September 1994 and November 1995, Tabeau used different sources of information and was able to conclude that, at a minimum, some 449 individuals died from war-related causes, including sniping, within the confrontation lines of Sarajevo.¹¹⁷²⁸ In addition, in this period, an absolute minimum of 77 civilians were wounded due to sniping.¹¹⁷²⁹

¹¹⁷²⁷ Tabeau reached these numbers by using two main sources of information in the said period, namely the Households Survey conducted in September 1994 in the ABiH-held Sarajevo and the records of the Bakije Funeral home, the largest funeral home in Sarajevo. She then compared them to the 1991 census and, in order to distinguish between military and civilian casualties, to the ABiH lists of fallen soldiers. See P4997 (Ewa Tabeau’s expert report entitled “Persons Killed and Wounded in Sarajevo During the First Months of the ‘Siege’ from 1 April to 9 September 1992”, 1 May 2009), pp. 1–2, 4–7; P4998 (Ewa Tabeau’s expert report entitled “Population Losses in the ‘Siege’ of Sarajevo 10 September 1992 to 10 August 1994”, 10 May 2002), pp. 1–4; Ewa Tabeau, T. 28173–28176, 28196–28197 (26 April 2012). Tabeau explained that the real number of civilian deaths is most likely higher because the number of those reported as soldiers in the Household Survey was higher than the numbers seen in ABiH lists of fallen soldiers, due to, among other things, families hoping to obtain a military pension. See P4997 (Ewa Tabeau’s expert report entitled “Persons Killed and Wounded in Sarajevo During the First Months of the ‘Siege’ from 1 April to 9 September 1992”, 1 May 2009), p. 8.

¹¹⁷²⁸ For this period, Tabeau’s main source of information in relation to the wounded civilians were patient records of the three main Sarajevo hospitals. This source was somewhat incomplete as it did not include the records of a number of smaller hospitals in the city and because it included only hospitalised patients. Tabeau also used a

3622. All SRK units had snipers rifles and dedicated marksmen.¹¹⁷³⁰ They had various M48 rifles of 7.9 mm calibre in its arsenal.¹¹⁷³¹ These rifles had optical sights and were referred to as sniping rifles.¹¹⁷³² In addition, they had M76 sniper rifles which also used 7.9 mm calibre ammunition, albeit different to the ammunition used for the M48 rifles.¹¹⁷³³ Finally, the SRK had semi-automatic 7.62 mm calibre rifles that could be equipped with optical sights,¹¹⁷³⁴ which meant that they could fire with precision from up to 400 metres away, with an overall range of 800 metres.¹¹⁷³⁵ However, Stanislav Galić, the SRK Commander from September 1992 to August 1994,¹¹⁷³⁶ testified that there were no sniping units as such in the SRK, but only a small number of sharpshooters who would be assigned across various units down to the level of company.¹¹⁷³⁷ Thus, the level of command and control which could issue tasks to snipers was at the level of the platoon commander at the highest and, occasionally, that of the company commander.¹¹⁷³⁸ Higher levels of command did not deal with snipers except in extraordinary circumstances.¹¹⁷³⁹ number of different sources relating to those killed in Sarajevo, including again the Bakije Funeral home records. For this period, however, she was unable to determine which deaths were attributed to shelling and which to sniping since, unlike the Household Survey, the sources she used here did not contain that type of information. She therefore classified 449 deaths as being war-related. 3623. Contradicting Galić, Dragan Maletić, commander of the 1st Company of the 3rd Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade,¹¹⁷⁴⁰ and KDZ310, a soldier in this battalion,¹¹⁷⁴¹ both testified that there was a sniper squad in the battalion and that it was directly subordinated to the battalion commander rather than to company or platoon commanders.¹¹⁷⁴² In addition, the order of Galić's deputy dated 4 November 1992 shows that the SRK Command would issue orders specifically concerning the use of snipers in SRK units.¹¹⁷⁴³ Furthermore, on 29 October 1993, Milošević issued an order on behalf of Galić to all the SRK brigades to intensify sniping against the ABiH forces; the order also instructed each brigade to set up a platoon-strength "sniper group" of 31 soldiers, each of whom should be supplied with sniper rifles and silencers.¹¹⁷⁴⁴ KDZ304 thought that SRK snipers were highly professional and were under the control of the SRK command.¹¹⁷⁴⁵ Van der Weijden also testified that it appeared from some of the SRK orders that snipers were deemed to be an important asset for the SRK commanders.¹¹⁷⁴⁶ Similarly, Fraser thought that the Serb snipers were controlled and regulated at the corps level, as shown by one of the SRK orders, and because three of the notorious sniping areas, namely Sedrenik, Sniper Alley, and the airport, crossed a number of different SRK Brigades.¹¹⁷⁴⁷ Furthermore, the sniping activities appeared to be co-ordinated, and whenever he and UNPROFOR met with the SRK Commanders, namely Galić and later Milošević, to protest about sniping incidents, the number of incidents would decrease, giving him the impression that there was some control over the snipers' activities.¹¹⁷⁴⁸ Van Baal thought that there was a clear line, both politically and at the “highest military level”, on the use of snipers as far as the Serb side was concerned.¹¹⁷⁴⁹ Rose thought that sniping was clearly a part of the Bosnian Serbs’ policy of terrorising the civilian population of Sarajevo and that there was “clear control” over the sniping in the city.¹¹⁷⁵⁰ KDZ182 believed that the SRK snipers in Sarajevo were not just locals operating randomly but were perfectly co-ordinated and had the aim of terrorising civilians.¹¹⁷⁵¹ John Hamill, an artillery officer in the Irish Army and UNMO in BiH from May 1993 to July 1994,¹¹⁷⁵² thought that snipers in Sarajevo operated as the “tools of the management” and were under the control of someone in a position of authority.¹¹⁷⁵³ Milenko Indić, the SRK’s liaison officer with UNPROFOR,¹¹⁷⁵⁴ testified that the “SRK just controlled sniper group formations” but stated that it could not control the opening of fire and so the sniping was not stopped.¹¹⁷⁵⁵

3624. Van der Weijden emphasised the importance of proper training for snipers, stating that, for a long range shot, the shooter must be either well trained or very experienced to make first round hits.¹¹⁷⁵⁶ To show that this was the case, the Prosecution presented to the Chamber a number of documents showing that the SRK organised training for snipers during the Indictment period. For example, training for five sniper squad commanders was organised in 1994,¹¹⁷⁵⁷ and an eight-day course for sniper instructors took place on 23 January 1995.¹¹⁷⁵⁸ Over 100 sniper instructors would

3625. Contradicting the evidence outlined above, Dragomir Milošević denied that civilians were deliberately targeted by sniper fire in Sarajevo, arguing that they were caught in combat activities, although he could not exclude the possibility that a "deranged mind on the Serbian side engaged in such activity".¹¹⁷⁶¹ Galić explained that the main task of SRK snipers or sharpshooters was to neutralise ABiH sniper enemy fire and target important military targets, and that civilians were not targeted but rather became collateral damage.¹¹⁷⁶² A number of other SRK soldiers and officers also testified that their specific units never deliberately targeted Sarajevo civilians by opening sniper fire on them and/or that snipers were used only on military targets and in response to ABiH fire.¹¹⁷⁶³ They also denied using sniper fire on trams and other modes of public transport in the city.¹¹⁷⁶⁴ In his book, however, Milovanović wrote that sniping was a huge problem for both parties in Sarajevo “having completely got out of control”.¹¹⁷⁶⁵ Milošević conceded that he had received, from UNPROFOR and the media, allegations about Serb soldiers sniping at civilians, but claimed that the media exaggerated the situation on the ground and could not be trusted while at the same time he tried to establish if the information from UNPROFOR was true or not.¹¹⁷⁶⁶ Similarly, Galić also conceded that he received protests about sniping or infantry fire causing civilian casualties, usually from UNPROFOR and through Indić.¹¹⁷⁶⁷ Indić, on the other hand, testified that while he received protests about sniper fire being opened, he never received protests about such fire causing civilians casualties.¹¹⁷⁶⁸

(B) ABiH sniping practices

3626. As noted above, the Bosnian Muslim side had and used snipers throughout the conflict, particularly targeting the suburb of Grbavica, including the civilians located therein.¹¹⁷⁶⁹ In addition, according to the BiH MUP report of 13 October 1993 on the activities of the 2nd Independent Battalion of the ABiH, which had its headquarters in the Sarajevo dental clinic on Meše Selimovića street, the battalion had a number of “death sowers”,¹¹⁷⁷⁰ one of which was placed near its headquarters, overlooking the Nemanjina street and two to three sniper nests on the third floor of the dental clinic, covering the petrol station plateau at Koševo, a large part of Moša Pijade street, and the area around the medical school.¹¹⁷⁷¹ The Chamber also heard that special sniper groups, referred to as Ševe and Laste, operated from ABiH-held territory.¹¹⁷⁷² Edin Garaplija, a former member of the BiH MUP's SDB, confirmed that Ševe was a special MUP unit that operated during the conflict with the task of sniping at Bosnian Serb positions.¹¹⁷⁷³ According to Galić, the 1st Corps of the ABiH had around 500 snipers in Sarajevo because the Zrak factory, which produced optical sights, was in ABiH-held territory.¹¹⁷⁷⁴ Thomas testified that it was difficult for him to visit and inspect sniper locations in ABiH-held territory due to the BiH government's stonewalling.¹¹⁷⁷⁵ He was successful in seeing one such location, however, which was located in Dobrinja and which was manned by very professional police officers who had good sniping equipment.¹¹⁷⁷⁶

(C) Sniping investigations and anti-sniping measures undertaken in the city

3627. A number of witnesses before this Chamber, including both members of the BiH MUP and UNPROFOR, participated in the investigation of sniping incidents in Sarajevo. With respect to the BiH MUP investigations, the CSB Sarajevo's department for serious criminal acts was tasked with investigating sniping incidents in which one or more people were killed.¹¹⁷⁷⁷ This department was notified of any such incident by the local police station concerned and would in turn inform an investigative judge of the Sarajevo Supreme Court who would become the head of the investigating team.¹¹⁷⁷⁸ A team was then formed, including an investigator, criminal technicians, and a ballistics expert.¹¹⁷⁷⁹ The investigative judge was responsible for the investigation, for ensuring that no legal errors were made, and for conveying instructions to the investigator who would then pass them on to the other members of the team.¹¹⁷⁸⁰ The bulk of the investigation was carried out by ballistic experts and criminal technicians, whose task was to determine the type of the projectile used and the direction from which it came.¹¹⁷⁸¹ Upon completion of the investigation, the investigator would write up an official report on the basis of his notes and “verbal comments” of the experts, providing a chronological description of the work conducted.¹¹⁷⁸² Later on, the investigator would also collect other documents prepared during the investigation, and would pass them on, together with his own report, to the investigating judge.¹¹⁷⁸³ It was for the judge to then prepare a report outlining the findings of the investigation and appending the documents prepared by the CSB and its experts.¹¹⁷⁸⁴ On rare occasions, the investigative judge would ask that further investigation be conducted, usually consisting of additional questioning of witnesses.¹¹⁷⁸⁵

3628. If no ballistic expert was available,¹¹⁷⁸⁶ determination of the origin and/or direction of fire was made by one of the criminal technicians who were also trained to determine the direction of fire.¹¹⁷⁸⁷ With respect to methods that were used for establishing the origin and/or direction of fire, they depended on the type of the incident and the scene in question, as well as any evidence found on the scene and any assistance from eye-witnesses.¹¹⁷⁸⁸ For example, in cases of sniping of trams, the first step was to examine the damage on the tram, including identifying the bullet’s entry and exit holes and their dimensions.¹¹⁷⁸⁹ Once this was done, a rope, glass tubes,¹¹⁷⁹⁰ a measuring level, and a small optical device¹¹⁷⁹¹ would be used to establish the bullet’s entry angle and to determine ballistics experts rather than one. See P1695 (Witness statement of Mirza Sabljica dated 11 February 2010), p. 9.

¹¹⁷⁹⁰ Mirza Sabljica testified that the team had a number of these tubes of different sizes, depending on the type and caliber of the ammunition that was used. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7743 (12 October 2010).

¹¹⁷⁹¹ The device was a type of sophisticated binocular, with a 16 time zoom, made for the BiH MUP in order to assist in their investigations. Mirza Sabljica did not know if this device was ever tested as reliable for the purpose for the direction of fire and facilities from which the bullet may have originated.¹¹⁷⁹² This was done by connecting the entry and exit holes with a tube and a rope,¹¹⁷⁹³ measuring the sides of the resulting triangle and its hypotenuse, using trigonometry to calculate the entry angle, and then, finally, using the optical device to look through the hole¹¹⁷⁹⁴ to sight the area and potential facilities from which the bullet could have originated.¹¹⁷⁹⁵ Mirza Sabljica, a ballistics expert working for CSB Sarajevo,¹¹⁷⁹⁶ testified that the investigation team usually insisted on the tram remaining at the location of the incident although that was often impossible as trams were sometimes moved by the driver to avoid being shot again.¹¹⁷⁹⁷ If the tram could not be returned to the location at which it was when hit,¹¹⁷⁹⁸ the investigators would only take measurements and calculate the bullet's entry angle but would not use the optical device to conduct the sighting exercise as the difference in a few centimetres in the position of the tram would result in a different direction of fire.¹¹⁷⁹⁹ In these instances, the ballistic experts were therefore able to establish only the general direction of fire but not the precise location from which the bullet had been fired.¹¹⁸⁰⁰ The sniping investigations related to sniping of apartments were conducted in the same manner, using the equipment and the methodology described above.¹¹⁸⁰¹

3629. Sabljica also explained that the ballistics experts could not establish the distance which the bullets had travelled and, for that reason, in areas where VRS and ABiH positions were close to each other, they would not specify the exact origin of fire from within VRS-held territory or outside which it was used. He did admit, however, that the device would be affected by certain aberrations in light and noted that the team did not have the equipment necessary to take into account those aberrations. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7733, 7744–7745 (12 October 2010).

¹¹⁷⁹³ According to Mirza Sabljica, the wall of the Sarajevo trams was somewhere between 12 and 15 centimetres thick. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7742 (12 October 2010).

but simply referred to cardinal directions.¹¹⁸⁰² Dragan Mioković, an investigator in CSB Sarajevo,¹¹⁸⁰³ stated that given the circumstances in which the investigations were carried out, the BiH MUP “practically just documented these incidents” rather than elucidating the crimes, which is why medical reports were not of primary importance when conducting investigations.¹¹⁸⁰⁴

3630. Generally, UNPROFOR would be informed about the sniping incidents, either from its own troops or through protests by warring factions, and would conduct its own investigation and also assist the BiH MUP in their investigations.¹¹⁸⁰⁵ Fraser testified that because UNPROFOR was not supposed to get involved in exchanges between the warring factions, it took great care to determine whether sniping incidents were directed against civilians or not.¹¹⁸⁰⁶ If they were, it would then exercise particular caution to determine which side fired the shot against the civilian.¹¹⁸⁰⁷ Fraser conceded, however, that the UNPROFOR investigation was not a criminal investigation.¹¹⁸⁰⁸ Instead, UNPROFOR would get information from its troops positioned in the area of the incident and from the local authorities, including the local police, and would then protest, verbally or in writing, with the party found to have conducted the sniping attack.¹¹⁸⁰⁹ Rose testified that the UN could not determine beyond reasonable doubt from where the sniper fire had come because it did not conduct investigations that would have established that.¹¹⁸¹⁰

3631. In addition, prompted by the number of sniping incidents in the Sniper Alley area, Sector Sarajevo also created an international anti-sniping task force wherein snipers from each UNPROFOR battalion were given anti-sniping tasks in their area of responsibility, with the aim of protecting civilians.¹¹⁸¹¹ This force had a co-ordination centre and sniping incidents were reported to the Sector Sarajevo headquarters as soon as possible after they occurred.¹¹⁸¹² While part of the task force's duties was to deter both sides, it principally had to deter the Bosnian Serbs from shooting at civilians.¹¹⁸¹³ It would do that by, for example, physically interposing UNPROFOR soldiers between the Serb snipers and the civilians in the Sniper Alley area and then engaging the snipers themselves.¹¹⁸¹⁴ It would also install passive barriers throughout the city, although at times the BiH authorities would not allow this.¹¹⁸¹⁵ Another one of its tasks was to photograph all the possible areas in Grbavica where the Serbs were shooting from and observe the identified locations thus becoming very familiar with the sniper positions in the area.¹¹⁸¹⁶ That information would have then been sent up to the battalion and the sector level.¹¹⁸¹⁷ All of the above meant that the anti-sniping task force was "very good in determining the point of origin for specific incidents" and that UNPROFOR commanders were "certain" that Bosnian Serb forces were engaging in sniping attacks against civilians in Sarajevo.¹¹⁸¹⁸

KDZ304 explained that it was difficult to monitor the snipers on the Bosnian Muslim side as most of the UNPROFOR forces, with the exception of RusBat, had no access to SRK-held areas and could not observe or verify the number or the identity of sniping victims on the Serb side. Since RusBat never reported any sniping incidents on the Serb side, the anti-sniping task force was unable to locate the sniper nests on the Bosnian Muslim side. See P2407 (Witness statement of KDZ304), pp. 13–15.

¹¹⁸¹⁴ P2407 (Witness statement of KDZ304), p. 11. Fraser testified that this did not always work as UNPROFOR lost a number of soldiers through sniping, one of whom was shot by the Serbs while located in one of the UNIS towers, while another was shot near the airport by the Bosnian Muslim side. See P1762 (Witness statement of David Fraser dated 17 October 2010), pp. 33–34, 36; David Fraser, T. 8016 (18 October 2010). KDZ182 testified that UNPROFOR soldiers would engage the snipers only in a situation of self-defence, and were able to do that because they had thermal cameras which allowed them to see where the snipers were. He also confirmed that an UNPROFOR soldier was shot by the Bosnian Muslim side at the airport. See P2414 (Witness statement of KDZ182), pp. 29, 42, 44, 72 (under seal). See also P5908 (Record of interview with KDZ185), para. 8; P1075 (Photograph of UN APC in Sarajevo); D2907 (UNPROFOR report, 18 April 1995); D2774 (Witness statement of Milenko Indić dated 19 January 2013), para. 158.

3632. The Accused argues that both the BiH MUP and the UN investigators working on scheduled sniping incidents were “exceptionally unreliable” as they were biased and their work was riddled with mistakes.¹¹⁸¹⁹ The Prosecution responds that this is a broad allegation based on mischaracterisation of the evidence the relevant witnesses gave.¹¹⁸²⁰ As will be seen below, in its analysis of the scheduled sniping incidents the Chamber has considered and analysed a number of CSB Sarajevo and UN reports prepared on the basis of the investigation methods outlined above. These were produced by ballistics experts and/or criminal technicians who were, in most cases, on site soon after the incident happened and who used accepted ballistics methods to determine the direction of fire. These individuals, particularly the UNPROFOR and its anti-sniping force, also had extensive knowledge of notorious sniping positions in the city, as well as access to the scene, contemporaneous information, and eye-witnesses. Given these factors, the Chamber generally gave considerable weight to the CSB Sarajevo and UN reports when analysing the scheduled sniping incidents. In doing so, the Chamber was also constantly cognisant of the shortcomings of the investigations conducted during the war, such as for example the difficulties faced by investigators when working on a crime scene while under threat of enemy fire, their inability to determine the exact origin of fire as opposed to the direction of fire, and inconsistencies between ballistic and other investigative reports. Whenever issues arose with respect to particular reports, they were considered by the Chamber in relation to each particular incident. Accordingly, while finding this type of evidence to be generally reliable and credible, the Chamber approached it as one piece of the puzzle assessed against the totality of evidence tendered in relation to each incident.

3633. The Chamber also heard from one of the Prosecution investigators, Barry Hogan, who visited Sarajevo on many occasions and prepared various materials relating to the incidents listed in Schedule F of the Indictment.¹¹⁸²¹ He testified that he visited each of the locations where the victims listed in Schedule F were wounded or killed, accompanied by one of those victims or eyewitnesses, and used a GPS unit to produce an accurate reading of the position of the victim and/or a tram at the time the shooting took place, as recounted by that victim or witness. These were then used to produce a map recording all the incident sites.¹¹⁸²² Hogan would then stand at the location where the victims were wounded and/or killed and would take GPS readings from there.¹¹⁸²³ Hogan also explained that no local police reports or UN reports were used for the purpose of this exercise.¹¹⁸²⁴ As for the origin of fire, the victims/witnesses simply indicated the direction from which the fire had come, as they were not in a position to identify the exact locations from which the bullets were fired.¹¹⁸²⁵ These victims and/or witnesses were pointing out locations purely from memory as they were not given their own witness statements or any other materials in order to refresh their memories.¹¹⁸²⁶ The Chamber has considered Hogan's evidence and found that he was a reliable and truthful witness. He was meticulous and did not overstep the boundaries of his mandate. However, the Chamber notes that his mandate was limited to simply recording the locations of the incident sites. In addition, for each alleged incident, his GPS recordings were dependent on the recollection of a singular victim/witness who was not given any material to refresh his or her memory despite being taken to the relevant locations years after the incident. Thus, at times, as will be seen below,¹¹⁸²⁷ there was some inconsistency between those recollections and the official reports created by the BiH MUP and/or other evidence. Accordingly, while accepting Hogan's evidence as credible, the Chamber is fully aware of its limitations and also of the fact that his activities were dependent on the recollections of others.

¹¹⁸²³ Barry Hogan, T. 11232–11233, 11241–11245 (3 February 2011) (adding that the readings were taken in degrees, minutes, and seconds but that later, when preparing the maps, he converted those measurements into decimal degrees which did not affect the location of the incident as recorded on the maps. See also P2190 (GPS

3634. Finally, as noted above,¹¹⁸²⁸ the Chamber heard from two experts relating to sniping in Sarajevo. For the Prosecution, Van der Weijden conducted investigations into all scheduled sniping incidents and considered the alleged origin of fire, as well as the opportunity the shooter in each incident would have had to identify the target as a combatant. He visited the incident sites in 2006 and 2009 and inspected the exact locations at which the victims were shot, using the GPS coordinates obtained by Hogan and provided to him by the Prosecution; while there, he observed the surroundings, usually from the location of the wound on the victims' bodies, checking for a clear line of sight to a possible shooting position.¹¹⁸²⁹ He then visited the areas he identified as possible shooting positions to see if it would be technically feasible to fire from them.¹¹⁸³⁰ He would then eliminate the locations offering no views on the incident sites and/or offering no tactical advantage to the shooter, and would eventually arrive at the area he thought the shot had come from.¹¹⁸³¹ effect on his investigation as he would, using the method described above, independently assess whether their account was feasible.¹¹⁸³² For some incidents, he was also given reports prepared by the BiH MUP, but noted that these were not “very helpful” as they were not “very complete”.¹¹⁸³³ Van der Weijden conceded that he did not review the medical information pertaining to the injuries of the victims in question nor did he always have knowledge of the exact position the victim was in when shot, but again explained that he was concerned mainly with lines of sight and with the general layout of the incident site.¹¹⁸³⁴ Van der Weijden was only broadly aware of the confrontation lines in Sarajevo and not in relation to each specific incident; however, according to him, having detailed knowledge of these lines was not necessary since his investigation was concerned purely with the inquiry into where the shot might have come from, rather than from which side of the confrontation line it originated.¹¹⁸³⁵ He also noted that he never established that any of the shots were fired by a trained sniper as opposed to a regular soldier,¹¹⁸³⁶ and accepted that he was never able to reach a definitive conclusion as to the exact location from which the bullet had come from.¹¹⁸³⁷

3636. The Accused argues that Van der Weijden is the Prosecution’s most important witness with respect to the alleged sniping incidents but is of highly questionable credibility, given that he attended only several military courses. In addition, according to the Accused, Van der Weijden was aware of the confrontation lines in Sarajevo only in “broad lines” and reached his conclusions purely by looking at the layout of the incident site, trying to establish possible origins of the shots.¹¹⁸³⁸ Further, the Accused claims that Van der Weijden was never able to reach a definitive conclusion as to the exact origin of fire and acknowledged that the BiH MUP reports were not very helpful as they were incomplete.¹¹⁸³⁹ The Prosecution responds that the Accused mis-characterised Van der Weijden’s conclusions since, for a number of incidents, namely, F.1, F.3, F.6, and F.12, Van der Weijden either concluded there was only one possible origin of fire or excluded any reasonable possibility that the fire originated from ABiH-held territory.¹¹⁸⁴⁰ The Prosecution also notes that Van der Weijden's conclusions are only a part of the totality of evidence for each scheduled incident.¹¹⁸⁴¹

3637. The Chamber has analysed Van der Weijden's qualifications and testimony and is satisfied that he is an expert in sniping and a reliable witness and that his evidence, as far as its main purpose is concerned—namely to establish the lines of sight between possible origins of fire and the alleged location of the incident—can be accepted as generally credible.¹¹⁸⁴² The Chamber also notes, however, that Van der Weijden's methodology was dependent on the information given to him by the Prosecution as to the location of incident sites, which at times was confusing and/or internally inconsistent.¹¹⁸⁴³ In addition, as he himself stated, his investigation was concerned purely with the inquiry into where the shot might have come from, rather than from which side of the confrontation line it originated from, and he willingly admitted that he was never able to reach a definitive conclusion as to the exact location where the bullet originated. Accordingly, his evidence was approached as one of a number of factors in the Chamber's assessment of the totality of the evidence and, at times, was of relatively limited value in the Chamber's determination on the origin of fire in the incidents alleged.

3638. While preparing his expert report, Poparić visited Sarajevo twice, in September 2010 and May 2011.¹¹⁸⁴⁴ The first visit lasted three days and its purpose was for Poparić to familiarise himself with the sites and to help the Accused prepare for cross-examination of Prosecution witnesses.¹¹⁸⁴⁵ The purpose of the second visit was to prepare the Accused's legal adviser for the site visit.¹¹⁸⁴⁶ Poparić explained that during the visits he was led to the relevant locations by a former member of the SRK who knew the best way to some of the more inaccessible areas.¹¹⁸⁴⁷ He also explained that in addition to the two official visits, he went to Sarajevo on a few more occasions on his own, usually when he needed further clarification, but did not meet with the victims of the sniping incidents.¹¹⁸⁴⁸

¹¹⁸⁴¹ Closing Arguments, T. 47734 (30 September 2014).

¹¹⁸⁴² The Chamber has noted in relation to each individual incident where his evidence was not relied upon, due mainly to the inaccurate or confusing information he was given by the Prosecution.

¹¹⁸⁴⁸ He did meet, however, with a person who took one of the victims of one of the scheduled incidents to the hospital. See Mile Poparić, T. 39177–39180 (4 June 2013).

3639. During his visits, Poparić visited locations of the scheduled incidents and locations from which the shots might have originated.¹¹⁸⁴⁹ However, with respect to six scheduled sniping incidents that took place on Zmaja od Bosne street, he conceded that he did not go inside the four white high-rises in Grbavica claiming that this was not necessary because he had photographs from the Dragomir Milošević case and because it was not clear on which floors the sniper nests were located.¹¹⁸⁵⁰ His analysis of the incidents relevant to the high-rises was in any event based primarily on (i) the height of the four high-rises and (ii) the distance between the high-rises and the incident site, which allowed him to calculate the maximum angle of descent of any bullets fired from there.¹¹⁸⁵¹ Poparić also clarified that he did not go inside the Metalka building but stood next to it to see the view down Franje Račkog street; he also had a set of photographs taken from the building in 2001, at the time when there was no vegetation, for the purposes of the Dragomir Milošević case.¹¹⁸⁵² Poparić did not dispute Van der Weijden's findings as to what was visible from the white high-rises and the Metalka building and assumed them to be correct for the purposes of his analysis.¹¹⁸⁵³

3640. In terms of the equipment, Poparić had a compass, a camera, and a measuring tape.¹¹⁸⁵⁴ The compass was not of much use to him due to the fact that many of incident locations were in or near certain facilities so there was no dispute about them.¹¹⁸⁵⁵ He also did not use a GPS to identify the relevant locations because this was not necessary given that he had photographs and other information.¹¹⁸⁵⁶ In addition, small differences in measurements would not have made much difference for sniping incidents due to the fact that the trajectory of a bullet is horizontal and straight.¹¹⁸⁵⁷ He also did not use a laser rangefinder which would have been useful only if there was information about the nature of the wounds of the victims, which was not available.¹¹⁸⁵⁸

incidents¹¹⁸⁶⁰ but did not consult any professional snipers.¹¹⁸⁶¹ When pointed out to him that he used a map of confrontation lines from 1995 in relation to incidents from 1993, while failing to specify the date of the map in his report, Poparić denied that he deliberately and repeatedly omitted relevant information from his report and that he had developed premises based on incorrect information.¹¹⁸⁶²

3642. The Prosecution submits that Poparić was neither credible nor reliable and that his evidence should be disregarded as a whole.¹¹⁸⁶³ The Accused on the other hand claims that Poparić, unlike the Prosecution witnesses, stated all the facts, thus successfully challenging the Prosecution evidence.¹¹⁸⁶⁴ The Chamber has analysed both Poparić's expert report and his testimony on the scheduled sniping incidents alleged in the Indictment and has found that on many occasions he ventured outside of his area of expertise and made conclusions on issues in which he had no training, such as for example determining entry and exit wounds from videos and photographs.¹¹⁸⁶⁵ As will be seen from the Chamber's analysis in relation to each scheduled sniping incident, Poparić often jumped to conclusions, making questionable leaps in logic.¹¹⁸⁶⁶ At times, he also reached conclusions based on incorrect information.¹¹⁸⁶⁷ In addition, while expressing opinions as to what could and could not be seen from certain buildings in Sarajevo, such as the four white high-rises and the Metalka building,¹¹⁸⁶⁸ he also conceded that he never entered those buildings.¹¹⁸⁶⁹ All of these aspects of Poparić's evidence tended to compromise his credibility and impartiality. Accordingly, the Chamber has found his evidence to be of limited value, as will be seen in the sections analysing each specific scheduled incident.

¹¹⁸⁶² Mile Poparić, T. 39195–39198 (4 June 2013).

¹¹⁸⁶³ The Prosecution claims that Poparić changed his theories freely in an attempt to maintain that fire did not originate from Serb-held positions or that victims were caught in cross-fire. He produced graphic images that were inaccurately manipulated and distorted, and he intentionally omitted contrary evidence of which he was aware on the ground that it was “totally irrelevant”. According to the Prosecution he also engaged in methodologically-flawed analyses and conducted limited on-site personal examinations. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix C, paras. 5–11.

¹¹⁸⁶⁹ As noted above in paragraph 3667, Poparić justified his decision not to enter the relevant buildings by saying, inter alia, that there was no evidence indicating the floors at which sniper nests operated. However, as will be seen below, this is incorrect—for example, exhibit P1738, which contains photographs of sniper nests in the four white high-rises clearly indicates the floors at which those nests were located. See P1738 (Photographs of sniper nests).

iii. Scheduled sniping incidents

3643. The Prosecution submits in its Final Brief that the sniping fire in all scheduled incidents, with the exception of Scheduled Incident F.5, originated from “well-known SRK positions”, namely Grbavica; Špicasta Stijena; the Orthodox Church in Dobrinja; upper parts of Hrasno Brdo and Ozrenska street; the School for the Blind, the Faculty of Theology, and other areas of Nedžarići; and Baba Stijena.¹¹⁸⁷⁰ In addition, it alleges that the victims, as well as the bus and trams they were on, were deliberately targeted in those incidents and were not legitimate military objectives.¹¹⁸⁷¹ Each scheduled sniping incident is discussed below according to the broad geographical area of Sarajevo where it took place. Some of these areas were notorious for sniper activity, such as Zmaja od Bosne street, Marin Dvor area, and Sedrenik.

(A) Zmaja od Bosne street (formerly Vojvode Putnika)

3644. According to the Indictment, Scheduled Sniping Incidents F.8, F.11, F.12, F.14, F.15, and F.16 took place on Zmaja od Bosne street, along Sniper Alley, and targeted trams and pedestrians in the area.¹¹⁸⁷² The Prosecution claims that the origin of fire in all those incidents was south of Zmaja od Bosne, namely the four white high-rises on Lenjinova street, the Metalka building, and the Jewish cemetery, all located in the area of Grbavica and controlled by the SRK.¹¹⁸⁷³

3645. Zmaja od Bosne street, in particular the stretch near the Holiday Inn and the area around Marin Dvor,¹¹⁸⁷⁴ was one of the most dangerous locations in Sarajevo during the war, where many civilians were wounded or killed by sniper fire; for that reason, it was also known as Sniper Alley.¹¹⁸⁷⁵ It was close to the confrontation lines on Miljacka River,¹¹⁸⁷⁶ and the trams that ran along it, as well as the pedestrians, were visible from a number of skyscrapers and high-rise buildings surrounding the area.¹¹⁸⁷⁷ The intersections where Franje Račkog and Đure Daničića streets (which run from Miljacka River) cut across Zmaja od Bosne were particularly dangerous areas.¹¹⁸⁷⁸ In addition, in front of the Holiday Inn, at the intersection between Franje Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne streets, the trams had to enter a so-called “S-curve” in the tracks,¹¹⁸⁷⁹ in order to cross from one side of the street to the other, and thus had to slow down, becoming an easier target.¹¹⁸⁸⁰ Because Zmaja od Bosne street was so dangerous, large transport containers and lorries filled with sand were placed on the south side, on the most exposed parts, such as intersections.¹¹⁸⁸¹

Another dangerous area open to sniper attacks on Zmaja od Bosne was the area of Pofalići, close to Hotel Bristol,¹¹⁸⁸² as well as the area near the Presidency building.¹¹⁸⁸³

(1) Confrontation lines in the area

3650. The confrontation line in the Marin Dvor area ran along Miljacka River with ABiH positions on the north side of the river and VRS positions on the south side.¹¹⁹⁰¹ The 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade and the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK held the area of Grbavica and the positions south and east of Grbavica.¹¹⁹⁰² The 3rd Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade, which was later absorbed into the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade and became the 2nd Infantry Battalion of that brigade,¹¹⁹⁰³ had positions in the area that stretched from Vrbanja Bridge, along Miljacka River, to Strojorad, then to the football stadium, Šanac, Ozrenska street, Milinkladska street, and Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks.¹¹⁹⁰⁴ The 1st Company of that battalion held the line between the Vrbanja and Bratstvo Jedinstvo Bridges, along Miljacka River.¹¹⁹⁰⁵ Thus, the Metalka building and the four white high-rises in Grbavica were in the area of responsibility of the SRK.¹¹⁹⁰⁶ Further, due to Metalka being difficult to access, the troops at some point withdrew “in [the] depth” of the territory.¹¹⁹⁰⁷

The Chamber also notes here that the English translation of the report refers to the 1st Infantry Battalion manning the positions

3651. As for the positions to the right of Vrbanja Bridge, the area from Vrbanja Bridge towards the Jewish cemetery up to the foot of Debelo Brdo was held by the 3rd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK.¹¹⁹⁰⁸ This battalion was positioned on the western side of the Jewish cemetery while the ABiH was stationed along its northeastern wall—the two sides were separated only by the width of the cemetery.¹¹⁹⁰⁹ The confrontation line at the cemetery remained unchanged throughout the conflict.¹¹⁹¹⁰ According to Blagoje Kovačević, commander of the 3rd Infantry Battalion from June 1993,¹¹⁹¹¹ the cemetery itself was never occupied by anyone as it was no-man's land.¹¹⁹¹²

3652. On the ABiH side, the confrontation line in the Zmaja od Bosne area was manned by the ABiH's 1st Motorised Brigade.¹¹⁹¹³ This brigade was responsible for the line on Miljacka River from the area of the Vrbanja Bridge and through Hrasno Brdo, with soldiers deployed from the School of Economics to the Elektroprivreda building, with only the river separating them from the VRS.¹¹⁹¹⁴ The 1st Motorised Brigade had outside trenches and held positions within certain buildings, namely, the cellars of the Mechanical Engineering Faculty, the School of Economics, and another faculty building, as well as in the exits that connected those positions to the trenches.¹¹⁹¹⁵ In March 1995, however, the confrontation line along Miljacka River ran from the Vrbanja Bridge to Topal-Osman Paše street.¹¹⁹¹⁶

3653. Maletić testified that his company's counterpart on the other side of the confrontation line was a Croatian unit called Kralj Tvrtko.¹¹⁹¹⁷ It was deployed along the axis of the Wood around Metalka but the original document in BCS in fact refers to the 2nd Infantry Battalion. Thus, the English translation contains a typographical error.

¹¹⁹⁰⁷ Maletić could not remember if this took place in 1993 or 1994. Dragan Maletić, T. 30849–30851 (3 December 2012), T. 30888 (4 December 2012). Stanislav Galić confirmed that the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade was later redeployed beyond Grbavica. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37184 (15 April 2013).

3654. There is some controversy in the evidence in relation to several buildings along parts of the confrontation line in the area, which appear to have changed hands during the war and/or were divided between the warring parties. Sabljica testified that at the beginning of the conflict, in 1992, there were ABiH positions in one of the buildings near the Metalka building but that after 1992 they were no longer there.¹¹⁹²³ He also testified that the Red Façade building was in the area of responsibility of the VRS during the war.¹¹⁹²⁴ Maletić, however, testified that part of Red Façade building was held by the Muslims while another part was held by the Serbs.¹¹⁹²⁵ This was confirmed by Željko Bambarez, who in 1994 spent eight months in Grbavica as the Commander of a platoon in the 1st Company of the 3rd Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade.¹¹⁹²⁶

¹¹⁹²⁶ Bambarez testified that he was first a commander of the 2nd Platoon of the 2nd Company of the 3rd Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade and that in June 1993 his battalion became part of the Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK. In 1994 he was moved to Grbavica due to the killing of Mišo Čolić, a commander of the 1st

According to him, the Red Façade building was divided between the two warring sides and the Muslim-controlled part of the building afforded a view through Đure Daničića street onto Zmaja od Bosne street, as well as onto Marin Dvor and the UNPROFOR check-point on Vrbanja Bridge.¹¹⁹²⁷ Bambarez, who was actually in the Red Façade building during his time in Grbavica, explained that of the two high buildings now blocking the view between the Red Façade building and Đure Daničića street one was not there during the war, while another, which was in his platoon's zone of responsibility, was there at the time but was not as high then as it is now.¹¹⁹²⁸ However, another soldier of the 3rd Battalion, Milorad Katić, testified during cross-examination that it was not possible to shoot from the ABiH part of this building onto the area in front of the Holiday Inn, as the view was obstructed by one of the buildings.¹¹⁹²⁹ In any event, in cross-examination, Bambarez testified that his time in Grbavica was relatively quiet and that he was not aware of Muslims ever firing from the Red Façade building during that time.¹¹⁹³⁰

3655. Sabljica and Gičević testified that the Unioninvest building was in the area of responsibility of the VRS during the war.¹¹⁹³¹ In contrast, Bambarez told the Chamber that it was under ABiH control.¹¹⁹³² This is confirmed by the SRK report from April 1994 to the VRS Main Staff, in which the SRK Commander Galić reported that the enemy had opened fire from the Unioninvest building.¹¹⁹³³ [REDACTED] also thought that the building was either under ABiH control or in no-

(2) Snipers in the area

3656. The Chamber heard that snipers were operating on both sides of Zmaja od Bosne street but that most of the snipers were on the Serb side of the confrontation line, firing into the ABiH-held territory.¹¹⁹³⁶

3657. Mirsad Kučanin, a criminal inspector within CSB Sarajevo who investigated around 100 cases of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo,¹¹⁹³⁷ testified that the most significant area where Serb snipers operated was Grbavica and that most of his investigations involved fire coming from there.¹¹⁹³⁸ According to him, there was a sniper in every house between Vrbanja and Hrasno Bridges but the fire was most frequent from the Metalka building, the four white high-rises, and the three "shopping centre" skyscrapers.¹¹⁹³⁹ In addition, the snipers fired from the Jewish cemetery covering the central part of the city called Skenderija and the Marin Dvor area.¹¹⁹⁴⁰ Aernout van Lynden, a Sky News war correspondent who reported from Sarajevo starting in May 1992,¹¹⁹⁴¹ testified that he was taken by SRK commanders to a number of high-rises in Grbavica and to the Jewish cemetery and its surrounds where he saw gun placements of various sorts, including machine-guns and sniper rifles with telescopic sites.¹¹⁹⁴²

3658. KDZ310 testified that there were many SRK snipers in Grbavica, adding that the area between Vrbanja Bridge and Elektroprivreda alone had, on average, seven to eight snipers.¹¹⁹⁴³ As noted earlier, they were part of the sniper squad responsible only to the 3rd Battalion's commander¹¹⁹⁴⁴ and would change positions often.¹¹⁹⁴⁵ Galić confirmed that most of the SRK snipers were in Grbavica, along Miljacka River and in the white high-rises, but claimed that they were placed there to neutralise ABiH fire coming from Marin Dvor, the Faculty of Mechanical Engineering, and the government buildings.¹¹⁹⁴⁶ However, contrary to Galić, KDZ310 testified that snipers in Grbavica opened fire at whatever they saw, mainly civilians, including the elderly and children, and that their sniping was constant.¹¹⁹⁴⁷ Indeed, upon joining the battalion and receiving a 7.62 mm semi-automatic rifle,¹¹⁹⁴⁸ KDZ310 and his fellow soldiers, who were not part of the sniper squad, were told by their commander that they could open fire freely and shoot anything that moved.¹¹⁹⁴⁹

3659. Maletić testified that his company did not have snipers and that his soldiers were positioned at the foot of the buildings, including Metalka and the four white high-rises, with semi-automatic, and automatic rifles, and machine guns.¹¹⁹⁵⁰ Because of these positions, they could only see the enemy's first line of defence.¹¹⁹⁵¹ Maletić also testified that it was prohibited to fire on civilian targets and that, therefore, his soldiers did not target trams from Metalka and/or wait for them to ¹¹⁹⁵⁰ Dragan Maletić, T. 30883–30886 (4 December 2012).

¹¹⁹⁵¹ While, according to Maletić, civilian zones could be attacked from some of the 1st Company's positions, this did not happen, at least not in a planned and organised manner. Maletić also explained that there were no civilians in the two apartment buildings between the Assembly building and the river as the Muslim side used them to fire on the SRK positions. See D2519 (Witness statement of Dragan Maletić dated 9 November 2012), paras. 14, 25, 27; Dragan Maletić, T. 30849–30850 (3 December 2012), T. 30886–30889 (4 December 2012). See also [REDACTED].

slow down at the S-curve.¹¹⁹⁵² When asked in cross-examination whether upper floors of Metalka afforded a view behind enemy lines, Maletić claimed his company was at the foot of the building and therefore had no knowledge about the view from the upper floors.¹¹⁹⁵³ He did concede, however, that one could see behind the enemy lines from the white high-rises in Grbavica.¹¹⁹⁵⁴ The Chamber recalls that it has already found above that there was a view onto Zmaja od Bosne street from both Metalka and Invest Banka buildings, the former affording the view down Franje Račkog street and the latter affording the view down Đure Daničića street.¹¹⁹⁵⁵ In addition, the Chamber went on a site visit to Sarajevo and observed the area in and around those two buildings.¹¹⁹⁵⁶ Accordingly, even accepting as true Maletić's testimony that he and/or his troops were never on the higher floors of Metalka, the Chamber considers his proclaimed lack of knowledge on the view from Metalka disingenuous, particularly since he spent some time in the area during the conflict. Maletić did, however, concede that there was such a view from the four white high-rises and this is indeed confirmed by other evidence before the Chamber.¹¹⁹⁵⁷

3660. In contrast to Maletić, Katić testified on cross-examination that there were armed men inside the Metalka building and that they could, if they wanted to, hit targets in front of the Holiday Inn.¹¹⁹⁵⁸ During re-examination, however, he clarified that he was never at the positions in the area and that given the height of the dominant buildings on the Muslim side of the confrontation line it would have been dangerous to have positions on Metalka's upper floors; he also explained that the armed men in the building were in fact soldiers who lived there and had weapons in their apartments.¹¹⁹⁵⁹ The Chamber is not convinced by Katić's explanation during re-examination. First, it is illogical that soldiers would not have positions in Metalka because it was too dangerous and yet would then choose to live in the building. In addition, as will be seen below, the Chamber has heard evidence indicating that an improvised sniper nest was found on the last floor of the Metalka building.¹¹⁹⁶⁰ Furthermore, when asked if the SRK had firing positions in the Metalka and Invest Banka buildings, Galić himself confirmed that the SRK opened fire from “that sector”.¹¹⁹⁶¹

¹¹⁹⁵⁶ The Chamber recalls that in its Order on Submissions for a Site Visit, dated 15 November 2010, at paragraph 6, it stated that the purpose of its site visit to Sarajevo was not to gather evidence or receive any submissions from the parties but to allow the Chamber to become more familiar with the topography of certain key locations and thus assist its determination of the charges in the Indictment related to Sarajevo.

3661. Blagoje Kovačević, who commanded the SRK battalion located in the area of Jewish cemetery, testified that there were no professional snipers in his battalion as they were unnecessary given the short distances between the warring parties.¹¹⁹⁶² He explained that the company that held the Jewish cemetery was called the Anti-Armour Company; it was commanded by Slavko Aleksić, who liked to represent himself as a “Chetnik”, and it had small calibre infantry weapons, such as rifles.¹¹⁹⁶³ While conceding that he had some problems in exercising control over the members of his units and that there were instances of individuals opening fire without him knowing about it, Kovačević testified that his battalion did not open fire on civilians and/or trams in the city and that they never received orders to that effect.¹¹⁹⁶⁴

3662. The FreBat was responsible for anti-sniping tasks in the area and had its vehicles and soldiers at the principal points where snipers would engage civilians, ready to place themselves between those civilians and the snipers.¹¹⁹⁶⁵ It also had special reconnaissance troops whose task was to find the snipers and engage them.¹¹⁹⁶⁶ In addition, the task force photographed all the possible areas in Grbavica where the Serbs were shooting from and mounted observation on the identified locations thus becoming very familiar with the sniper positions in the area.¹¹⁹⁶⁷ Along Sniper Alley, the reconnaissance troops engaged mostly the Serb snipers.¹¹⁹⁶⁸

3663. Fraser testified that the two warring factions in the area were close to each other and that, frequently, this proximity resulted in exchanges of fire in the area of Vrbanja Bridge and the Jewish

While he conceded that the brigade had shooting positions in Grbavica he denied that these were manned by professionally trained snipers with sniper equipment. See Blagoje Kovačević, T. 29048–29053 (18 October 2012); P5930 (Report of 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade to SRK, 29 October 1993). cemetery.¹¹⁹⁶⁹ Despite that, he thought it unlikely for civilians to be simply caught in an exchange of fire between the two factions in the Sniper Alley area because a professional sniper would take care to line up a military target and would be unlikely to miss it.¹¹⁹⁷⁰ Similarly, even a regular rifleman would normally be proficient enough in firing his weapon and thus would be able to avoid shooting civilians.¹¹⁹⁷¹ As for the trams in the area, in Fraser's opinion, it was also unlikely that those were hit by mistake; in his experience, the trams seemed to be a favourite target of snipers because of the psychological effect this had on the people in Sarajevo.¹¹⁹⁷² KDZ485 could not recall any incidents where civilians were killed by snipers during combat activity as they would usually take cover or shelter during such times.¹¹⁹⁷³

3664. Fraser also thought that the snipers operating in Sarajevo were "very competent", as demonstrated by the fact that in the Sniper Alley area they would regularly fire at a telephone pole in order to make their presence known to the UNPROFOR.¹¹⁹⁷⁴ Furthermore, it was not uncommon for those snipers to register their positions by firing a couple of shots to check on wind and distance and to set themselves up for the day's activities.¹¹⁹⁷⁵ It was also not uncommon for them to fire a round of bullets off the side of one of the UNPROFOR vehicles at the end of the day.¹¹⁹⁷⁶ Fraser did accept, however, that UNPROFOR was not in a position to check the Serb side of the confrontation line with respect to each incident as it was not given freedom of movement in that area.¹¹⁹⁷⁷ The Serbs would also not let UNPROFOR personnel come to their side of Miljacka River to investigate sniping incidents allegedly committed by the ABiH.¹¹⁹⁷⁸ Instead the

However, Maletić testified that it was prohibited to fire on civilian targets and that, therefore, his soldiers did not target the trams and/or wait for the trams to slow down at the S-curve. See D2519 (Witness statement of Dragan Maletić dated 9 November 2012), paras. 8–9; Dragan Maletić, T. 30883–30886, 30889–30890 (4 December 2012); D2525 (Photograph of Sarajevo marked by Dragan Maletić). Dragomir Milošević placed the blame on the Bosnian Muslim side which would fire on the SRK positions while trams were running, resulting in the SRK response and trams getting shot. See Dragomir Milošević, T. 33208–33209 (5 February 2013). See also D2331 (Witness statement of Blagoje Kovačević dated 14 October 2012), para. 13 (testifying that one could not rule out the possibility of trams getting accidentally hit in cross-fire).

UNPROFOR personnel had to speak to the SRK Commander and other Bosnian Serb leaders about those matters.¹¹⁹⁷⁹

3665. In the spring or summer of 1995, Fraser and his superior asked the Serb side if they could visit some of Serb positions; together with other UNPROFOR soldiers they were escorted by the Commander of the Ilidža Brigade to a red brick building located to the south of the four white high-rises in Grbavica.¹¹⁹⁸⁰ It was a three to four storey building with holes in the walls of the upper floors through which one could see the Muslims side of Miljacka River; there were also sandbags and other paraphernalia that could be used by snipers.¹¹⁹⁸¹ Fraser, who commanded over snipers during the course of his career,¹¹⁹⁸² thought that the building was a good position for snipers and “definitely looked like it was prepared for that use”.¹¹⁹⁸³ KDZ182, who was also present during this visit, testified that whilst in the building he saw a certain device used for sniping that allowed the shooter to be located to the side of the gun, instead of behind it, as explained to the visiting group by the Commander of the Ilidža Brigade.¹¹⁹⁸⁴

3666. In February and March 1996, after the BiH authorities were able to go to the neighbourhood of Grbavica again, CSB Sarajevo’s ballistic experts, including Sabljica and Zlatko Mededović, visited Metalka, the four white high-rises, and two other buildings in the area,¹¹⁹⁸⁵ on the order of an investigating judge.¹¹⁹⁸⁶ In the white high-rises, the team found five or six apartments on higher floors,¹¹⁹⁸⁷ which had been redesigned to serve as sniper nests.¹¹⁹⁸⁸ Each apartment looked the same: the partition walls that divided the rooms within each apartment had holes while the outer wall of the building, facing Zmaja od Bosne street, had the smallest opening, thereby creating what is referred to as a “tunnel”.¹¹⁹⁸⁹ The perforations on the partition walls had a conical shape so that the shooter could fire from the depth of the apartment.¹¹⁹⁹⁰ According to Sabljica, at least three such perforated walls would have separated the shooter from the fire coming into the building, as indicated by the sandbags placed behind the last partition wall, making it extremely difficult to spot the shooter from the outside.¹¹⁹⁹¹ Looking from what he believed to be the sniper’s position, Sabljica could see the stretch of Zmaja od Bosne street from the Holiday Inn to the Faculty of Natural Sciences and Mathematics just west of the Maršal Tito Barracks.¹¹⁹⁹² Photographs of inspected sniper nests were taken during the investigation.¹¹⁹⁹³

which uses 7.62 mm calibre bullets,¹²⁰⁰⁰ and also confirmed that the bullet casings found in the white high-rises were of 7.62 mm calibre, as well as 7.9 mm calibre.¹²⁰⁰¹

3669. As for the ABiH side of the confrontation line, according to Fraser, the “legislative building” and the UNIS towers were used as sniping nests.¹²⁰⁰² KDZ450 confirmed that snipers on the Bosnian Muslim side operated around the Presidency building, UNIS towers, and the Holiday Inn.¹²⁰⁰³ Maletić testified that the enemy unit facing his company used snipers¹²⁰⁰⁴ and that the entire area of Grbavica was under sniper fire coming from buildings such as the high-rises in Pofalići, the Mechanical Engineering Faculty, the Unis towers, the Executive Council building, the Museum, the Unioninvest building, the red high-rises in Hrasno, the Elektroprivreda building, the Bristol Hotel, Debelo Brdo, and Trebević.¹²⁰⁰⁵ According to Galić, the sniper units of the 1st Corps of the ABiH had “stronger buildings” on their side of Miljacka River, that is, buildings with reinforced concrete and higher than three floors, which gave them more possibilities for sniper use.¹²⁰⁰⁶

3670. Based on the evidence outlined above, the Chamber finds that sniper nests and shooting positions of both warring factions existed in the area surrounding the confrontation lines on Zmaja od Bosne. The Chamber is also convinced that SRK sniper nests and shooting positions were located on the upper floors of all four white high-rises in Grbavica, as well as on the last floor of the Metalka building. They were also scattered in a number of other buildings in the area throughout the zone of responsibility of the 3rd Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade, later the 2nd Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade and were, contrary to Galić’s testimony, ¹²⁰⁰⁰ Mirza Sabljica, T. 7709–7710 (11 October 2010). The Chamber notes that the transcript records Sabljica as having referred to an M74 machine gun. However, given that the Chamber only ever heard about M84 machine guns in this case, the Chamber considers this to have been either a mistake in interpretation or a mistake on the part of Sabljica and should have been a reference to M84.

However, KDZ182 testified that as far as presence of snipers in UNIS towers was concerned, this was “an idea that was spread” and that he never saw a report or was able to check whether snipers were in fact there. He did know, however, that there were snipers in the “former parliament building”. See P2414 (Witness statement of KDZ182), pp. 40, 43 (under seal). manned by snipers subordinated directly to the battalion commander. Further, the SRK shooting positions existed on the western side of the Jewish cemetery. Thus, there were many SRK snipers, as well as forces with semi-automatic rifles in the area. The Chamber finds, relying in particular on the evidence of KDZ310, that they would target civilians, both pedestrians and those riding in trams, as well as combatants on the ABiH-held side of the confrontation line.¹²⁰⁰⁷ As for the ABiH, the Chamber is satisfied that the ABiH had snipers in UNIS towers, Mechanical Engineering Faculty, Faculty of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, and the Executive Council and Assembly buildings. It is also satisfied that it opened fire on Grbavica, including on civilians, from those positions.

(3) Zmaja od Bosne street, 19 June 1994 (Scheduled Incident F.8)

3671. The Indictment alleges that on 19 June 1994 Jasmina Kučinar, a 31 year old woman, and her four year old son, Damir Kučinar were shot and lightly wounded in their legs while travelling in a crowded tram on Zmaja od Bosne street towards Alipašino Polje. According to the Indictment, Mensur Jusić, a 36 year old man, sustained a slight leg wound while Belma Sukić née Likić, a 23 year old woman, was wounded in her left armpit. The Indictment also alleges that the tram was near the Holiday Inn when the incident happened.¹²⁰⁰⁸ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the “likely origin of fire was a location 600 metres from the incident site in the area of the Jewish cemetery.”¹²⁰⁰⁹ The Accused submits that the investigators did not know the origin of fire for this incident and claims that the bullet was in fact fired from the Executive Council building.¹²⁰¹⁰

3672. On 19 June 1994, at approximately 5 p.m., Mensur Jusić was riding on a tram heading down Zmaja od Bosne street in the direction of Ilidža.¹²⁰¹¹ Jasmina Kučinar was on the same tram with her four year old son.¹²⁰¹² As the tram approached the intersection of Zmaja od Bosne and Fra Anđela Zvizdovića streets, Kučinar heard a shot and saw that her son who had been sitting by the window had been injured.¹²⁰¹³ Jusić was hit in the shin of his right leg.¹²⁰¹⁴ Jusić saw that the arm of a woman standing to his right was bleeding.¹²⁰¹⁵ The injured received medical treatment at a nearby emergency clinic.¹²⁰¹⁶ No military vehicles were present in the close vicinity of the location of the incident.¹²⁰¹⁷ No military activity was underway in the area.¹²⁰¹⁸

3673. Bogdan Vidović, a criminal technician in the CSB Sarajevo,¹²⁰¹⁹ participated in the investigation of the incident.¹²⁰²⁰ He testified that it happened while the westbound tram was in the area of Marin Dvor, in front of the St. Joseph Church.¹²⁰²¹ The middle part of the left hand side of the tram was hit by one bullet, which pierced the wall of the tram, entered the tram right above the floor level, flew across the aisle, and then hit the carrying frame of the seat on the right hand side of the tram. The bullet split into pieces and caused the injuries to Jusić's right lower leg,¹²⁰²² Belma Likić's left arm, and Damir Kučinar's knees.¹²⁰²³ The ballistic tests determined that the bullet fragments found in the tram belonged to a 7.9 mm calibre bullet which could have been fired from any of M48 rifle, carabine rifle, automatic rifle, or M53 machine-gun.¹²⁰²⁴ Finally, the report concludes that the bullet originated from the direction of Grbavica–Vraca and was “probably fired from the aggressor's positions" in Grbavica.¹²⁰²⁵ When questioned on this conclusion, Vidović clarified that, for security reasons, the tram was moved some three stops away from the incident site when the investigation was conducted,¹²⁰²⁶ as a result of which, the ballistics experts were not sent to the site,¹²⁰²⁷ and the exact origin of fire could not be determined.¹²⁰²⁸ Instead, only the direction of fire, which ran from Grbavica, across the Unioninvest building, towards the incident site, could be established.¹²⁰²⁹

In fact, the Chamber received no evidence indicating that Jasmina Kučinar was injured in this incident.

