1283. The local authorities faced difficulties in controlling the actions of the paramilitaries.⁴⁴⁵⁰ However, in some cases the paramilitary formations “carried out their illegal activities with the knowledge and consent” of members of the Bosnian Serb authorities in Zvornik.⁴⁴⁵¹ More specifically, paramilitaries such as Žučo had close contact with Pavlović.⁴⁴⁵² With respect to one incident, in which two Bosnian Muslim men were killed and two Bosnian Muslim women were

The Chamber does not find the evidence of these witnesses that local authorities could not control or punish paramilitaries to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 4237 and 4239. Vasilić, for example, qualified his evidence and acknowledged that he did not know if the military authorities were supporting paramilitaries. Similarly the Chamber notes that the evidence of Mačar was also marked by contradictions and extreme evasiveness which undermined his credibility in this regard.

raped by members of the Zvornik TO under the command of Žučo, the SFRY Secretariat for National Defence reported that the leadership of Zvornik did not want to uncover the identity of the perpetrators.⁴⁴⁵³ The SJB protested against the Interim Government which had engaged paramilitary formations and was aware of and consented to their illegal activities.⁴⁴⁵⁴

1284. At the end of May 1992, Bosnian Serb leaders from Zvornik informed Mandić and Mićo Stanišić about the situation in the municipality, including the actions of the paramilitaries.⁴⁴⁵⁵ In response, they were told that the local police should attempt to control these groups given that the SerBiH government and the VRS were still in the process of being established and did not have the resources to assist the municipalities in controlling the paramilitaries at the time.⁴⁴⁵⁶

1286. In another incident in June 1992, the Government and Zvornik Crisis Staff building was encircled by paramilitary formations and a member of Captain Dragan's unit threatened the President of the Municipality.⁴⁴⁵⁹ The Accused and Mladić visited Zvornik the following day.⁴⁴⁶⁰

Grujić reported to the Accused and Mladić that in addition to “major accomplishments” there were also many problems from paramilitary formations which broke free after Arkan’s withdrawal and called for their removal.⁴⁴⁶¹ At this meeting, the Accused stated that it would be a shame to abolish Captain Dragan’s training centre at Divič and that it would be easiest to “put the incident behind us”.⁴⁴⁶² Mladić said he had not approved the establishment of the training centre and that Captain Dragan was “no more than an ordinary mobster” and insisted that Captain Dragan leave the municipality.⁴⁴⁶³ Mladić also expressed strong disapproval of the paramilitaries and threatened to arrest anyone who did not place themselves under the command of the Army.⁴⁴⁶⁴

1287. After June 1992, the Yellow Wasps did not place themselves under the joint military command of the VRS.⁴⁴⁶⁵ In July 1992, members of the Yellow Wasps went to Pale and received weapons from the Pale SJB after which Žučo met with Biljana Plavšić.⁴⁴⁶⁶ Žučo also spoke to the Minister of Defence about the status of his group and Bogdan Subotić confirmed that all those who received orders from VRS officers were part of the VRS whether they were reservists, volunteers or paramilitaries.⁴⁴⁶⁷ Subotić alerted these units that they needed to fully comply with the rules and regulations of the VRS, including those relating to uniforms, insignia and command structures.⁴⁴⁶⁸

1288. Reports submitted to the MUP in June and July 1992, indicated that the situation with respect to paramilitary forces in Zvornik had yet to be resolved⁴⁴⁶⁹ and that the Yellow Wasps had attempted to influence the municipal authorities to appoint Žučo's men to certain positions and had taken control of check-points.⁴⁴⁷⁰ Measures taken from June to July 1992 to control paramilitaries included controlling the issuance of VRS uniforms,⁴⁴⁷¹ placing controls on weapons,⁴⁴⁷² and restricting the presence of armed individuals in the town.⁴⁴⁷³ The local authorities also took steps to expel police employees who had engaged "in inappropriate conduct" or had joined paramilitary units; a large number of police were then sent to the VRS.⁴⁴⁷⁴ Vasilić and Grujić went to Pale in mid-June or July 1992 to inform the Bosnian Serb leadership about the situation in Zvornik and to ask for help in dealing with paramilitaries.⁴⁴⁷⁵ Two days after Grujić and Vasilić returned from Pale they were taken prisoner by the Yellow Wasps and threatened.⁴⁴⁷⁶ They were released the next day but Grujić and Vasilić resigned from their positions.⁴⁴⁷⁷ arrested.⁴⁴⁸⁶ All items found during the arrests were confiscated,⁴⁴⁸⁷ and Andan instructed the Zvornik SJB to return the personal belongings of those who resided in the municipality.⁴⁴⁸⁸

1291. On the day of the arrests, Davidović met with the Zvornik Crisis Staff and the municipal leadership and informed them that they had arrested and disarmed the paramilitaries; this was met with relief and gratitude by Grujić.⁴⁴⁸⁹ Mićo Stanišić and the MUP were informed about the successful operation in Zvornik to arrest the paramilitaries after which Stanišić paid tribute to their efforts.⁴⁴⁹⁰ Stanišić was also informed that some of the leading officers, including the police station commander, had taken part in criminal activities, after which Stanišić said that everyone involved in any criminal activity that could be documented should be processed and criminal reports submitted for prosecution.⁴⁴⁹¹

1292. Davidović prepared the documentation and submitted a criminal report to the Military Prosecutor in Bijeljina but, after his men withdrew, the proceedings were suspended and all the men were released by August 1992;⁴⁴⁹² some returned to Serbia.⁴⁴⁹³ A number of paramilitaries

However, the Chamber does not consider the evidence of the relevant witnesses as to the proceedings initiated against those arrested to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the testimony of the relevant witnesses was marked by evasiveness, contradictions, and inconsistencies. For example, Zelenović testified that he was not aware that the paramilitaries were released shortly after their arrest or whether people were convicted or not. Čedomir Zelenović, T. 40336–40337 (25 June 2013). Grujić also acknowledged that the paramilitaries were released soon after their arrest and acknowledged that this did happen and that he himself was afraid because he thought “serious proceedings should be initiated against them but that did not happen”. Branko Grujić, T. 40391–40392 (25 June 2013). In light of these contradictions the Chamber does not consider their evidence in this regard to be reliable.

were instituted much later in Serbia.⁴⁴⁹⁸ In contrast the Zvornik SJB was instructed by Goran Mačar in November 1995 to intensify their activities and file criminal reports against perpetrators of war crimes against “the Serbian people” in municipalities including Zvornik.⁴⁴⁹⁹

1295. On 7 June 1992, the Eastern Bosnia Corps reported that in the area of Zvornik, approximately “500 prisoners” were being held.⁴⁵⁰¹ The Birač Brigade reported on 17 June 1992 that it had close to “600 prisoners” and the Eastern Bosnia Corps had failed to establish a camp for prisoners of war at the corps level.⁴⁵⁰² Accordingly Mladić ordered the Eastern Bosnia Corps to set up a camp for prisoners of war and for the Birač brigade to be relieved of guarding those prisoners.⁴⁵⁰³

(a) Events

1297. The Čelopek Dom Kulture was located in the industrial area of Karakaj.⁴⁵⁰⁵ Bosnian Muslims were detained at this facility from late May 1992 onwards.⁴⁵⁰⁶ Bosnian Muslims were taken to the Čelopek Dom on buses under the orders of either the TO Staff or the Interim Government and were escorted there by Miko Miljanović who was a police official.⁴⁵⁰⁷ The Yellow Wasps also took Bosnian Muslims from settlements and brought them to Čelopek Dom where they were detained.⁴⁵⁰⁸ Reserve police officers were involved in guarding the facility.⁴⁵⁰⁹ The non-Serbs detained in Zvornik were not arrested following normal police procedure and were detained without being informed of the allegations against them or handed over for prosecution.⁴⁵¹⁰

1298. On or about 10 June 1992, detainees were forced to sing songs and then forced to beat each other with the promise that the winner would be spared from being killed.⁴⁵¹¹ After this, Repić shot and killed 17 detainees, he also cut off the body parts of some detainees and stabbed others in the chest.⁴⁵¹² Detainees were forced to eat the severed body parts and Repić's men killed two detainees

While Panić also testified that the police were not strong enough to prevent the entry of paramilitaries into detention facilities, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be of much weight given that Panić makes this observation without further context as to whether it applies to a specific facility or particularly period of time. P3165 (Witness statement of KDZ340 undated), p. 74 (under seal). However, the Chamber does not consider that KDZ340's evidence is reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that his evidence was marked by indicators that he was testifying with a lack of candour and frankness [REDACTED].

who could not bring themselves to do so.⁴⁵¹³ Four detainees were forced to unload the dead bodies in a gravel pit after which they were also killed by Repić.⁴⁵¹⁴

1299. On 10 and 14 June 1992, Repić took away two groups of people for questioning and they never returned to the facility. There were 19 detainees in the first group and four detainees in the second group.⁴⁵¹⁵ Having regard to the manner in which Repić treated the detainees in the facility and the threats he made to kill detainees, the Chamber is satisfied that these 23 detainees were also killed. Repić returned on a few other occasions, beat the detainees with batons, punched and kicked them, and forced them to sing. On or about 27 June 1992, he lined up a group of detainees and opened fire with an automatic rifle and pistol, killing approximately 19 and wounding approximately 13 detainees.⁴⁵¹⁶ After these killings, surviving detainees were moved to Novi Izvor.⁴⁵¹⁷

1300. One of the detainees was told by Kosta Erić about the killing and maltreatment of detainees at Čelopek. He was instructed to clean the facility and found traces of human blood; he was also involved in transporting bodies and burying them in mass graves.⁴⁵¹⁸ In mid-July 1992, the ⁴⁵¹⁵ D1417 (Report of Republic of Serbia MUP, 6 November 1993), p. 2; P2880 (Official Note of Valjevo State Security Centre, 2 July 1992). This same report indicated that Repić was prone to taking drugs. Panić testified that even though the guards had a written order not to allow anyone into the facility they did not dare confront Repić and did not report any incidents. Petko Panić, P3380 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Stanišić & Župljanin), T. 2903–2904, 3015–3016, 3056; Petko Panić, T. 19184–19186 (20 September 2011). However, the Chamber notes that Panić’s evidence with respect to shifting blame for actions to paramilitaries lacked balance and was marked by indicators of partiality. Considering inconsistencies and indicators of bias the Chamber does not find his evidence with respect to the specific issue of the inability to prevent the abuses of paramilitaries to be credible.

⁴⁵¹⁶ D1417 (Report of Republic of Serbia MUP, 6 November 1993), pp. 2–3; see Adjudicated Fact 2750. According to the Adjudicated Fact, Repić returned to the detention facility on 27 June 1992 and killed 20 detainees and wounded 22. Davidović was informed by Jekić about this incident where around 20 Bosnian Muslim civilians were killed in Čelopek. D1450 (Milorad Davidović’s statement to Belgrade District Court, 26 December 2007), pp. 8, 21, 30. See also P4837 (Witness statement of KDZ610 dated 27 March 2012), para. 62 (under seal); Jovan Ivanović, T. 39877–39878 (13 June 2013); KDZ340, T. 17475–17476 (18 August 2011) (private session). The Serbian State Security Department was also informed about these incidents. P2880 (Official Note of Valjevo State Security Centre, 2 July 1992).

⁴⁵¹⁷ P4837 (Witness statement of KDZ610 dated 27 March 2012), para. 63 (under seal). See also Petko Panić, P3380 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Stanišić & Župljanin), T. 3033–3034; Petko Panić, T. 19187 (20 September 2011) (wherein Panić testified that the remaining detainees were transferred to Novi Izvor in order to be protected and to receive medical treatment). While the Chamber considers that Panić’s evidence corroborates the movement of the remaining detainees to Novi Izvor, his evidence was marked by indicators that he lacked balance and in addition he sought to shift the blame for events in Zvornik.

⁴⁵¹⁸ [REDACTED]. The Chamber received evidence that 15 men were identified after exhumation of the mass graves at Crni Vrh and Grbavci-Hajdarev as people who had disappeared in Čelopek in May or June 1992. However, the Chamber notes that there is insufficient evidence to link these individuals to this scheduled incident, which is limited to killings between 10 and 28 June 1992. In addition [REDACTED] simply states that he knew some of these individuals but does not clarify whether he knew they went missing from Čelopek or when they disappeared. [REDACTED]; P4841 (Letter from FBiH Commission for Missing Persons, 30 July 2007). These 15 individuals are also named by Mašović as having been exhumed from mass graves. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 61-73, 105, 107. The Chamber notes that Mašović detainees who remained at Čelopek were transferred with the assistance of the Bosnian Serb municipal authorities to the Batković camp in Bijeljina.⁴⁵¹⁹

(b) Conclusion

1301. The Chamber therefore finds that Bosnian Muslim men were detained at Čelopek Dom Kulture from late May until July 1992. The detainees were forced to beat each, some were stabbed and mistreated, and at least 60 men were killed by Serb Forces.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.27.2

1302. The Indictment refers to the use of the Karakaj Technical School as a detention facility at least between May and June 1992.⁴⁵²⁰

(a) Arrival of detainees and control of facility

1303. The Karakaj Technical School was located in the Karakaj industrial area, close to the Alhos factory.⁴⁵²¹ The Karakaj Technical School was guarded by Bosnian Serb soldiers,⁴⁵²² which included the Karakaj TO (a.k.a Karakaj Company) that later became part of the VRS.⁴⁵²³ Dragan Ristanović, the commander of the Karakaj TO, and paramilitaries including Topola, Mrski, Crni identifies additional individuals who were exhumed from mass graves but there is no other evidence to link them to this incident. The Chamber will therefore not rely on Mašović's evidence in that regard.

⁴⁵¹⁹ See Adjudicated Fact 2748. The Chamber also received evidence about the inspection of detention facilities in Zvornik in October 1992 but is not satisfied that this evidence pertains to any of the scheduled detention facilities. P1607 (RS Ministry of Justice report on prisons and camps on the RS territory, 22 October 1992), pp. 3, 7; D3105 (Witness statement of Slobodan Avlijaš dated 9 March 2013), para. 26. The Accused's refers to this report and submits that it does not identify the Čelopek Dom as a detention facility. Defence Final Brief, para. 1455. The Chamber does not consider this submission or the absence of a reference to this facility in this report to be of any significance.

⁴⁵²⁰ The Prosecution submits that the evidence presented shows that the facility was operational from 1 June 1992. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, fn. 902.

and Pivarski were present at the facility.⁴⁵²⁴ The guards worked in shifts and were under the command of Pivarski.⁴⁵²⁵

1304. When people from 13 Bosnian Muslim villages arrived in Đulići on 1 June 1992, approximately 750 men were separated from women and children and taken to the Karakaj Technical School.⁴⁵²⁶ Before being loaded onto trucks organised by the Zvornik TO,⁴⁵²⁷ Bosnian Serb soldiers took away money and ID papers from the men⁴⁵²⁸ who were packed on three trucks “like sardines” and beaten.⁴⁵²⁹ Bosnian Serb soldiers accompanied the detainees.⁴⁵³⁰ Apart from Đulići, the detainees were also from Lupe and Klisa.⁴⁵³¹

(b) Conditions of detention

⁴⁵²⁴ P3192 (Dragan Vidović's interview with Prosecution), p. 6. While Vidović also testified that the facility was under the control of the paramilitaries despite the presence of the Karakaj TO, the Chamber has treated this conclusion with caution. In making that assessment the Chamber noted that Vidović's evidence was marked by indicators that he was trying to remove himself from any responsibility and to place all blame on Pivarski. His evidence in this regard was marked by indicators of insincerity and partiality and the Chamber cannot rely on it for this purpose.

⁴⁵²⁵ P3192 (Dragan Vidović's interview with Prosecution), pp. 6–7, 23; Dragan Vidović, T. 17759, 17761, 17763 (23 August 2011) (testifying that guards who did not comply with orders from Pivarski to beat detainees were threatened). Panić testified that the guards were unable to stop the paramilitaries from entering the facility as they pleased. Petko Panić, T. 19183 (20 September 2011). However, the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 4517 as to why it cannot rely on Panić's evidence with respect to this issue.

KDZ029 stated that the bodies of 14 of these 38 men were recovered mostly in the Crni Vrh area and buried [REDACTED]; KDZ029 stated that he only approximated the size of the room. KDZ029, T. 17622–17623 (22 August 2011) (closed session); P3192 (Dragan Vidović's interview with Prosecution), pp. 8–9, 24–25. ⁴⁵³⁴ P3195 (Witness statement of KDZ029 dated 28 June 2011), para. 20 (under seal). KDZ029 was told that two of the detainees who died of suffocation were Hrustan Avdić and Nešad Hamzić. These two individuals were later into the building where detainees were held and those who could not get a piece remained without food.⁴⁵³⁵

(c) Treatment of detainees

1306. On arrival at the Karakaj Technical School, the men were ordered to jump from the truck and run past a large number of Bosnian Serb soldiers⁴⁵³⁶ who hit them with rifle butts, punched, kicked, swore, and cursed at them.⁴⁵³⁷ As the men ran into the building, Bosnian Serb women were on the other side of the road and could be heard screaming and telling the soldiers to “kill the Balijas”.⁴⁵³⁸ On the morning after their arrival, the detainees were ordered to hand over all money, watches and documentation, which were collected by Pivarski. They were then made to walk to another area and were beaten severely by soldiers upon Pivarski’s orders.⁴⁵³⁹

(d) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1307. The Chamber therefore finds that from June 1992, Bosnian Muslim men were brought to and detained at the Karakaj Technical School by Serb Forces. The detainees were held in poor conditions characterised by lack of space on the first night, which resulted in the suffocation of approximately 20 men. The detainees were also beaten. They received inadequate food and had their valuables taken away from them.

(e) Scheduled Incident B.20.3

1308. The Prosecution alleges that approximately 160 men were killed at the Karakaj Technical School between 1 and 5 June 1992.

1309. Bosnian Serb soldiers would select “rich or prominent people” and take them to another room; thereafter the other detainees would hear, moaning, screaming and gun bursts.⁴⁵⁴⁰ Captain

Mijo, who wore a cockade, called out detainees from Tršić, and those who were taken away were never seen again.⁴⁵⁴¹ Other detainees were then selected to carry out the bodies and would often not come back themselves.⁴⁵⁴² Approximately 160 people were selected, taken out and killed in this manner by the guards in the facility.⁴⁵⁴³ Vasilčić acknowledged that nothing was done to investigate the killings at the Karakaj Technical School.⁴⁵⁴⁴

1310. The Chamber also received evidence about the disappearance of detainees who were taken away for prisoner exchange and who remain unaccounted for.⁴⁵⁴⁵ However, the Chamber will not make findings in this regard given that it is not satisfied that these disappearances are linked to Scheduled Killing Incident B.20.3, which relates to a very specific date range in June 1992.

11–12, 14, 24–25. The Chamber notes its credibility assessment in fn. 4524 in concluding that Vidović's evidence that there was no mistreatment or killing of detainees at the facility, was not reliable. The Chamber further notes that when specifically questioned about the killings at the facility, Vidović attempted to avoid the question and then distanced himself from a previous inconsistent statement. Similarly, there was a major inconsistency in Vasilčić's evidence who also sought to distance himself from his previous interview in which he stated that he heard rumours about the killings at the Karakaj Technical School. Marinko Vasilčić, T. 39940–39943 (13 June 2013); P6405 (Excerpt from Marinko Vasilčić's interview with OTP, 21 October 2002), pp. 4–5. In light of these inconsistencies, the Chamber does not rely on Vasilčić's denial of contemporaneous knowledge of the killings.

See P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 60, 63–65, 67, 71, 105–106 for list of victims exhumed from mass graves linked to this scheduled incident (of the named individuals identified by KDZ029, Hasan Avdić, Nurija Jašarević and Avdo Jašarević were exhumed from mass graves as per Mašović's table). See also Jovan Ivanović, T. 39875–39877 (13 June 2013); P4837 (Witness statement of KDZ610 dated 27 March 2012), para. 66 (under seal); KDZ446, P29 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. S. Milošević), T. 21036–21037. Mašović identified a number of individuals who were exhumed from mass graves which he linked to Scheduled Incident B.20.3, however, there is no other evidence which links these specific individuals to the scheduled incident. See P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 63–64, 71, Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G. Similarly the Chamber received the death certificates of nine people who are reported to have died on 1 June 1992 at Bijeli Potok which are referred to in the Prosecution's Final Brief as being linked to this scheduled incident. See P4418 (Death certificates for Himzo Dedić, Zijad Gojkić and Nijaz Gojkić); P4419 (Death certificates for individuals killed in Zvornik); P4420 (Death certificate for Ibro Gojkić). However, in the absence of further evidence linking these named individuals the Chamber will not rely on this evidence in this regard. The Chamber therefore does not rely on these death certificates or the forensic evidence of Mašović (with the exception of the three named individuals mentioned above) for the purposes of making a finding with respect to this scheduled incident.

The Chamber also received hearsay evidence that Grujić was aware of what happened to the detainees but claimed that it was done without his knowledge. KDZ446, P28 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. S. Milošević), T. 21087–21088 (under seal). The Chamber places no weight on this hearsay denial by Grujić who also sought to distance himself from this incident.

1311. The Chamber therefore finds that approximately 160 men were killed by Serb Forces at the Karakaj Technical School in early June 1992.

(f) Scheduled Incident A.16.3

1312. The Prosecution alleges that approximately 190 men were killed at Gero's Slaughterhouse between 5 and 8 June 1992.

1313. On 5 June 1992, the 550 detainees who remained at the Karakaj Technical School were placed on buses and told they were being taken for exchange; however, they were taken to Pilica.⁴⁵⁴⁶ The convoy consisted of five or six buses each carrying between 50 and 60 people.⁴⁵⁴⁷ Dragan Spasojević ordered the police to escort the convoy of buses to the Pilica Cultural Centre⁴⁵⁴⁸ where many soldiers in JNA uniforms were waiting for them.⁴⁵⁴⁹ The guards shot above the detainees' heads and ordered them to hand over money and gold.⁴⁵⁵⁰ After three days, the men who were being held at Pilica were told they were being taken to Živinice for prisoner exchange.⁴⁵⁵¹

1314. [REDACTED] was in a group of 64 detainees who were taken and forced onto a truck; Bosnian Serb soldiers then pulled down a tarpaulin.⁴⁵⁵² The truck was led by a police car and was taken to Gero's slaughterhouse located in the Karakaj industrial area near the Drina River.⁴⁵⁵³ The detainees were taken off the truck, placed in separate rooms, and told to face the wall.⁴⁵⁵⁴ There

1315. The Chamber therefore finds that a large number of Bosnian Muslim men were brought to and killed at Gero’s slaughterhouse between 5 and 8 June 1992 by Serb Forces.⁴⁵⁶¹

(3) Scheduled Detention Facility C.27.3

1316. The Indictment refers to the use of the Alhos Factory as a detention facility on or about 9 April 1992.

(a) Arrival of detainees and control of facility

1317. The Alhos Factory was a former textile manufacturing facility located in Karakaj.⁴⁵⁶² The police, Arkan’s men and the White Eagles detained Bosnian Muslims at this facility.⁴⁵⁶³ Other

(b) Treatment of detainees

1318. 20 Bosnian Muslims from Zvornik and a few people from Buković, a settlement just outside Zvornik, were held in the men's cloakroom at the Alhos factory.⁴⁵⁶⁶ Each person was taken one at a time for interrogation to another room, from where the sound of dull blows and loud screams could be heard.⁴⁵⁶⁷ When they were brought back, they were thrown to the floor and some were "unconscious in a pool of blood, some had obviously broken arms or broken jaw or an eye knocked out. Some younger, fitter men were lying on the floor seemingly unconscious with their limbs twitching".⁴⁵⁶⁸ There were 15 men lying on the floor and occasionally the guards would open the door, throw some tear gas into the room and stand outside laughing.⁴⁵⁶⁹

1319. The men were taken out for interrogation by the guards but the interrogations themselves were conducted by Arkan's men.⁴⁵⁷⁰ The white tiles in the interrogation room had blood splattered all over them and the floor was covered in broken glass which KDZ059 had heard the detainees had been forced to swallow.⁴⁵⁷¹ On or about 9 April 1992, Branko Grujić interrogated and beat a detainee.⁴⁵⁷² After speaking to Pejić over the phone, Banjanović was allowed to come to the Alhos

The Chamber also received evidence about the maltreatment of a Bosnian Serb at the facility who was to be used as an example to other Serbs. P96 (Witness statement of KDZ059 dated 5 December 1998), pp. 8–9 (under seal). The Chamber does not find Grujić's evidence and speculation as to who was responsible for the abuses in the Alhos factory to be reliable. D3724 (Witness statement of Branko Grujić dated 22 June 2013), para. 50. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber also refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 4237 and 4239.

⁴⁵⁷² See Adjudicated Fact 2758. But see D3724 (Witness statement of Branko Grujić dated 22 June 2013), para. 60; Branko Grujić, T. 40401–40402 (25 June 2013). The Chamber notes specific inconsistencies in Grujić's testimony in this regard and clear indicators that he was seeking to minimise his own involvement. The Chamber does not consider his evidence to be reliable in this regard. Adjudicated Fact 2758 also refers to the killing of 18 Bosnian Muslim detainees by Arkan's men on or soon after 9 April 1992, however there are no Schedule B killing incidents charged in the Indictment with respect to this facility.

factory and managed to secure the release of people from Kozluk who had been detained there and observed that these “people were beaten black and blue”.⁴⁵⁷³

(c) Conclusion

1320. The Chamber therefore finds that Bosnian Muslims were detained at the Alhos factory in April 1992. The detainees were subjected to severe beatings and mistreatment by Serb Forces.

(4) Scheduled Detention Facility C.27.4

1321. The Indictment refers to the use of the Novi Izvor company also known as Ciglana as a detention facility at least between 29 May 1992 and 30 July 1992.⁴⁵⁷⁴

(a) Arrival of detainees and control of facility

1322. The Ciglana factory was located in the area of Karakaj.⁴⁵⁷⁵ On or about 18 May 1992, the Ciglana factory was taken over by Major Toro and his group, known as the Kobras, including men known as Pufta and Zoks.⁴⁵⁷⁶ Five or six guards, including Žučo,⁴⁵⁷⁷ guarded the Ciglana factory.⁴⁵⁷⁸ The reserve police also guarded this detention facility.⁴⁵⁷⁹

1323. On 27 May 1992, 186 Bosnian Muslims from Divič were detained at the facility.⁴⁵⁸⁰ In addition, approximately 20 detainees from Ekonomija farm were transported to Ciglana factory where they were all detained in a small room that had boarded up windows.⁴⁵⁸¹ The detainees included 12 men who had been identified in a Belgrade television broadcast as Green Berets.⁴⁵⁸²

On 15 July 1992, with the exception of one detainee who was taken to the Zvornik SUP, the detainees at Ciglana were taken to Batković camp before being exchanged in January 1993.⁴⁵⁸³

(b) Treatment of detainees

1324. Detainees were made to work, loading and unloading blocks onto trucks and cleaning the yard; other groups were taken daily to help with looting abandoned homes in Zvornik, Kozluk, and Kula Grad.⁴⁵⁸⁴ The detainees were woken at 5 a.m. and taken to work.⁴⁵⁸⁵ Given the amount of work that had to be done, another group of detainees from Čelopek and other detention camps, including ten people who had been detained by Captain Dragan's unit were brought to the Ciglana factory.⁴⁵⁸⁶

1325. Paramilitaries from Serbia frequently visited the facility and "severely mistreated" the detainees.⁴⁵⁸⁷ A group of five White Eagles from Loznica entered the building and beat the detainees for one or two hours and ordered them to sing "Chetnik" songs.⁴⁵⁸⁸ Detainees were beaten with a thick wooden stick and some were also ordered to beat other detainees.⁴⁵⁸⁹ Men from Niški's group also brought detainees to the facility from Ekonomija farm and beat them.⁴⁵⁹⁰ Members of the White Eagles, a man addressed as "Vojvoda" and Žučo took detainees out and beat them; on one occasion with a cable.⁴⁵⁹¹ One detainee, who was identified as an SDA leader was beaten until he passed out.⁴⁵⁹² During this mistreatment detainees were also humiliated by being forced to make the sign of the cross, to use the greeting “God help your hero” and to eat carbonised bread without dropping anything.⁴⁵⁹³

1326. In June 1992, Pufta and his group started searching the detainees for money and he used a knife to carve out a detainee’s tattoo which depicted a crescent and star.⁴⁵⁹⁴ The White Eagles came to the facility on another occasion and beat the detainees but, that night, the guards told the detainees that they had received instructions not to allow any other outsiders in without permission after which the detainees were not mistreated for several days.⁴⁵⁹⁵ Similarly, after another incident in which detainees were beaten, Niški slapped Žučo; thereafter the detainees were not beaten for five or six days.⁴⁵⁹⁶

1327. After three detainees hit one of the guards and escaped from the facility, Kobra and Žučo said that all the detainees should be killed.⁴⁵⁹⁷ That evening, detainees were questioned and suffered injuries including a cut ear, a fractured head, and a cut cheek.⁴⁵⁹⁸ The next morning the detainees were lined up outside the building and made to stand for three hours.⁴⁵⁹⁹ After that day Pufta was never seen again and the detainees were not mistreated.⁴⁶⁰⁰

(c) Conclusion

1328. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were detained at Ciglana by Serb Forces from late May 1992 until July 1992. The detainees were subjected to beatings, humiliation and were forced to work at the facility and in other locations in Zvornik.⁴⁶⁰¹

⁴⁵⁹³ P70 (Witness statement of Jusuf Avdispahić dated 22 October 1997), pp. 19–20. ⁴⁶⁰¹ The Chamber also received evidence about the killing or disappearance of detainees at the facility. P70 (Witness statement of Jusuf Avdispahić dated 22 October 1997), pp. 12, 21–22. However, the Chamber notes that there are no scheduled killing incidents charged in Schedule B of the Indictment with respect to this facility.

(a) Arrival of detainees and control of facility

1330. Drinjača is located south of Zvornik.⁴⁶⁰² On 30 May 1992, about 150 Bosnian Muslim men, women, and children from Kostijerevo were taken to and detained in the Drinjača cultural centre,⁴⁶⁰³ which was very close to the Drinjača School playground.⁴⁶⁰⁴ Other detainees arrived from another part of Kostijerevo, as well as from Drinjača, Sopotnik and Đevanje.⁴⁶⁰⁵ In total, approximately 300 Muslim men, women and children, were detained at the Drinjača cultural centre.⁴⁶⁰⁶

1331. The detainees were guarded by Bosnian Serb soldiers wearing the JNA reserve uniform.⁴⁶⁰⁷ The detainees were informed by one of the soldiers that there was nothing to fear and that they would be transferred to some villages near Zenica while Bosnian Serbs would come to live in their villages.⁴⁶⁰⁸ The women and children were separated from the men, “crammed” into a bus, driven to Čelopek, and held in barns and sheds for three days before being allowed to go to Bosnian Muslim held territory.⁴⁶⁰⁹

(b) Treatment of detainees

1332. A group of men wearing camouflage uniforms entered the Drinjača cultural centre, and verbally abused the male detainees and forced them to sing “Chetnik” songs.⁴⁶¹⁰ These soldiers took individual detainees from the group onto a stage and severely beat them.⁴⁶¹¹ In one case, a man was beaten until he was unconscious and then stabbed three times.⁴⁶¹² Between 25 and 30 detainees were beaten and threatened.⁴⁶¹³ The Bosnian Serb soldiers present in the cultural centre observed what was happening but did nothing to prevent or stop the beatings which continued till around 9 p.m. when the group of men left.⁴⁶¹⁴

(c) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1333. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims, including women and children, were detained at the Drinjača cultural centre from the end of May 1992 by Serb Forces. The women and children were separated from the men before being transferred to Bosnian Muslim held territory. The male detainees were subjected to threats, severe beatings, and were stabbed by Serb Forces.

(d) Scheduled Incident B.20.1

1334. The Prosecution alleges that approximately 88 men were killed at Drinjača on or about 30 May 1992.

1335. On the night of 30 May 1992, a group of men wearing olive-green uniforms, and some wearing cockades, entered the Drinjača cultural centre.⁴⁶¹⁵ This group of men ordered the detainees to put their heads down and asked for ten volunteers to step forward.⁴⁶¹⁶ When none of the detainees volunteered, ten people were selected and taken outside, which was followed by the sound of a burst of gunfire.⁴⁶¹⁷ This process was repeated every five minutes.⁴⁶¹⁸

1336. The fifth group of detainees taken out. One of the detainees was shot at by the soldiers who were lined up in a row but; managed to escape.⁴⁶¹⁹ When he fled the scene, he saw a large group of people dead on the concrete.⁴⁶²⁰ This detainee provided a list of 88 people from the villages of Kostijerevo, Drinjača, Sopotnik and Đevanje who were captured, detained at the Drinjača Cultural Centre and shot on the evening of 30 May 1992. He identified five other people who were killed

⁴⁶²⁰ [REDACTED]. The Accused acknowledged that 83 Bosnian Muslim men were executed in this incident but that the police were afraid of the paramilitaries who were responsible and no official reports were made about this incident. Defence Final Brief, confidential, para. 1451. The Accused also cites to the evidence of Panić to suggest that it was impossible to reach Drinjača because the tunnels were laid with explosives. Petko Panić, T. 19182–19183 (20 September 2011). The Chamber does not consider that this evidence supports a conclusion that it was impossible to reach Drinjača.

while trying to escape arrest during the course of the day.⁴⁶²¹ The Chamber took judicial notice that White Eagles took out groups of ten detainees from the Drinjača cultural centre and shot and killed 88 people.⁴⁶²²

1337. On the morning of 31 May 1992, members of the Zvornik Public Utility Service were ordered to pick up bodies at Drinjača; they saw that the women and children had boarded three buses.⁴⁶²³ At the Drinjača School playground, which was 50 metres away from the Drinjača cultural centre, there were “dead bodies and blood everywhere”.⁴⁶²⁴ The men had been shot in the back of the head and the bodies which were of Bosnian Muslim civilians were scattered at the location.⁴⁶²⁵ Given the volume of blood, those who were transporting the bodies had to return twice to the Drinjača playground to wash the location.⁴⁶²⁶ The bodies were loaded onto a truck, covered with a tarpaulin and taken towards Gero’s slaughterhouse; the bodies were then moved from this location and buried at Ramin Grob Muslim cemetery.⁴⁶²⁷ Of the 155 bodies exhumed from this mass grave KDZ610 was able to recognise some people who he had seen killed in Drinjača.⁴⁶²⁸

⁴⁶²¹ P95 (List of persons captured or killed on 30 May 1992) (under seal); [REDACTED]. The witness also participated in the identification process and identified his father and brothers following the exhumation of the bodies in September 1998. P101 (Exhumation report from “Ramin Grob” – Glumina) (under seal). Of the 88 individuals named by [REDACTED], 73 were exhumed from mass graves. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 98–107. In addition 52 of the 88 individuals named by KDZ072 were listed in P101 (Exhumation report from “Ramin Grob” – Glumina) (under seal).

⁴⁶²² See Adjudicated Fact 2762. The Chamber finds that Vasilić was informed about the execution of detainees in this incident by a TO unit commanded by Lieutenant Matić. Marinko Vasilić, T. 39930–39933 (13 June 2013). Vasilić testified however, that the reserve police could not prevent this incident. The Chamber notes that Vasilić, when confronted with his prior statement, testified that the police would most probably have seen what happened. Vasilić was also confronted with his prior statement that he spoke to leading politicians and members of the TO Staff about this incident and nothing was done which was contrary to his testimony that he discussed the issue with TO Staff Chief Marko Pavlović who promised to investigate the case. Marinko Vasilić, T. 39933–39938 (13 June 2013); P6405 (Excerpt from Marinko Vasilić’s interview with OTP, 21 October 2002), pp. 6–7. In light of these contradictions, the Chamber does not consider Vasilić’s assessment that the reserve police could not prevent this incident to be reliable. The Chamber also refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 4259 in reaching that conclusion.

(6) Scheduled Detention Facility C.27.6

1339. The Indictment refers to the use of the Ekonomija farm as a detention facility between April and December 1992.⁴⁶²⁹

(a) Arrival of detainees and control of facility

1340. Ekonomija farm is located four kilometres from Zvornik in the industrial area of Karakaj.⁴⁶³⁰ Detainees were held in a building in the centre of the farm.⁴⁶³¹ The detainees at this facility included Bosnian Muslims from the villages of Divič and Đulići.⁴⁶³² On or about 11 May 1992, eight men detained at Karakaj were transported to this facility by Bosnian Serb police.⁴⁶³³ Other detainees were taken to the facility from their apartments by soldiers, including a group from Loznica in Serbia and men with White Eagle patches and bearing MP inscriptions. These detainees were hit and searched before their transportation to the Ekonomija farm.⁴⁶³⁴ A unit of the Zvornik TO commanded by Miladin Mijatović was stationed at the Ekonomija farm.⁴⁶³⁵

(b) Treatment of detainees

1341. 15 men were detained in a room previously used for the storage of fertiliser and were beaten.⁴⁶³⁶ An old man who was detained at the Ekonomija farm died after a series of beatings.⁴⁶³⁷

See also Adjudicated Fact 2765. The Accused acknowledged that detainees were beaten by soldiers wearing White Eagle and Kobra insignia and that an old man died as a result of injuries sustained during beatings but that the death was not reported to the Bosnian Serb authorities. Defence Final Brief, para. 1456.

A police inspector from Zvornik asked the detainees to give statements that the old man had died of natural causes.⁴⁶³⁸ Bosnian Muslims were also taken from Ekonomija farm and forced to work.⁴⁶³⁹

1342. The belongings of detainees were taken away and soldiers threatened that they would all be killed if they did not provide statements about the location of weapons.⁴⁶⁴⁰ At least ten detainees were severely beaten.⁴⁶⁴¹ Avdispahić for example was told that his statement did not match the statement of another detainee; five or six soldiers then came into the room, beat him for almost half an hour, made him stand against the wall and make the three fingered Serbian sign.⁴⁶⁴² As they beat Avdispahić the soldiers swore at him.⁴⁶⁴³ After one or two hours, a group of four or five soldiers arrived, threatened Avdispahić and beat him for two hours with a stake, a thick electric cable, and a rubber hose.⁴⁶⁴⁴ Approximately every two hours this group of soldiers would enter and beat the detainees for as long as they could and this lasted the whole day.⁴⁶⁴⁵

1343. On 12 or 13 May 1992, Bego Bukvić was taken outside, beaten, and when he was brought back inside he was “half dead”.⁴⁶⁴⁶ The arms of some detainees were broken during these beatings.⁴⁶⁴⁷ That same night, another group of soldiers, entered and told all men who did not vote for a sovereign BiH to sit down.⁴⁶⁴⁸ When Avdispahić did not sit as his legs were too swollen, he was ordered to turn towards the wall and was beaten.⁴⁶⁴⁹ Avdispahić then hit the wall and fainted before waking up “on the floor in blood and water”.⁴⁶⁵⁰

anus up to 30 centimetres during which the detainees screamed and howled.⁴⁶⁵³ Once the beating and abuse ended the detainees were ordered to wipe the blood with their clothes.⁴⁶⁵⁴

1345. During this incident the soldiers shouted at the detainees.⁴⁶⁵⁵ Zoran Jovanović came in and was told by Brko “here are your birds from Glinica”; Jovanović laughed and left.⁴⁶⁵⁶ After Jovanović left, Brko hit Avdispahić on the head and the other detainees were ordered to beat each other, remove their underwear and bite each others penises while the soldiers stood by and laughed.⁴⁶⁵⁷

(c) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1346. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were transferred to and detained at Ekonomija by Serb Forces in May 1992. The detainees were subjected to severe beatings and sexual violence. The Chamber finds that one detainee died following a severe beating.⁴⁶⁵⁸

(d) Scheduled Incident B.20.4

1347. The Prosecution alleges that one man was killed at Ekonomija Farm between April and May 1992.⁴⁶⁵⁹

1348. A soldier ordered Bego Bukvić to come out of the room where he was detained and after he left there was the sound of two short machine gun bursts.⁴⁶⁶⁰ Avdispahić was also ordered out and told to put Bukvić’s body into a bag and noticed that there were gun shots in the shape of a cross on Bukvić’s back.⁴⁶⁶¹ After one or two hours another group entered the room, beat everyone, and took Sead Omerović out.⁴⁶⁶² Once Sead was taken out, detainees could hear screaming and blows

⁴⁶⁵⁷ P70 (Witness statement of Jusuf Avdispahić dated 22 October 1997), pp. 15–16.

⁴⁶⁵⁸ This finding does not include the persons alleged to have been killed in Scheduled Incident B.20.4, which is discussed below.

⁴⁶⁵⁹ While the Indictment refers to the killing of one man, the Prosecution Final Brief lists five individuals linked to this incident. The Chamber notes that the death of one of these individuals is addressed in para. 1341, which addresses the death of a detainee after he was beaten. The Prosecution also limits the period of the killings to May 1992. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B.

followed by the sound of two short machine gun bursts; they were then called out to put Sead's body in a body bag.⁴⁶⁶³

1349. The Chamber therefore finds that at least two men were killed at Ekonomija Farm by Serb Forces in May 1992.⁴⁶⁶⁴

(7) Scheduled Detention Facility C.27.7

1350. The Indictment refers to the use of the Standard Factory as a detention facility at least between April and the end of June 1992.⁴⁶⁶⁵

1351. The Standard Factory was located in Karakaj on the road from Zvornik to Bijeljina.⁴⁶⁶⁶ It was a building constructed for the Standard Company and was then used as a barracks.⁴⁶⁶⁷ It was used to detain Bosnian Muslim men from April 1992 and was guarded by local Bosnian Serbs.⁴⁶⁶⁸ The facility was also used by the TO, the Zvornik Brigade, the MUP, the police, and by the Interim Government.⁴⁶⁶⁹ On or about 3 or 4 May 1992, following interrogations at the SUP in Zvornik, groups of Bosnian Muslim men were transported by policemen to the Standard Factory.⁴⁶⁷⁰ The guards at the Standard Factory wore JNA uniforms and were men from Čelopek.⁴⁶⁷¹ While the Bosnian Muslim men were detained at the facility, separate groups of men wearing camouflage uniforms with cockades would arrive and ask them questions.⁴⁶⁷²

⁴⁶⁶³ P70 (Witness statement of Jusuf Avdispahić dated 22 October 1997), pp. 16–17.

⁴⁶⁶⁴ The Chamber also received evidence about the disappearance of a detainee but has insufficient evidence to make a finding in this regard or to link it to this scheduled incident. P4837 (Witness statement of KDZ610 dated 27 March 2012), para. 50 (under seal).

⁴⁶⁶⁵ The Prosecution submits that the evidence presented shows that the facility was operational in April and May 1992. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, fn. 936.

The Accused submits that with respect to this scheduled detention facility, the “presence of several armed soldiers” indicated that there was no cohesion or co-operation and that there was an unclear chain of command. Defence Final Brief, para. 1459. The Chamber will address the Accused's submissions in this regard in Section IV.A.3.a.iii: Authority over military and police forces acting in BiH.

1352. Armed groups, including paramilitaries from Serbia, frequently visited the detention facility and “severely mistreated the detainees”.⁴⁶⁷³ One of these groups from Loznica, entered and started punching and kicking the detainees and beating them with sticks, bent cables, and wires.⁴⁶⁷⁴

1353. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslim men were transported to and detained at Standard Factory by Serb Forces in April and May 1992. The detainees were subjected to severe beatings during their detention at this facility.⁴⁶⁷⁵

(G) Scheduled Incident D.22

1354. The Indictment refers to the destruction of at least 28 mosques in Zvornik between April and November 1992.⁴⁶⁷⁶

1355. By the morning of 9 April 1992, a Serbian flag was flying “over the main Mosque at the market place in Zvornik” and Serbian music was played through the loudspeakers on the minarets.⁴⁶⁷⁷ The minarets from two other mosques were destroyed in the shelling of the previous day.⁴⁶⁷⁸ In April 1992, Serb Forces also entered Kamenica and destroyed four mosques.⁴⁶⁷⁹

1356. On or about 18 July 1992, some of the mosques in the surrounding area of Zvornik and the mosque in the centre of Zvornik were demolished by a group of men described as “saboteurs” from Pančevo; they loaded the copper from the demolished mosques and took it in vehicles to Serbia under the escort of army commandos.⁴⁶⁸⁰

⁴⁶⁷³ See Adjudicated Fact 2767.

⁴⁶⁷⁴ P62 (Witness statement of Nedžad Hadžiefendić dated 3 October 1997), pp. 6–7.

⁴⁶⁷⁵ The Chamber also received evidence about the killing of Bosnian Muslims at the Standard Factory and their burial but there are no killing incidents charged in Schedule B of the Indictment with respect to this facility. KDZ555, T. 17310–17311 (17 August 2011) (private session); Petko Panić, P3380 (Transcript from *Prosecutor v. Grujić testified that the Bosnian Muslim monuments were damaged by the paramilitaries. However, on cross-examination Grujić was challenged about this evidence and referred to his prior interview where he had stated that the mosques in Zvornik had been destroyed by a military unit since they were in possession of the explosives and materials necessary to carry this out and he acknowledged that he could not be

1357. According to Riedlmayer's report, a total of 29 mosques and two Muslim shrines were damaged in Zvornik during the course of the war.⁴⁶⁸¹ The Chamber notes that with respect to three of these mosques, Riedlmayer describes them as "lightly damaged".⁴⁶⁸² The Chamber therefore finds that at least 26 mosques in Zvornik were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed. Riedlmayer identified a number of mosques in Zvornik municipality which have now been razed and used as dumping sites for garbage or other constructions.⁴⁶⁸³ With respect to the Divič mosque, a Serbian Orthodox church was built on the site of the destroyed mosque.⁴⁶⁸⁴

1358. The Chamber has considered the evidence it has received which identified Serb Forces as responsible for the destruction of specific mosques in Zvornik town and surrounding villages.⁴⁶⁸⁵ It

In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that KDZ555's evidence was marked by indicators of extreme evasiveness, bias and contradictions.

⁴⁶⁸¹ P4070 (Attachment to the expert report of András J. Riedlmayer, entitled "Destruction of Cultural Heritage in BiH" prepared for the Karadžić case, formatted records), pp. 328-400. Riedlmayer identifies the level of damage with respect to each of the mosques listed by name in the Indictment: Đulići mosque (completely destroyed), Kula Grad mosque (completely destroyed), Kozluk mosque (completely destroyed), Divič mosque (completely destroyed), Snagovo mosque (heavily damaged), Novo Selo mosque (almost destroyed), Skočić mosque (almost destroyed), Svrake mosque (lightly damaged), Drinjača mosque (heavily damaged), Glumina mosque (completely destroyed), Donja Kamenica mosque (almost destroyed), Gornja Kamenica mosque (heavily damaged), Klisa mosque (heavily damaged), Kovačevići mosque (heavily damaged), Rijeka mosque (completely destroyed), Selimovići mosque (heavily damaged); P4071 (Slide images of damaged religious sites in BiH), pp. 1, 10, 13-15, 18, 20-23. Riedlmayer identified that the buildings adjacent to the Divič mosque, Drinjača mosque, Kozluk mosque, Rijeka mosque were in good condition, while the buildings adjacent to the Kovačevići mosque, Kula Grad mosque were also heavily damaged. In addition to these 16 mosques, Riedlmayer identified the level of damage with respect to another 13 mosques as follows: Beksuja mosque (completely destroyed), Zamlaz mosque (completely destroyed), Kušlat mosque (almost destroyed), Donja Kamenica –Redžići mosque (heavily damaged), Gornja Sapna mosque (heavily damaged), Jošanica mosque (completely destroyed), Hasići mosque (completely destroyed), Vitinica mosque (lightly damaged), Gornji Šepak mosque (completely destroyed), Donji Križevići mosque (lightly damaged), Glodi mosque (heavily damaged), Seferovići mosque (almost destroyed), Avdo Tucić mosque – Kula Grad (completely destroyed). Riedlmayer also refers to the damage to two other Islamic sites (Turbe of Hasan Kaimija – Kula Grad, Dervish lodge and shrine – Divič), which are not mosques and thus not charged in the Indictment. See also P4518 (Excerpts from Robert Đurđević's diary, 7–25 September 1993), p. 2. See also P4068 (András Riedlmayer's expert report on Destruction of Cultural Heritage in Bosnia and Herzegovina during 1992-1995, 7 May 2009), paras. 15–16, 24; András Riedlmayer, T. 22530–22531, 22536–22537 (8 December 2011), 22541–22547 (9 December 2011); P4069 (Cultural destruction database), records 337, 339, 340, 345, 346, 359, 360, 362, 363, 366, 369, 370, 372, 374, 378, 380; Adjudicated Fact 2768.

has also had regard to the fact that with very few exceptions, almost all mosques in the municipality sustained serious damage or were completely destroyed after Serb Forces took over power. Finally, the Chamber has assessed the evidence received with respect to the surrounding circumstances in Zvornik, including the attacks on and take-over of multiple Bosnian Muslim villages by Serb Forces in the relevant time frame. Having weighed these factors, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Serb Forces were responsible for the attacks on and destruction of mosques in Zvornik.