3674. During cross-examination, Vidović agreed that the fire in the area where the incident happened could have originated from the Assembly building.¹²⁰³⁰ He also agreed that because of a tree seen in a photograph shown to him, the western boundary of the Jewish cemetery had no view on the incident site and that the tram tracks could have been fired on from the cemetery's eastern boundary.¹²⁰³¹ As for the view of the site from Vraca, Vidović testified that the extent of that view depended on the exact location of the tram when hit but accepted that the bullet fired from there would have hit the tram at an acute angle.¹²⁰³² However, he stated that the bullet's actual entry point led him to the conclusion that the bullet came in at a right angle rather than an acute one.¹²⁰³³ He also indicated that the incident took place during a period of cease-fire,¹²⁰³⁴ and that he believed that UNPROFOR was informed about it.¹²⁰³⁵ When questioned about the area, Vidović confirmed that a police station was located some 200 to 300 metres away from the incident site, that the command of the 1st Corps of ABiH was located in the centre of the city, and that the confrontation line was not far from the incident site, running along Miljacka River, to the east of the Vrbanja Bridge.¹²⁰³⁶

3675. Hogan visited the site of the incident with Jusić and recorded the tram's approximate location when struck by the bullet, namely the intersection of Zmaja od Bosne and Fra Andela Zvizdovića.¹²⁰³⁷ As seen on the photographs marked by Hogan in court, there was an unobstructed view towards the Jewish cemetery from that intersection.¹²⁰³⁸

3676. Van der Weijden also investigated this incident and had at his disposal the report prepared by CSB Sarajevo, as well as the statements of Vidović and Jusić.¹²⁰³⁹ Like Hogan, he visited the site of the incident, and then went to the Jewish cemetery which is about 600 metres away and which offered several good positions with a view of the incident site.¹²⁰⁴⁰ According to Van der Weijden, the fact that the tram's left hand side was facing south when it reached the incident site indicated that the shot was fired from the Jewish cemetery.¹²⁰⁴¹ Because of the distance between the two sites, Van der Weijden was of the opinion that either a medium machine-gun or a sniper rifle was used in this incident, noting that both used either 7.62 mm or 7.92 mm calibre bullets.¹²⁰⁴² Furthermore, he noted that at this distance it would have been impossible for the shooter to identify who the people in the tram were.¹²⁰⁴³ Noting also that the witnesses heard one shot but that three people were injured, Van der Weijden explained that this could be either because other shots were not heard due to the noise produced by the tram or because the one bullet that was fired fragmented on impact.¹²⁰⁴⁴ On the subject of hearing the bullet, Vidović testified that one would not have been able to determine, on the basis of the sound heard, that the fire came from the Jewish cemetery.¹²⁰⁴⁵

3677. Poparić pointed out that the CSB Sarajevo investigation team did not determine the direction from which the bullet was fired but simply assumed that it was fired from VRS positions in Grbavica.¹²⁰⁴⁶ Having gone to the scene, Poparić observed that the incident site is visible from both the Jewish cemetery and Debelo Brdo and that the closest line between the Jewish cemetery and the scene of the incident measured 570 metres.¹²⁰⁴⁷

¹²⁰⁴⁶ D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 106. The Chamber notes that this is somewhat inaccurate as the forensic investigation report prepared by Vidović provides that the direction of fire was Grbavica–Vraca. It is the report prepared by the investigator

3678. Poparić analysed the video footage recorded by Van Lynden of the VRS positions at the Jewish cemetery looking down on Marin Dvor area and concluded that the position shown in the video was not a sniper position as the soldier shown was armed with “a simple M70 7.62 mm automatic rifle.”¹²⁰⁴⁸ He also observed that the tram lines were not visible from that position because the trees blocked the view.¹²⁰⁴⁹

3679. Following his analysis of the photographs of the tram taken by the CSB Sarajevo and his own examination of the scene, Poparić came to the conclusion that the bullet came “from the front half-sphere of the tram”.¹²⁰⁵⁰ Using the size of the bullet entry point (which he determined by magnifying a photograph of it)¹²⁰⁵¹ and assuming that the bullet exited the tram wall near a seat located in a certain location,¹²⁰⁵² Poparić made an “approximate calculation” of the angle which the projectile formed with the tram wall, namely 28.8 degrees, and came to the conclusion that the bullet was fired from the BiH Executive Council building and not from the Jewish cemetery as alleged.¹²⁰⁵³ Had the bullet come from the Jewish cemetery, according to Poparić, it would have hit the tram at close to a 90 degree angle with an angle of descent being low, approximately five or six degrees.¹²⁰⁵⁴ Poparić also testified that the fact that the bullet had the energy to travel through the wall of the tram and then across the aisle where it hit the seat on the opposite side of the tram, that referred to the origin of fire, as opposed to the direction of fire, “most probably” being the “aggressor’s positions in Grbavica”. Both these reports are part of the CSB Sarajevo report cited by Poparić in support of his proposition above. damaging the metal railing, indicates that it was fired from a “relatively short” range thus again implicating the Executive Council building as the origin of fire.¹²⁰⁵⁵

3680. Galić told the Chamber that the day before this incident he sent a regular combat report to the VRS Main Staff in which he reported that SRK units were honouring the cease-fire, despite the enemy’s provocation, and reported on his decision to continue “to fully and consistently implement the agreement on the cessation of combat activities”.¹²⁰⁵⁶ According to Galić, because of this decision, no shooting at the city by the SRK was expected the next day, especially not at public transportation.¹²⁰⁵⁷ He also issued another combat report at around 5 p.m. on the day of the incident, reporting that the enemy operated sniper rifles and a hand-held rocket launcher in the area of the Vrbanja Bridge, and that the provocation was responded to with adequate fire on enemy positions.¹²⁰⁵⁸ He then repeated in the combat report his decision to continue to implement the agreement on the cessation of combat activities.¹²⁰⁵⁹ There was no mention of the incident in the report and Galić stated that had he been informed of it he would have informed the Main Staff.¹²⁰⁶⁰

3681. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of two adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire and provide as follows: (i) there was an unobstructed line of sight between the site of the event and the area of the Jewish cemetery under SRK control;¹²⁰⁶¹ and (ii) the shot which struck the tram was fired from the area of the Jewish cemetery held by the SRK.¹²⁰⁶²

3682. The Chamber finds based on the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above that the tram in question was shot at, most likely by a single bullet, in the area of Marin Dvor in front of the St. Joseph Church. It also finds that this tram was a civilian vehicle and that it was operating due to a cease-fire that was in place at the time. In addition, the three casualties in this incident, namely Damir Kučinar, Mensur Jusić, and Belma Sukić née Likić¹²⁰⁶³ were civilians and were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident.

¹²⁰⁶² See Adjudicated Facts 220, 221.

¹²⁰⁶³ The Chamber notes that while the Indictment alleges that Jasmina Kučinar was also wounded in this incident, the Chamber has not received any evidence to support that allegation. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that three rather than four persons were injured in this incident. See fn. 12023.

3683. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's conclusion that the bullet came from the Executive Council building as it is based on speculation. For example, Poparić simply assumed that the bullet exited the tram's wall at a particular location, near a particular seat.¹²⁰⁶⁴ He made that assumption on the basis of another photograph made by the CSB Sarajevo, namely a close up of the bullet's exit point on the inside of the tram.¹²⁰⁶⁵ However, other than showing a portion of a red seat, that photograph does not show the actual location of that seat relative to the interior of the tram.¹²⁰⁶⁶ Thus, it is unclear to the Chamber how Poparić came to the conclusion that the bullet exited the tram wall at a particular location, which in turn allowed him to conclude that the bullet hit the tram at an acute angle. Further, Poparić calculated that angle based on a close-up photograph of the bullet's entry point, which the Chamber views as a highly speculative and potentially inaccurate calculation. Indeed, Poparić's analysis is also contradicted by Vidović's testimony, namely, that the bullet entered the tram at a right angle, as opposed to an acute angle which in turn suggests that a different seat from the one identified by Poparić was in the vicinity of the exit point.¹²⁰⁶⁷ Given that Vidović was able to observe the entry point on the tram itself, the Chamber considers his evidence here to be more persuasive than Poparić's speculations as to the acute nature of the angle.

¹²⁰⁶⁶ P1759 (Photographs re sniping incident of 19 June 1994 on Zmaja od Bosne marked by Bogdan Vidović), e-court p. 2. The Chamber notes that judging by the photograph depicting the exterior of the tram and the entry point of the bullet, there are two potential seats that could have been in the vicinity of the exit point, the one identified by Poparić and another one, just in front of it. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 109, Image 75; P1759 (Photographs re sniping incident of 19 June 1994 on Zmaja od Bosne marked by Bogdan Vidović), e-court p. 6.

automatic rifles. Given the distance involved and the fact that it was struck by one bullet only, the Chamber is also convinced that the tram was deliberately targeted by a single shot and that the SRK shooter would have known that the tram was a civilian vehicle carrying civilians.

(4) Zmaja od Bosne street, 8 October 1994 (Scheduled Incident F.11)

sustained cuts on her head from the tram's broken window glass.¹²⁰⁷⁶ She was admitted to the hospital, underwent an operation the same day, and discharged on 11 November 1994, having spent some of her recovery in intensive care.¹²⁰⁷⁷ Other persons were also wounded during this incident,¹²⁰⁷⁸ while, according to KDZ090, the driver of the tram travelling in front of Čutuna's tram at the time of the attack was killed.¹²⁰⁷⁹ Čutuna still suffers from pain in her leg and needs help with her day to day activities.¹²⁰⁸⁰

3687. KDZ090 testified that the shots were fired from the Metalka building.¹²⁰⁸¹ There were no military institutions or equipment in the vicinity of the incident's location and the closest military installation was the Maršal Tito Barracks, some two tram stops away.¹²⁰⁸² Furthermore, there was no fighting that day since the cease-fire was in place and no ABiH soldiers in the tram.¹²⁰⁸³

3688. CSB Sarajevo was informed about this incident around 12:45 p.m. on 8 October 1994 and then informed an investigative judge who sent out a team, which included KDZ485, to the scene to investigate.¹²⁰⁸⁴ The investigation started at 1 p.m. and lasted for an hour and 15 minutes.¹²⁰⁸⁵ A report, dated 10 October 1994, was compiled, listing one casualty, Nedžad Hadžijbarić, and 11 wounded, including Alma Čutuna.¹²⁰⁸⁶ According to the report, the driver of the first tram¹²⁰⁸⁷ told the investigators that the first burst of shots was fired at his tram, tram number 206, at 12:19 p.m. by Serbs from the Metalka building, injuring three passengers.¹²⁰⁸⁸ Some two to three minutes later, the second burst was fired on tram 236 which was following tram 206 and entering the stretch between the Faculty of Philosophy and the Museum, that is the S-curve; again several civilians were wounded.¹²⁰⁸⁹ According to the report, soon thereafter bursts of fire were heard again and four children who were running across the aforementioned location were wounded.¹²⁰⁹⁰ The report also notes that the incident happened in front of UNPROFOR who were “hiding behind their transporters” at the scene.¹²⁰⁹¹

¹²⁰⁸⁷ It would therefore appear that the tram driver was not killed in this incident as suggested by KDZ090. However, given that one person did die in the incident and that the situation would have been chaotic at the time, the Chamber does not consider that KDZ090's evidence as to the dead person's identity puts in doubt the remainder of KDZ090's testimony.

3689. While it does not appear to contain ballistics analysis, the report notes that four entry and exit holes were identified and photographed on tram 236, and that they were probably caused by the “death sower.”¹²⁰⁹² KDZ485 testified that he knew of one incident where that weapon had been used by the Serbs but did not know if the ABiH had it in its arsenal.¹²⁰⁹³ However, as mentioned above, the BiH MUP had reported already in October 1993 that the 2nd Independent Battalion of the ABiH had at least one death sower in its possession.¹²⁰⁹⁴

3690. The site of the incident was also visited by Rose and Gobilliard at 12:45 p.m., while the UNPROFOR soldiers conducted an investigation of the scene.¹²⁰⁹⁵ The next day, Rose sent a letter to the Accused, informing him of the incident and requesting that he “take all appropriate measures to identify and prosecute the perpetrators of this crime.”¹²⁰⁹⁶ On 10 October 1994, Rose and Gobilliard released a joint statement stating that there was no doubt that the fire had come from Serb positions at the Jewish cemetery.¹²⁰⁹⁷ On the same day, Rose met with Mladić and raised this incident but Mladić said that the shots came from the Holiday Inn and that the incident was staged by the Muslim side.¹²⁰⁹⁸

3691. UNPROFOR released a report on the incident, dated 13 October 1994, which states that all three instances of sniping occurred at the intersection of Đure Daničića and Zmaja od Bosne streets, that is, between the Faculty of Philosophy and the Executive Council building, as witnessed by the UNPROFOR personnel present near that intersection during the incident.¹²⁰⁹⁹ This location is located one block to the east of the S-curve and thus different from the location of the incident identified by KDZ090 and the CSB Sarajevo report.¹²¹⁰⁰ Between the second and the third burst of fire, UNPROFOR soldiers intensified surveillance of the Invest Banka building, as well as the Red Façade building, the latter being under ABiH control according to the report.¹²¹⁰¹ The report also notes that it was impossible to carry out an investigation on the first tram, that is tram 206, as it was some 200 metres from the incident site but that the second tram, tram 236, stopped immediately, some 30 metres from the relevant intersection, in front of the Executive Council building, and showed bullet traces between its front and middle door at the height of about one metre.¹²¹⁰²

3692. UNPROFOR soldiers also found six fresh bullet impact traces in the ground at the above-mentioned intersection, which they used to identify the origin of fire, namely a “group of houses” situated in the SRK-held territory, west of the Jewish cemetery.¹²¹⁰³ Later on in the day, when tram 236 was in the tram depot, UNPROFOR investigators measured the angle of the bullet entry point, which came to be 1450 mils from the vertical line.¹²¹⁰⁴ The report concluded that the already ¹²⁰⁹⁹ According to the report, the first burst of fire took place at 12:20 p.m., the second at 12:23 p.m., and the third at 12:35 p.m.. See P2421 (UNPROFOR report re sniping incident on Zmaja od Bosne on 8 October 1994, 13 October 1994), pp. 2, 5–6, Annex 2.

¹²¹⁰¹ According to the map in Annex 2 of the report, the UNPROFOR referred to the Invest Banka building as “Prisunic” while the Red Façade building was referred to as “Butane”. Another building, referred to as “Banane” in the report, and located just east of the Red Façade building, was also said to be under the control of the ABiH at the time. In fact, the report specified that Banane and Butane were the only two buildings in the area under the ABiH control. See P2421 (UNPROFOR report re sniping incident of Zmaja od Bosne on 8 October 1994, 13 October 1994), pp. 5–7, Annex 2.

¹²¹⁰³ Because the six impact points all had a furrow of about 10 centimetres deep and showed a clean “angle of incidence”, the UNPROFOR soldiers were able to place an antenna rod in the furrows and found the same direction and the same origin of fire for all six points of impact. The latter part of the report refers to a single house, indicated by number 14 on the map in Annex 2 of the report, as the source of fire. P2421 (UNPROFOR report re sniping incident of Zmaja od Bosne on 8 October 1994, 13 October 1994), pp. 3, 6–7, Annex 2. The Chamber notes that this location is different to the location identified as the origin of fire in the Adjudicated Fact 2932 and by KDZ090, namely the Metalka building. This was acknowledged by the Prosecution during the Closing Arguments. The Prosecution also submitted that in such a case, namely where an adjudicated fact contradicts evidence brought by the Prosecution, the Chamber should follow the Tribunal jurisprudence and simply assess the relevance and the weight of the adjudicated fact in question in light of the evidence as a whole. Closing Arguments, T. 47442 (30 September 2014).

established origin of fire conformed with that angle of entry.¹²¹⁰⁵ Finally, while the report records that the UNPROFOR soldiers stationed at the intersection of Đure Daničića and Zmaja od Bosne thought that the second burst of fire came from very close by, it concludes that this was most likely because the echo off the facades of the buildings made it seem louder.¹²¹⁰⁶

3693. Hogan visited Zmaja od Bosne street and recorded the co-ordinates of the incident's location as remembered by KDZ090, which placed the incident at a location that was more in line with the location recorded in the UNPROFOR report of 13 October 1994.¹²¹⁰⁷ He noted that the Metalka building could not be seen from that location.¹²¹⁰⁸ When cross-examined by the Accused, he explained that he could not remember whether the exact co-ordinates indicated by KDZ090 were on the sidewalk near the incident site or at the actual incident site.¹²¹⁰⁹ He did, however, agree that KDZ090, when pointing out the location of the incident to him, indicated that it happened between the Executive Council building and the Faculty of Philosophy.¹²¹¹⁰

3694. Van der Weijden visited both the incident site, as indicated to him by the Prosecution, as well as Grbavica.¹²¹¹¹ He expressed the view that the co-ordinates for the site of the incident given to him by the Prosecution must have been wrong as (i) they indicated a location some 50 metres east to the one described in the materials provided to him, and (ii) this location was not visible from Grbavica.¹²¹¹² He found that, if situated in that location when hit, the tram would have been visible from another alleged sniping nest, the Jewish cemetery, but that in that case it would have been exposed to the shooter for a shorter period of time and the distance between the alleged origin of fire and the tram would have been quite far, more than 600 metres.¹²¹¹³ Thus, he believed that the incident probably occurred on or near the stretch of Zmaja od Bosne street between the Museum and the Faculty of Philosophy, i.e. near the S-curve.¹²¹¹⁴ He also conceded during cross-examination that he determined this to be the place of the incident on the basis that, had the tram been a little further from the said location, it could not have been hit from the south as suggested by the BiH MUP reports.¹²¹¹⁵ He also noted that he was aware that the area between Miljacka River and the tram tracks was under the control of the ABiH.¹²¹¹⁶ Further, he conceded that no one told him to check whether Unioninvest or the Red Façade buildings could have been the origin of fire, but noted that the view from the latter to the S-curve would have been obstructed by the buildings in front of it.¹²¹¹⁷ He therefore never checked the Red Façade building.¹²¹¹⁸

are more effective against moving targets, such as trams that are only temporarily visible.¹²¹²³ On cross-examination he confirmed that if Čutuna's entry wound was on her right thigh and the exit wound was on her right hip, this would imply that the bullet was travelling upwards rather than downwards.¹²¹²⁴ However, he clarified that this would not necessarily be the case if the victim was crouching down when struck by the bullet and also explained that the bullet might change its trajectory once it enters the tram.¹²¹²⁵

3697. Poparić analysed the material relevant to this incident, including the CSB Sarajevo report as well as the video footage of the scene, filmed by the BiH TV immediately after the incident, recording not only the position of the trams but also the last burst of shots on the four children running across the incident location.¹²¹²⁶ He did not seem to be aware of the UNPROFOR report of 13 October 1994, however.¹²¹²⁷

3698. Poparić began his analysis by expressing doubt about the official character of the CSB Sarajevo report of 10 October 1994 because it had no log number.¹²¹²⁸ Having analysed the video footage of the scene, which records the position of trams 206 and 236, and contains interviews with two people injured in the incident, he came to the conclusion that tram 206 was hit when passing by the Executive Council building, the stretch which at the time was protected by containers, while tram 236 was struck in front of the Executive Council building where it stopped immediately after being struck.¹²¹²⁹ Poparić explained that he reached his conclusion on tram 236's location based on the statements of the people interviewed by the BiH TV, statement of an eye-witness, and the video footage of the scene which shows the tram at that location together with its broken window and the traces of broken glass on the ground, indicating that the tram stopped immediately, moving only a metre or two after being struck by the bullets.¹²¹³⁰ Based on all this, Poparić concluded that trams 206 and 236 could not have been fired on from the VRS positions in Grbavica or from Metalka as they were protected by the BiH Assembly and Executive Council buildings, as well as by the above mentioned containers.¹²¹³¹

3699. Poparić also analysed the footage of the third burst of shots, which shows the moment when the bullets struck the area near the Faculty of Philosophy and the cloud of dust that rose from the ground as a result. He speculated that the cloud was about two metres high which in turn meant that the bullet hit the ground with high energy and at a high angle of descent. This, according to Poparić, indicated that it was fired from “a relatively small distance” thus excluding Metalka, Invest Banka, and the Red Façade buildings as the origins of fire.¹²¹³² Poparić concluded that the fire seen in the footage came from the Executive Council building and noted that this was confirmed by the footage of an UNPROFOR soldier talking to Rose and pointing in the direction of the Executive Council.¹²¹³³

3700. During cross-examination, Poparić testified that his theory on the dust clouds was not based on any published studies but on his extensive experience with trajectories of small arms.¹²¹³⁴ He also explained that had the bullet come from the Red Façade building which was divided in half by the warring parties, then the angle of descent would have been no more than ten degrees.¹²¹³⁵ When shown the UNPROFOR report of 13 October and the entry angle that UNPROFOR measured on the tram, namely 81 degrees from the vertical line and 9 degrees from the horizontal line, Poparić explained that having the angle alone was not enough to conclude where the bullet came from and that one needed to look at the firing tables for the weapon used in the incident.¹²¹³⁶ Based on those, he concluded that had the bullet come from the Red Façade building, the angle would have been less than four or five degrees.¹²¹³⁷ When asked whether such a small angle, be it

During cross-examination Poparić conceded that the footage he viewed had no sound so that he did not know whether the UNPROFOR soldier mentioned the Executive Council building to Rose. He reiterated his position that the soldier was pointing at the Executive Council building but then also said that he was pointing in the direction of the Red Façade building and Grbavica. See Mile Poparić, T. 39264–39265 (5 June 2013).

¹²¹³⁵ Mile Poparić, T. 39253–39254 (4 June 2013). While the transcript records that Poparić referred to a “famous silver building which was divided in half by the VRS and the ABiH” the Chamber considers that this was a reference to the Red Façade building as that was the only famous building in the area that was divided in half by the warring parties. The Chamber is of the view that the reference to this building being silver must have been an error in interpretation or a mistake in Poparić's testimony.

nine or four degrees, meant that the fire could not have come from the Executive Council building, Poparić stated that one could fire from the ground floor or from one of the upper floors of the Executive Council building so the angle of descent could range from two to 80 degrees.¹²¹³⁸ When confronted with the report of the meeting between Mladić and Rose of 10 October 1994, Poparić accepted that Mladić's position that the fire came from Holiday Inn was wrong but denied that this meeting proved anything as to the actual origin of fire.¹²¹³⁹

3701. The Chamber recalls that it has taken judicial notice of two Adjudicated Facts which provide that the visibility on 8 October 1994 was sufficient to allow a sniper at the Metalka Building to identify and target a tram negotiating the S-curve, that the shots came from the direction of the Metalka Building, which was held by the SRK and that they were fired by a member of the SRK.¹²¹⁴⁰ However, as noted above, these Adjudicated Facts are inconsistent with some of the evidence offered by the Prosecution, including the UNPROFOR report of 13 October 1994 and the co-ordinates of the incident site obtained and used by Hogan.¹²¹⁴¹ That being the case, the Chamber is unable to rely on these two Adjudicated Facts and will disregard them for the purpose of its analysis of this incident.

3702. As far as the exact location of the incident is concerned, the Chamber is persuaded by the report prepared by UNPROFOR following the incident. This report refers to, inter alia, interviews with UNPROFOR soldiers who witnessed all three instances of fire being opened that day and who place all three instances at the intersection of Đure Daničića street and Zmaja od Bosne street.¹²¹⁴² In addition, the Chamber recalls that both CSB Sarajevo and UNPROFOR reports provide that the third burst of fire took place at the same location as the two previous bursts of fire. The video footage of that third burst of fire clearly shows that it took place at the intersection of Đure Daničića and Zmaja od Bosne streets. Bearing all that in mind, the Chamber considers that Čutuna's tram was shot at when passing through that intersection rather than the intersection noted in the CSB Sarajevo report. This tram was a civilian vehicle, with civilians onboard, and was operating due to a cease-fire in place at the time. In addition, Alma Čutuna herself was a civilian and was not taking direct part in hostilities when she was wounded in this incident.

¹²¹⁴¹ See 3692–3693, fn. 12103.

¹²¹⁴² The Chamber notes here that in determining the location of the incident the CSB Sarajevo investigators appear to have relied on the tram driver's recollection of what happened and did not speak to the UNPROFOR soldiers in the area. However, in contrast to those soldiers, the tram driver would have been engaged in driving the tram and, once the bullets struck the tram, would have been trying to get it to safety in a state of panic and chaos. Thus, the Chamber considers the description of the event by the UNPROFOR soldiers at the scene to be more persuasive than that of the driver. For the same reason, the Chamber has decided to disregard the evidence of KDZ090 as to the location at which the tram was first struck by the bullets, particularly since that evidence was not in line with the location KDZ090 actually showed to Barry Hogan.

3703. The Chamber does not accept Poparić's conclusion that the bullets came from the Executive Council building as it is based on a number of plainly unreasonable speculations. For example, on the basis of the footage showing pieces of tram's window on the ground next to the tram itself, Poparić concluded that the tram must have moved only about a metre or two after being struck by the bullets and that it therefore must have been shot at from the Executive Council building. However, this is pure speculation as some or all of the glass could have fallen out of the window frame after the tram had stopped. In other words, it is simply not possible to draw any conclusions from the video footage of the glass on the ground.¹²¹⁴³ In addition, Poparić relied on the analysis of a dust cloud in relation to the third burst of shots fired on that day, to show that bullets came in at a high angle of descent. At the same time, he was unaware of the UNPROFOR investigation which found that the angle of descent was in fact low in relation to both the traces on the tram and the traces on the ground. Accordingly, the Chamber will disregard—in its entirety—Poparić's analysis in relation to this incident.

3704. As far as the origin of fire is concerned, the Chamber accepts UNPROFOR's conclusion that it came from the SRK-held area somewhere west of the Jewish cemetery. First, UNPROFOR conducted its own analysis of the bullet traces on both the tram in which Čutuna was riding and the ground at the intersection of Đure Daničića and Zmaja od Bosne streets, which led them to that location. Indeed, both sites indicated a low angle of descent, which is consistent with the fire coming from the SRK positions south of Miljacka.¹²¹⁴⁴ Second, the Chamber is convinced, relying on Van der Weijden's evidence outlined above,¹²¹⁴⁵ that the SRK forces in that area had a line of sight to the intersection between Đure Daničića and Zmaja od Bosne streets. Finally, the Chamber recalls the evidence it heard about the prevalence of sniping attacks from the area of the Jewish cemetery and Zmaja od Bosne generally.¹²¹⁴⁶ Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the fire that struck Alma Čutuna's tram and wounded her came from the SRK-held area to the west of Jewish ¹²¹⁴³ Furthermore, as noted above, the UNPROFOR report clearly states that the tram moved some 30 metres after it was struck by the fire.

¹²¹⁴⁶ See paras. 3657, 3659. In addition, Blagoje Kovačević admitted that sometimes he had problems in achieving control over his troops, which were located in the area of the Jewish cemetery, and that they would open fire without him knowing about it. See para. 3661. The Chamber also recalls that it rejected the Accused's arguments that ABiH forces were sniping at Bosnian Muslim civilians throughout Sarajevo. See para. 4519.

cemetery. The Chamber is also satisfied that a machine gun, most likely an M84, was used in this incident and that it had the necessary range to accurately target the tram at that distance. Both the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade and the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade had such a machine gun in its arsenal.¹²¹⁴⁷ Finally, the Chamber has no doubt that the tram was deliberately targeted by the SRK shooter, as illustrated by the fact that after the two trams were shot and struck in the same location, fire was opened again in that same location at a number of people who were trying to leave the area. The Chamber is also confident that the shooter would have known that tram was a civilian vehicle with civilians travelling onboard.

(5) Zmaja od Bosne street, 18 November 1994 (Scheduled Incident F.12)

3705. The Indictment alleges that, on 18 November 1994, Dženana Sokolović, a 31 year old woman, and her seven year old son, Nermin Divović, were fired on while walking on Zmaja od Bosne street. According to the Indictment, Sokolović was wounded in her abdomen and the bullet passed through her and hit her son in the head, killing him.¹²¹⁴⁸ In the Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the bullet came from Metalka.¹²¹⁴⁹ The Accused argues, however, that the bullet came from the side opposite to Grbavica, that is, from the ABiH-held territory.¹²¹⁵⁰

3706. There was a cease-fire in place on 18 November 1994 and the trams were running.¹²¹⁵¹ Dženana Sokolović and her son, Nermin Divović, were shot at the zebra crossing, as they were crossing the Franje Račkog street.¹²¹⁵² There were no soldiers around and no combat going on in the area at the time.¹²¹⁵³ Nermin Divović died on the way to the hospital and his body was taken to the mortuary.¹²¹⁵⁴ Sokolović and her daughter were taken to Koševo Hospital by a UN vehicle.¹²¹⁵⁵ Sokolović underwent surgery and stayed in hospital for seven or eight days.¹²¹⁵⁶ She was unable to attend her son's funeral.¹²¹⁵⁷ Since the incident, she has not been able to hold a full-time job.¹²¹⁵⁸

3707. According to the CSB Sarajevo report dated 19 November 1994, the incident was witnessed by UNPROFOR, UNHCR, and GOFRS members, who were standing near the Museum.¹²¹⁵⁹ They told the CSB Sarajevo investigators that as Sokolović and her son were crossing over to the other side of Franje Račkog street, the side further from the Museum, a shot was heard from the direction of Grbavica, “more precisely from the aggressor’s positions”.¹²¹⁶⁰ The UNHCR member helped Sokolović and her son, while two UNPROFOR armoured personnel carriers arrived and positioned themselves on the Franje Račkog street.¹²¹⁶¹ Stationed at the corner of Franjo Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne streets, on the side of Franje Račkog closer to the Museum, was an UNPROFOR armoured personnel carrier.¹²¹⁶²

3708. The report also notes that CSB Sarajevo’s investigation team, which included a forensic technician Sead Bešić, came to the incident site around 1:30 p.m., and noticed that the site was not secured by the police.¹²¹⁶³ There was blood at the scene but, before the arrival of the team, the UNPROFOR soldiers washed it off and then covered it with sand.¹²¹⁶⁴ During cross-examination, Bešić explained that the investigation was difficult due to the team being unable to access the site; further, he stated that it is difficult to determine the direction of fire just on the basis of the entry and exit wounds.¹²¹⁶⁵

3709. In terms of the injuries the victims sustained, the description of the incident in the CSB Sarajevo report notes that the bullet first hit the boy in the head and then injured Sokolović.¹²¹⁶⁶ When cross-examined on the accuracy of this, Bešić stated that he was not in charge of interviewing witnesses and/or writing the report but was there only to take photographs and collect physical evidence.¹²¹⁶⁷ The report also notes that Sokolović had a wound in the abdominal area, with the entry wound on the right-hand side of her body and the exit wound on the left-hand side.¹²¹⁶⁸

3710. However, contrary to the report above, the medical records for Dženana Sokolović, which were attached to the above report, provide that the bullet that caused her injuries entered the left hand side of her abdomen and exited on the right hand side.¹²¹⁶⁹ Bešić was unable to explain this discrepancy but speculated that his colleague at the scene probably failed to describe the wound accurately.¹²¹⁷⁰ He also noted that at the time only one forensic pathologist was working in Sarajevo and the people assisting him were not knowledgeable enough to determine which wound was the entry wound.¹²¹⁷¹

3711. Šefik Bešlić, an abdominal surgeon who operated on Sokolović, on 18 November 1994 and later in 2007, testified that he had no doubt that the bullet entered the right side of her body and exited on the left side.¹²¹⁷² While admitting that he could not remember the actual surgery he performed on Sokolović,¹²¹⁷³ Bešlić remained adamant that the bullet entered on the right hand side of her body, because of a contusion on her liver, the wound on the right hand side being smaller in size than the wound on the left hand side (thus indicating an entry wound), and the size of the scars he saw on Sokolović's abdomen in 2007.¹²¹⁷⁴ He explained that the doctor who prepared the medical report in question must have made a mistake when describing Sokolović's wounds, and noted that this was understandable given the circumstances under which the doctors had to work at that time.¹²¹⁷⁵ Bešlić also testified that the line between Sokolović's entry and exit wounds was almost horizontal.¹²¹⁷⁶

3712. As for the wound on Sokolović's son, the CSB Sarajevo report states that he had an entry-exit wound on his head—the entry wound was at the back of his head, above the right ear, while the exit wound was located below his eye.¹²¹⁷⁷ According to the autopsy report, the entry wound was located on the boy's right cheek while the exit wound was at the back of his head on the left-hand side.¹²¹⁷⁸

3713. UNPROFOR reported this incident in its daily report of 19 November in which it stated that the fire that killed Nermin came from the SRK side, after which UNPROFOR returned fire towards the SRK.¹²¹⁷⁹

3714. When visiting Zmaja od Bosne with Sokolović, Hogan recorded the co-ordinates of the location of the incident, placing it near the intersection between Zmaja od Bosne and Franje Račkog rather than on the actual crossing on Franje Račkog street.¹²¹⁸⁰ He explained that when he conducted this exercise with the victim, he did not provide her with her statements in order to refresh her memory.¹²¹⁸¹ He was also shown the video footage of the aftermath of the incident and confirmed that Sokolović's son could be seen lying on a pedestrian crossing.¹²¹⁸²

able to identify the victims as a woman and two children.¹²¹⁸⁷ Noting the way in which the woman was injured and her child killed, as well as the fact that the witnesses reported hearing multiple shots, Van der Weijden concluded that either a machine-gun or a semi-automatic sniper rifle was used in this incident.¹²¹⁸⁸ He also noted that both weapons use the same calibre bullets, namely 7.62 mm, and that both are capable of hitting targets up to 800 metres.¹²¹⁸⁹

3716. On cross-examination, Van der Weijden reiterated that the Metalka building was the most likely position from which the shots were fired but conceded that there were other possibilities and that, for example, the shooter could have been “in the middle of the street”, presumably referring to Franje Račkog street.¹²¹⁹⁰ He also conceded that at the time of his investigation he was unaware of the contradicting medical records relating to the entry and exit wounds on Dženana Sokolović’s body, but agreed that if the entry wound was on the left-hand side of her body, it meant that the shot would have originated from the north rather than the south.¹²¹⁹¹

3717. Poparić, also analysed this incident stating that it was difficult to establish what happened given the lack of forensic information and a “lot of contradictory data”.¹²¹⁹² For example, the precise location where the victims were standing when shot was never determined, according to Poparić.¹²¹⁹³

3718. While stating that it was impossible on the basis of available evidence to come to any reliable conclusions on the origin of fire,¹²¹⁹⁴ Poparić then proceeded to conclude that Sokolović and her son were hit by two different bullets, and that the bullets came from the north rather than from the south of the incident site, that is, from the direction opposite to Grbavica.¹²¹⁹⁵ Poparić came to this conclusion based in part on the assumptions he made relating to the evidence received in the Dragomir Milošević case, such as Sokolović’s witness statements, video footage of Sokolović's injuries, video footage of her son's body at the scene,¹²¹⁹⁶ and the footage of Hogan with Sokolović at the scene years later.

3719. For example, based on the video footage of them standing next to each other, Poparić determined the approximate heights of Hogan and Sokolović, which he then used, together with the medical reports and the video footage of the victims' wounds,¹²¹⁹⁷ to show that two different bullets were involved in this sniping incident.¹²¹⁹⁸ He also concluded, based on the video footage of Nermin's head wound, that the bullet that killed the boy entered on the left hand side of the head and exited on the right-hand side, thus indicating that it came from the positions opposite to Grbavica.¹²¹⁹⁹ He found further support for that conclusion in the mistaken belief that the CSB Sarajevo report states that, on the boy's arrival to the hospital, the doctors established that the entry wound was on the left-hand side of his head while the exit wound was on the right.¹²²⁰⁰ Poparić seemed to be under this impression despite stating in two different places in his report, namely on pages 139 and 144, that on the boy's arrival it was established that the entry wound was on the right hand side and the exit wound on the left hand side of the boy's head, which is in line with the CSB Sarajevo report.¹²²⁰¹ Indeed, both the CSB Sarajevo report and the boy's autopsy report clearly state that the entry wound was on the right hand side of the boy's head and the exit wound was on the left; the only discrepancy being the exact location of the entry and exit wounds.¹²²⁰² This discrepancy becomes significant, however, as the wounds seen in the video footage of the boy's head¹²²⁰³ accurately reflect the autopsy report, namely that the entry wound was on the boy's right cheek while the exit wound was at the back of his head on the left-hand side. The trickle of blood that Poparić describes as coming from the entry wound above left ear¹²²⁰⁴ could have easily come from the entry wound on the right hand side of the head or from the exit wound on the back of the head. Thus, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's analysis in relation to the exit and entry wounds on the boy's head and his conclusion that those wounds showed that two bullets from the north wounded the victims.

The Chamber notes that, while the English translation of the relevant part of Poparić's report on page 139 states that the entry wound on the boy's head was above the left ear and the exit wound below the right eye, the original BCS version of the report provides the opposite, namely that the entry wound was above the right ear and the exit wound below the left eye. It is the latter that is correct as suggested by the fact that it coincides with the CSB Sarajevo report cited to in footnote 301 of the report.

3720. With respect to the confusion surrounding Sokolović's wound, Poparić referred to Bešlić's evidence and concluded that it is unlikely that the surgeon who wrote that the entry point of the wound was on the left-hand side of Sokolović's abdomen made a mistake because he recorded the size of the wounds, indicating that he performed the examination in a "detailed and conscientious manner".¹²²⁰⁵ Poparić also referred to the evidence of a medical doctor from another trial who testified that it would be impossible for Bešlić after so many years to see which wound was the entry wound and which was the exit wound.¹²²⁰⁶ The Chamber finds both these conclusions to be outside of Poparić's expertise and tenuous at best. Thus, it will not take them into account when making findings on this incident.

3721. Poparić criticised the fact that no one tried to establish the level of entry and exit wounds on Sokolović's body and explained that, had the bullet come from Metalka, it would have a downward trajectory so that the entry wound on Sokolović's body would be higher than the exit wound¹²²⁰⁷ and the same would apply to her son's wound.¹²²⁰⁸ He then found it hard to reconcile such downwards trajectory to the boy's wound.¹²²⁰⁹ However, the Chamber first notes that, contrary to Poparić's criticism, Bešlić did note that the line between Sokolović's entry and exit wounds was almost horizontal.¹²²¹⁰ In addition, the said trajectory can easily be reconciled with the boy's wound as established in the autopsy report, which notes that the entry wound was on the boy's right cheek while the exit wound was at the back of his head on the left-hand side.¹²²¹¹

¹²²⁰³ This is the image Poparić used to suggest that the bullet entered the boy's head from the left-hand side. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 141, Image 100.

3722. Poparić also noted that in the video footage of the scene, some people can be seen sheltering behind a vehicle and several bursts of fire are heard which to him indicated that the fire was being exchanged between warring parties.¹²²¹² The Chamber once again does not accept Poparić's conclusion here as it was based on pure assumptions without considering other possibilities, such as for example an exchange of fire between the UNPROFOR soldiers on the scene and the shooter. Indeed, when shown the UNPROFOR report of 19 November 1994 referred to above,¹²²¹³ Poparić did not exclude the possibility that this was an exchange of fire between UNPROFOR and the person who shot Sokolović and her son.¹²²¹⁴

3723. Poparić also pointed out that Skolović, when visiting the scene with Hogan, placed the location of the incident near the intersection between Zmaja od Bosne and Franje Račkog rather than on the actual crossing on Franje Račkog street, noting that it would be difficult for someone in the Metalka building to see a person at that particular location.¹²²¹⁵ Once again, the Chamber recalls that Poparić never entered the Metalka building and thus cannot claim with sufficient certainty that this particular position would not be visible from the building.¹²²¹⁶

3724. Poparić then estimated the boy's height based on the video footage of his body lying on the intersection and the estimated height of Sokolović, arguing that had the bullet come from Metalka, the boy would have been hit lower down his body; however, he also explained that if the boy was standing at a short distance from Sokolović, then it was possible for the bullet to hit both of them.¹²²¹⁷ The Chamber is of the view that estimating the boy's height from the footage of him lying on the pedestrian crossing is questionable at best. In addition, as implied by Poparić's own testimony, it is not very useful given that there is no information as to how far the boy was from his mother at the moment when they were shot. Thus, the Chamber will not accept Poparić's analysis relating to the victims' height and bullet trajectory.

side, continuing through her son's head;¹²²¹⁸ (ii) the shots came from the Metalka building;¹²²¹⁹ (iii) the shot that wounded Sokolović and killed her son, both civilians, originated from Metalka, a known SRK sniper position;¹²²²⁰ and (iv) the shots were fired by a member of the SRK.¹²²²¹

3726. The Chamber finds, based on the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, that Sokolović and her son were civilians and were not taking direct part in hostilities at the moment when they were shot. Indeed, they were walking in the city as a cease-fire was in place at the time. The Chamber is also satisfied that they were shot as they were crossing Franje Račkog street and approaching the museum. This is corroborated both by the footage of Nermin Divović lying on the said zebra crossing having just been shot, and by the CSB Sarajevo report compiled at the time of the incident.

3727. The Chamber is also satisfied, relying both on Bešlić's evidence and the medical records of Nermin's head wounds, as well as the adjudicated facts, that the bullet that wounded Sokolović came from her right hand side and that it entered the right side of her abdomen, exited on the left side of her abdomen, and then struck Nermin in the head, causing devastating head injuries that lead to his death. As indicated above, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's analysis of the location of entry and exit wounds of the two victims. First and foremost, this is because, unlike Bešlić, Poparić is not a doctor and thus his opinion as to the entry and exit wounds of the victims carry little weight. In addition, the analysis he presented was extremely speculative, as he relied heavily on video footage and his own estimates of the height of the individuals seen in the footage. At times, he was also plainly mistaken as to the content of the evidence before him.¹²²²² Accordingly, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's conclusion that the wounds on the victims show that two different bullets struck them and that those bullets came from the north rather than the south. Indeed, based on the evidence above, the Chamber is convinced that the opposite happened, namely that one bullet came from the south and that it wounded Sokolović and killed her son Nermin. The Chamber is particularly persuaded here by the medical evidence relating to their wounds¹²²²³ and the report of the CSB Sarajevo report, as well as the footage of the aftermath of the incident, all of which point to the conclusion that the bullet arrived from the south.

¹²²²³ The Chamber notes that the only contradicting medical evidence is the initial report on Sokolović's injuries prepared by the physician who saw her immediately after the incident. The Chamber, however, accepts Bešlić's evidence that this physician made a mistake, which was understandable given the circumstances that doctors were operating under at the time of the incident. The Chamber also finds Bešlić's evidence as to Sokolović's

3728. As for the origin of fire, the Chamber is convinced, relying on adjudicated facts and the evidence of Van der Weijden, as well as the evidence about the presence of well-equipped SRK snipers in Grbavica and particularly in the Metalka building,¹²²²⁴ that the shot that wounded Sokolović and killed her son was fired from Metalka, which at the time was in the SRK's zone of responsibility. This is further confirmed by the fact that UNPROFOR soldiers, who were at the scene after the incident, returned fire at the SRK. The Chamber is also convinced that, given the distance between Metalka and the incident site, the SRK soldier who shot Sokolović and her son was able to see that they were both civilians. Despite that, he proceeded to target them deliberately, as there was no ongoing fighting in the area at the time of the incident. Further, the Chamber notes that all these findings are consistent with the evidence suggesting that the sniper fire in the area of Zmaja od Bosne street came from the Serb side.¹²²²⁵

(6) Zmaja od Bosne street, 23 November 1994 (Scheduled Incident F.14)

3729. The Indictment alleges that on 23 November 1994, Afeza Karačić (also referred to as Hafiza Karačić), a 31 year old woman, and Sabina Šabanić, a 26 year old woman, were both wounded in the right shoulder when the tram they were travelling in came under fire on Zmaja od Bosne, between the School of Technology and Maršal Tito Barracks.¹²²²⁶ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution clarifies that the tram was struck "in the area immediately west of the S-curve" and submits that the fire came either from the four white high-rises or from Metalka.¹²²²⁷ The Accused argues that the fire came either from the Executive Council building or from the ABiH positions on Golo Brdo.¹²²²⁸

3730. On 23 November 1994, Afeza Karačić and her sister took a tram to Otoka, where they lived.¹²²²⁹ Having left work at 3:30 p.m., Sabina Šabanić took a tram to go home.¹²²³⁰ Šabanić and Karačić were on the same crowded tram.¹²²³¹ Huso Palo was driving this tram westbound on Zmaja od Bosne street in the direction of School of Technology and the Maršal Tito Barracks.¹²²³² It was not yet dusk; the day was cold but there was no fog and the visibility was good.¹²²³³ There were also no leaves on the trees.¹²²³⁴ Sometime between 3:30 and 4 p.m., when the tram was between the School of Technology and the Maršal Tito Barracks (between the two museums), it was hit by what Huso Palo referred to as a “single bullet”, which injured Šabanić and Karačić.¹²²³⁵

3732. Karačić was standing in the middle of the tram, at the connecting platform between the front and the rear cars of the tram, facing east, when she was shot.¹²²³⁸ The bullet came from her right, entered her upper right shoulder and exited slightly lower on the right arm, severing a nerve.¹²²³⁹ Karačić was taken to the Koševo Hospital¹²²⁴⁰ and had several operations as a result of which her arm was shortened by six centimetres.¹²²⁴¹ Due to her injuries, she has an 80% disability; she cannot drive a car or write properly and has difficulty eating with her right hand.¹²²⁴²

3733. Huso Palo testified that the shot came from the tram's left-hand side, from one of the four white skyscrapers in Grbavica on Lenjinova street as they were the only location from which the tram could be seen.¹²²⁴³ However, during cross-examination he explained that he did not know from where the shots were fired.¹²²⁴⁴ Given the location of her injury, as well as the fact that these four skyscrapers were thought by the locals to be sniping nests, Šabanić was also of the view that the shots were fired from there.¹²²⁴⁵ She also rejected the proposition that there was an exchange of fire when she was wounded, or at any other time when she was walking in this area.¹²²⁴⁶ There were no soldiers or military targets in, or in the vicinity of, the tram, and only UNPROFOR soldiers were on the street.¹²²⁴⁷ While admitting that the tram was very crowded and that she could not move within it, Šabanić remained adamant that no soldiers were on it because she saw all the passengers when they got off the tram following the sniping.¹²²⁴⁸ She confirmed, however, that buildings belonging to BiH civilian authorities and the Presidency were nearby.¹²²⁴⁹

3734. The incident was investigated by an investigating team from CSB Sarajevo, with Mioković as the team leader, and Sabljica as the ballistics expert.¹²²⁵⁰ When the team arrived on the scene, the tram had already been moved back to the depot, together with another tram which was shot five minutes earlier, in the same location between the Maršal Tito Barracks and the School of Technology.¹²²⁵¹ According to Sabljica, it was therefore not possible to establish the exact origin of fire but the team was able to determine that it came from the tram's left-hand side, from the direction of Sector South and the area of Grbavica.¹²²⁵² However, a report prepared by Mioković, based on the notes he made at the scene,¹²²⁵³ concluded that the bullet was fired from the south or the southeast and that it came "from the aggressor's position".¹²²⁵⁴ Sabljica could not explain the basis for the reference to the "aggressor's position" given that the tram was in a depot when investigated and that the bullet's entry angle could not be determined.¹²²⁵⁵

3735. The CSB Sarajevo reports note that only one bullet was fired at the tram but since no entry point was found it was concluded, based on the damage to the right hand side of the interior of the tram, that the bullet entered through an open window from the left hand side of the tram and that it fragmented into pieces.¹²²⁵⁶ According to Sabljica, a bullet can fragment only upon impact with a hard surface so in his opinion the two victims were injured after the bullet impacted a metal plate on the tram and fragmented.¹²²⁵⁷ Mioković, on the other hand, thought that the bullet fragmented before it impacted any surface in the tram, and it was then that the fragments injured the two victims.¹²²⁵⁸ However, he also conceded that there was no material evidence that a fragmentation bullet was used here.¹²²⁵⁹ Sabljica conceded that the team did not take into account the injuries of

The Chamber notes that another BiH MUP report notes that the bullet entered through the rear "right" window of the front section of the tram, which does not seem to be recorded in the English translation of that report. However, given the description of the incident in this report, particularly the direction in which the train was travelling and the direction from which the bullet is said to have come, the reference to the "right" window must have been a description of the position of the said window in relation to other windows on the left hand side of the tram. See P1835 (BiH MUP Report re sniping incident of 23 November 1994 on Zmaja od Bosne street), p. 1; P1830 (Witness statement of Dragan Mioković dated 26 October 2010), p. 41.

¹²²⁵⁷ According to Sabljica, the metal plate was located "inside the tram on the wall, on the interior tram wall where the bullet hit" and it was "in the upper right-hand side corner of the tram's window frame." See P1695 (Witness statement of Mirza Sabljica dated 11 February 2010), pp. 71–72.

¹²²⁵⁹ P1830 (Witness statement of Dragan Mioković dated 26 October 2010), pp. 42–43. Mirza Sabljica testified that some fragments of the bullet jacket were found in the tram but explained that this was not enough to establish the victims when coming to its conclusion about the bullet entering through an open window, and also confirmed that the team could not establish the angle at which the bullet entered the tram.¹²²⁶⁰

3736. Hogan visited the scene of the incident with one of the victims¹²²⁶¹ and recorded the co-ordinates of the location of the incident, placing it at the intersection between Zmaja od Bosne and Franje Račkog streets instead of further to the west, as recounted by Huso Palo and Sabina Šabanić.¹²²⁶² Van der Weijden then visited this site, as well as Grbavica, on 29 November 2006.¹²²⁶³ Judging by the photographs in his report, and because he used the co-ordinates given to him by the Prosecution, Van der Weijden placed the location of this incident at the intersection of Franje Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne streets, instead of further to the west, near the Maršal Tito Barracks as recounted by Huso Palo and Sabina Šabanić.¹²²⁶⁴ As a result, he visited Metalka noting that the rooms in the building offer direct and clear views of the stretch of Zmaja od Bosne, between the Museum and the Faculty of Philosophy.¹²²⁶⁵ When in the building, he determined that the tram would be exposed to the shooter located in the building for at least eight seconds.¹²²⁶⁶

3738. Poparić analysed this incident using the relevant CSB Sarajevo reports, as well as the statements of Palo, Šabanić, and Karačić.¹²²⁶⁹ He concluded that the bullet that struck the tram did not originate from the SRK positions in Grbavica but came from east, from a location with a much higher site angle, such as for example the Executive Council building or the ABiH positions on Golo Brdo.¹²²⁷⁰ He based his conclusion on the position at which the two victims were standing in the tram when shot, and their injuries. With respect to Karačić, he pointed out that she was standing facing the back of the tram, at 90 degrees to the axis of the tram—thus, if she had been wounded by a bullet coming from Grbavica, the bullet could not have exited through her upper right arm but would have ended up inside her body or exited on the side of it.¹²²⁷¹ Poparić therefore concluded that her injury could have been caused only by a bullet coming from east, at a high angle of descent.¹²²⁷² He also explained that the differences in length between the entry and exit wounds of both victims were great, also suggesting that the bullet had a great angle of descent.¹²²⁷³ He conceded, however, that he never spoke to Karačić or saw her injuries and that no measurements of her wounds were recorded in the available reports.¹²²⁷⁴ He also conceded that he assumed that both her and Šabanić’s arms were in straight vertical downwards position by their side when struck and noted that irrespective of the positions of Karačić’s arm, had the bullet come from the white high-rises, it would have stayed in her body and not exited on her upper arm.¹²²⁷⁵

3739. Poparić further challenged the report prepared by Mioković, saying that it was impossible for the bullet that entered through an open window to fragment before impacting any obstacle and also to hit the window frame after exiting the body of one of the victims.¹²²⁷⁶ He suggested that the bullet did not pass through an open window but through the tarpaulin of the joint on the tram and fragmented at that point, which was then missed by the investigators.¹²²⁷⁷ However, in that case, given the injuries to the victims, the bullet could not have come from the SRK positions in

Grbavica.¹²²⁷⁸ Noting the position of the tram as testified to by Karačić in the Dragomir Milošević case, namely the intersection of Franje Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne, the joint of the tram would not have been visible from Metalka.¹²²⁷⁹

3740. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts which go to contentious issues in this incident. They provide as follows: (i) the tram was shot at the intersection in front of the Holiday Inn, or shortly thereafter in front of the Maršal Tito Barracks between the two museums;¹²²⁸⁰ (ii) Afeza Karačić and Sabina Šabanić were hit by one single bullet which fragmented;¹²²⁸¹ (iii) it was common for the VRS to fire fragmentation bullets at trams that would fragment on impact, even through glass;¹²²⁸² (iv) the origin of fire was either the high-rise buildings on Lenjinova street or the Metalka building, both held by the SRK;¹²²⁸³ (v) the shots came from SRK-held territory; and were fired by a member of the SRK.¹²²⁸⁴

3741. As far as the exact location of the incident is concerned, the Chamber notes that the majority of the evidence before it places the tram somewhere between the School of Technology and the Maršal Tito Barracks at the moment when it was shot.¹²²⁸⁵ The Chamber is therefore convinced that this is the location of the incident. While Hogan's evidence suggests otherwise, the Chamber recalls that it is based on a recollection of a victim of the incident. However, the Chamber does not have any information as to who this victim was. As a result, and given the weight of other evidence, the Chamber does not accept Hogan's GPS co-ordinates as accurate.

3742. The Chamber further considers that this tram was a civilian vehicle, with civilians travelling onboard. In addition, Šabanić and Karačić were civilians and were not taking direct part in hostilities when they were shot and wounded.

3743. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber recalls that Poparić reached his conclusion that the bullet came from the Executive Council building or from Golo Brdo, based on a number of assumptions as to the location and the nature of Šabanić's and Karačić's injuries. However, he never checked if his assumptions were correct by talking to the two victims. Furthermore, he is not a doctor and thus his analysis as to whether and where bullets or bullet fragments should have exited the victims' bodies, carries little weight. His analysis in this respect also does not account for the possibility suggested by Sabljica, namely that the bullet fragmented upon impact before hitting the victims, which in turn would have affected the trajectory of the fragments that injured the victims.¹²²⁸⁶ Finally, aside from the general direction Šabanić and Karačić were facing when shot, there is no evidence as to the specifics of their body positions, such as whether they were standing with their arms down next to their bodies or whether they were holding onto the handrails, which would have been necessary to know in order to draw definitive conclusions about the bullet's trajectory. Thus, the Chamber does not accept that the approximate angle at which the bullet struck the tram can be determined from the description of the victims' injuries, particularly since the investigators found no traces of the bullet's entry point on the tram and since there is a possibility that the bullet fragmented before striking the victims. For all those reasons, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's conclusion that the fire came from east and from the Executive Council building or Golo Brdo.

3744. The Chamber, relying on the adjudicated facts and the evidence of Šabanić and Palo, is convinced that the bullet that wounded Šabanić and Karačić came from the south, from the SRK positions in Grbavica, most likely from one of the four white high-rises. Given that the SRK snipers in Grbavica, and particularly the snipers located in the four white high-rises, had an excellent view of the area in front of and around Maršal Tito Barracks,¹²²⁸⁷ and given that there was no ongoing fighting at the time of the incident, the Chamber is also convinced that the SRK shooter deliberately targeted the tram, while fully aware that it was a civilian vehicle. This is in line with the general evidence the Chamber heard about the prevalence of the SRK sniping in the area of Zmaja od Bosne street and about SRK sniper nests in the white high-rises.¹²²⁸⁸

(7) Zmaja od Bosne street, 27 February 1995 (Scheduled Incident F.15)

3745. According to the Indictment, on 27 February 1995, Senad Kesmer (also referred to as Senad Kešmer), a 31 year old man, Alma Čehajić, a 19 year old woman, Alija Holjan, a 55 year old man, and others were shot and wounded while travelling in a westbound tram on Zmaja od Bosne street, when the tram was near the Maršal Tito Barracks.¹²²⁸⁹ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution claims ¹²²⁸⁵ See para. 3730, fn. 12235.

¹²²⁸⁶ The Chamber also notes that Poparić appears to have assumed when assessing victims' injuries that the bullet struck the tram at a right angle. However, the angle was never established and the victims' injuries in fact appear to be consistent with fire coming at an acute angle.

¹²²⁸⁷ See paras. 3666–3667.