1359. Therefore, the Chamber finds that at least 26 mosques were heavily damaged, almost destroyed or completely destroyed by Serb Forces from April 1992.

(H) Movement of the population from Zvornik

1360. As discussed above⁴⁶⁸⁶ following the attack on Zvornik approximately 10,000 people, the majority of whom were Bosnian Muslims, left Zvornik with most crossing to Mali Zvornik.⁴⁶⁸⁷ Other people took shelter in the municipality of Kalesija,⁴⁶⁸⁸ the town of Snagovo,⁴⁶⁸⁹ and Kula Grad.⁴⁶⁹⁰ Bosnian Muslims who headed in the direction of Tuzla tried to cross into Bosnian Muslim controlled territory and those who managed to cross into Serbia travelled to third countries from there.⁴⁶⁹¹

women were put on buses and taken to Serbia, and “saw many more dead bodies lying in the gardens of houses” as they were driven through Zvornik.⁴⁶⁹³

1362. On 10 April 1992, the Interim Government instructed residents to return to Zvornik and lay claim to their properties by 15 May 1992 or face loss of title.⁴⁶⁹⁴ On 20 April 1992, the Interim Government appointed a commission to negotiate with the SDA. Items to negotiate included the situation of a large group of Bosnian Muslims who wanted to move.⁴⁶⁹⁵ Mićo Stanišić reported that “inhabitants of the Muslim villages around Zvornik are being evacuated”.⁴⁶⁹⁶ The SUP issued permits for Bosnian Muslims to cross into Serbia⁴⁶⁹⁷ and Grujić was involved in transporting Bosnian Muslims from Zvornik to Serbia.⁴⁶⁹⁸ Peja instructed Bošković to take all the women, children and men over the age of 50 and allow them to cross to Mali Zvornik.⁴⁶⁹⁹ Bošković then took groups of 200 to 300 people across the bridge on several occasions, but men of combat age were not allowed to cross.⁴⁷⁰⁰ The money and gold of Bosnian Muslims were taken away before they crossed the bridge to Serbia.⁴⁷⁰¹

1363. In late May 1992, Bosnian Muslim representatives met with local Serbs, including a member of the Interim Government to discuss the removal of Bosnian Muslims from the municipality.⁴⁷⁰² On or about 28 May 1992, the commander of the VRS 1st Birač Brigade, Svetozar Andrić, ordered the Zvornik TO to organise and co-ordinate the movement out of the Bosnian Muslim population, with only women and children to be moved out and men fit for military service placed in camps for exchange.⁴⁷⁰³

The Chamber does not consider that Andrić's evidence as to the reason why the Bosnian Muslim population was moved out and that their departure was voluntary to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that during his testimony he had an interest in minimising his own involvement in events in Zvornik and that his evidence was marked by contradictions and evasiveness and indicators of lack of sincerity in this regard.

1365. The Drina Corps Command reported that with “the arrival of paramilitary organisations to the Zvornik municipality, particularly the arrival of Arkan and his people, this territory was liberated from the Turks. Turks made up 60% of the municipality’s population and it has now been cleansed and replaced with an ethnically pure Serb population”.⁴⁷⁰⁴ The ECMM also reported that “people were being forcibly removed” from where they lived in Zvornik.⁴⁷⁰⁵ Towards the end of June 1992 very few Bosnian Muslims remained in the town.⁴⁷⁰⁶

The Chamber does not consider this interview where Pavlović had a clear interest in presenting the actions of the Bosnian Serb authorities in a positive light to be reliable. Davidović also testified that Pavlović in this interview was simply stating what the Zvornik Crisis Staff and politicians expected him to say. Milorad Davidović, T. 15536 (28 June 2011).

Pašalić challenged the evidence on the change in the Bosnian Muslim population in Zvornik. D3125 (Stevo Pašalić’s expert report entitled “Ethnic Composition, Displaced Persons and Refugees from 27 Municipalities in the Territory of BiH, 1991-1997”, August 2012), p. 35; Stevo Pašalić, T. 35379–35380 (13 March 2013). However, the Chamber does not consider Pašalić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber noted that his evidence was marked by extreme evasiveness and indicators of partiality and bias which undermined the credibility of his evidence in this regard. But see Branko Grujić, T. 40453 (26 June 2013) (testifying that after the war there was a general call for all citizens of Zvornik, both Muslim and Serb, who had left their homes to return to the municipality and that these people returned and were treated fairly by all organs of the municipality). The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 4237 as to why it does not find Grujić’s evidence about the return of citizens to Zvornik to be reliable. The Chamber does find, however, that in Kozluk, one or two years after the end of the war most of the Bosnian Muslims returned and moved back into their homes with the co-operation of Banjanović. (A) Banja Luka

(1) Charges

1366. In relation to Banja Luka municipality, the Prosecution has limited the allegations in the Indictment to crimes associated with the Manjača camp (“Manjača”).⁴⁷⁰⁷

1367. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Banja Luka as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁴⁷⁰⁸ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in Banja Luka include killings related to Manjača, as well as killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at that facility.⁴⁷⁰⁹ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.⁴⁷¹⁰

1368. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Banja Luka by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse in Manjača as cruel or inhumane treatment,⁴⁷¹¹ (ii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in Manjača, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁴⁷¹² (iii) unlawful detention in Manjača;⁴⁷¹³ as well as (iv) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields.⁴⁷¹⁴

(2) Lead-up

1369. Banja Luka is the largest municipality in BiH and is located to the east of Prijedor and Sanski Most and to the south of Bosanska Gradiška.⁴⁷¹⁵ According to the 1991 census, Banja Luka municipality had 195,139 inhabitants, of whom about 55% were Bosnian Serbs, 15% were Bosnian Muslims, and 15% were Bosnian Croats.⁴⁷¹⁶

1370. In the multi-party elections of November 1990, the SDS won 64 seats of the 130 seats in the Municipal Assembly while the SDA secured 13 seats only.⁴⁷¹⁷ Predrag Radić, a member of the SDS Main Board, was appointed as the President of Banja Luka Municipal Assembly.⁴⁷¹⁸ Rajko Kasagić was appointed as President of the Executive Board.⁴⁷¹⁹ In 1991, Župljanin was appointed the Chief of Banja Luka CSB.⁴⁷²⁰

1371. On 22 January 1992, the Banja Luka SDS established a Crisis Staff.⁴⁷²¹

1372. The Banja Luka Crisis Staff was established in May 1992 and Radić was appointed as the President of the Crisis Staff.⁴⁷²² By 15 May 1992, the Serbian Defence Forces (“SOS”) and at least three other Serb armed formations led by Nikodin Čavić, Vlado Jotanović, and Brane Palačković respectively operated in Banja Luka.⁴⁷²³

1373. During the republican referendum on independence on 29 February and 1 March 1992, the SOS blockaded the municipality building.⁴⁷²⁴ The SOS in Banja Luka was under the command of Nenad Stevandić and included many well-known criminals from Banja Luka.⁴⁷²⁵ On 3 April 1992, they erected check-points around town and issued a press statement calling on the president of the municipality to establish a crisis staff in order to pursue several goals of the SOS, including the dismissal of JNA Banja Luka Corps officers and public utility managers who voted “against Yugoslavia”.⁴⁷²⁶ The demands of the SOS were adopted by the SDS.⁴⁷²⁷

1374. Upon the establishment of a municipal Serb Crisis Staff in the spring of 1992, Radić announced several measures, including that CSB employees had to pledge loyalty to the SerBiH or lose their jobs; the presidency of the SFRY would be requested to reinforce the JNA Banja Luka Corps and dismiss or transfer JNA officers who had not voted “for Yugoslavia”; and the directors of several public enterprises who pursued “an anti-Serbian policy” would be dismissed.⁴⁷²⁸ Employers in Banja Luka were told to evict non-Serbs from employer-owned apartments in order to make space for families of fallen Serb soldiers.⁴⁷²⁹ Those who attempted to protect non-Serbs in Banja Luka were reprimanded or even replaced.⁴⁷³⁰ To enforce compliance with these orders, mixed patrols of the police, the TO, and the JNA were to take-over control of the roads from the SOS.⁴⁷³¹

⁴⁷³² In its Final Brief, the Prosecution notes that the evidence led in relation to Manjača shows that it operated as a detention facility from 15 May 1992 until December 1992. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, p. 2, fn. 23.

(a) Establishment and control

1376. Manjača was located approximately 35 kilometres to the southwest of the town of Banja Luka and about 15 to 20 kilometres to the east of Ključ.⁴⁷³³ Manjača was part of a large JNA installation called Mika Bosnić Barracks and had previously served as a military exercise field.⁴⁷³⁴ Manjača consisted of farmland, six large stables, called “pavilions” by the guards, and a number of warehouses.⁴⁷³⁵ There were mines, a fence, and several guard towers around Manjača.⁴⁷³⁶

1377. Around 15 September 1991, the Command of the 5th Corps of the JNA began using Manjača as a camp to hold POWs from the conflict in Croatia.⁴⁷³⁷ In mid-May 1992, the 1st Krajina Corps assumed control of Manjača and from this point until its closure, Manjača remained under VRS control.⁴⁷³⁸ In June 1992, the Command of 1st Krajina Corps was entrusted with the task of establishing a POW camp and assessing the needs for prisoner exchanges.⁴⁷³⁹ In July 1992, Colonel Božidar Popović was appointed as commander of Manjača.⁴⁷⁴⁰ Predrag

Kovačević, nicknamed Špaga, was Popović's personal assistant; Kovačević was also in charge of the prison guards.⁴⁷⁴¹ Generally, military policemen guarded the detainees inside the camp whereas members of the MUP protected the external boundaries of the camp.⁴⁷⁴² However, the 1st Krajina Corps Commander and the Ključ and Sanski Most SJBs also agreed that members of the MUP be sent inside Manjača for short periods to assist.⁴⁷⁴³ MUP members who were in Manjača were placed under the command of Popović.⁴⁷⁴⁴

1378. The authorities in Manjača drafted reports for the superior command on a weekly basis or more frequently when necessary.⁴⁷⁴⁵

1379. The number of detainees held at Manjača ranged from approximately 140 to 3,600 at a given time.⁴⁷⁴⁶ In total, 4,403 detainees passed through the camp.⁴⁷⁴⁷ The majority of the detainees

However, Radinković, later in his statement, conceded that members of civilian police interrogated the detainees in the camp. See D4204 (Witness statement of Radomir Radinković dated 8 December 2013), pp. 2, 4. The Chamber notes the reliable documentary evidence which indicates that inspectors from Ključ SJB and Sanski Most SJB were sent to Manjača in order to “process” the detainees. See P3734 (Report of Ključ SJB, 24 June 1992); P3736 (Manjača camp daily report to the 1st Krajina Corps, 27 June 1992) (under seal); D3912 (Manjača camp daily report to 1st Krajina Corps, 2 July 1992); D4170 (Witness statement of Mile Dobrijević dated 2 December 2013), para. 14. The Chamber also notes that according to a report compiled by the authorities in Manjača, Radenko Kaurin, who was a policeman, slapped two detainees because they had taken bread from the bread baskets which they had been forced to carry. See P3754 (Manjača camp daily report to the 1st Krajina Corps, 1 November 1992) (under seal). Given this evidence and in light of the inconsistencies displayed by [REDACTED] and Radinković during their respective testimonies, the Chamber rejects their assertion that the civilian police only entered the camp in situations of emergency.

at Manjača were Bosnian Muslims, though some Bosnian Croats and very few Bosnian Serbs were also held there.⁴⁷⁴⁸ For the most part, the detainees were aged between 18 and 60, but there were also a number of minors and elderly individuals.⁴⁷⁴⁹ On several occasions, those in charge of the security and intelligence at the camp proposed that individuals under 18 and over 60 as well as the seriously ill be released; these proposals, however, were largely ignored.⁴⁷⁵⁰ Several Imams as well as a Catholic priest were also detained in Manjača.⁴⁷⁵¹

1389. Initially, there were a number of barrels in each stable which served as toilets; later, however, the detainees dug holes outside and used them as toilets.⁴⁷⁸⁵

1390. Faik Bišćević who was a dentist and three detainees who were doctors by profession, namely, Emir Kapetanović, Enis Šabanović and Mehmed Derviškadić, as well as a Serb nurse, staffed a medical clinic; this clinic, however, suffered from a severe shortage of medicine and supplies and could not provide adequate medical care to the detainees.⁴⁷⁸⁶ At times, the guards refused to allow the sick detainees to go to the clinic for up to a week.⁴⁷⁸⁷ Some detainees did not receive any medical treatment for their pre-existing conditions or the injuries they sustained from the beatings.⁴⁷⁸⁸

1392. The detainees were kept in large, crowded stables meant for livestock, where they sat or laid down for most of the day.⁴⁷⁹⁰ Generally, detainees could not leave the stables freely, and the stable doors were kept closed.⁴⁷⁹¹

1394. Detainees were also forced to work.⁴⁷⁹⁶ They usually worked for eight to ten hours daily.⁴⁷⁹⁷

Though the Chamber received evidence that the detainees in Manjača were forced to work, this work is not covered by the Indictment as it was not conducted at the frontlines and did not include the digging of trenches.

1395. On arrival at Manjača, the detainees were ordered to lower their heads and keep their arms behind their backs with hands clasped, a camp rule that remained in effect throughout their detention.⁴⁷⁹⁸ The detainees were also made to hand in their money, gold, and other valuables.⁴⁷⁹⁹ The guards searched the stables and detainees frequently, appropriating any valuables they found while beating the detainees.⁴⁸⁰⁰

1396. The detainees were required to stand up whenever Kovačević entered the stables; these visits at times lasted a few hours and caused the weaker detainees to faint and fall to the ground.⁴⁸⁰¹

severely beat them.⁴⁸⁰⁸ The beating of KDZ026 stopped only when Popović, upon hearing KDZ026's cries after he was stabbed in the stomach, came outside and shouted at the guards to stop.⁴⁸⁰⁹

1398. On another occasion, an officer from the security service of the 1st Krajina Corps went outside the camp and saw that policemen were beating two detainees "sadistically".⁴⁸¹⁰

1399. The detainees were forced to run the gauntlet on arrival into the camp.⁴⁸¹¹ Once inside, they were regularly beaten by members of the MP and the MUP.⁴⁸¹² Detainees were beaten with bare hands, batons, wooden poles, rifle butts, and electric cables.⁴⁸¹³ They were regularly interrogated about their involvement in military matters.⁴⁸¹⁴ During the interrogations, the guards beat the detainees, sometimes to the point that the detainees could no longer move.⁴⁸¹⁵ During the night, detainees were called out and beaten; at least five to ten detainees were called out every night.⁴⁸¹⁶

1400. Kovačević was in charge of the beatings; he was present and many times personally beat the detainees.⁴⁸¹⁸ He prepared lists of detainees to be beaten—a detainee could not be beaten until Kovačević ordered it.⁴⁸¹⁹ Because of his brutality, both the guards and the detainees feared Kovačević.⁴⁸²⁰ Popović and Talić were aware of the mistreatment.⁴⁸²¹ On one occasion, Popović came to the scene and angrily dispersed the military policemen who had been beating the detainees.⁴⁸²²

1401. On 3 July 1992, the Command of the 1st Krajina Corps was informed that efforts to stamp out the wilful mistreatment of prisoners at the hands of MP were proving increasingly difficult.⁴⁸²³ On 11 July 1992, during a meeting with senior MUP officials, Stojan Župljanin, Chief of Banja Luka CSB, stated that the conditions in Manjača were bad and that something had to be done.⁴⁸²⁴ On 16 July 1992, one of the camp authorities complained to the 1st Krajina Corps Command that the MP and the security commander, Staff Sergeant Mesar, “just don’t understand that the prisoners are humans and that they are protected by international regulations while in the camp”.⁴⁸²⁵ In a separate report filed a week later, the same individual warned the VRS MP commander that Manjača was “not a torture house but a camp of war prisoners”.⁴⁸²⁶ Furthermore, the ICRC reported that the beating of two detainees by the guards during a visit by the ICRC on 16 July 1992 resulted in the ICRC prematurely terminating its visit to the camp and that there were “frequent and widespread traces of recent and often severe beatings”.⁴⁸²⁷ In the same report, the ICRC criticised the living conditions in Manjača and recommended that Manjača be closed down.⁴⁸²⁸ This report

(c) Visits to Manjača and transfer of detainees

1402. On 18 June 1992, representatives from Merhamet, the VRS and the MUP as well as SDS officials from Banja Luka visited Manjača.⁴⁸³¹ Omer Filipović, a Bosnian Muslim detainee, told the visitors that the detainees had been taken from their homes and described the poor living conditions in the camp.⁴⁸³² On 24 June 1992, representatives of Merhamet delivered food and medical supplies to Manjača but were barred from having contact with the detainees.⁴⁸³³ On 6 July 1992, the Presidents of municipal, district and military courts in Banja Luka, together with prosecutors and the Military Legal Officer of the 1st Krajina Corps visited Manjača and discussed the possibility of instituting judicial proceedings against the detainees.⁴⁸³⁴ In response to a written request to the command of the 1st Krajina Corps by Merhamet, approximately 100 minors, elderly, and sick detainees were released around 10 July 1992.⁴⁸³⁵

1403. In mid-July 1992, representatives from the ICRC, accompanied by medical personnel, visited Manjača.⁴⁸³⁶ All of the detainees were registered and weighed by the ICRC.⁴⁸³⁷ The process lasted a number of days.⁴⁸³⁸ At the end of July 1992, Vojo Kuprešanin, the President of the ARK Assembly, visited Manjača and promised the detainees that the majority of them would be released promptly; this did not materialise and it caused unrest and anxiety amongst the detainees.⁴⁸³⁹ Sometime at the end of July or in early August, Župljanin and a number of other Serb officials visited Manjača and went to the stables, where they talked with some of the detainees.⁴⁸⁴⁰

1404. The ICRC representatives again visited Manjača on 28 July 1992; during this visit, they distributed mail and cigarettes to the detainees and conducted a number of interviews.⁴⁸⁴¹ In early August, the ICRC once again visited Manjača and this time demanded that more water be provided to the detainees.⁴⁸⁴² Prior to this visit, pursuant to an order issued by Mladić on 3 August 1992, Major General Talić had ordered the authorities in Manjača to, inter alia (i) ensure cleanliness and medical care for the detainees; (ii) prepare accurate records of the detainees' arrival and release as well as records of deaths and findings on their causes; and (iii) select a number of prisoner representatives.⁴⁸⁴³ On 8 August 1992, journalists, including members of foreign news agencies, were allowed to visit Manjača.⁴⁸⁴⁴ During this visit, the journalists requested to see the detainees who had arrived from Omarska two days prior but were not allowed to see them.⁴⁸⁴⁵ On 12 and 19 August 1992, foreign journalists again visited Manjača.⁴⁸⁴⁶ On 22 August 1992, the Prijedor SJB reported the transfer of a number of individuals from Manjača to Trnopolje.⁴⁸⁴⁷ On 24 August 1992, Milovanović ordered the authorities in Manjača to provide a list of the detainees and their places of residence so that such information could be forwarded to the ICRC.⁴⁸⁴⁸ On 31 August, a delegation from CSCE visited the camp and the ICRC brought food from Zagreb.⁴⁸⁴⁹

On the same day, a group of RS government representatives who had approval from Đerić took a tour of the camp in order to compile a report.⁴⁸⁵⁰ In late August 1992, representatives from the Bosanska Dubica, Ključ, Banja Luka, Prijedor, and Mrkonjić Grad CSBs came to Manjača in order to discuss “tasks and instructions for joint work”.⁴⁸⁵¹ In August and September 1992, more minors and elderly were released.⁴⁸⁵²

1405. On or about 1 September 1992, the ECMM visited Manjača.⁴⁸⁵³ During this visit, Popović insisted that the camp authorities adhered to all provisions of the Geneva Conventions while the detainees told the visitors that they were entirely civilians and that all soldiers had already been shot.⁴⁸⁵⁴ In early September 1992, RS civilian and military officials and ICRC representatives discussed the steps needed for the exchange of the detainees and the closure of Manjača.⁴⁸⁵⁵ On 11 September 1992, the Accused issued a decree, “granting amnesty from criminal prosecution” to 69 detainees at Manjača and Trnopolje.⁴⁸⁵⁶ On 16 September 1992, the ICRC visited Manjača for the seventh time; during this visit, Popović stated that the camp administration had taken steps to guarantee the mental and physical integrity of the detainees.⁴⁸⁵⁷ ICRC representatives, however, were of the view that Manjača should be closed as soon as possible, its civilian detainees released and the imprisoned soldiers transferred to suitable prisons.⁴⁸⁵⁸ On 19 September 1992, detainees were aken out of Manjača and exchanged.⁴⁸⁵⁹ Additional visits by the ICRC took place on 23 September and 30 September 1992.⁴⁸⁶⁰

1406. On 1 October 1992, Kuprešanin wrote to the RS Presidency, requesting the pardon and release of 13 detainees held at Manjača.⁴⁸⁶¹ On 3 and 4 October 1992, the ICRC visited Manjača and brought letters for the detainees, and visited again on 7 October in order to obtain a list of sick detainees.⁴⁸⁶² On 12 October 1992, the ICRC arrived with a list of sick persons; these detainees were released and taken abroad for treatment.⁴⁸⁶³ On 30 October 1992, the ICRC started working in the camp every day.⁴⁸⁶⁴ In addition to the ICRC, other organisations and renowned individuals such as Bernard Kouchner and Elie Wiesel visited the detainees.⁴⁸⁶⁵

1407. On 31 October 1992, about 60 detainees were exchanged.⁴⁸⁶⁶ Starting in November, preparatory measures were taken for the release and eventual transfer of all the detainees to third countries.⁴⁸⁶⁷ On 13 November, the Accused ordered the release of approximately 700 individuals from Manjača.⁴⁸⁶⁸ In the early hours of 14 November 1992, minors, elderly detainees, as well as those who were not considered to be “extremists” or “war criminals” by the camp authorities, were lined up; these detainees were told to sign a document which barred them from the territory of BiH and placed them under the authority of UNHCR for the purpose of their relocation to a Western European country.⁴⁸⁶⁹ Prior to this, Popović told the detainees that if they were ever captured in the territory of BiH, they would be killed instantly.⁴⁸⁷⁰ With the assistance of the ICRC, these detainees were released and taken to Karlovac in Croatia.⁴⁸⁷¹

On 13 December 1992, a group of 532 detainees was transferred from Manjača to Batković camp.⁴⁸⁷³ From Batković camp, some of these detainees were transferred to Kula Prison.⁴⁸⁷⁴ On 14 December 1992, a number of local journalists visited Manjača.⁴⁸⁷⁵ However, the detainees had been warned not to speak to the visitors for their own safety.⁴⁸⁷⁶ The remainder of the detainees in Manjača, after signing documents which required them to leave for third countries, were released on 14, 16, or 18 December 1992 and taken to Karlovac.⁴⁸⁷⁷ Manjača was then closed down.⁴⁸⁷⁸

(d) Conclusion

1410. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that during the period between 15 May and 18 December 1992, Serb Forces detained a large number of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat men, including minors, sick, and elderly, at Manjača and regularly subjected them to beatings and mistreatment. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions. These included lack of food and water, insufficient sanitary facilities and inadequate medical care.

(e) Scheduled Incident B.1.1

1411. The Indictment refers to the killing of at least six men in front of Manjača after their transportation from Hasan Kikić Elementary School in Sanski Most on or about 3 June 1992.⁴⁸⁷⁹

1412. As mentioned earlier, sometime in the first week of June 1992, members of Sanski Most SJB and SOS loaded approximately 140 non-Serb detainees held at Hasan Kikić School, in Sanski Most municipality, onto two trucks and departed for Manjača. The trucks were extremely crowded with approximately 70 detainees standing in each truck.⁴⁸⁸⁰

1413. Approximately six to seven hours later, the trucks stopped on the road next to the entrance gate of Manjača but the detainees were not allowed to exit.⁴⁸⁸¹ After waiting for 30 to 60 minutes standing beneath tarpaulins, the detainees were ordered to exit the trucks one by one.⁴⁸⁸² A group of 20 armed men in mixed and camouflage military uniforms, including Daniluško Kajtez, waited outside the trucks as the detainees exited.⁴⁸⁸³ The armed men beat the detainees with batons, wooden handles of shovels, and wooden planks as they exited the truck.⁴⁸⁸⁴ Six of the detainees, all Bosnian Muslim men, were subsequently separated from the rest.⁴⁸⁸⁵ Two of these six detainees were handcuffed and taken near a small truck.⁴⁸⁸⁶ The other four detainees were taken to different points approximately 15 metres away.⁴⁸⁸⁷ Subsequently, three to five armed men surrounded each of the detainees and beat them for approximately 20 minutes with multiple objects; all six detainees were killed.⁴⁸⁸⁸ The six bodies were then thrown into the small truck, and the rest of the detainees were taken to Manjača.⁴⁸⁸⁹

1414. The Chamber received forensic evidence which identifies six bodies as related to this incident.⁴⁸⁹⁰

1415. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that on 6 June 1992, Serb Forces killed six Bosnian Muslim men in front of the gates of Manjača.

(f) Scheduled Incident B.1.2

1416. The Indictment refers to the deaths of a number of prisoners who suffocated in trucks while being transported from Betonirka detention facility in Sanski Most to Manjača on 7 July 1992.

1417. In the morning of 7 July 1992, Serb policemen took approximately 64 detainees, most of them Bosnian Muslims, from the Betonirka factory garage, in Sanski Most municipality, and loaded them into a truck with tarpaulin cover.⁴⁸⁹¹ The detainees were crammed.⁴⁸⁹² The Serb policemen then pulled down and locked the tarpaulin cover, hermetically sealing the back of the truck.⁴⁸⁹³ Under escort of the Sanski Most civilian police, the truck joined a convoy of trucks transporting several hundred detainees from Krings Hall and Hasan Kikić sports hall, and together they headed for Manjača.⁴⁸⁹⁴

1418. The journey to Manjača lasted approximately 10 or 11 hours.⁴⁸⁹⁵ It was very hot that day, and there was no ventilation for the detainees beneath the sealed canvas tarpaulin of the truck from Betonirka factory garage.⁴⁸⁹⁶ During the journey, fumes from the exhaust pipe of the truck flowed in, making it difficult for the detainees to breathe.⁴⁸⁹⁷ The detainees squeezed their shoes in between the tarpaulin and the truck frame in order to allow air in, but the policemen hit the shoes back inside the truck at the check-points.⁴⁸⁹⁸ By the time the truck stopped a second time at a check-point in Vrhpolje, the detainees had finished the six litres of water given to them at the beginning of the journey, and the guards refused to provide them additional water.⁴⁸⁹⁹ A detainee resorted to drinking his own urine.⁴⁹⁰⁰ As the journey continued, a number of detainees began to faint and die.⁴⁹⁰¹ When the truck finally reached Manjača around sunset, the detainees were called out one by one by name.⁴⁹⁰² Of the detainees, 24 did not respond and remained lying on the floor of the truck.⁴⁹⁰³ As the camp officials refused to take the dead and unwell detainees, they were taken back to Sanski Most along with Edin Bišćević, a detained Bosnian Muslim doctor who had volunteered to resuscitate those who were unwell.⁴⁹⁰⁴ Edin Bišćević and the unwell detainees who were taken back to Sanski Most have never been seen alive again.⁴⁹⁰⁵

According to a report compiled by two Bosnian Serb doctors, 20 detainees died from asphyxia during the transfer from Betonirka to Manjača. In light of this evidence, the Chamber finds that four of the detainees did not suffocate in the tarpaulin covered truck and were taken back to Sanski Most alive. The Indictment limits the victims of Scheduled Incident B.1.2 to “prisoners who suffocated in trucks while being transported from Betornika detention facility to Manjača”.

1419. The Chamber received forensic evidence which identifies a number of bodies as being related to this incident.⁴⁹⁰⁶ Furthermore, the Manjača authorities reported to the 1st Krajina Corps Command on 8 and 9 July 1992 that 24 individuals had died during transportation to Manjača.⁴⁹⁰⁷

1420. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that on 7 July 1992, Serb Forces forced a number of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat men detained at Betonirka factory garage to board a tarpaulin covered truck which was bound for Manjača and that due to the lack of sufficient ventilation, 20 detainees suffocated during transportation.

As noted above, the Indictment limits the scope of Scheduled Incident B.1.2 to “prisoners who suffocated in trucks while being transported from Betornika detention facility to Manjača”.

⁴⁹⁰⁶ According to Mašović, the remains of 21 victims of Scheduled Incident B.1.2 have been identified. These victims are Jasmin Bajrektarević, Adam Delić, Mirsad Halimović, Hivzo Hodžić, Ismet Hodžić, Sevdaga Hukanović, Adem Jakupović, Ramo Jusić, Fadil Kamić, Vinko Matanović, Izet Mehić, Josip Mlinar, Dževad Muhić, Nedžad Muhić, Zijad Mujadžić, Kelo Talić, Edin Bišćević, Enver Burnić, Mirhad Delić, Ibrahim Mušić, and Ivica Tutić. The first 16 victims were exhumed from the Ušće Dabra mass grave, in Sanski Most municipality, on 17 July 2001 whereas the last five victims were exhumed from the Dragoraj mass grave, in Mrkonjić Grad municipality on 19 April 2000. The Chamber, however, notes that from the 21 victims referred to by Mašović, only 15 are included in P724 (List of civilians killed during transport to Manjača). These individuals are Sevdaga Hukanović, Josip Mlinar, Vinko Matanović, Hivzo Hodžić, Fadil Kamić, Mirsad Halimović, Kemo Talić, Nedžad Muhić, Dževad Muhić, Ibrahim Mušić, Mirhad Delić, Ramo Jusić, Ivica Tutić, Ismet Hodžić, and Zijad Mujadžić.

(g) Scheduled Incident B.1.3

1421. The Indictment refers to the killings of a number of men in front of Manjača upon their arrival from Omarska camp on or about 6 August 1992.

1422. As mentioned earlier, on the night of 6 August 1992, approximately 1,300 detainees were brought to the gates of Manjača from Omarska and made to spend the night in the buses in which they had travelled.⁴⁹⁰⁸ At one point, members of the Prijedor SJB's intervention squad took out a number of detainees, including Dedo Crnalić and Jasko Alisić, from the buses, took them behind some agricultural machines nearby and slit their throats.⁴⁹⁰⁹ One of the guards who killed Crnalić wiped his bloody knife on Crnalić's shirt.⁴⁹¹⁰ The next day, during the roll call of the detainees, Dedo Crnalić's name was called first.⁴⁹¹¹ Members of the intervention squad who at that time were standing next to the bus began laughing and said: "There he is on top of that pile."⁴⁹¹² Later, the detainees heard that in addition to Crnalić and Alisić, the members of the intervention squad had killed six or seven detainees in front of the gates of Manjača, including Nezir Krak, Nihad Basić, and a man by the name Djuzin.⁴⁹¹³ After Popović refused to accept the dead bodies into the camp, members of the Prijedor SJB loaded them on the buses and drove off in the direction of Banja Luka.⁴⁹¹⁴

1423. The Chamber has received forensic evidence which identifies a number of bodies as related to this incident.⁴⁹¹⁵

1424. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that on 6 August 1992, Serb Forces separated at least eight or nine Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the group of detainees who had arrived at the gates of Manjača from Omarska and killed them.

(h) Scheduled Incident B.1.4

1425. The Indictment refers to the killings of at least 10 men in Manjača between 1 June and 18 December 1992.

1426. On 10 July 1992, the guards at Manjača beat Emir Mulalić to death.⁴⁹¹⁶ The guards then called in a detainee who was also a doctor.⁴⁹¹⁷ Since Popović had ordered that the cause of death of the detainees who died from beatings be falsified, the doctor confirmed Mulalić's death but reported that he had died from a heart attack.⁴⁹¹⁸

1427. On 24 June 1992, Zlatan Miškić was taken to Manjača and died some hours later.⁴⁹¹⁹ On the night of 29 July 1992, Željko Bulatović called out Omer Filipović and Esad Bender to the isolation rooms where they were severely beaten.⁴⁹²⁰ Filipović died as a result of the beatings that night, but Bender was brought back around midnight. He crawled into the stable, bleeding and crying for help; no one assisted him out of fear of the guards.⁴⁹²¹ Around 7 a.m. the next morning,

Dr. Eniz Šabanović checked Bender's pulse and confirmed he was dead.⁴⁹²² Later that morning, the bodies of Filipović and Bender were wrapped in blankets and loaded into a vehicle with a JNA license plate.⁴⁹²³ The guards called out at least eleven other detainees, including a minor, at night and beat them to death.⁴⁹²⁴

1428. Around 10 p.m. on 3 August 1992, guards began beating a detainee named Stipo.⁴⁹²⁵ Stipo fought back and Bulatović subsequently shot him dead.⁴⁹²⁶

1429. The Chamber took judicial notice between June and November 1992, at least 10 detainees died inside Manjača as a result of beatings or of sporadic killings.⁴⁹²⁷ The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that Popović ordered that death certificates, giving a false account of the cause of death of detainees who were killed as a result of beatings inside Manjača, be issued.⁴⁹²⁸ In addition, the Chamber received forensic evidence which identifies two bodies as related to this incident.⁴⁹²⁹

1430. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that between 1 June and 18 December 1992, Serb Forces killed at minimum 15 Bosnian Muslim men detained in Manjača.

(B) Bosanski Novi

(1) Charges

1431. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Bosanski Novi as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁴⁹³⁰

1432. Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Bosanski Novi by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over as well as in the Mlakve football stadium, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁴⁹³¹ (ii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in the Mlakve football stadium, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁴⁹³² (iii) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁴⁹³³ (iv) unlawful detention in the Mlakve football stadium;⁴⁹³⁴ (v) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over in Bosanski Novi, during arrests and detention, and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;⁴⁹³⁵ (vi) the wanton destruction of private property, including homes and business premises, and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁴⁹³⁶ and (vii) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁴⁹³⁷

1433. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁴⁹³⁸ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Bosanski Novi in which they had been lawfully present.⁴⁹³⁹ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory

(2) Lead-up

1434. Bosanski Novi is a municipality in northwest BiH bordered by the municipalities of Bosanski Krupa, Sanski Most, Prijedor, and Bosanski Dubica.⁴⁹⁴¹ The Una River runs along the northwestern edge of the municipality, also forming part of the border between BiH and Croatia.⁴⁹⁴² In 1991, the population of Bosanski Novi was approximately 42,000, consisting of 33.7% Muslims, 60.2% Serbs, and approximately 6% other ethnicities.⁴⁹⁴³ The Japra valley area in particular, including Suhača and Blagaj, was inhabited predominantly by Bosnian Muslims, while the villages of Maslovare, Gvozdeni, Vitasovci, and Radomirovac had large Serb populations, and the village of Jošava was exclusively a Serb village.⁴⁹⁴⁴ The village of Blagaj is divided by the Sana River into Blagaj Japra and Blagaj Rijeka.⁴⁹⁴⁵

1435. Following the multi-party elections in 1990, the SDS won the majority of seats in Bosanski Novi.⁴⁹⁴⁶ Gavro Bogić was elected as President of the SDS and Radomir Pašić was elected as President of the Municipal Assembly.⁴⁹⁴⁷

1436. Prior to the 1990 elections and the start of the war in Croatia, inter-ethnic relations between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims in Bosanski Novi were generally good.⁴⁹⁴⁸ However, following the start of the war in Croatia, there were increasing inter-ethnic tensions between them.⁴⁹⁴⁹ When the war broke out in Croatia, border points were closed in Bosanski Novi, among other areas, and movement was restricted.⁴⁹⁵⁰

1437. As early as 1991 and at the beginning of 1992, Bosnian Muslims began to be dismissed from their employment.⁴⁹⁵¹ In mid-April 1992, the newly appointed Serb police chief dismissed all Muslim police officers in Bosanski Novi because they refused to sign an oath of loyalty to the Serb authorities; however, even the Muslims who signed this paper were fired and sent home as well.⁴⁹⁵² The remaining police officers were issued with a new camouflage uniform with a Serb flag on the epaulette.⁴⁹⁵³ Bosnian Muslims who worked in companies, administrative organs, and institutions in Bosanski Novi were required to sign an oath and were also dismissed from their jobs.⁴⁹⁵⁴

1438. In April 1992, check-points manned by Bosnian Serb soldiers wearing JNA uniforms were established, including between Hozići and Donji Agići and between Suhača and Jošava.⁴⁹⁵⁵ Movement was also restricted.⁴⁹⁵⁶ The soldiers at these specific check-points only checked the papers of Bosnian Muslims.⁴⁹⁵⁷

1439. Pašić received the Variant A/B Instructions from the SDS Main Board,⁴⁹⁵⁸ pursuant to which the SDS formed the Bosanski Novi Crisis Staff in April 1992.⁴⁹⁵⁹ Bosanski Novi was a Variant A municipality as Bosnian Serbs were the majority in the municipality.⁴⁹⁶⁰ After receiving the RS government instructions on the work of the Crisis Staffs, the Bosanski Novi Crisis Staff re-

The Chamber received contrary evidence from Radomir Pašić that Muslims were not dismissed from employment and that such ultimatum did not occur and that moreover, it was still relatively peaceful in April 1992. He also testified that Bosnian Muslims "refused to work at the police station, although we asked them to". organised itself on 20 May 1992 to “take over the prerogatives and functions” of the Municipal Assembly.⁴⁹⁶¹ As a result, Pašić, who was President of the Bosanski Novi Municipal Assembly, became President of the Bosanski Novi Crisis Staff.⁴⁹⁶²

1440. In the Muslim village of Suhača, in particular, discussions with SDS representatives from the village of Jošava about the handover of Muslim weapons began in late March 1992.⁴⁹⁶³ At the end of April 1992, the SDA President in Suhača informed the villagers that he had reached an agreement with the SDS members in Bosanski Novi, including Ranko Balaban, President of the SDS in Jošava, that if they surrendered their weapons to the Serbs, they would be allowed to go on living as before.⁴⁹⁶⁴ The next day, the Bosnian Muslims of Suhača surrendered their weapons to the Serb MP at a check-point between Suhača and Jošava.⁴⁹⁶⁵ Following the surrender of weapons, the villagers were instructed to go to a field in Jošava while they waited for all of the houses in Suhača to be searched by Serb soldiers, accompanied by two Bosnian Muslim civilians.⁴⁹⁶⁶

1441. On 4 May 1992, the SDS in Bosanski Novi held talks with representatives from the SDA in an attempt to find a compromise that would compel all citizens, Serbs, Muslims, and Croats, in Bosanski Novi to hand in illegally held weapons to the TO or to the Bosanski Novi SJB; on the same day, the ARK government issued an order for mobilisation, instructing the surrender of weapons by 11 May 1992, and imposed a curfew for all citizens in the ARK.⁴⁹⁶⁷ In line with this order, on or around 9 May 1992, the Bosanski Novi Crisis Staff under Radomir Pašić issued an ultimatum over Bosanski Novi radio for Bosnian Muslims in the municipality to hand in their

(3) Attacks against Bosnian Muslim villages

(a) Blagaj village

1442. After the deadline for the surrender of weapons expired on 11 May 1992, conflict started in the Blagaj area.⁴⁹⁷⁰ At 1 a.m. on 14 May 1992, pursuant to orders from Pašić, Serb soldiers fired 13 shells on Blagaj from Izba, a hill overlooking Bosanski Novi.⁴⁹⁷¹ Shells were fired into the village for two days, wounding civilians.⁴⁹⁷² The shelling caused damage to houses of Bosnian Muslims but did not kill anyone.⁴⁹⁷³

1443. On 14 May 1992, a Bosnian Muslim delegation went to speak with Drago Ninić, the SDS president of the neighbouring village of Petkovac, to tell the Bosnian Serbs that Bosnian Muslims in Blagaj did not have weapons.⁴⁹⁷⁴ The meeting with Ninić also included Bogić, Bosanski Novi SDS President.⁴⁹⁷⁵ The Serbs did not want to speak to this delegation and demanded that three Bosnian Muslim men in particular be brought to them because they had weapons.⁴⁹⁷⁶ These men went to talk to the Bosnian Serbs again, when they were also told that “Serbs and Muslims could Despite an intercepted conversation between Major Željaja and Colonel Dević stating that Pašić ordered the attack on Blagaj, Pašić denied that the attack on Blagaj was carried out pursuant to his orders; according to Pašić, as the President of the Municipal Assembly and the President of the Crisis Staff, he did not have the authority to issue such orders or to activate anything in a military sense. Radomir Pašić, T. 41038–41043 (9 July 2013). See P6436 (Summary of intercepted conversation, 11 May 1992). However, the Chamber does not find Pašić's evidence on this issue to be reliable. not live together any longer”.⁴⁹⁷⁷ They reached an agreement that the Bosnian Muslims would gather all of the weapons into the school.⁴⁹⁷⁸

1444. However, the shelling of Blagaj resumed at around 2 p.m., hours before the delegation had even returned from Petkovac.⁴⁹⁷⁹ The shells originated from Huzeirovica Brda.⁴⁹⁸⁰ That evening, a group of 500 villagers, including women and children, formed a column walking to a house of a Bosnian Serb, who had previously been on good terms with Bosnian Muslims, in Maslovare.⁴⁹⁸¹ They were stopped on the road by a group of 50 armed men led by Mićo Karlica; these armed men wore green camouflage uniforms with badges showing the four “S” insignia, and cockades on their hats.⁴⁹⁸² The villagers were told, at gun point, to surrender all weapons; they handed over all of their hunting weapons and were then allowed to continue to the house.⁴⁹⁸³ Later, the same soldiers who confiscated their weapons came to the house and shot at the villagers; one Bosnian Muslim man was wounded, and another was shot dead.⁴⁹⁸⁴

1445. The next day, 15 May 1992, Captain Bogdan Grab, wearing camouflage and a red beret, arrived in Maslovare with a group of approximately 20 soldiers, and started insulting the villagers.⁴⁹⁸⁵ Later, Grab’s soldiers took 15 Bosnian Muslim men and made them walk in front of the Serbs to “clear” the village of Blagaj but did not find anything.⁴⁹⁸⁶ There, the Bosnian Serbs placed flags depicting the four Cyrillic “S” symbols around the village.⁴⁹⁸⁷ On the same day, the villagers were allowed to return to the village.⁴⁹⁸⁸ The shooting continued all around Blagaj and the villagers were surrounded and could not leave.⁴⁹⁸⁹ On the same day, the mosque and houses of Bosnian Muslims were set on fire.⁴⁹⁹⁰

1446. According to Alić, after 15 May 1992, Bosnian Muslims from Blagaj Japra were “taken away in droves for questioning” in Bosanski Novi by MP wearing red berets.⁴⁹⁹¹

1447. On 24 May 1992, Bosnian Serb soldiers took valuables and money from Bosnian Muslims in Blagaj Rijeka and Blagaj Japra, and houses in Blagaj Rijeka were looted and set on fire.⁴⁹⁹²

(b) Suhača village

1448. Three days after the villagers surrendered their weapons in May 1992, Suhača was shelled beginning at 6:30 a.m. and continued for the next seven days.⁴⁹⁹³ The shells were fired from the hills surrounding Suhača, from the direction of the villages of Jošava and Krslje, both Serb villages, mainly targeting areas of the village where the mosques were located.⁴⁹⁹⁴ During the shelling of Suhača, its inhabitants took shelter in the basements of houses.⁴⁹⁹⁵

1449. One day when there was no shelling, soldiers came to Suhača and told the villagers that the town would be attacked and that they could not protect the villagers.⁴⁹⁹⁶ They were therefore told to leave and retreat towards Bosanski Novi where it would be decided where they would go.⁴⁹⁹⁷ After the shelling of Suhača, Bosnian Serb soldiers entered the village and looted the houses.⁴⁹⁹⁸

(c) Other villages in the Japra valley

1450. The Chamber took judicial notice that on 11 May 1992, Bosnian Serb forces shelled the Bosnian Muslim village of Gornji Agići.⁴⁹⁹⁹ On 23 May 1992, Muslim villages in the Japra valley, Brđanin*), T. 13969. However, on cross-examination in this case, KDZ011 confirmed his testimony in the Krajišnik case, stating that houses in Suhača remained intact after the shelling, except for abandoned houses on the hills around the village. KDZ011, T. 21241 (10 November 2011). Based on KDZ011’s conflicting evidence on this issue, the Chamber is not satisfied that houses in Suhača were damaged during the shelling of the village.

(4) Scheduled Incident D.4

1451. The Indictment refers to the destruction of nine mosques in Bosanski Novi which occurred at least between March and June 1992.⁵⁰⁰¹

1452. In May 1992, the old wooden mosque in Blagaj Rijeka and the mosque in Blagaj Japra were shelled and set on fire by soldiers, destroying their minarets.⁵⁰⁰² During the shelling of Suhača, the two mosques in the village, the Stara Suhača and the Suhača mosques, were also badly damaged.⁵⁰⁰³

1453. In early May or June 1992, the town mosque in Bosanski Novi, Gradska Džamija, was shelled, set on fire by Bosnian Serb soldiers, and destroyed.⁵⁰⁰⁴ The walls were badly damaged but the minaret remained standing.⁵⁰⁰⁵ Heavy machinery was brought from Prijedor in order to knock down the minaret.⁵⁰⁰⁶ When the mosque was destroyed, trucks arrived to remove the rubble from the mosque and the site was then flattened and used as a parking lot; the tombs of the cemetery

Pašić maintains that there was no shelling of these villages “to his knowledge” with heavy weaponry and that only searches for illegal weapons occurred; furthermore, Pašić testified that the authorities did not order or give instructions to destroy or burn property “just because it is Muslim”. D3849 (Witness statement of Radimir Pašić dated 5 July 2013), pp. 6, 22–23; Radimir Pašić, T. 41043–41046 (9 July 2013). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable based on the Chamber's observations about his contradictory evidence and low credibility.

⁵⁰⁰¹ The Indictment refers to the following nine mosques: Stara Suhača mosque, the Suhača mosque, the mosque in Blagaj Japra, the mosques in Prekosanje, Urije, and Gornji Agići, the old wooden mosque in Blagaj Rijeka, the town mosque in Bosanski Novi (Gradska Džamija), and the Vidorije mosque. were also removed.⁵⁰⁰⁷ The Vidoriје mosque was burned down in May 1992 and its minaret was destroyed.⁵⁰⁰⁸ The mosques in Prekosanje, Urije, and Gornji Agići were also destroyed during the summer months of 1992.⁵⁰⁰⁹

1454. The Chamber has considered the evidence it has received which identified Serb Forces as responsible for the destruction of mosques in Bosanski Novi in May and June 1992.⁵⁰¹⁰ It also had regard to the fact that almost all mosques in the municipality sustained heavy damage or were completely destroyed after Serb Forces took over the municipality. Having weighed these factors, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Serb Forces were responsible for the attacks on and destruction of mosques in Bosanski Novi.

1455. The Chamber therefore finds that nine mosques in Bosanski Novi municipality were destroyed or heavily damaged by Serb Forces in May and June 1992.