¹²²⁸⁸ See paras. 3621, 3656, 3662. In addition, the Chamber also recalls that it rejected the Accused's arguments that ABiH forces were sniping at Bosnian Muslim civilians throughout Sarajevo. See Section IV.B.1.d: Bosnian Muslim side targeting own civilians.

that five persons were wounded in this incident and that the fire on the tram was opened from the white high-rises in Grbavica.¹²²⁹⁰ The Accused claims, however, that the fire came from nearby buildings such as the Museum for example, which were under the ABiH control.¹²²⁹¹

3746. On 27 February 1995, KDZ289 was on a tram on Zmaja od Bosne, travelling westbound from the centre of Sarajevo in the direction of Ilidža.¹²²⁹² Also on the tram was Alma Mulaosmanović-Čehajić, who testified that the tram was fairly crowded.¹²²⁹³ Alija Holjan, a foreman of a street cleaning crew, was sitting on the right-side of the tram, next to an exit.¹²²⁹⁴ While the day was cloudy and cold, the weather conditions allowed for good visibility.¹²²⁹⁵ The day was also relatively quiet as cease-fire was in place.¹²²⁹⁶

3747. Around noon, while in the area of the Maršal Tito Barracks stop, the tram was shot at.¹²²⁹⁷ KDZ289 did not realise at first that the noise she was hearing were shots but then heard passengers scream and felt bullets hit the left hand side of the tram, starting at her seat and moving down towards the back of the tram.¹²²⁹⁸ As the shooting continued, the tram kept on driving for a while and then stopped to let the passengers off.¹²²⁹⁹ KDZ289 observed a woman who was injured in the leg, as well as an eight or nine year old girl with a wound on her face.¹²³⁰⁰

3748. Mulaosmanović-Čehajić stated that when fired upon, the tram was located somewhere between the two Museums.¹²³⁰¹ She was 18 years old at the time and was wearing a green blouse, a light purple jacket, and blue jeans.¹²³⁰² She was standing in the last section of the tram facing the Maršal Tito Barracks,¹²³⁰³ and was wounded by the bullet which entered her left elbow, “passed through the muscle, slid down the bone and then exited” through her lower arm.¹²³⁰⁴ Once she got off the tram, she was taken to the “first aid station” where she saw an elderly woman and an elderly man being brought in too.¹²³⁰⁵ Like Mulaosmanović-Čehajić, Holjan was also seriously injured in the incident and taken to the first-aid station of the State Hospital.¹²³⁰⁶

3749. UNPROFOR and the local police arrived at the scene soon after the incident and conducted an investigation¹²³⁰⁷ at which point KDZ289 noticed that the left hand side of the tram was riddled with some 30 bullet holes and marks.¹²³⁰⁸ KDZ289 testified that because the shots came from her left, they must have come from the “Serbian Army” positions in Grbavica, but she could not say where exactly the sniper was located.¹²³⁰⁹ During cross-examination in the Dragomir Milošević case, she accepted that the territory immediately to her left and up to Miljacka River was in the area of responsibility of the ABiH but also noted that UNPROFOR was stationed in the area around Marin Dvor.¹²³¹⁰ KDZ289 denied that ABiH units were present in the centre of the city.¹²³¹¹ When faced with an UNPROFOR report¹²³¹² stating that there was an exchange of fire between the ABiH and VRS at the time of this incident, KDZ289 first noted that the report may not be describing the incident she was involved in, and also added that as far as she knew there was no exchange of fire between the two warring factions at the time, although she admitted that she could not be sure.¹²³¹³ This was confirmed by Fraser, who having been shown the report, also interpreted it as involving two different incidents, namely a deliberate sniping on a tram and an exchange of fire that took place some 300 metres away at Vrbanja Bridge.¹²³¹⁴

3750. Mulaosmanović-Čehajić testified that the shots came from behind her, that is, from the direction of Miljacka River, and the neighbourhoods of Grbavica and Vraca, stating that “the firing was not that close, because the sound of it would have been louder.”¹²³¹⁵ She identified the origin of fire as being under control of the “Serbian army” on the basis that “everybody knew that”.¹²³¹⁶ When asked during cross-examination, if she heard other shots being fired before she heard bullets hitting the tram, Mulaosmanović-Čehajić responded that she thought she may have, but said that she could not be absolutely certain and could not confirm where those initial shots were fired from.¹²³¹⁷ She testified that she heard two bursts of fire, the second one being the one that struck the tram, but denied that this meant that the shots were fired from an automatic rifle with a shorter range and thus could have come from the tall buildings on the northern side of Miljacka River.¹²³¹⁸ Like KDZ289, she too was presented with the UNPROFOR report, which referred to the exchange of fire on that day, but denied any knowledge of such an exchange.¹²³¹⁹ In addition, when told that the exchange of fire took place near Vrbanja Bridge, at first she testified that this location was not far away.¹²³²⁰ She later noted that Vrbanja Bridge was far enough from the buildings so that she did not hear any cross-fire “as the tram was passing” the buildings adjacent to it.¹²³²¹ She then confirmed that there was generally a lot of fighting throughout Sarajevo.¹²³²²

3751. KDZ289 testified that there was one ABiH soldier on the tram, who was standing next to her at the time the shots were fired but could not remember any others in the tram or in its vicinity before the incident happened.¹²³²³ During her testimony in the Dragomir Milošević case, Mulaosmanović-Čehajić testified that she did not remember seeing any soldiers on the tram nor could she remember any combat activity surrounding it,¹²³²⁴ and explained this fact by noting that she was standing in the last section of the tram, while the soldier in question appears to have been standing next to KDZ289.¹²³²⁵

his report on 28 February 1995.¹²³³¹ He testified that the tram was hit by eight bullets, four of which passed through the tram causing entry and exit holes.¹²³³² Because of the damage caused, the investigators were unable to move it back to the position it was in when hit.¹²³³³ Nevertheless, by interviewing the driver of the tram and determining the angle and direction of fire, the investigators concluded that the fire had come from the “fourth skyscraper in Grbavica” on the Lenjinova street, that is, from the westernmost building.¹²³³⁴ The report also notes that the tram was found some 100 metres away from where it was shot.¹²³³⁵ It also reports that five people were injured in this incident,¹²³³⁶ and that a “deformed 7.62 mm calibre bullet jacket” was found, as well as other bullet fragments, which were then sent for analysis.¹²³³⁷

3754. As stated above, Sabljica also participated in the investigation of this incident.¹²³³⁸ In his earlier testimony in the Perišić case he testified, like Kučanin, that the team was able to determine the origin of fire as being one of the four skyscrapers in Grbavica.¹²³³⁹ However, the ballistics report signed by him on behalf of Međedović, provides that the exact origin of fire could not be determined as the tram could not be moved back to the exact location where it was hit; it also notes that the bullets came from the left hand side of the tram, from the front backwards, from the left to the right, and from above downwards.¹²³⁴⁰ When asked in the present case to explain the discrepancy between Kučanin’s report and his own ballistics report, Sabljica stated that he stood by the latter and that the most that could be established, given that the tram could not be returned to the location where it was when hit, is that the bullets came from the south, from the direction of

According to Sabljica, sometimes reports prepared following an incident would not be consistent with the ballistics report, mostly because the investigators would not wait for the final ballistics report and would instead draw conclusions on the basis of their own findings and observations. Sabljica denied, however, that he and his team were under pressure of any kind to identify particular buildings as the origin of fire. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7693 (11 October 2010), T. 7735 (12 October 2010).

Grbavica.¹²³⁴¹ He could not explain how Kučanin reached the conclusion about the fourth skyscraper.¹²³⁴² He also testified that it would be impossible for bullets fired from Vrbanja Bridge to reach the location of the tram incident at the moment at which it was shot due to a number of obstacles and the lack of visibility.¹²³⁴³

3755. Hogan visited Zmaja od Bosne with one of the victims of this incident¹²³⁴⁴ who, while standing at the intersection between Franje Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne streets, indicated that the location of the incident was between the School of Technology and the Holiday Inn, which is further east from the incident site as recounted by the witnesses above.¹²³⁴⁵

3756. Van der Weijden then visited the incident site, using the co-ordinates given to him by the Prosecution, as well as Grbavica.¹²³⁴⁶ In his report, he placed the location of this incident at the intersection of Franje Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne streets, that is the stretch of Zmaja od Bosne between the Museum and the Faculty of Philosophy, instead of further to the west, near the Maršal Tito Barracks, as recounted by the witnesses on the tram.¹²³⁴⁷ During cross-examination, however, Van der Weijden recognised this discrepancy and marked the location of the incident so that it coincided with the witnesses' accounts, conceding that for the purposes of his investigation it would have been important for him to know the exact location of the tram when it was hit.¹²³⁴⁸

3757. Noting that there were multiple victims in this incident and having regard to their injuries, Van der Weijden concluded that most likely automatic fire was used to shoot at the tram, and that ¹²³⁴² Mirza Sabljica, T. 7694 (11 October 2010). The Chamber notes that Kučanin's report is dated 28 February 1995 while the other reports in the dossier related to this incident were prepared on the day of the incident, namely 27 February. Thus, it appears that Kučanin had at his disposal all of the information prepared by the investigation team, including witness statements and Sabljica's ballistics report. See P1729 (BiH MUP Reports re sniping incident of 27 February 1995 on Zmaja od Bosne street).

¹²³⁴⁴ The Chamber notes that the identity of the victim in question is not clear from the evidence. In the video footage recorded by Hogan he is referred to only as "Witness 61".

3759. Poparić also recalled that four out of the eight bullets seem to have remained in the panelling of the tram, which indicated to him that they had not come from the white high-rises but rather at a great angle.¹²³⁵⁷ Furthermore, the differences in heights between the bullet entry points

¹²³⁵⁴ Poparić explained that he came to that conclusion because the dot was of the same thickness and colour as the arrow drawn by the investigation team. He did not, however, want to speculate whether that meant that the team on the scene manipulated the evidence on purpose. Mile Poparić, T. 38998–38999 (30 May 2013), T. 39279–39281 (5 June 2013).

Poparić explained that had the bullets come from the white high-rises, they would have had a trajectory of 90 degrees in relation to the axis of the tram. See Mile Poparić, T. 38996 (30 May 2013), T. 39184 (4 June 2103).

¹²³⁵⁷ D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 152; Mile Poparić, T. 38997 (30 May 2013), T. 39284–39285 (5 June 2013). Poparić argued that the angle would be even higher if the trace marked with a number 9 on Image 108 in his report was from a bullet. However, the Chamber notes that, according to the CSB Sarajevo report, number 9 marks traces of blood of one on the panelling of the tram were “very small” according to Poparić, and would have been “far greater” if they had been fired from the white high-rises.¹²³⁵⁸ He further stated that these holes were a result of a burst of fire and not due to sniper fire.¹²³⁵⁹

3760. In addition to the evidence outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire and which provide as follows: (i) the shots came from the high-rise buildings in Grbavica, to the south of the tram, from SRK-held territory;¹²³⁶⁰ (ii) the shots were fired by a member of the SRK;¹²³⁶¹ and (iii) there was a clear view from the high-rise buildings on Lenjinova street in Grbavica onto the intersection at the Maršal Tito Barracks.¹²³⁶²

3763. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber recalls that Poparić reached his conclusion that the bullet came from the Museum or any other nearby building, on the basis of a number of speculations, some of which were highly questionable. For example, using a photograph of one of the bullets' exit holes, he posited a theory that somebody drew that hole, thus implicating CSB Sarajevo members in a large-scale conspiracy. In doing so, he relied purely on the visual observation of the thickness and the colour of the dot in relation to the thickness and the colour of the arrow drawn next to it. The Chamber notes, however, that it is simply impossible to make such a definitive conclusion from the photograph in question, and there is nothing on the photograph that suggests that the CSB Sarajevo team drew an exit hole on the tram wall. Further, if Poparić's speculation were true, presumably the investigators would not have at the same time photographed the actual exit point of the bullet according to Poparić. Thus, the Chamber considers it more likely, that the mark on the inside of the tram located below the mark indicated by the arrow as the exit point could have been related to an earlier incident or even completely unrelated to sniping incidents in Sarajevo. The Chamber will therefore not accept Poparić's conclusions as to the origin of fire in this incident.¹²³⁶⁵

3764. While there is a question mark as to whether the fourth white high-rise was the origin of fire in this incident, the Chamber is convinced that the burst of fire that struck the tram came from the south, namely from Grbavica.¹²³⁶⁶ In this respect the Chamber notes that the majority of the evidence, including the witness testimony and the ballistics report, clearly indicates that Grbavica was the origin of fire, as do the adjudicated facts. While the Accused also attempted to suggest during cross-examination of KDZ289 and Mulaosmanović-Čehajić that the tram was struck by the bullets due to the exchange of fire on Vrbanja Bridge, the Chamber does not consider this to have been the case in light of Sabljica's evidence that the number of obstacles between the incident site and Vrbanja Bridge makes the Accused's position impossible to maintain.

3765. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber is convinced, relying on the evidence outlined above and the adjudicated facts, that the fire came from one of the four white high-rises. This is ¹²³⁶⁵ The Chamber notes that Poparić does not explain why the fact that four bullets lodged in the tram wall suggested a high angle of descent. The Chamber considers that it is also likely that some of the bullets became lodged in the tram's wall due to the strength of the wall and/or the distance between the shooter and the tram. Indeed, of the eight bullets that hit the tram, only four pierced the tram, three of which did so by passing through the windows. This means that only one of the five bullets that hit the tram wall managed to pierce that wall and reach the inside of the tram. In addition, as noted earlier in fn. 12340, Sabljica determined the angles of descent for three of the bullet marks and they were low rather than high, namely, 16, six, and seven degrees. However, Poparić does not appear to have considered any of this when he made his conclusion as to the high angle of descent. Accordingly, the Chamber finds his evidence entirely unreliable in relation to this incident.

¹²³⁶⁶ The Chamber is also satisfied, relying on Van der Weijden's evidence, that a machine gun, most likely an M84, was used in this incident and that it had the necessary range to accurately target the tram at that distance. The consistent both with the approximate location of the tram when shot, the trajectory of the bullets and their angle of descent as described in the CSB Sarajevo report, and the witnesses' testimonies. In addition, it is also consistent with the evidence the Chamber heard throughout this case about the prevalence of SRK sniping on Zmaja od Bosne and the presence of SRK snipers in the four white high-rises.¹²³⁶⁷ The Chamber is also satisfied that a machine gun, most likely an M84, was used in this incident and that it had the necessary range to accurately target the tram at that distance. Both the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade and the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade had such a machine gun in its arsenal.¹²³⁶⁸ Finally, given the visibility between the white high-rises and the location of the incident, the Chamber is also satisfied that the tram was deliberately targeted by the shooter, who would have been fully aware that it was carrying a large number of civilians.

(8) Zmaja od Bosne street, 3 March 1995 (Scheduled Incident F.16)

3766. The Indictment alleges that on 3 March 1995 Azem Agović, a 46 year old man, and Alen Gičević, a 33 year old man, were shot and wounded while travelling in the eastbound tram on Zmaja od Bosne street. According to the Indictment, the tram was near the Holiday Inn when shot.¹²³⁶⁹ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the bullets were fired from the SRK-controlled area of Grbavica.¹²³⁷⁰ The Accused claims, however, that the fire came from locations in the ABiH-held territory.¹²³⁷¹

3767. On 3 March 1995, Slavica Livnjak, a tram driver by profession, was driving her tram on the Zmaja od Bosne street, travelling eastbound in the direction of Baščaršija, with Miljacka River to the right of the tram.¹²³⁷² There was another tram in front of her.¹²³⁷³ The day was bright and sunny.¹²³⁷⁴ It was the first day of the Bajram holiday.¹²³⁷⁵ Livnjak's tram was full, as it was a period of cease-fire,¹²³⁷⁶ and there were approximately 100 passengers on board, all of whom, according to Livnjak, were civilians.¹²³⁷⁷ Alen Gičević and his girlfriend were passengers on this tram.¹²³⁷⁸ Also on the tram was Azem Agović.¹²³⁷⁹ Gičević, who was an ambulance driver for the ABiH until July 1994,¹²³⁸⁰ was standing on the tram's right-hand side, near the third door, facing Vraca, Grbavica, and the Jewish cemetery.¹²³⁸¹ He was wearing black trousers.¹²³⁸² Around noon, as the first tram slowed down to take the S-curve in front of the Holiday Inn, its right-hand side came under sniper fire.¹²³⁸³ Immediately thereafter, the right hand-side of Livnjak's tram also came under sniper fire.¹²³⁸⁴ Gičević confirmed that, as the tram was passing the area of the Holiday Inn and the S-curve, he heard two to three shots and was wounded above his right knee.¹²³⁸⁵ There was panic on the tram, everybody fell on the floor, and, according to Livnjak, an older man was badly injured in his neck.¹²³⁸⁶ Livnjak wanted to get cover for the tram so she continued driving and brought it to a stop near the Executive Council building.¹²³⁸⁷

¹²³⁷⁶ In fact, according to Slavica Livnjak, the trams were not in operation from the start of the war to March 1994, when they began operating again, but only in a limited circle line around the centre of Sarajevo, Skenderija, and Baščaršija. Nevertheless, in March of 1995, they would pass the Holiday Inn every four minutes or so. See P493 (Transcript from *Prosecutor v. The Accused confronted Alen Gičević with a combat report from the VRS Main Staff which stated that on 3 March 1995 the enemy opened fire in the area of Vrbanja bridge but that the VRS forces were unaffected. When asked if he could see this in the report, Gičević answered in the affirmative and made no other comment about it. 3768. Gičević, helped by his girlfriend, went to the nearby State Hospital.¹²³⁸⁸ He was operated on seven days after the incident and a fragment of the bullet was removed from his knee.¹²³⁸⁹ He continues to feel pain when walking, and also has Hepatitis C, which he believes he contracted through a blood transfusion he received after either this incident or after the sniping incident he was the victim of in 1995.¹²³⁹⁰ Furthermore, he is “struggling somehow with the psychological effects” stemming from the “1.000 days of such uncertainty”.¹²³⁹¹ Agović was brought by a car to Koševo Hospital where he stayed for a month, 16 days of which were in intensive care.¹²³⁹² He required treatment for another three years and initially could not walk far, drive a car, or carry heavy things.¹²³⁹³

3769. Gičević was cross-examined by the Accused on the exact location of the tram when it was struck by fire. Despite his first statement to the Prosecution, in which he appeared to be saying that the tram had already passed the Executive Council building when hit,¹²³⁹⁴ Gičević remained adamant that the tram was hit before it entered the S-curve (and thus before it passed the Executive Council building).¹²³⁹⁵ He explained that he must have made a mistake and that he had always maintained that, once hit, the tram passed the Executive Council building and stopped at Marin Dvor.¹²³⁹⁶ Gičević was also asked about another discrepancy in relation to his position in the tram. While in his original statement he had stated that he was standing on the left hand side of the tram when the tram was struck,¹²³⁹⁷ in his later statement and testimony in these proceedings, he maintained that he was standing on the right hand side of the tram.¹²³⁹⁸ On cross-examination, Gičević remained adamant that he was standing on the right-hand side of the tram when wounded and that, from that position, he could see the Jewish cemetery and Vraca.¹²³⁹⁹

3770. Immediately following the incident, the trams travelling behind Livnjak's tram were signalled by the local police and UNPROFOR soldiers at the scene to continue and stop at a safer spot.¹²⁴⁰⁰ As one UNPROFOR soldier was taking a statement from Livnjak,¹²⁴⁰¹ shots were fired at the incident site again and UNPROFOR returned fire. The exchange lasted for about 15 minutes, resulting in the wounding of an UNPROFOR soldier.¹²⁴⁰²

3771. Livnjak testified that the sniper fire came from her right-hand side, and more specifically from the Metalka building.¹²⁴⁰³ KDZ289 (who was present during this incident) and Livnjak both testified that the second round of fire also came from VRS-held positions in Grbavica.¹²⁴⁰⁴ Livnjak also confirmed that the confrontation line was some 50 to 100 metres away from the scene of the incident, across Miljacka River, and that there were no military facilities in the vicinity of the location at which her tram was attacked, nor was there any fighting at the time of the incident.¹²⁴⁰⁵ On cross-examination, she reiterated that there were no uniformed soldiers (other than UNPROFOR soldiers) or any tanks or mortar/artillery pieces where her tram was shot.¹²⁴⁰⁶ Also during cross-examination, she confirmed that her tram consisted of two cars, with two doors each, connected by an "accordion" and that, as it entered the S-curve, it adopted the shape of a crescent and the second car of the tram was then hit, between the accordion and the third door from the front.¹²⁴⁰⁷

3772. Gičević testified that he was sure that shots came from the south, either from Grbavica or the Jewish cemetery. He also identified two buildings in that area, namely the Metalka building and the tall white high-rise from where he thought the shots could have come from.¹²⁴⁰⁸ He believed that the bullets were fired from one of these two buildings because these buildings were fired from before.¹²⁴⁰⁹ He also stated that there were no military installations near the incident site except for the Maršal Tito Barracks, some 400 to 500 metres away, where UNPROFOR was based.¹²⁴¹⁰ Further to the west of the Maršal Tito Barracks was the building of the traffic police.¹²⁴¹¹ He conceded that the Executive Council building, the Museum complex, the Assembly building, and the Faculty of Philosophy were all in the area of responsibility of the ABiH but said they were “merely observation posts manned by few soldiers”.¹²⁴¹²

3774. When visiting Zmaja od Bosne street with one of the victims, Hogan recorded the coordinates of the location of the incident, placing it at the intersection between Zmaja od Bosne and Franje Račkog streets.¹²⁴²⁹ He also testified that both Metalka and the four white high-rises in Grbavica had a view of this site.¹²⁴³⁰ Van der Weijden also visited the incident site, the Jewish cemetery, and Grbavica.¹²⁴³¹ Having done so he did not consider the Jewish cemetery to have been the source of fire in this incident because of the “lack of warning” for approaching trams coming from the west, which is the direction from which the two trams were travelling on 3 March 1995.¹²⁴³² Van der Weijden visited the Metalka building noting that the rooms in the building offer direct and clear views of the stretch of Zmaja od Bosne, between the Museum and the Faculty of Philosophy.¹²⁴³³ He also determined that the tram would be exposed to the shooter located in the Metalka building for at least eight seconds.¹²⁴³⁴ Noting that there were multiple victims in this incident and having seen the medical reports relating to their injuries, Van der Weijden concluded that most likely automatic fire was used to shoot at the tram, and that the weapons used would have been either an M84 or an M53 machine-gun in 7.62 mm calibre, mounted on a bipod or a tripod.¹²⁴³⁵ He noted that machine-guns are more effective against moving targets, such as trams, that are only temporarily visible.¹²⁴³⁶

3775. Poparić testified that the tram was not hit from the Metalka building but from locations in ABiH-held territory.¹²⁴³⁷ According to him, the wound sustained by Agović, while sitting in a specific seat in the tram, did not correspond with the incoming trajectories of a projectile fired from the Metalka building.¹²⁴³⁸ He based this finding on the specific seat which was photographed by the CSB Sarajevo investigation team and was at an angle of 45 degrees vis-à-vis the tram wall, as well as on the injuries Agović described in his evidence in another case before this, namely that the bullet entered above his left hip, passed through his body, and exited on his right side.¹²⁴³⁹ Poparić did concede, however, that he did not know the specific position Agović was seated in and simply assumed that Agović’s sitting position was “normal”, that is, that he was facing directly forward while in his seat.¹²⁴⁴⁰ Poparić also pointed out that the witnesses all gave contradictory statements as to the location of the tram when hit and stated that even if Gičević's first statement was correct and the tram was hit after it passed the Executive Council building, the fire would have still come from the ABiH-held positions.¹²⁴⁴¹

3776. In addition to the evidence outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire: (i) more than one bullet hit the tram and injured Azem Agović and Alen Gičević;¹²⁴⁴² (ii) the shots came from Grbavica, which was SRK-held territory;¹²⁴⁴³ (iii) the shots were fired by a member of the SRK;¹²⁴⁴⁴ and (iv) the visibility on the day of the incident was sufficient for a shooter to identify the victims as civilians.¹²⁴⁴⁵

3777. As far as the exact location of the incident is concerned, the Chamber notes that the evidence before it places the tram at the intersection of Franje Račkog and Zmaja od Bosne streets at the moment it was shot.¹²⁴⁴⁶ Contrary to Poparić's testimony that the witnesses were inconsistent as to the tram's location, Gičević and Livnjak were in fact consistent on that issue. While at first he seemed to indicate a different location, the Chamber is satisfied with Gičević's explanation as to why that happened and notes that he was adamant that the tram was hit when passing the Holiday Inn and entering the S-curve. The Chamber also notes that Livnjak's evidence was given from the vantage point of a tram driver with another tram targeted in front of her. She first saw the sniping of that tram, as it slowed down to enter the S-curve, and then anticipated that the same would happen to her as she entered the S-curve. The Chamber finds her evidence on the location particularly credible and corroborative of Gičević's evidence. Accordingly, the Chamber is not convinced by Poparić's evidence that all witnesses testified to a different location.

3778. The Chamber further considers that this tram was a civilian vehicle, with around 100 civilians travelling onboard and that both Gičević and Agović were civilians, not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident.

3779. The Chamber does not accept Poparić's evidence that the fire in this incident came from the locations in the ABiH territory. Poparić based this conclusion on the location and nature of Agović's injuries in relation to the location of his seat in the tram and his seating position. He also conceded that he simply assumed Agović's seating position was "normal". However, as noted above, the Chamber heard that the tram was full, with approximately 100 passengers onboard. Thus, it is also possible that Agović was sitting in his chair squeezed into the wall of the tram and thus with his left hip parallel to the wall. However, Poparić does not seem to have even considered that possibility. Further, Poparić never spoke to Agović to determine his actual seating position and the exact nature of his injuries. Accordingly, the Chamber does not accept the conclusions Poparić drew about the origin of fire as they were, at best, highly speculative.

3780. The Chamber is satisfied that the fire originated from Grbavica and more specifically from the Metalka building, which was held by the SRK at the time. In this respect, the Chamber relies on the adjudicated facts as well as the ballistics report which found an angle of descent to have been four degrees, which is in turn consistent with fire coming from Metalka.¹²⁴⁴⁷ Furthermore, the witnesses were all consistent that the source of fire was Metalka. While Gičević thought that the fire could have also come from the Jewish cemetery, Van der Weijden excluded that possibility due to lack of visibility. The Chamber also recalls that following the shooting on the tram, some of the witnesses were able to observe the exchange of fire between UNPROFOR and the SRK in Grbavica thus confirming that the fire on the tram came from SRK-held positions in Grbavica. Given the visibility on the day and relatively small distances involved, the Chamber is also convinced that the SRK shooter deliberately targeted the tram in question while fully aware of its civilian status. The Chamber notes that all these findings are consistent with the evidence it heard about the preponderance of SRK sniper fire in the area of Zmaja od Bosne.¹²⁴⁴⁸

(B) Southwestern suburbs: Dobrinja, Nedžarići, Alipašino Polje

3781. Dobrinja is a suburb of Sarajevo that lies to the western end of Sarajevo, close to the Butmir airport, and was constructed for the Winter Olympics in 1984.¹²⁴⁴⁹ It is divided into several apartment blocks, namely Dobrinja 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, C4, and the Airport Settlement.¹²⁴⁵⁰ It is a predominantly residential area with a number of high-rises, most of which are six storeys high and some of which have seven or eight storeys.¹²⁴⁵¹ The Lukavica Barracks are located to the east of Dobrinja, Butmir airport is to the south of Dobrinja, the suburb of Nedžarići is to the west and northwest of Dobrinja, and Mojmiilo Hill and Alipašino Polje are located to the north of

Dobrinja.¹²⁴⁵² Like Dobrinja, Alipašino Polje is a residential neighbourhood.¹²⁴⁵³ Nedžarići consisted mostly of low buildings, one or two storeys high.¹²⁴⁵⁴

3782. Until mid-June 1992, the Serb Forces held the Butmir airport and Mojmiilo Hill, and were also positioned in Nedžarići and the Lukavica Barracks, thus cutting off communications between Dobrinja and the Sarajevo centre.¹²⁴⁵⁵ In mid-June 1992, the ABiH took control of Mojmiilo Hill thus establishing contact with the city, while the airport was handed over to UNPROFOR in late June 1992.¹²⁴⁵⁶ In addition, after July 1993, Dobrinja was connected to Butmir via a tunnel built by the ABiH under the airport runway; many people would pass through the tunnel, including ABiH units, even though the entrance and the exit were frequently shelled by the Bosnian Serbs.¹²⁴⁵⁷ The purpose of the tunnel was to make it easier to get in and out of Dobrinja and Sarajevo proper, for both soldiers and civilians, and to get humanitarian aid into the city.¹²⁴⁵⁸ People who were not using the tunnel would run across the airstrip to come to Butmir and would get targeted.¹²⁴⁵⁹

3784. Around the end of 1992, after the confrontation line became established, residents of the ABiH-controlled part of Dobrinja became aware of sniping incidents at certain intersections.¹²⁴⁶⁵ Sniping would come mainly from Mojnilo, Lukavica, and Dobrinja 4.¹²⁴⁶⁶ As a result, barricades, usually bags filled with sand, containers, metal sheeting, or blankets, were erected as protection against sniper fire at those locations.¹²⁴⁶⁷ Even with those barricades, however, walking around the neighbourhood and between the buildings was very dangerous.¹²⁴⁶⁸ In addition, the people who went down to the Dobrinja river to fetch water for cooking and washing would get fired at.¹²⁴⁶⁹

3785. There was no water in Dobrinja during the conflict, but there were five wells where people would line up to get water.¹²⁴⁷⁰ These water lines were shelled about 15 or 20 times.¹²⁴⁷¹ There were also fuel and food shortages, especially at the beginning of the conflict, but UNPROFOR eventually provided aid—the French Battalion at the airport and the UN at the PTT building regularly provided food, fuel, and medical supplies to the hospital, which allowed it to survive throughout the war.¹²⁴⁷²

3786. People killed in Dobrinja were buried close to where they were killed, often in parks and people's yards, as the one cemetery in the area was full and it was too dangerous to give them a proper burial.¹²⁴⁷³

(1) Confrontation lines and snipers in the area

3787. Dobrinja was divided between ABiH and VRS units and the confrontation line ran along the road between the apartment blocks referred to as Dobrinja 3 and Dobrinja 4.¹²⁴⁷⁴ Dobrinja 1, Dobrinja 4, and the Airport Settlement were under Serb control.¹²⁴⁷⁵ The SRK's Ilidža Brigade was positioned in the area and its zone of responsibility ran from Dobrinja, across the Airport Settlement, Nedžarići, along the Dobrinja river, Pijačna street, and the railroad to Miljacka River.¹²⁴⁷⁶ The other side of Dobrinja, namely the area between Dobrinja and Lukavica, was first in the zone of responsibility of the 2nd Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade and then was transferred, after August 1993, to the responsibility of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK.¹²⁴⁷⁷

3788. Alipašino Polje was on the ABiH side of the confrontation line which separated it from Nedžarići,¹²⁴⁷⁸ which was under Serb control.¹²⁴⁷⁹ The line at this point extended from west to east and curved into ABiH controlled territory.¹²⁴⁸⁰ The result was that Nedžarići was bordered on three sides by territory controlled by the ABiH; a west-running corridor connected this neighbourhood with the more expansive SRK-controlled territory to the west.¹²⁴⁸¹ The portion of Nedžarići east of Ante Babića street and south of Đure Jakšića street (now renamed Adija Mulaobegovića), where there are higher buildings, was controlled by the ABiH, together with Alipašino Polje.¹²⁴⁸²

3789. Mile Sladoje, who was with the 1st Battalion of the Ilidža Brigade in Nedžarići throughout the war,¹²⁴⁸³ and Svetozar Guzina, who commanded that Battalion from 1993 onwards,¹²⁴⁸⁴ both testified that the 1st Battalion's zone of responsibility included buildings such as the Faculty of Theology and the School for the Blind, as well as the Nedžarići Barracks and a check-point on Kasindolska street.¹²⁴⁸⁵ Guzina explained that both the School for the Blind and the Faculty of Theology were very important facilities in the area—the former was a dominant building and faced the Oslobođenje building and the student dormitories, while the latter was not very tall but dominated that part of the area and had a view of Mojnilo Hill and Dobrinja.¹²⁴⁸⁶ In the area of the School for the Blind, the ABiH and SRK forces were only a few metres apart.¹²⁴⁸⁷ On the other side of Dobrinja, towards Lukavica, was an Orthodox Church, which could be seen from the three bridges that linked Dobrinja 2 to Dobrinja 3.¹²⁴⁸⁸ The church was in the zone of responsibility of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK.¹²⁴⁸⁹

¹²⁴⁸⁹ Blagoje Kovačević, T. 29041 (18 October 2012).

3790. The 1st Battalion numbered about 300 men¹²⁴⁹⁰ and had infantry weapons, 82 and 120 mm mortars, a tank, and two APCs.¹²⁴⁹¹ In terms of infantry weapons, the 1st Battalion had M48 and M76 rifles with scopes.¹²⁴⁹² Vladimir Radojčić, the Commander of the Ilidža Brigade from January 1993,¹²⁴⁹³ testified that the whole Ilidža Brigade had about 30 snipers, half of whom used M76 rifles, while the other half used M48 rifles with improvised sights.¹²⁴⁹⁴ As for the mortars, those were located around the Faculty of Theology, while the tank was at the Nedžarići Barracks.¹²⁴⁹⁵ The Battalion also had machine guns, as well as a recoilless gun, which were positioned at the Faculty of Theology and were used to open fire on Dobrinja 2 and 3 and Alipašino Polje.¹²⁴⁹⁶ Radojčić testified that the Faculty was not used as a sniper nest but rather as an observation post.¹²⁴⁹⁷

3791. While the Ilidža Brigade had snipers in the section of Dobrinja it held, according to Stanislav Galić, the Commander of the SRK between September 1992 and August 1994,¹²⁴⁹⁸ the ABiH controlled the high-rise in Mojnilo and thus had better control and over-view of the area.¹²⁴⁹⁹ Galić also testified that ABiH was most active in the direction of Dobrinja and Nedžarići¹²⁵⁰⁰ and confirmed that parts of ABiH-held Dobrinja were under constant fire.¹²⁵⁰¹

3792. The units opposing the 1st Battalion belonged to the 101st Brigade of the 1st Corps of the ABiH, positioned in Alipašino Polje and Vojničko Polje, and the 102nd Brigade of the 1st Corps of Guzina at first denied having sniper rifles or trained sniper shooters in the battalion, stating that there was no need for them given the proximity of warring parties on the confrontation line. He later explained that the 4th Company of his battalion had three snipers with M76 rifles, which were positioned towards Butmir airport. See Svetozar Guzina, T. 31156–31158 (6 December 2012), T. 31161–31162, 31165–31166 (11 December 2012).

the ABiH located in Stup.¹²⁵⁰² The 155th Brigade of the 1st Corps, formerly known as the Dobrinja Brigade and then as the 5th Brigade, was located in Mojnilo and Dobrinja 5 where there were mainly high-rises from which the ABiH snipers would target 1st Battalion's positions.¹²⁵⁰³ Indeed, Hajir testified that the "local BiH command building" was located some 150 to 200 metres to the west from the Dobrinja Hospital but clarified that the ABiH was never in the hospital itself.¹²⁵⁰⁴ He also explained that at the beginning of the war there was no real army on the Bosnian Muslim side and that the army "in the true sense of the word" was formed later, around August or September 1992.¹²⁵⁰⁵ Galić testified that a larger part of Dobrinja was in the zone of responsibility of the 5th Brigade, later 155th, of the ABiH 1st Corps, which had been estimated to have had some 3,000 troops in the area.¹²⁵⁰⁶ According to him this brigade had a sniper unit since ABiH used specialised sniper units at the brigade level.¹²⁵⁰⁷

3793. According to Sladoje, all ABiH positions were in civilian areas where people lived in apartment buildings and there was not a single "entirely civilian settlement" that did not have a military target in it.¹²⁵⁰⁸ Nevertheless, according to Sladoje and Guzina, the battalion never received or issued any orders to target civilians and the soldiers were explicitly told that civilians

They were also supported by artillery from Mt. Igman. D2479 (Witness statement of Mile Sladoje dated 25 November 2012), para. 10.

¹²⁵⁰⁸ D2479 (Witness statement of Mile Sladoje dated 25 November 2012), para. 11; Mile Sladoje, T. 30570–30571 (28 November 2012). According to Sladoje and Guzina, the following were military targets located in the territory controlled by the ABiH: Standard, Zora, Bitumenka, Oslobodenje, student dormitories, the Geodesic Institute, the Vodovod building in Majdan street, Prvomajska street, Geteova street, Radio Television building, and Fatima Gunić School. See D2479 (Witness statement of Mile Sladoje dated 25 November 2012), paras. 18, 25; D2482 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Mile Sladoje); Mile Sladoje, T. 30571–30573 (28 November 2012);

should not be targeted.¹²⁵⁰⁹ Instead, soldiers were allowed to open fire only in response to enemy fire and only at observed firing positions, which, Sladoje conceded, meant that given the environment there was a high risk of “civilian collateral casualties”.¹²⁵¹⁰ When cross-examined, Guzina conceded that he had said, back in 2003 during his interview with the Prosecution, that any man or woman close to the confrontation lines was considered a threat.¹²⁵¹¹ He also conceded that the targeting by his troops improved as the war went on.¹²⁵¹²

3794. The goal of the 1st Battalion was to prevent the ABiH from reaching Ilidža and connecting with the ABiH forces outside of the Sarajevo ring.¹²⁵¹³ Guzina testified that the lines of disengagement in the 1st Battalion’s zone of responsibility were often only street-width apart, which meant that observation was difficult.¹²⁵¹⁴ He also stated that his soldiers had the right to use a firearm independently, without command, if they or their location were under attack and there was no other way to repel the attack.¹²⁵¹⁵

3795. The UNPROFOR was based in the PTT building in Alipašino Polje, while the Radio Television building was nearby.¹²⁵¹⁶

(2) Dobrinja, 11 July 1993 (Scheduled Incident F.3)

3797. On 11 July 1993, Munira Zametica was filling her bucket with water from the Dobrinja river when she was shot.¹²⁵²² It was too dangerous for Sadija Šahinović and for Vahida Zametica, the 16 year old daughter of the victim, to leave the protection of the bridge over the Dobrinja River in order to assist the victim¹²⁵²³ as the perpetrator repeatedly shot toward Munira Zametica, preventing rescuers from approaching her.¹²⁵²⁴ Vahida Zametica heard the shooting continue and saw the bullets hitting the water near her mother.¹²⁵²⁵ Munira Zametica was lying face down in the river, blood coming out of her mouth.¹²⁵²⁶ ABiH soldiers passing by the bridge saw what had happened, positioned themselves on the bridge behind sandbags and shot in the direction of the Orthodox Church.¹²⁵²⁷ The victim, Munira Zametica, was pulled out of the water and taken to hospital; she died later that afternoon.¹²⁵²⁸

facing the river and trying to reach towards it with a bucket.¹²⁵³⁰ She was located some five metres away downstream from the bridge.¹²⁵³¹

3799. Van der Weijden also visited the incident site, and described it as a canal forming a “natural trench”, thus preventing the victim from being seen from all the buildings lining the canal.¹²⁵³² He explained that he was given the exact location of the victim, who was standing on the river bed on the north bank of the canal, by the Prosecution, but had no information as to which direction she was facing.¹²⁵³³ According to Van der Weijden, the only buildings with a line of sight on the incident site are the apartment block, which is 636 metres away, and the Orthodox Church, which is 1104 metres away.¹²⁵³⁴ Van der Weijden was told by the Prosecution that the apartment block was occupied by the ABiH at the time of the incident while the SRK troops occupied the red roofed apartment buildings across the street, the latter offering no view on the incident site.¹²⁵³⁵ He thus concluded that the shooter was most likely located in the Orthodox Church tower since (i) ABiH troops were unlikely to have their focus on the canal with their enemy so near by in the red roofed apartment buildings; (ii) the tower of the church was under construction at the time, thus providing a good location for a sniper nest or even a machine gun emplacement; and (iii) the church offered a clear unobstructed view of the incident site.¹²⁵³⁶ Van der Weijden never visited the Orthodox Church tower, however.¹²⁵³⁷

3800. During cross-examination, Van der Weijden accepted that his conclusion gave only the “most likely” position of the shooter.¹²⁵³⁸ However, he rejected the Accused’s contention that Zametica was killed as a result of the exchange of fire,¹²⁵³⁹ noting that the civilians collecting water

¹²⁵³⁹ The Accused based this claim on the statement of Sadija Šahinović in which she said that on her way to the river she heard “sniper fire” and was told by the people hiding under the bridge that the bullets were hitting the water. She also stated that two people managed to get water without being hit before Munira Zametica was shot. See Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7162–7163 (29 September 2010).

were located under ground level so the ABiH forces would have had to have been in the water for there to have been an exchange of fire and, if so, would have been exposed to the SRK fire.¹²⁵⁴⁰

3801. Van der Weijden further opined that the calibre of the bullet used in this incident was either 7.62 mm or 7.92mm and would not have been greater than 7.92mm as that would have caused far more serious damage.¹²⁵⁴¹ Thus, the most likely weapon used was a semi-automatic rifle, probably an M76 or M91, although the distance of 1,100 metres would be an extreme range for those rifles.¹²⁵⁴² This is why, according to Van der Weijden, the people saw bullets hitting the river before the incident as the shooter probably tried to target them but failed because of the great distance involved; in other words, according to Van der Weijden, the shooter was simply bracketing the distance.¹²⁵⁴³ Van der Weijden concluded, based on all of the above, that the shooter would have been able to identify the victim as an adult woman fetching water from the canal.¹²⁵⁴⁴

3802. Poparić accepted that there was a line of sight between the top of the Orthodox Church and the incident site.¹²⁵⁴⁵ However, he testified that Zametica most likely died as a result of an exchange of fire between the two forces positioned in the area, although not from the Orthodox Church.¹²⁵⁴⁶ He based his conclusion on several grounds. First, even though the time of the incident was uncertain,¹²⁵⁴⁷ Poparić argued that regardless of whether the incident took place in the afternoon or in the evening, the shooter would not have been able to identify the victim as a civilian

¹²⁵⁴⁷ With respect to the uncertainty of the time of the incident, Poparić refers to Šahinović’s testimony in the Galić case where she first said that she and Zametica went to fetch water as the night was about to fall but then corrected herself when prompted by the Prosecution, saying that they went to the river between 2 and 3 p.m.. Poparić also refers to the official BiH MUP report, which has not been tendered into evidence by the parties in this case, and which records the time of the incident as being between 7 and 7:30 p.m.. Poparić further refers to Zametica’s death certificate which records the time of death as 4 p.m. and the evidence of her daughter in the Galić cases who was at the scene and who testified that the incident took place between 2 and 2:30 p.m.. Having outlined all of the above evidence, Poparić concluded that the BiH MUP’s official report was the most reliable source and thus is of the view that the incident happened between 7 and 7:30 p.m.. See D4884 (Mile Poparić’s expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 63–64, 67; Mile Poparić, T. 38947–38948 (29 May 2013), T. 39199–39201 (4 June 2013).

nor hit her twice from a distance of 1,100 metres¹²⁵⁴⁸ because she would have been in the shadow in the afternoon or because, at twilight, the visibility would have been bad.¹²⁵⁴⁹ Second, Poparić points out that, according to eyewitness's evidence, there was sniper fire throughout that day but two people nevertheless summoned the courage and collected water, one by one, before Zametica went to collect the water herself; to Poparić this meant that people knew that the bullets hitting the river were not intended for them but were the result of exchanges of fire.¹²⁵⁵⁰ Third, Poparić argues that the two ABiH soldiers who returned fire were not simply passing by, as testified to by Šahinović in the Galić case, but were on duty, positioned on the bridge.¹²⁵⁵¹ This, he argues, is confirmed by the fact that the bridge was protected by sandbags which were up to two metres high, according to the witnesses, leading him to conclude that there were holes in the sandbags through which soldiers could shoot; in other words, the sandbags were not there to protect the civilians but to protect the ABiH forces.¹²⁵⁵² Finally, Poparić testified that he went to the Orthodox Church tower and that he would never place a sniper there as the space was too small to be secured by sandbags and was exposed so that it could easily be destroyed by a rocket-launcher.¹²⁵⁵³ He did concede, however, that he did not know what the church tower looked like at the time of the incident.¹²⁵⁵⁴ He was also not privy to the report from the ABiH intelligence organ, dated 2 October 1993, which provides as follows:

¹²⁵⁴⁹ Poparić argues that if the incident happened in the afternoon, the place where Zametica was collecting water would have been under a shadow, created by the sandbags, which in turn would have “greatly interfered” with the shooter's ability to identify her as a civilian and strike her from that distance. Similarly, if the incident happened during twilight, conditions would have been such that the shooter would not be able to deliberately target a person who was bending over. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 66–67; Mile Poparić, T. 38951–38952 (29 May 2013). When cross-examined on this conclusion, Poparić conceded that he did not take any photographs of this shadow when he visited the incident site but explained that that would have been pointless as the sandbags were not there. See Mile Poparić, T. 39210–39213 (4 June 2013).

¹²⁵⁵⁰ D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 64–65.

¹²⁵⁵¹ Poparić reached this conclusion by arguing that the ABiH was organised “under the same principles as the JNA” and thus the transfer of duty would normally take place in the mornings, meaning that these two men could not have been reporting for or returning from duty. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 65, 67. When cross-examined on this conclusion, he conceded that he never participated in combat and never served in the ABiH. When asked if ever identified the two ABiH soldiers in question or tried to interview them, he responded in the negative but explained that he thought they were probably on duty because they were armed. See Mile Poparić, T. 39206–39209 (4 June 2013).

From Dobrinja IV towards the [Orthodox Church], the enemy has made a connection trench, and in the area behind the garage, a bunker was built from which they open fire only at night. The area around the church towards our positions is mined with anti-personnel mines. The enemy uses the church at Veljine exclusively as an observation post. According to our information till now in the church there are 6 observers per shift. The observers are armed with snipers and pam /anti-aircraft machine-gun/ which is in a well fortified nest in the church. From the church fire is rarely being opened, and when it is opened, a sniper with a silencer is used.¹²⁵⁵⁵

3803. When asked if this report contradicted his opinion that a sniper should not be placed in the church tower, Poparić insisted that the report classified the post as an observer's post from which fire was seldom opened.¹²⁵⁵⁶

3804. Dragomir Milošević testified that according to his information there was no "activity" from the Orthodox Church and denied that the origin of fire that killed Zametica was the Orthodox Church as soldiers were not allowed to climb the church tower.¹²⁵⁵⁷ He also excluded the possibility that Zametica was deliberately targeted and noted that if this were the case then it did not come about as a result of an order or permission from the SRK.¹²⁵⁵⁸ Galić testified that he never received reports about sniping incidents such as the one involving Zametica and noted that he did not remember his soldiers ever going to the Orthodox Church because it was a new building at the time and was damaged by recoilless gun-fire from Mojmiilo Hill.¹²⁵⁵⁹ Galić also stated that he never ordered or received a report that one of his subordinates ordered this attack.¹²⁵⁶⁰ When asked why a combat report sent by the SRK Command to the VRS Main Staff, on 11 July 1993 at 5 p.m. provides that "provocative enemy fire" was opened "along most of the corps' defence line" but makes no mention of the incident involving Zametica, Galić explained that this was a time of the Lukavac 93 operation, which meant that all forces on both sides were engaged on the other side of the airport, near Dobrinja.¹²⁵⁶¹

¹²⁵⁵⁵ P6360 (ABiH 1st Motorised Battalion report, 2 October 1993), p. 2. The information in this report was confirmed by Thomas, who visited an ABiH sniping location in a school in Dobrinja, which was located opposite to the Orthodox Church from which, according to Thomas, the Serbs were firing into Dobrinja. See P1558 (Witness statement of Francis Roy Thomas dated 13 May 2009), paras. 1, 64. See Adjudicated Fact 92.

¹²⁵⁵⁶ Mile Poparić, T. 39201–39205 (4 June 2013). Poparić was also referred to his conclusion that Šahinović's claim in the Galić case that she did not hear the bullets meant either that her hearing was impaired or that a silencer was used. When asked if the ABiH report of 3 October 1993 confirmed his theory that a silencer was used and responded that this was a possibility. See Mile Poparić, T. 39205–39206 (4 June 2013).

¹²⁵⁶¹ Stanislav Galić, T. 37498–37500 (22 April 2013); D3418 (SRK combat report, 11 July 1993). The next day, on 12 July 1993, Galić ordered the continuation of operation Lukavica 93 but never ordered any activity against Dobrinja. See T. 37391–37393 (18 April 2013); D3419 (SRK Order, 12 July 1993).

3805. The Chamber also took judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts which provide as follows: (i) there was a line of sight between the tower of the Orthodox Church and the incident site;¹²⁵⁶² (ii) the area of the Orthodox Church from where the fire came was within SRK-controlled territory;¹²⁵⁶³ (iii) at a distance of 1,100 metres, a well-equipped perpetrator would have been able to observe the civilian appearance of Zametica;¹²⁵⁶⁴ and (iv) on 11 July 1993, Zametica, a civilian, was deliberately shot from SRK-held territory.¹²⁵⁶⁵

3806. The Chamber notes that, in addition to the unpersuasive evidence of Galić and Milošević,¹²⁵⁶⁶ the only substantive evidence the Accused brought to rebut the above adjudicated facts was that of Poparić. However, the Chamber finds his analysis unconvincing as it is based on numerous tenuous speculations, often on issues that are completely outside of his area of expertise. For example, the Chamber is not convinced by Poparić's claim that because people ventured to the riverbank after having seen bullets hitting the river, they knew this was not sniper fire but thought it was an exchange of fire. The Chamber considers this to be pure speculation as it is equally plausible that the people in question, including Zametica, saw sniper fire but decided to wait until they felt it was safe to approach the river. The Chamber also cannot accept Poparić's claim that the two ABiH soldiers who returned fire were on duty at the time of the incident as he bases it on the fact that they were armed and that in the JNA, on which ABiH was supposedly based, the soldiers would transfer duty in the mornings. Having not served in the ABiH or even the SRK, Poparić's musings on when ABiH soldiers would transfer their duty and/or carry their weapons is baseless and outside of his expertise. Indeed, his opinions on military strategy in general were proven wrong when he was shown a document clearly indicating—contrary to his opinion—that the SRK had a post in the Orthodox Church tower from which it opened sniper fire, albeit seldomly. The Chamber also does not accept Poparić's analysis that the incident must have happened in the evening as opposed to the afternoon, given that he relies on the BiH MUP official note which was, as shown during his cross-examination, corrected by Sadija Šahinović during her testimony in the Galić case. Furthermore, his claim that if the incident happened in the afternoon Zametica would have been hidden by a shadow of the sandbags is pure speculation as the sandbags were not there ¹²⁵⁶² See Adjudicated Fact 168.

¹²⁵⁶³ See Adjudicated Fact 169.

¹²⁵⁶⁴ See Adjudicated Fact 170.

¹²⁵⁶⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 172.

¹²⁵⁶⁶ The Chamber acknowledges that both Galić and Milošević testified that the Orthodox Church could not have been the source of fire in this incident because it was not used by the SRK soldiers. However, the Chamber is more persuaded by the report of the ABiH intelligence organ, dated 2 October 1993, in which the church is mentioned as an observation post and an occasional source of sniper fire, particularly as this seems to be corroborated by the evidence of Thomas. See para. 3802.

when he visited the incident site. For all those reasons, the Chamber has decided to discount most of Poparić's analysis on this incident.

3807. The Chamber notes, however, that both Poparić and Van der Weijden agree that there was a line of sight between the Orthodox Church tower and the incident site, and is therefore satisfied that such line of sight did exist.¹²⁵⁶⁷ The Chamber also acknowledges that Poparić and Van der Weijden are united in their view that the distance of 1,100 metres was somewhat extreme for the sniper rifle most likely used in this attack. The Chamber recalls, however, that neither Poparić nor Van der Weijden testified that it would have been impossible to hit Zametica from that distance, only that the probability of hitting her deliberately was lower than it would have been if she were 800 metres away from the origin of fire.¹²⁵⁶⁸ Further, Van der Weijden thought that the shots fired by the sniper prior to the killing of Zametica were indicative of the sniper "bracketing" or judging the distance immediately prior to the incident, thus preparing to hit his target when it appeared.

¹²⁵⁶⁷ In addition, the Chamber has been to the incident site during the site visit and confirmed that the line of sight does exist. The Chamber recalls that in its Order on Submissions for a Site Visit, dated 15 November 2010, at paragraph 6, it stated that the purpose of its site visit to Sarajevo was not to gather evidence or receive any submissions from the parties but to permit the Chamber to become more familiar with the topography of certain key locations and thus assist it in its determination of the charges in the Indictment related to Sarajevo.

(3) Nikole Demonje street, 6 January 1994 (Scheduled Incident F.6)

3810. The Indictment alleges that, on 6 January 1994, Sanija Dževlan, a 32 year old woman, was shot and wounded in her buttocks while riding a bicycle across a bridge on Nikole Demonje street in Dobrinja.¹²⁵⁶⁹ According to the Prosecution, Dževlan was hit while on the northwest side of the bridge by fire that originated from the SRK positions in the direction of the Orthodox Church some 800 metres away.¹²⁵⁷⁰ The Accused argues that Dževlan was not hit by fire that originated at the Orthodox Church as she would have been difficult to detect from that distance.¹²⁵⁷¹

3811. On 6 January 1994, Sanija Dževlan was cycling home from the Dobrinja Hospital where she had gone to pick up medication for her mother.¹²⁵⁷² When crossing the bridge over the Dobrinja river, connecting Dobrinja 2 with Dobrinja 3, on Nikole Demonje street,¹²⁵⁷³ she was shot at and wounded in the buttocks.¹²⁵⁷⁴ Dževlan felt a blow but only realised she had been wounded once she saw three or four more bullets ricocheting from the concrete on the street.¹²⁵⁷⁵ She did not know how many bullets had struck her,¹²⁵⁷⁶ but the medical report relating to her injuries noted “an entry-exit wound through both gluteal areas”.¹²⁵⁷⁷ She managed to cycle home where she was helped by her neighbours and taken to the hospital, from which she was discharged ten days later.¹²⁵⁷⁸ The day after Dževlan was shot, another person was brought to the hospital, having been shot in the same location.¹²⁵⁷⁹

During cross-examination Sanija Dževlan indicated that she thought that she was hit with two bullets, even though originally she said she did not know how many bullets had hit her. However, on the basis of the medical report the Chamber is of the view that there was only one entry-exit wound rather than two and that therefore only one bullet hit and injured Sanija Dževlan. 3812. Dževlan was the only person in the area at the time of the shooting and was wearing brown pants and a yellow jacket; she had very long hair which was not tied up, carried no weapon, and there was no military equipment nearby.¹²⁵⁸⁰ Dževlan testified that the day was “exceptionally quiet” as there was no sniping or shelling,¹²⁵⁸¹ and that it was still daylight and the visibility was good.¹²⁵⁸² During her testimony in the Galić case, Dževlan testified that the shooting happened sometime between 3 and 4 p.m..¹²⁵⁸³ However, in her earlier statement to the BiH police, dated 30 September 1994, she stated that the incident occurred at 4:30 p.m..¹²⁵⁸⁴ When asked about this discrepancy, she explained that she did not know the exact time of the incident as she was not wearing a watch when she was wounded.¹²⁵⁸⁵ However, she noted that it must have been daylight, as it would have been impossible to move at night time due to the lack of electricity in the neighbourhood, and also explained that she had left her house around 3 p.m. to go to the nearby hospital and pick up the medication.¹²⁵⁸⁶ explained that there were barricades on both sides of the bridge, and noted that she was shot as soon as she emerged from behind them, while getting off the bridge on its northern side.¹²⁵⁹⁰

3814. Hogan visited the site of the incident and recorded Dževlan's exact location when she was shot.¹²⁵⁹¹ Van der Weijden visited the same location and noted, bearing in mind that the shots came from the victim's right, that is east-southeast,¹²⁵⁹² that while the bridge was largely screened off from view to the east and southeast, there were "uncovered stretches at both sides of the bridge".¹²⁵⁹³ He thought that the shooter must have seen Dževlan when she was getting on the bridge on the south side, as there was also a non-screened part on that side, and then waited for her to get off the bridge on the north side.¹²⁵⁹⁴ The only buildings located east of the bridge that had a line of sight on the bridge were the apartment block, which is 355 metres away, and the Orthodox Church, which is 820 metres away.¹²⁵⁹⁵ Van der Weijden was told that the apartment block was occupied by the ABiH at the time of the incident while the SRK troops occupied the red roofed apartment buildings across the street, the latter offering no view of the incident site.¹²⁵⁹⁶ Van der Weijden concluded that the shooter was most likely located in the Orthodox Church tower since (i) ABiH troops were unlikely to have their focus on the bridge with their enemy so near by in the red roofed apartment buildings; (ii) the tower of the church was under construction at the time, thus providing a good location for a sniper nest or even a machine gun emplacement; and (iii) the church offered a clear unobstructed view of the incident site.¹²⁵⁹⁷ As noted earlier,¹²⁵⁹⁸ Van der Weijden never visited the Orthodox Church tower.¹²⁵⁹⁹ Noting all of the information above, he concluded that the shooter would be able to identify the victim as an adult woman on a bike.¹²⁶⁰⁰

3815. Van der Weijden also noted that the calibre of the bullet used in this incident would not have been greater than 7.92 mm as bullets of such calibre would have caused far more serious damage.¹²⁶⁰¹ He recalled Dževlan's evidence that she heard multiple bullets and assumed that this was a reference to automatic fire, which led him to conclude that the weapon used was a medium machine-gun, either an M84 or an M53 which can fire with 7.62 mm or 7.92 mm bullets.¹²⁶⁰² He also explained that these machine-guns can be mounted on a tripod and fitted with a telescopic sight which makes them suitable for long-range engagements.¹²⁶⁰³ Van der Weijden conceded that his conclusions in relation to the calibre of the bullet used were speculative, but denied the Accused's suggestion that the VRS did not possess 7.92 mm calibre bullets, noting that he personally saw "Serbian troops" with machine guns in that calibre.¹²⁶⁰⁴ The Chamber recalls that Galić confirmed that SRK had various M48 rifles of 7.92 millimetre calibre, which had optical sights and which were referred to as sniping rifles.¹²⁶⁰⁵

3816. On cross-examination, Van der Weijden was asked why he excluded the possibility that the shooter was located between the apartment block and the victim, and responded that that area was an open field, which meant that the shooter would be exposed to fire from all sides, and thus would be risking his own life.¹²⁶⁰⁶ Van der Weijden also confirmed that the confrontation line was around 400 metres to the east from the location of the incident and that the view of the bridge from that confrontation line was obstructed by the apartment block mentioned above.¹²⁶⁰⁷ When asked if he would conclude that the victim simply cycled into the line of fire given that she was shot as soon as she left the confines of the metal screen on the bridge, Van der Weijden, conceding that this was a possibility, said that he would not necessarily conclude so since the victim was visible before she cycled onto the bridge and thus the shooter could have been waiting for her to come out on the other side.¹²⁶⁰⁸ The Accused cross-examined Van der Weijden on visibility in the Sarajevo valley at 4:30 p.m. but the latter was only able to agree that the surroundings would impact on visibility and that the time of day would be relevant to a shooter but that the shooter's efficacy would also depend on the equipment used.¹²⁶⁰⁹

3817. Poparić testified that in his view Dževlan was shot from a much shorter distance than the Orthodox Church and by a bullet that was directed at the asphalt but then ricocheted, which to him implied that this was an accident and that the shooter was trying to scare her.¹²⁶¹⁰ He based his conclusion on several grounds. First, in his view the incident took place around 4:30 p.m. as first stated by Dževlan in her statement to the BiH MUP,¹²⁶¹¹ which meant that visibility was low, such that a sniper located at a distance of over 800 metres away would not have been able to see her.¹²⁶¹² Second, even if visibility was good at the time of the incident, Poparić concluded that she could not have been shot from the church because the sniper would have had to start shooting some 0.99 seconds before Dževlan came into his view.¹²⁶¹³ Third, Poparić noted that Dževlan testified that she was hit by two bullets which would not have been possible given the time needed for each of those bullets to reach the incident site and the time she would have been visible and exposed to the sniper.¹²⁶¹⁴ Finally, Poparić observed that the incident site was not a location known for being exposed to sniping from VRS positions and that, therefore, this incident did not involve a sniper but an automatic weapon.¹²⁶¹⁵

¹²⁶¹⁰ D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 95.