(5) Movement of the population within and from Bosanski Novi

1456. On 20 May 1992, the SDS Municipal Board adopted three decisions regarding the situation in Bosanski Novi: (i) all citizens who wanted to leave Bosanski Novi were “enabled to do so peacefully”; (ii) all measures and activities that could be aimed at driving out residents were strictly prohibited; and (iii) all citizens who wanted to remain were required to be loyal to RS.⁵⁰¹¹ In line with these decisions, Pašić began to look for solutions, including negotiating with UNPROFOR and other representatives, “to enable Muslims who wished to leave Bosanski Novi”.⁵⁰¹²

⁵⁰¹⁰ See paras. 1444–1445, 1448–1449. In his final brief, the Accused argues that there is no evidence that official authorities in Bosanski Novi ordered or otherwise participated in the destruction of the mosques there. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1503. Furthermore, according to Pašić, there was no organised destruction of mosques and all mosques were set on fire by paramilitaries, or “unknown perpetrators”. D3849 (Witness statement of Radomir Pašić dated 5 July 2013), pp. 18, 27. However, the Chamber has considered the evidence before it and given its findings on the destructions of mosques in Bosanski Novi as well as its assessment of Pašić’s credibility, the Chamber does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard. 1457. On 24 May 1992, between 8,000 and 10,000 Bosnian Muslim men, women, and children from various villages in the Japra valley, including 1,200 Bosnian Muslims from Suhača, left the valley in a convoy of cars, tractors, and horse-drawn carts.⁵⁰¹³ They headed to Blagaj Japra.⁵⁰¹⁴

1458. Meanwhile, SDA President and representative of Suhača, Sifet Barjaktarević, negotiated with Bosanski Novi municipal authorities regarding the safe passage of this convoy to Croatia.⁵⁰¹⁵ An MP patrol sent the convoy towards Bosanski Novi, accompanied by two military trucks with Bosnian Serb soldiers.⁵⁰¹⁶ Bosnian Serb soldiers wearing JNA uniforms intercepted the convoy at Blagaj Japra bridge⁵⁰¹⁷ and demanded that they leave their property and board a train headed towards Banja Luka.⁵⁰¹⁸ When they refused, the convoy was forced to return to Blagaj where it remained guarded by armed Bosnian Serb soldiers until 9 June 1992.⁵⁰¹⁹ Freedom of movement was limited and special permission was required to leave the village, making it feel “like a prison camp”.⁵⁰²⁰

1459. On 26 May 1992, Charles Kirudja, the Chief Civil Affairs Officer and Civil Affairs Co-ordinator for UNPROFOR in UN Protected Area Sector North, a UN protected area in Croatia adjacent to the northwestern boarder of BiH, met with Jugoslav Borojević, Mayor of Dvor in Croatia.⁵⁰²¹ Borojević told Kirudja that Pašić had requested the passage of 5,000 Bosnian Muslims from Bosanski Novi who were leaving the municipality “voluntarily” and would travel through Krajina to Austria and Slovenia.⁵⁰²² Kirudja asked how Serb authorities could speak about the 1462. On 8 June 1992, the villagers in Blagaj were told by Bosnian Serbs to move out of the village.⁵⁰³² On the morning of 9 June 1992, a bus full of Bosnian Serb soldiers, a truck, and a tank drove through Blagaj from the direction of Svodna.⁵⁰³³ In Troske village, the soldiers got off the bus and the tank turned around and stopped 500 metres from Blagaj, and pointed its cannon toward the village.⁵⁰³⁴ The soldiers began firing infantry weapons at civilians in the village and there were explosions from houses and houses were shot at and burned.⁵⁰³⁵ The attack lasted about two hours, and those staying in the village fled towards the bridge in the direction of Blagaj Rijeka in order to escape.⁵⁰³⁶ However, at the bridge, the Bosnian Muslim men, women, and children were stopped by masked Bosnian Serb soldiers from neighbouring villages, some of whom wore civilian clothing while the rest were wearing green camouflage uniforms.⁵⁰³⁷ The soldiers instructed them to hand over all of their personal belongings, including money, gold, jewellery, identification cards, photographs, and papers and keys for cars.⁵⁰³⁸ The soldiers threatened to kill anyone if they were later found with money or gold.⁵⁰³⁹

A group of the Bosnian Muslim men was instructed by soldiers to lie down in the road in two rows 50 metres away from the tank pointing at them and their pockets were searched again.⁵⁰⁴² A Bosnian Serb from Jošava, nicknamed “Trnka”, ordered Alić’s brother and two other men to leave the formation, and led them away and shot them.⁵⁰⁴³ While the remaining men were lying on the road, the tank was ordered to drive over them by a bearded man called “Vojvoda”.⁵⁰⁴⁴ The tank began driving towards them but was stopped by an officer who came from the direction of the bridge and ordered that the people be removed from the road, stating that no one should be killed that way.⁵⁰⁴⁵ The men lying on the road were taken to the Japra Company compound.⁵⁰⁴⁶ Later, the Bosnian Serbs soldiers called five men to step forward; however, only three of the five men were still alive and stepped forward.⁵⁰⁴⁷ The remaining men were loaded onto train cars waiting at the compound by the soldiers.⁵⁰⁴⁸

1465. In total, approximately 4,000 to 8,000 Bosnian Muslims were loaded onto 22 train cars, used to transport cattle, at Blagaj Japra by members of the Municipal TO Staff and the MP.⁵⁰⁴⁹ Women and children were loaded onto the train cars first and the men were loaded on after; the cars were tightly packed with people with no space left.⁵⁰⁵⁰ Alić was one of the last ones to board and witnessed two individuals taken off the train and shot by a Bosnian Serb man.⁵⁰⁵¹ Guarded by the members of the Bosanski Novi SJB, the train left in the direction of Banja Luka and stopped in Ostruzna, a village near Doboj, the next morning.⁵⁰⁵² In Ostruzna, the men were separated from the women and children by a soldier, nicknamed “Jovo” or “Joja”.⁵⁰⁵³ The women, children, and men above 60 years old were put in the front part of the train and the remaining carriages were filled with men between 15 and 60 years old.⁵⁰⁵⁴ The carriages were separated and the women and children were taken to Doboj, while the men, numbering approximately 700 to 750, were loaded onto four train cars and sent to Banja Luka.⁵⁰⁵⁵

1466. The men spent the night on the train in Banja Luka, where they were mistreated and cursed at by Bosnian Serb soldiers.⁵⁰⁵⁶ On the morning of 11 June 1992, the train continued to Bosanski Novi, stopping once in Blagaj where men on the train had water for the first time in two days.⁵⁰⁵⁷ While in Blagaj, Alić saw Bosnian Serbs taking possessions from their houses.⁵⁰⁵⁸ The men were then loaded back into the train cars and taken to Mlakve Football Stadium.⁵⁰⁵⁹ No food was given to them during the entire period spent in the railway carriages and there were no hygienic facilities aboard.⁵⁰⁶⁰

1467. At the end of June or beginning of July 1992, the Bosanski Novi Crisis Staff issued instructions regulating the conditions for people to be allowed to leave the municipality.⁵⁰⁶¹ On 6 July 1992, Pašić sent a letter to Kirudja repeating his claim that Bosnian Muslims from Bosanski Novi were leaving the municipality voluntarily, and stating that Bosnian Serb authorities had offered to provide buses and security for them.⁵⁰⁶² Between 7 and 10 July 1992, Kirudja met with officials from Dvor and Bosanski Novi and they informed Kirudja that Bosnian Muslims leaving Bosanski Novi were required to sign a statement indicating that they left voluntarily, and to prove that they had either sold, exchanged, or donated their houses and all other immovable property.⁵⁰⁶³ Persons who did not own property had to obtain an official document from the municipal land registry office certifying this and those who owned property were required to draft a contract either leaving the property to the Serbs or the Serb state, or simply renouncing it.⁵⁰⁶⁴ Persons wishing to leave also had to provide a list of all the members of the household, obtain a certificate showing that they had no previous convictions, obtain a certificate showing that all utility bills were paid; obtain documentation from the municipal secretariat for national defence stating that they had completed military service; and obtain a document from the SJB allowing them to leave.⁵⁰⁶⁵ All documents had to state that the action taken was on a voluntary basis.⁵⁰⁶⁶

1468. The Bosanski Novi authorities informed Kirudja that they had processed applications from 3,000 to 5,000 people who fulfilled the criteria.⁵⁰⁶⁷ On the basis of this information, Kirudja ⁵⁰⁶⁵ Adjudicated Fact 2292.

⁵⁰⁶⁶ Adjudicated Fact 2292. According to Pašić, Bosnian Muslims leaving Bosanski Novi were allowed to make their own decisions regarding their property, including that they could take all of their personal property, including vehicles, with them. With regard to real estate, they were allowed to sell it, swap it, give it for safekeeping, or cede it to other refugees, and made decisions in this regard without any duress and influence from the municipal authorities. Moreover, according to Pašić, a majority of the property referred to in the certificates was “completely legally replaced” with Serbian assets from Croatia and the contracts signed by Muslims were only “temporary” until the situation calmed down. D3849 (Witness statement of Radomir Pašić dated 5 July 2013), pp. 10–11, 25–26; Radomir Pašić, T. 41079–41086 (9 July 2013). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considered the significant body of evidence supporting that Bosnian Muslims were forced to sign over their property and finds that Pašić gave inconsistent and evasive evidence in this regard.

⁵⁰⁶⁷ P3804 (Witness statement of Charles Kirudja dated 17 November 2010), para. 84.

concluded that the Bosnian Muslims were not leaving Bosanski Novi voluntarily and he informed the Serb authorities that UNPROFOR did not wish their departure if they did not want to leave.⁵⁰⁶⁸ Moreover, Kirudja concluded that there was a strategy to ethnically cleanse the area by the Serb authorities and they were using the UN Protected Area in Sector North as an exit point.⁵⁰⁶⁹

1469. However, between 20 and 21 July 1992, Kirudja and other international authorities became increasingly concerned about the safety of the convoy and ultimately, the Croatian authorities agreed to accept the Bosnian Muslims and UNHCR agreed to organise the transportation with UNPROFOR's assistance, stating they "preferred 4,000 more refugees than 4,000 more bodies".⁵⁰⁷⁰

1470. Although originally intended to be 4,000 people, on 23 July 1992, a convoy of between 9,000 and 11,000 Bosnian Muslims and some Bosnian Croats, including between 600 and 700 detainees from Mlakve Football Stadium and a large number from Prijedor, Bosanska Kostajnica, and Bosanska Dubica, were ultimately transported to Karlovac, and later to third countries.⁵⁰⁷¹

1471. The Bosanski Novi SJB reported that by 23 July 1992, it had "de-registered" 5,629 Muslims who had applied to leave the municipality "voluntarily".⁵⁰⁷² Of the approximately 14,000 Bosnian Muslims living in Bosanski Novi prior to the conflict, roughly 1,000 Muslims remained behind following the departure of the convoy to Karlovac on 23 July 1992.⁵⁰⁷³ In sum, by the end of 1992, the majority of Bosnian Muslims had left Bosanski Novi.⁵⁰⁷⁴ According to KDZ011, not a single ⁵⁰⁷² D1921 (Report of Bosanski Novi SJB, 15 August 1992), p. 4. See also Adjudicated Fact 2293.

⁵⁰⁷³ See Adjudicated Fact 672. In August 1992, Kirudja and other international authorities were pressed by Serb authorities to assist in the evacuation of thousands more refugees, primarily Bosnian Muslims, from Sanski Most, Prijedor, Bosanska Krupa, and Bosanska Kostajnica through Sector North, claiming that if they did not assist, "the Muslims will suffer". Pašić warned Kirudja that "[i]f we are left to resolve the matter by ourselves, we will resolve it very quickly". However, the international authorities responded that they would not succumb to further "blackmail" and refused to assist in any further "evacuations" of non-Serbs out of BiH. P3804 (Witness statement of Charles Kirudja dated 17 November 2010), paras. 101–118; P2941 (Article from The Associated Press, 11 August 1992) (under seal); P3856 (UNPROFOR report, 5 September 1992), pp. 3–5.

⁵⁰⁷⁴ In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that by 1997, very few Bosnian Muslims had returned to Bosanski Novi. In 1991, approximately 33.7% of the population of Bosanski Novi was Muslim and in 1995, 4.8% of the population was Muslim and in 1997, Muslims only comprised 2.7% of the population. P4994 (Addendum to Ewa Tabeau's expert report entitled "Ethnic Composition in Internally Displaced Persons and Refugees from 27 Municipalities of BiH 1991 to 1997", 3 February 2009), pp. 23–24, 104. See also P10

Bosnian Muslim remained in the town of Suhača by the end of 1992.⁵⁰⁷⁵ When Alić returned to Blagaj after the war, he found Bosnian Serbs living in his house, after being given permission by authorities.⁵⁰⁷⁶ He observed that there were only 64 houses still in good condition after the war and they were all occupied by Bosnian Serbs.⁵⁰⁷⁷

1472. Having considered the totality of the evidence and assessed the circumstances in which departures occurred, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave Bosanski Novi.

(6) Scheduled Detention Facility C.4.1

1473. The Indictment refers to a detention facility at the Mlakve football stadium which operated at least between May and July 1992.

1474. On 2 June 1992, members of the Bosanski Novi TO and MP brought between 300 and 350 non-Serbs to the Mlakve football stadium (“Mlakve Football Stadium”) and detained them there for four days.⁵⁰⁷⁸ On 6 June 1992, Kirudja was informed by members of the Danish UNPROFOR team in Sector North that they had seen 350 men gathered at the stadium; they were then seen being loaded onto buses and driven off to an unknown destination in BiH.⁵⁰⁷⁹ The observers also saw that approximately 100 women and children, with their heads covered in clothes and carrying plastic bags, had been brought into the stadium with ten armed guards; Kirudja later learned that the women and children had likely been delivering provisions to the men held in the stadium.⁵⁰⁸⁰

1475. On 11 June 1992, the train coming from Banja Luka arrived at the stadium, where soldiers with machine guns ordered the men off the train and instructed them to go inside the empty stadium.⁵⁰⁸¹ From early June until the end of August 1992, at least 700 Bosnian Muslim civilian men, some elderly, from Bosanski Novi municipality were confined at the Mlakve Football

Stadium; some of these men were transferred from the Omarska, Trnopolje, and Keraterm camps.⁵⁰⁸²

1476. The detainees at Mlakve Football Stadium were guarded by Bosnian Serb soldiers, as well as reservists, including Ranko Balaban, former SDS President in Jošava, and Momčilo Kenjalo.⁵⁰⁸³ Once a week on Wednesdays, the guards would change shifts.⁵⁰⁸⁴

1477. For the duration of their detention, the stadium was fenced in and the detainees were not allowed to leave.⁵⁰⁸⁵ Although no detainees were killed during their detention at the stadium,⁵⁰⁸⁶ beatings did take place,⁵⁰⁸⁷ and this included beatings when drunk Bosnian Serb soldiers returned from the front.⁵⁰⁸⁸ As a result of the beating inflicted by a Bosnian Serb soldier, a detainee was blinded in one eye.⁵⁰⁸⁹ Detainees were also verbally mistreated; the guards cursed, taunted and threatened the detainees with death, and subjected them to ethnic slurs.⁵⁰⁹⁰ A Bosnian Serb soldier with a gun forced detainees to graze grass like animals, for the purposes of humiliating them.⁵⁰⁹¹

1478. The quantity of food was not sufficient and detainees received at most two small meals a day; access to water was also limited to twice a day.⁵⁰⁹² Detainees lost considerable weight—Alić lost 18 kilograms and KDZ011 lost 11 kilograms—during their detention.⁵⁰⁹³

⁵⁰⁸² See Adjudicated Facts 628, 629. According to Pašić, Mlakve Football Stadium was not a “camp”, but a reception centre where “some non-Serbs, who possessed weapons and military equipment, were processed”. D3849 (Witness statement of Radimir Pašić dated 5 July 2013), pp. 15, 27. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable based upon its consideration that Pašić provided insincere and ultimately unsatisfactory evidence.

⁵⁰⁸⁶ KDZ011, T. 21212 (10 November 2011).

⁵⁰⁸⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 636. While KDZ011 and Alić testified that there were no beatings and that they were not physically mistreated or beaten while detained at Mlakve Football Stadium, in light of the conditions at the stadium as described by these witnesses, including verbal and psychological abuse, as well as the fact that hundreds of other detainees were held there, the Chamber is of the view that the evidence of KDZ011 and Alić does not rebut the presumption created by Adjudicated Facts 636, 637, and 638. See also para. 1481; KDZ011, P3800 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 14016–14017; P687 (Witness statement of Hasan Alić dated 21 August 1999), e-court pp. 15–16).

According to Pašić, detainees at Mlakve Football Stadium received three meals per day and that it was the same food given to the military and TO staff. D3849 (Witness statement of Radimir Pašić dated 5 July 2013), pp. 26–27. However, the Chamber does not find Pašić’s evidence in this regard to be reliable given that his evidence was marked with contradictions and insincerity.

1479. The detainees were confined to one part of the stadium, as a result there was a shortage of space for approximately 700 men.⁵⁰⁹⁴ They slept on the floor with no blankets.⁵⁰⁹⁵ Although the detainees could wash themselves, they did not have any facilities to wash clothes.⁵⁰⁹⁶ Toilet facilities were also inadequate.⁵⁰⁹⁷ Some of the detainees were ill and were not provided with medical care at any point; one man died of asthma while detained.⁵⁰⁹⁸ Detainees were not allowed to move around the stadium but they had to perform labour to smooth the path around the stadium.⁵⁰⁹⁹ Later, visits to the stadium were not permitted, letters and parcels were not allowed to be sent or received, and the detainees were not allowed to notify anyone of their location or detention.⁵¹⁰⁰

1480. From one side of the stadium, the detainees could see UNPROFOR vehicles across the Una River on the Croatian side and tried to signal for help with white flags; the UNPROFOR soldiers noticed them, however, the guards at Mlakve Football Stadium realised and forbade the detainees from further use of that section of the stadium.⁵¹⁰¹ During their detention, the soldiers called out names of the detainees and brought them to the police station, the fire department, or Hotel Una for interrogation.⁵¹⁰²

1481. On or around 22 July 1992, after approximately 45 days of detention, the detainees at the Mlakve Football Stadium were told by members of the Bosnian Serb MP that they would be released.⁵¹⁰³ For approximately 80 detainees who had family in the town of Bosanski Novi, close to the stadium, their family members could sign certificates to release them earlier than the other detainees.⁵¹⁰⁴ The remaining detainees were forced to sign certificates to be released, confirming that they would voluntarily surrender all of their movable and immovable property to the RS in Bosanski Novi.⁵¹⁰⁵ After the certificates were signed, 15 detainees, all members of the SDA party, were singled out of the group and taken to the “fire house”, where they were beaten.⁵¹⁰⁶ According to Alić, about nine men were killed.⁵¹⁰⁷

1482. On 23 July 1992, the detainees at Mlakve Football Stadium were released pursuant to an order by the Bosanski Novi Municipal Executive Board.⁵¹⁰⁸ An UNPROFOR vehicle arrived at the stadium; all of the detainees were then loaded onto buses and trucks and taken across the bridge to Dvor, Croatia.⁵¹⁰⁹ During this process, there were no soldiers around the detainees and they were guarded by UNPROFOR soldiers.⁵¹¹⁰

1483. The Chamber therefore finds that during the period between 2 June and 23 July 1992, members of the Serb Forces detained Bosnian Muslim men at the Mlakve Football Stadium, and subjected them to beatings and verbal mistreatment, including threats and ethnic slurs. The Chamber also finds that detainees held at Mlakve Football Stadium were not provided with adequate food or water, resulting in malnutrition, and that there was no medical care available to the detainees during this period.

(1) Charges

1484. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Ključ as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁵¹¹¹ Under Count 1, the Prosecution further alleges that in certain municipalities, including Ključ, this persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical, and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.⁵¹¹²

1486. Other acts alleged to have been committed in Ključ by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as well as the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution under Count 3.⁵¹¹⁷ In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that in scheduled detention facilities in Ključ thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel or inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, and beatings by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs; the Prosecution characterises this inhumane treatment as causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups, an underlying act of genocide.⁵¹¹⁸ In addition, under Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups were detained under conditions of life calculated to bring about physical destruction, namely through cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, inhumane living conditions, forced labour and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.⁵¹¹⁹

1487. Under Count 3, other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Ključ by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include: (i) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁵¹²⁰ (ii) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;⁵¹²¹ (iii) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;⁵¹²² (iv) appropriation or plunder of property during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention, and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;⁵¹²³ (v) the wanton destruction of private property including homes and business premises and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁵¹²⁴ and (vi) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁵¹²⁵

1490. Ethnic relations in Ključ were “quite harmonious” before the war.⁵¹³² In November 1990, the SDS achieved a majority by winning 50.8% of the votes in the Ključ municipal elections, while the SDA won 32.8%.⁵¹³³ In accordance with the principle of “equal representation”, positions within the municipal administration were allocated according to an agreement between the SDS, the SDA, and the MBO.⁵¹³⁴ Jovo Banjac of the SDS was appointed President of the Municipality; while Omer Filipović, the leader of the Ključ MBO, was made Vice President of the Municipal Assembly as well as Banjac’s deputy; Asim Egrić, the President of the Ključ SDA, and Tihomir Dakić of the SDS became Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Executive Board of the Ključ Municipal Assembly, respectively.⁵¹³⁵ The rest of the municipal executive positions were evenly distributed to both SDA and SDS members.⁵¹³⁶ Vinko Kondić of the SDS became Chief of the SJB, while Atif Džafić, who was nominated by the SDA but was not affiliated with any party, became acting commander of the police.⁵¹³⁷ local and national leaders of the SDA and MBO discouraged Bosnian Muslims from responding.⁵¹³⁹ Thus, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats generally did not respond to mobilisation into the JNA and for the frontline in Croatia, whereas Bosnian Serbs did.⁵¹⁴⁰ The lack of Bosnian Muslim response to the mobilisation led to the composition of the JNA becoming primarily Bosnian Serb.⁵¹⁴¹

1492. The Bosnian Serb population of Ključ obtained arms through this mobilisation process, as those returning from the frontline in Croatia retained possession of their weapons.⁵¹⁴² The SDS was also involved in distributing weapons to Bosnian Serbs in Ključ.⁵¹⁴³ The SDS Executive Board discussed the distribution of weapons multiple times between October 1991 and March 1992,⁵¹⁴⁴ when Veljko Kondić remarked that “we will undertake to get additional weapons”.⁵¹⁴⁵ Thereafter, the SDS Executive Board established record-keeping reflecting the weapons kept.⁵¹⁴⁶

1493. Between late 1991 and the spring of 1992, soldiers returning from the frontlines in Croatia often became inebriated and committed drive-by shootings, firing at local mosques in Ključ.⁵¹⁴⁷ While the SDS discussed these problems and made statements denouncing the use of firearms in public,⁵¹⁴⁸ Vinko Kondić ultimately returned weapons that had been seized from soldiers “engag[ing] in illegal acts”.⁵¹⁴⁹ Additionally, during the latter half of 1991, Serb Forces established check-points at the various entrances to Ključ.⁵¹⁵⁰ Ethnic relations in Ključ deteriorated, compromising both the functioning of municipal organs as well as security in general.⁵¹⁵¹

1494. Throughout the fall of 1991, the SDA and MBO opposed the growing signs of regionalisation in Ključ. In late September, the SDA released a public statement rejecting the proclamation of the ARK as a “para-state” successor organisation to the ZOBK and warning that if “such an illegal decision” were implemented, the SDA would organise a referendum to establish a “separate Muslim commune”.⁵¹⁵²

which had been subsequently adopted by the ARK government.⁵¹⁵³ These instructions included directions to, inter alia, (i) form a command of the town and establish round-the-clock duty; (ii) fully mobilise the TO; (iii) reassign all men under the age of 40 from Civilian Protection to the TO; (iv) re-subordinate the TO to “the Corps”; (v) take over management in public enterprises, including the banks, judiciary, and media; (vi) proclaim a wartime programme schedule on radio stations; (vii) ban the employment of able-bodied persons from war regions and fire any such persons employed at the date of the order’s issuance; (viii) collect all weapons and equipment from deserters; and (ix) disband all existing paramilitary formations and reassign them to the TO.⁵¹⁵⁴ The SDA and MBO released a joint statement publicising and denouncing the above order.⁵¹⁵⁵ When Asim Egrić, who was then the president of the Ključ Executive Board and had erroneously received the telex, asked Jovo Banjac about the propriety of such instructions, Banjac minimised their importance and suggested that Brđanin “was mad”.⁵¹⁵⁶ Nevertheless, Egrić observed that most of these items were eventually implemented.⁵¹⁵⁷

1496. When the decision to join the ARK was confirmed by the SDS delegates of the Ključ Municipal Assembly on 26 December 1991,⁵¹⁵⁸ the SDA representatives at the Municipal Assembly walked out rather than vote on the issue.⁵¹⁵⁹ Sometime in January or February 1992, Bosnian Muslim leaders formed a separate Assembly of Bosnian Ključ, headed by Omer Filipović.⁵¹⁶⁰

1497. Meanwhile, the Ključ SDS received the Variant A/B Instructions from the SDS Main Board.⁵¹⁶¹ On 23 December 1991, the Ključ SDS Executive Board established a Crisis Staff.⁵¹⁶² Jovo Banjac became President of the Crisis Staff; other original members included the Chief of the Ključ SJB, Vinko Kondić; the Secretary of the National Defence Secretariat, Slobodan Jurišić; the TO Staff Commander, Boško Lukić; the President of the SDS Municipal Board, Veljko Kondić; the Deputy in the SerBiH Assembly, Rajko Kalabić; the Vice President of the Executive Board of the Municipal Assembly, Tihomir Dakić; Ljuban Bajić; and Dragan Smiljanić.⁵¹⁶³ In mid-May 1992, the Crisis Staff was expanded to include a number of new members and was transformed into a Crisis Staff of the Ključ Municipal Assembly.⁵¹⁶⁴

1498. The frequency of mobilisation calls became constant at the beginning of 1992, increasing the number of soldiers present in the municipality.⁵¹⁶⁵ Some paramilitaries, including the Red Berets, arrived in Ključ around November 1991, while other groups such as the White Eagles arrived in Ključ around February 1992.⁵¹⁶⁶ During the same month, over the objection of SDA representatives to the National Defence Council,⁵¹⁶⁷ JNA units withdrawing from Knin were