¹²⁶¹¹ Poparić bases this conclusion on the fact that Dževlan went to visit her mother in the Dobrinja Hospital after 3 p.m. and that, since the visiting hours officially finished at 4 p.m. (but would often be "prolonged by an extra 15 minutes or so"), it was more likely that she was cycling back home around 4:30 p.m.. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 88–89. However, Dževlan never went to visit her mother in the hospital – instead she went to buy medication for her mother. See para. 3811. See also Mile Poparić, T. 39164–39168 (4 June 2013); T. 39259–39260 (5 June 2013).

¹²⁶¹² To establish poor visibility, Poparić compiled a number of photos of the area taken on 6 January 2012 around 4:30 p.m.. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 88–91; Mile Poparić, T. 38963–38964 (29 May 2013).

¹²⁶¹³ Poparić bases this analysis on (i) the distance between the church and the incident site (which he says is 855 metres according to Google Maps), (ii) Dževlan's position when shot (which he obtained from the video footage of Barry Hogan with Dževlan) and the estimated distance between her and the protective fence on the bridge, (iii) the estimated distance she must have covered to go from one exposed side of the bridge to another, (iv) the estimated time Dževlan would have taken to cycle through that distance (based on average cycling speed of a female cyclist aged 35), and (v) the estimated time a bullet fired by an M84 rifle and travelling at its highest velocity would take to reach the incident site. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 92–93; Mile Poparić, T. 38961–38963 (29 May 2013).

3818. Galić, in addition to his testimony about the Orthodox Church referred to above,¹²⁶¹⁶ testified that he did not receive a report about this incident or issued orders to fire on that area.¹²⁶¹⁷ When shown a regular combat report sent by the SRK Command to the VRS Main Staff on 6 January 1994 at 5 p.m. which makes no mention of the incident, Galić stated, noting that this was the eve of the Orthodox Christmas, that the SRK respected all religious holidays and would refrain from activities on such days.¹²⁶¹⁸ On cross-examination, when confronted with an UNMO summary of events for the week ending on 6 January 1994, showing that the VRS was shelling northern and western areas of the city, together with the centre, all week long, Galić explained that all of the shelling happened outside of Dobrinja and that he could not see any link to the incident in which Dževlan was wounded.¹²⁶¹⁹ In any event, according to him, the SRK was engaged in defensive action at the time as it had been attacked by the ABiH on 5 January.¹²⁶²⁰

3819. The Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts: (i) Dževlan's clothing, the activity she was engaged in (riding a bicycle), and the fact that she was unarmed were indicia of her civilian status and would have put a perpetrator on notice of her civilian status;¹²⁶²¹ (ii) the bullet, coming from Dževlan's right-hand side, came from the direction of the Orthodox Church located approximately 800 metres from the site of the incident,¹²⁶²² and (iii) Dževlan was a civilian who was deliberately targeted from SRK-controlled territory.¹²⁶²³

¹²⁶²⁴ As noted earlier (see fn. 12566), the Chamber acknowledges that both Galić and Milošević testified that the Orthodox Church was not used by the SRK soldiers for sniping. However, the Chamber is more persuaded by the report of the ABiH intelligence organ, dated 2 October 1993, in which the church is mentioned as an observation post and an occasional source of sniper fire, particularly as this seems to be confirmed by the evidence of Francis Roy Thomas.

Poparić's calculations as to the time Dževlan would have taken to cross the bridge are based on the average cycling speed of a woman aged 35. However, there is nothing to suggest that this is the speed at which Dževlan cycled on that day and he never spoke to her to confirm that fact. Accordingly, Poparić's analysis that a sniper located on the Orthodox Church tower would not have been able to deliberately target Dževlan is misguided. For the same reason, his argument that it was even less likely for her to be hit by two bullets is equally flawed, particularly given that the gun most likely used in this incident was a semi-automatic gun. Accordingly, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's evidence in relation to this incident.

3821. Bearing in mind her clothing and the fact that she was cycling, the Chamber is satisfied that Dževlan was a civilian and was not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident. The Chamber is also satisfied that there was a line of sight between her location on the bridge—when she cycled outside of the protective barrier—and the Orthodox Church. In addition, the distance between the two locations was such that a sniper positioned in the Orthodox Church would have been able to observe Dževlan's civilian status. The Chamber also accepts Dževlan's evidence that it was daylight at the time of the incident and that the visibility was good and finds that, contrary to Poparić's claim, she would have been an easy target for a sniper located in the Orthodox Church, particularly given the range of the gun most likely used in this incident. The Chamber recalls Dževlan's evidence that the day was quiet and that she did not hear fire prior to getting shot. Accordingly, the Chamber is not convinced by the Accused's claim that she cycled into the line of fire, nor is it convinced by Poparić's conclusion that the incident happened by accident while the shooter was trying to scare her, as there appears to be no basis for that conclusion other than that Dževlan heard a bullet ricochet. Bearing in mind Van der Weijden's analysis as to why the Orthodox Church tower was the most likely origin of fire, and coupling that with Dževlan's testimony as to the direction the fire came from, the Chamber is of the view that she was hit by a bullet that originated from the Orthodox Church. Further, given that the church was located in the SRK-held territory, the Chamber finds that Dževlan was shot by an SRK sniper. Finally, since that sniper needed to carefully plan his shot from the moment Dževlan cycled onto the bridge until the moment she left the safety of the protective barrier, the Chamber has no doubt that the SRK sniper deliberately targeted her, fully aware that she was a civilian.

(4) Nikole Demonje street and Bulevar AVNOJ, 25 May 1994
(Scheduled Incident F.7)

3822. The Indictment alleges that, on 25 May 1994, Sehadeta Plivac, a 53 year old woman, and Hajra Hafizović, a 62 year old woman, were both shot and wounded in their legs while travelling in a crowded bus near the junction of Nikole Demonje and Bulevar AVNOJ (currently Bulevar Branioca Dobrinje) in Dobrinja.¹²⁶²⁵ According to the Prosecution, the fire came from Nedžarići which was an SRK-held area and from which there was a direct sight to the incident location.¹²⁶²⁶ The Accused denies that the fire came from the VRS positions and argues that the bullet must have come from a “relatively short distance”.¹²⁶²⁷

3823. In 1994, Ramiz Grabovica, an ABiH conscript in logistics, was employed by the public transport company to drive civilians on a regularly scheduled bus route between the Alipašino bridge and Dobrinja during cease-fires.¹²⁶²⁸ On 25 May 1994, a sunny day, at approximately 11:40 a.m., Grabovica reached his last stop at the intersection of Nikole Demonje street and Omladinskih Brigada street in the centre of Dobrinja, stopped the red and white bus, opened the three doors of the bus and turned off the engine to save fuel.¹²⁶²⁹ The bus was visibly a civilian vehicle, which only functioned during cease-fires along a regularly scheduled bus route.¹²⁶³⁰ As he waited for passengers to board, Grabovica heard a single shot coming from the direction of Nedžarići, which was controlled by the SRK, precipitating panic on the bus.¹²⁶³¹ Ramiz Grabovica saw that two middle-aged women had been injured.¹²⁶³² The one sitting on the right side of the bus was holding her knee and the other sitting in the opposite side of the aisle was bleeding profusely.¹²⁶³³ The victims, Sehadeta Plivac and Hajra Hafizović, were taken off the bus and remained at the hospital where they received medical assistance.¹²⁶³⁴ Medical documentation in evidence records that Hafizović was wounded in “both lower legs (through-and-through wounds)”, while Plivac was wounded by a sniper bullet in the “upper part of the right lower leg” and had to have surgery so that a “foreign object retained in popliteal area” could be removed.¹²⁶³⁵

3824. Hogan visited the site of the incident with Ramiz Grabovica and filmed the visit while Grabovica indicated the exact location of the bus when shot at, as well as the location of the two victims when wounded.¹²⁶³⁶ Grabovica can be seen in the video footage indicating that the front of the bus was facing southwest, that the shots hit the right hand-side of the bus and came from the northwest, that is, from the direction of Nedžarići.¹²⁶³⁷

3825. Van der Weijden also went to the site of the incident where he was told by the Prosecution that the bus was parked with its nose orientated south/southwest and its right side exposed down the Branioca Dobrinje street to the northwest.¹²⁶³⁸ According to his report, the bullet that wounded the victims penetrated the wall of the bus on its right hand side, struck the knee of one of the victims, and then hit the other victim on the other side of the bus.¹²⁶³⁹ Van der Weijden noted that there were no possible shooting positions for some 550 metres away from the incident in the direction of the northwest, including between the protective barricades that were located at the end of the Branioca Dobrinje street and the incident site, as the shooter would have had to lean outside one of the buildings lining the street in order to shoot.¹²⁶⁴⁰ Therefore, the shooter must have been beyond that distance and above ground level to be able to see the bus.¹²⁶⁴¹ While his report notes that the alleged shooting position was the Faculty of Theology in Nedžarići, Van der Weijden testified that he never visited that location and was in fact unable to determine the precise location of the shooter because the area had been heavily rebuilt since the time of the incident.¹²⁶⁴²

3826. Since there was a lack of possible shooting positions closer than 550 metres away, the bullet that was used was most probably of a 7.62 mm or 7.92 mm calibre. Furthermore, given the distance and the fact that only one shot was heard, it is most likely that a sniper rifle, either an M76

¹²⁶⁴⁰ In response to a question by the Chamber, Van der Weijden conceded that if located on the top of one of the high-rise buildings lining the Branioca Dobrinje street on the ABiH side of the confrontation line, the shooter could have had a view of the incident site. See Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7066–7069 (28 September 2010); P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled “Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo ‘92–’94”), pp. 53–54. The Chamber notes that in its Final Brief the Prosecution argues that the building mentioned by the Chamber during this questioning did not exist at the time. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix C, para. 35. While that may be so, the Chamber also notes that Van der Weijden’s answer to the question seemed to be broader, referring to “a high-rise” and that it therefore covered any of the high-rise buildings lining the street in existence at the time of the incident.

¹²⁶⁴¹ Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7066–7069 (28 September 2010); P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled “Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo ‘92–’94”), pp. 53–54. On cross-examination, Van der Weijden conceded that he did not know which part of the right hand side of the bus was penetrated by the bullet and did not have access to any forensic or criminal investigation reports in relation to the incident, but claimed that this information was not necessary as he never established the exact location of the origin of fire, only a general direction and the general area from which it came. He also denied that he was told to place the origin of fire on the Serb side of the confrontation line. Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7062, 7066–7068 (28 September 2010); P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled “Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo ‘92–’94”), p. 53.

or an M91, was used.¹²⁶⁴³ According to Van der Weijden, it would have been impossible to identify the passengers inside the bus from that distance but given that the bus was coloured in red and was stationary it would have been easily identifiable as a civilian vehicle.¹²⁶⁴⁴ On cross-examination, Van der Weijden conceded that the only conclusion he was able to reach about this incident, based on the information provided to him by the Prosecution, was that the bullet could have come down the Branioca Dobrinje street and that it was “probably of a certain calibre”.¹²⁶⁴⁵

3827. In his report Poparić focused on the Faculty of Theology arguing that the bullet could not have come from there, as alleged by Grabovica in the Galić case, because the faculty was 1,527 metres away (and thus too far for either a sniper rifle or machine-gun to reach) and there was also no line of sight between the two locations.¹²⁶⁴⁶ However, the Chamber notes that the evidence tendered by the Prosecution in relation to this incident does not suggest that the fire came from the Faculty of Theology.¹²⁶⁴⁷ Instead, as noted above, the Prosecution argues that the fire came from Nedžarići generally.¹²⁶⁴⁸ Accordingly, the Chamber will not focus solely on the Faculty of Theology as the origin of fire.

Van der Weijden reiterated that he saw weapons that use those bullets at Serb check-points in Sarajevo throughout the war. Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7070–7071 (28 September 2010). Sladoje also testified that there was no line of sight between the Faculty of Theology and the incident site, and that the distance between the two was around 1,500 metres. He further noted that his battalion did not have a sniper with such a range and denied that there was a sniper in the Faculty of Theology. According to him, his battalion placed a recoilless gun at the Faculty in order to be able to neutralise enemy positions and sniper nests in high-rises in Vojničko Polje and Mojmiilo. See D2479 (Witness statement of Mile Sladoje dated 25 November 2012), paras. 6, 29; Mile Sladoje, T. 30577 (28 November 2012). On the other hand, Guzina testified that the 1st Battalion had machine guns in the Faculty of Theology. He did confirm, however, that the Faculty was some 1,500 metres away from the location of the incident site and that the latter was not visible from the former. D2553 (Witness statement of Svetozar Guzina dated 3 December 2012), para. 44. See also D2562 (Witness statement of Vladimir Radojčić dated 8 December 2012), para. 116.

¹²⁶⁴⁷ Indeed, Poparić was aware of that but testified that he nevertheless chose to examine that location as it was often mentioned as the source of fire for this incident. Mile Poparić, T. 38970, 38974–38975 (30 May 2013); D4884 (Mile Poparić’s expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), p. 103.

¹²⁶⁴⁸ See para. 3822. Indeed, the adjudicated facts related to this incident, namely Adjudicated Facts 204, 206, and 207, do not suggest that the Faculty of Theology was the origin of fire.

soldiers did not have a line of sight from those positions.¹²⁶⁴⁹ Furthermore, the protective screens were placed on Nikole Demonje street in order to protect the command of the ABiH Brigade which was located in the street, which meant that armed ABiH soldiers must have been in the area securing the facility.¹²⁶⁵⁰

3829. Sladoje, an assistant commander of the 1st Battalion of the Ilidža Brigade positioned in the area of Nedžarići at the time of the incident,¹²⁶⁵¹ testified that no one from his battalion's command issued orders to fire at the street where the incident happened.¹²⁶⁵² While conceding during cross-examination that the very front of his battalion's defence position was approximately 550 metres from the incident site, Sladoje denied that the fire on the bus could have come from that position because the ABiH forces in Dobrinja 5 were only 100 to 150 metres away and, in addition, Dobrinja 5 was "sheltering" Dobrinja 2 and 3.¹²⁶⁵³ Guzina, however, conceded that it was possible that the fire came from the VRS side of the confrontation line but not from the Faculty of Theology.¹²⁶⁵⁴ Radojčić testified that he never received any information about this incident.¹²⁶⁵⁵ Similarly, Stanislav Galić testified that he received no reports about this incident and noted that there was a general ban on opening fire on public transport as it was well known that passengers were civilians.¹²⁶⁵⁶

3830. The Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts which state that: (i) the passengers of the bus were targeted from the area of Nedžarići;¹²⁶⁵⁷ (ii) there was one line of sight between the site of the incident and Nedžarići;¹²⁶⁵⁸ and (iii) the area of Nedžarići was controlled by the SRK at the time of the incident.¹²⁶⁵⁹ The final adjudicated fact concludes that on

25 May 1994 civilian passengers of a civilian vehicle were deliberately targeted from SRK-controlled territory and such targeting resulted in the wounding of Sehadeta Plivac and Hajra Hafizović.¹²⁶⁶⁰

3831. Having weighed the above listed adjudicated facts against the evidence related to this incident, the Chamber is unable to come to the same conclusion beyond reasonable doubt. As noted above, the Prosecution does not allege a specific location for the origin of fire in this incident and instead argues that the fire came down the Branioca Dobrinje street, from Nedžarići and from the SRK side of the confrontation line, which was 550 metres away from the incident site and thus within the range of a number of sniper rifles at the SRK's disposal.¹²⁶⁶¹

3832. It appears that the Prosecution's main argument as to the distance to the confrontation line is Van der Weijden's report in which he marked a location just behind the protective barriers which was 550 metres away from the incident site.¹²⁶⁶² However, Van der Weijden never claimed that this particular location was the confrontation line and instead testified that it signified a distance within which it would have been physically challenging or impossible for a shooter to have a position from which to take an accurate shot at the bus.¹²⁶⁶³ While Guzina and Sladoje both appeared to concede during cross-examination that the confrontation line was approximately 550 metres away, their concessions did not appear to have been based on precise knowledge of the distances involved.¹²⁶⁶⁴

3833. Further throwing doubt on the Prosecution's suggestion that the distance between the incident site and the confrontation line was 550 metres is the evidence led by the Accused. For example, Guzina marked the relevant confrontation lines on a map,¹²⁶⁶⁵ which in turn correspond to the confrontation lines marked on a map Poparić used to suggest that the distance was bigger than 550 metres.¹²⁶⁶⁶ Thus, both maps suggest that the distance to the confrontation lines was more than 550 metres. In addition, in the Chamber's own assessment of the maps in evidence, it would

¹²⁶⁶¹ See para. 3822.

¹²⁶⁶² See T. 30579 (28 November 2012) where Prosecution referred to Van der Weijden's report during Sladoje's cross-examination to prove to Sladoje that the confrontation line was 550 metres away. See also T. 31163 (11 December 2012) where it did the same with Guzina.

¹²⁶⁶³ Indeed, Van der Weijden specifically said that he did not know where the confrontation line was in that area. Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7066 (28 September 2010).

¹²⁶⁶⁴ For example, when asked if the distance was 550 metres, Sladoje said that "perhaps" he could agree with that but only in relation to one part of the confrontation line. See Mile Sladoje, T. 30578–30580 (28 November 2012). Similarly, Guzina simply accepted the Prosecution's suggestion as to the distance, assuming it was correct. See Svetozar Guzina, T. 31162 (11 December 2012).

¹²⁶⁶⁵ D2556 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Svetozar Guzina).

indeed appear that the confrontation lines in the area were more than 550 metres away from the incident site. Accordingly, the Chamber has serious doubt as to the approximate distance between the incident site and the confrontation line. Not knowing how far or where the SRK soldiers were located from the incident site, the Chamber is also unable to conclude that they had a line of sight to the bus from their positions particularly given that the evidence the Chamber received indicates that Nedžarići consisted of low-rise buildings, one or two storeys high.¹²⁶⁶⁷

3834. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that the Accused has successfully rebutted the adjudicated facts listed above, through both his cross-examination of Van der Weijden and the evidence he brought during his case.

3835. Additionally, the Chamber recalls that Van der Weijden conceded that the only conclusion he could come to from the information available to him was that the bullet could have come down the Branioca Dobrinje street and that it was “probably of a certain calibre”.¹²⁶⁶⁸ The Chamber also acknowledges that the Prosecution managed to extract an admission from Guzina that it was possible that the fire came from the VRS side of the confrontation line.¹²⁶⁶⁹ However, those two pieces of evidence are insufficient for the Chamber to be satisfied, beyond reasonable doubt, that the bullet fired on the bus came from the SRK’s side of the confrontation lines and that it was fired in order to deliberately target civilians.

3836. For the foregoing reasons, the Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the bullet that hit the bus came from SRK positions in the area of Nedžarići.

3837. The Indictment alleges that, on 26 June 1994, Sanela Muratović, a 16 year old girl, was shot and wounded in her right shoulder while walking with a girlfriend on Đure Jakšića street (presently Adija Mulaobegovića street) in the west end of Sarajevo.¹²⁶⁷⁰ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that Muratović was shot from the SRK positions in the area of the School for the Blind, approximately 200 metres away.¹²⁶⁷¹ The Accused argues that the wounding of Sanela Muratović can be attributed to the fact that it happened very near the confrontation line during active combat between the two sides, when no soldiers would have expected civilians to be present in the area.¹²⁶⁷²

3838. On 26 June 1994, between 7 and 7:30 p.m., on a sunny early evening, Sanela Muratović, age 16, and Medina Omerović, age 17, were walking to Omerović's apartment at Đure Jakšića street 17 on the eastern side of Lukavička Cesta in Novi Grad¹²⁶⁷³ when some uniformed soldiers warned them of incoming sniper fire.¹²⁶⁷⁴ Muratović was shot in her right shoulder, while Omerović, walking to the left, was not injured.¹²⁶⁷⁵ Only one single shot was fired and it directly hit Muratović.¹²⁶⁷⁶ There was no fighting in the area at the time of the incident.¹²⁶⁷⁷

¹²⁶⁸⁰ Van der Weijden denied that his task was simply to confirm that the School for the Blind was the location of the shooter. He conceded, however, that he did not know where the confrontation line was in the area between the School and the site of the incident, but noted that since the ABiH soldiers helped the victim they were probably in the buildings next to the incident site. He also conceded that he had no information as to the position of the victim's body when she was hit, or any information on the exact location of her wound. Patrick van der Weijden, T. 7142–7152 (29 September 2010); D671 (Aerial photograph of Sarajevo marked by Patrick van der Weijden).

the Prosecution suggested that “only single shots or perhaps semi automatic fire were generally fired in that area”, he thought that the most likely weapon used in this incident was an M79, an M91, or a civilian bolt action hunting rifle or an older generation rifle such as an M48.¹²⁶⁸¹ In addition, given the short distance between the School for the Blind and the incident site, the victim would have been easily identifiable as a young woman; furthermore, the fact that she did not use a trench which was there to protect the people crossing the street, would have indicated to the shooter that she was not “tactically aware” and thus not a combatant.¹²⁶⁸²

3840. Poparić testified that there was very little information for this incident, most of it coming from Omerović.¹²⁶⁸³ He argued, based on Omerović’s evidence in the Galić case and some of the images taken in the area, that it was clear that the location of the incident was right on the separation line between the warring parties and that Omerović’s building was used by the ABiH soldiers.¹²⁶⁸⁴ He also pointed out that there was an inconsistency in the evidence as to the precise location of the girls when Muratović was shot.¹²⁶⁸⁵ According to Poparić, Omerović did not accurately show her location to Hogan since she indicated to him that she and Muratović were already in front of the trench when Muratović was wounded, whereas in her testimony in the Galić case she said that they ran to the trench only after Muratović was wounded.¹²⁶⁸⁶ This is a crucial detail to Poparić since, unlike the location shown to Hogan, the location from which the girls ran to the trench was not visible from the School for the Blind.¹²⁶⁸⁷ Poparić also argued that no evidence was presented that there was a firing position at the School for the Blind window, which had the view on the incident site and that it would be illogical to have a firing position in that location as it would make an easy target.¹²⁶⁸⁸ Poparić concluded that if the girls were already running before

The photograph of the view from the School for the Blind to the incident site was shown to Guzina during re-examination. He first claimed that the small building partially blocking the view to the Đure Jakšića street was new but then changed his mind when prompted by the Accused. See Svetozar Guzina, T. 31193–31194 (11 December 2012); D2560 (Photograph of building in Sarajevo, undated). The Chamber is not convinced by Guzina’s testimony in this regard, but notes that even if the small building was not new, the photograph shows that there was still a partial view from the School for the Blind onto the Đure Jakšića street. Furthermore, this was conceded by Poparić who testified that the area around the trench was visible from the School for the Blind.

¹²⁶⁸⁸ D4884 (Mile Poparić’s expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), p. 117. Poparić in fact argued that there was no evidence that the School for the Blind as a whole was used as a sniper nest. See Mile Poparić, T. 38980 (30 May 2013). When confronted with an UNMO report

Muratović was shot then they were not shot from the School for the Blind and there must have been an exchange of fire or a ricochet.¹²⁶⁸⁹ If, however, the girls were just next to the trench when shot at, there was a “theoretical possibility” that the shooter was at the level of the ceiling in the room of the School that had the view onto the trench but this, according to Poparić, was improbable.¹²⁶⁹⁰ During cross-examination, when presented with a photograph of the School for the Blind taken in 1996 and shown a number of openings in the wall of the School on the side which was exposed to the incident location, Poparić denied that they were consistent with firing positions.¹²⁶⁹¹

3841. Radojčić testified that he never issued an order to any unit of his brigade to open fire on Đure Jakšića street and that he never received any information about this incident.¹²⁶⁹² He did note, however, that he had information that one of the units of the 102nd Brigade of the ABiH 1st Corps was positioned on that street.¹²⁶⁹³

3842. Guzina confirmed that the location of the incident was “just behind the first line” which was the “worst line during the conflict” and stated that it was not logical to assume that civilians would be at that location.¹²⁶⁹⁴ He also testified, based on the SRK’s daily combat report of 26 June 1994, that there was fighting in the area in the evening and night of 25 June 1994 as the ABiH “fired infantry weapons provocatively on all the lines of disengagement” of the Ilidža Brigade and its units responded in order to protect themselves.¹²⁶⁹⁵ Thus, according to Guzina, Muratović could have been wounded during the battles in the area.¹²⁶⁹⁶ Guzina opined, however, that a civilian should not have been in this location as both sides were under obligation to remove civilians from stating that the Commander of the 1st Battalion of the Ilidža Brigade admitted that sniper fire was opened from the School for the Blind, Poparić responded that it was not clear that this was related to the incident involving Muratović. See Mile Poparić, T. 39271–39272 (5 June 2013); P1601 (UNMO report, 13 July 1994), p. 4.

¹²⁶⁹¹ When told that he made conclusions in his report as to the presence of ABiH sniping nests based on a similar photograph of a building in the ABiH-held territory (Image 6 in his report), Poparić explained that there was a difference in the photographs as he was not able to see the openings properly in the photograph of the School for the Blind. Mile Poparić, T. 39272–39277 (5 June 2013); P6368 (Photograph of a building). The Chamber agrees with Poparić that the detail on the two photographs is different.

¹²⁶⁹² D2562 (Witness statement of Vladimir Radojčić dated 8 December 2012), para. 117. Stanislav Galić also testified in relation to this incident that no one ordered this attack. Stanislav Galić, T. 37532–37533 (22 April 2013).

On cross-examination, Guzina did agree that civilians lived in that area but noted that there was fighting on that day. Svetozar Guzina, T. 31169–31170 (11 December 2012).

¹²⁶⁹⁵ D2553 (Witness statement of Svetozar Guzina dated 3 December 2012), para. 45; D2554 (SRK combat report, 26 June 1994), p. 1. When told that the SRK combat report of 26 June 1994 referred to the fighting that happened the day before and not on the day of the incident and when confronted with Adjudicated Fact 229 which provides that there was no fighting on 26 June 1994, Guzina remained adamant that the fighting lasted all day on 26 June as he had checked this fact in his diaries. Svetozar Guzina, T. 31174–31177 (11 December 2012).

¹²⁶⁹⁶ D2553 (Witness statement of Svetozar Guzina dated 3 December 2012), para. 45.

the frontline, and explained that in such circumstances every soldier had to make a decision as to whether he was under threat and whether to shoot on an observed target or not.¹²⁶⁹⁷ When Galić was shown the same SRK report, which provides that the SRK would “continue to strictly implement the cease-fire agreement and refrain from combat actions”, he noted that a restraint from combat activities meant that there was to be no firing so that if an incident occurred it would have to be reported and processed in some way.¹²⁶⁹⁸ Galić also testified that two days prior to the incident an SRK combat report was sent to the VRS Main Staff, informing the latter that the SRK units were under orders to “consistently implement” cessation of hostilities.¹²⁶⁹⁹

3843. As noted above, Guzina conceded that the 1st Battalion had three snipers but claimed that those were positioned towards Butmir and not towards the site of this incident.¹²⁷⁰⁰ When confronted with an UNMO report dated 11 July 1994 which indicates that there has been yet another sniping incident at a location near the School for Blind, whereby a 17 year old man was the third civilian casualty in the same spot in the last few days, Guzina responded that the UNMO report did not establish that this was sniper fire, and maintained that no professional snipers were located in that position.¹²⁷⁰¹ When confronted with an UNMO report dated 13 July 1994, in which he is recorded as having admitted to the sniping activity from the School for the Blind and as having promised that this would not happen again, Guzina denied ever making that admission and claimed that the UN liaison officers were able to write whatever they pleased.¹²⁷⁰²

3844. The Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts which suggest that: (i) the bullet did not hit Muratović by mistake nor was there a ricochet;¹²⁷⁰³ (ii) the shot which hit her originated from the area of the School for the Blind;¹²⁷⁰⁴ (iii) UNMO and other witnesses had found that the School for the Blind was a “sniping nest” from where civilians were shot at;¹²⁷⁰⁵ and (iv) the distance between the area of the School for the Blind and the position of the victim at the time of the incident was about 200 metres.¹²⁷⁰⁶ Further, Adjudicated Fact 233 states that Muratović was a civilian and that she was deliberately targeted from SRK-controlled territory.¹²⁷⁰⁷

3845. The Chamber considers, given Muratović's age at the time of the incident and the fact that she was walking with Omerović to Omerović's house on Đure Jakšića street without much tactical awareness, that both girls were civilians and were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident. Further, it is clear from the evidence outlined above¹²⁷⁰⁸ that civilians lived near the confrontation line in the area of Đure Jakšića street. It follows therefore that the civilian presence in the area was not unusual and that civilians had to, at times, move around the area, contrary to Guzina's evidence. This would have undoubtedly been known to the SRK units located in the area, including Guzina, and the Chamber does not accept his evidence that civilians should not have been there. Thus, it is completely logical that Muratović and Omerović, and other civilians, would have ventured outside whenever there was a cease-fire or a lull in fighting. As also noted above, the two SRK reports sent to the VRS Main Staff just before and on the day of the incident indicate that there was a cease-fire in place at the time, which further explains why the two girls were walking in the area even though it was close to the confrontation line.¹²⁷⁰⁹ Finally, contrary to Guzina's evidence, the Chamber is convinced that there was no fighting on the day of the incident as two young girls would not be out on the street in such a case. Furthermore, as also recounted above,¹²⁷¹⁰ the girls were explicitly warned by the ABiH soldiers about sniper fire.

3846. The Chamber is also satisfied, based on the evidence above, that the School for the Blind was some 200 metres away from the incident site and that it had a line of sight to Đure Jakšića street. The Chamber does not accept Poparić's analysis as to discrepancies in Omerović's story since the description of the incident she gave in her evidence in the Galić case – as recounted by Poparić – is not necessarily inconsistent with the location of the incident shown to Hogan. The fact that Muratović was shot first and only then started running towards Omerović's house and found refuge in the trench does not mean that she was not shot when near the trench. In other words, other than saying that Muratović was not in the line of sight of the School for the Blind when shot, Poparić does not provide any explanation or visual information as to where she was in fact standing

¹²⁷⁰⁸ See paras. 3784, 3787–3788, fn. 12694.

¹²⁷⁰⁹ While the SRK report issued on the day of the incident does refer to some exchange of fire in the Ilidža Brigade's zone of responsibility, the Chamber notes that these exchanges took place mainly during the night of 25 June and in areas that were not close to Đure Jakšića street. See D2554 (SRK combat report, 26 June 1994), p. 1.

¹²⁷¹⁰ See para. 3838.

when shot. Thus, the Chamber accepts the evidence of Hogan as to the location of the victim when shot and is satisfied that she could be seen from the School for the Blind at that location.

3847. The Chamber is further satisfied, based on the evidence of Guzina outlined above, that the 1st Battalion of the Ilidža Brigade of the SRK had positions in the School for the Blind. It is also satisfied that the soldiers located in the School opened sniper fire at the civilians in the area and thus possessed either a sniper rifle or an M48 rifle with an optic sight, which is in line with Van der Weijden's evidence as to the gun used in this incident.¹²⁷¹¹ Finally, the Chamber is satisfied that Sanela Muratović was deliberately targeted by one of those soldiers and that this soldier would have undoubtedly been aware of her civilian status given the short distance between the School for the Blind and the location of the incident.¹²⁷¹²

(C) Sedrenik

3848. Two of the 16 scheduled sniping incidents took place in a suburb of Sarajevo called Sedrenik. The Prosecution alleges in relation to both that the origin of fire was a rock-faced ridge called "Špicasta Stijena" or "Sharpstone", which overlooks Sedrenik.¹²⁷¹³

3849. Sedrenik is a settlement located in the northeastern part of Sarajevo.¹²⁷¹⁴ It is a residential area which was frequently targeted throughout the war by small arms fire, as well as shells and mortars, resulting in a number of casualties.¹²⁷¹⁵ This made it difficult to live in Sedrenik during the conflict and Sedrenik's inhabitants were often forced to leave their houses early in the morning or late at night, while it was dark.¹²⁷¹⁶ The areas known for being frequently exposed to sniper fire were protected by bed sheets and blankets, which would be hung from wires, all in order to block

¹²⁷¹² The Chamber does not consider that Muratović was caught in cross-fire as she was warned that there was sniper fire in the area. See Adjudicated Fact 223.

the line of sight to snipers.¹²⁷¹⁷ The situation was such that many people left Sedrenik and moved to safer areas of Sarajevo.¹²⁷¹⁸

3850. A team consisting of six to ten UNMO observers was based in a civilian house located in Sedrenik.¹²⁷¹⁹ The base had a UN flag on the roof but it was nevertheless targeted by sniping fire on an almost daily basis, as were their cars.¹²⁷²⁰

3851. Two main locations featuring in the evidence relating to this area of the city were two elevations above Sedrenik, namely Grdonj Hill and Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁷²¹ Špicasta Stijena is a bare rock, some 50 to 100 metres high, overlooking Sedrenik.¹²⁷²² According to a number of witnesses, it was the origin of much of the sniping fire on Sedrenik.¹²⁷²³

Tabakovo Guvno sector.¹²⁷²⁵ The Battalion numbered some 800 men¹²⁷²⁶ and consisted of the command, six companies, one independent platoon, a logistics platoon, and a communication detachment.¹²⁷²⁷ There was a deficit of professional officers; most of the soldiers in the battalion were locals, which had effect on the command's ability to control the units.¹²⁷²⁸

3853. According to Gengo, Špicasta Stijena was held by the VRS throughout the conflict.¹²⁷²⁹ Blaško Rašević, commander of a platoon and later a company in Mrkovići,¹²⁷³⁰ which was part of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade,¹²⁷³¹ confirmed this saying that from 5 April 1992 his platoon, as well as another Mrkovići platoon, took up positions on the Velika Tvrđava-Špicasta Stijena axis and "successfully defended that line until the end of the war".¹²⁷³² According to Rašević, his unit carried out only defensive tasks and never received an order to attack.¹²⁷³³ Stanislav Galić, who was the SRK Commander until 1994, testified that Špicasta Stijena was around one kilometre away ¹²⁷²⁹ Slavko Gengo, T. 29786 (6 November 2012). Two UNMO observers stationed in the area, namely Konings and Knustad, also testified to that effect. Knustad even saw a Bosnian Serb flag on Špicasta Stijena. See P1953 (Witness statement of Harry Konings dated 11 November 2010), para. 40; Thomas Knustad, P123 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. *D. Siniša Maksimović, who briefly replaced Rašević as the Commander of Mrkovići Company in 1994, testified that the company's positions were located to the north of the Grdonj Hill, at the level of Mala Kula but he did place Špicasta Stijena in the Mrkovići Company's zone of responsibility. See D2354 (Witness statement of Siniša Maksimović dated 19 October 2012), paras. 5, 9; Siniša Maksimović, T. 29306 (23 October 2012); D2355 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Siniša Maksimović); D2356 (Photograph of Sarajevo from Grdonj Hill); D2357 (Photograph of Sarajevo from Grdonj Hill); P1978 (Witness statement of Nedžib Đozo dated 7 December 2010), para. 17.

¹²⁷³³ D2527 (Witness statement of Blaško Rašević dated 1 December 2012), para. 21. Rašević also testified that from their positions they could see the firing positions of the ABiH in the city, including near the Faculty of Physical Education, the Koševo Hill tunnel, the Koševo stadium, Nemanja Vlatković School, and Koševo Hospital grounds. See D2527 (Witness statement of Blaško Rašević dated 1 December 2012), para. 23. See also D2383 (Witness statement of Slavko Gengo dated 14 October 2012), para. 23.

from Sedrenik, that it was partly under SRK control at one point, and that it then came under ABiH control.¹²⁷³⁴ However, he provided no detail as to when the change-over happened.¹²⁷³⁵

3854. Contrary to the evidence outlined above, Dragomir Milošević testified that the SRK forces were not located on Špicasta Stijena but in the area of Mala Kula, just behind Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁷³⁶ He went so far as to claim that Špicasta Stijena was not in the zone of responsibility of the SRK.¹²⁷³⁷ However, when questioned by the Chamber, he conceded that the SRK would have had “conditions from [Špicasta Stijena] to execute possible fire”, and that “possible fire was executed to the degree required for [the units] to protect themselves”.¹²⁷³⁸

3855. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that, with the exception of a few days around mid-1994, when it was temporarily taken over by the ABiH, Špicasta Stijena was in the zone of responsibility of the SRK, more precisely the 7th Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade, and that the SRK soldiers were able to open fire from that feature.¹²⁷³⁹ In addition, the Chamber is also satisfied that, since it is situated on a steep slope, Sedrenik could be easily seen from both Špicasta Stijena and the adjacent Grdonj Hill.¹²⁷⁴⁰

3856. The ABiH units opposing the 7th Battalion, including the Mrkovići Company, belonged to the 105th and 110th Mountain Brigades and held the top of the Grdonj Hill, with the area of Sedrenik behind them, as well as the extensive views towards the city.¹²⁷⁴¹ According to Nedžib

In addition, according to the witnesses, all the trees from Špicasta Stijena towards Sedrenik were cut by the civilians who needed firewood. The Chamber notes that Nedžib Đozo also testified that sniping fire on Sedrenik could only be opened from Špicasta Stijena as Sedrenik was not visible from Grdonj Hill. See P1978 (Witness statement of Nedžib Đozo dated 7 December 2010), para. 16. However, in light of Poparić’s report, the Chamber does not accept this part of his testimony.

Đozo, who was a police investigator in the Stari Grad police station,¹²⁷⁴² the ABiH units were not positioned directly below or at the foot of Špicasta Stijena as that would have been too close and too dangerous; instead, they were positioned to the left, towards Grdonj, and to the right, towards the forest.¹²⁷⁴³ Đozo also testified these were not proper lines but rather two or three positions protecting the area from the “onslaught of Serb forces towards Sedrenik.”¹²⁷⁴⁴ Gengo also testified that in the area of Špicasta Stijena and Velika and Mala Tvrđava, the 7th Battalion was deployed higher than the ABiH units.¹²⁷⁴⁵

3857. The positions of the 105th Mountain Brigade were some 20 to 100 metres away from the positions of the Mrkovići Company and the line of disengagement on Špicasta Stijena was, in certain places, as narrow as 20 metres.¹²⁷⁴⁶

(2) Snipers in the area

3858. Milošević denied that the SRK had any snipers on Špicasta Stijena, explaining that the distances involved were great that any type of infantry weapons in that position would have been useless.¹²⁷⁴⁷ Gengo confirmed this, stating that there were no trained snipers in the 7th Battalion and that opening fire towards Sedrenik was impossible because of the distances involved, the configuration of the terrain, and the fact that trenches on Špicasta Stijena were “always under cross-fire”.¹²⁷⁴⁸ Gengo did concede, however, that the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade had over sixty 7.62 and 7.9 mm sniper rifles in its arsenal.¹²⁷⁴⁹ While claiming that the Mrkovići Company did not have professional snipers or sniper rifles, Rašević testified that they had optical devices placed on hunting rifles, which then had a targeting accuracy of up to 1,000 metres, with the greatest accuracy between 300 and 400 metres.¹²⁷⁵⁰ Siniša Maksimović, who briefly replaced Rašević as the Commander of Mrkovići Company in 1994,¹²⁷⁵¹ conceded that his unit would open fire from Špicasta Stijena but only when attacked and only on ABiH positions.¹²⁷⁵²

3859. Contrary to Gengo and Milošević's evidence as to the presence of snipers on Špicasta Stijena, Thomas testified that due to a large number of sniping incidents originating from Špicasta Stijena, he tried to negotiate UNMOs' presence there and in the course of his negotiations with the SRK was able to visit their positions in the area some time after February 1994.¹²⁷⁵³ According to him, Špicasta Stijena was a "very well dug in position" such that there was "no need for special facilities for the snipers."¹²⁷⁵⁴ The SRK soldiers could "just pick a trench and prepare themselves, shoot, and then move on to another trench" as they had a clear view.¹²⁷⁵⁵ Ultimately, negotiations to have UNMO presence on Špicasta Stijena were unsuccessful despite Thomas taking the matter to Major Indić and thus bringing it to Galić's attention.¹²⁷⁵⁶ Thomas' evidence is confirmed by an UNMO report of 6 March 1995, according to which two civilians and the APC of the UNPROFOR's Egyptian battalion came under sniper fire from the positions of Špicasta Stijena; when the APC returned fire and engaged the SRK shooter, the UNMO Vogošća team was threatened by the Commander of the SRK's Radava Battalion¹²⁷⁵⁷ and told to leave his "target practice area (Sedrenik)" or it would be fired upon.¹²⁷⁵⁸

3860. In terms of the disposition of fire in Sedrenik, Fraser testified that it was the Serbs that fired more in the area, which is why protective screens were set up.¹²⁷⁵⁹ However, Galić testified that ABiH was constantly attacking SRK positions on the axis Sedrenik-Zlatište and that ABiH forces would even open sniper fire on Sedrenik itself.¹²⁷⁶⁰ Rašević confirmed that ABiH forces launched several attacks on his positions between April 1992 and January 1993, noting that the area was deemed important because it was a dominant elevation that could cut off the connection between Vogošća and Hresa and leave all Serb-held municipalities in encirclement.¹²⁷⁶¹ Dragomir Milošević also testified that the area was of strategic importance to the SRK, which is why the ABiH would regularly launch attacks on Mrkovići and the road leading from Pale to Vogošća via Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁷⁶² Finally, Gengo too mentioned such attacks on the positions of his battalion, including by ABiH sniper fire—he then stated that he and his forces would return fire in retaliation, and in doing so would use both machine gun and mortar fire.¹²⁷⁶³

3861. In Poparić's view, in terms of safety for Sedrenik, the positions at Špicasta Stijena and Grdonj were "very disadvantageous" because Sedrenik was situated on a steep incline, meaning that almost every bullet fired from Špicasta Stijena and Grdonj would have had a ricocheting angle, so that in an exchange of fire a substantial number of projectiles would fly in the direction of the inhabited area.¹²⁷⁶⁴

3862. Taking all the above evidence into account, particularly the evidence of Thomas, Milošević, and Gengo, the Chamber is satisfied that the SRK positions above Sedrenik were of strategic importance to the SRK and that the SRK was able to and would open fire both from Špicasta Stijena and from its positions around it. Additionally, it is also satisfied, relying on Gengo, Rašević and the SRK documents cited above,¹²⁷⁶⁵ that the SRK soldiers in the area had machine guns, sniper rifles, and hunting rifles with optic sights. Finally, relying on the evidence of UNMO witnesses, Žunić, Đozo, and in particular the UNMO report of 6 March 1995,¹²⁷⁶⁶ the Chamber is satisfied that the SRK soldiers would open small arms and/or sniper fire at the civilians in Sedrenik, and that Sedrenik was used by the SRK for "target practice".

(3) Sedrenik, 17 April 1993 (Scheduled Incident F.2)

3863. The Indictment alleges that, on 17 April 1993, a nine year old girl was shot and wounded in the back while playing in the front garden of her house in the Sedrenik area of Sarajevo.¹²⁷⁶⁷ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the fire originated from Špicasta Stijena, which was controlled by the SRK and which had an unobstructed view of the location where the girl was hit.¹²⁷⁶⁸ The Accused argues, however, that the girl could not be seen from Špicasta Stijena when shot whereas she could be seen from the ABiH positions at Grdonj Hill.¹²⁷⁶⁹

3864. The Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts relating to the events on the day of this incident. According to those, the weather was sunny and a nine year old girl,¹²⁷⁷⁰ who was wearing dark trousers and a blue jacket, had gone outside into her front yard to play underneath a window of her house in Sedrenik.¹²⁷⁷¹ The bullet hit the girl in “the area of [her] shoulder blade [...] went through [her] body and ended up in the wall” behind her.¹²⁷⁷² Some unspecified time thereafter that day, the girl was transported in a car to a hospital in Sarajevo with the help of neighbours.¹²⁷⁷³ A shot was fired at the car as it pulled away from the girl’s house, hitting it in the back.¹²⁷⁷⁴

3865. Hogan visited the site of the incident and recorded the exact position of the girl when she was shot.¹²⁷⁷⁵ Van der Weijden also visited the incident site, as well as Špicasta Stijena, which is 1,108 metres away, towards the northwest.¹²⁷⁷⁶ He noted that the bullet that wounded the victim exited her body and struck the wall behind her, leaving a trace, which meant that its path could be roughly traced to the position of the shooter.¹²⁷⁷⁷ While observing the environment from the exact location and height at which the girl was located when shot, he found that there was only one possible location for the origin of fire, namely Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁷⁷⁸ When he visited Špicasta

Stijena, he found that it offered an unobstructed view towards the incident site and, like Thomas, thought that it was an obvious location for a sniper position or a machine-gun emplacement.¹²⁷⁷⁹ Van der Weijden also noted that a tree in a garden close to the incident site obscured the view somewhat but that this would not have been the case more than 15 years ago.¹²⁷⁸⁰

3866. As for the weapon used in this incident, Van der Weijden thought that the bullet that struck the victim could not have been greater than 7.92 mm as such a calibre would have caused greater damage.¹²⁷⁸¹ Given that there was no evidence of multiple shots, Van der Weijden concluded that probably an M76 or M91 semi-automatic sniper rifle was used to shoot the girl, although he conceded that the range here would have been extreme for those rifles.¹²⁷⁸² According to Van der Weijden, the shooter would have been able to conclude that the victim was a small child because (i) the weather was sunny on the day of the incident; (ii) the girl was standing next to her house, which would have indicated her size; (iii) she had long hair and was wearing civilian clothing; and (iv) she was playing in the garden for one and a half hours before being shot which would have made her visible to the shooter occasionally.¹²⁷⁸³

3868. In cross-examination, Poparić conceded that he did not visit the girl's house or examine the bullet trace in the wall because (i) he assumed the changes had been made to the house and the examination would not have been useful and (ii) soon after visiting Špicasta Stijena, he realised that the location of the victim was not visible from there.¹²⁷⁹¹ He also clarified that the girl was a protected witness in a previous case and therefore the defence team did not consider contacting her.¹²⁷⁹² When shown a photograph taken from Špicasta Stijena in 1996 and asked if it showed a much clearer line of sight to the victim's house than photos taken by him, Poparić argued that the house was indeed more visible but that the ground floor, where the girl was located when shot, still could not be seen.¹²⁷⁹³

responded that this incident happened after he left Mrkovići but conceded that, based on that report, he could not exclude that there was no firing from the SRK positions at Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁷⁹⁷

3870. Siniša Maksimović, the Commander of Mrkovići Company after this incident took place,¹²⁷⁹⁸ testified that the positions of the company were the same even before he arrived to the area and that, based on a photograph given to him by the Accused's defence team, these positions had no view onto the exact location of the incident.¹²⁷⁹⁹ When shown a different photograph, taken by Hogan at the precise location the victim was located when shot, which shows a different view towards the alleged origin of fire, he testified that if that was indeed the origin of fire then it was under control of another VRS unit—unit that was his neighbour on the left flank.¹²⁸⁰⁰

3871. Maksimović also explained that the distance between the incident site and the position of SRK units was somewhere between 800 and 1,000 metres and that, to his knowledge, the units at that location did not have soldiers trained for sniper fire, or guns of that range.¹²⁸⁰¹ When shown a report from the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade to the SRK command, dated 29 October 1993, and reporting on the brigade's sniping capabilities, including that it possessed about 50 M76 7.92 mm calibre rifles, Maksimović conceded that those rifles have a range of about 1,000 metres.¹²⁸⁰²

3872. Maksimović also testified that the position of his units was under constant fire by the ABiH units as Grdonj Hill was in a dominant position in relation to his company's positions.¹²⁸⁰³ Nevertheless, he conceded that SRK soldiers would open fire from Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁸⁰⁴ Finally, he testified that he never issued orders for civilians to be fired on in the area and that he never heard that civilian targets were fired on by the members of his unit.¹²⁸⁰⁵

3873. Galić testified that he had no knowledge about this incident at the time, but that he realised during his trial that SRK positions on Špicasta Stijena did not have a view of the area where the girl was located when shot.¹²⁸⁰⁶ Further, he stated that he never issued orders to target civilians in the area of Sedrenik and if anyone did open such fire, it was done unbeknownst to him.¹²⁸⁰⁷

3874. The Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts going to the origin of fire, which state that (i) the bullet that injured the nine year old girl was fired from the area of Špicasta Stijena;¹²⁸⁰⁸ (ii) there was no military equipment or personnel near the girl at the time;¹²⁸⁰⁹ (iii) the girl, along with others, was targeted again from the direction of Špicasta Stijena as she was being taken to the hospital;¹²⁸¹⁰ and (iv) the girl was a civilian and was deliberately targeted from SRK-controlled territory.¹²⁸¹¹

3875. The Chamber considers, given the girl's age at the time of the incident and the fact that she was playing in front of her house, that she was a civilian and that she was not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident nor was she around soldiers or military targets when it happened. Contrary to Poparić's opinion that the girl was hit by a stray bullet from an exchange of fire, the Chamber is satisfied that there was no fighting at the moment she was playing in her yard as she would not have been engaging in such an activity if that were the case.

3876. The Chamber is also satisfied, based on the evidence above, that the area of Špicasta Stijena had a line of sight to the exact location where the girl was playing. In fact, the Chamber accepts Van der Weijden's evidence that Špicasta Stijena was the only location that had a view of the girl at the time. The Chamber is persuaded by his analysis because he personally observed the environment from the girl's position when shot and he also examined the bullet traces on the wall. In contrast, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's analysis of this incident as it is based on a number of speculations. First, unlike Van der Weijden, Poparić did not visit the victim's house nor was he able to observe the view from the house to Špicasta Stijena, which should have been the very first step for an expert to take. Second, his claim that the view between the location of the victim when shot and Špicasta Stijena was obstructed is based on (i) various calculations based on the height of the adjacent house and its distance to the victim's house, and (ii) a photograph of the victim's house taken from Špicasta Stijena. Having considered his ground (i), the Chamber finds it unconvincing as it is based on a number of speculations as to the measurements involved—not having been to the location of the incident, Poparić is merely guessing the height of the adjacent house and the distance between the two houses. As for (ii), while the photograph does appear to show that the tree near the victim's house is obstructing the view of the location of the girl when shot, the Chamber also recalls Van der Weijden's testimony that when he visited Špicasta Stijena, he found that it offered an unobstructed view of the incident site.¹²⁸¹² He noted the existence of the said tree and partially obstructed view due to its branches, but concluded that the view would not have been so obstructed more than 15 years ago.¹²⁸¹³ Accordingly, the Chamber is persuaded by Van der Weijden's analysis that Špicasta Stijena was the only possible origin of fire for this incident.

3877. The Chamber is further satisfied, based on the evidence of local SRK commanders, that the 7th Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade of the SRK had positions in the area of Špicasta Stijena and would open fire from that area, as attested to by a number of witnesses, including Thomas, Milošević, and Gengo. Relying, among other things, on the UNMO report of 6 March 1995, the Chamber is also satisfied that the SRK soldiers located in the area would open sniper fire at the civilians in Sedrenik, as they used the area for "target practice". It is also satisfied, relying on the evidence above,¹²⁸¹⁴ that the SRK soldiers in the area possessed either sniper rifles or hunting rifles with optic sights, which would have had the range needed to reach the victim in this case.¹²⁸¹⁵ Finally, given the distance between the incident site and the area of Špicasta Stijena, which would have required a careful shot on the part of the shooter, as well as the fact that the car taking her to the hospital was also shot at, the Chamber is satisfied that the girl was deliberately targeted by one of the SRK soldiers. This soldier would have undoubtedly been aware of her civilian status, for all the reasons outlined above by Van der Weijden.¹²⁸¹⁶

¹²⁸¹⁴ See para. 3858.

(4) Sedrenik street, 6 March 1995 (Scheduled Incident F.17)

3878. The Indictment alleges that on 6 March 1995, Tarik Žunić, a 14 year old boy, was shot and wounded in the hand while walking home from school at Sedrenik street, in the northeast of Sarajevo. The Indictment also alleges that he was hit as he emerged from behind a protective screen about 100 metres from his house.¹²⁸¹⁷ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution submits that the shot came from Špicasta Stijena and that the most likely weapon used was M84 machine-gun.¹²⁸¹⁸ The Accused counterclaims that the location of the incident was not visible from the SRK positions in the area and that sniper fire was not possible due to distances involved and field configuration.¹²⁸¹⁹

3879. On 6 March 1995, Tarik Žunić, then 14 ½ years old, was walking home from school, which he would attend only on days when there was no shelling or fighting.¹²⁸²⁰ At around 1 p.m., he was on Sedrenik street, some 100 metres from his house, and had just passed a canvas erected on the street as protection against sniper fire,¹²⁸²¹ when he heard two shots.¹²⁸²² He immediately took shelter on the edge of the street and, while the shooting continued, realised that he had been hit in the right hand.¹²⁸²³ A civilian car tried to stop and help him but was also targeted by the sniper so drove on.¹²⁸²⁴ Another man also tried to help but he too was shot at.¹²⁸²⁵ Some five minutes later

¹²⁸²⁰ Žunić also explained that when there was no shelling or sniping he would use the “main street” to get to school and back. There was also a more sheltered but more difficult route he would take in case fire started when he was coming back from school. On the day of the incident he was taking the main street route. See P496 (Witness statement of Tarik Žunić dated 10 November 1995), p. 2; P496 (Witness statement of Tarik Žunić dated 21 April 2006), p. 2. See also Adjudicated Fact 2998.

¹²⁸²¹ Žunić also testified that there was a “canvas” along the street he was walking on, erected in order to shield the people from the snipers. However, the canvas did not shield the whole length of the street. In addition, there were trees lining the street which provided protection in summer. However, given that this was early March, the trees has no leaves on their branches. See P496 (Witness statement of Tarik Žunić dated 21 April 2006), p. 2.

an APC driven by Egyptian UNPROFOR soldiers arrived and Žunić managed to get on board, after which he was transported to the Koševo Hospital where his wound was attended to.¹²⁸²⁶

3880. On the day of the incident, which was cloudy but not foggy, Žunić was wearing jeans and a green jacket and carrying a blue rucksack on his right shoulder.¹²⁸²⁷ Žunić maintained during his evidence that his jacket was not olive-drab green but rather “Benetton-green”,¹²⁸²⁸ and that he never fought in the ABiH as he was too young at the time.¹²⁸²⁹ Once in the hospital, he noticed two holes on the front of his jacket.¹²⁸³⁰ The bullet had first entered the left side of his jacket, then exited through the right side of his jacket and then passed through his right hand.¹²⁸³¹

3881. Žunić testified that the shots came from Serb positions on Špicasta Stijena, to his left, because this location was the only location from which the snipers had a perfect sight of the Sedrenik street.¹²⁸³² According to him, the ABiH forces were located at the foot of Špicasta Stijena and their positions were not visible from where he was walking when shot.¹²⁸³³ He believed, based on how loud the shots were and his experience with sniper fire until that point, that they were fired from an M84 machine-gun.¹²⁸³⁴ According to Žunić, there were no military installations or trenches in the vicinity of the location where he was shot, and the confrontation line was some 700 to 900 metres away.¹²⁸³⁵ Finally, he testified that he had been fired upon on two other occasions, also from Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁸³⁶

3882. The UNMO observers reported on this incident on the same day, as well as on another incident in the area some 25 minutes earlier, and concluded that the fire in relation to both had come from Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁸³⁷ The observers also reported that, while assisting the victims of those two incidents, they came under occasional small arms fire, as a result of which the Egyptian battalion's anti sniping APC at that location returned fire on the Bosnian Serb positions on Špicasta Stijena.¹²⁸³⁸ Following this, the UNMO team from Vogošća received a phone call from the Bosnian Serb commander of the Radava Battalion,¹²⁸³⁹ stating that if the APC "in his target practice area (Sedrenik) is not removed within 30 mins it will be fired upon".¹²⁸⁴⁰ As a result, the APC was moved to another position from which it continued to monitor the Špicasta Stijena positions.¹²⁸⁴¹

3884. In terms of the weapon used, Van der Weijden agreed with Žunić's assessment that it was probably an M84 as there was a burst of fire at a long range indicating a machine-gun and because the other two machine-guns that could have been used, namely an M87 and an M53, either would have caused a lot more damage or would have had a completely different sound to the M84.¹²⁸⁵⁰

3885. Poparić testified that there is very little information about this incident¹²⁸⁵¹ and that in order to determine the direction of the shot it would have been indispensable to determine where Žunić's entry and exit wounds were located.¹²⁸⁵² He also stated that when he visited the incident site, as marked by Žunić, he was assured by a man and a woman who live next door that the incident happened in front of their house and not in front of the house which Žunić had marked as the location of the incident.¹²⁸⁵³ According to Poparić, that location is much less visible from Špicasta Stijena than the location marked by Žunić.¹²⁸⁵⁴ Poparić also went to Špicasta Stijena and observed the incident site from there, concluding that the distance was some 700 to 750 metres and that the possibility of observing people in the area where Žunić was shot is small.¹²⁸⁵⁵ In addition, he observed that the incident site was also visible from Grdonj Hill, meaning that Žunić could have been shot from that location as well.¹²⁸⁵⁶ Poparić too referred to the UNMO report from that day, which to him indicated that an ABiH combat unit was deployed in one of the houses on Sedrenik street as another man was wounded in the same area around the same time.¹²⁸⁵⁷ In addition, according to Poparić, the UNMO report also indicated that UNPROFOR forces interfered in the exchange of fire.¹²⁸⁵⁸ When put to him in cross-examination that the UNMO report in fact shows that the exchange of fire happened during Žunić's rescue and only because UNPROFOR came under sniper fire first, Poparić disagreed saying "if there is no information on any combat with ABiH, there is information on combat with members of [UNPROFOR]."¹²⁸⁵⁹

¹²⁸⁵⁰ P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled "Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo '92-'94"), p. 31.

¹²⁸⁵¹ According to Poparić, the BiH MUP did not conduct an investigation at the site due to "combat operations". See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992-1995", 15 August 2012), p. 160. However, in cross-examination, Poparić was shown an official note from the Stari Grad SJB referring to the fact that the investigation could not be conducted due to "firing from the aggressors's positions". He commented that this language did not rule out "the possibility that the fire was returned" but conceded that this was an assumption on his part. See Mile Poparić, T. 39213-39215 (4 June 2013); P6361 (Official note of Stari Grad SJB, 10 March 1995). The Chamber considers the language in the official note to be clear and directly contrary to Poparić's assumption. In other words, it is clear from the note that the investigators could not conduct an investigation due to fire from the SRK positions.

¹²⁸⁵² Mile Poparić, T. 38925 (29 May 2013). However, the Chamber notes that medical report describing the location of entry and exit wounds suffered by Žunić is in evidence in this case and was in evidence in the Milošević case. See P1548 (Medical report for Tarik Žunić).

3886. Siniša Maksimović, who briefly replaced Rašević as the Commander of Mrkovići Company in 1994 but left before this incident took place,¹²⁸⁶⁰ testified that the positions of the company were more than 1,000 metres from the incident site and that it would be difficult to see the location of the incident site from those positions.¹²⁸⁶¹ He conceded, however, that he assessed this distance without knowing the address of the incident and on the basis of a photograph given to him.¹²⁸⁶² As noted earlier, Maksimović conceded during his evidence that SRK soldiers opened fire from Špicasta Stijena but claimed that this only happened in response to an attack and that their fire was aimed only at ABiH positions.¹²⁸⁶³ When confronted with the UNMO report referring to Žunić and another civilian being wounded by fire from Špicasta Stijena and the exchange of fire between the UNPROFOR and the SRK soldiers that followed, Maksimović refused to comment as this incident took place when he was no longer the commander in the area.¹²⁸⁶⁴

3887. In addition to the evidence outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts going to the origin of fire, which state that (i) Žunić, a civilian, was shot and seriously wounded by a machine gun from SRK-held positions at Špicasta Stijena when he was walking on Sedrenik street and appeared from behind a sheet of canvas;¹²⁸⁶⁵ and (ii) there was no reason for the sniper to mistake Žunić for a combatant.¹²⁸⁶⁶

3888. The Chamber considers, given Žunić's age at the time of the incident and the fact that he was dressed in civilian clothing and was walking home from school, that he was a civilian and that he was not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident. Contrary to Poparić's opinion that Žunić was caught in an exchange of fire,¹²⁸⁶⁷ the Chamber considers that there was no fighting on that day as Žunić was able to go to school which, according to his testimony, he would not have done otherwise. Furthermore, he was walking on the main street to get home, which he would not have used had there been any fighting in the area. The Chamber is also convinced that there was no fighting when Žunić entered the protective screen on Sedrenik street as he would have otherwise stayed behind it for protection.

¹²⁸⁶⁷ The Chamber also does not accept Poparić's testimony that the fact that another man was wounded on the same day and around the same time indicates that there was an ABiH military unit in one of the houses nearby. First, Poparić does not explain how he reached that conclusion given that such a similar incident can also be explained by the same SRK shooter opening fire at the other man, as was eventually found by the UNMO report.

3889. The Chamber is also satisfied, based on the evidence above, that the area of Špicasta Stijena had a line of sight to the street on which Žunić was walking. Even Poparić's testimony, namely that the chances of seeing people in that area from Špicasta Stijena were small, still allows for that possibility.¹²⁸⁶⁸ In any event, the Chamber accepts Van der Weijden's evidence on this issue, namely that there was a clear view between the incident site and Špicasta Stijena. The Chamber recalls Poparić's testimony that Grdonj Hill also had the view on the incident site and accepts that to be the case. However, relying on the UNMO report of 6 March 1995, which specifically attributes the fire in this incident to the forces on Špicasta Stijena and even refers to an exchange of fire between UNPROFOR and those forces during Žunić's rescue, the Chamber is convinced that the bullet that hit Žunić in fact came from Špicasta Stijena.

3890. The Chamber is further satisfied, based on the evidence of local SRK commanders, that the 7th Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade of the SRK had positions in the area of Špicasta Stijena and would open fire from that area, as attested to by a number of witnesses, including Thomas, Milošević and Gengo. Relying, among other things, on the UNMO report of 6 March 1995, the Chamber is also satisfied that the SRK soldiers located in the area would open sniper fire at the civilians in Sedrenik, as they used the area for "target practice". It is also satisfied, relying on the evidence above,¹²⁸⁶⁹ that the SRK soldiers in the area possessed either sniper rifles or hunting rifles with optic sights, which would have had the range needed to reach Žunić who was around 750 metres away. Finally, given the distance between the incident site and the area of Špicasta Stijena, which would have required a careful shot on the part of the shooter, as well as the fact that the two people trying to help Žunić were also shot at, the Chamber is satisfied that he was deliberately targeted by one of the SRK soldiers on Špicasta Stijena. Given the clothing he was wearing on the day, as well as the fact that he was carrying a blue backpack and was walking in a residential area, far from the command post of the ABiH's 105th Mountain Brigade, the Chamber considers that the SRK soldier in question had no grounds on which to assume that Žunić was a combatant or that he was taking active part in hostilities.

Furthermore, the Chamber recalls that the command post of the 105th Mountain Brigade was located in in the Šipad building in Trampina street and thus was far away from the incident site. See fn. 12741.

¹²⁸⁶⁸ Poparić also claimed that the incident may have taken place in front of another house, based on what he was told at the scene by two people who claimed to have seen the incident. The Chamber notes that what Poparić heard from people living on Sedrenik street is not evidence in this case and that if the Accused wanted to challenge the precise location of this incident using this information he should have called the two people in question to give evidence. The Chamber therefore accepts Žunić's location as testified to by him and by Barry Hogan.

¹²⁸⁶⁹ See para. 3858.

(D) Central area of Novo Sarajevo

3891. Two of the 16 scheduled sniping incidents took place in the areas of Čengić Vila/Dolac Mala and Hrasno Brdo respectively.¹²⁸⁷⁰ Hrasno Brdo is a hill located just behind the suburbs of Hrasno and Dolac Malta, with Grbavica and Vraca to the east and Novi Grad municipality to the west.¹²⁸⁷¹ The Prosecution alleges in relation to both scheduled incidents relevant to this area that the fire originated from the SRK positions in the area of Ozrenska street¹²⁸⁷² located on the upper parts of Hrasno Brdo in Novo Sarajevo.¹²⁸⁷³

(1) Confrontation lines in the area

3892. Ozrenska street was inhabited mostly by Serbs who, sometime in April 1992, organised night guards and armed themselves through the Serb TO.¹²⁸⁷⁴ In May 1992, with the formation of the SRK, the 2nd Infantry Battalion was formed in the area;¹²⁸⁷⁵ it was part of the 1st Romanija Brigade until mid-1993 when it became part of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade.¹²⁸⁷⁶

3893. Slobodan Tuševljak, the Commander of the 1st Platoon of the 4th Company of the 2nd Infantry Battalion from the beginning of the war,¹²⁸⁷⁷ testified that the original line of disengagement between the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb soldiers in the area of Hrasno Brdo ¹²⁸⁷⁰ These are Scheduled Incidents F.4 and F.10.

¹²⁸⁷³ See D2419 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Božo Tomić).

¹²⁸⁷⁴ Božo Tomić, a resident of Ozrenska street, was selected to be a squad commander and given an automatic rifle, while the other men had old M48 rifles or semi-automatic rifles. Muslim areas near Ozrenska street also armed themselves. See D2418 (Witness statement of Božo Tomić dated 5 November 2012), paras. 6–8; Božo Tomić, T. 30159–30164 (13 November 2012).

¹²⁸⁷⁵ Originally, while part of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade, the 2nd Infantry Battalion was known as the 3rd Infantry Battalion but changed its name sometime in mid-1993 to 2nd Infantry Battalion. See D2418 (Witness statement of Božo Tomić dated 5 November 2012), paras. 25–26; Božo Tomić, T. 30178–30179 (13 November 2012).

¹²⁸⁷⁶ Tomić later became deputy commander of a platoon and remained in that position until mid-1994 when he moved to the command of the 2nd Infantry Battalion. See D2418 (Witness statement of Božo Tomić dated 5 November 2012), para. 8. The 2nd Infantry Battalion had five companies, with over 1,000 men in total, and was commanded by a number of men, including Veljko Stojanović and Aco Petrović. See Slobodan Tuševljak, T. 29943–29944 (7 November 2012); D2418 (Witness statement of Božo Tomić dated 5 November 2012), para. 25; Božo Tomić, T. 30199 (13 November 2012); D2420 (Order of 3rd Infantry Battalion, 3 May 1993); P1938 (Witness statement of KDZ310 dated 28 November 2010), para. 29.

was near Zagorska street¹²⁸⁷⁸ but that on 8 June 1992 the Muslim forces pushed his unit some 200 to 250 metres to the south, thus establishing a confrontation line near Ozrenska street, which did not move until the end of the war.¹²⁸⁷⁹ Dušan Zurovac, who was the Commander of the 4th Company between November 1992 and April 1994,¹²⁸⁸⁰ testified that the area of responsibility of his company was on Ozrenska street, from “Pandurevića Kuća” to the cross-roads on Milinkladaska street.¹²⁸⁸¹

3894. Thus, the 4th Company was located some 150 to 200 metres below Ozrenska street,¹²⁸⁸² and controlled the summit of Hrasno Brdo.¹²⁸⁸³ The 4th Company numbered only around 120 local men who were often exhausted from manning the positions without much rest; as a result the company encountered absenteeism and disciplinary problems.¹²⁸⁸⁴ Božo Tomić, the deputy commander of the 3rd Platoon in the 3rd Company of the 2nd Infantry Battalion,¹²⁸⁸⁵ testified that his platoon was positioned to the east of the 4th Company positions, namely above the football stadium in Grbavica and up Hrasno Brdo towards Ozrenska street and beyond it.¹²⁸⁸⁶ According to Tomić, this part of the confrontation line did not change throughout the war.¹²⁸⁸⁷

heavily outnumbered the 4th Company.¹²⁸⁸⁸ In some places the ABiH positions were only between 10 and 20 metres away from the 4th Company's positions.¹²⁸⁸⁹ According to the information Tuševljak had, the command of the 101st Mountain Brigade was located in the building of the Hrasno Brdo local commune and its units had positions in civilian zones.¹²⁸⁹⁰ The goal of the ABiH in this area, in Zurovac's view, was to move the 4th Company further into the depth of the SRK territory and take control of Ozrenska street.¹²⁸⁹¹

3896. According to Zurovac, his company respected the cease-fires as the situation on the frontline in the area was very difficult.¹²⁸⁹² In contrast, ABiH soldiers would often provoke the 4th Company's along the entire separation line, following which it would be forced to return fire.¹²⁸⁹³ UNPROFOR forces often visited the SRK units in the area as this was one of the most difficult Zurovac conceded in cross-examination, however, that ABiH was attacking in order to break the siege of Sarajevo. See Dušan Zurovac, T. 30294–30301 (14 November 2012); P5989 (SRK Order, 16 December 1993); P5980 (SRK conclusions and tasks, 1 April 1994). However, Tuševljak denied this, saying that ABiH would have nowhere to go as the depth of the territory was all Serb territory. See Slobodan Tuševljak, T. 29947–29948 (7 November 2012).

frontlines.¹²⁸⁹⁴ Indeed, Zurovac testified that he lost 54 men largely due to the activities of the 101st Mountain Brigade of the ABiH.¹²⁸⁹⁵

3897. Tuševljak testified that he and his men never received orders to attack civilians or civilian objects—they carried out defensive actions alone and were told to open fire only when attacked and only at enemy positions rather than in the depth of the ABiH territory.¹²⁸⁹⁶ He conceded, however, that in October 1992 plans were made to attack ABiH positions in Asimovo Brdo, which was necessary as ABiH snipers would attack the company's positions from there, but clarified that the attack never took place and that ABiH remained in that location throughout the war.¹²⁸⁹⁷

3898. Based on the evidence above, the Chamber is satisfied that the SRK controlled the positions on and around Ozrenska street on the upper parts of Hrasno Brdo, as alleged by the Prosecution.¹²⁸⁹⁸ In particular, the Chamber finds that this area was in the area of responsibility of the 2nd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade. The Chamber is also satisfied that due to the proximity of two warring sides, it was one of the more difficult confrontation lines to man, and that the local SRK commanders in the area faced a number of issues in their units, including shortage of men, absenteeism, and desertion.

(2) Snipers in the area

3899. Initially, according to Zurovac, the 4th Company was better armed than the ABiH units in the area but that changed by the time he left the company in April 1994, insofar as infantry weapons were concerned.¹²⁸⁹⁹

¹²⁸⁹⁴ Dušan Zurovac, T. 30273–30275 (14 November 2012); D2436 (Report of 2nd Infantry Battalion, 5 December 1993); Božo Tomić, T. 30209–30214 (13 November 2012); D2421 (Order of 2nd Infantry Battalion, 26 May 1993).

¹²⁸⁹⁵ Dušan Zurovac, T. 30275–30276 (14 November 2012). According to Tuševljak, around 230 Serb soldiers were killed in Ozrenska street, as well as a few dozen civilians. See D2391 (Witness statement of Slobodan Tuševljak dated 5 November 2012), para. 17. See also D2418 (Witness statement of Božo Tomić dated 5 November 2012), para. 22.

In cross-examination, however, Zurovac confined this claim to infantry weapons alone. See Dušan Zurovac, T. 30301–30305 (14 November 2012); P5990 (Map of Sarajevo); P5985 (Request for ammunition of the 4th Infantry Company, 3 December 1993).

3900. Zurovac denied that the 4th Company had snipers and stated that he did not know whether snipers were present in the 2nd Infantry Battalion.¹²⁹⁰⁰ When shown a list he prepared and signed and which contained names of men who had deserted the unit and took weapons with them, he conceded that four such men were recorded as having taken a sniper rifle each, but testified that he did not know how they obtained those rifles since the weapons had been issued before he arrived to the area.¹²⁹⁰¹ He remained adamant that his company did not have snipers to whom he, as a commander, assigned tasks.¹²⁹⁰²

It shows that he requested 7.62 mm ammunition for the M84 rifle. See Dušan Zurovac, T. 30304–30305 (14 November 2012); P5985 (Request for ammunition of the 4th Infantry Company, 3 December 1993); Božo Tomić, T. 30185–30188 (13 November 2012); P5983 (List of weapons of the 4th Infantry Company, 22 October 1993). Tomić confirmed that M84 had a range of up to 1000 metres if on a tripod, while M53 had a range of up to 1500 metres if on a tripod. He explained, however, that M53 guns his unit had were old and unsafe for use. See Božo Tomić, T. 30187–30190 (13 November 2012); P5983 (List of weapons of the 4th Infantry Company, 22 October 1993); P5984 (Ammunition status of the 4th Infantry Company, 8 June 1993); P5985 (Request for ammunition of the 4th Infantry Company, 3 December 1993).

¹²⁹⁰⁷ Božo Tomić, T. 30233 (13 November 2012).

¹²⁹⁰⁸ Božo Tomić, T. 30234–30235 (13 November 2012).

3902. KDZ310 testified that he observed members of a sniping unit shooting from a house on Ozrenka street and could even see their long barrelled rifles with various optical equipment fitted to them.¹²⁹⁰⁹ He also observed them use a machine-gun with an optic sight fitted on it which would open bursts of automatic fire.¹²⁹¹⁰ These snipers told KDZ310 that they targeted both civilians and soldiers alike.¹²⁹¹¹ KDZ310 himself observed that the snipers would usually shoot at intersections and transversals, which were built horizontally around town and could be seen well from the house in question.¹²⁹¹² While protective barriers and containers were set up in those areas as a shield from sniper fire, KDZ310 noted that he could still see—using his binoculars—people going up to these barriers; the snipers in question also confirmed to him that they would target persons near the barriers.¹²⁹¹³

3903. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied, relying particularly on the list of deserters referred to above, that the SRK units in the area had sniper rifles or at the very least rifles with optical sights. It is also satisfied, based on the above, that they had machine-guns that used both 7.62 and 7.9 mm ammunition. Finally, relying on the evidence of KDZ310, the Chamber finds that a number of professional SRK snipers were also positioned on Ozrenka street and would target civilians and combatants alike.¹²⁹¹⁴

September 1993 (Scheduled Incident F.4)

3904. The Indictment alleges that, on 3 September 1993, Nafa Tarić, a 35 year old woman, and her eight year old daughter Elma Tarić, were shot and wounded by a single bullet while walking together on Ivana Krndelja street, in the centre of Sarajevo. According to the Indictment, the bullet wounded the mother in her left thigh and wounded the daughter in her right hand and in her abdomen.¹²⁹¹⁵ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution submits that the fire came from the SRK-held positions on Ozrenka street, which had a clear and unobstructed view of the incident site.¹²⁹¹⁶ The ¹²⁹⁰⁹ KDZ310 explained that the guns these snipers used had much longer barrels than the guns of regular soldiers he was with. See P1938 (Witness statement of KDZ310 dated 28 November 2010), para. 48.

¹²⁹¹⁰ P1938 (Witness statement of KDZ310 dated 28 November 2010), para. 48. The Chamber also recalls that Maletić testified that there was a sniper squad in his battalion and that it was subordinated directly to the battalion commander rather than to company or platoon commanders. See D2519 (Witness statement of Dragan Maletić dated 9 November 2012), para. 31; Dragan Maletić, T. 30846–30848 (3 December 2012), T. 30873–30874 (4 December 2012).

¹²⁹¹¹ KDZ310 also testified that his own immediate commander told him and the other men in his platoon that they could open fire freely and shoot at anything that moved. See P1938 (Witness statement of KDZ310 dated 28 November 2010), paras. 37, 48; KDZ310, T. 9275–9276, 9278 (29 November 2010).

Accused submits, however, that the victims could not have been shot from the SRK positions on Ozrenska street.¹²⁹¹⁷

3905. On 3 September 1993, Nafa Tarić and her eight year old daughter Elma Tarić were walking from their apartment in Hrasno down Ivan Krndelja street.¹²⁹¹⁸ They crossed the street holding hands behind a line of containers installed to provide protection against sniper fire.¹²⁹¹⁹ As they emerged from the cover of the barriers, they were shot.¹²⁹²⁰ A single bullet hit Nafa Tarić's left thigh, then grazed her daughter's hand and penetrated her stomach.¹²⁹²¹ They managed to crawl away from the exposed position and were taken to the hospital.¹²⁹²²

3906. A police officer, known as Witness J in the Galić trial, concluded that the shot had been fired from the SRK positions on Ozrenska street and based his conclusion not only on common knowledge but also on the fact that the police was unable to immediately access the site because of on-going shooting from those positions.¹²⁹²³

3907. Hogan visited the site of the incident and recorded the GPS co-ordinates, as well as video footage, of the exact location of the victims when they were shot.¹²⁹²⁴ He explained that they had just left the protective barrier and were crossing the open stretch of the footpath when the bullet struck them.¹²⁹²⁵

3908. While investigating this incident, Van der Weijden had access to witness statements of a number of witnesses to this event, including Nafa Tarić, as well as to materials prepared by the Prosecution.¹²⁹²⁶ Looking at the victims' injuries first, Van der Weijden thought that any bullet up to the 7.92 mm calibre was capable of causing them, and that a higher calibre was not used as it would have caused more damage.¹²⁹²⁷ Given that only one bullet caused the injuries to the victims,

Van der Weijden concluded that the bullet was most likely fired from a semi-automatic sniper rifle, either an M76 or an M91, both of which are capable of delivering accurate fire at long ranges.¹²⁹²⁸ Van der Weijden was told that the alleged shooting position was Ozrenska street, to the south of and 829 metres away from the incident site, which was an extreme range for these types of rifles.¹²⁹²⁹ He visited both the incident site and Ozrenska street, and observed that the latter offers clear views of the former.¹²⁹³⁰ He opined that the bullet must have come from the south since the shooter located to the north of the incident had a view of the victims and would not have waited that long before firing at them as they were almost behind the cover again when they were shot.¹²⁹³¹ Van der Weijden concluded that the bullet was fired somewhere from the area which was between 200 and 1,104 metres to the south of the incident site.¹²⁹³² Further, given that the victims were walking hand in hand, the height of the daughter in relation to her mother would have led the shooter to instantly identify the two victims as civilians.¹²⁹³³

3909. During cross-examination Van der Weijden conceded that he was informed that Serbs were holding positions on Ozrenska street but never told that the street itself was a separation line and that ABiH was also there.¹²⁹³⁴ He also conceded that the houses on the north side of Ozrenska street would have a better view of the incident site, but explained that some houses on the south side of the street would also have a view on the incident site.¹²⁹³⁵ Finally, Van der Weijden accepted in cross-examination that he could not conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the shot came from the Serb side.¹²⁹³⁶

3910. Poparić testified that he visited both the incident site and the area of Ozrenska street¹²⁹³⁷ and that the victims could not have been shot from the closest SRK positions in Hrasno Brdo, which he calculated as being 680 metres away,¹²⁹³⁸ because they were visible only for about 1.2 seconds after leaving the protective barrier and before being struck by the bullet.¹²⁹³⁹ This, according to Poparić, would not have given the shooter sufficient time to spot them and then fire at them.¹²⁹⁴⁰ In other words, the victims could not have been deliberately targeted from SRK positions in Ozrenska street as they would have had to have been shot at before the shooter actually observed them.¹²⁹⁴¹ The Chamber notes that the Prosecution never cross-examined Poparić on this part of his analysis.

3911. Poparić also testified that there was no line of sight between the incident site and the part of Ozrenska street indicated by Nafa Tarić to Hogan as the origin of fire.¹²⁹⁴² He based this conclusion on the photograph he took of the Hrasno Brdo area from the surroundings of the incident site and which he compared with a photograph of the same area but taken from further away.¹²⁹⁴³ Because the relevant part of Ozrenska street indicated by Tarić cannot be seen in the first photograph but can in the second, Poparić concluded that there was no line of sight to the incident site.¹²⁹⁴⁴ When confronted in cross-examination with the photograph taken by Van der Weijden from that alleged sniping location and showing a clear, straight, line of sight to the incident site, he stated that he did not know where the photograph was taken from and that the co-

¹²⁹³⁷ Poparić explained that he knew the area very well as his wife lived nearby. He visited it a number of times. Mile Poparić, T. 38878–38879, 38892–38893 (29 May 2013).

¹²⁹³⁹ Poparić determined the length of this time on the basis of the footage filmed by Hogan in which Nafa Tarić is seen walking from the area that was protected by the screen to the area where she was standing with her daughter when shot. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 67–69.

¹²⁹⁴⁰ Poparić came to this conclusion on the assumption that an M84 machine-gun was used and, using the firing tables for that gun, calculated that the bullet shot by it would have taken 1.21 seconds to reach the victims. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 73–74; Mile Poparić, T. 38872–38874 (29 May 2013).

¹²⁹⁴² Tarić made this indication in the video footage recorded by Barry Hogan. While this footage is not in evidence in this case, Poparić produced stills from it in his report. ¹²⁹⁴⁴ Poparić also calculated, using Google Earth, that 540 metres was the distance between the incident site and the line from which the incident site could actually be seen. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 71–73.

ordinates given by Van der Weijden of that location “do not say a thing about the photograph itself”.¹²⁹⁴⁵

3912. While not accepting that there was a line of sight from the alleged origin of fire as indicated by Tarić, Poparić conceded that there was a line of sight between the victims and the SRK positions on Ozrenska street located further to the east of the origin of fire alleged by Tarić—which he measured to be about 730 or 740 metres away from the incident site.¹²⁹⁴⁶ He also conceded that sniper rifles used by trained snipers would be sufficiently precise to hit a person at that distance.¹²⁹⁴⁷ However, he pointed out that, according to the witnesses, a burst of gunfire was heard in this incident, indicating that sniper rifle was not the weapon used.¹²⁹⁴⁸

3913. Zurovac testified that the incident site was about 900 metres away from the positions of the 4th Company and that there was no clear line of sight between those two locations, as the company was located in “some sort of a valley” and there were hills in the way, obstructing the view.¹²⁹⁴⁹ However, Zurovac, like Poparić, conceded that a line of sight existed from an area further to the east of the positions of his company.¹²⁹⁵⁰ Tuševljak confirmed this and noted that a line of sight existed to the east of the 4th Company’s positions, in the locations manned by the 2nd Company of the 2nd Infantry Battalion.¹²⁹⁵¹ However, he testified that, as far as he knew, on the day of the incident no fire was opened on civilians from Ozrenska street.¹²⁹⁵² Galić also testified that he did

The Chamber recalls that it admitted P6363 only for the purpose of understanding Poparić’s evidence and is now citing to it for that purpose alone.

¹²⁹⁴⁷ Mile Poparić, T. 38889 (29 May 2013).

¹²⁹⁴⁸ Mile Poparić, T. 38889–38890 (29 May 2013). However, the Chamber notes that Poparić recounted Tarić’s evidence on this issue, which was that she heard two more shots after she was wounded. In other words, it is not necessarily clear that she heard a burst of fire as opposed to two more single bullets being fired by the shooter. D4884 (Mile Poparić’s expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), p. 69.

¹²⁹⁴⁹ The Chamber notes that at this point Zurovac incorrectly claimed that one could not see the incident site in a photograph shown to him by the Accused during examination-in-chief, which he said was taken in a location unfamiliar to him, but somewhere below Ozrenska street. When shown a second photograph, he conceded that the line of sight existed, noting that this photograph was taken from an area further to the east of the positions of his company in a location unknown to him. See Dušan Zurovac, T. 30249–30251, 30254, 30260–30262 (14 November 2012); D2430 (Photograph of Sarajevo); D2431 (Photograph of Sarajevo). The Chamber notes, however, that both photographs were taken from the same location and that the incident site is visible in both, as testified to by Poparić. See D3623 (Photograph of buildings marked by Mile Poparić). Further, the Prosecution stated on the record, during its cross-examination of Tuševljak, that both photographs were taken from the same location and that one was simply a more zoomed version of the other. See T. 29956–29957 (7 November 2012).

not order any activity against the area where the incident took place and had received no information about it at the time.¹²⁹⁵³

3914. In addition to the above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts going to the origin of fire: (i) there was an unobstructed line of sight from SRK positions on Hrasno Brdo to the location of the incident;¹²⁹⁵⁴ (ii) Nafa and Elma Tarić were injured by a shot fired from this area;¹²⁹⁵⁵ and (iii) Nafa and Elma Tarić, civilians,¹²⁹⁵⁶ were deliberately targeted from an SRK-controlled position.¹²⁹⁵⁷

3915. The Chamber considers, given their clothes, age, and gender, as well as the fact that they were walking home when the incident happened, that both Nafa Tarić and her daughter Elma were civilians and that they were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident. The Chamber is also satisfied that the SRK units, belonging to the 2nd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade, were located just below Ozrenska street on the upper parts of Hrasno Brdo and that they had a line of sight to the incident site, both from the location indicated by Nafa Tarić as the origin of fire, and the positions east of that location. In other words, the Chamber accepts Van der Weijden's evidence about there being a clear line of sight from Ozrenska street onto Ivana Krndelja street from the positions alleged to be the origin of fire by Nafa Tarić.¹²⁹⁵⁸ The Chamber is also satisfied, as found above,¹²⁹⁵⁹ that the SRK soldiers in the area possessed either sniper rifles or rifles with optic sights, as well as machine-guns, all of which had the range necessary to reach the incident site, which was between 680 and 900 metres away, depending on the positions. Finally, the Chamber finds that there was no military activity in the area at the time of the incident.

3916. In terms of the identity of the perpetrators in this incident, the Chamber finds that the bullet that struck the victims was fired by the SRK snipers on Ozrenska street and that the victims were deliberately targeted. In this respect, the Chamber recalls KDZ310's evidence according to which SRK snipers located on Ozrenska street would target civilians at major intersections visible from ¹²⁹⁵⁸ While both Zurovac and Tuševljak testified that their company's positions did not have the line of sight to the incident site, this does not change the Chamber's finding that the units of the 2nd Infantry Battalion were in positions that had such a line of sight on the incident site. Indeed, this was admitted by both Zurovac and Tuševljak, as well as Poparić.

¹²⁹⁵⁹ See para. 3903.

Ozrenska street, including those that had protective barriers or containers.¹²⁹⁶⁰ In addition, the local police later established that the fire came from SRK positions on Ozrenska street and was unable to immediately access the site because of the on-going fire from those positions.¹²⁹⁶¹ The Chamber also recalls that, as recounted by Poparić in his analysis of this incident, Nafa Tarić heard two shots after being struck by the bullet.¹²⁹⁶² This indicates that the two victims were deliberately targeted by the shooter even after they were wounded.

(4) Ferde Hauptmana street, formerly Miljenka Cvitkovića street, 22 July 1994 (Scheduled Incident F.10)

3918. The Indictment alleges that on 22 July 1994, Seid Solak, a 13 year old boy was shot and wounded in the abdomen while window shopping with his mother and sister on Miljenka Cvitkovića (presently Ferde Hauptmana) street in the Čengiće Vila area of Sarajevo.¹²⁹⁶⁴ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution alleges that the fire came from SRK positions on Hrasno Brdo, in the area of the Pržulj house on Zagorska street, which was a notorious sniping nest.¹²⁹⁶⁵ The Prosecution also explains that the site of the incident was erroneously alleged to be on Miljenka Cvitkovića street but is instead at Džemala Bijedića, number 20, which runs parallel to Miljenka Cvitkovića and lies just after a small passage from Miljenka Cvitkovića.¹²⁹⁶⁶ The Accused argues that these are in fact two unrelated incidents and that the boy was wounded on Miljenka Cvitkovića street under circumstances different than those discussed in the evidence.¹²⁹⁶⁷

3919. On 22 July 1994, Seid Solak, a 13 year old boy, and his sister went out with their mother to visit a relative.¹²⁹⁶⁸ It was a clear day.¹²⁹⁶⁹ They stopped to look at a shoe shop window on Miljenka Cvitkovića street.¹²⁹⁷⁰ Seid got off his bicycle and at that moment was shot in the lower part of his stomach.¹²⁹⁷¹ The bullet tore through his body and shattered the shop window.¹²⁹⁷² He was taken to an emergency unit where he was hospitalised for several days.¹²⁹⁷³ There was no military activity in the area at the time of the incident,¹²⁹⁷⁴ as indicated by the fact that several children were playing and a neighbourhood restaurant was open.¹²⁹⁷⁵

3920. Kučanin prepared an official note¹²⁹⁷⁶ relating to the incident.¹²⁹⁷⁷ When at the scene, he met with UNPROFOR soldiers and they conducted an investigation together.¹²⁹⁷⁸ Kučanin was informed that two shots were fired but that the victim had already been taken to the hospital so it was difficult to determine the position he was in when shot.¹²⁹⁷⁹ However, the investigators were able to get that information from an eyewitness.¹²⁹⁸⁰ According to Kučanin, the first shot hit the boy in the stomach while he was standing on Miljenka Cvitkovića street, at number 4, in front of a shoe shop and next to a passage in a building, which was near the entrance to a café called Arijana.¹²⁹⁸¹ The other bullet went through the sunshade of the café, then passed through its window, changed direction as a result, hit an inner wall, ricocheted, and finally lodged in the floor of the café, thus leaving three different bullet impacts for the investigators to consider.¹²⁹⁸² The bullet was removed for forensic analysis and it was established that it was of the 7.62 mm calibre.¹²⁹⁸³ By connecting the holes in the sunshade and the window, Kučanin concluded that the bullets came from “the aggressor’s positions at Zagorska street, the Pržulja house”, which was a “well known [VRS] sniping place” located in Hrasno Brdo, in Novo Sarajevo.¹²⁹⁸⁴ On cross-examination, Kučanin admitted that he did not know where the confrontation lines in Sarajevo were but noted that his task was to establish where the bullet came from, regardless of whether that territory was in control of the ABiH or VRS.¹²⁹⁸⁵ Kučanin and the UNPROFOR team then talked to the doctor who treated the victim and learned that the injury was serious as the bullet had passed from the left to the right side of the victim’s stomach, although it did not injure any of his internal organs.¹²⁹⁸⁶

When investigating this incident, Van der Weijden reviewed the photographs of the incident scene taken by the BiH MUP, as well as the witness statements of Kučanin and the victim.¹²⁹⁸⁸ He also visited the incident site using Hogan’s co-ordinates, checked for possible locations from which the shot might have been fired,¹²⁹⁸⁹ and then visited those locations to see which was most likely.¹²⁹⁹⁰ He visited the alleged location of the shooter, as provided to him by the Prosecution, and noted that there was now a new building near the incident site removing the line of sight between that particular location and the incident site.¹²⁹⁹¹ However, he noted that in 1994 there would have been “plenty of view” towards the incident site from Hrasno Brdo.¹²⁹⁹²

3923. Van der Weijden was not able to determine the exact location from which the shot was fired but rather a general area from which it might have been fired, namely the area of Hrasno Brdo.¹²⁹⁹³ On cross-examination, he explained that he excluded the high-rise building near the site of the incident as the origin of fire because there was a large group of people present there at the time of the incident which would not have been the case if there was firing from that building.¹²⁹⁹⁴ Recalling that the bullet found on the scene was a 7.62 mm bullet, he noted that it was not possible to tell whether it was 7.62X39 mm or 7.62X54R mm bullet; however, he excluded the former on the basis of the “distance from which [it] was likely fired” and thus concluded that the weapon most likely used was an M76 rifle or a civilian hunting rifle.¹²⁹⁹⁵ Van der Weijden testified that since children were playing at the incident site on the day of the incident, it is unlikely that any fighting would have been ongoing nearby.¹²⁹⁹⁶ In addition, even though the victim could have been confused for an adult, Van der Weijden thought that the presence of his mother, sister, and the other children would have indicated to the shooter that he was not a combatant.¹²⁹⁹⁷

3924. The Accused put to Van der Weijden and Hogan that a mistake was made during the investigation of this incident because the café that can be seen in the photographs prepared by the BiH MUP is actually on Džemala Bijedića street, the name of which was never changed, and that Miljenka Cvitkovića street is located behind it.¹²⁹⁹⁸ Van der Weijden, having no knowledge of the names of the streets involved, could not comment on this except to say that he visited the location of the incident on the basis of the GPS co-ordinates provided to him by the Prosecution and that he also identified it using the photographs of the BiH MUP.¹²⁹⁹⁹ Hogan was adamant that the location of the incident, as depicted in the video footage he prepared and on the photographs of the BiH MUP, was correctly recorded, regardless of the address used by the BiH MUP in its reports; he also noted that the location of the incident is known locally as “the hundred meter building on Ferde Hauptmana street” even though Ferde Hauptmana, formerly Miljenka Cvitkovića, is the square behind it.¹³⁰⁰⁰

3925. Poparić testified that, since all the documents specify that the incident took place on Miljenka Cvitkovića street, he could not accept that this was an accidental mistake, especially given that Džemala Bijedića is one of the best known and longest streets in Sarajevo.¹³⁰⁰¹ Thus, and also based on the fact that there is no “physical evidence” that the victim was shot in front of the shop window, Poparić testified that he was convinced that the incident in fact occurred in Miljenka Cvitkovića street, not Džemala Bijedića street, under circumstances different to those described in the official BiH MUP report.¹³⁰⁰²

3926. In terms of the origin of fire, Poparić testified that it did not come, as alleged, from the Pržulj house, because when he visited that house there was no view of the incident site from it.¹³⁰⁰³ In addition, he explained that the distance between Pržulj house and the incident site is 1,245 metres while the altitude is 95 metres, meaning that the bullet would have to have a low angle of descent and a flat trajectory, which he conceded corresponded to the traces in the café.¹³⁰⁰⁴ However, Poparić then proceeded to argue that those traces were the result of an incident unrelated to the victim’s wounding.¹³⁰⁰⁵

In cross-examination, Poparić was asked about the pool of blood seen in front of the shop on one of the contemporaneous photographs taken by the BiH MUP and how it came to be there if the boy was wounded on Miljenka Cvitkovića street. He responded that the boy sustained a small wound and that the pool of blood looked like water to him because it was too big to be blood. Poparić conceded, however, that he was not a doctor. See Mile Poparić, T. 39239–39240 (4 June 2013).

¹³⁰⁰⁵ Poparić made that conclusion on the basis of the contemporaneous photograph of the awning of the café and two different holes he detected on that photograph, arguing that the hole higher up in the awning was in fact a bullet hole, whereas the hole the BiH MUP focused on was not a bullet hole at all but a tear made by a sharp object. Analysing the higher hole, Poparić concluded that it was probably the result of a stray bullet fired in the air, which then led him to conclude that the incident involving the café was unrelated to the wounding of the boy. See D4884 (Mile Poparić’s expert report entitled “Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995”, 15

3927. Poparić also criticised the BiH MUP for failing to detect the traces that would indicate origin of fire more accurately and for using an instrument “whose principle of operation [he did] not know” but which he doubted,¹³⁰⁰⁶ instead of determining the angle of descent and incoming trajectory by measuring the co-ordinates of the traces.¹³⁰⁰⁷ Finally, he argued that the distance of 1,245 metres exceeds the capacity of a sniper rifle, meaning that the shot must have been fired by a machine-gun.¹³⁰⁰⁸

3928. Zurovac testified that his company’s positions were some 1.5 kilometres away from the location of the incident and that the boy was standing with his back turned towards those positions when shot, so that there was no theoretical possibility for him to be shot by the soldiers of the 4th Company soldiers.¹³⁰⁰⁹ Tuševljak testified that his platoon never fired on the boy, that their positions were some 1.2 kilometres away from the incident site and that they did not have weapons with that range.¹³⁰¹⁰ Furthermore, he testified that no line of sight existed between his positions and the incident site and that there were no snipers in his unit.¹³⁰¹¹ He conceded, however, that there was a line of sight between the positions of the company to his right, either the 2nd or the 1st Company.¹³⁰¹² He also conceded that M84 and M53 machine-guns his platoon had could cover the distance of 1.2 kilometres but explained that these machine-guns were located further back in the rear and did not have the optical sights necessary to accurately hit targets at that range.¹³⁰¹³

3929. Galić explained that he did not know about this incident at the time and only heard about it during his own trial.¹³⁰¹⁴ He also testified that there were ABiH forces in the area of Čengić Vila where the incident took place.¹³⁰¹⁵ He could not, therefore, deny that there was firing in the area and/or comment on what sort of firing it was.¹³⁰¹⁶

3930. In addition to the above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts going to the origin of fire, namely: (i) Seid Solak was not hit by a stray bullet but was deliberately targeted;¹³⁰¹⁷ (ii) a clear line of sight existed between the site of the incident and SRK positions;¹³⁰¹⁸ and (iii) Seid Solak, a civilian,¹³⁰¹⁹ was injured by a shot deliberately fired at him from SRK-controlled territory on Hrasno Brdo.¹³⁰²⁰

3931. Looking at the location of the incident first, the Chamber is satisfied that the location recorded by Hogan and seen in BiH MUP contemporaneous photographs is the actual location at which the incident happened.¹³⁰²¹ It is also satisfied that it was erroneously noted in the official BiH MUP report and in the Indictment as being on Miljenka Cvitkovića street rather than on Džemala Bijedića street. This error occurred due to the fact that Miljenka Cvitkovića street is on the other side of the passage close to which Solak was standing when shot. However, this being an error as to the street name alone, it did not in any way affect the investigations done at the time of the incident, or subsequently, and does not therefore affect the evidence outlined above. Furthermore, this error was clarified during the trial and did not in any way undermine the Accused's notice of the allegations against him in relation to this incident. Finally, the Chamber finds Poparić's claim that the incident happened somewhere other than where the victim said it happened completely unreasonable. In making such a claim Poparić chose to ignore a number of factors, including (i) the fact that Kučanin and his colleagues, including ballistics experts, conducted an investigation at the location on the day of the incident, and that this was the location indicated to Hogan by the victim; (ii) that the Chamber has in evidence a contemporaneous photograph clearly showing a pool of blood in front of the shop marked by the victim;¹³⁰²² and (iii) that at the time of the incident there would have been a number of eye-witnesses, including the victim's sister and mother, who talked to the police and, later, to Prosecution investigators about this incident and its location. What Poparić is implying by his testimony is a conspiracy of large magnitude, conducted over a number of years and involving various individuals and entities. However, there is not a shred of evidence to support this implication. For all those reasons, the position to know and that the SRK commanders insisted that this area should never be targeted as it was the centre of Sarajevo and that museums were located there. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37836–37827 (7 May 2013).

¹³⁰²¹ The Chamber recalls that it visited this location during its site visit to Sarajevo. The Chamber also recalls that in its Order on Submissions for a Site Visit, dated 15 November 2010, at paragraph 6, it stated that the purpose of its site visit to Sarajevo was not to gather evidence or receive any submissions from the parties but to permit the Chamber to become more familiar with the topography of certain key locations and thus assist its determination of the charges in the Indictment related to Sarajevo.

¹³⁰²² The Chamber notes that Poparić uses this photograph in his report. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 120, Image 82.

Chamber finds that Seid Solak was wounded on Džemala Bijedića street, near Miljenka Cvitkovića street.

3932. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber once again cannot accept Poparić's analysis as it is based on a number of speculations. For example, while Poparić testified that there was no view between Pržulj house and the incident site, he completely ignored the other evidence which suggests that a new building was built following the incident, blocking the previously existing line of sight between the two locations.

3933. In addition, Poparić's analysis that the damage to the awning of the café came about as a result of another incident is again unreasonable. First, it is based on a photograph of what may or may not be a hole in the awning. There is no close up photograph of that "hole" and it is difficult to see if it is indeed a hole or some entirely different type of trace, such as a stain or a shade. The Chamber notes that this "hole" was not referred to by the investigators on the scene at the time of the incident and there is nothing in the evidence suggesting that it is even a hole, let alone a bullet hole. Furthermore, in conducting this particular analysis, Poparić appears to ignore the fact that the BiH MUP investigators talked to the people in the café on the day of the incident, as well as the people outside of the café who witnessed the shooting.¹³⁰²³ Therefore, it would have been clear to those investigators that the café suffered the damage right after or around the time when the victim was wounded, which is why they noted this sequence of events in the official report at the time. To claim that the two incidents are unconnected is therefore unreasonable and seriously throws into doubt Poparić's credibility on this incident.

3934. Finally, as far as Poparić's criticism of the investigation method used by the BiH MUP investigators, the Chamber is satisfied that they used the well known and accepted method of tracing a bullet through its impact holes, as described earlier in this Judgement.¹³⁰²⁴ Thus, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's criticisms in this regard.

3935. Given the age of the victim, as well as the fact that he was on his bicycle and in the company of his mother and sister when shot, the Chamber has no doubt that he was a civilian and that he was not taking a direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident. Indeed, given the presence of a number of people around the incident site on that day, the Chamber finds that there was no military activity or fighting in the area. Based on the evidence above, the Chamber also considers that the location in which the boy was standing when shot was visible from the upper parts of Hrasno Brdo, including from the area around Ozrenska and Zagorska streets.¹³⁰²⁵ Furthermore, the Chamber accepts Van der Weijden's evidence that at the time of the incident there would have been a clear line of sight between a number of positions on and near Ozrenska street, including the Pržulj house, and the incident site.¹³⁰²⁶ The Chamber is also satisfied that Ozrenska and Zagorska streets, as well as the Pržulj house, were in the zone of responsibility of the SRK's 2nd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade and that its units had sniper rifles and machine-guns which had the necessary range to reach the incident site. Furthermore, as noted above,¹³⁰²⁷ the Chamber accepts KDZ310's evidence that professional snipers were also positioned on Ozrenska street and would target civilians and combatants alike. Relying further on Van der Weijden's evidence that the shooter could not have been located near the incident site due to the large number of people in the area at the time of the incident, as well as the investigation conducted by the local investigators on the day of the incident, the Chamber is convinced that the shooter was located in the zone of responsibility of the 2nd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade, as established by the local investigators. The Chamber is also convinced that the shooter targeted the victim deliberately, as illustrated by the fact that more than one bullet was fired on the incident site.

(E) Scheduled sniping incidents F.1 and F.5

3936. The last two sniping incidents alleged in the Indictment took place in two different parts of Sarajevo, the southeastern suburb of Širokača and the northwestern area of Briješko Brdo respectively. Each is examined by the Chamber below.

(1) Žagrići street, Širokača, 13 December 1992 (Scheduled Incident F.1)

3937. According to the Indictment, on 13 December 1992, Anisa Pita, a three year old girl, was shot and wounded in her right leg on the porch of her residence on Žagrići street in the Širokača area of Sarajevo.¹³⁰²⁸ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the shot that wounded Pita was fired from the SRK-controlled area of Baba Stijena.¹³⁰²⁹ The Accused argues that Anisa Pita's ¹³⁰²⁴ See para. 3628.

¹³⁰²⁵ While both Zurovac and Tuševljak testified that their company's positions did not have the line of sight to the incident site, this does not change the Chamber's finding that the units of the 2nd Infantry Battalion were in positions that had such a line of sight onto the incident site. Indeed, as outlined above, this was admitted by Tuševljak during his testimony.

house cannot be seen from Baba Stijena and that Pita was wounded in an exchange of fire taking place at the confrontation line.¹³⁰³⁰

3938. Širokača is a suburb located in the southeastern part of Sarajevo south of Miljacka River and east of Grbavica.¹³⁰³¹ Baba Stijena, or Baba Rock, is a ridge on the northern slope of Mount Trebević, just below the Pale-Lukavica road, which overlooks Sarajevo, including Širokača.¹³⁰³² During the war, it was in the zone of responsibility of the 2nd Company of the 3rd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade of the SRK.¹³⁰³³ On the other side of the confrontation line was the 10th Mountain Brigade, later 115th Mountain Brigade, of the 1st Corps of the ABiH.¹³⁰³⁴

3939. On 13 December 1992, between 10 and 10:30 a.m., Anisa Pita and her father left their house in the morning as there was no ongoing fighting¹³⁰³⁵ and went to a water source about 150 metres from the house, where people were already lining up.¹³⁰³⁶ Anisa Pita remained there for a short time as she met another child, named Elma Smajkan, and they decided to go back to the Pitas' house to play.¹³⁰³⁷ As Anisa Pita arrived to her house, she was wounded above her right knee by a bullet which subsequently exited her body.¹³⁰³⁸ The fog had lifted by that time.¹³⁰³⁹

3940. Hogan visited the site of the incident and recorded Anisa Pita's exact position and location when she was shot, namely at the front door of her house.¹³⁰⁴⁰ Van der Weijden also visited the

While Škrba testified that the 2nd Company in the area was part of the 2nd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade, the Chamber notes that prior to mid-1993, this battalion was called 3rd Infantry Battalion and was part of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade. See fn. 12875; D2622 (Witness statement of Željko Bambarež dated 9 December 2012), paras. 3, 5; D2418 (Witness statement of Božo Tomić dated 5 November 2012), paras. 8, 25–26; Božo Tomić, T. 30178–30179 (13 November 2012). Contrary to Škrba, Galić testified that the SRK forces “may have had access” to one part of the Baba Stijena area, while the ABiH forces had their positions in another part of the area, just below the Lukavica-Pale road. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37473–37474 (22 April 2013). incident site¹³⁰⁴¹ and examined the doorway of the house; he crouched down to the girl's level, and then observed the surroundings to see where the shot may have originated from.¹³⁰⁴² Since the garden of the house was completely walled off, he was only able to observe Baba Stijena and thus concluded that Baba Stijena was the only possible origin of fire.¹³⁰⁴³ He also visited Baba Stijena and observed that it offered a dominating view of the valley below and thus would have been an obvious location for a machine-gun emplacement and/or a sniper position.¹³⁰⁴⁴ Van der Weijden noted two other possible origins of fire which he excluded, namely (i) a house seen in the area between the girl's house and Baba Stijena, which he excluded because it would have made no sense tactically¹³⁰⁴⁵ to have a shooting position in that location and (ii) an area 25 metres away, directly next to Žagrići street, which he excluded because it would have been unlikely for the child to be playing on the street and later on her porch if the soldiers with guns were nearby.¹³⁰⁴⁶

3941. Van der Weijden also thought that the calibre of the bullet used in this incident would not have been greater than 7.92 mm as greater damage would have been caused to Anisa Pita's right leg in that case.¹³⁰⁴⁷ Noting the distance between Baba Stijena and the incident site, namely 920 metres, and noting also that "one or more" shots were heard, Van der Weijden concluded that either a semi-automatic sniper rifle (M76 or M91), or a machine-gun (M84 or M53) was used, although the range would have been extreme for sniper rifles.¹³⁰⁴⁸

3942. As for the identification of the victim by the shooter, Van der Weijden was told that she was wearing a red top and blue bottoms, and that she was standing in the doorway of her house when

¹³⁰⁴⁶ Patrick van der Weijden, T. 6995–6996 (27 September 2010), T. 7172–7173 (29 September 2010).

¹³⁰⁴⁷ Van der Weijden thought that both 7.62 mm and 7.9 mm bullets could have been used in this incident, although the former was less likely due to distances involved. He also noted that given the small size and mass of a three year old's leg, the bullet would not lose much energy while going through and thus would not have caused the same "devastation" as in the case of an adult. See P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled "Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo '92-'94"), p. 13; Patrick van der Weijden, T. 6996–7004 (27 September 2010).

shot, meaning that she did not reach above half of the doorway.¹³⁰⁴⁹ These factors, according to him, would have made her easily distinguishable as a civilian, even with the distances involved.¹³⁰⁵⁰

3943. On cross-examination, Van der Weijden rejected the Accused's submission that the shot may have been fired from the Muslim cemetery located southwest of the Pita house because it was clear that this location offered no view of the exact site where Anisa Pita was shot.¹³⁰⁵¹ He explained that during his visit, he in fact stopped at the cemetery to see if there was a line of sight to the incident site but could see none and so drove higher up the mountain.¹³⁰⁵² He also conceded that he did not know where the line of separation was in that area and noted that the only information he was provided with by the Prosecution was that the VRS controlled Baba Stijena.¹³⁰⁵³

3944. Poparić testified—relying on a number of photographs he took from Baba Stijena and from the incident site—that there was no line of sight between the two locations.¹³⁰⁵⁴ He also stated that this was confirmed when he physically visited Baba Stijena in September 2010 and May 2011.¹³⁰⁵⁵ He further argued that Van der Weijden mistakenly identified as Baba Stijena a small rock on a clearing under Baba Stijena, which had a line of sight and which was under the ABiH control.¹³⁰⁵⁶ Finally, he argued that there is no line of sight between the incident site and Baba Stijena because there is a natural obstacle, namely a terrain elevation, of two metres, at a distance of 403 metres from the incident site in the direction of Baba Stijena, which obstructs the view.¹³⁰⁵⁷ In cross-examination, Poparić conceded, however, that Anisa Pita's house had been renovated by the time he was at the scene so that it was no longer possible to stand or crouch at the specific location she was at when shot.¹³⁰⁵⁸ When shown two different photographs taken from the incident site prior to the renovations, one marked by Anisa Pita's father and the other used by Van der Weijden in his report, Poparić denied that either of the photographs showed Baba Stijena and argued that, like Van der Weijden, Anisa Pita's father wrongly marked Baba Stijena.¹³⁰⁵⁹

¹³⁰⁵⁶ In addition, he argued that even if Van der Weijden had accurately marked the location of Baba Stijena, it was still clear that there was no line of sight to the incident site due to the density of the trees in the area. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 52–54; Mile Poparić, T. 39287–39288 (5 June 2013).

¹³⁰⁵⁷ In making this claim, Poparić relied on three different topographical maps of the area. D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 54–56; Mile Poparić, T. 38937–38939 (29 May 2013), T. 39266–39267 (5 June 2013).

3945. Even disregarding the fact that there was no line of sight, Poparić argued that it cannot be "realistically assumed" that Anisa Pita was deliberately targeted from Baba Stijena given that she was a three year old in a crouching position and thus too small to be detected and successfully hit from a distance of some 880 metres in overcast weather.¹³⁰⁶⁰ Poparić also observed that no medical records existed that would make it possible to identify the bullet track and thus determine the bullet's trajectory.¹³⁰⁶¹ Using the statements of Anisa Pita's parents that they heard several shots at the time of the incident and the fact that Anisa Pita's injury was not serious,¹³⁰⁶² Poparić theorised that she was probably struck by a ricocheted projectile as a result of an exchange of fire.¹³⁰⁶³

3946. Miloš Škrba, who was the Commander of the 2nd Company of the 3rd Infantry Battallion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade of the SRK at the time of the incident, testified that there were no sharpshooters or snipers in his company¹³⁰⁶⁴ and that he never issued orders to anyone to open fire at civilians from Baba Stijena.¹³⁰⁶⁵ He conceded that his company had rifles, as well as automatic and semi-automatic weapons, but claimed that it did not have optical equipment, such as binoculars and optical sights, because it did not need them.¹³⁰⁶⁶ In addition, according to Škrba, the 2nd ¹³⁰⁶² While Poparić claimed that Anisa Pita did not require hospital treatment, his account of her parents' evidence, namely that they took her to an emergency clinic and that she was then referred to the Koševo Hospital, seems to contradict that. While he does follow up this account by saying that there was no medical record of Pita's treatment, this is insufficient to conclude that no hospital treatment was required. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 49.

¹³⁰⁶⁴ The Chamber recalls here that Maletić testified that there was a sniper squad in the battalion, which was directly subordinated to the commander. See D2519 (Witness statement of Dragan Maletić dated 9 November 2012), paras. 8–9, 31; Dragan Maletić, T. 30846–30848 (3 December 2012), T. 30873–30874 (4 December 2012).

When confronted with a report of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade sent to the SRK Command on 29 October 1993, informing the SRK Command that it was in possession of a number of sniper rifles and optical sights which were issued to combatants in subordinated units, Škrba responded that he could not speak as to the weapons at the level of his brigade and that his company did not have the weapons mentioned in the report. Company did not have “determined targets”; its only targets were ABiH soldiers and only when they opened fire on the company’s positions.¹³⁰⁶⁷ He also explained that Baba Stijena was exposed to frequent ABiH fire, which is why it was a fortified position,¹³⁰⁶⁸ and that ABiH units had positions in depth, in civilian facilities and houses.¹³⁰⁶⁹ In cross-examination, he conceded that his company would return fire “in most cases”, but denied that it would open fire on civilian houses—instead, he said, the fire was directed “at their lines”.¹³⁰⁷⁰

3947. Stanislav Galić, the SRK Commander at the time, testified that no one issued an order to open fire on Anisa Pita, explaining that the positions and trenches of the 10th Mountain Brigade of the 1st Corps of ABiH were near her house and that ABiH soldiers would have been “moving around” the house to get to their positions.¹³⁰⁷¹ He said that he never received any reports about this incident and that at that time there was fighting in Oteš, on the opposite side of the frontline, so there should have been no major activity in Širokača on that day.¹³⁰⁷²

3948. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of two adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire and provide as follows: (i) Anisa Pita was injured by a shot fired from the area of the ridge known as Baba Stijena;¹³⁰⁷³ and (ii) on 13 December 1992 Anisa Pita, a three and a half years old civilian, was deliberately targeted and injured by a shot from an area that SRK soldiers had access to.¹³⁰⁷⁴

3949. The Chamber finds, given Anisa Pita’s age at the time of the incident that she was a civilian and that she was obviously not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident. Further, while Galić suggested that soldiers would have been moving around her house, he provided no specific evidence that soldiers were there when Anisa Pita was shot. Contrary to Poparić’s opinion that she was hit by a ricocheted bullet as a result of an exchange of fire, the Chamber is satisfied that there was no fighting when she was shot because the morning was quiet, as illustrated by people lining up to get water near her house, and by the fact that she was walking home with another child and without her father. Neither would have been likely had there been fighting in the area at the time.