1499. In February 1992, a special reserve unit of the Ključ police called the "Manoeuvring Unit" was sent to Manjača camp for special training.⁵¹⁷¹ There only the Bosnian Serb members of the unit received training on the use of mortars, Zoljas, heavy machine guns, hand to hand combat, mines, and cannons. This training had never previously been offered to the Manoeuvring Unit.⁵¹⁷² In early March 1992, in order to prevent Bosnian Muslims from accessing TO weapons,⁵¹⁷³ the TO armoury was transferred to the Kula military depot in Mrkonjić Grad.⁵¹⁷⁴ The weapons were later used to arm the Ključ Battalion.⁵¹⁷⁵

The violence in the villages surrounding Ključ town intensified during March and April 1992.⁵¹⁷⁶ Inebriated Bosnian Serb soldiers who had returned from the Croatian front continued to fire rifles in Bosnian Muslim villages.⁵¹⁷⁷ Bosnian Muslim settlements began to form "loose defence night patrols" at the entrance and exit to the villages to guard against the occurrence of violent incidents,⁵¹⁷⁸ and Bosnian Serbs demanded that mixed ethnicity patrols be conducted in the

(3) Take-over

1501. By 29 April 1992, Bosnian Serbs had consolidated power within the municipality.⁵¹⁸³ That day, the SDS Municipal Board adopted a conclusion to “first prepare everything and coordinate with the army and, when everything is prepared, implement the change in insignia/loyalty of the police”.⁵¹⁸⁴ In accordance with a decision of the ARK government taken on 4 May,⁵¹⁸⁵ on the following day the President of the Ključ National Defence Council, Jovo Banjac, imposed a curfew in Ključ municipality.⁵¹⁸⁶ Throughout May, the Ključ Crisis Staff announced deadlines for citizens to surrender unlicensed weapons or face arrest.⁵¹⁸⁷ Meanwhile, on 7 May 1992, units from the JNA 9th Corps based at Lanište and the 5th Corps (comprised of a battalion of the 6th Partisan Brigade and the 3rd Battalion of the 1st Partisan Brigade) secured the town before responsibility for security was taken over by the Serb TO and the reserve police.⁵¹⁸⁸ Serb Forces completed the military take-

(a) Expulsion of Bosnian Muslims from police, administrative organs and work force

1502. On 7 May, Vinko Kondić called a meeting of all non-Serb officers in the SJB building, where the officers were asked to sign an oath of loyalty to the RS government as required by the law on internal affairs.⁵¹⁹¹ They were also asked to accept changes incorporating Serbian insignia into their uniforms.⁵¹⁹² None of the non-Serb officers wished to sign the oath.⁵¹⁹³ After consulting with two Bosnian Serb inspectors from the Banja Luka CSB who were also present,⁵¹⁹⁴ Kondić told the non-Serb officers to go on leave and to “think carefully” about their decision.⁵¹⁹⁵ The non-Serb officers were recalled to the SJB building approximately two weeks later, but since none of them had changed their minds about signing the oath, they were immediately relieved of their duties.⁵¹⁹⁶ Although the Ključ Crisis Staff publicly announced that the change in insignia would

After returning from a meeting in Banja Luka in March 1992, Vinko Kondić had warned his staff that he had signed a pledge of allegiance to the CSB in Banja Luka and that they too would soon have to pledge loyalty to the “Serbian authorities and the Serbian Republic”. 1503. Between late 1991 and early March 1992, the SDS had formed a personnel committee which was tasked with carrying out an analysis of the personnel structures in the municipality area.⁵¹⁹⁹ At an SDS Executive Board meeting on 6 March 1992, the structure of the Public Auditing Service (“SDK”) in Ključ was characterised as “unfavourable”, which referred to the fact that a Bosnian Muslim was employed there.⁵²⁰⁰ In the weeks preceding 7 May 1992, a Bosnian Muslim member of the SDK and the Bosnian Muslim editor-in-chief of the radio station were replaced by members of the SDS.⁵²⁰¹ Both men were told that “since there had been a take-over in Ključ, they had to be replaced by individuals from the SDS”.⁵²⁰²

1504. By the end of May 1992, most Bosnian Muslims in Ključ had lost or would soon lose their jobs.⁵²⁰³ On 7 May 1992, Bosnian Muslim municipal employees had been told to leave the municipality building with the proviso that they would be called back if needed.⁵²⁰⁴ Between mid-May and early June, the Ključ Crisis Staff concluded that “all management positions in enterprises must be filled by people absolutely loyal to” the SerBiH and that the replacement of all non-Serbs who were then employed in posts which encompassed the “protection of properties” was to be carried out by 1 June 1992.⁵²⁰⁵ These principles were later recorded in the 21 July 1992 decision of the Ključ Crisis Staff, which had since been renamed the War Presidency,⁵²⁰⁶ when it held that, in accordance with a prior decision of the ARK Crisis Staff,⁵²⁰⁷ only Bosnian Serb officials could occupy managerial posts, posts that could provide access to information or involve the protection of public property, and posts that were important for the functioning of the economy.⁵²⁰⁸ On the same day, the Ključ War Presidency also issued a decision terminating the employment of “all employees who ha[d] failed to respond to the general mobilisation”.⁵²⁰⁹ Following these decisions, the War Presidency ordered the dismissal of several non-Serbs from municipal positions, including the positions of president and vice president of the executive board of the municipality.⁵²¹⁰ By 31 July, Vinko Kondić reported that only Serb workers were employed in business enterprises.⁵²¹¹

1505. Rajko Kalabić testified that Bosnian Muslims reported to their jobs without interference until late May 1992 and asserted that this timing suggested that they left their jobs of their own free will rather than under duress.⁵²¹² However, while Asim Egrić acknowledged that his employer had been entitled to terminate his employment after he failed to report to work for five days, he explained that the same persons who terminated his employment for failing to report to work also imprisoned him in a camp, and that this termination occurred long after he ceased reporting for work as a result of the security conditions in Ključ.⁵²¹³ In light of the security situation prevailing in Ključ at the time, as well as the retroactive Crisis Staff decisions, the Chamber finds that, contrary to Kalabić’s assertion, Bosnian Muslims were dismissed from their jobs on account of their ethnicity.

(b) Outbreak of armed conflict in Ključ

1506. After 7 May 1992, Bosnian Muslims' freedom of movement was restricted both temporally and geographically, and Bosnian Muslims were required to identify themselves and to explain their movements at check-points.⁵²¹⁴ On 25 May 1992, Banjac, as President of the Ključ Crisis Staff, issued an order to bring the TO units in Ključ municipality up to strength and to set up civilian protection units in all local communes, including Bosnian Muslim ones.⁵²¹⁵

1507. Armed operations in Ključ began with several incidents between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs on 27 May 1992.⁵²¹⁶ Around 11 a.m., while responding to a report that a barricade had been erected on the road near Krasulje, the Assistant Commander of the Ključ SJB, Dušan Stojaković, was fatally wounded during an "armed clash" with Bosnian Muslims;⁵²¹⁷ a military and a regular policeman were also wounded during the incident.⁵²¹⁸ Around 2 p.m. on the same day, a bus carrying members of the JNA who were returning from Knin to Banja Luka came under fire near Pudín Han, resulting in the deaths of four or five individuals.⁵²¹⁹ During the course of the day, a check-point at the intersection of the Ključ-Sanica road came under fire, and in the evening, a "squa[d] of extremists" attempted to blow up a road above Velagići.⁵²²⁰ In addition to the incidents that occurred that day, the Ključ SJB discovered that seven members of Serb Forces had been captured in Crljeni two days before.⁵²²¹

1508. The Chamber received conflicting evidence regarding the establishment and level of organisation of a Bosnian Muslim TO, as well as its involvement in the events of 27 May 1992. According to a Ključ SJB dispatch dated 25 September 1992, Bosnian Muslim forces began to obtain weapons through individual purchases in early 1992, and established a “Bosanski Ključ TO” in April 1992.⁵²²² Asim Egrić acknowledged that guards had been assigned to various Bosnian Muslim settlements located north of Ključ since early 1992, but suggested that they lacked any military organisation.⁵²²³ Although he initially denied that a Bosnian Muslim TO existed and suggested that Bosnian Serbs considered the entire Bosnian Muslim population to be members of the TO, Egrić later conceded (i) that after Bosnian Muslim representatives were expelled from the Ključ Municipal Assembly around 10 May, they had established an office in Pudín Han in order to communicate with the population, and (ii) that Omer Filipović was appointed TO Commander.⁵²²⁴ Even when shown an SJB report from July 1992 which estimated the numerical strength of Muslim forces in Ključ at the outbreak of the conflict as being approximately 1,300 to 1,500 men,⁵²²⁵ and an official note of the 2nd Krajina Corps Command’s Intelligence Department dated 11 July 1992 which described a fully-functioning staff,⁵²²⁶ Egrić maintained that the Bosnian Muslim TO staff had not had time to set up any units.⁵²²⁷ However, the Chamber finds that, in light of 1509. Beginning at 8 a.m. on 28 May 1992 and continuing throughout the day, the Ključ Crisis Staff and the Ključ Defence Command⁵²²⁹ issued orders to Bosnian Muslims to hand in their weapons and to hand over Stojaković's body, as well as those responsible for firing on the JNA convoy on the previous day.⁵²³⁰ At 4 p.m., the Ključ Defence Command accepted Omer Filipović's request for an extension of the deadline to surrender weapons until 10 a.m. the following day in exchange for handing over the seven captured soldiers and Stojaković's body by 5 p.m. on 28 May 1992.⁵²³¹ Filipović was also taken into custody.⁵²³² However, after the 4 p.m. announcement, the Ključ Defence Command issued a further statement at 8 p.m. ordering the residents of Puđin Han and Velagići to surrender their weapons by 9 p.m. that evening.⁵²³³ Failure to comply with the provisions of the statement would result in a state of armed conflict.⁵²³⁴

1510. As a result of this “new security situation”,⁵²³⁵ Banjac, as President of the Ključ Crisis Staff, issued an order prohibiting citizens from moving from one area to another within the municipality without special permission from the Ključ SJB.⁵²³⁶ Additionally, the Ključ Battalion⁵²³⁷ was deployed to “mop up” the town and surrounding settlements by disarming “all paramilitary formations in the direction of the attacks and to arrest members of these formations”,⁵²³⁸ while the 1st Brigade of the 30th Partisan Division was also deployed in the area.⁵²³⁹

(c) Destruction of houses and looting of movable property

1512. Beginning while the combat operations were underway and continuing throughout 1992 some 3,500 houses in Bosnian Muslim villages including Pudin Han, Velagići, Biljani, and Prhovo were razed to the ground and burned.⁵²⁴⁷ Furthermore, during the same period, members of the Serb Forces “illegally appropriat[ed]” Bosnian Muslims’ movable property, such as cattle, housing materials, and vehicles.⁵²⁴⁸ Although the Ključ Crisis Staff explained to Bosnian Serb citizens in June 1992 that property was considered “inviolable [and] should be protected from the wilfulness of individuals”,⁵²⁴⁹ and the Ključ Executive Board passed a decision on 29 September 1992 transferring the ownership of movable and immovable property from those who had left the municipality to the state,⁵²⁵⁰ a later military report stated that “illegal acts of appropriation of state property continued [...] [and] nothing was done to prevent further acts of unlawful appropriation”.⁵²⁵¹ The 1st Krajina Assistant Corps Commander for Civilian Affairs reported that as late as 1 February 1993, such acts were occurring in “full co-ordinated action and co-operation of the Military and civilian police”.⁵²⁵² The Chamber is therefore satisfied that such crimes continued to be perpetrated by members of Serb Forces even after the measures taken by the Ključ Crisis Staff and Ključ Executive Board in June and September 1992.

(4) Killings on or around 1 June 1992

(a) Scheduled Incident A.7.1

1513. The Indictment refers to the killing of “a number” of people in Pudín Han on or about 28 May 1992.

1514. As the Chamber has previously noted, a Bosnian Muslim TO was headquartered in Pudín Han.⁵²⁵³ At the time, Pudín Han was almost exclusively a Bosnian Muslim village located approximately three kilometres north of Ključ town.⁵²⁵⁴ Even as the Ključ Crisis Staff issued its ultimatum on 28 May 1992,⁵²⁵⁵ Pudín Han had already begun to be shelled from locations controlled by Serb Forces on the previous day.⁵²⁵⁶ Many people were hit by the shells as they tried to flee.⁵²⁵⁷ While at his house on 28 May, KDZ024 could see smoke coming from the houses in Pudín Han.⁵²⁵⁸ During the attack on Pudín Han, the mosque in Pudín Han was blown up and leveled.⁵²⁵⁹ KDZ024 visited Pudín Han after it was shelled, and found everything burned, ⁵²⁵⁵ See para. 1509. During a meeting at the youth centre in Pudín Han, the vast majority of inhabitants of Pudín Han were in favour of surrendering their weapons, and those who disagreed left for Bihać. Adjudicated Fact 920.

See also para. 1511; Adjudicated Fact 921; P3488 (Witness statement of Atif Džafić undated), para. 82. KDZ192 gave conflicting evidence as to whether Pudín Han was fired upon in order to induce the leader of the Bosnian Muslim TO to surrender. KDZ192, P3416 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 11559–11560, 11726–11727, 11729 (under seal); KDZ192 T. 19484 (27 September 2011) (closed session) (acknowledging that Bosnian Muslims maintained that Filipović had surrendered prior to the commencement of fire but testifying that the Serb Forces only fired to induce Filipović to surrender). See also P3450 (Video footage of TV Banja Luka depicting events in Ključ), at 00:02:27–00:06:41 (showing Vinko Kondić stating that Bosnian Muslim “extremists” in Pudín Han had refused to surrender their weapons). The Chamber notes that the Accused concedes that Pudín Han was shelled even prior to the expiration of the Crisis Staff’s ultimatum, and that at least three civilians died, but suggests that the shelling was not carried out by Serb Forces, who “had no interest in shelling since they had information that the Bosnian Muslim extremists who remained armed had left for Bihać”. Defence Final Brief, para. 1517. However, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that, as stated in the main text above, the shelling was carried out by Serb Forces, not by any other armed group.

destroyed, and in ruins.⁵²⁶⁰ Electricity poles had fallen down, and dead livestock littered the roads.⁵²⁶¹

1515. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution alleges that “a number” of people were killed in Pudín Han on or about 28 May 1992.⁵²⁶² The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that, at a minimum, three civilians from Pudín Han died as a consequence of the shelling.⁵²⁶³ Additionally, KDZ024 testified that on 30 May 1992, [REDACTED] found and buried the bodies of more than ten people, including children, who had been killed by the shelling.⁵²⁶⁴ The bodies of eight Bosnian Muslims killed during the shelling of Pudín Han were exhumed from graves in Velagići in 1996,⁵²⁶⁵ but the Chamber notes that five of those eight were last reported alive on 1 June 1992.⁵²⁶⁶ Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that, at a minimum, three civilians were killed by Serb Forces during the attack in Pudín Han and that the village—including the mosque⁵²⁶⁷—was destroyed on or about 28 May 1992.

(b) Scheduled Incident A.7.2

1516. The Indictment refers to the killing of at least 38 people in Prhovo village and further on the road to Peći on or about 1 June 1992.

1517. Around 1 June 1992, approximately 100 members of the Serb Forces armed with automatic weapons arrived in Prhovo,⁵²⁶⁸ a village located northeast of Ključ town and southeast of the village of Peći which was then inhabited primarily by Bosnian Muslims.⁵²⁶⁹

1518. The Serb Forces ordered approximately 40 unarmed male residents of Prhovo, as well as a number of unarmed women and children, to line up facing the wall of Karanfil Osmanović's house, and then began to beat some of them.⁵²⁷⁰ Four Bosnian Muslim men were called out by name, told to run away, and then shot dead.⁵²⁷¹

1519. The Serb Forces ordered the approximately 30 remaining Bosnian Muslim men from Prhovo to form a column and walk to the nearby village of Peći.⁵²⁷² On the way to Peći, three Bosnian Muslim men from the column were killed after they failed to drag a military vehicle out of the mud.⁵²⁷³ The commander of the unit, Marko Adamović,⁵²⁷⁴ ordered that the village be set on ⁵²⁷⁴ While testifying in this case, Marko Adamović denied that he was the commander of the operation in Prhovo and claimed that he only learned what took place there when a military officer who was crying arrived at the Crisis Staff meeting on the same day. D4165 (Witness statement of Marko Adamović dated 1 December 2013), para. 23; Marko Adamović, T. 44458–44459, 44464–44466, 44470 (4 December 2013). The Chamber notes that at the time of his testimony, Adamović was awaiting judgement in the re-trial of his case in BiH, which related to the events in Prhovo. Marko Adamović, T. 44457–44458 (4 December 2013). The Chamber thus considers that Adamović had an incentive to be less than forthcoming about his role in those events. Moreover, Adamović was evasive throughout his testimony, particularly when questioned about how he had come to know about what had happened in Prhovo. D4165 (Witness statement of Marko Adamović dated 1 December 2013), para. 23; Marko Adamović, T. 44459–44464, 44467–44473, 44478–44479, 44485–44487, 44489 (4 December 2013) (denying involvement but conceding that the minutes of the Crisis Staff meeting did not reflect that he was present); P2606 (Minutes from sessions of Ključ's Crisis Staff, 27 May–10 July 1992), pp. 7–8. The Chamber therefore shall not rely on Adamović's evidence in relation to this incident. Although Rajko Kalabić corroborated Adamović's testimony that a tearful military officer informed the Crisis Staff about the events in Prhovo on 1 June 1992, Kalabić, who was himself evasive throughout his testimony, was inconsistent regarding Adamović's presence at the meeting. Compare Rajko Kalabić, T. 44578–44580 (5 December 2013) (explaining that he had only disclosed that Adamović was present at the Crisis Staff meeting during the appellate phase of a case in BiH and not before because the Prosecutor had not asked about Adamović's presence during the trial) with Rajko Kalabić, T. 44582–44583 (5 December 2013) (accepting the possibility that the Crisis Staff had actually only learned about the events in Prhovo two or three days later, as Kalabić had testified in the Brđanin case). Accordingly, the Chamber finds that Adamović was present and in command of the Serb Forces in Prhovo.

fire and the women and children be killed.⁵²⁷⁵ KDZ056 then heard shooting and an explosion from the village.⁵²⁷⁶

1520. Only 12 men from the column survived the trek to Peći.⁵²⁷⁷ Sulejman Medanović, having survived the walk, died during the following night as a result of beatings he sustained while the group was detained overnight in a co-operative centre called “Dom”.⁵²⁷⁸ In the morning, the 11 survivors were taken to the Nikola Mačkić Elementary School, arriving around 11:00 a.m.⁵²⁷⁹

1521. A total of 51 bodies identified as those of Bosnian Muslims who were killed in Prhovo on or around 1 June 1992 by Serb Forces were exhumed from two mass graves located in Prhovo.⁵²⁸⁰

⁵²⁷⁵ Adjudicated Fact 2438; KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10346 (testifying that the commander ordered that no one be left alive in the village).

⁵²⁷⁶ KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10346. KDZ056 later learned that the Serb Forces in the village had killed the people who had remained behind. KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10346.

⁵²⁷⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 926. The Serb Forces killed two or three more Bosnian Muslim men when the group reached the crossroad junction for Sokolovo and Peći, and, after having ordered the remaining men to take off their shoes and clothing from the waist up, opened fire on them in a field, leaving only 12 survivors. KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10349–10351 (testifying that although 14 men originally survived, the soldiers shot the two youngest survivors after stating that 14 survivors were too many for the soldiers to be able to exact “[their] revenge”). But see D4165 (Witness statement of Marko Adamović dated 1 December 2013), para. 8b (stating that he heard that Bosnian Muslims had opened fire on the Bosnian Serb unit from a small forest and that the unit had reacted by firing randomly in the direction of the forest). In light of the fact that the Bosnian Serb unit’s acts could bear on Adamović’s culpability in relation to this incident, the Chamber declines to rely on Adamović’s evidence in this regard.

⁵²⁷⁸ KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10352–10353; P6690 (Addendum to Nicolas Sébire’s report, 16 May 2003), pp. 79–80 (stating that a post mortem examination of Medanović’s body revealed that the cause of death was force trauma to the head and chest, including brain injury). See also Adjudicated Fact 927. The Serb Forces tied the surviving men’s hands with wires and strings, beat them, and ordered them to lie down near an electricity pole, where the survivors were held overnight without access to food or water, and told them that they would all be killed in the morning. KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10352–10353.

⁵²⁷⁹ KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10353. See also Scheduled Detention Facility C.15.2.

⁵²⁸⁰ KDZ056 testified that the 27 persons listed in P531 were killed in Prhovo village, as well as on the road and in the field on the way to Peći. P531 (List of persons captured/killed in Prhovo), p. 1; KDZ056, P686 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 10346, 10357–10359. Autopsy reports and exhumation reports demonstrate that the bodies of these 27 persons, as well as the bodies of 24 others, were exhumed from two graves associated with the Serb Forces’ attack on Prhovo on 1 June 1992; all of these persons died as a result of gunshot injuries to the head, thoracic cavity, and/or limbs. P622 (Record of autopsies of bodies from Prhovo, 13 May 1997) (recording the autopsy results for 36 persons killed by Serb Forces in Prhovo on 1 June 1992 who were wearing civilian clothing and who died of gunshot injuries to the head, thoracic cavity, and/or spine); P4882 (Bihać Cantonal Court record of Prhovo exhumation, 7 May 1997) (relating to the autopsies compiled in P622); P623 (Record of autopsies of bodies from Prhovo, 25 September 1999) (recording the exhumation of 15 bodies from a mass grave at Ciganska Dolina, 13 of whom were listed in P531). In light of the similarity in the causes of death and having cross-referenced P531 with P22 and P623, the Chamber concludes that all 51 persons included in P622 and P623 were killed by Serb Forces in Prhovo on or around 1 June 1992. See also P6690 (Addendum to Nicolas Sébire’s report, 16 May 2003), pp. 76–79; Asim Egrić, P6586 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 4810–4812 (testifying that he attended the exhumation of a Prhovo gravesite); Adjudicated Fact 928. In addition to the exhumations of the 51 persons mentioned above, Amor Mašović recorded the exhumation of the body of one additional person who went missing from Prhovo on 1 June 1992 from the Ciganska Dolina grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 7–8; P4850 (Witness statement of Amor Mašović dated 23 March 2012), Annex A, p. 5. However, this individual is not listed in P623 and no evidence in the record provides either an explanation for this omission or forensic information regarding

The Chamber also received forensic evidence that Sulejman Medanović died as a result of injuries consistent with the beatings he received while the group was detained en route to the Nikola Mačkić School,⁵²⁸¹ bringing the total number of bodies linked to the attack on Prhovo to 52.⁵²⁸²

1522. The Chamber therefore finds that Serb Forces killed 52 Bosnian Muslims in Prhovo and on the road to Peći on or about 1 June 1992.

(5) Arrests, detentions, and killings associated with detention facilities

(a) Scheduled Detention Facility C.15.3 and Scheduled Incident

B.10.1

1523. The Indictment refers to the use of the Velagići School as a detention facility at least between 30 May and June 1992,⁵²⁸³ and to the killing of at least 77 men at the school on or about 1 June 1992.⁵²⁸⁴

1524. On the evening of 1 June 1992, approximately 100 unarmed Bosnian Muslim men who had surrendered to members of Serb Forces at the check-point in Velagići, a majority Bosnian Muslim village,⁵²⁸⁵ arrived at the Velagići School,⁵²⁸⁶ which was guarded by soldiers.⁵²⁸⁷ The men's names the death. Accordingly, the Chamber cannot be satisfied that this person was killed by Serb Forces in Prhovo on or around 1 June 1992.

⁵²⁸¹ See para. 1520, fn. 5278.

⁵²⁸² The Chamber notes that the Accused concedes that the local authorities were informed that “a number of civilians” were killed during fighting in Prhovo. Defence Final Brief, para. 1518 (citing the witness statement of Slobodan Jurišić). Jurišić testified that the Crisis Staff was informed on 1 June 1992 that “a number of Muslim civilians” were killed in Prhovo, although he did not mention any fighting. D4363 (Witness statement of Slobodan Jurišić dated 8 February 2014), para. 23.