¹³⁰⁷⁰ Miloš Škrba, T. 29191–29192 (22 October 2012).

¹³⁰⁷¹ Galić stopped short of saying that ABiH soldiers were moving in the area on the day of the incident and acknowledged that this would have been speculation on his part. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37474–37475 (22 April 2013).

3950. The Chamber is also satisfied, based on the evidence above, that there was a line of sight between Baba Stijena and the exact location where Anisa Pita was located when shot, as testified to by Van der Weijden and illustrated by the photographs in his report. These photographs clearly show that line of sight, despite Poparić's claim to the contrary.¹³⁰⁷⁵ The Chamber further notes that Van der Weijden visited the area before the alterations were made to the incident site and thus was able to observe the environment from the girl's position when shot. In contrast, Poparić's evidence is based on his visits in 2010 and 2011, that is, after the relevant alteration took place. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber is also persuaded, again relying on Van der Weijden's evidence, that Baba Stijena was in fact the location from which the shot was fired in this incident. While Van der Weijden noted two other possible locations, he excluded them for reasons the Chamber finds persuasive.

3951. The Chamber is further satisfied, based on Miloš Škrba's evidence, that the 2nd Company of the 2nd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK had fortified positions in the area of Baba Stijena and that its soldiers possessed automatic and semi-automatic weapons. While Škrba testified that his company did not have binoculars or other optical instruments, the Chamber finds it difficult to believe that an SRK company would not have—at the very least—one pair of binoculars, and therefore does not accept his evidence in this respect.¹³⁰⁷⁶

3952. Relying again on Škrba's evidence, the Chamber is satisfied that SRK soldiers would frequently open fire from Baba Stijena. While Škrba claimed that they only opened fire on ABiH soldiers and their lines, he also testified that the ABiH positions were in depth of the Muslim territory, in civilian houses and facilities, thus confirming that the fire was opened on civilian houses and other civilian facilities. The Chamber does not find his denials as to the fire being opened on civilian areas and civilians themselves to be genuine.

3953. Finally, given the distance between the incident site and the area of Baba Stijena, which would have required a careful shot on the part of the shooter, the Chamber is satisfied that Anisa ¹³⁰⁷⁵ In this respect, the Chamber does not accept Poparić's claim that Van der Weijden wrongly identified Baba Stijena in the said photograph, something that would have been highly unlikely given that he visited Baba Stijena, using GPS co-ordinates of the relevant position, and given that he examined the area carefully.

Pita was deliberately targeted by one of the SRK soldiers located on Baba Stijena.¹³⁰⁷⁷ This soldier would have undoubtedly been aware of her civilian status, for all the reasons outlined above by Van der Weijden.¹³⁰⁷⁸

(2) Briješko Brdo street, 2 November 1993 (Scheduled Incident F.5)

3954. The Indictment alleges that on 2 November 1993, Ramiza Kundo, a 32 year old woman, was shot and wounded in her left leg while carrying buckets of water across Briješko Brdo street (presently Bulbulistan street) in the west end of Sarajevo.¹³⁰⁷⁹ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the fire originated from a field, referred to as “Polje”, in the Bačići and Briješće area in SRK-held territory, which had an unobstructed line of sight on the incident site.¹³⁰⁸⁰ The Accused argues that given the inconsistent evidence related to this incident it is impossible to determine even the direction from which the bullet was fired.¹³⁰⁸¹ He also argues that ABiH forces deployed in the area were in dominant positions and that the scene of the incident was not “sufficiently visible” from SRK positions.¹³⁰⁸²

3955. Briješko Brdo or Briješko Hill is a hilly area on the northwestern edge of Sarajevo, located between Rajlovac, which is to its north, and Briješće, which is to its south.¹³⁰⁸³

3956. The Chamber took judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts related to the circumstances of this incident. They provide that (i) on 2 November 1993, at around 4 pm, Ramiza Kundo, 38 years old at that time, and Rasema Menzilović, were hurrying back from a well located about 50 metres away from Menzilović’s house carrying full 10-litre canisters in each hand along Briješko Brdo street;¹³⁰⁸⁴ (ii) the ABiH confrontation line was between 300 and 400 metres away from the site of the incident;¹³⁰⁸⁵ and (iii) Ramiza Kundo was wounded by a shot fired from the direction of “Polje,” a field in the area of Bačići and Briješće.¹³⁰⁸⁶

¹³⁰⁷⁷ The Chamber does not accept Poparić’s evidence that the nature of Anisa Pita’s injuries meant that it was caused by a ricocheted bullet. To the contrary, the Chamber is persuaded by Van der Weijden’s conclusion that given the size of a three year old’s leg, her injuries would not have been as devastating as they would have been with an adult.

3957. According to Kundo's medical records, due to an entry-exit wound through her left calf, she was admitted to Koševo Hospital on 2 November 1993, where she was treated and then released several days later.¹³⁰⁸⁷

3959. Van der Weijden investigated this incident after the Prosecution gave him the location of the incident and the alleged location of the shooter, namely "Polje".¹³⁰⁸⁹ He was of the view that the calibre of the bullet that struck the victim would not have been more than 7.92 mm as it would have caused greater damage.¹³⁰⁹⁰ He also noted that the road where the incident took place is lined on one side with houses and a concrete wall topped by a fence, while there is an earthen wall on the other side, thus creating a tunnel limiting the view of the incident site to locations in line with the street.¹³⁰⁹¹ Van der Weijden visited Polje and noted that there were several locations offering an unobstructed view of the incident site from the ground level and that the houses in those locations would offer an even better view.¹³⁰⁹² He believed that the shooter would have been at a maximum distance of 825 metres from the incident site.¹³⁰⁹³ From that location, the victim would have been easily identifiable as a female carrying water containers.¹³⁰⁹⁴ Given the possible calibres of the bullet, the range involved, and the fact that only one shot was heard, Van der Weijden concluded that a semi-automatic rifle was probably used, either an M76 or an M91, although this range would have been extreme for those rifles.¹³⁰⁹⁵

3960. Poparić testified that the information relating to this incident was so contradictory that it was impossible to establish what happened.¹³⁰⁹⁶ He explained that Kundo gave conflicting statements as to whether she was shot when on her way to the well or when returning from the well and that Menzilović's recollection was that they were on their way back.¹³⁰⁹⁷ Poparić further recounted the testimonies of both Kundo and Menzilović, from the Galić case, and noted that both testimonies failed to make clear whether the shot came from Polje or from a depot further west of the incident site.¹³⁰⁹⁸ Poparić also pointed out that Kundo conceded in her testimony in the Galić case that an ABiH tank was located some 500 metres above her house.¹³⁰⁹⁹

3961. Relying on an ABiH map showing confrontation lines in the area,¹³¹⁰⁰ Poparić noted that the confrontation line was some 500 to 600 metres away from Kundo's house and that the incident site was thus also visible from a "rather wide area" controlled by the ABiH.¹³¹⁰¹ In cross-examination, he conceded that the configuration of terrain was such that it created a natural "tunnel" in terms of the line of sight to the incident site, as well as the fact that Kundo was visible from the Serb positions in the area.¹³¹⁰² When pointed out to him that his potential field of fire was much larger than the potential field of fire as assessed by Van der Weijden, he explained that Van der Weijden only marked what was visible from the SRK positions and did not check the visibility from the ABiH positions.¹³¹⁰³

3962. Finally, referring to Kundo's medical records, Poparić observed that they do not identify the position of the entry and exit wounds or the orientation of the bullet track, thus adding to the

In cross-examination, when told that he failed to mention that Kundo also testified that this tank was there only for a week and that she could not remember when that was, Poparić explained that he mentioned the tank only to show that there were ABiH troops in the area. See Mile Poparić, T. 39168–39173 (4 June 2013).

¹³¹⁰⁰ In cross-examination, Poparić conceded that the map he relied on was operative in the period 1 March to 14 September 1995 and explained that he used it nevertheless because the evidence he saw suggested that the confrontation line in the area did not change throughout the war. He denied that he deliberately omitted this information in order to mislead the Chamber and stated that he simply accepted the situation as alleged by the Prosecution insofar as the confrontation lines were concerned. See Mile Poparić, T. 39196–39198 (4 June 2013); P1764 (ABiH Map of Sarajevo).

Poparić explained that the ABiH-controlled area from which Kundo could be seen was in fact bigger than the area from which the SRK units could see her. difficulty in determining the direction of fire already made complicated by Kundo's inconsistent statements as to the direction in which she was walking when shot.¹³¹⁰⁴

3963. Stanislav Galić testified that he received no reports about this incident at the time but pointed out that ABiH had forces in the area of Brijesko Brdo and that the incident site was not "sufficiently visible" from the SRK positions, which were located in the area of Azići, towards Dobrinja river.¹³¹⁰⁵ According to Galić, the SRK positions were at the foot of the hill on which the incident happened, meaning that the ABiH forces that controlled the hill were in a dominant position in that area.¹³¹⁰⁶

3964. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of three more adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire and provide as follows: (i) Ramiza Kundo was injured by a bullet fired from SRK-held territory in the field area, where Brijesće and Bačići are;¹³¹⁰⁷ (ii) Ramiza Kundo was not hit by a stray bullet or a ricochet as a consequence of regular combat activity;¹³¹⁰⁸ and, (iii) on 2 November 1993, a civilian Ramiza Kundo was targeted from an SRK-controlled area in full awareness of the high risk that the target was a civilian.¹³¹⁰⁹

3965. Having reviewed the evidence on this incident, as well as the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber is unable to conclude, beyond reasonable doubt, that Ramiza Kundo was wounded by a shot fired by an SRK soldier positioned in the location of Polje. First, the Chamber is of the view that the Accused was successful in rebutting some of the adjudicated facts related to this incident, including those related to the direction and origin of fire. The Chamber recalls here the Accused's cross-examination of Hogan in relation to the direction in which Kundo was walking when shot, as well as Poparić's evidence on the various versions of the event given by Kundo in the Galić case. Despite being aware of inconsistencies in relation to that issue, the Prosecution chose not to call Kundo as a witness in this case.¹³¹¹⁰ Instead, it decided to rely on adjudicated facts, which in turn contradict the evidence of Hogan, the Prosecution's own investigator. The Chamber is therefore left with a situation in which it has adjudicated facts on one hand (which contradict the Prosecution's own evidence) and Poparić's recounting of Kundo's evidence on the other (which suggests a number of inconsistencies in her evidence).¹³¹¹¹ Thus, the Chamber cannot rely on the adjudicated facts relating to this incident and in particular to the origin of fire.

¹³¹⁰⁴ Poparić also explained that, given the configuration of the terrain (that is, the difference in altitude of 100 metres between Kundo and the SRK positions), it would have been important to know how high up on Kundo's calf was her wound located, as that would have allowed him to check whether that part of the leg was visible from where the bullet had been fired. Poparić also referred to a police report on the incident, which is not in evidence in this case, and which provides that Kundo was wounded in her right leg. See D4884 (Mile Poparić's expert report entitled "Small Arms Fire on the Sarajevo Area 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 82–83, 85; Mile Poparić, T. 38955–38958 (29 May 2013); D3636 (Photograph re sniping incident of 2 November 1993 on Brijesko Brdo street marked by Mile Poparić).

3966. Turning then to the Prosecution evidence on this incident, it consists of Van der Weijden's observations as to the potential field of fire and Hogan's geo-positioning of the incident and the shooter as recounted to him by Kundo. Given, however, that Van der Weijden never made a determination that the bullet necessarily came from SRK positions,¹³¹¹² while Hogan's evidence was not concerned with the exact origin of fire,¹³¹¹³ the Chamber deems the available evidence simply insufficient to conclude that the bullet that wounded Kundo came from the SRK positions. In that respect, the Chamber also notes the Prosecution's own admission that Polje was not one of the well-known sniping positions of the SRK.¹³¹¹⁴

3967. For these reasons, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution has failed to prove, beyond reasonable doubt, that the shot that hit and wounded Ramiza Kundo was fired by one of the SRK soldiers in the area.

iv. Findings on sniping in Sarajevo

3968. Having considered all the evidence presented in this case in relation to sniping in Sarajevo the Chamber is convinced that throughout the conflict SRK units deliberately shot at civilians in ¹³¹¹⁰ Calling Kundo as a witness would have allowed the Chamber to assess her credibility and the reliability of her evidence, and to come to its own conclusions as to the way in which the incident unfolded, including the direction in which she was walking when shot.

¹³¹¹¹ The Chamber recalls its observation during trial that Poparić is an expert on ballistic matters and therefore not an expert on credibility of victims of the incidents. See Mile Poparić, T. 38905 (29 May 2013). While that remains the case, the adjudicated facts and the evidence presented by the Prosecution in this particular incident are not only scarce but also internally inconsistent. The Prosecution did not discuss this incident with Van der Weijden and it never cross-examined Poparić on this aspect of his analysis. It also appeared to ignore his overall assessment that the information about this incident was very inconsistent. In addition, in contrast to the other incidents, the Chamber has received no contemporaneous documents that would allow it to resolve the various inconsistencies in the evidence before it. Thus, Poparić's recounting of various inconsistencies in Kundo's evidence in the Galić case simply reinforced the inconsistencies already present between the evidence led by the Prosecution and adjudicated facts.

¹³¹¹² Indeed, as suggested by Poparić, it would appear that when determining the potential field of fire, Van der Weijden limited his observations only on what was visible from Polje as there is no suggestion that he checked the line of sight between the incident and the areas east of Polje, which were controlled by the ABiH. See P1621 (Expert Report of Patrick van der Weijden entitled "Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo '92-'94"), pp. 35–36.

¹³¹¹⁴ Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix C, para. 2.

Sarajevo, including at trams and other means of public transport.¹³¹¹⁵ This was confirmed not only by the witnesses who lived and worked in Sarajevo and who experienced sniper fire on daily basis from notorious sniping locations but also by the evidence indicating that thousands of civilian casualties were caused by sniper or small arms fire in Sarajevo.¹³¹¹⁶ The Chamber was particularly persuaded by the evidence of international witnesses working with the UN on this issue as they not only observed the sniping within the city but also had a more complete picture of the situation through constant dealings with both sides to the conflict as well as through the reports of UNPROFOR forces tasked with anti-sniping operations.

3969. The Chamber is also satisfied that the evidence shows beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK soldiers' deliberate sniping of civilians was not particularly unusual in the Sarajevo battlefield. It was, in fact, persistent, took place on an almost daily basis, and continued unabated during the entirety of the conflict. Sarajevo civilians were shot while fetching water, walking in the city, and when using public transport (particularly trams). Furthermore, children were sniped at while playing in front of their houses, walking with their parents or walking home from school, and even when cycling. The fact that UNPROFOR had to set up anti-sniping barriers throughout the city and establish an anti-sniping unit which would, at times, exchange fire with SRK snipers is a clear proof of this. The evidence shows that the SRK used sniper rifles that both Galić and Milošević admitted were in the SRK arsenal. They also used machine guns, which allowed them to hit targets at much longer ranges than normally possible with sniper rifles.

3970. The Chamber is also convinced, relying particularly on the evidence of KDZ310 and Maletić, that the SRK had specialised sniping units or squads which were commanded at a battalion level or higher and in which the SRK Command took special interest, as indicated by its orders relating to snipers outlined above.¹³¹¹⁷ Furthermore, the Chamber has no doubt that these units were under the control of the SRK Command, despite Manojlović's claim that the sniping was out of control in Sarajevo. This is confirmed not only by the SRK Command's orders and training exercises referred to above, but also by the events on the ground, such as, for example, the reduction in sniping following the signing of the Anti-sniping Agreement, as discussed in Section IV.B.1.a. The fact that these sniper units operated from professionally set up sniper nests which were located in buildings along the confrontation lines for a number of years, as amply illustrated by the sniper nests in the white high-rises in Grbavica, makes it unlikely that the SRK Command did not have control over the said sniper units. Instead, it confirms that the SRK Command was reliant on, and regularly used, professional sniper teams, positioning them at most opportune locations.¹³¹¹⁸ SRK units also used most convenient nature-made elevations along the confrontation lines around the city, such as Špicasta Stijena and Baba Stijena, to position their snipers, again indicating the involvement of the higher levels of the SRK. While the Chamber does not exclude the possibility that there may have been some rogue shooters on the SRK side, the Chamber considers their activities to have been insignificant in light of the evidence on the sustained campaign of sniping against the civilian population in the city from notorious sniper locations and on the overall control over snipers exhibited by the SRK commands.

¹³¹¹⁵ In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber relied not only on the findings on Scheduled Sniping Incidents discussed above, but also on the general evidence relating to the sniping situation in the city and specifically in the areas notorious for sniping, such as Sniper Alley, for example.

3971. In coming to the above conclusions, the Chamber has carefully assessed the evidence of former SRK soldiers and officers who denied the SRK practice of deliberate sniping on civilians in Sarajevo. The Chamber found these denials to be untenable and completely at odds with the reality on the ground when considered in combination with the accepted Prosecution evidence outlined above, as well as the evidence specifically related to the scheduled sniping incidents. The Chamber therefore considers that the evidence of these witnesses was self-serving and dishonest, seriously calling into question their credibility.

3972. The Chamber is also satisfied that the ABiH units and special police forces within the confrontation lines in Sarajevo had snipers, as claimed by the Accused, which they used against the SRK positions and against civilian targets on the Bosnian Serb side of the confrontation line. However, this being the Accused's trial, the sniping practices of the ABiH units and special police forces are only relevant to this case insofar as they allow the Chamber to determine whether the fire coming from the Bosnian Serb side was opened in response to ABiH sniper fire and, if so, whether that response was selective and proportionate. In other words, while regrettable that Bosnian Serb civilians were sniped by the ABiH forces and special police units located in the city, such activities are not part of the Indictment in this case and are also not an excuse for the Bosnian Serb side's targeting of Sarajevo civilians.

3973. On the other hand, the Accused's argument that the Bosnian Muslim units within the city opened sniper fire on their own civilians in order to lay the blame on the Serbs is relevant to the Indictment in this case. However, the Chamber has by and large rejected this claim for the reasons outlined in more detail in the later section of the Judgement.¹³¹¹⁹

¹³¹¹⁹ See Section IV.B.A.d: Bosnian Muslim side targeting own civilians.

c. Shelling

3974. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused, together with a number of others, participated in a joint criminal enterprise to establish and carry out a campaign of shelling against the civilian population of Sarajevo between April 1992 and November 1995, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror.¹³¹²⁰ To illustrate that campaign¹³¹²¹ the Prosecution presented, inter alia, detailed evidence in relation to 15 shelling incidents listed in Schedule G of the Indictment.¹³¹²² These incidents allegedly included opening mortar fire on residential areas in the city and using modified air bombs later in the conflict. As with the scheduled sniping incidents, they are all alleged to have been perpetrated by the Sarajevo Forces. In addition, the Prosecution brought general evidence on the nature of heavy weapon fire in Sarajevo and referred to a number of unscheduled shelling incidents to establish a pattern of conduct by the Bosnian Serb military and political authorities.¹³¹²³

3975. In response, the Accused denies that the SRK deliberately shelled civilians, stating that there were military targets deep in ABiH-held territory in the city and that the ABiH units “abused for military purposes premises of civilian and protected buildings”, including UN facilities.¹³¹²⁴ Nevertheless, according to the Accused, the SRK units took precautionary measures to prevent opening fire on civilians, such as 24-hour observation by artillery scouts and using more precise weapons when “returning fire on urban areas”.¹³¹²⁵ Further, the Accused submits that the SRK units were informed of the provisions of international humanitarian law and the laws of war, and that orders were issued requiring soldiers to act in accordance with these laws.¹³¹²⁶ Finally, the Accused claims that ABiH units targeted their own civilians by opening mortar fire on them in order to bring about international intervention in BiH.¹³¹²⁷

¹³¹²² Originally, the Indictment contained four additional scheduled shelling incidents but these were withdrawn by the Prosecution pursuant to Rule 73*bis*. See Rule 73 bis Decision.

¹³¹²³ As indicated to the parties during the case, the Chamber will not be making beyond reasonable doubt findings as to the responsibility of the Accused for specific unscheduled incidents. See T. 5480 (19 July 2010); fn. 11204.

i. Shelling in general

3976. With respect to shelling, the Chamber heard from several experts in this case. Richard Higgs, an expert on the operational use and technical and ballistic capabilities of mortars,¹³¹²⁸ and Berko Zečević, an expert on ballistics, rockets, and warheads,¹³¹²⁹ were both called by the Prosecution. Zorica Subotić, ballistics expert on firearms and white arms,¹³¹³⁰ and Derek Allsop, an expert on conventional barrelled weapons and their ballistics,¹³¹³¹ were called by the Accused. The Chamber also admitted evidence from fact witnesses who provided information on the general mechanics of various shelling weapons, as well as shelling and crater analysis methodology.¹³¹³²

3977. During the trial, the Chamber heard evidence about a number of shelling weapons, including (i) infantry weapons, such as mortars, (ii) artillery weapons, such as howitzers, guns, and cannons, and (iii) a weapon system used specifically in Sarajevo, namely modified air bombs. Categories (i) and (ii) will be discussed in this section, while the features of the modified air bombs will be discussed in the section dealing with specific Scheduled Incidents that involved modified air bombs.¹³¹³³

3978. The Chamber heard that mortars can vary in calibre from light to heavy classes; the 60 mm mortar is classified as a light mortar, the 81/82 mm mortar is classed as medium and the 120/122 mm mortar is a heavier class.¹³¹³⁴ Each mortar consists of a sight, indicating bearing and elevation; a barrel or tube; a bipod/tripod adjustable stand; and a platform on which the barrel rests known as the base plate.¹³¹³⁵ The mortar rounds or “shells” are generally fired by placing each shell in the barrel—tail first—after which the shell strikes the firing pin, initiating the charge, and is then propelled out of the barrel.¹³¹³⁶ Higgs explained that mortar shells travel at a high trajectory and, with an adept crew, have an accuracy of less than 40 metres from their target and a maximum range of between 4,500 and 7,500 metres dependant upon, inter alia, the amount of propellant used and the elevation of the barrel.¹³¹³⁷ Additional propellant or “charge” can be added starting from a small amount, charge 1, to a maximum amount, charge 6.¹³¹³⁸ At minimum charge, the range of the shell is reduced but the mortar is more accurate.¹³¹³⁹ Mortar shells are stabilised by tail fins and their accuracy generally depends on a number of factors, including the charge used and the stability of the base plate.¹³¹⁴⁰

3979. Mortars are capable of both direct and indirect fire.¹³¹⁴¹ Direct fire is when the target is directly visible to the unit and the sight of the mortar is used to aim at the target.¹³¹⁴² Conversely, indirect fire is where the target cannot be seen by the crew and the battery aims at a given target using instrumental methods, such as making adjustments to the bearing or azimuth on the horizontal plane and to the elevation of the barrel on the vertical plane.¹³¹⁴³ The type of terrain, angle of descent, round velocity, calibre, and weather conditions are all determining factors in whether a crater will be formed by the explosion of a shell and whether the mortar’s stabiliser will be found embedded within such a crater.¹³¹⁴⁴ Mortar crews can also “pre-record” information about a given target from their position, such as the bearing, elevation, charge, and type of target.¹³¹⁴⁵

This enables the crew to engage these “pre-recorded” targets in the future with a higher degree of accuracy.¹³¹⁴⁶

3980. In terms of effectiveness, mortar shells are used against manpower as they generally make only a small crater on impact but will fragment and spread shrapnel over a wide area.¹³¹⁴⁷ According to Higgs, in an urban area where there is a lot of cover, one would need to fire around five rounds as quickly as possible if the intention is to cause maximum casualties.¹³¹⁴⁸ Thus, firing one to three rounds would serve no military purpose other than perhaps creating “harassing fire” designed to force the enemy to keep their head down and prevent movement.¹³¹⁴⁹ Higgs explained that using that type of fire on a civilian area would serve only to cause casualties and inflict terror.¹³¹⁵⁰ Fraser agreed and testified that mortars are not a good weapons system when used in an urban, densely-populated, area as they inflict little damage on urban buildings but cause a lot of damage to unprotected people who are in the open.¹³¹⁵¹

3981. Hamill testified that conventionally both mortars and guns/howitzers are used to “support the combat troops” even though they have their own distinct features.¹³¹⁵² According to him, guns and howitzers are generally used for their long-range ability to fire at distant targets and are therefore positioned farther from the frontline than mortars.¹³¹⁵³ Mortars, due to their shorter range, are generally positioned closer to the frontline than guns and howitzers, but are used in what is termed a “shoot and scoot” fashion.¹³¹⁵⁴ This means that they will fire a number of rounds in quick succession and then immediately move to another position in order to prevent “counter battery fire”.¹³¹⁵⁵ According to Hamill, the skill of firing a mortar can be learnt “relatively quickly”.¹³¹⁵⁶

3982. Hamill observed that theoretically the maximum angle of elevation for a mortar battery of any calibre is 90 degrees,¹³¹⁵⁷ but that firing at this angle would be rather precarious.¹³¹⁵⁸ He observed that a mortar shell is designed to suppress activity over a wide area and that the “danger radius” is considered to be 500 metres for a 120 mm mortar and 250 metres for an 81 mm mortar.¹³¹⁵⁹ Similarly, Galić testified that the minimum “safety or security zone” for smaller calibre mortars is 200 metres and that for larger calibre mortars, such as the 120 mm mortar, it is around 400 metres.¹³¹⁶⁰

3983. Due to its topography, the city of Sarajevo was well suited for the use of indirect fire weapons such as mortars because it is located in a valley, facilitating target observation by forces located on the surrounding hills.¹³¹⁶¹ The city’s features, such as buildings and roads, were also good reference points that a mortar crew could use to make adjustments to their sights.¹³¹⁶²

3984. Fraser testified that while both sides of the conflict used shelling, often against civilians, the ABiH forces in Sarajevo “couldn’t hold a candle” to the artillery the SRK had.¹³¹⁶³ Similarly, Harland confirmed that both sides used shelling against civilians, but explained that this was done according to each side’s resources, which meant that the Serb side used such shelling much more.¹³¹⁶⁴ When formed, the SRK was composed of nine light brigades, a mixed anti-armour regiment, a mixed armour artillery regiment, a light artillery regiment, a communications battalion, a medical battalion, and a transport battalion.¹³¹⁶⁵ Each of these brigades had their own armaments, ¹³¹⁵⁸ John Hamill, T. 9703 (13 December 2010) (agreeing with the Accused that in practical terms the maximum angle of elevation is probably 86 degrees). According to Allsop, the maximum angle of launch is 85 degrees, which will result in a minimum range of the shell, while the minimum angle of launch is 45 degrees, which will give the shell a maximum range. ¹³¹⁵⁹ John Hamill, T. 9703 (13 December 2010). The danger radius is the area within which splinters will travel from the point of detonation and can cause harm to those present. Within this radius, there is a smaller, “lethal radius” where it is highly likely that those within it will be fatally injured. For a 120 mm mortar shell this would be 54 metres from the point of impact. See John Hamill, P1994 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Galić), T. 6191.

which their respective unit commander controlled.¹³¹⁶⁶ The basic assets of each brigade were 100 mm howitzer and 60, 82, 105, and 120 mm mortars.¹³¹⁶⁷ In contrast, the corps level controlled heavier weapons, such as 155 mm howitzers.¹³¹⁶⁸ According to Wilson, the Bosnian Serbs had “something in the vicinity of 200 artillery and mortar barrels that they could direct at the city”.¹³¹⁶⁹ KDZ185 estimated that the SRK had around 300 pieces of heavy weaponry around Sarajevo, with calibre greater than 14.5 mm and ranging up to 152 mm, including multiple rocket launchers.¹³¹⁷⁰ On 12 May 1992 during a Bosnian Serb Assembly session, Mladić in fact proclaimed that Sarajevo could not be taken “by spitting at it from a mortar or a howitzer” and that in order to make the Bosnian Muslims surrender they would have to densely plant 300 guns around Sarajevo, including rocket launchers.¹³¹⁷¹ From early on, the SRK therefore had large quantities of artillery and heavy weapons, with most of those weapons pointing towards the city.¹³¹⁷²

3985. The SRK’s mortar batteries surrounding Sarajevo remained in their positions throughout the conflict.¹³¹⁷³ This meant that the SRK had the whole city pre-recorded and therefore had “very accurate weapon platforms”.¹³¹⁷⁴ Another feature of the SRK weapon sites was that the weapons were not camouflaged, indicating that they were not perceived as being under threat.¹³¹⁷⁵ Fraser, who himself commanded mortar platoons, thought that the mortar crews in Sarajevo were competent and could generally hit the area they wanted to hit.¹³¹⁷⁶ KDZ182 was of the opinion that the SRK artillery and mortars were controlled at the “highest level” because of the media scrutiny in Sarajevo; thus, the orders from Pale, and from Mladić in particular, would be transmitted directly by the SRK commander through the channels of communication.¹³¹⁷⁷ According to KDZ182, leeway was also given to “underlings” in the field to use their weapons at any opportunity in order to generate a climate of terror.¹³¹⁷⁸

3986. In terms of the ABiH fighting capabilities, while it outnumbered the SRK in terms of manpower, the number of heavy weapons available to the ABiH within the city was much smaller than that of the SRK, the majority of its arsenal being small arms and mortars with small quantities of artillery weapons.¹³¹⁷⁹ The ABiH also had mortars mounted on trucks, which were thus mobile and would move around the city, making it very difficult for the SRK to respond as the mortars would be in the middle of civilian areas.¹³¹⁸⁰ UNPROFOR tried to find these mortars but was never successful.¹³¹⁸¹

3987. Mole testified that the coverage of the city by UNMO's Papa observation posts was successful in that it covered 95% of the city, whereas the OPs on the Lima side did not necessarily cover all the weapon sites that UNMOs knew of, including between eight to ten unmonitored SRK batteries; this in turn resulted in discrepancies in the numbers of recorded rounds landing in Sarajevo versus outgoing rounds from the SRK side.¹³¹⁸²

(A) Nature of shelling in Sarajevo

3988. The Chamber notes that the witnesses called by the Prosecution were consistent when testifying about the nature of the SRK shelling of Sarajevo. For example, Wilson explained that from the beginning of the conflict in Sarajevo, the SRK would fire large quantities of heavy weapons into the urban areas of the city and that the SRK fire, while often in response to some threat posed by the ABiH, would be "undoubtedly disproportionate" and indiscriminate, striking most major buildings in the city.¹³¹⁸³ In many cases, there seemed to be no military value in the targets that were selected, while the fire itself was spread out rather than focused on one area.¹³¹⁸⁴ The fact that the SRK forces had an overwhelming superiority in heavy weapons made their responses more extreme.¹³¹⁸⁵ Indeed, the weapons supremacy of the SRK was not really an advantage in urban fighting as the resort to “terror shelling” to discourage infantry attacks “in reality played into the hands of the Bosnians” according to Thomas.¹³¹⁸⁶ Other witnesses testified that the SRK’s use of indirect weapons, such as mortars, within the city was “entirely illegitimate”.¹³¹⁸⁷

3989. During his time in Sarajevo, Harland observed three distinct forms of shelling by the SRK in Sarajevo: (i) tactical use of heavy weapons in support of the SRK combat units, which occurred when the ABiH was trying to conduct an operation along the confrontation line; (ii) tit-for-tat shelling whereby the ABiH would fire some rounds into SRK-held territory, resulting in a “strong response” by the SRK directed against the area from which the ABiH fired; and (iii) “background terror shelling”, which had no identifiable military tactical purpose but seemed intended to keep the population of Sarajevo vulnerable, fearful, and isolated.¹³¹⁸⁸ Harland testified that at the time of his arrival in June 1993,¹³¹⁸⁹ on average around 1,000 shells a day landed in the city, and sometimes up to 2,000.¹³¹⁹⁰ Thereafter and until the end of the conflict, there was constant but relatively low level shelling by the SRK; on average there were several hundred shells fired every day throughout the whole war, the large bulk of those being fired by the SRK.¹³¹⁹¹ Tucker also testified that by far the majority of fire came from the Bosnian Serbs into the city rather than from the other side.¹³¹⁹²

3990. According to Fraser, the shelling in the city was directed mostly at the BiH Presidency and various parts of the city, but “not principally [at] any military position”.¹³¹⁹³ Thus, while there were various military headquarters of the warring parties in Sarajevo, such as the SRK Command in Lukavica or the ABiH 1st Corps Command in the city itself, during his time in Sarajevo these headquarters were never engaged as targets.¹³¹⁹⁴ He also stated that whenever the ABiH fired out of the city, the SRK would always fire back, usually in a disproportionate manner.¹³¹⁹⁵ Thus, if the ABiH fired a few mortar rounds, the SRK would respond with a “tremendous amount of shelling”, on both military and civilian targets.¹³¹⁹⁶ In his view, most of the SRK fire in response to the ABiH was disproportionate and indiscriminate, although sometimes the SRK responses were proportionate.¹³¹⁹⁷ While acknowledging that the ABiH had mobile mortars, which in turn made it “very difficult” for the SRK to respond because the mortars were intermingled with civilians, Fraser noted that he would have refrained from firing as it would have been impossible to find the target and the collateral damage would have been too high.¹³¹⁹⁸ Fraser also conceded that fighting in an urban setting is extremely difficult for any military, and stated that while he was in Sarajevo it was “particularly difficult for both parties”.¹³¹⁹⁹

3991. Mole testified that the background noise of weapons firing in the city was “persistent” and “never ceased”, so that the UNMOs would consider it a quiet day if around 100 rounds of high explosives had landed in the city, whereas a fairly active day would involve 400 to 500 rounds, with an extremely active day involving upwards of 600 rounds.¹³²⁰⁰ Mole estimated that, on average, around 14 or 15 civilians would die in Sarajevo per day.¹³²⁰¹ According to him, it was almost impossible to record all incoming and outgoing fire in Sarajevo.¹³²⁰² While there were times when the frontlines were extremely active, there was also constant pressure on the city, and the only thing that varied was the intensity of shelling; thus the whole city was an extremely dangerous ¹³¹⁹⁴ P1762 (Witness statement of David Fraser dated 17 October 2010), p. 51. One exception to that, according to Fraser, was in 1995 when the ABiH fired at the Lukavica Barracks, which then resulted in a heavy barrage of fire back from the SRK and into the city as a whole. According to Fraser this response was completely disproportionate to the fire opened by the ABiH. David Fraser, T. 8006–8007, 8074–8088 (18 October 2010); P1762 (Witness statement of David Fraser dated 17 October 2010), pp. 51–52, 56–59, 75–77; D771 (SRK combat report, 22 June 1994). Dragomir Milošević confirmed that ABiH command posts were “mainly not targeted” as there was no danger emanating from them, such as fire being opened, for example. See Dragomir Milošević, T. 33124–33129, 33137 (4 February 2013).

¹³¹⁹⁵ P1762 (Witness statement of David Fraser dated 17 October 2010), p. 52. According to Fraser, proportionate fire means returning sniper fire with sniper fire and mortar fire with mortar fire. If a military object was located in a predominantly civilian area, Fraser would not use indirect weapons at all because of the collateral damage but only direct weapons against a specific target. place to live, even for UN members and their clearly marked vehicles.¹³²⁰³ The PTT building, where the UNPROFOR and UNMOs were located,¹³²⁰⁴ and the surrounding area, were hit by shell-fire on many occasions, sometimes having been specifically targeted.¹³²⁰⁵ In terms of damage to the city, Mole confirmed that the areas around the frontlines were heavily damaged but also testified that the remaining areas of the city “showed immense damage from incoming munitions”, such that even apartment buildings suffered destruction.¹³²⁰⁶ He also testified that he observed random fire into the city’s civilian areas that had no specific purpose and was not directed at a specific target.¹³²⁰⁷ According to him, if the Serbs failed to achieve their objective anywhere in BiH, the general perception was that Sarajevo would suffer as a result; this sometimes came as a specific threat from Galić or from the RS liaison officer in the PTT building.¹³²⁰⁸ On most days they met, Mole would protest to Galić about the indiscriminate fire observed by the UNMOs, usually focusing on the most serious incidents.¹³²⁰⁹

3992. KDZ185 testified that, in his first few months in Sarajevo, the average number of shells per day was about 1,200, and that this “really kept a climate of terror”.¹³²¹⁰ The VRS was firing at the city “in a totally random fashion” so as to “increase psychological pressure on the population and also on the Bosnian government”.¹³²¹¹ The fact that the shelling was so random and hardly ever targeted military objects “kept the population in a state of terror”.¹³²¹²

3993. Van Lynden testified that people in Sarajevo lived as much as they could in the basements of their apartments or in bomb shelters as they could be hit by shells or gunfire at any moment.¹³²¹³ Shells would land in civilian areas in a random and unpredictable way—they were often not followed up by any movement of infantry or armour.¹³²¹⁴ According to Van Lynden, the most sustained and concentrated shelling he witnessed bearing down on Sarajevo happened in June 1992;¹³²¹⁵ thereafter there was persistent shelling (except in March 1994) but it was sporadic, with few shells landing here and there.¹³²¹⁶ KDZ182 testified that the SRK shelled not only military targets but also purely residential areas, with the aim of scaring the population; even in areas with military targets, the shelling was not focused on those targets exclusively.¹³²¹⁷

3994. Harry Konings, another UNMO who was on duty in Sarajevo from 4 May to 23 October 1995,¹³²¹⁸ investigated about 100 shelling and sniping incidents in Sarajevo and much of that fire was determined to have originated in SRK-held territory with “40 or 50 of the investigations concern[ing] civilian casualties”.¹³²¹⁹ He opined that mortar and artillery fire in Sarajevo was “overwhelmingly” of SRK origin but that only by doing a site investigation could the UNMOs actually determine direction of fire.¹³²²⁰

3995. According to Tucker, the Bosnian Serbs subjected the inhabitants of Sarajevo to incessant, “daily random shelling of various parts of the city”, and incoming fire from the surrounding Serb forces would land “arbitrarily around the city, [for] no military purpose”.¹³²²¹ No half hour would go by without the sound of shells or mortar bombs.¹³²²² Tucker observed a pattern whereby there would be an ABiH infantry attack in a particular area and the SRK would initially respond using heavy weapons in order to stabilise the situation and push back the ABiH forces.¹³²²³ However, it would then also carry out a “punitive shelling” of the area of the city from which the attack had been mounted.¹³²²⁴ According to Tucker, because the SRK had less infantry forces than the ABiH 1st Corps, Mladić felt that he had to use his “heavy artillery” to defend against ABiH infantry attacks.¹³²²⁵

3996. Jeremy Bowen, a journalist who was reporting from Sarajevo between July 1992 and 1995,¹³²²⁶ testified that the city had an almost constant sound of gunfire and explosions.¹³²²⁷ He reported on, and personally saw, a lot of shelling during his time in Sarajevo noting that the shells could fall anywhere and at any time, even on cemeteries during funerals.¹³²²⁸ There was a pattern in the attacks in that nothing much would happen on the days when weather was bad, but these quiet periods would then be followed up by a sudden surge in shelling that would cause casualties.¹³²²⁹ In terms of the locations that were shelled, generally there was no pattern and the shelling was random.¹³²³⁰ In his view, the Bosnian Serbs were responsible for the bulk of the shelling, particularly since he personally observed SRK weaponry pointing towards the city, as well as empty shell cases nearby.¹³²³¹

3997. Confirming the evidence above about the shelling causing civilian casualties within the confrontation lines in Sarajevo, Ewa Tabeau produced a number of reports in which she analysed the numbers of civilian casualties in that area using several different sources. She came to the conclusion that in the period between 1 April 1992 and August 1994 at a very minimum some 1,482 civilians died as a result of shelling in the Bosnian-held parts of Sarajevo, while around 5,745 were wounded.¹³²³² As for the period between September 1994 and November 1995, Tabeau used different sources of information and was able to conclude that, at a minimum, some 449 individuals died from war-related causes, including shelling, within the confrontation lines of Sarajevo.¹³²³³ In addition, in this period, an absolute minimum of 254 civilians were wounded due to shelling.¹³²³⁴

3998. In contrast to the evidence above, the Chamber heard from a number of SRK soldiers and officers who testified that the SRK troops did not open fire on civilians but were instead ordered to shell only military targets and only in response to enemy fire.¹³²³⁵ Dušan Škrba testified that the ¹³²³² Tabeau reached these numbers by using two main sources of information in the said period, namely the Households Survey conducted in September 1994 in ABiH-held Sarajevo and the records of the Bakije Funeral Home, the largest funeral home in Sarajevo. She then compared them to the 1991 census and, in order to distinguish between military and civilian casualties, to the ABiH lists of fallen soldiers. See P4997 (Ewa Tabeau's expert report entitled "Persons Killed and Wounded in Sarajevo During the First Months of the 'Siege' from 1 April to 9 September 1992", 1 May 2009), pp. 1–2, 4–7; P4998 (Ewa Tabeau's expert report entitled "Population Losses in the 'Siege' of Sarajevo 10 September 1992 to 10 August 1994", 10 May 2002), pp. 1–4; Ewa Tabeau, T. 28173–28176, 28196–28197 (26 April 2012). Tabeau explained that the real number of civilian deaths is most likely higher because the number of those reported as soldiers in the Household Survey was higher than the numbers seen in ABiH lists of fallen soldiers, due to, among other things, families hoping to obtain a military pension. See P4997 (Ewa Tabeau's expert report entitled "Persons Killed and Wounded in Sarajevo During the First Months of the 'Siege' from 1 April to 9 September 1992", 1 May 2009), p. 8.

¹³²³³ For this period, Tabeau's main source of information in relation to the wounded civilians were patient records of three main Sarajevo hospitals. This source was somewhat incomplete as it did not include the records of a number of smaller hospitals in the city and because it included only hospitalised patients. Tabeau also used a number of different sources relating to those killed in Sarajevo, including again the Bakije Funeral Home records. For this period, however, she was unable to determine which deaths were attributed to shelling and which to sniping since, unlike the Household Survey, the sources she used here did not contain that type of information. She therefore classified 449 deaths as being war-related. See P5002 (Ewa Tabeau's expert report entitled "Killed and Wounded Persons from the Siege of Sarajevo: August 1994 to November 1995", 19 March 2007), pp. 3–5, 11–12, 17–18, 23, 51–54; Ewa Tabeau, T. 28206–28209 (26 April 2012).

3999. Most of the above-mentioned witnesses also testified that in addition to being selective, SRK fire was also always proportionate,¹³²⁴⁵ as illustrated by orders issued to use ammunition rarely and sparingly.¹³²⁴⁶ When confronted with the Accused's order of 7 February 1994 issued to the VRS Main Staff and all SRK Commands referring to there being "evidence that Serbs are not responding in equal measure to Muslim artillery provocation—sometimes twenty to thirty or even seventy times more", Gengo testified that the Accused's statement was "absolutely impossible" as the SRK did not have enough ammunition to respond even in equal measure to the fire opened by the opposing side.¹³²⁴⁷ Similarly, when Dragomir Milošević was confronted with his own warning to SRK units from July 1995 noting that the SRK was "spending ammunition as if [it] had it in abundance, trying at any cost to outfire the enemy artillery" and that its units would "very often fire at inhabited settlements and specific buildings when there are no combat actions whatsoever", he claimed that the warning referred to small abandoned settlements outside Sarajevo.¹³²⁴⁸ Galić testified that because ABiH units were commingled with civilians, the SRK would primarily seek to neutralise their targets, rather than destroy them, and the quantity of ammunition required to destroy a target can be six times higher than the quantity needed to neutralise a target.¹³²⁴⁹ He gave an example of refraining from responding to fire on 5 June 1993 because a cease-fire was in effect at the time and because a response would have been likely to cause unnecessary losses of civilians.¹³²⁵⁰ Galić also testified that if the SRK received fire from the ABiH, then the best response was to return fire with the same kind of assets; if this was mortar fire there were clearly options to return fire with a number of assets but the “best way to return fire [was] from mortars”.¹³²⁵¹ Savo Simić, Chief of Artillery of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade,¹³²⁵² testified that, when authorising return of artillery fire into the city, he “always selected the most precise weapon in the division in order to avoid civilian casualties and the unnecessary destruction of surrounding buildings”.¹³²⁵³ According to Mihajlo Vujasin, the SRK units also warned opposing forces before opening fire on military targets located in civilian zones.¹³²⁵⁴

4000. Some of the SRK witnesses also testified that their units never fired into the depth of Sarajevo.¹³²⁵⁵ The others who did, claimed to have done so only when they had reliable information that combat elements of the opposing brigades were located there.¹³²⁵⁶ According to Dragomir Milošević, the SRK forces were told to fire only when they were “certain that they would

When shown an intercepted telephone conversation of 25 May 1992 in which Mladić stated that he would “retaliate against [Sarajevo]”, that “Sarajevo is going to shake” and that “more shells will fall on [Sarajevo] per second than in the entire war so far”, Simić responded that he never received order to punish the population of Sarajevo by shelling them. ¹³²⁵⁵ For example, Dušan Zurovac testified that the 4th Company of the 2nd Battalion of the VRS never used mortars to fire deep into the city of Sarajevo, and Vlade Lučić testified that it was not the task of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade to respond to fire from the depth of the city, and it did not do so. hit the target” because “[o]ne cannot do anything running blind”.¹³²⁵⁷ Thus, a number of brigades had orders to fire on a “sighted target” alone.¹³²⁵⁸ A number of witnesses also gave evidence about the SRK system of observation of fire.¹³²⁵⁹ This system, which according to Milošević was in operation at all times,¹³²⁶⁰ provided information about the firing positions of the ABiH, including whether civilians were located at the targets.¹³²⁶¹ Simić confirmed this by testifying that he required details of the position from which the enemy fire had originated before he would consider authorising return fire.¹³²⁶² Dušan Škrba also explained that every military target had to be marked and described in terms of its size, location, and the kind of enemy assets located there but acknowledged that in cases of retaliatory artillery and mortar fire, his unit would employ “simple preparation”, which could be done within five minutes of receiving enemy fire and which only required the topographical information about the target.¹³²⁶³ When shown an intercepted conversation in which Mladić issued an order to Potpara to fire at the railway station and “hit them with something and scatter them around”, Škrba conceded that this was not a precise order but

This evidence was contradicted by Defence expert witness Radovan Radinović, who testified that, as a general pattern, enemy fire would be observed by a VRS observer and then fire would be opened on those targets. However, this fire was opened without any tracking or correction of fire because that was impossible in the circumstances, which resulted in unplanned dispersion of shots. Since most of the targets in Sarajevo could not be observed visually, it was not possible to monitor the return of fire or perform accurate targeting. See D3864 (Radovan Radinović’s expert report entitled “The Control Authority of Dr. Radovan Karadžić in the Strategic Command System of the VRS”, 2012), para. 301. testified that he never received such an order during his time with the SRK.¹³²⁶⁴ Similarly, Mijatović testified that Serb observers would report where the firing came from and confirm that, within a diameter of about 200 metres, everything was clear except for the target.¹³²⁶⁵ He later added that one could not rely on this as a rule when one's forces were under attack.¹³²⁶⁶

4001. However, most of the evidence of the SRK witnesses outlined above is directly contradicted by the July 1994 report analysing the combat readiness of the SRK's artillery rocket units prepared by the SRK's Chief of Artillery, Colonel Tadija Manojlović, in which he described the issues faced by the units from the beginning of the conflict up to July 1994. In that report, he stated the following:

The initial period of the war was also characterised by the fact that we were superior to the enemy when it comes to the equipment and ammunition [...]. The commanders of the general military provenance carried out their assignments mainly by use of the artillery, with an increased consumption of ammunition, which was normally used for hitting the targets in Sarajevo.

Basic shortcomings and defects in the [control and command] involve the following: [...] shortage of commanding officers, poor knowledge about the equipment, poor choice of [firing positions], pounding the targets without necessary observation, high consumption of ammunition, poor maintenance.

However, the precision of shooting was greatly influenced by the defects and shortcomings in the training process, as well as by an inadequate level of skilfulness attained by the marksmen, reckoners, reconnaissance teams and commanding officers; as a result of thus reduced preparations, they all were erring in determining the targets, as well as in reckoning and establishing the shooting elements and in launching the artillery attacks without prior observation of the targets. Group shooting used to be carried out without any corrections being made, so that the results, especially by night, were rather poor.

When also shown intercepted conversations in which Mladić asked whether there was a gun pointed at “some target” in Velešići and, on the following day, asked whether Velešići had been shelled, Dušan Škrba rejected the suggestion that Mladić had no information on any particular targets. The stocks of basic and other MTS have been used up, since the consumption of ammunition and fuel in the initial stages of the war exceeded the amounts that had been planned beforehand. Some of the officers and soldiers were of the opinion that the reserves of ammunition and fuel were unfathomable and that the war would not last. *The measures to restrict the consumption yielded no results. Intensive use of the artillery and intensive shelling caused a considerable reduction of available resources [...].*¹³²⁶⁷

(B) ABiH firing practices

4002. As for the ABiH firing practices,¹³²⁶⁸ the Chamber heard that ABiH units in Sarajevo used their heavy weapons mostly for harassing fire and with the intention to draw a response, by for example, firing from civilian buildings such as hospital grounds or from the vicinity of the PTT building where the UN was located.¹³²⁶⁹ KDZ182 confirmed that ABiH troops would position themselves very close to the UN forces, particularly on confrontation lines,¹³²⁷⁰ while KDZ185 called this practice a “part of the game”.¹³²⁷¹ Indeed, on a number of occasions the UNMOs had to ask the Bosnian Muslim side to move its mortars away from UNMO positions as they were too close.¹³²⁷² According to Tucker, the ABiH strategy above all was to antagonise and provoke the Bosnian Serbs into over-reacting.¹³²⁷³ However, Harland disputed that the Bosnian Muslims purposely fired mortars from the vicinity of the PTT building in order to draw Serb fire against UNPROFOR; rather, he felt the UN was simply close to the scene of a major battle, and the Serbs were already firing shells in the area.¹³²⁷⁴ Both Abdel-Razek and Richard Gray, who was a senior

¹³²⁷² Francis Roy Thomas, T. 6812 (15 September 2010); P1029 (Witness statement of John Wilson dated 4 November 2008), para. 47. According to Thomas, whenever UNMOs protested about the Serb response to the ABiH fire from near the UNMO OPs and asked that they stop firing, Indić was unsympathetic and would simply respond to UNMO protests by telling them to get the ABiH units out of the area. See P1558 (Witness statement of Francis Roy Thomas dated 13 May 2009), para. 56. This was confirmed by Abdel-Razek who testified that Galić openly admitted to shelling the UN building because UN allowed ABiH to shell at the SRK from the building. 4003. In addition to using UN facilities, Colonel Andrey Demurenko, Chief of Staff of Sector Sarajevo,¹³²⁷⁷ testified that he saw ABiH units also provoking Serb fire onto civilian buildings.¹³²⁷⁸ Similarly, Rose was certain that ABiH forces would fire on the Serbs at particularly important political moments, in order to provoke retaliatory Serb fire on Sarajevo.¹³²⁷⁹ He believed that there was only a fine line between such a tactic and directly firing upon their own citizens.¹³²⁸⁰ KW570 testified that with these practices and through drawing a response, the BiH government was trying provoke an international intervention on their side.¹³²⁸¹ Bell also testified that Bosnian Muslims used “sacrificial attacks” to provoke an international reaction and would provoke the Bosnian Serbs into using their heavy weapons.¹³²⁸² Galić testified that the ABiH would fire from schools, hospitals, and locations where the UN forces resided.¹³²⁸³

(C) Shelling investigations in Sarajevo

4004. A number of witnesses testifying before this Chamber participated in investigating shelling incidents in Sarajevo. These investigations were conducted by the BiH MUP and also by UNPROFOR and the UNMOs. With respect to the BiH MUP investigations, CSB Sarajevo’s unit for serious criminal acts was tasked with investigating shelling incidents involving fatalities.¹³²⁸⁴ This department was notified of any such incident by the local police station concerned and would in turn inform an investigative judge of the Sarajevo Supreme Court who would become the head

Initially, the CSB Sarajevo teams went out to investigate every larger shelling incident regardless of whether there were casualties or not but this practice ceased at the end of 1993 or beginning of 1994, and the department focused only on incidents which resulted in one or more deaths. of the investigating team.¹³²⁸⁵ A team was then formed, including an investigator, criminal technicians, and a ballistics expert.¹³²⁸⁶ The investigative judge was in charge of the investigation and was responsible for ensuring that no legal mistakes were made and for conveying instructions to the investigator who would then pass them on to the other members of the team.¹³²⁸⁷ The criminal or forensic technicians were tasked with visually inspecting the scene, taking photographs, creating sketches of the scene, and collecting fragments of projectiles.¹³²⁸⁸ In more serious cases, involving a large number of casualties, the scene would also be video recorded.¹³²⁸⁹ The ballistics experts' task was to determine the direction rather than the origin of fire, as well as the calibre of the weapon used.¹³²⁹⁰ The team would come to the site as soon as it was informed of the incident by the local police and as soon as it was safe to do so.¹³²⁹¹ At most incident sites, by the time the team arrived, the dead and wounded would already have been moved to the hospitals and the morgue.¹³²⁹² The local police would usually inform the team what the security situation was at the scene, including whether there had been military activity in the area immediately prior to the incident taking place.¹³²⁹³ At the request of CSB Sarajevo, members of the counter-sabotage protection unit of the BiH MUP would on occasion also assist in these investigations.¹³²⁹⁴ Ekrem Suljević, a member of that unit who participated in approximately 50 to 60 investigations of shelling incidents during the conflict, testified that the difficult conditions in which the incidents were investigated influenced the detail of the work these teams were able to provide.¹³²⁹⁵ However, he also noted that they never left the incident site with any doubt as to the established direction of fire.¹³²⁹⁶

4005. At the scene of a shelling incident, a ballistic expert would look at the mechanical traces resulting from the impact of the projectile and its fragments, which would be contoured on the asphalt or any other surface. The expert would also assess whether the shell stabiliser (also referred to as the tail fin of the shell) was embedded at the point of impact.¹³²⁹⁷ The ballistics expert would then conduct an “analysis of the central axis” or “axis of symmetry” to determine the direction from which the projectile came.¹³²⁹⁸ The central axis method is where the outer edges of a given crater’s two most pronounced shrapnel traces are drawn back to the centre of the crater.¹³²⁹⁹ The angle that these two ‘forks’ create is then bisected along their central axis and this bearing is measured to determine the incoming trajectory of the projectile.¹³³⁰⁰ Having visually established the direction of fire, the team would also use high precision compasses to determine the azimuth, that is, the angle measured clockwise from the line of magnetic north to the line of the central axis or axis of symmetry.¹³³⁰¹ For mortars, this method has a margin of error of plus or minus five degrees in relation to the direction of the shell.¹³³⁰² The calibre of the weapon used was usually determined on

He also testified that in 90% of the shelling incidents he investigated, that is over 50 cases, he was dealing with mortar projectiles. See P1695 (Witness statement of Mirza Sabljica dated 11 February 2010), pp. 10–11, 13; Mirza Sabljica, T. 7721–7722, the basis of the shell stabiliser which would embed in the surface in about 95% of the cases.¹³³⁰³ The form and type of the traces and of the damage also helped in establishing the calibre of the mortar.¹³³⁰⁴

4006. The on-site investigation teams did not determine the range of fire, which depends on the type of the projectile used, as well as the charge with which it was fired.¹³³⁰⁵ Sabljica explained that it was possible to determine the distance from which the mortar was fired, based on the angle of descent of the projectile and the type of weapon used.¹³³⁰⁶ This determination however was not done by Sabljica's unit as they had neither the knowledge nor the equipment necessary; instead, they had a special team supported by persons with an expertise in rocket science and ballistics.¹³³⁰⁷ Sabljica explained that the angle of descent is the angle at which the projectile descends and can be determined by placing a stick into a fuse furrow, which has to be of a certain depth for the method to produce accurate results, and then by determining the resulting angle through geometry.¹³³⁰⁸ Suljević, testified however that determining the distance from which a shell was fired was impossible without knowing the propelling charges.¹³³⁰⁹ According to him, determining the origin of fire can be done through taking statements from witnesses who heard or observed the projectile, but since he and his colleagues were not able to interview witnesses on VRS-held territory, they could not determine the origin of fire in the cases they investigated.¹³³¹⁰ Međedović, a ballistics expert at CSB Sarajevo, noted that, when determining the direction of fire, the ballistics experts did not interview any victims or witnesses.¹³³¹¹

4008. UNMOs also investigated shelling incidents alongside the CSB Sarajevo, but kept their investigations separate.¹³³¹⁶ They would travel to incident sites and investigate what they saw and evidence they found, and then file a written report.¹³³¹⁷ Konings testified that UNMOs would exchange information with the CSB Sarajevo during these investigations but that in contrast to the police investigators they were not actually collecting evidence, just data.¹³³¹⁸

4009. The Accused argues that both the BiH MUP and the UN investigators working on scheduled shelling incidents were “exceptionally unreliable” as they were biased and their work was riddled with mistakes.¹³³¹⁹ The Prosecution responds that this is a broad allegation based on mis-characterisation of the evidence of the relevant witnesses.¹³³²⁰ As already explained in relation to the sniping investigations¹³³²¹ and as will be seen below, in its analysis of the scheduled shelling incidents, the Chamber has considered and analysed a number of CSB Sarajevo and UN reports prepared on the basis of the investigative methods outlined above. These were produced by ballistics experts and/or criminal technicians who were, in most cases, on site soon after the incident and who used accepted ballistics methods to determine the direction of fire. They had access to the scene, contemporaneous information, and eye-witnesses, as well as general knowledge about the shelling in Sarajevo. Thus, the Chamber generally gave considerable weight to the CSB Sarajevo and UN reports when analysing the scheduled shelling incidents. In doing so, the Chamber was also cognisant of the shortcomings of the investigations conducted during the war, such as the difficulties faced by investigators working under threat of fire and their inability to determine the exact origin of fire. Whenever issues arose with respect to particular reports, they were considered by the Chamber in relation to each particular incident. Accordingly, while finding this type of evidence to be generally reliable and credible, the Chamber approached it with caution and as one piece of the puzzle assessed against the totality of evidence tendered in relation to each incident.

4010. As mentioned above,¹³³²² the Chamber heard from Prosecution investigator, Barry Hogan, who visited Sarajevo on multiple occasions and prepared various materials relating to the incidents listed in Schedule G of the Indictment.¹³³²³ He visited the locations relevant to that schedule in the company of a victim or an eyewitness and used a GPS unit to produce an accurate reading of the position where the shells impacted.¹³³²⁴ These recordings were then used to produce a map depicting the incident sites.¹³³²⁵ Hogan also recorded video footage of these visits, which show the individual eyewitnesses and/or victims indicating the location where they believed the shells landed, based purely on their own recollection of the incidents.¹³³²⁶ As stated earlier, the Chamber has considered Hogan's evidence and found that he was a reliable and truthful witness but that his mandate was limited to simply recording the locations of the incident sites. Thus, and for the reasons explained in more detail Section IV.B.1.b.II.C while accepting Hogan's evidence as credible, the Chamber was aware of its limitations and of the fact that his activities were dependent on the recollections of others.

¹³³²⁴ Barry Hogan, T. 11204–11205, 11230–11231, 11255 (3 February 2011). If multiple shells were involved in a particular incident, Hogan chose a particular impact site and took a reading from that position. See Barry Hogan, T. 11204–11205 (3 February 2011); P2190 (GPS locations for shelling and sniping incidents in Sarajevo).

4011. As noted above, the Chamber heard from three experts in relation to shelling in Sarajevo.¹³³²⁷ For the Prosecution, Higgs conducted investigations into scheduled shelling incidents G.4, G.5, G.6, G.7, G.8, and G.19 looking at the alleged origin of fire, as well as the military value of the target.¹³³²⁸ He visited the relevant incident sites years after and due to the passage of time did not conduct any measured crater analysis or take photographs.¹³³²⁹ Instead, at each site he looked at the general area and surrounding features, as well as the remnants of craters.¹³³³⁰ He was provided the forensic data of the relevant BiH and UN investigation teams for each incident by the Prosecution, and then opined as to the appropriateness of their methodology and accuracy of their conclusions.¹³³³¹ In doing so, he checked the information contained within the original investigation reports against photographs of the area and his own site visits.¹³³³² Higgs testified that, in the absence of grossly inaccurate facts, he had to believe that the original investigators described their methodology and findings honestly in their reports.¹³³³³

4012. The Accused argues that his expert witnesses identified deficiencies in Higgs' work.¹³³³⁴ He also asserts that the basic methodology of Higgs' investigation was to trust the prior investigations conducted by either the BiH authorities and/or the UN.¹³³³⁵ The Prosecution argues, on the other hand, that the entirety of the Accused's case in relation to shelling was "false, pretextual and invalid".¹³³³⁶ The Chamber has analysed Higgs qualifications and testimony and is satisfied that he is an expert, as well as a reliable witness, and that his evidence about the operational use, technical and ballistic capabilities of mortars, and the methodology of crater analysis can be accepted as credible. The Chamber also found Higgs reliable and credible in relation to his evidence on a number of scheduled incidents alleged in the Indictment. However, already during trial, the Chamber made clear that Higgs' evidence is of a limited nature as it does not substantiate the findings of the original investigations, but simply appraises their methodology and the conclusions that were drawn.¹³³³⁷ Indeed, the majority of Higgs' testimony was based on interpretations of reports compiled by the investigation teams during or immediately after the incidents in question occurred. Accordingly, Higgs' evidence was approached by the Chamber as merely one piece of the puzzle and, at times, as having relatively limited value in the Chamber's determination on the origin of fire in the incidents alleged.

¹³³³⁵ The Accused presented this argument during the testimony of Richard Higgs. See T. 6009 (19 August 2010). Subotić also asserted that Higgs' acceptance of the conclusions of an UN investigation was a sign of bias. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 69.

4013. Zorica Subotić visited the sites of the scheduled shelling incidents in and after 2010.¹³³³⁸ She testified that the central axis method was the most accurate and reliable method to determine the incoming trajectory of a projectile, save for the use of specialised radar.¹³³³⁹ Subotić's conclusions in relation to the scheduled shelling incidents were based on the investigations of the original investigators, such as the CSB or UNPROFOR, as well as witness testimony, footage and photographs relating to the incidents, documents and statements from previous trials before the Tribunal, and any physical traces that remained at the incident sites.¹³³⁴⁰ When challenged on cross-examination as to her use of contemporaneous photographs to conduct her analysis and calculations, Subotić explained that contemporary technology allows for the angle from which a photograph was taken to be removed by computer analysis, which in turn allows for more precise measurements.¹³³⁴¹ However, Subotić did concede that there was a noticeable difference between de visu examination of mortar traces and what can be discerned from a photograph.¹³³⁴²

4014. The Prosecution argues that Subotić is of highly questionable credibility and that her analysis was the product of scientifically unsound methods, using secondary evidence, such as photographs and video footage, or degraded physical evidence.¹³³⁴³ According to the Prosecution, she revealed an "extraordinary bias" in her analysis and her conclusions were implausible in the face of the totality of the Prosecution evidence.¹³³⁴⁴ The Accused argues in response that Subotić based her analysis on the “laws of physics” and the ballistic characteristics of the weapons involved in the incidents.¹³³⁴⁵ Further, according to the Accused, the “advocacy” arguments made by the Prosecution in relation to Subotić’s credibility could not make up for the lack of evidence or override the laws of physics.¹³³⁴⁶

4015. Having analysed both Subotić’s expert report and her testimony on the various scheduled shelling incidents alleged in the Indictment, the Chamber notes that she often advanced theories of her own to neutralise the Prosecution evidence, some of which strained credulity and others which were blatantly misleading.¹³³⁴⁷ In some instances on cross-examination, Subotić was also evasive and would sidestep questions.¹³³⁴⁸ Ultimately, as will be seen from the Chamber’s analysis in relation to each scheduled shelling incident, the Chamber found that in many instances Subotić’s evidence was compromised by her partisanship. Accordingly, it has found her evidence to be of limited value.

iii. Scheduled shelling incidents

4016. The Prosecution submits in its Final Brief that all scheduled shelling incidents constituted acts of violence directed against the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities, including indiscriminate and disproportionate attacks.¹³³⁴⁹ In addition, it alleges that in all of the incidents the impact locations were within civilian, residential, or commercial areas; that there were no ongoing combat activities in the vicinity at the time of the incidents; and that the shelling in question had no military purpose.¹³³⁵⁰

4017. As was the case in the section of the Judgement dealing with sniping incidents, each scheduled shelling incident is discussed below according to the broad geographical area of Sarajevo where it took place.

¹³³⁴⁴ The Prosecution argues that Subotić got her facts wrong on a number of occasions, that she often made bare assertions and unfounded assumptions, and that she either disregarded or misinterpreted available evidence. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix C, paras. 43–46; Closing Arguments, T. 47727 (30 September 2014).

(A) Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2

4018. The Indictment alleges that from on or about 28 May 1992, the city of Sarajevo was heavily shelled, damaging and destroying civilian targets, causing the deaths of several civilians and injuring others.¹³³⁵¹ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution describes Scheduled Incident G.1 as a “24-hour bombardment of the entire city of Sarajevo on 28–29 May 1992”.¹³³⁵²

4019. The Indictment also alleges that from on or about 6 June 1992, another massive bombardment of the city was carried out with a variety of artillery fired from positions all around the city, and that as a result of this bombardment, civilian targets were damaged and destroyed and a number of civilians were killed and wounded.¹³³⁵³ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution describes Scheduled Incident G.2 as the “second massive bombardment of the city centre on or about 6 June 1992”.¹³³⁵⁴

4020. The Accused challenges the vagueness of Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2 and argues that the Indictment fails to define the geographic and temporal scope of these incidents.¹³³⁵⁵ In relation to Scheduled Incident G.1, the Accused first submits that the only incident which took place on 27 May 1992 was the shelling of Vase Miskina street and presents arguments to the effect that there is no evidence that the shelling was done by the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹³³⁵⁶ Second, the Accused challenges the Prosecution’s allegations that Mladić ordered indiscriminate shelling of Sarajevo and the “alleged civilian neighbourhood of Velešići” on 28 and 29 May 1992, referring to two intercepted conversations.¹³³⁵⁷ Further, the Accused submits that even if Mladić had ordered the shelling of Velešići, this shelling would not have been illegal because the area concerned had a heavy concentration of ABiH military hardware and personnel.¹³³⁵⁸ In relation to Scheduled Incident G.2, the Accused argues that around 6 June 1992, ABiH initiated infantry and artillery

¹³³⁵⁵ Defence Final Brief, paras. 1980, 1998–1999. The Accused submits that the impermissibly broad nature of Scheduled Incident G.2 prevents him from effectively refuting the allegations. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1999.

However, as noted earlier, the mortar attack of 27 May 1992 in Vase Miskina street is outside the scope of Scheduled Incident G.1. See Hearing, T. 37992–37993 (9 May 2013). The Chamber recalls that the Accused himself submitted that the shelling of Vase Miskina street is not charged in the Indictment. See Hearing, T. 6394 (8 September 2010) (closed session). See also Accused’s Statement Pursuant to Rule 84 bis, T. 28867 (16 October 2012).

attacks against Serb positions around Sarajevo such as Grbavica and Vraca, and that the combat operations on the part of the SRK were directed at repelling these attacks.¹³³⁵⁹

4021. The Chamber notes that in May 1992, about 800 to 900 JNA personnel and their family members were stationed in the Jusuf Džonlić Barracks, the Maršal Tito Barracks, and the Viktor Bubanj Barracks.¹³³⁶⁰ There were plans by the JNA to evacuate these soldiers and their families out of BiH but Bosnian Muslim forces blockaded all three barracks before they could be evacuated.¹³³⁶¹ As a result, on the basis of a proposal advanced by Mladić, Bosnian Serb military and political leaders discussed moving armed units northwards, from Grbavica all the way up to the Maršal Tito Barracks; this operation was intended to allow for the evacuation of the JNA personnel from the Maršal Tito Barracks.¹³³⁶² However, the military operation did not materialise at that time, in part due to the refusal of Mićo Stanišić to have MUP forces participate in it.¹³³⁶³

4022. On 19 May 1992, Lieutenant-Colonel Janković of the JNA reported to Mladić that the ABiH was threatening the barracks and the JNA personnel inside; Mladić responded that if Jovan Divjak, a Serb General in the ABiH, attacked the Maršal Tito Barracks, Divjak “would sentence first himself and then [the] entire Sarajevo to death.”¹³³⁶⁴ As noted earlier, on the same day, Šipčić was chosen by Mladić to be the new SRK Commander.¹³³⁶⁵

4023. In a continued effort to evacuate the JNA personnel, some time between 20 and 28 May 1992, most probably in the last week of May, there was a meeting between, among others, the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Plavšić, Koljević, [REDACTED] during which Mladić proposed to use “all the equipment and arms” available to “massively bombard Sarajevo”.¹³³⁶⁶ [REDACTED] prior to this time, the Bosnian Serbs had selectively chosen targets that they considered to be military

If a bullet is fired at you, you will see what will be fired at Sarajevo.” See P5672 (Intercept of conversation between Miloš Baroš, Ratko Mladić, and Gagović, 19 May 1992), p. 2; [REDACTED]. assets.¹³³⁶⁷ [REDACTED].¹³³⁶⁸ [REDACTED] the members of the Bosnian Serb leadership present at the meeting, including the Accused, did not oppose Mladić's proposal.¹³³⁶⁹ [REDACTED].¹³³⁷⁰ Following the meeting, preparatory measures went on for 10 to 15 days; weapons were deployed, ammunition supplied, and targets selected.¹³³⁷¹ During that time, Mladić toured all of the artillery units deployed around Sarajevo and issued orders as to which weapons should be used.¹³³⁷²

4024. On 25 May 1992, Mladić informed an unidentified JNA officer that “[i]f a single bullet is fired [...] at Jusuf Džonlić barracks or Maršal Tito Barracks, or if a single soldier is wounded either at the front or in the barracks” he would “retaliate against the town”.¹³³⁷³ He further stated:

Sarajevo will shake, more shells will fall on per second than in the entire war so far. [...] You can endure more than they can. It is not my intention to destroy the town and kill innocent people.[...] They should pull out the civilians, and if they want to fight we'll fight. It would be better to fight in the mountains than in the town, though.¹³³⁷⁴

4025. On the same day, during a meeting where Plavšić was also present, Mladić informed Wilson that if the JNA personnel in the military barracks around Sarajevo were not evacuated to safety within three days, he would “level the city.”¹³³⁷⁵ Mladić also told UNPROFOR representatives that any discussion concerning the reopening of Sarajevo airport, the unblocking of the supply routes to Sarajevo, and the safeguarding of the chemical plants in Tuzla could only take place after the evacuation of JNA personnel and their families from the barracks around Sarajevo had been completed.¹³³⁷⁶ Mladić added that international military intervention would only result in the destruction of Sarajevo.¹³³⁷⁷ He then requested that Wilson convey his words to the BiH Presidency.¹³³⁷⁸ Since Plavšić did not show any opposition, Wilson took this as a very serious threat and, afterwards, communicated Mladić's message to the Presidency as well as to his own superior, General Nambiar.¹³³⁷⁹

4026. On 27 May, while in Lisbon, the Accused declared that the Bosnian Serb leadership was ready to open the airport to humanitarian flights on the condition that it functioned under the command and control of the UN until such time that its final status was determined by the interested parties at a peace conference to be convened in the future.¹³³⁸⁰ On the same day, Bosnian Muslim forces attacked the Maršal Tito Barracks with, inter alia, rifles, hand-held rocket launchers, anti-tank weapons, and Molotov cocktails.¹³³⁸¹

4027. On 28 May 1992, at around 9 p.m., a JNA convoy which was withdrawing from the Jusuf Džonlić Barracks pursuant to an agreement between representatives from the FRY and the BiH Presidency was attacked by Bosnian Muslim forces; during this attack, a number of JNA officers were killed and several others were captured by the Muslim forces.¹³³⁸² That same day at 8:50 p.m., Bosnian Muslim forces attacked the Maršal Tito Barracks and Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks, as well as SRK positions in Hadžići, the Sarajevo airport, and the Jewish cemetery with, inter alia, anti-aircraft guns and mortars; as a result, two SRK soldiers were killed and a number were wounded.¹³³⁸³

4028. In a conversation on 28 May 1992, Mladić enquired of Colonel Mirko Vukašinić whether he could reach Velešići and Baščaršija from his position in Hreša.¹³³⁸⁴ Mladić then ordered Vukašinić to “[f]ire a salvo at Baščaršija” to which Vukašinić replied: “Yes, Sir!”¹³³⁸⁵ In another conversation, also on 28 May 1992, Mladić ordered Vukašinić to fire at Velešići and

See Stevan Veljović, T. 29230, 29279–29280 (23 October 2012). However, in light of the credible evidence that bombardment of Baščaršija did take place in 1992 and given the numerous contradictions in Veljović's testimony, the Chamber rejects his assertion.

Pofalići and added “there is not much Serb population there”.¹³³⁸⁶ In the same conversation, Mladić ordered Vukašinić to continue firing “so that they can not sleep, that we roll out their minds”.¹³³⁸⁷ Before the end of the conversation, Mladić ordered the firing of “one more salvo at the Presidency.”¹³³⁸⁸

4029. Wilson testified that the shelling that began in the evening of 28 May in Sarajevo was “heavy even by Sarajevo standards”, widespread, and scattered around the city, but at the same time focused on the centre of the city and not related to any conflict on the confrontation line.¹³³⁸⁹ Wilson also described it as a “heavy artillery bombardment” by the SRK, which to him was another example of an “undoubtedly disproportionate and indiscriminately directed fire” at the city, whereby there was no military value in the targets that were selected.¹³³⁹⁰

4030. At that time, Fadila Tarčin was 16 years old and living with her family in Širokača, a residential area on the southern side of Sarajevo which overlooks Stari Grad and Bistrik.¹³³⁹¹ Tarčin testified that her home was not near any military positions; the barracks at Bistrik, located one and a half kilometres away, were the only military facility nearby, and the confrontation line was around one kilometre away.¹³³⁹² When the shelling began in the evening of 28 May 1992, Tarčin, her mother, and other relatives moved to the cellar and waited for the shelling to stop.¹³³⁹³ After some two hours, for about a 20-minute period, the shelling abated.¹³³⁹⁴ However, just after midnight, shrapnel came through the cellar door, injuring Tarčin’s right foot and bruising her left

However, during a telephone conversation with Fikret Abdić on 29 May 1992, Mladić denied that the SRK had shelled the city on 28 May 1992, in particular Baščaršija and the Archive building. Mladić also complained that the Bosnian Muslim forces had attacked Kolonija, Pofalići, the Viktor Bubanj Barracks, and the Jusuf Džonlić Barracks. The two interlocutors then accused each other of breaking cease-fire agreements in the previous weeks and insisted that their forces were only firing after having been fired upon first. Abdić cautioned Mladić against responding with disproportionate fire. Mladić in turn insisted that Abdić’s forces return equipment and vehicles which they confiscated from the Jusuf Džonlić Barracks and that his forces allow peaceful evacuation of the Maršal Tito Barracks. See P5663 (Intercept of conversation between Ratko Mladić and Fikret Abdić, 29 May 1992), pp. 1, 4–15, 20–21. In light of the vast body of accepted evidence to the contrary, the Chamber is of the view that Mladić’s denials as to the shelling of Sarajevo on 28 May 1992, which was unfolding as the conversation was taking place, did not reflect the situation on the ground.

knee.¹³³⁹⁵ Tarčin waited in the cellar until 4:30 a.m. for the shelling to stop.¹³³⁹⁶ At around 5 a.m., a neighbour took her to the Koševo Hospital where they fitted a cast for her right leg; there she remained for two days.¹³³⁹⁷ When she returned from the hospital, she could see that the shell which had wounded her had caused extensive damage to three houses in the neighbourhood.¹³³⁹⁸ On 28 May 1992 and throughout the rest of the war, Tarčin’s “neighbourhood remained under constant shelling”, and her house was hit twice more with projectiles.¹³³⁹⁹

4031. Shortly after midnight during the night of 28 May 1992, Ašida Fazlić, an employee of the State Hospital who was living with her son and husband in a room at the same hospital, was severely injured in the head and leg by shrapnel from a shell that hit the third floor of the hospital as shelling of the city was well underway.¹³⁴⁰⁰

4032. Van Lynden arrived in Sarajevo in late May 1992 and was living on the top floor of the State Hospital from which he was able to film shelling throughout the city.¹³⁴⁰¹ He saw that the State Hospital had been targeted already and was badly “shot up”; he then personally witnessed the hospital being targeted by anti-aircraft guns at that time.¹³⁴⁰² While living in the hospital, Van Lynden found no indication that Bosnian Muslim forces were using the building or its immediate surroundings for military purposes.¹³⁴⁰³

4033. Velešići was also shelled at that time.¹³⁴⁰⁴ It consisted mostly of private houses and 60% of its population was Muslim while the rest were Serbs.¹³⁴⁰⁵ Two individuals were wounded in Pogledine and one in Močila due to shelling.¹³⁴⁰⁶ The shelling also inflicted extensive damage on the Old Town.¹³⁴⁰⁷ In Vratnik, one person was killed, two houses caught fire, and a number of housing facilities and passenger vehicles were damaged.¹³⁴⁰⁸

4034. On 29 May 1992 at around 8 a.m., Wilson met with General Bošković, Colonel Čađo, and Lieutenant Colonel Janković, all from the JNA, who told him that Mladić had ordered the firing of artillery rockets and mortars in response to an attack on Lukavica by the Bosnian Muslim forces.¹³⁴⁰⁹ According to Wilson, during the meeting, the JNA commanders sought to dissociate themselves from the shelling of the city and expressed their disapproval, noting that Mladić was acting independently of the JNA.¹³⁴¹⁰ Later, a BiH delegation joined the meeting to discuss the evacuation of the JNA barracks and played a taped radio intercept from the previous night, showing that Mladić personally directed artillery attacks on the city.¹³⁴¹¹

4035. On the same day, Mladić informed Potpara, an artillery officer from the JNA, and Baroš that the attacks by Muslim forces on the barracks had been intended to provoke the Serbs to open fire on Sarajevo.¹³⁴¹² Mladić then advised Potpara to be careful and act with restraint.¹³⁴¹³

As with the wounded individuals mentioned in fn. 13406, the Chamber is unable to find beyond reasonable doubt that the person killed during this shelling was a civilian and, if so, that he was not taking direct part in hostilities at the time.

However, Mladić also told Potpara and Baroš that if the attacks by Muslim forces continued, he would no longer show restraint and would shell Sarajevo.¹³⁴¹⁴ Later that day, Mladić asked Potpara where there had been shelling and Potpara replied “towards the tobacco factory [...] Pofalići.”¹³⁴¹⁵ Mladić also asked Potpara whether Velešići had been shelled and after receiving an affirmative answer, commented that there will be more shelling there.¹³⁴¹⁶ In the same conversation, he asked if Potpara had “the means to fire at the station”.¹³⁴¹⁷ When Potpara responded that he did have the means, Mladić then ordered Potpara to fire.¹³⁴¹⁸ On the same day, Potpara reported to Mladić that his unit had returned fire towards “a museum, the hospital, and Crni Vrh” with 82 mm shells.¹³⁴¹⁹ Mladić then ordered Potpara to fire at the railway station, “[a]nd scatter them around.”¹³⁴²⁰ According to a regular combat report issued by the SRK Command on 29 May 1992, SRK units had used 70 shells of 60 mm calibre, 140 shells of 82 mm calibre, 272 shells of 105 mm calibre, and 131 shells of 120 mm calibre, as well as various other types of projectiles and bullets on that day.¹³⁴²¹

4036. On 30 May 1992, there were intense negotiation efforts to end the shelling of Sarajevo.¹³⁴²² Wilson met with Mladić in order to convey the Secretary General’s appeal to bring an end to it.¹³⁴²³ During the meeting, Mladić stated that the Maršal Tito Barracks were under constant fire by Bosnian Muslim forces, maintained that he was simply defending the Serb people, and insisted that the JNA personnel be allowed to leave the barracks.¹³⁴²⁴ On the same day, around noon, Morillon met with Slobodan Milošević, to convey the Secretary General’s appeal to bring an end to shelling ¹³⁴¹³ In the same intercepted conversation, Mladić informed Potpara and Baroš that the conversation was being intercepted by Bosnian Muslims. See D207 (Intercept of conversation between Ratko Mladić and Potpara, 29 May 1992), pp. 2–3.

¹³⁴²⁴ During the meeting, Mladić also requested that a meeting between the Accused and Izetbegović be arranged, as numerous Serb attempts to organise one had failed. The attendees then discussed the issue of the hand-over of JNA weapons to the BiH forces in return for de-blocking the barracks but Mladić stated that this deal was made with the JNA and not with him. See P1043 (UNPROFOR report re meeting with Ratko Mladić, 30 May 1992), paras. 2–4.

in Sarajevo and ask Milošević to exercise his influence over Mladić; during the meeting, Milošević stated that he disagreed with Mladić's actions and that he had been trying to contact the Accused to see if the Accused could use his influence to stop the "bloody, criminal" bombardment.¹³⁴²⁵

4037. Then, at around 2:30 p.m., Morillon met with the Accused and Koljević.¹³⁴²⁶ During the meeting, the Accused told Morillon that he would be able to convince Mladić to agree to a cease-fire.¹³⁴²⁷ The Accused also stated that the "Serb forces" were inexperienced and self-organised and therefore tended to over-react to attacks by the Green Berets; the Accused stated further that sometimes the Serbs were being blamed for attacks for which they were not responsible.¹³⁴²⁸ It was agreed at the meeting that the Accused would be responsible for seeing Mladić in person in order to stop the bombardment and implement a cease-fire starting "Monday at 1800 hrs".¹³⁴²⁹ The Accused did not manage to see Mladić but reached him by phone and the latter indicated that the bombardment would stop.¹³⁴³⁰ On 30 May 1992, the SRK reported that its units had fired 20 shells of 120 mm calibre and 15 shells of 122 mm calibre that day.¹³⁴³¹

4038. On 3 June 1992, discussions began between UNPROFOR representatives, the Bosnian Muslim leadership and the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused, on the question of the opening and control of Sarajevo airport.¹³⁴³² On 5 June 1992, in a letter to José Cutileiro, the Accused asserted that despite the good will shown by the Bosnian Serb leadership in expressing their readiness to open Sarajevo airport, the Bosnian Muslims had threatened the lives of JNA personnel and their families who were present in the Maršal Tito Barracks and during the night, Bosnian Muslim forces had shelled residential areas of Sarajevo inhabited by Serbs.¹³⁴³³

4039. During the night of 5 June 1992, JNA personnel and their families, who had hitherto been blockaded inside the Maršal Tito Barracks, were finally evacuated to Bosnian Serb positions; the

JNA's heavy weaponry and ammunition was, however, left behind.¹³⁴³⁴ Immediately after the completion of the evacuation of the JNA personnel, a number of Bosnian Muslims entered the barracks in order to take hold of the weaponry left behind by the JNA.¹³⁴³⁵ Soon after, the barracks became the target of heavy artillery fire by the SRK.¹³⁴³⁶ The intensity of the shelling forced the Bosnian Muslims who had entered the barracks to flee.¹³⁴³⁷

4040. At the same time, various neighbourhoods of Sarajevo were shelled, including the old city centre, Vratnik, Baščaršija, Logavina, Bistrik, Sedrenik, Vasin Han, and Hrid-Jarčedoli.¹³⁴³⁸

4041. On or about 6 June 1992, Bosnian Muslim forces initiated a military operation to “de-block” Sarajevo from the north and the west.¹³⁴³⁹ On 6 June, Mladić issued Directive 1, informing the commands of the various VRS corps that Bosnian Muslim forces had launched a military operation in order to “de-block Sarajevo from the north and west”.¹³⁴⁴⁰ With Directive 1, Mladić defined the immediate task of the VRS as using offensive action with a view to improving the operational and tactical position of the VRS in the wider area of Sarajevo and in northern and western Bosnia.¹³⁴⁴¹ More particularly, Mladić ordered the securing and mopping up of Serb-inhabited parts of Sarajevo, including Zlatište, Dobrinja, Butmir, Sokolović Kolonija, Mojnilo, and the area around the airport, as well as the opening of the Sarajevo-Trnovo-Kalinovik communication line.¹³⁴⁴² On the basis of

During his testimony, Krajišnik, while casting doubt on the existence of a direct connection between the fifth Strategic Goal and Directive 1, stated that at the time, Serb areas around Sarajevo were disjointed and that the objective of Directive 1 was to link these areas together and to secure the roads that connected them. Krajišnik added that Directive 1 contained military instructions about the airport

Directive 1, Šipčić ordered SRK units to, inter alia, continue to maintain the blockade of Sarajevo by barricading and reinforcing its positions, and to cut through the city by moving troops along the Nedžarići-Stup-Rajlovac axis.¹³⁴⁴³ The Muslim offensive lasted several days and despite some early successes, was in the end neutralised by Serb infantry and artillery.¹³⁴⁴⁴

4043. On the morning of 6 June 1992, Fatima Palavra, a 14 year old, and four members of her family, were sitting in the living room of her uncle's apartment, located on the top floor of a building known as "Papagajka", on Hamdije Kreševljakovića street, in the Skenderija neighbourhood of Sarajevo.¹³⁴⁵¹ While looking at Miljacka River from the living room, Palavra suddenly saw a bright shining light, followed by an explosion which rendered her unconscious.¹³⁴⁵² Palavra regained consciousness in the children's surgical ward of the Koševo Hospital and saw that her sister was also there.¹³⁴⁵³ Palavra had suffered shrapnel injuries to her right leg and temple and because the security of the airport had been compromised and the flow of humanitarian aid into the area interrupted. See Momčilo Krajišnik, T. 43798–43801 (19 November 2013). However, for reasons that have been given in paragraph 2902, the Chamber does not accept Krajišnik's evidence on Directive 1 and its underlying basis.

See P499 (Witness statement of Zilha Granilo dated 30 October 2008), paras. 1, 6–7. Considering that Jasna Granilo was a member of the police and that the exact circumstances of her death in another shelling incident on that day are unknown, the Chamber is unable to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that she was not taking direct part in the hostilities when she was killed.

had undergone surgery.¹³⁴⁵⁴ At the hospital, Palavra's uncle told her that the explosion had killed his partner and had injured the rest of the family members.¹³⁴⁵⁵ As a result of the explosion, Palavra's uncle's apartment was completely destroyed.¹³⁴⁵⁶

4044. On the same day, Ziba Avdić, and her husband, Muhamed, were at an apartment in a residential complex situated on Koševo Hill.¹³⁴⁵⁷ There were no barracks, police stations or factories in the vicinity of this complex.¹³⁴⁵⁸ Avdić recalled that the shelling of her neighbourhood that day began at 8 a.m. and forced her and her husband to take shelter in the basement.¹³⁴⁵⁹ The shelling abated for a period; as it got dark, however, Avdić saw that illumination flares were fired from the direction of Poljine.¹³⁴⁶⁰ After this, two shells landed in the parking area in front of her building, setting a number of parked vehicles on fire.¹³⁴⁶¹ Muhamed and four other individuals from the building went outside to extinguish the fires.¹³⁴⁶² At 9:30 p.m., as these individuals were standing near the entrance of the building, a shell landed in front of them, killing some of them instantly and injuring Muhamed and some others.¹³⁴⁶³ Muhamed and the other injured individuals were taken by the TO to a hospital; however, Muhamed died from his injuries later that evening.¹³⁴⁶⁴

4045. On 7 June 1992, forces of the Vogošća Brigade shelled the UNIS towers and as a result, one of the towers was set ablaze.¹³⁴⁶⁵ Filming the UNIS towers from the State Hospital which was about 200 metres away, Van Lynden did not see any outgoing fire coming from the towers.¹³⁴⁶⁶ He also did not see any Bosnian Muslim forces there during a visit to the towers with his film crew a few days earlier.¹³⁴⁶⁷ What he could see and film with his crew on 7 June 1992 was machine gun fire directed at the lower part of the UNIS towers, coming from the south, which were positions

4046. On 8 June 1992, Fahra Mujanović and her four year old son were in the yard of their family house, situated in Barica which was a purely residential area very close to Sarajevo and in the vicinity of Žuč Hill.¹³⁴⁷⁰ Suddenly, an 82 mm mortar shell landed in the yard and exploded, lodging shrapnel in Mujanović's legs, left arm, back, chest, and head and throwing her across the yard, onto the ground.¹³⁴⁷¹ The shelling continued for another hour or so, preventing Mujanović's neighbours from coming to her aid; during this time, Mujanović who was lying on the ground, lost and regained her consciousness several times.¹³⁴⁷² Eventually, a female neighbour approached her and after changing her blood-soaked clothes, asked a young man to take Mujanović to Koševo Hospital in his car.¹³⁴⁷³ During the ride from Barica to Koševo Hospital, the car was hit by sniper fire several times.¹³⁴⁷⁴ At the hospital, Mujanović saw approximately 150 other people who had been admitted due to "terrible and shocking injuries" resulting from the shelling in and around Sarajevo on that day.¹³⁴⁷⁵ She underwent surgery to remove the shrapnel from her body.¹³⁴⁷⁶

4049. As a result of the shelling of Sarajevo between the night of 5 June and 8 June 1992, a number of civilians, including women, children and the elderly, were killed or seriously wounded.¹³⁴⁸¹ This shelling also caused extensive damage to civilian buildings and infrastructure, including the Music Academy, and a number of houses in Baščaršija.¹³⁴⁸²

On the morning of 9 June 1992, during a session of the BiH Presidency in which Izetbegović was also present, Halilović referred to the continuous shelling of the city by Serb Forces during the previous days and stated that the Serb side had 150 artillery pieces in its possession whereas the Bosnian Muslims had only ten pieces, of which only five functioned properly.¹³⁴⁸³

4051. On the same day, after a detailed discussion during a meeting of the Bosnian Serb Presidency, attended by the Accused, Plavšić, Krajišnik, Koljević, Đerić and Mladić, it was concluded that “the heavy artillery fire on the city [should] be halted”.¹³⁴⁸⁴ The next day, the Accused conveyed to the Secretary General that he was ready to bring to a halt “any artillery fire around Sarajevo”.¹³⁴⁸⁵

4052. As noted earlier, the Accused challenges the vagueness of Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2. However, the Chamber considers that Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2 are geographically limited to the city of Sarajevo and temporally limited to a “24 hour bombardment” on 28 to 29 May 1992 and to a bombardment which began on or about 6 June 1992, respectively. Throughout the trial, ¹³⁴⁸⁰ [REDACTED].

¹³⁴⁸¹ Based on all the evidence before it, the Chamber was able to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the following individuals were civilians and that they were not participating in hostilities when they were killed: Osman Kapetanović, Abdulah Ferhatović, Muhamed Avdić, Hasija Neimarlija (67 years old), and Emir Arnautović (17 years old). Similarly, the Chamber was able to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the following individuals were civilians and that they were not participating in hostilities when they were wounded: Fatima Palavra (14 years old), Ivan Oneščuk, Fahra Mujanović, Zilha Granilo, Jasmina Sandaktarević (13 years old), Nezira Mušić (80 years old), Vasvija Hodić (62 years old), Ismeta Bećirević, Fatima Hajdini (15 years old), Hikmet Maletović, Senada Meletović, Simo Petrović (64 years old), and Sabina Bećirević (10 years old). See P1991 (Stari Grad Police Station war diary), pp. 77, 79–80, 82, 86; P497 (Witness statement of Fatima Palavra dated 30 October 2008), paras. 5–8, 10; P500 (Witness statement of Ziba Avdić dated 31 October 2008), paras. 3, 6–7; P499 (Witness statement of Zilha Granilo dated 30 October 2008), paras. 1–3; P1865 (Witness statement of Fahra Mujanović dated 5 November 2008), para. 12; P819 (Extracts from Fatima Zaimović’s diary), p. 3. the Prosecution limited the evidence it presented on these two Scheduled Incidents to those specific geographical and temporal frames. The Chamber therefore rejects the Accused's argument in this regard.

4053. The Chamber also recalls the Accused's contention that any potential shelling of Velešići on 28 and 29 May and the combat operations by the SRK around 6 June 1992 were in any event lawful either because the areas that were targeted had a heavy concentration of ABiH military hardware and personnel or because there were ongoing Bosnian Muslim military attacks against the SRK. The Chamber first notes that any military action launched in response to military attacks by the opposing party should be directed at military targets and proportionate. In this regard, the Chamber notes that Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2 occurred in a purely urban setting where large concentrations of civilians and civilian buildings were closely intermingled with a number of military targets. In this context, particular military prudence was warranted. Instead, as described above, the massive shellings conducted by the SRK on 28 and 29 May and around 6 June 1992 indiscriminately targeted entire civilian neighbourhoods of Sarajevo, without differentiating between civilian and military targets. [REDACTED]. Further, contrary to the Accused's reliance on the intercepted conversation of 25 May 1992 between Mladić and the unidentified JNA officer to show that the shelling of Velešići was not indiscriminate, it is clear that in this conversation, Mladić declares that "Sarajevo will shake" with more shells fired than in the entire war so far, while at the same time acknowledging the urban context of Sarajevo and the presence of civilians there. Three days later, large parts of urban Sarajevo were indeed hit with heavy artillery fire. Further, even if initially launched in response to Bosnian Muslim attacks originating from specific locations in Sarajevo, the Chamber finds, relying in particular on the evidence of Wilson, that the shellings by the SRK on 28 and 29 May and around 6 June 1992 were carried out in a disproportionate manner. Accordingly, the Chamber rejects the Accused's assertions in this regard.

4054. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that from 28 May to 29 May 1992, in response to attacks by the ABiH, the SRK subjected the entire city of Sarajevo, including the largely Bosnian Muslim populated areas of Pofalići, Vratnik and Velešići to indiscriminate and disproportionate shelling and that as a result of this shelling, a number of civilians were injured, and various civilian buildings and structures, including the State Hospital, were extensively damaged or destroyed.

4055. The Chamber also finds that between the night of 5 June and 8 June 1992, in response to an ABiH attack, the SRK subjected the entire city of Sarajevo, including the old city centre, Vratnik, Baščaršija, Logavina, Bistrik, Sedrenik, Vasin Han, and Hrid-Jarčedoli to indiscriminate and disproportionate shelling, as a result of which a number of civilians were killed or injured, and various civilian buildings and structures, including the Music Academy, were extensively damaged or destroyed.

(B) Southwestern suburbs: Dobrinja and Alipašino Polje

(1) Confrontation lines and artillery in the area

4056. The Chamber has already discussed above, in the section on Scheduled Sniping Incidents in Sarajevo's southwestern suburbs, the exact location and the lay out of those suburbs, as well as the confrontation lines in the area during the conflict.¹³⁴⁸⁶ For that reason, the Chamber will not repeat the same evidence here but recalls that the confrontation line ran along the road between the apartment blocks referred to as Dobrinja 3 and Dobrinja 4.¹³⁴⁸⁷ Dobrinja 1, Dobrinja 4 and the Airport Settlement were under Serb control,¹³⁴⁸⁸ as the Ilidža Brigade's zone of responsibility ran from Dobrinja, across the Airport Settlement, Nedžarići, along the Dobrinja River, Pijačna street, and the railroad to Miljacka River.¹³⁴⁸⁹ The 1st Battalion of the Ilidža Brigade was positioned in Nedžarići,¹³⁴⁹⁰ while the 5th Battalion was positioned to the southeast of the 1st Battalion, near the airport.¹³⁴⁹¹ To the west of Dobrinja the confrontation line ran through the former "Energoinvest" complex in Ilidža and Stup.¹³⁴⁹² The 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK had its positions to the southeast of Dobrinja in the direction of Lukavica, and to the northeast, in Grbavica.¹³⁴⁹³

The 1st Battalion of the Ilidža Brigade had in its arsenal 82 and 120 mm mortars.¹³⁴⁹⁴ The mortar batteries of the battalion were located around the Faculty of Theology.¹³⁴⁹⁵ The 1st Mechanised Sarajevo Brigade's mixed artillery division was equipped with a collection of armaments, including three 120 mm D30 howitzer batteries, two 122 mm self-propelled Gvozdika howitzer batteries, one 128 mm Plamen multiple rocket-launcher (VBR) battery, and two 120 mm mortar batteries.¹³⁴⁹⁶

4058. Alipašino Polje was on the ABiH side of the confrontation line, which separated it from the Serb-held Nedžarići.¹³⁴⁹⁷ As discussed earlier,¹³⁴⁹⁸ the ABiH units opposing the Ilidža Brigade belonged to the 101st Brigade of the 1st Corps of the ABiH, positioned in Alipašino Polje and Vojničko Polje, and the 102nd Brigade of the 1st Corps of the ABiH located in Stup.¹³⁴⁹⁹ The 5th Motorised Brigade of the 1st Corps, later known as the 155th Brigade, was located in Dobrinja.¹³⁵⁰⁰ Beyond the Sarajevo airport, to the southwest of the Ilidža Brigade's positions, the 104th Brigade of the 1st Corps of the ABiH occupied the areas of Butmir and Sokolović Kolonija.¹³⁵⁰¹ According to

Sladoje, all ABiH positions were in civilian areas where people lived in apartment buildings and there was not a single “entirely civilian settlement” that did not have a military target in it.¹³⁵⁰²

4059. Rose testified that by February 1994, Dobrinja had been “utterly destroyed” as the Bosnian Serbs had it completely surrounded and would fire directly into Dobrinja, thus forcing the residents to live in their basements.¹³⁵⁰³

(2) Dobrinja, 1 June 1993 (Scheduled Incident G.4)

4060. The Indictment alleges that on 1 June 1993, two shells were fired upon a crowd of approximately 200 persons who were watching and participating in a football game in a parking lot bordered on three sides by residential apartment blocks and on the fourth side by the Lukavica road in residential settlement, Dobrinja IIB.¹³⁵⁰⁴ The Indictment further alleges that the origin of fire was VRS/SRK-held territory approximately to the east-southeast and that over 10 people were killed and approximately 100 were wounded.¹³⁵⁰⁵ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution alleges that two 81 or 82 mm calibre mortar shells exploded in this incident, killing 10 and wounding approximately 100 people.¹³⁵⁰⁶ The Accused argues that the incident did not actually take place at the site where it is alleged to have occurred.¹³⁵⁰⁷ He also argues, that the shells did not come from SRK-held territory and further, regardless of their origin, that the location of the incident was a legitimate military target.¹³⁵⁰⁸

4061. On 1 June 1993, a sunny day, a football tournament was organised in Dobrinja IIB.¹³⁵⁰⁹ The football pitch was set up in the corner of a parking lot, which was bounded by six-storey apartment blocks on three sides and on the fourth side, which faced the north, by Mojmiilo Hill; it was not visible from any point on the SRK side of the confrontation line.¹³⁵¹⁰ Around 200 spectators, including women and children, gathered to watch the teams play.¹³⁵¹¹ There were ABiH soldiers present at the parking lot, who were off-duty, unarmed, and not engaging in any military activity.¹³⁵¹² Ismet Fazlić was the referee of the second match.¹³⁵¹³ About 10 to 20 minutes into that game, shortly after 10 a.m., the first shell landed among the players in the centre of the pitch.¹³⁵¹⁴ Fazlić was hit by shrapnel and sustained serious injuries in both legs and other parts of his body.¹³⁵¹⁵ There were eleven young men on the ground, eight of whom died on the spot.¹³⁵¹⁶ Omer Hadžiabdić who was 15 years old at the time, was watching the match from the overturned cars when the first shell struck the football pitch.¹³⁵¹⁷ He was wounded by shrapnel in his leg.¹³⁵¹⁸ Nedim Gavranović, who was 12 years old at the time, was standing behind one of the goals when he heard the first explosion and felt a very strong blow.¹³⁵¹⁹ He sustained an entry and exit wound in his right lower leg caused by shrapnel.¹³⁵²⁰ A second shell landed at almost the same spot within seconds of the first shell.¹³⁵²¹ It fell in front of a young man and tore his leg off.¹³⁵²² There were many wounded people on the ground.¹³⁵²³

4062. On the same day, the 5th Motorised Brigade of the ABiH sent its daily report to the Command of the 1st Corps of the ABiH in which it reported that two 82mm mortar shells had fallen in its zone of responsibility on a parking lot where football was being played.¹³⁵²⁴ It was reported that six soldiers and five civilians lost their lives, whilst 55 soldiers and 32 civilians were wounded.¹³⁵²⁵ Similarly, the National Security Service of the RS MUP's Ilidža War Department reported on the incident on the same day, noting that 10 to 20 persons were killed and 50 ABiH soldiers were wounded when 2 shells fell during a football match on a parking lot in Dobrinja III.¹³⁵²⁶

4063. The next day, the BiH Presidency ordered the ABiH Supreme Command Staff to investigate this incident.¹³⁵²⁷ The Supreme Command reported back to the Presidency on 6 June that the football tournament was organised by a group of ABiH soldiers from the 5th Motorised Brigade, that the game was attended by a large number of civilians, children, and ABiH soldiers, and that 12 people (seven of whom were soldiers) were killed, while 101 people (51 of them combatants) were injured; the report also noted that the shells were fired from the direction of Lukavica.¹³⁵²⁸ Former ABiH General Asim Džambasović¹³⁵²⁹ testified that he knew about this incident and that the superior command criticised assembling of that type, as it was not reasonable at that time to organise sports activities.¹³⁵³⁰

4064. The UNPROFOR soldiers went to the site to perform shell crater analysis as soon as they heard of the incident.¹³⁵³¹ Captain Houdet conducted the analysis¹³⁵³² and found that the splinter pattern in what he referred to as “Crater 1” indicated that the projectile was at least an 81 mm mortar shell and that it had a bearing to the origin of fire of 143 degrees (2500 mils).¹³⁵³³ He found that the splinter pattern in what he termed “Crater 2” indicated a mortar shell of the same calibre, but with a bearing to the origin of fire of 138 degrees (2420 mils).¹³⁵³⁴ Houdet concluded that due to the crater fragments and the buildings surrounding the football pitch, the projectiles could only have been mortar shells with the only possible origin of fire in the direction of the SRK-held territory, to the south, southeast.¹³⁵³⁵ Houdet observed that there was no fuse furrow in either of the craters due to macadam surface, which is why the precise angle of descent and the range of the shells could not be determined.¹³⁵³⁶ Nevertheless, he concluded that if fired at the minimum range, the 81 mm shell that created Crater 1 would have originated approximately 300 metres south of Lukavica Barracks.¹³⁵³⁷ UNPROFOR commander, Lieutenant-General Morillon, faxed the ¹³⁵³⁷ Houdet calculated that for a shell to clear the buildings surrounding the incident site it would have to have a minimum angle of descent of 40.5 degrees. Noting that the minimum angle of descent for 81 and 120 mm mortars is around 45 degrees, he calculated that at that angle the minimum range for an 81 mm mortar would have been 1,120 metres. Accused just after midnight on 2 June 1993 informing him that “the shelling this morning in D[obrinja] caused the deaths of a number of innocent women and children”.¹³⁵³⁸

4065. The UN Commission on War Crimes investigated the incident some 27 days later and published a preliminary report on 7 July 1993 prepared by two Canadian officers.¹³⁵³⁹ Having analysed Houdet’s report, they concluded that the incident occurred at approximately 10:20 a.m., that two mortar shells of minimum 81 mm calibre fell at the scene of the incident, and that they were fired from the direction of SRK-held Lukavica.¹³⁵⁴⁰

4066. The officers also interviewed two men wounded in the incident, namely Zlatan Steković and Eldin Zornić.¹³⁵⁴¹ Steković told them that the day of the incident was clear and sunny, with good visibility.¹³⁵⁴² He also told them that despite the frontline being only 100 to 150 metres away, the site could not be seen from the Serb positions due to the height of the apartment buildings around the parking lot where the game was played.¹³⁵⁴³ Zornić told the officers that he was in the ABiH and knew that there were no military targets within one kilometre of the scene.¹³⁵⁴⁴ He corroborated Steković’s remarks that there was no direct line of sight from the Serb positions to the scene of the incident.¹³⁵⁴⁵ Zornić also speculated that the shells came either from Lukavica or Nedžarići.¹³⁵⁴⁶

4067. The officers were given a casualty list by the Bosnian State Commission for War Crimes from which they concluded that 13 persons were killed in this incident, while 133 were injured.¹³⁵⁴⁷ During their investigations, the two officers used a copy of the UNPROFOR map of Dobrinja, which indicated that the ABiH had mortars approximately 500 metres from the site of the incident,

Another eye-witness to the incident also provided information that the first shell fell near the perimeter, whilst the second fell almost in the centre of the football pitch. He further told them that at first he thought they were 82 mm mortar shells but he later found parts of a 60 mm mortar shell at the site. outside of the Dobrinja Hospital.¹³⁵⁴⁸ However, when inspecting the area the two officers did not see the mortars in question.¹³⁵⁴⁹ When asked about these mortars, KDZ185 testified that ABiH mortar positions continually moved and had no fixed location.¹³⁵⁵⁰

4068. The CSB Sarajevo could not conduct the forensic investigation of this incident during the war due to “incessant attack operations” but conducted it two years later,¹³⁵⁵¹ in November 1995 upon request of the Prosecution.¹³⁵⁵² Ballistic experts Sabljica, Međedović, and Kučanin, amongst others, conducted the investigation in the presence of an eyewitness to the event, Refik Sokolar, and a Prosecution investigator.¹³⁵⁵³ According to Sabljica and Međedović’s ballistics report, two shells fell on the parking lot, one landing on the parking lot tarmac surface and the other on the soil surface next to the parking lot.¹³⁵⁵⁴ Based on the size of the marks on the tarmac surface, it was determined that the shell that landed on the tarmac was an 82 mm shell.¹³⁵⁵⁵ Using the central axis analysis, the investigators concluded that the shell came from a southeasterly direction (the azimuth being 110 degrees from the north).¹³⁵⁵⁶ The point of impact of the second shell was not examined

Sabljica conceded that having an investigation two or three years later posed certain problems but explained that there was no mechanical intervention with the crater that they examined at the time of the on-site investigation; it was only later on that a red substance was poured into it, as was done all over Sarajevo (making the so-called “roses of death”), which made the crater more visible but also removed some of the traces. due to the changed appearance of the soil surface.¹³⁵⁵⁷ Sabljica confirmed that the report purposefully did not state which of the two armies fired the shell.¹³⁵⁵⁸

4069. Sabljica further testified that the separation line was some 300 to 400 metres away from the incident site, noting that Dobrinja was divided between the two sides.¹³⁵⁵⁹ He also explained that Mojmiilo Hill, which is north and northwest of the incident site, was under ABiH control, while the “Aerodromsko naselje” in Dobrinja, which is west and southwest of the incident, was under SRK control.¹³⁵⁶⁰ Finally, he explained that the minimum distance from which an 82 mm mortar shell can be fired is 600 to 650 metres, but that it gives “best results” at 4,200 metres.¹³⁵⁶¹ During cross-examination he conceded that with a zero charge an 82 mm calibre mortar has a range of 80 metres.¹³⁵⁶²

4070. Higgs visited the incident site accompanied by the Prosecution and “examined the two craters in question”,¹³⁵⁶³ which were filled in with a red substance thus making a detailed crater analysis impossible.¹³⁵⁶⁴ However, he also noted that “enough of the crater is still present to draw some conclusion,” namely the minimum angle of descent necessary to clear the surrounding buildings.¹³⁵⁶⁵ Having examined the two craters, Higgs agreed with the findings made by Houdet.¹³⁵⁶⁶ He noted that eye-witnesses said they heard the sound of a weapon firing and that the confrontation line was some 200 metres away from the incident site.¹³⁵⁶⁷ In his view, this meant ¹³⁵⁶⁷ P1437 (Richard Higgs’s Consolidated Report on Sarajevo Shelling Incidents, 13 March 2009), p. 7. Sabljica testified that in order for a witness to hear a shell being fired, they would have to be some 50 to 100 metres away from the origin of fire. However, he explained that information about witnesses hearing the firing was usually not taken into account by his team because it was a subjective opinion that should be taken with a grain of salt. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7855–7858, 7872–7873 (13 October 2010).

that the mortar was not far away and was firing on low charge to reduce the time of flight and increase accuracy.¹³⁵⁶⁸

4071. Higgs was also of the view that the purpose of those firing the mortar was to “harass” those present at the incident site because more than two shells would have been fired if the intention was to neutralise a certain target or the nearby water plant.¹³⁵⁶⁹ He thought that, rather than being an accident, this was a deliberate attack as the frontline was not far and the football match was not carried out covertly.¹³⁵⁷⁰ Higgs commented that given the closeness of the two rounds it was probable that the same mortar battery fired both rounds and agreed with Houdet’s conclusion that the mortar rounds must have been fired from the Serb side of the confrontation lines.¹³⁵⁷¹ Based on the statements of witnesses who heard the mortar fire, he came to the conclusion that the mortar battery may well have been situated in an area hidden from observation in the area of Lukavica Barracks to the southeast of Dobrinja.¹³⁵⁷²

4072. Hogan, accompanied by Fazlić, recorded the GPS co-ordinates and filmed the locations where the shells impacted in this incident.¹³⁵⁷³ On cross-examination, he testified that he was aware of—and disagreed with—the conclusion by the CSB Sarajevo team in 1995 that the second shell fell in soft soil next to the parking lot.¹³⁵⁷⁴

4073. John Hamill, an officer in the Artillery Corps of the Irish Army who served as an UNMO in Sarajevo from May until June 1993¹³⁵⁷⁵ visited the site at the request of the Prosecution on 18 September 2001.¹³⁵⁷⁶ He stated that the craters were old but largely preserved, despite having been filled with red substance.¹³⁵⁷⁷ He found that the easternmost crater, which he termed “Crater ¹³⁵⁷⁶ Hamill was accompanied by Hogan and Fazlić. See P1995 (Supplemental information sheet for John Hamill, 18 September 2001), e-court p. 2; John Hamill, P1994 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Galić). T. 6114; John Hamill, T. 9689 (13 December 2010).

¹³⁵⁷⁷ Hamill thought that the red substance preserved the crater and enabled him to do a reasonable job of determining what type of weapon was used and from where. See John Hamill, T. 9689–9693 (13 December 2010); P1995 (Supplemental information sheet for John Hamill, 18 September 2001), e-court p. 2; John Hamill, P1994 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Galić). 1”, was better preserved than the other crater, which he termed “Crater 2”, but that the red substance now prevented the precise determination of whether the craters were made by gun or mortar.¹³⁵⁷⁸ With Crater 1, Hamill observed traces characteristic of a gun or howitzer shell, but also noted that this did not mean that the crater was not caused by a mortar.¹³⁵⁷⁹ He determined that the projectile that created Crater 1, be it a gun or a mortar shell, was fired from an approximate direction of 2,200 mils, plus or minus 150 mils, that is generally east-southeast of the impact site.¹³⁵⁸⁰ With respect to Crater 2, Hamill was only able to conclude, based on its shape that it appeared to have come from the same direction as Crater 1.¹³⁵⁸¹ In relation to the exact origin of fire, Hamill observed that both rounds originated from a bearing that runs through the area of Toplik, where SRK forces had a battery of 122 mm guns which were monitored by the UNMOs at the time.¹³⁵⁸² He believed that the SRK also operated 82 mm mortars in Toplik.¹³⁵⁸³

4074. Hamill testified that the minimum angle of descent necessary for the projectiles to have cleared the surrounding buildings and landed on the site indicates that they could have been fired from either a mortar or a howitzer.¹³⁵⁸⁴ He further commented that the UN team came up with two different bearings, indicating that the weapons may have been fired at some distance from each other.¹³⁵⁸⁵ He equated this to his own findings, noting that he had a specific bearing for Crater 1 and a more indeterminate bearing for Crater 2 but that both rounds generally came from the same direction.¹³⁵⁸⁶ When asked to compare the bearing determined by the CSB Sarajevo team to the bearings determined by him and by the UNPROFOR investigators, Hamill stated that the difference

¹³⁵⁷⁸ P1995 (Supplemental information sheet for John Hamill, 18 September 2001), e-court p. 2. Hamill could not explain why the CSB Sarajevo investigation team in 1995 only found and examined one crater in the asphalt. He was adamant that he saw two craters in the tarmac in 2001, one more obvious than the other. See John Hamill, T. 9708 (13 December 2010).

¹³⁵⁷⁹ Hamill also stated that if Crater 1 was created by a mortar, a medium mortar was probably used. ¹³⁵⁸⁴ John Hamill, T. 9699–9700 (13 December 2010). Hamill also testified that the higher the angle of descent, the shorter the range from which the projectile was fired. When shown a photograph of the more preserved crater taken by the CSB Sarajevo investigators two years after the incident, he confirmed that its pattern was consistent with a higher angle of descent—assuming the damage was caused by a shell. However, if caused by a “mortar bomb” then the pattern did not indicate a high angle of descent. See John Hamill, T. 9700–9701, 9707–9710, 9716–9719 (13 December 2010).

¹³⁵⁸⁵ John Hamill, T. 9699–9700 (13 December 2010). When asked by the Chamber to comment on the firing capabilities of mortars, Hamill testified that it is possible to fire two rounds from the same tube within seconds of each other and then to have these rounds come down quite a distance away from each other. See John Hamill, T. 9702 (13 December 2010).

was not as large as it seemed as all of these bearings would fall in the same area, that is “somewhere in east of southeast”.¹³⁵⁸⁷

4075. Zorica Subotić visited the site of the incident in September 2010.¹³⁵⁸⁸ She challenged the alleged location of the incident, stating that the match was not played on the parking lot but rather “on a five-a-side pitch located near the parking lot”,¹³⁵⁸⁹ leading her to conclude that Fazlić falsely indicated the location of the football pitch to investigators.¹³⁵⁹⁰ She argued that, in addition, instances of imprecision within Houdet’s report cast doubt on the accuracy of his analysis and even on whether he actually visited the scene of the incident at all.¹³⁵⁹¹ Further, a number of witnesses who provided locations of the craters to investigators were contradicted by the CSB Sarajevo report which referred to only one crater on the asphalt surface of the parking lot.¹³⁵⁹² Subotić argued that the second crater “was probably made by hand after 21 November 1995” and thus was not in existence when Houdet examined the scene.¹³⁵⁹³

Subotić based this claim on eyewitness statements and the Fédération Internationale de Football Association (“FIFA”) rules of the game. According to her, the game roughly corresponded to FIFA’s “five-a-side football game”. Given that there was a sports pitch beside the parking lot, which met the requirements specified by FIFA, she thought that the game, and thus the incident, took place on that pitch. While acknowledging that video footage recorded immediately after the incident shows two goal posts on the parking lot, next to a large blood stain, she proceeded to discount this location as the scene of the incident because the size of the goal post did not correspond to the FIFA rules. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 55–62, 72–73, 156; Zorica Subotić, T. 38249–38251 (14 May 2013); D1005 (Video footage re shelling of Dobrinja on 1 June 1993).