⁵²⁸⁴ Indictment, Scheduled Incident B.10.1. The Chamber also notes that the Accused appears to characterise this event as two separate killing incidents, but observes that the evidence he cites, which the Chamber has analysed below, does not support this theory. On their way to the school, the group had encountered Željko Radojčić as well as one or two soldiers wearing olive grey uniforms, and Radojčić had told the soldiers: “Kill them all. They’re not going to form a džamahirija here”. KDZ024, P713 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 9123 (under seal). and dates of birth were recorded.⁵²⁸⁸ Two soldiers ordered the group to line up, raise their hands, and empty their pockets, and collected any documents or money that had been discarded in the process.⁵²⁸⁹

1525. The two soldiers then ordered the group of Bosnian Muslim men to enter a small room on the first floor, where they were crowded in so tightly that they “literally had to sit in each other’s laps”.⁵²⁹⁰ The Bosnian Muslim men were cursed and told to “bow down. You’ll never again have the opportunity.”⁵²⁹¹ At one point, the Bosnian Muslim men heard several men who were being held downstairs being told to stand up, and when they could not, the Bosnian Muslim men upstairs heard three to four bursts of fire and the men crying out.⁵²⁹²

1526. The Bosnian Muslim men remained in the classroom at the Velagići School while the soldiers cursed and maltreated them, until approximately 11:30 p.m.⁵²⁹³ At that point, the soldiers ordered the detainees to stand and line up in a single file; as they exited the school, they were ordered to form a column, two by two.⁵²⁹⁴ Once the entire column had exited and lined up against the building, two soldiers who had been crouching in the nearby grass and pointing their automatic rifles began to fire at the column.⁵²⁹⁵ When the shooting stopped, the soldiers approached the fallen detainees and shot any apparent survivors,⁵²⁹⁶ [REDACTED].⁵²⁹⁷ The soldiers began to drink death, the remainder all bore signs of fatal gunshot wounds, mostly to the head or trunk, and all were found in civilian clothing.⁵³⁰⁴

1529. The Chamber therefore finds that Bosnian Muslim men were detained, subjected to verbal and mental abuse, and that 77 Bosnian Muslim men were ultimately killed at Velagići School by Serb Forces on 1 June 1992.

(b) Scheduled Detention Facility C.15.1

1530. The Indictment refers to the use of the Ključ SJB Building as a detention facility at least between May and August 1992.⁵³⁰⁵

1531. On the morning of 28 May 1992, Asim Egrić was arrested at a check-point just outside Ključ; he was then escorted to the SJB building in Ključ,⁵³⁰⁶ which was staffed and operated by the Bosnian Serb police.⁵³⁰⁷ While detained at the SJB building, Egrić was beaten and sustained extensive injuries to his head and body before being transferred to the hospital, where he remained for approximately one hour.⁵³⁰⁸ While in the hospital, Veljko Kondić and Tihomir Dakić came to see Egrić.⁵³⁰⁹ On the same day, Muhamed Filipović, a Bosnian Muslim member of the Ključ ⁵³⁰⁵ Indictment, Scheduled Detention Facility C.15.1. In Appendix B to the Prosecution's Final Brief, however, the Prosecution only referred to the period "following attacks in May and June [19]92". The Chamber received evidence referring to the building housing the Ključ SJB as the "SJB building", the "SUP building", and the "police station". For clarity, the Chamber will use the term "SJB building" throughout this section to denote this building.

Egrić contested the veracity of the narrative contained in D1748, suggesting that the statements on which it was based were obtained from persons detained in Manjača who may have been under duress and that he had actually wounded himself by shooting himself in the foot. ⁵³⁰⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 933. 1532. Those arrested were beaten in a gauntlet at the steps of the entrance to the SJB building with feet, fists, batons, rifle-butts and chair legs, and were subjected to ethnic slurs.⁵³¹³ They were then beaten inside the SJB building, including during interrogations.⁵³¹⁴ The perpetrators of these beatings were Bosnian Serb police officers and local civilians.⁵³¹⁵

1533. A prominent Bosnian Muslim was thrown down the stairs, and was carried into the SJB building unconscious, whilst another suffered a cut lip and broken ribs.⁵³¹⁶ As a result of the severity of the beatings, the former suffered a serious, lasting injury with continuing effects to date.⁵³¹⁷ slurs as well as beatings with fists, batons, rifle-butts and chair legs, which were sufficiently severe as to cause permanent injury.

(c) Scheduled Detention Facility C.15.2

1537. The Indictment refers to the use of the Nikola Mačkić Elementary School as a detention facility at least between 1 May and July 1992.⁵³²⁸

1538. From 2 June 1992,⁵³²⁹ approximately 300 Muslim men were detained and guarded by Bosnian Serb regular and reserve civilian police in the Nikola Mačkić Elementary School in Ključ.⁵³³⁰ When the detainees arrived at the Nikola Mačkić Elementary School, they were forced to run through a gauntlet of Bosnian Serb civilians armed with cables, bats, clubs, and other objects, while being beaten, spat on, and verbally degraded.⁵³³¹ Before entering the gym, all detainees were searched by Bosnian Serbs, who seized the detainees' valuables and documents.⁵³³² Some detainees were also interrogated about whether they had weapons and whether they were combatants.⁵³³³

1539. Two Bosnian Serb police officers stood in the corridor, beating the detainees at random as they entered the gym, where approximately 100 civilian men of all ages were sitting on the floor with their hands behind their backs,⁵³³⁴ facing the walls, which were stained with blood.⁵³³⁵ Some detainees were crying, while others were bleeding and injured from the beatings.⁵³³⁶ Detainees were forced to extend the three fingers in the Serbian salute.⁵³³⁷ One detainee was forced to lick his own blood off the floor after having been beaten severely.⁵³³⁸ Beatings took place both during and outside interrogations, including the beating of a boy who was 16 and still attending high school, despite the fact that his age was known to the interrogators.⁵³³⁹

⁵³²⁸ Indictment, Scheduled Detention Facility C.15.2. In Appendix B to the Prosecution Final Brief, however, the Prosecution only refers to the period "from 27 and during early Jun[e 19]92".

⁵³³⁹ Adjudicated Fact 940.

1540. Former Bosnian Muslim police officers were the object of particularly severe physical abuse and humiliation.⁵³⁴⁰ Atif Džafić was taken from the gym to a classroom,⁵³⁴¹ where he was interrogated by a Bosnian Serb police officer, Nedeljko Vasić.⁵³⁴² Džafić was then returned to the gym and “put on display” in the middle of the gym floor with his hands behind his back, where his former subordinates beat him.⁵³⁴³ After one hour, Džafić was again taken to the corridor by two masked policemen wearing camouflage uniforms. These policemen beat him and took him for further interrogation by Duško Miličević, who was an inspector from the Banja Luka CSB and dressed in the uniform of a military captain, and another military captain. Miličević and the other military captain beat Džafić with desk legs, cables, and bats.⁵³⁴⁴ The other military captain asked Džafić what Džafić knew about who had killed Dušan Stojaković and why Džafić had not signed the SJB loyalty oath.⁵³⁴⁵ Džafić denied involvement in Stojaković’s death,⁵³⁴⁶ but was given a piece of paper and asked to “write everything down” before being returned to the gym, where he was again placed in the middle of the floor.⁵³⁴⁷

1541. The municipal authorities were aware that Bosnian Muslims were beaten by Bosnian Serbs in the Nikola Mačkić School.⁵³⁴⁸

1542. The detainees were held at the Nikola Mačkić School until at least 7 p.m. on 2 June 1992 without being given any food or water.⁵³⁴⁹

⁵³⁴⁷ P3488 (Witness statement of Atif Džafić undated), paras. 91, 93, 94; Atif Džafić, T. 19741 (30 September 2011).

⁵³⁴⁸ Adjudicated Fact 944. Slobodan Jurišić testified that he did not know or hear that Muslims were being beaten at Nikola Mačkić School, nor was this discussed at the Crisis Staff. D4363 (Witness statement of Slobodan Jurišić dated 8 February 2014), para. 26. Considering, however, that Jurišić was a member of the Crisis Staff, and that whether the Crisis Staff was informed of the beatings at the Nikola Mačkić’s school could bear on Jurišić’s responsibility in relation to those events, the Chamber shall not rely on Jurišić’s evidence on this point. The Chamber notes that the Accused relied on Jovo Kevac’s evidence to support his assertion that “all reported incidents of abuse were dealt with” by the Ključ authorities. Defence Final Brief, para. 1524. However, Kevac merely stated his belief that the Crisis Staff was not aware of the beatings, and even admitted a lack of knowledge in this regard. D4268 (Witness statement of Jovo Kevac dated 25 January 2014), para. 33. The Chamber will therefore not rely on Kevac’s opinion.

1543. On 5 June 1992, other detainees were transferred directly from the Nikola Mačkić School to Manjača.⁵³⁵⁰ On approximately 7 June 1992, the detainees in Sitnica were also transferred to Manjača.⁵³⁵¹

1544. The Chamber therefore finds that during the period between 2 and 5 June 1992, members of Serb Forces detained Bosnian Muslim men at the Nikola Mačkić School, and subjected them to severe beatings with such objects as cables, bats, and clubs, as well as verbal abuse and other forms of humiliation.

(6) Killings after June 1992: Scheduled Incident A.7.3

1545. The Indictment refers to the killing of at least 144 people in Biljani on or about 10 July 1992.

1546. Around 6:15 a.m. on 10 July 1992, all men in Biljani between the ages of 18 and 60 were told to gather at a field near the village⁵³⁵² while the women and children were allowed to remain at home.⁵³⁵³ Approximately 20 or 30 soldiers were visible on the elevations surrounding the village, which was consequently completely surrounded and cut off.⁵³⁵⁴ Between 50 and 70 men arrived at the field, where they found Marko Samardžija, a captain in the reserve forces,⁵³⁵⁵ waiting with Mladjo Tesić and ten other soldiers.⁵³⁵⁶ The soldiers ordered the men to line up so they could be questioned.⁵³⁵⁷ The Bosnian Muslim men remained there for approximately one hour while the village was being searched; they were then marched in a column to the Biljani Primary School, approximately one kilometre away.⁵³⁵⁸

1547. When the men arrived at the Biljani Primary School, a van was parked under a tree with about ten military policemen from Ključ wearing white belts.⁵³⁵⁹ Many soldiers stood around the school and approximately ten were in front of a shop, guarding women and children brought from another hamlet.⁵³⁶⁰ Samardžija greeted Mile Tomić, a police commander in Sanica,⁵³⁶¹ and his deputy, Mihić, along with several other men before the detained men were told to enter the school.⁵³⁶² Soldiers were arriving from all directions, bringing people from the seven or eight hamlets in the village.⁵³⁶³

1548. Between 120 and 150 men were confined in two classrooms inside the Biljani Primary School.⁵³⁶⁴ Before entering the classrooms, the group of men from KDZ075's hamlet, were made to empty their pockets and their documents in the corridor.⁵³⁶⁵ Mihić and another reserve policeman spent approximately 45 minutes writing down the detainees' names before leaving the classroom.⁵³⁶⁶

⁵³⁵⁸ KDZ075, P3359 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 4966. See also P3360 (List of detainees from Biljani). The Chamber shall not rely on Rajko Kalabić's testimony that those detained at Biljani were not detained on account of their ethnicity or age, but because they were suspected of being members of paramilitary forces or of possessing illegal weapons, as Kalabić later denied knowing anything about the incident in Biljani, and ultimately admitted that he had previously testified that he had heard that a "massacre" had occurred there on 10 July 1992. 1549. After 20 to 30 minutes, Mihić returned and began to call out ten names, and one by one, the men left the classroom and the detainees heard a burst of fire each time.⁵³⁶⁷ After another five or ten minutes, the men began to be called out in groups of five.⁵³⁶⁸ When the first group exited, the shooting and screams of men outside intensified.⁵³⁶⁹ The policemen guarding the detainees told them that the Green Berets were attacking and that the guards would drive them away.⁵³⁷⁰ When one detainee remarked that they were all going to be killed, panic ensued.⁵³⁷¹ A soldier told the men to calm down and that they would all “be going”, but that the elderly men should gather on one side of the classroom because only the younger men would be travelling.⁵³⁷²

1550. After leaving the classroom, the groups of five detainees were lined up in the corridor and let out of the building one by one.⁵³⁷³ Some were beaten while passing through a line of 20 to 30 Bosnian Serb soldiers on the way to two buses parked near the school,⁵³⁷⁴ while others were taken away to the road below.⁵³⁷⁵ Detainees continued to be loaded onto the buses until they were packed with approximately 70 people.⁵³⁷⁶ When the buses were full, the detainees who had not yet boarded the buses were shot.⁵³⁷⁷

1551. As the bus departed, four men were taken off the bus and killed.⁵³⁷⁸ After the bus had gone approximately 100 metres, an additional five men, including KDZ075, Fikret Balagić, Alija Avdić, Besim Avdić, and a man whose first name was Rufad were also removed from the bus by military policemen wearing camouflage uniforms and white belts.⁵³⁷⁹

1552. The men were led to a ditch behind a house, where KDZ075 saw the other men who had been taken off the bus earlier lying dead.⁵³⁸⁰ When KDZ075 and two of the men with him tried to escape, the soldiers called after them, “stop, fuck your balija mothers!”⁵³⁸¹ KDZ075 heard a burst of fire, and one of the men fell to the ground with “two or three huge holes in his back”.⁵³⁸² When a soldier indicated that a third man was still alive, another soldier fired a burst of fire at the third man.⁵³⁸³ Soldiers from the bus yelled at the shooters to hurry up, but the shooters waited for the men to stop breathing before eventually running back to the buses.⁵³⁸⁴

1553. After the bus left, KDZ075 fled and hid in the cornfields nearby.⁵³⁸⁵ From there, he could hear trucks and bulldozers coming to collect the bodies and houses being set on fire.⁵³⁸⁶ The collection of bodies continued into the night of 10 July 1992.⁵³⁸⁷

The bodies of 15 additional Bosnian Muslims, the majority of whom bore signs of fatal gunshot wounds to the head, were exhumed from graves located in and around Biljani and were identified as containing the remains of persons killed by Serb Forces on or around 10 July 1992.⁵³⁸⁹

1555. The Chamber therefore finds that 199 Bosnian Muslims were killed by Serb Forces on or around 10 July 1992 in Biljani.

(7) Scheduled Incident D.13

1556. The Indictment refers to the destruction of eight mosques and a Catholic church between at least May and August 1992.⁵³⁹⁰

1557. Eight mosques in Ključ municipality were destroyed during the period between May 1992 and August 1992.⁵³⁹¹ With regard to the destruction of specific sites and the identities of those responsible, the Chamber received evidence indicating that the Velagići-Pudin Han mosque was blown up by Serb Forces during the attack on Pudín Han on 28 May 1992,⁵³⁹² and that the Biljani Mosque was set on fire in the morning of 10 July 1992 when the village was attacked by Serb Forces.⁵³⁹³ The Ključ mosque was blown up at approximately 3:05 a.m. on 30 July 1992.⁵³⁹⁴ According to a report issued the following day, although the perpetrators were unknown, an

⁵³⁹⁰ The religious sites identified in Scheduled Incident D.13 are the Ključ Town mosque, Biljani–Džaferagići mosque, Pudín Han–Velagići mosque, Donji Budelj mosque, Humići mosque, Krasulje mosque, Sanica mosque, Tićevići mosque, and the Town Catholic church. See also Prosecution Pre-Trial Brief, Confidential Appendix A, p. 32 (asserting that Pudín Han mosque and Velagići mosque are one and the same). investigation was underway to uncover their identities.⁵³⁹⁵ The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that following the Crisis Staff's order, at least four Muslim monuments in Ključ municipality, including the Atik mosque in the town of Ključ, were either completely destroyed or heavily damaged by fire and explosives set by Serb Forces during 1992.⁵³⁹⁶

1558. In light of the evidence described above and noting the pattern of destruction of the mosques in Ključ municipality, particularly the temporal proximity of the destruction of the Velagići-Pudin Han Mosque and the Biljani Mosque to the attacks by Serb Forces on those villages,⁵³⁹⁷ the Chamber finds that eight mosques in Ključ municipality were destroyed by Serb Forces between May and August 1992.

(8) Movement of the population from Ključ

1559. At a meeting on 20 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff adopted several conclusions which were later endorsed in Ključ,⁵³⁹⁸ including that there was “no reason for the population of any nationality to move out of the territory of the [ARK]”.⁵³⁹⁹ However, one week later, the Ključ Crisis Staff established an Agency for the Reception and Removal of Refugees, adopted a Decision on the Organisation of Departure from the Area of the Municipality, and decided that the National Defence Council would be responsible for organising departures from the municipality.⁵⁴⁰⁰ Over the next several days, during its meetings, the Ključ Crisis Staff considered the resettlement of the Bosnian Muslim population.⁵⁴⁰¹

1560. On the morning of 29 May, the Ključ Defence Command and Crisis Staff jointly issued an order for “all citizens of Muslim ethnicity, women, children, and men loyal to the Serbian Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina” to gather at various points in Ključ, including the football grounds in Ključ, the Social Centre in Šehići, the factory grounds in Hanlovsko Vrelo, and the ŠIPAD warehouse in Ključ, by 11 a.m. that day.⁵⁴⁰²

1561. The Ključ War Presidency adopted a decision pursuant to which “all citizens”, regardless of ethnicity, would be allowed to leave the municipality if they gave a statement to the relevant organ that they wished to do so.⁵⁴⁰³ People who wished to move out of the municipality were required to obtain permission to do so from the municipal authorities.⁵⁴⁰⁴ Anyone who wished to leave was required to state that their departure was voluntary as well as permanent.⁵⁴⁰⁵ Moreover, those who owned real property were required to make a declaration renouncing that property by either exchanging it or placing it at the disposal of the municipality.⁵⁴⁰⁶ For at least a month, such housing was reassigned to Bosnian Serb refugees.⁵⁴⁰⁷ While these declarations were ostensibly made voluntarily, Asim Egrić testified that they were made under duress and that the people decided to relinquish their property in order to save their lives, irrespective of the words contained therein.⁵⁴⁰⁸ In accordance with the ARK decision of 4 August 1992, individuals leaving the ARK could take with them no more than 300 German marks.⁵⁴⁰⁹

1562. The Accused contends that the renunciations and reassignments only pertained to temporary use, and not to ownership of such property.⁵⁴¹⁰ The Chamber received evidence that the municipal authorities did not pass any decision which would have collectively converted abandoned properties into state property, and that no changes were made to the land registry books such as would indicate a permanent change in property ownership.⁵⁴¹¹ However, the Chamber notes that on 19 June, the ARK Crisis Staff took a decision that all “abandoned” property would be proclaimed property of the state and placed at the disposal of the municipal assemblies.⁵⁴¹² The Chamber is therefore satisfied that such real property was effectively seized by the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs on a permanent basis.

1563. Mass departures began to take place as of 1 June 1992.⁵⁴¹³ On 4 June, the President of the Ključ Crisis Staff made a statement indicating that all citizens who wished to leave Ključ permanently would be allowed to do so in an organised manner, assisted by international humanitarian organisations and the competent organs of the Ključ Municipal Assembly.⁵⁴¹⁴ Those who wished to leave were to report to the Civilian Protection Department of the Municipal Assembly or to the local committees in local communes.⁵⁴¹⁵

⁵⁴¹⁶ See Adjudicated Facts 953, 954. The Chamber notes that Marko Adamović testified that the ROPS transport company and privately owned transport companies, rather than the police, organised the convoys and that the police merely escorted the convoys for security reasons. D4165 (Witness statement of Marko Adamović dated 1 December 2013), para. 13. See also D4169 (Witness statement of Rajko Kalabić dated 1 December 2013), para. 27 (testifying that the police escorted the convoys for security reasons and that “Civilian Protection” organised and kept certain records). However, the Chamber considers that neither Adamović nor Kalabić established the basis for their knowledge in this regard. Moreover, the Chamber observed that both appeared evasive throughout their testimonies, and that their evidence on other points was contradicted in such a way as to cast doubt on the overall credibility of each. The Chamber therefore declines to place weight on their evidence on this point.

⁵⁴¹⁷ Adjudicated Fact 953.

⁵⁴¹⁸ Adjudicated Fact 955. The Chamber notes that the Accused concedes that the Ključ Crisis Staff organised these convoys, although he suggests that that this was done at the request of Bosnian Muslims. Defence Final Brief, para. 1515 (citing the witness statement of Slobodan Jurišić).

an over-crowded convoy transported 1,000 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, whose names were called prior to their boarding from a list of people who had paid a fare.⁵⁴¹⁹ At a meeting in September 1992, Jovo Banjac informed Mladić that only 5,000 Bosnian Muslims remained in Ključ as of the date of their meeting, and that another 1,500 left on the same day.⁵⁴²⁰

1566. Approximately 2,500 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, the majority of whom were women, children and elderly, were also transported from Ključ towards Travnik on 1 October 1992.⁵⁴²¹ Bosnian Serb local police and the Bosnian Serb army were at the departure point with a list of those who had paid what was asked of them and signed over their property.⁵⁴²² Bosnian Serbs escorted the convoy to a location 25 kilometres away from Travnik, whereupon they demanded money and valuables from the passengers, who then walked to Travnik.⁵⁴²³

1567. Numerous Defence witnesses testified that many Bosnian Muslims remained in the municipality throughout the war.⁵⁴²⁴ However, other evidence indicates that between May 1992 and January 1993, 4,154 of the 4,200 residents of Sanica, 3,429 of the 3,649 residents of Velagići, 2,655 of the 2,815 residents of Peći, 1,250 of the 1,732 residents of Humići, all of the 778 residents of Sokolovo, and all 24 residents of Gornji Ribnik left Ključ municipality.⁵⁴²⁵ By 1995, only about 1,200 of Ključ's original 17,000 Bosnian Muslims remained.⁵⁴²⁶

1568. Having considered the totality of the evidence and assessed the circumstances in which departures occurred, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to leave Ključ.