¹³⁵⁹⁰ D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 60–61, 157. She also claimed that the fact that the parking lot was presented by Fazlić and others as the scene of the incident could be construed “as a bid to cover up evidence”. These imprecisions were: (i) his reference to “macadam surface” which is a road laid with crushed stone and which was not present at the incident site and (ii) Houdet’s grid references for the craters which indicated a location 200 metres away from the parking lot. D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 61–62; Mirza Sabljica, T. 7878–7879, 7883 (13 October 2010). With respect to (i), while Higgs testified that the English term macadam is equivalent to tarmac or asphalt, Subotić refused to accept that this was a case of linguistic confusion and maintained that macadam surface had multiple definitions. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38410–38412 (16 May 2013); Richard Higgs, T. 6013 (19 August 2010). As for (ii), she admitted on cross-examination that she did not know what map system Houdet used. 4076. While Subotić agreed on the direction of fire for this incident, namely that it came from the southeast of the incident site, she thought that it originated from ABiH-held territory.¹³⁵⁹⁴ She confirmed Houdet’s findings as to Crater 1, but found that the azimuth of Crater 2 was 108 degrees and claimed that it was not related to this particular incident and was also not the crater identified by Houdet as Crater 2.¹³⁵⁹⁵ In addition, she noted that Houdet based his conclusions about the distance from which the shells were fired on the minimum angle of descent whereas he should have used the maximum angle.¹³⁵⁹⁶ Furthermore, according to her, all the trajectories up to the maximum angle of descent could have struck the scene of the incident, meaning that the 82 mm mortar shell could have been fired from any range between 80 and 4,850 metres.¹³⁵⁹⁷ She also argued that investigators from CSB Sarajevo incorrectly determined the azimuth of the crater that they examined, as they arrived at 110 degrees compared to the 143 degrees calculated by Houdet and accepted by her.¹³⁵⁹⁸ Finally, Subotić concluded on the basis of the likely angle of descent of the shell, it being greater than 65 degrees,¹³⁵⁹⁹ and the distance to SRK positions,¹³⁶⁰⁰ that the shell that produced the crater in the parking lot during this incident was not fired from SRK positions.¹³⁶⁰¹ On cross-examination she conceded that for the shell to have been fired from ABiH

The Chamber notes that the photograph in question is not clear enough to show where exactly the compass was placed by the CSB Sarajevo team. In addition, even if that was the case, it does not mean that the measurements were taken at the exact moment at which the photograph was taken.

¹³⁶⁰⁰ D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), p. 57 (stating that the confrontation line was 270 metres away). See also Adjudicated Fact 263 which provides that the distance from the pitch to the confrontation lines in the direction of fire was approximately 300 metres. According to Subotić, the closest SRK position where a mortar could have been positioned was 400 metres to the southeast. At this range, an 82 mm shell can be fired with either primary, first, or second charge. She excluded the first and second charges because the resulting angle of descent would have been too high. She then argued that given the height of the surrounding buildings, the SRK mortars were likely to be at minimum 425 metres away from the scene, leaving a subsequent angle of descent on primary charge of 58.7 degrees, which was “manifestly smaller” than the angle at which the shell landed. held-territory to the southeast, the furthest distance from the incident site that it could have been fired from was 200 metres.¹³⁶⁰²

4077. Noting the different data about the number of casualties, Subotić used the report of the Supreme Command of the ABiH of 6 June 1993 to point out that 58 out of 114 casualties, or 51.8%, were ABiH personnel.¹³⁶⁰³ She also argued that the BiH security organs suspected the incident had been staged.¹³⁶⁰⁴

4078. Galić testified that on the day of the incident a cease-fire was in place in Sarajevo.¹³⁶⁰⁵ Commenting on his regular combat report for 1 June 1993, which provides that the SRK did not open fire that day, he stated that SRK forces respected the cease-fire and that had they been active in the area, this would have been stated in the report.¹³⁶⁰⁶ He also stated that he neither received an order nor gave one to fire on the area, and that his command received no reports of fire being opened in the area.¹³⁶⁰⁷ Galić stressed that the incident occurred “perhaps 150 metres in-depth from the confrontation line at the positions of the [ABiH]” and that close to the parking lot there was an atomic shelter which was used to house soldiers and military material, thus making the area where the mortars landed a justified and legitimate military target.¹³⁶⁰⁸ In cross-examination, however, he testified that he did not know if the fire was opened on the SRK position from the incident site on the day of the incident.¹³⁶⁰⁹ He also confirmed that under normal circumstances he would not place a mortar on or even near a confrontation line nor would he fire a mortar at a target that was some 150 metres away because for calibres of up to 120 mm, the “safety zone” from which they must fire is at least 200 metres away from the target, while for larger calibres it is 400 metres.¹³⁶¹⁰ When asked if he would fire at his own faction located some 150 metres away as part of a conspiracy, he stated that it was possible but risky, and maintained that he would never order the shelling of civilians.¹³⁶¹¹ According to Galić, given the state of affairs in Sarajevo, it was “not normal” to have a football match or similar public gatherings so close to the confrontation lines.¹³⁶¹²

4079. In terms of the casualties of this incident, the Chamber received evidence that on 1 June 1993 at least 122 people were brought to the Dobrinja Hospital as a result of the incident.¹³⁶¹³ Due to the number of casualties, both the hospital and the morgue were over-crowded.¹³⁶¹⁴ A number of victims were thus transferred to the Koševo Hospital¹³⁶¹⁵ and State Hospital,¹³⁶¹⁶ and at least three children were taken to the surgery ward of the Children’s Department at the Koševo Hospital.¹³⁶¹⁷ From the Dobrinja Hospital records it is clear that at least 27 of the victims were under the age of 18, including 4 children who died as a result of their injuries.¹³⁶¹⁸ As noted earlier,¹³⁶¹⁹ the ABiH Supreme Command investigated this incident at the request of the BiH presidency and concluded that 12 persons died in the incident, including 7 who were ABiH personnel, and that 101 persons were injured, 51 of which were ABiH soldiers.¹³⁶²⁰ The medical records available to the Chamber also indicate that 12 people died in this incident.¹³⁶²¹

4080. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts that go to the origin and the nature of fire in this incident: (i) the shells that hit the football pitch were of at least 81-82 mm calibre and originated from the direction east-southeast, within SRK-held territory;¹³⁶²² (ii) the headquarters of ABiH 5th Motorised Brigade was not in the area of the parking lot in Dobrinja IIIB settlement where the football pitch was set up, but in the Dobrinja II settlement;¹³⁶²³ and (iii) the atomic shelter was not the intended target of the attack.¹³⁶²⁴

4081. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts recounted above, the Chamber is convinced that two shells of at least 81 mm calibre struck the parking lot in the Dobrinja IIIB residential settlement on 1 June 1993. The Chamber recalls that Subotić challenged this location, claiming that the football match was played on a purpose-built sports pitch beside the lot. Her claim, however, ignores the considerable evidence indicating that the match was in fact played on the parking lot. Furthermore, the Chamber considers her proposition that the residents of Dobrinja would have been playing soccer governed by the FIFA rules unacceptable given the wartime circumstances at the time and the fact that the primary concerns of the organisers was to find a location that would be protected from the view of the SRK forces. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that this type of analysis has seriously damaged Subotić's credibility both generally and specifically with respect to this incident.

4082. Relying on the medical evidence and the ABiH Supreme Command investigation discussed above, the Chamber finds that the explosion caused by the two shells on 1 June 1993 resulted in 122 casualties, at least 12 of whom died as a result of their injuries.

4083. In terms of the direction and origin of fire, the Chamber recalls that the UNPROFOR investigators came to the scene on the day of the incident and thus were able to observe the traces of the two points of impact, arriving at the conclusion that the shells originated from the south-southeast of Dobrinja.¹³⁶²⁵ As noted above, a team from CSB Sarajevo conducted forensic examination at the incident site in November 1995 but examined only one point of impact, also concluding that the projectile in question originated from a southeasterly direction. This was then confirmed by Higgs and Hamill who thought that southeast was the direction from which the fire came. Finally, even Subotić agreed that at least one of the incident-related shells originated from the southeast. Accordingly, the Chamber is convinced that both shells came from that direction.

¹³⁶²⁵ The Chamber does not accept Subotić's suggestion that a second crater on the parking lot was made by mechanical intervention as it is clear from the evidence that both shells landed on the asphalt surface of the parking lot.

4084. As far as the origin of fire is concerned, the precise angle of descent for the shells could not be determined at the incident site and therefore the shells may have originated anywhere along this trajectory to the southeast of Dobrinja. The Chamber notes that the UNPROFOR, CSB Sarajevo, and Hamill all concluded that the shells originated from the SRK-held positions to the south of Lukavica. In contrast, Subotić concluded that the fire originated from ABiH-held positions along this same trajectory. Given the location of the incident site and the confrontation line to the southeast,¹³⁶²⁶ the furthest distance from the incident site that the shells could have been fired from if they had originated in ABiH-held territory was 200 metres.¹³⁶²⁷ In this respect, the Chamber recalls the evidence of Hamill and Galić in relation to danger radii and safety zones and that it would have been unsafe and extremely risky to fire a medium calibre shell at a target that is less than 200 metres away.¹³⁶²⁸ Thus, the fire must have originated in an area that was further than 200 metres away from the incident site in the approximate direction of fire to the southeast. This places it firmly within the SRK-held territory.

4085. As recounted above, Galić testified that the SRK did not open fire on Dobrinja on 1 June 1993. However, the Chamber cannot accept this evidence in light of the evidence analysed above in relation to this incident, as well as the evidence about the general situation in Dobrinja and the shelling its civilian inhabitants were exposed to on a regular basis during the conflict.¹³⁶²⁹

¹³⁶²⁶ See e.g. D759 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Mirza Sabljica); D760 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Mirza Sabljica). See also paras. 4069, 4076.

¹³⁶²⁸ See para. 3982. The Chamber acknowledges that the apartment building in between the incident site and the confrontation line may have offered some protection for an ABiH unit to fire at the incident site from a position within the weapon's danger radius. It does not however consider that it is reasonable that the ABiH would have fired in the direction of its own territory, at short distance and at high elevation, as part of some conspiracy to garner international support against the VRS.

¹³⁶²⁹ See paras. 3783, 4059.

more than two mortar rounds would have been necessary to destroy it.¹³⁶³⁰ Furthermore, assuming that there was an ABiH mortar battery approximately 500 metres away from the incident site, as suggested by one of the UNPROFOR maps, given the distance involved the Chamber does not consider it to have been the intended target either.

4087. The Chamber recalls that 58 of the casualties in this incident were members of the ABiH and thus were a legitimate military target. However, the Chamber also notes that, in total, around 200 spectators, including women and children, were watching the game and that an almost equivalent number of casualties in this incident were civilians not taking direct part in hostilities at the time. The Chamber recalls that the presence of soldiers within the civilian population does not deprive the population of its civilian character and that the mens rea of a person responsible for an attack is to be assessed according to the knowledge that he or she had at the time of launching the attack.¹³⁶³¹ There is no evidence as to whether the SRK units responsible for this incident knew at the time when they launched the attack that ABiH soldiers would be present at the football event or how many of them would attend, but the evidence shows that the SRK units were not able to see the incident site from their positions. However, even if the presence and the number of ABiH soldiers were known to the SRK units in advance, it must have been obvious to those launching the attack that large numbers of civilians would inevitably gather at the event given (i) that the event involved a football match, that is, a purely civilian activity; (ii) the time of the event, that is, daytime and during a period of cease-fire; and (iii) the location of the event, that is, the middle of a residential area, surrounded by residential apartment blocks. Further, the SRK's decision to fire two mortar shells at such an event, those shells being designed to suppress activity over a wide area,¹³⁶³² shows in turn that the SRK units in question did not take any precautionary measures in accordance with the laws of war. Therefore, the Chamber is convinced that this incident is an example of indiscriminate fire.

(3) Hakije Turajlića, Dobrinja, 12 July 1993 (Scheduled Incident G.5)

4088. The Indictment alleges that on 12 July 1993, an 82 mm mortar shell was fired at about 100 civilians who were waiting to access a communal water pump in the front yard of a residence at 39 Hakije Turajlića (previously Aleja Branka Bujića¹³⁶³³ then Spasenije Cane Babović), in Dobrinja, ¹³⁶³⁰ The Chamber also recalls that the two shells fell in quick succession to one another, landed at almost the same position, and that the second shell did not land any closer to the atomic shelter.

¹³⁶³³ Indictment, Scheduled Incident G.5. While the Indictment provides that the street was called "Aleja Branka Bulića" at the time of the incident, the documentation received by the Chamber refers to "Aleja Branka Bujića", which is the correct spelling of that street's name.

which was a residential settlement.¹³⁶³⁴ The Indictment further alleges that the origin of fire was VRS/SRK-held territory approximately to the west-northwest and that 13 people were killed and 14 were wounded.¹³⁶³⁵ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution submits that the shell exploded at approximately 3 p.m. on a group of approximately 50 to 60 civilians queuing to gather water from a well, killing more than ten and wounding more than ten others.¹³⁶³⁶ The Accused acknowledges that on 12 July 1993 an 82 mm calibre shell exploded in the settlement of Dobrinja leaving 27 casualties.¹³⁶³⁷ He argues, however, that the fire originated from the north-northeast area controlled by ABiH forces.¹³⁶³⁸ He also submits that the incident occurred about 100 metres from an ABiH command post and that no orders were issued to SRK forces during this period to open fire at this location.¹³⁶³⁹

4089. The Chamber has taken judicial notice of the fact that due to a water cut-off in Dobrinja, inhabitants of “C5”, a settlement in Dobrinja, replenished their water supply at well-known emergency water points,¹³⁶⁴⁰ one of which was located in Hakije Turajlića street.¹³⁶⁴¹ In the middle of the afternoon of 12 July 1993, a fairly clear day until 5 p.m., there were 100 or more canisters in that street.¹³⁶⁴² People, mostly elderly, were waiting for their turn to enter into the front yard of the house through an iron gate guarded by Enver Taslaman.¹³⁶⁴³ Rasim Mehonić, a retiree who had been queuing with his wife and two daughters since dawn, was crouched next to Taslaman, waiting for his turn to collect water when, at approximately 3 p.m., a mortar shell exploded,¹³⁶⁴⁴ and Mehonić felt the left side of his body hit by shrapnel.¹³⁶⁴⁵ Next to Mehonić, Taslaman was hit on the arm and the left leg.¹³⁶⁴⁶ The area around the well was then repeatedly shelled.¹³⁶⁴⁷

4090. According to the report on this incident prepared by CSB Sarajevo, on 12 July 1993, at around 3:27 p.m., in front of a family house at Aleja B. Bujića 155 in Dobrinja,¹³⁶⁴⁸ a shell

¹³⁶⁴⁸ The official CSB Sarajevo report refers to the site of the incident as being in front of a family house at Aleja B. Bujića 155, across the street from a block of flats at S.C. Babović street Number 6, in Dobrinja V. Later, it impacted and exploded against the body of Zorka Simić, who was, together with around 30 others, lining up to get water.¹³⁶⁴⁹ The report also provides that the CSB Sarajevo investigation team, including the ballistics expert Hamdija Čavčić, was dispatched to the scene some two hours after the incident.¹³⁶⁵⁰ The team eventually found that the explosion killed 12 people, including Simić, while 15 others were injured.¹³⁶⁵¹ The report notes that the people queuing for water were warned by the police just before the incident that they should not stay at this location as the frontline was only 200 metres away.¹³⁶⁵²

4091. A shell stabiliser was found at the scene of the explosion, next to Simić's body, which Čavčić determined belonged to an 82 mm calibre mortar shell.¹³⁶⁵³ Čavčić also concluded that the shell exploded some distance from the ground, "most probably upon impact with person" as there was no explosion crater at the scene, only the heavily damaged body.¹³⁶⁵⁴ Further, he thought that the shell had been fired from the northwest-west, that is, from the direction of Nedžarići.¹³⁶⁵⁵ According to the report, Čavčić made this conclusion on the basis of (i) traces of powder burns and mechanical damage from mortar shell fragments evident on the fence occupying the eastern side of the street; (ii) similar traces he observed on the rear seat of a green Škoda car, which was parked close to this section of the fence, facing eastwards; and (iii) the fact that the pavement to the northwest of the damaged fence showed mechanical damage forming an irregular arc towards the northwest-west.¹³⁶⁵⁶

4092. Members of the UNPROFOR also conducted an investigation at the site and prepared a report, concluding that the projectile was an 82 mm mortar shell, that it was highly probable that it came from "the Serbian party", and that it "could have been shot from corridor Nedžarići-Ilidža nord."¹³⁶⁵⁷ The UNPROFOR report also noted that "the absence of a characteristic crater and

4093. Higgs visited the incident site and noted that, “due to the lapse of time and the fact that the mortar hit a person before striking the ground little or no evidence still exists at this site.”¹³⁶⁵⁹ Thus, he commented mostly on the forensic report prepared by CSB Sarajevo and agreed with the findings made therein, concluding that the calibre of the weapon fired was an 82 mm mortar from the direction of west northwest.¹³⁶⁶⁰ He noted that the methodology used by CSB Sarajevo, as mentioned in the official report, was appropriate but that there would be a slightly larger margin of error because there was no crater to examine so that only the “approximate direction” from which the round came could be determined, as was indeed done.¹³⁶⁶¹ Higgs also opined that, as this area was an emergency water supply, it would be “fair to assume” that it was well known and “recorded”¹³⁶⁶² that it would be full of civilians.¹³⁶⁶³ Given that only one shell was fired, which is not something that would happen if the aim was to neutralise a large area or a military target, Higgs concluded that “it is most probable that harassment was intended on the people at that location.”¹³⁶⁶⁴ The possibility that there was a sniper operating in the area approximately 200 metres away did not affect his opinion as the round would have been too inaccurate to target the sniper.¹³⁶⁶⁵ Higgs also commented on the discovery of the shell’s tail fin next to the body of one of the victims, stating that “the body would have probably stopped the fins from being blown away any further”.¹³⁶⁶⁶

4094. When asked by the Accused to explain the slight difference between the directions of fire as determined by the CSB Sarajevo and UNPROFOR teams, he said that only general bearings could be determined due to the type of crater on the scene.¹³⁶⁶⁷ Higgs marked two contemporaneous photographs of the scene taken by CSB Sarajevo with the evident shrapnel marks, pieces of debris, and also the explosion's likely direction of force.¹³⁶⁶⁸ While doing so, Higgs opined that the shell exploded very close to the Škoda, slightly to the rear of the car, but that a definite angle of the direction of the force was impossible to determine on the basis of the photograph, including whether the force came from above or below the car.¹³⁶⁶⁹

4095. Zorica Subotić first visited the site of the incident in 2010.¹³⁶⁷⁰ She testified that in her opinion the shell had come from the north or northeast, an area under ABiH control, rather than the west or northwest.¹³⁶⁷¹ In coming to this conclusion, Subotić used the azimuth of the street, which she calculated using Google Earth, as well as the central-axis method that she applied to the pattern of the damage on the pavement shown in the photographs taken by CSB Sarajevo.¹³⁶⁷² She argued that Čavčić misinterpreted the fragment marks that were left on the asphalt and also on the Škoda car, and that the true direction bisecting these marks actually slanted slightly eastward in relation to the pavement.¹³⁶⁷³ In addition, according to Subotić, the analysis undertaken by Čavčić to determine the centre of the explosion was done using an unacceptable "imaginary lines" methodology.¹³⁶⁷⁴ Subotić also observed that Simić's remains were located beside the rear right-

Higgs stated that he did not use photographs as part of his analysis because of their poor quality and because some of the markings and the debris may not be visible. See Richard Higgs, T. 5996–5998, 6001, 6003 (19 August 2010).

¹³⁶⁷² D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 81–83, 85, Figure 46; Zorica Subotić, T. 38255–38256 (14 May 2013). Subotić conducted this analysis by marking the traces of damage visible on a photograph of the scene taken by the CSB Sarajevo team. On cross-examination, she denied that she was at a disadvantage compared to Čavčić who conducted a de visu examination. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38357–38363, 38374–38379 (15 May 2013). When it was put to her that she marked more shrapnel marks at the scene (as seen on her photograph of the scene taken in 2010) than she did in the contemporaneous CSB Sarajevo photograph which she had used to determine the direction of fire, Subotić responded that she could see all the marks in the latter but only marked those necessary to show an approximate trajectory, the trajectory that was partly based on the damage to the car. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38380–38384 (15 May 2013), T. 38627–38630 (22 May 2013); P6319 (Photograph showing shrapnel marks marked by Zorica Subotić); D3557 (Photograph of a street marked by Zorica Subotić).

¹³⁶⁷³ D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 83. In relation to the Škoda, Subotić testified that the deformation to the rear of the vehicle seen in photographs and video footage indicates that the shell exploded from a direction to the east of north. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 85–88, 92, 158; Zorica Subotić, T. 38256–38258, 38267 (14 May 2013), T. 38377 (15 May 2013). When put to her on cross-examination that the video footage was of such low quality that it was impossible to determine all those things from it, Subotić responded that she viewed it in the context of all the evidence. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38396–38399 (16 May 2013); P6320 (Excerpt from video footage re shelling of Hakije Turajlića on 12 July 1993).

¹³⁶⁷⁴ D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 84–85. The Chamber notes that this methodology is not outlined in Čavčić's report but rather in his statement in the Galić case, which is not in evidence in this case. In his statement, as quoted in Subotić's report, Čavčić explicitly says that the team managed to determine the direction of fire based on the damage on the hand side of a Škoda car, which indicated to her that the shell had come from the direction slightly east of the north—had the shell come from the direction as determined by Čavčić, the force of the blast would have pushed the victim either onto the car or to its left hand side.¹³⁶⁷⁵ Finally, Subotić also noted that in his report Čavčić stated that the stabiliser was found next to the victim's body whereas in the video footage of the aftermath of the incident it can be seen next to the rear left tyre of the Škoda.¹³⁶⁷⁶ According to Subotić, had the shell come from the west or northwest as determined by CSB Sarajevo, the stabiliser would have been on the right hand side of the car, on Simić's body.¹³⁶⁷⁷

4096. In relation to the UNPROFOR investigation, Subotić argued that their conclusions, like those of CSB Sarajevo, ran counter to evidence at the scene.¹³⁶⁷⁸ In addition, she expressed concern that the UNPROFOR investigators relied on information given to them by CSB Sarajevo and therefore did not run an independent investigation.¹³⁶⁷⁹

4097. Subotić also referred to a number of witness testimonies from the Galić case in relation to the disposition of forces on 12 July 1993, arguing that the scene of the incident was about 120 metres from an ABiH command post.¹³⁶⁸⁰ She also argued that the large numbers of canisters seen in the contemporaneous photographs and footage of the scene indicate that there was a conspiracy asphalt which indicated where the centre of explosion may have been. It is then that he drew imaginary lines from the damaged parts of the asphalt and noticed that they all converged on the victim's body.

In cross-examination, when it was put to her that the stabiliser could have easily ricocheted off an object after the explosion and/or could have been moved by people in the immediate aftermath of the incident, Subotić accepted that this was possible but explained that the stabiliser was just one piece of the puzzle in addition to the damage caused by the shell, which pointed her to the incoming trajectory of north or northeast. See P1442 (UNPROFOR report re shelling of Dobrinja on 12 July 1993), e-court, p. 2. In cross-examination, Subotić conceded that she did not have access to the testimony of the UNPROFOR officer who, according to the Prosecution, testified in the Galić case in relation to the conduct of this investigation and who explained that the direction of fire was arrived at independently by two separate members of the UNPROFOR team. Džambasović confirmed that the command post of the 2nd Battalion of the 155th Brigade of the ABiH was located in the Šipad building in the centre of Dobrinja. The map he marked showing the command post suggests that it was to the north of the incident site and several blocks away. to show that “the water supply situation in Sarajevo was dramatic”.¹³⁶⁸¹ Further, she recalled that, shortly before the incident, local authorities warned people not to loiter in the area due to the proximity of the confrontation lines, which to her indicated that they had knowledge of the possibility of shelling.¹³⁶⁸²

4098. Galić testified that he did not remember issuing any orders to fire on Hakije Turajlića street and could not remember any subordinates informing him of such activities.¹³⁶⁸³ He also stated that during this period the SRK forces were engaged in operation Lukavac 93 and “it was not necessary to engage in any active operations towards the centre of the city.”¹³⁶⁸⁴

4099. Radojčić testified that he never issued an order to open fire at Hakije Turajlića street to any unit of his brigade.¹³⁶⁸⁵ Sladoje testified that no orders to target civilians were issued and further that there was no line-of-sight between his unit’s positions and the scene of the incident in Dobrinja C5.¹³⁶⁸⁶ He also testified that the battalion positions in Nedžarići “were frequently targeted from high-rises in Dobrinja C5” during July 1993.¹³⁶⁸⁷ On cross-examination, Sladoje confirmed that the suburbs of Vojničko Polje, Mojnilo, Dobrinja, and Alipašino Polje were all within the range of the 1st Battalion’s weaponry.¹³⁶⁸⁸ He also acknowledged that civilians lived in these areas but stated that “among the civilians it was the [ABiH] using practically all buildings for their purposes”.¹³⁶⁸⁹

4100. Guzina testified that he never issued an order to fire at civilians, nor was he aware of any of his subordinates or superiors issuing any such orders.¹³⁶⁹⁰ In relation to the incident he stated that he was engaged in Operation Lukavac 93 and therefore had no information about it.¹³⁶⁹¹

¹³⁶⁸³ Stanislav Galić, T. 37387–37388 (18 April 2013). 4101. Savo Simić, Chief of Artillery in the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade from 29 May 1992 till the late May 1994,¹³⁶⁹² commented that in his opinion the shell fired in this incident was “fired from the Butmir sector, from positions under the control of the [ABiH] forces”.¹³⁶⁹³ However, he never explained the basis of this opinion and the Chamber is unable to assess its reliability. On cross-examination, speaking of the situation in Sarajevo generally, Simić testified that it was the ABiH’s responsibility to take into account whether a location was inhabited when they placed their firing positions.¹³⁶⁹⁴

4102. In terms of casualties in this incident, the CSB Sarajevo report lists the following 12 individuals as having been killed: Ljiljana Matić, Ibro Talić, Enisa Talić, Jasna Trtković, Stela Trtković, Rahima Mehonić, Sedajeta Mehonić, Nedžiba Mehonić, Ajdin Kirlić, Dragica Mičanović, Zora Simić, and Sulejman Selinović.¹³⁶⁹⁵ It also lists the following 15 persons as wounded: Ilhan Jelovac, Rasim Mahonić, Enver Taslaman, Ahmed Milić, Hamid Džozo, Vinka Kneht, Husein Grebić, Džulsuna Mršović, Derviš Fazlić, Majda Alihodžić, Kasim Čaušević, Enes Turhan, Manojlo Dangubić, Izet Čolaković, and Fehma Kurić.¹³⁶⁹⁶ Medical records from Dobrinja Hospital show that all of the 27 casualties listed in the CSB Sarajevo report on 12 July 1993 were admitted to that facility on the day of the incident.¹³⁶⁹⁷ Koševo Hospital morgue records further indicate that Ilhan Jelovac and Vinka Kneht were then placed in the morgue having eventually died in the Koševo Hospital.¹³⁶⁹⁸

4103. The Chamber has also taken judicial notice of a number of adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire in this incident. They provide as follows: (i) the mortar shell which landed on 12 July

1993 in Dobrinja “C5” and which caused civilian casualties was of a caliber of 82 mm;¹³⁶⁹⁹ (ii) the mortar shell which landed on 12 July 1993 in Dobrinja “C5” and which caused civilian casualties was fired from the direction west-northwest to the point of impact of the mortar shell;¹³⁷⁰⁰ (iii) there were no immediate military objectives near the well, which could have explained the firing of a shell in that area;¹³⁷⁰¹ and (iv) the water queue of civilians in Dobrinja “C5” was deliberately targeted on 12 July 1993 by an 82 mm mortar shell fired from SRK-held territory.¹³⁷⁰²

4104. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts recounted above, the Chamber is convinced that the mortar that struck the water line on 12 July 1993 was of 82 mm calibre. The Chamber is also convinced, based on the traces left by the explosion and the CSB Sarajevo report, that the mortar struck Zorka Simić, killing her on the spot. Relying on the medical evidence and the CSB report discussed above, the Chamber finds that the explosion caused by the said mortar resulted in 27 casualties, 14 of whom—including Simić—died as a result.

4105. In terms of the direction and origin of fire, the Chamber recalls that both the CSB Sarajevo and the UNPROFOR investigators came to the scene on the day of the incident and were thus able to observe the traces of the impact, and that they all found the same direction of fire, namely northwest-west. This was confirmed by Higgs who thought that all the investigators were consistent in their conclusions and who also added that the methods they used were appropriate. In contrast, Subotić concluded that the fire came from the direction of north or northeast. The Chamber finds her conclusions in relation to this incident unreliable as they were mainly based on her analysis of the photographs taken at the time of the incident and thus highly speculative. For example, having confirmed that, aside from having radar, the central axis methodology performed on the day of the incident is the most reliable method to determine the direction of fire, she nevertheless proceeded to conduct her own central axis analysis using the photographs of the traces at the incident site.¹³⁷⁰³ However, as noted by Higgs who decided not to use the photographs in his analysis, they are of poor quality and thus unreliable since some of the markings and the debris may not be seen on them. Accordingly, the conclusions Subotić drew from the traces shown on the photographs cannot be considered reliable. Furthermore, Subotić also based her conclusions on the damage to the Škoda car observed on another photograph taken by the CSB Sarajevo. However, as noted by Higgs, it is impossible to determine a definite angle of the direction of fire on the basis of that photograph.¹³⁷⁰⁴ Finally, Subotić also discussed the location of the stabiliser as seen in one of the photographs and noted that it was in a different location to the one described in Čavčić's report. She then proceeded to make conclusions assuming that the stabiliser was found in the location seen on the photograph. However, she failed to consider in the report the possibility that the stabiliser may have been moved at some point during the investigation to the location seen on the photograph.¹³⁷⁰⁵ Indeed, this would have been highly likely given that its original location was next to Simić's body which was, by the time the photograph was taken, covered by a sheet.¹³⁷⁰⁶

4106. The Chamber also does not accept Subotić's insinuations that the scene was staged so as to show that the water supply in Sarajevo was dire, or that the authorities warned people queuing for water about the possibility of shelling because they knew it was definitely coming. Her insinuations simply ignore the evidence to the contrary, namely that this was a well known water-hole where people often gathered to collect water and that there was a lot of shelling all over Dobrinja, which would have prompted the authorities to warn the inhabitants not to congregate in that or any other area. The fact that Subotić was so quick to resort to conspiracy theory conclusions while wilfully ignoring evidence to the contrary is a serious stain on her credibility and yet another reason why the Chamber has decided not to accept any of her evidence in relation to this incident.

4107. As far as the origin of fire is concerned, the Chamber notes that both the CSB Sarajevo and the UNPROFOR investigators concluded that the fire came from the SRK-held positions in or around Nedžarići. Given the location of the incident site and the fact that the confrontation line in the direction of west and northwest was around 200 metres away from that location,¹³⁷⁰⁷ the Chamber is also convinced that the shell originated in the SRK-held territory. In this respect, the Chamber recalls Hamill and Galić's evidence about safety zones and that it would have been unsafe and risky to fire an 82 mm calibre mortar at a target that is less 200 metres away.¹³⁷⁰⁸ Thus, the fire must have originated in the area that was further than 200 metres away from the incident site in the direction of fire as determined by the CSB Sarajevo and UNPROFOR investigators. This places it firmly within the SRK-held territory.

¹³⁷⁰⁴ While Higgs eventually did express an opinion as to the direction of fire based on the damage to the car, he did so after having made a disclaimer, more than once, that it was not possible to be sure of this or the direction of fire based on the photographs alone. See Richard Higgs, T. 5995–5999 (19 August 2010).

¹³⁷⁰⁵ She did admit during cross-examination that that was possible however, thus invalidating her own analysis in her report in relation to the stabiliser. See fn. 13677.

¹³⁷⁰⁷ See e.g. D3381 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Stanislav Galić); D3382 (Map of Sarajevo). See also para. 4090.

4108. As recounted above,¹³⁷⁰⁹ a number of SRK witnesses, including Galić and Sladoje, testified that they never ordered this particular shelling or the shelling of civilians in Dobrinja in general, and seemed to imply that fire was not opened on civilians on that day as the SRK units were engaged in operation Lukavica 93.¹³⁷¹⁰ However, while there is indeed no evidence of a specific SRK order to open fire on Hakije Turajlića, in light of the evidence above, the Chamber cannot accept the implication of their evidence that no fire was opened on that area.

4109. In terms of the nature of the area and the status of the victims, the Chamber recalls that the incident site was a well-known water collection point, located in the yard of a private house, at which civilians would get water. Accordingly, the house and the area around it were not military targets. In addition, the 27 casualties who died or were wounded in this incident were all civilians and, having come to collect water, were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time the shell exploded in the area. While the command of the 2nd Battalion of the 5th Motorised Brigade of the ABiH was several blocks away to the north of the incident site, the Chamber considers that this was too far away to explain the firing of the particular shell that landed at the incident site. In addition, had the command post been the intended target, the SRK soldiers, having missed it, would have presumably fired again until it was hit and destroyed. Thus, the Chamber does not consider that the command post was in fact the intended target.¹³⁷¹¹ To the contrary, given that only one shell was fired, the Chamber is convinced that it was the water collection point that was deliberately targeted by the SRK. This is also confirmed by the fact that this area was shelled again later during the conflict.¹³⁷¹²

(4) Alipašino Polje, 22 January 1994 (Scheduled Incident G.6)

4110. The Indictment alleges that on 22 January 1994, three mortar shells landed in the area of Alipašino Polje. The shells are alleged to have landed at the front and rear of residential apartments located at 3 Cetinjska street (currently Geteova street) and at 4 Klara Cetkin street (currently Bosanska street), where children were playing. The Indictment further alleges that the origin of fire was from VRS/SRK-held territory approximately to the west and that six children were killed and five other people wounded.¹³⁷¹³ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution claims that two 82 mm and one ¹³⁷¹⁰ See para. 4098.

¹³⁷¹¹ Furthermore, the Chamber recalls Sladoje’s testimony that the ABiH used “practically all” civilian buildings in Dobrinja for its purposes, thereby implying that most if not all of Dobrinja was considered to be a military target by the SRK soldiers and officers in the area. Similar attitude was exhibited by Simić. See para. 4099.

¹³⁷¹² The Chamber also recalls Hajir’s evidence that water collection points in Dobrinja were deliberately targeted by the SRK on many occasions. See para. 3785; Adjudicated Fact 281.

¹³⁷¹³ Indictment, Scheduled Incident G.6. The Indictment alleges that the first shell landed in a park behind the apartments and that the second and third landed in front.

120 mm mortar shells landed amongst two groups of children who were playing in the snow, killing six children and injuring other civilians, and that the shells originated either from Nedžarići (the Institute for the Blind) or from the area of Stup in the Serb part of Ilidža.¹³⁷¹⁴ The Accused argues that, absent data about the size and shape of the relevant craters, it is “impossible” to determine the calibre of the shells but submits that at least two of the shells were of 120 mm calibre and they all originated from the southwest in ABiH-held territory near the UPI Institute.¹³⁷¹⁵ He also argues that the UNPROFOR investigation was inconclusive and that no order was issued by the SRK to fire on Alipašino Polje at the time.¹³⁷¹⁶ In addition, regardless of the origin of fire, the location of the incident was a legitimate military target as it was within the zone of operation of the ABiH and there were military units stationed in the area.¹³⁷¹⁷

4111. On 22 January 1994, Muhamed Kapetanović, who was nearly ten years old at the time and lived at 2 Cetinjska street, was playing with four friends in a parking lot.¹³⁷¹⁸ Another group of children was playing in Klara Cetkin street.¹³⁷¹⁹ It was a quiet day during a lull in hostilities.¹³⁷²⁰ No activity of a military nature was underway in the neighbourhood nor was any soldier to be seen.¹³⁷²¹ Suddenly there was a loud explosion, whereupon the children ran for cover.¹³⁷²² Just before Kapetanović reached the entrance of his building, another shell exploded 10 metres behind the child following Kapetanović; it killed him and wounded three others including Kapetanović, who suffered serious injuries to his leg.¹³⁷²³ Goran Todorović, a 12 year old boy, ran towards the buildings for cover and just as he started climbing the staircase to his apartment at 6 Klara Cetkin street, another shell exploded 10 to 15 metres away and wounded him.¹³⁷²⁴ A man was walking along Klara Cetkin street where he lived and heard two explosions at a distance of approximately 100 metres.¹³⁷²⁵ Before he could take cover, a third shell fell three to five metres to his left; the explosion threw him into the air and seriously wounded him in the face.¹³⁷²⁶ Refik Aganović was in his apartment on the 14th floor of the building at 4 Klara Cetkin street when, at around 1 p.m., he heard the “usual” hissing sound of a shell and then a loud explosion nearby.¹³⁷²⁷ About a minute or two later a second shell exploded.¹³⁷²⁸ Aganović opened a west-facing window to see what had happened and a third explosion in front of his entrance threw him back.¹³⁷²⁹ He rushed downstairs to the entrance where he saw a 13 year old boy stagger over and die.¹³⁷³⁰ Another younger boy whom Aganović said he tried to assist also died in those moments.¹³⁷³¹ Other children, whom Aganović did not recognise because they were covered in blood and were missing parts of their bodies, had also been killed.¹³⁷³²

4112. Sabljica participated in the investigation of this incident on 22 January 1994, together with another ballistics expert, Boris Stankov, and the rest of the CSB Sarajevo team.¹³⁷³³ Sabljica and Stankov concluded that two 82 mm and one 120 mm calibre mortar shells landed respectively in Cetinjska street, Klara Cetkin street, and in the park between the Klara Cetkin and Rade Končar square.¹³⁷³⁴ They found that the shell that fell in front of the building at number 3 Cetinjska street was an 82 mm mortar shell and that it came from a westerly direction, “where Nedžarići is located i.e. the Institute for the Blind.”¹³⁷³⁵ One child was killed by this shell.¹³⁷³⁶ As for the shell that landed at number 4 Klara Cetkin street, it was found to be an 82 mm mortar shell, that came from “a slightly northerly direction in relation to the west”, where the Institute for the Blind is located.¹³⁷³⁷ Five children were killed by this shell.¹³⁷³⁸ The tail fin of a 120 mm shell was also found near the area where the shell landed but, on the basis of the traces, it was concluded that the tail fin must have come from another location, most probably from the roof of a nearby building where, according to eyewitnesses, another shell had exploded at the time of the incident.¹³⁷³⁹ The impact sites in Klara Cetkin and Cetinjska streets were said to be within a radius of 50 to 100 metres from one another.¹³⁷⁴⁰ The shell that landed in the park between Klara Cetkin street and Rade Končar square, was found—based on the general shape of the crater and visible blast traces—to have been a 120 mm mortar shell.¹³⁷⁴¹ The ballistics report notes that it is “possible to claim” that this shell came from the west, from the direction of Nedžarići and the Institute for the Blind.¹³⁷⁴² Further, according to the report, this shell did not injure or kill anyone.¹³⁷⁴³ Sabljica confirmed that there is no line of sight between the Institute for the Blind and the incident site.¹³⁷⁴⁴

4113. KDZ477, who was a resident of Alipašino Polje during the conflict, testified that the suburb was “a strictly residential area [with] many high rises”.¹³⁷⁴⁵ Both he and Sabljica testified that there were no military installations in the general area of Alipašino Polje and Sabljica was not aware of the existence of any reserve police stations in the settlement.¹³⁷⁴⁶ Mojmiro Hill, where ABiH troops were positioned, was located west of the incident site, as was Vojničko Polje.¹³⁷⁴⁷ Kučanin testified that a personnel department for an ABiH unit called Kulin Ban was located “some 200 metres away” from Rade Končara square, but that mostly women worked there and none of the personnel wore a uniform.¹³⁷⁴⁸

4114. Sabljica admitted that he did not know precisely where the confrontation line was but noted that the ABiH controlled the “Oslobođenje” building (now Crowne Plaza), located immediately to the north of the Institute for the Blind, as well as the student dormitories, located northeast of the Institute,¹³⁷⁴⁹ which meant that three out of the four Institute walls were exposed to the confrontation line.¹³⁷⁵⁰ He admitted that it would be unusual to place two mortars at the Institute given that it was exposed to the confrontation line but reiterated that the ballistics experts on the site were not able to establish the exact origin of fire but gave a “general direction”, which in this particular case “involved Nedžarići and the Institute for the Blind.”¹³⁷⁵¹

4115. When it was put to Sabljica that another report for this incident, prepared by a forensic technician on the scene at the time, referred to two 120 mm shells falling on Cetinjska and Klara Cetkina streets, Sabljica responded that this report was inaccurate.¹³⁷⁵² He further explained that the technician in question had not consulted the ballistics experts when he finalised his report.¹³⁷⁵³

4116. The UNPROFOR also reported on this incident; it noted that, on 22 January 1994, some 40 shots were fired by the VRS while three were fired by the ABiH, and that six children were killed and nine wounded while playing in the snow.¹³⁷⁵⁴ The UNPROFOR further notes that it was too early to tell who was responsible, but that, “according to reports”, at least four 82 mm shells fell in the area and that the Sarajevo radio station was reporting that the shells had come from the nearby Serb-held neighbourhood of Nedžarići.¹³⁷⁵⁵ However, an UNPROFOR ballistics report prepared by Captain Verdy the next day notes that three 120 mm mortar shells were fired in succession from a single tube over a period of several minutes.¹³⁷⁵⁶ It also states that the “angle of fall” was over

The Chamber notes that P1439 is a duplicate of D752 but that it contains both the original version of Verdy’s report in French and an English translation. D752, on the other hand, is only the translation of the report and lacks the photographs attached to the original report.

1,100 mils, the “angle of approach” was between 4,200 and 4,250 mils, and the maximum range was between 2,000 and 3,000 metres.¹³⁷⁵⁷ Finally, the report concludes that the shells “could have been fired from the Stup or Ilidža neighbourhood on the Serb side”, which are to the west and southwest of the incident site.¹³⁷⁵⁸ The Chamber notes that, in its Final Brief, the Prosecution chose not to rely on this report as Verdy only came to the scene one day after the incident and because his methodology was questioned by his superiors.¹³⁷⁵⁹ Nevertheless, as will be seen below, Zorica Subotić argues that Verdy’s findings were for the most part accurate and relies on them in her analysis.¹³⁷⁶⁰ Therefore, the Chamber has examined his report as well.

4117. Higgs visited the incident site and noted that the crater locations, though still visible, had deteriorated to the extent that a detailed examination was not possible.¹³⁷⁶¹ He, therefore, based his opinion on the data collected at the time, in particular on the report prepared by CSB Sarajevo.¹³⁷⁶² He concurred with the conclusion in that report that 82 mm mortar bombs “were involved to the street side of the building with a 120 mm bomb falling on the other side”.¹³⁷⁶³ Higgs then compared this report with Verdy’s ballistics report, noting that he would accept the former as it was prepared on the day of the incident and by those with experience in dealing with mortars in the area.¹³⁷⁶⁴ He observed that both reports agreed on the direction of fire and that there was nothing he would disagree with in that respect.¹³⁷⁶⁵

4118. Higgs also noted that it was difficult to ascertain the purpose of firing in this incident, given that two different calibres were used.¹³⁷⁶⁶ However, focusing on the two 82 mm mortar shells, Higgs concluded that they constituted “harassing” fire aimed at causing maximum casualties

The Chamber considers the English translation in P1439 to be less accurate than the translation in D752 and will therefore use D752, unless it is referring to the photographs in question. See also Mirza Sabljica, T. 7832–7834 (13 October 2010).

because they landed in front of building entrances.¹³⁷⁶⁷ Furthermore, the distance between the two rounds was greater than Higgs would expect in case of an error by the mortar crew.¹³⁷⁶⁸ In other words, the two shells fell exactly where the mortar crew intended them to fall and they originated from the direction of Nedžarići.¹³⁷⁶⁹

4119. KDZ450 who was with the UNPROFOR in Sarajevo between 1993 and 1994, testified that the incident was particularly striking to him as it occurred opposite the Sector Sarajevo Headquarters and “led to the death of six children in a residential area”.¹³⁷⁷⁰ He testified that due to technical reasons the UNPROFOR could not definitively determine the origin of fire but that there were considerable “suspicions” the shells originated from SRK-held territory.¹³⁷⁷¹

4120. Zorica Subotić visited the incident site in September 2010 and based on the available evidence, determined that the first shell exploded in Rade Končara square, the second in front of 3 Cetinjska street, and the third in front of 4 Klara Cetkin street.¹³⁷⁷² She analysed in detail the two shells that landed in front of 4 Klara Cetkin and 3 Cetinjska streets and placed considerable emphasis on the inconsistencies between the original investigations as to the precise number and calibre of mortar shells involved and also on the fact that Sabljica and Stankov were at odds with one of their forensic technicians with respect to the calibre of the two shells.¹³⁷⁷³ Based on the distance between the two impact sites examined, namely “about 200 metres”, she concluded that there was a deliberate adjustment of fire by the mortar crew that fired the shells.¹³⁷⁷⁴

4121. In relation to the crater in Klara Cetkin street, Subotić determined, using the central axis method on preserved marks at the scene, that the shell originated from an azimuth of 238 degrees and thus in an area about 30 degrees south of the Institute for the Blind in Nedžarići.¹³⁷⁷⁵ The Chamber notes that this is almost identical to the azimuth established by Verdy. She observed, in contrast to CSB Sarajevo, that the radial marks left by the explosion extended towards the middle of the street, to a length of about three metres.¹³⁷⁷⁶ Acknowledging that the impact site on the curb had been repaired, she opined that the crater was about 60 centimetres in diameter and thus caused by a 120 mm calibre mortar shell, which was the calibre established by Verdy.¹³⁷⁷⁷ Subotić also noted that the azimuth from 4 Klara Cetkin street to the Institute for the Blind was 266 degrees, which to her reinforced the fact that the CSB Sarajevo ballistics investigators simply guessed the origin of fire.¹³⁷⁷⁸

4122. In respect of the Cetinjska street crater, Subotić did not conduct any physical examination because the road had been resurfaced.¹³⁷⁷⁹ Using contemporaneous CSB Sarajevo photographs, however, she determined that the crater had a diameter of approximately 90 cm, meaning that a 120 mm mortar shell impacted the scene—again agreeing with Verdy.¹³⁷⁸⁰ She also expressed the opinion that the forensic technician from CSB Sarajevo who concluded that both shells were 120 mm shells must have relied on the size of the crater he observed.¹³⁷⁸¹ Using footage taken by Hogan in 2001 before the road had been resurfaced, Subotić also observed that there was a “central did not agree to the direction but rather that the method used, as seen in the photograph, appeared to be accurate and thus could indicate the direction from which the projectile came. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7846–7850 (13 October 2010); D755 (Photograph re shelling of Alipašino Polje on 22 January 1994 marked by Mirza Sabljica); D756 (Photograph re shelling of Alipašino Polje on 22 January 1994 marked by Mirza Sabljica).

¹³⁷⁷⁶ Zorica Subotić, T. 38260–38262 (14 May 2013). Subotić argued that the CSB Sarajevo description of the scene was therefore inaccurate and yet Higgs gave his “unreserved trust” towards their investigation as he did not notice that the shrapnel marks extended further than 120 cm from the crater. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 96–97;

Subotić accepted that she did not investigate how the curb was repaired noting that the fragmentation pattern on the road meant that the shell could not have been an 82 mm mortar shell, regardless of the diameter of the crater. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38420–38423 (16 May 2013); T. 38632–38633 (22 May 2013); D3558 (Photograph depicting point of impact of shell marked by Zorica Subotić).

She explained that a manhole cover, which is substantially smaller in size when compared to the crater, can be seen in that photograph. Noting that the standard diameter of such covers is 70 cm, she concluded that the crater must have been bigger than 70 cm). The Chamber notes, however, that the quality of both photographs is poor and is therefore not persuaded that it is possible to determine the size of the crater from them. In addition, Subotić is not an expert on manholes and the Chamber has no evidence to verify her claim that the average size of a manhole is 70 cm. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), p. 103.

hole” within the crater, which was surrounded by a larger crater, and that the CSB investigators measured the smaller central hole thus mistakenly concluding that the crater was smaller than it actually was.¹³⁷⁸² Using stills from Hogan’s footage and a computer application, Subotić then concluded that this shell originated from a direction with an azimuth that was “slightly less than 240 degrees”.¹³⁷⁸³

4123. While essentially agreeing with Verdy’s opinion as to the azimuth and the calibre of the two shells, Subotić argued that he made a mistake when assigning the azimuths of the shells to the two craters.¹³⁷⁸⁴ She then plotted the adjusted trajectories on Google Earth and saw that they intersected at a point 3,270 metres southwest of the impact site in Klara Cetkin street; namely in the ABiH-held territory, near the UPI institute in Sokolović Kolonija.¹³⁷⁸⁵ Subotić agreed with Verdy’s determination as to the shells’ angle of descent and calculated, using the firing tables for 120 mm mortars, that they were most probably fired using charge four.¹³⁷⁸⁶

4124. Galić testified that Alipašino Polje was in ABiH-held territory and that as far as he could remember at the time he did not order fire to be opened on the settlement.¹³⁷⁸⁷ He observed that there were some military targets within Alipašino Polje and specifically he recalled that there was a unit of the 1st Corps of the ABiH stationed in the area at a place called Kulin Ban, approximately “110 to 150” metres away from the incident site.¹³⁷⁸⁸ He suggested that this may have been the reason behind fire being opened but that—due to a cease-fire—he did not think the SRK had in fact ¹³⁷⁸⁴ D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 102, 104–5. According to Subotić, Verdy correctly determined a direction of fire towards the southwest for both shells. Since all three shells landed within the “range error margin” for mortars, all three were fired from the same mortar. This meant that Verdy’s trajectories should intersect at their origin, to the southwest. Verdy marked the azimuth beside the photograph of the shell that landed at Klara Cetkin street as 4,200 mils and for the shell that landed at Cetinjska street as 4,250 mils. When plotting these trajectories, she found that they intersected at a point to the northeast of the incident site, which is impossible and thus indicates that Verdy swapped the azimuths when ascribing them to the respective craters. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38264–38265 (14 May 2013); T. 38426–38427, 38430–38436 (16 May 2013).

opened fire.¹³⁷⁸⁹ He testified that the decision for further SRK operations on 23 January 1994 was for the Corps to adopt a defensive posture and that he did not receive a report or protest from the UNPROFOR in relation to the incident.¹³⁷⁹⁰ He also testified that regardless of the faction that fired the shells, there was “no [valid] reasons or justifications” for the incident.¹³⁷⁹¹ When asked about this incident, Milošević testified that he could not recall it but that the SRK “did not open fire [on areas] inhabited by the civilian population” or do anything that was prohibited.¹³⁷⁹²

4125. Sladoje testified that the ABiH units positioned in Vojničko Polje, Alipašino Polje, and Stup, had, inter alia, 82 and 120 mm mortars and a tank in depth of Alipašino Polje; they were also supported by artillery from Mt. Igman.¹³⁷⁹³ Sladoje’s 1st Battalion was equipped with 82 and 120 mm mortars, four or five of which were located near the Faculty of Theology; according to him, military targets in the area included the Oslobođenje building, the student dormitories, and a building located a few blocks from Cetinjska street in the vicinity of Prvomajska street, where civilians were also living.¹³⁷⁹⁴ He categorically denied, however, that the SRK had any mortars at the Institute for the Blind and further that anyone ordered this particular shelling.¹³⁷⁹⁵ Accepting that there was a substantial risk of civilian casualties when firing on any urban areas with military presence, such as Alipašino Polje, he nonetheless wondered “how can [the SRK] not open fire [on enemy soldiers] if [its] positions [are] jeopardized”.¹³⁷⁹⁶

4126. Contrary to Sladoje, Radojčić, commander of the Ilidža Brigade, testified that there was an 82 mm mortar platoon positioned close to the Institute for the Blind but that there were no 120 mm mortars at this location.¹³⁷⁹⁷ He also stated that he never issued an order to open fire on the incident location and that he did not receive information from subordinates about such an attack.¹³⁷⁹⁸

4127. Savo Simić, who was with the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade positioned towards Lukavica, stated that the shells in this incident originated from ABiH-held territory in the direction of Butmir.¹³⁷⁹⁹ Dušan Škrba, Simić's subordinate, stated that, in his opinion, the "most probable" location of the origin of fire towards the southwest was the "Butmir agricultural estate" as this was an ideal place to fire mortars.¹³⁸⁰⁰

4128. In terms of casualties in this incident, the CSB Sarajevo report provides that the following children had been killed: Danijel Jurenić, Admir Subašić, Nermin Rizvanović, Jasmina Brković, Indira Brković, and Mirza Dedović.¹³⁸⁰¹ The report also notes that the following persons were wounded, the majority of whom were children: Elvir Ahmethodžić, Admir Ahmethodžić, Muhamed Kapetanović, Nedžad Topel, Goran Todorović, and Samir Sarač.¹³⁸⁰² The medical records available to the Chamber indicate that six persons died, and at least five persons were injured during the incident.¹³⁸⁰³

4129. In addition to the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts which go to the direction and origin of fire, as well as the calibre of the shells used in this incident: (i) three mortar shells (two 82 mm and one 120 mm calibre) were fired into the residential neighbourhood of Alipašino Polje around noon on 22 January 1994, killing six children and injuring other civilians, including children;¹³⁸⁰⁴ (ii) the impact traces were considerably more pronounced to the west of the craters;¹³⁸⁰⁵ (iii) it can be safely concluded that the shells came in from either the west or north of west;¹³⁸⁰⁶ (iv) the impact traces were strongly elliptical and significantly displaced to the west;¹³⁸⁰⁷ (v) the three shells were fired from SRK positions somewhere to the west of Alipašino Polje;¹³⁸⁰⁸ and (vi) the sequence of explosions, together with the fact that the shelling ceased after just three volleys were fired, all of which landed wide of Kulin Ban (two at a distance of at least 150 metres) allowed for the conclusion that Kulin Ban was not the intended target of this attack.¹³⁸⁰⁹

The Chamber notes that Adjudicated Fact 296 states that the investigative Judge Zdenko Eterović "established by interviewing witnesses and by observation of bodily remains at the site, as well as by visiting the hospitals where the casualties had been taken" that six children were killed and another three children and one adult were seriously injured, bringing the total number of casualties to ten. However, Eterović did not include Goran Todorović among the list of casualties in his report even though Todorović was also wounded in the incident. The Chamber will therefore rely on another part of the CSB Sarajevo report which includes Todorović among the victims, as well as Samir Sarač. See P1443 (BiH MUP Report re shelling of Alipašino Polje on 22 January 1994), e-court pp. 4, 15–16.

¹³⁸⁰⁴ Adjudicated Fact 297.

4130. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts recounted above, the Chamber is convinced that at least three mortar shells exploded in the area of Alipašino Polje on 22 January 1994. One of the shells landed in front of 3 Cetinjska street, another in front of 4 Klara Cetkin street, and a third in Rade Končara square behind these two locations. With respect to the calibre of the shells involved, the Chamber is more persuaded by the CSB Sarajevo findings than Subotić's analysis and her reliance on Verdy. First, Sabljica and Stankov conducted a detailed de visu examination on the day of the incident and were thus able to see the scene and fresh traces caused by the three shells in question. This was not the case with Verdy who only examined two of the three traces one day later, while Subotić examined the scene over a decade later. Second, Subotić's conclusions in relation to the craters are highly speculative, to the point of being unreasonable at times. For example, with respect to the Klara Cetkin street shell, she based her conclusions on the examination of a repaired curb, without knowing anything about the nature of those repairs or how much the repairs had affected the size of the crater. This means that her conclusions about the size of this crater carry no persuasive value. Similarly, with regard to her analysis of the site in Cetinjska street, Subotić relied on the footage taken by Hogan in 2001 and the contemporaneous photographs taken by the CSB Sarajevo, which were of a clearly inferior quality. Her analysis of these secondary sources, involving concepts such as the average size of a manhole cover and the relative size of an object in photographs, is highly speculative and unpersuasive. Therefore the Chamber does not accept that all of the shells in the incident were 120 mm in calibre and finds that at least two 82 mm and one 120 mm mortar shells exploded in Alipašino Polje on 22 January 1994.

4131. Relying on the medical evidence and the CSB Sarajevo investigation discussed above, the Chamber finds that the explosion caused by the three shells on 22 January 1994 resulted in 12 casualties, six of whom died (all children) and six of whom (majority children) were injured.