(2) Background

1574. Prijedor is a municipality in northwest BiH in the ARK and is surrounded by Bosanski Novi, Bosanska Dubica, Bosanski Gradiška, Banja Luka, and Sanski Most.⁵⁴⁴⁵ In 1991, the population of Prijedor was approximately 112,543, among whom 43.9% were Bosnian Muslims, 42.3% were Bosnian Serbs, and 5.6% were Bosnian Croats.⁵⁴⁴⁶

(a) Division of municipal structures and establishment of Bosnian Serb institutions

1576. In 1990, multi-party elections were held in Prijedor, resulting in the SDA taking 30 of the 90 seats in the Municipal Assembly, the SDS taking 28 seats, the HDZ taking two seats, and the remaining seats going to smaller parties.⁵⁴⁴⁹ Subsequently, and on the basis of a prior agreement between the national parties concerning the division of powers, it was agreed amongst the elected Assembly members that the SDA should nominate the president of the municipality and the SDS would nominate the vice president.⁵⁴⁵⁰ The SDS would also nominate the president of the Executive Board and the SDA would nominate the vice president.⁵⁴⁵¹

1577. As a result, Muhamed Čehajić was nominated as President of the Prijedor Municipal Assembly, Milomir Stakić was nominated as the Vice President, and Milan Kovačević was nominated as President of the Executive Board.⁵⁴⁵² There was disagreement between the SDS, SDA, and HDZ over other appointments to public office in Prijedor.⁵⁴⁵³

1578. In 1991, SDS representatives proposed to other parties and local politicians that Prijedor be divided into two municipalities and that the municipal institutions be divided along ethnic lines.⁵⁴⁵⁴ In September 1991, the Accused intervened to replace the local SDS President in Prijedor, Srdo Srdić, with Simo Mišković, who promised to follow the policies of the SDS Main Board.⁵⁴⁵⁵ In December 1991, Mišković received the Variant A/B Instructions at a meeting of the SDS Main Board, over which the Accused presided.⁵⁴⁵⁶ Mišković then conveyed the Variant A/B Instructions to the Prijedor SDS leadership.⁵⁴⁵⁷ On 7 January 1992, the SDS members left the Prijedor Municipal Assembly and formed their own assembly, proclaimed as the Assembly of the Serbian People of the Municipality of Prijedor (“Prijedor Serb Assembly”); Milomir Stakić was appointed as its President, and Milan Kovačević was appointed as President of the Executive Board.⁵⁴⁵⁸ A Crisis Staff, later renamed the War Presidency,⁵⁴⁵⁹ was also formed by the SDS

1579. On 17 January 1992, the Prijedor Serb Assembly unanimously voted to join the ARK.⁵⁴⁶¹ Stakić, Mišković, Drljača, and Kovačević were elected as ARK Assembly representatives on 26 March 1992.⁵⁴⁶² In February 1992, Mišković attended another meeting with the Accused in Sarajevo; at the meeting, the Accused ordered the implementation of stage two of the Variant A/B Instructions.⁵⁴⁶³ Mišković later passed this instruction on to the SDS Municipal Board.⁵⁴⁶⁴

1580. On 16 April 1992, the Prijedor Serb Assembly elected individuals to different positions amongst whom were Boško Mandić, elected Deputy Chairman of the Executive Board, and Drljača, elected Chief of the SJB.⁵⁴⁶⁵ Drljača only assumed the position on 30 April 1992 once Prijedor was taken over.⁵⁴⁶⁶ On 23 April 1992, the SDS Municipal Board decided, inter alia, to reinforce the Crisis Staff, to subordinate “all units and staff in management posts” to the Crisis Staff, and “to immediately start working on the takeover, the co-ordination with JNA notwithstanding”.⁵⁴⁶⁷ Up until 30 April 1992, the SDA and HDZ continued to engage in talks with the SDS.⁵⁴⁶⁸ On 30 April 1992, Stakić was appointed President of the Prijedor

Municipality.⁵⁴⁶⁹ At this time, the Prijedor SDS was regularly receiving instructions from the central SDS and the Prijedor Crisis Staff received and implemented decisions from the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁵⁴⁷⁰

1581. On 20 May 1992, the Prijedor Serb Assembly formally adopted a Prijedor Crisis Staff decision of 1 May 1992, which implemented the 26 April 1992 Instructions issued by the Bosnian Serb Government, reorganising the Prijedor Crisis Staff, and creating a unified command of Crisis Staff, TO, police, and military.⁵⁴⁷¹ On the same day, the Prijedor Serb Assembly also appointed Stakić as President of the Crisis Staff and Dragan Savanović as Vice President; other members appointed to the Crisis Staff included Kovačević, Slobodan Kuruzović, Boško Mandić, Drljača, and Slavko Budimir.⁵⁴⁷²

(b) Propaganda and militarisation of Prijedor

1582. When the conflict in Croatia began in 1991, the residents of Prijedor began to feel insecure.⁵⁴⁷³ When the mobilisation of conscripts to be sent to Croatia with the JNA started, many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats chose not to respond to the call-up; this lack of response by non-Serbs resulted in Bosnian Serbs constituting the majority of JNA conscripts who went to fight in Croatia.⁵⁴⁷⁴ At the same time there was a rise in propaganda designed to instil fear among the population.⁵⁴⁷⁵ In late 1991 or early 1992, the SDS obtained a “repeater” at Mrkovic, from which only Serb programmes were emitted.⁵⁴⁷⁶ In February 1992, the JNA took over the TV relay at the Kozara mountain, blocking TV broadcasts from Croatia and Sarajevo and only permitting broadcasts from Belgrade and Banja Luka.⁵⁴⁷⁷ Radio and TV broadcasts relayed propaganda and used derogatory names for non-Serbs.⁵⁴⁷⁸ Announcements were made on Radio Prijedor that Bosnian Muslim doctors were trying to reduce the birth rate among Serbs in that part of BiH, either by sterilising Serb women or giving pregnant Serb women injections so that they could only give birth to female children; these allegations caused great fear among the Serb population of Prijedor, and negatively impacted inter-ethnic relations in the municipality.⁵⁴⁷⁹ Propaganda was also used to encourage Serbs to accept a policy of discrimination against non-Serbs; those Serbs who refused to comply with this policy of discrimination against non-Serbs were branded “traitors”.⁵⁴⁸⁰

1583. Starting in 1991 and lasting until spring 1992, weapons were distributed in Prijedor from JNA storage facilities to Prijedor TO units and then to local communes.⁵⁴⁸¹ Check-points were also established throughout the Prijedor area during this time.⁵⁴⁸² By late 1991, Prijedor contained the largest concentration of former JNA weapons.⁵⁴⁸³ The weapons given to Bosnian Muslim communes were antiquated and were matched with the wrong type of ammunition, whereas Bosnian Serb communes were given more weapons which did not have these problems.⁵⁴⁸⁴ By late 1991, JNA military helicopters landed several times a day in Serb areas of Prijedor distributing weapons.⁵⁴⁸⁵ In early 1992, the SDA Municipal Board received reports from people who saw JNA lorries with JNA soldiers distributing weapons in Serb villages, as well as reports of training groups run by the JNA for Serbs.⁵⁴⁸⁶

1584. In August 1991, 300 to 400 Serbs from Prijedor and the Krajina region were sent to Podgradci for a secret, advanced police training course by instructors from Serbia under Captain Dragan.⁵⁴⁸⁷ Radoslav Brđanin, Stojan Župljanin, and Drljača visited the course.⁵⁴⁸⁸

1585. By the end of April 1992, a number of clandestine Serb police stations were created in Prijedor and more than 1,500 Serb policemen were mobilised.⁵⁴⁸⁹

1586. In early May 1992, the Prijedor Serb Assembly ordered mobilisation pursuant to orders from the ARK and the RS Defence Ministry, requiring all men liable for military service in the ARK to mobilise for the TO.⁵⁴⁹⁰ On 22 May, the Crisis Staff ordered a further mobilisation pursuant to the 20 May 1992 SerBiH Presidency order, requiring conscripts to report to their war unit, and only Serbs were mobilised.⁵⁴⁹¹ The JNA withdrew from BiH around 20 May 1992, a few days before the attack on Hambarine; however, according to Sejmenović, the JNA did not really withdraw, rather “[t]hey just changed their name” and “[t]he officers started calling themselves the Serb army”.⁵⁴⁹² In fact, the number of troops increased in the Prijedor area after the JNA pulled out of BiH.⁵⁴⁹³ Radmilo Željaja, commander of the 43rd Motorised Brigade, which was later called the 343rd Motorised Brigade, fully co-operated with Drljača and the SJB during this period.⁵⁴⁹⁴

1587. A civilian police unit—later called the “intervention squad”—was formed in Prijedor in June 1992 by conscripting members of the civilian police in Prijedor; Captain Jović, head of the MP in Prijedor, placed Milutin Čađo in charge of its establishment.⁵⁴⁹⁵ The intervention squad was established by order of the Prijedor Crisis Staff.⁵⁴⁹⁶ It was headed by Miroslav Paras and was comprised of two squads; one of the squads was headed by Pero Čivčić and the other was headed by Dragoljub Gligić.⁵⁴⁹⁷ The duties of the intervention squad included the prevention and deterrence of crime, arresting and detaining individuals from Bosnian Muslim groups who were allegedly involved in the “attacks on Prijedor” from 30 May 1992, and “[normalising] life in Prijedor town and in the whole of the municipality”.⁵⁴⁹⁸ Furthermore, the intervention squad was ordered by its commanders to arrest certain Bosnian Muslims based on lists compiled by the commanders; these lists included prominent Bosnian Muslims, such as doctors, lawyers, professors, and religious leaders, and Bosnian Muslims linked to World War II through their predecessors.⁵⁴⁹⁹ During operations against Bosnian Muslims, the intervention squad co-operated with and was under the command of the military.⁵⁵⁰⁰

(3) Take-over of Prijedor town

1588. Prijedor town is located in the centre of Prijedor municipality.⁵⁵⁰¹ The town of Prijedor itself had a mixed population, although the Stari Grad area in the centre of the town was a predominantly Bosnian Muslim neighbourhood.⁵⁵⁰² There was an old mosque in the centre of Stari Grad, surrounded by a Muslim cemetery called Mezar.⁵⁵⁰³ The Municipal Assembly, the

Although the intervention squad was established by the order of the Prijedor Crisis Staff, Stakić maintained that he never learned of its establishment; furthermore, although Drljača, as head of the Prijedor SJB, reported directly to the Crisis Staff on the implementation of a number of Crisis Staff decisions, including the establishment of the intervention squad, Stakić stated that Drljača did not inform the Crisis Staff as to everything he was doing and moreover, that “what he wrote was one thing and his actions were different”. seat of the local government in Prijedor municipality, was located in the centre of town, as was the Executive Council and other executive bodies.⁵⁵⁰⁴

1589. In the beginning of April 1992, there was an increase in the number of armed Serbs in the streets and cafes in the town of Prijedor;⁵⁵⁰⁵ many of them wore JNA uniforms and insignia while others wore police uniforms.⁵⁵⁰⁶

1590. On 29 April 1992, the Prijedor SDS received a fax, which appeared to be from Alija Delimustafić and the BiH Presidency, ordering police stations in BiH to “commence operations” and secure the surrender of the JNA.⁵⁵⁰⁷ On 29 April, Mirsad Mujadžić, President of the SDA Municipal Board, was invited to meet with Colonel Arsić, of the 5th Corps of the JNA, and Mišković at the Prijedor barracks at Urije, where he was shown the fax; Mujadžić immediately believed it to be forged and conveyed this belief to Colonel Arsić and Mišković.⁵⁵⁰⁸ At dinner that evening, Mujadžić repeated to Arsić and Mišković that the SDA had no intentions to attack the SDS or Bosnian Serbs in Prijedor.⁵⁵⁰⁹

1591. Defence witnesses have testified that on 23 April 1992, at a meeting of the Prijedor SDS Municipal Board, the SDS was still not certain how it would act in the event of a conflict, and that the take-over of Prijedor was an unplanned response to the fax from Alija Delimustafić.⁵⁵¹⁰ The Chamber has considered the following evidence which confirms that the take-over of Prijedor was planned in advance of receiving the 29 April fax: (i) according to Mandić, the Prijedor SDS had organised themselves well in advance of receiving the fax on 29 April; (ii) Kovačević stated on Radio Prijedor that well before 30 April, “it was all neatly prepared and done and we waited for the moment which we had set and then on [29 April 1992] at 0400 hrs [...] we did it” and that “it really went the way we had planned”; (iii) according to Sejmenović, the Prijedor SDS in fact “had well-laid plans” by 23 April; (iv) Mišković considered the take-over of Prijedor town on 30 April 1992 to be part of the implementation of Variant B and that “preparations had to be made [...] in order to take over power”; and finally, (v) Dušan Janković testified that a decision was made on 16 April to install Drljača as Chief of the SJB on 30 April.⁵⁵¹¹ The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that the forcible take-over of the municipal authorities in Prijedor was prepared well in advance of 1 May 1992 and that a transmission by BiH leaders was used as a pretext for the take-over of Prijedor municipality.⁵⁵¹² The Chamber therefore finds that the take-over of Prijedor was planned well in advance of 30 April 1992, and was not an unplanned act in response to threats to Bosnian Serbs in Prijedor.

1592. On 30 April 1992, a take-over of the town of Prijedor was organised by the Prijedor Serb Assembly and the Prijedor SDS and executed by JNA forces, including the 5th Kozara Brigade, and members of the Prijedor SJB and other clandestine Serb police stations.⁵⁵¹³ During the night between 29 and 30 April 1992, members of the SJB and reserve police stations, some of whom were wearing military uniforms, gathered in Čirkin Polje, an area of Prijedor town.⁵⁵¹⁴ Between 1 and 5 a.m., Serb Forces set-up patrols, sniper nests, machine-gun nests, sandbags, and check-points throughout Prijedor town in several locations; there was no resistance from the non-Serb population.⁵⁵¹⁵

1593. By the morning of 30 April, soldiers occupied all of the most important institutions and buildings in Prijedor, such as the Municipal Assembly building, the police station, medical centre, court building, bank, post office, and radio station.⁵⁵¹⁶ Later that day, flags on municipal buildings in Prijedor town were also changed to Serb flags with the four Cyrillic letter “Cs”.⁵⁵¹⁷

1594. A declaration on the take-over prepared by the SDS was read out on Radio Prijedor the day after the take-over and was repeated throughout the day.⁵⁵¹⁸ That morning, a group of armed soldiers surrounded the Radio Prijedor building.⁵⁵¹⁹ Stakić came to Radio Prijedor and was introduced to employees as the President of the Serb municipality of Prijedor.⁵⁵²⁰ A press release was read out on-air, and Stakić was interviewed.⁵⁵²¹ During that interview, Stakić stated that he represented the Serb municipality of Prijedor, as its President, and that the leadership of the Serb municipality could no longer wait for an agreement with the SDA, which was the reason for the take-over of territory which rightly belonged to them. When Stakić was asked what would happen with the Bosnian Muslim residents of Prijedor, he stated: “We have nothing to do with them. On their portion of the municipal territory, they are free to organise themselves as they please, as they see fit and best for their interests.”⁵⁵²² Stakić mentioned several areas of the municipality that were considered to be Muslim, including Kozarac, Brdo, and the Stari Grad neighbourhood of Prijedor town.⁵⁵²³

1595. After the take-over, movement outside of Prijedor municipality was initially prohibited for both Serbs and non-Serbs, and later movement towards Prijedor town from non-Serb areas inside the municipality was also prohibited.⁵⁵²⁴

(a) Expulsion of non-Serbs from police, administrative and judicial organs, and work force

1596. On 30 April, non-Serbs were refused entrance into their work places and other institutions and were dismissed from management positions.⁵⁵²⁵ Nusreta Sivac, a Bosnian Muslim municipal court judge in Prijedor town, went to work on 30 April and found armed Serb military and paramilitary units at the court building.⁵⁵²⁶ She tried to enter the building and one of the soldiers asked her name and informed her that she no longer worked there.⁵⁵²⁷ The majority of Bosnian Muslim judges, prosecutors, and public attorneys were similarly dismissed in the first few days after the take-over and were replaced by Serbs.⁵⁵²⁸ Nusreta Sivac identified several Bosnian Muslim court officials who were dismissed and taken to Omarska camp where they were singled out as Bosnian Muslim intellectuals.⁵⁵²⁹

1597. Non-Serb members of the police were disarmed and dismissed or forced to sign a statement of loyalty if they wanted to stay employed.⁵⁵³⁰ Non-Serb commanders in the police were replaced with Serbs—Drljača assumed the position of Chief of the Prijedor SJB to which he was elected two weeks prior, Dušan Janković became Commander of the Prijedor Police Station, and Željko Mejakić became squad commander of the police.⁵⁵³¹ A few days after the take-over, most non-Serb teachers were also dismissed from schools.⁵⁵³²

1598. Also on 30 April, KDZ094 found that the vehicle he drove for work had been moved from the depot to the Urije headquarters of the company, where the main gate was closed, and an armed Serb guard in a green military uniform tried to search him for weapons, but he refused; KDZ094 then went home and did not return to work again, and neither did other non-Serbs who worked for the company.⁵⁵³³

1599. After the take-over, Atlija went to work at the Ljubija mines and his manager told him that the SDS had taken power in Prijedor and that he should go home; Atlija returned to his home town of Briševo.⁵⁵³⁴ He was told later that a Serb had moved into his apartment in Prijedor.⁵⁵³⁵ Furthermore, one day after the take-over, KDZ611 was stopped on his way to work at a check-

1600. For several days following the take-over, employees at Radio Prijedor were given several announcements to read out, such as one concerning a curfew imposed by the Serb authorities in Prijedor.⁵⁵³⁷ On one of these days, two Bosnian Muslim men, one of whom was Bećir Medunjanin, a local SDA leader, came to the radio station asking that an announcement be made that the people of Kozarac wished to live in peace and that there was no threat or danger coming from them.⁵⁵³⁸ However, soldiers inside the studio building prevented this announcement from being made on air, stating that police permission was required. When the men returned to the studio an hour later, they said that they had been denied permission by a police officer for the announcement to be made.⁵⁵³⁹ Employees at Radio Prijedor were later fired pursuant to a decision of the ARK Crisis Staff.⁵⁵⁴⁰

1601. On 22 June 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued a decision stating that all posts important for the functioning of the economy may only be held by “personnel of Serbian ethnicity”;⁵⁵⁴¹ this was then forwarded by Župljanin to all SJBs for its immediate implementation within the ARK.⁵⁵⁴² In July 1992, the Prijedor Crisis Staff and the Prijedor SJB reported that the ARK Crisis Staff decision was implemented in the municipality.⁵⁵⁴³

(b) House searches and surrender of weapons

1602. Following the take-over, there was a military presence on the streets of Prijedor town.⁵⁵⁴⁴ On 8 May 1992, Vahid Cerić, who worked for the TO, was arrested.⁵⁵⁴⁵ In accordance with a decision of the ARK government on 4 May 1992,⁵⁵⁴⁶ there were announcements on the radio that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats had to hand in their weapons by a certain deadline, and that white flags should be hung from the front of houses as a sign of loyalty to the authorities.⁵⁵⁴⁷ Prominent non-Serbs in the community, amongst whom were Dr. Esad Sadiković and Dedo Crnalić, went around to houses of non-Serbs encouraging them to hand in any weapons that they had in order to avoid conflict.⁵⁵⁴⁸ The Serb residents of Prijedor town were allowed to keep weapons and local Serbs were given weapons.⁵⁵⁴⁹

1603. In addition, houses of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were frequently searched and looted.⁵⁵⁵⁰ On 12 May 1992, two men from the CSB came to see Nusret Sivac, a journalist for Sarajevo TV, at his apartment and informed him they had orders to bring him to the CSB to meet with the chief, Ranko Mijić.⁵⁵⁵¹ Mijić told Nusret Sivac that he had orders from the “new Serb authorities” and the Crisis Staff to seize all of his camera equipment.⁵⁵⁵² They confiscated all of his equipment, including a large van equipped with cameras and his private tapes.⁵⁵⁵³ Nusret Sivac was held at the CSB for a while longer and then was allowed to go home after Mijić warned him not to leave Prijedor in case they needed to ask him further questions.⁵⁵⁵⁴

1604. During May 1992, continuous references were made by Serbs on the police radio about destroying mosques and everything that belonged to the “balijas”, as well as the need to destroy the “balijas” themselves.⁵⁵⁵⁵

(c) Clashes in Prijedor town

1605. On 30 May 1992, a group of around 20 Bosnian Muslims led by Slavko Ećimović attacked Prijedor town.⁵⁵⁵⁶ Announcements were made on the radio that Ećimović, a Bosnian Muslim who had been the target of threats by Serb police officers following the SDS take-over, was attacking

Prijedor town in an attempt to “liberate” it.⁵⁵⁵⁷ According to Nusreta Sivac, however, the group was too small to successfully take-over the buildings belonging to the radio station, MUP, or other important institutions.⁵⁵⁵⁸

1606. Around 9 a.m., a Serb tank and troops moved from the area around the Municipal Assembly Building towards the Stari Grad neighbourhood of Prijedor town.⁵⁵⁵⁹ Radical “Chetnik” songs also played on the radio calling for the killing of “Turks and other non-Serb people” and radio announcements called on all armed Serbs to defend the town and destroy the extremists.⁵⁵⁶⁰ Sometime that day, there was a confrontation between Ećimović and his group on one side and the Serb Forces on the other; Ećimović’s group ultimately retreated towards the Sana River, but Ećimović was captured.⁵⁵⁶¹ After Ećimović’s group retreated, Serb Forces, with APCs, heavy artillery weapons, and tanks, encircled Prijedor town, section by section.⁵⁵⁶² From the morning until the late afternoon, a tank and several grenade launchers fired at the old town of Prijedor from the bank of the Bereg, setting parts of the area ablaze for several hours.⁵⁵⁶³ At around 6 p.m. that day, Serb Forces set fire to the main mosque in the centre of Prijedor town, called the Čaršijska mosque.⁵⁵⁶⁴ The Zagrad mosque in Prijedor town was also burned and

1607. Throughout the day on 30 May, soldiers wearing red berets with red straps, and various different insignia, searched apartments, including that of Nusret Sivac, for weapons and alcohol and removed what they wanted.⁵⁵⁶⁷ Serb Forces also escorted columns of people, amongst whom were elderly people and children with white armbands; each column was led by a man carrying a white flag to different locations in Prijedor town, where buses arrived to take them to Trnopolje, Omarska, and Keraterm camps.⁵⁵⁶⁸ Non-Serbs who remained outside the detention facilities were required to wear white armbands to distinguish themselves and were subjected to harassment and beatings.⁵⁵⁶⁹

1608. There was no large-scale fighting the following day, but there was intermittent shooting and explosions.⁵⁵⁷⁰ Serb Forces continued to loot the homes of non-Serbs in the days after the attack.⁵⁵⁷¹ Furthermore, soldiers wearing olive-green colour uniforms with the Serbian four “S” insignia and “kokarda” caps, formerly worn by the JNA, stormed into houses and arrested people; non-Serbs in Prijedor town lived in fear of being attacked or taken away to Omarska and other camps.⁵⁵⁷² The movement of non-Serbs was restricted by means of a curfew and check-points; registers in apartment buildings were also used to record their movements.⁵⁵⁷³

1609. In the days after the 30 May attack, Radio Prijedor broadcast reports stating that Serbs had taken over Prijedor town and were “controlling all power and authority” there.⁵⁵⁷⁴ Propaganda against non-Serbs later intensified on the radio, including appeals to Serbs to “lynch” all non-Serbs.⁵⁵⁷⁵

1610. From 10 June 1992 on, Prijedor town was in a terrible state; there was no electricity or water and soldiers frequently searched apartments and evicted people from them.⁵⁵⁷⁶ The homes of non-Serbs were searched by the police and military, allegedly looking for weapons; however during those searches, valuables were taken.⁵⁵⁷⁷ Non-Serbs were evicted from their houses and apartments and Serbs moved in.⁵⁵⁷⁸ Serb families were protected and lived a normal life; they went to work, shopped, and walked around town.⁵⁵⁷⁹ Non-Serbs were taken away “in an unknown direction” and rumours started spreading about the existence of “concentration camps” in Prijedor municipality.⁵⁵⁸⁰

(4) Attacks on surrounding villages

1611. Prior to the 30 May attack on Prijedor town, Serb Forces had launched attacks on other villages and areas in Prijedor municipality, starting with the villages of Hambarine and Ljubija on 23 May, Kozarac on 24 May, and Kamičani on 26 May 1992.⁵⁵⁸¹

(a) Kozarac area

1612. The area of Kozarac is located approximately 12 kilometres to the east of Prijedor town, with Kozarac town lying on the main road from Prijedor to Banja Luka, beneath Mount Kozara.⁵⁵⁸² Before the events of 1992, Kozarac town and the surrounding villages were inhabited by Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims alike; however some of the villages in the area were almost entirely inhabited by Bosnian Muslims (such as Garibi, Kamičani, Kevljani, Babići, and Hrnići), and other villages had a majority Bosnian Serb population (such as Vidovići, Balte, Lamovita, Omarska, Jelicka, Maricka, Tomašica, Jaruge, Orlovci, and Garevci).⁵⁵⁸³ As of 1991, 27,000 people lived in the whole area and in Kozarac town alone, over 90% of the population was Bosnian Muslim; Bosnian Serbs comprised 3% of the population and there were very few Croats.⁵⁵⁸⁴

1614. In October 1991, the President of the local board of the SDA of Kozarac mobilised around 120 men for the TO in Kozarac.⁵⁵⁸⁹ Beginning in the period before the take-over of Prijedor,⁵⁵⁹⁰ members of the TO, the Green Berets, and other armed Bosnian Muslim groups were active in the Kozarac area.⁵⁵⁹¹

1615. Immediately following the take-over of Prijedor, there were also efforts on the part of the local non-Serb population to organise themselves to defend their homes from the attacks they anticipated, but they were poorly armed and equipped with no artillery or heavy equipment.⁵⁵⁹²

Members of the TO patrolled Kozarac on night duty.⁵⁵⁹³ Other local Bosnian Muslims set up armed guard posts at various places around Kozarac.⁵⁵⁹⁴ In Javori, five to ten Bosnian Muslims, including Sead Ćirkin, a former JNA officer, participated in guard duty to protect the outer border of Kozarac; they were armed with hunting rifles.⁵⁵⁹⁵

1616. After the take-over in Prijedor, the town of Kozarac was cut off.⁵⁵⁹⁶ On 22 May 1992, the telephone lines were disconnected and entry to and exit from the area, as well as medical supplies, were controlled.⁵⁵⁹⁷ This instilled a feeling of insecurity in the local residents.⁵⁵⁹⁸ The local radio and television stations broadcast announcements that the local population and members of the police and TO should sign an oath of loyalty to the SDS and the authorities in Prijedor, including to Drljača, Željaja, and Kovačević, and only upon such signature would members of the police and TO be allowed to keep their jobs.⁵⁵⁹⁹ The majority of the population of Kozarac, however, refused to sign the oath.⁵⁶⁰⁰ Local non-Serb leaders, Ćirkin and Medunjanin, sought to negotiate with the new SDS authorities in Prijedor, amongst whom was Župljanin, and to reassure them that the population had no intention of attacking them.⁵⁶⁰¹ The local TO and police of Kozarac were ordered to surrender all of their weapons and if they did not, Kozarac would be attacked; the TO and police did not obey and the attack on Kozarac began shortly after the ultimatum expired.⁵⁶⁰²

1618. On 24 May 1992, Kozarac was attacked.⁵⁶⁰³ Around 12 p.m., shells were fired from the direction of Mount Kozara in the north.⁵⁶⁰⁴ A column of military vehicles, mounted with heavy machine guns and anti-aircraft guns, advanced on Kozarac from the directions of Prijedor and Banja Luka.⁵⁶⁰⁵ The column was followed by infantry soldiers who fired towards the civilian areas in Kozarac, including on houses and religious buildings, as well as at the Bosnian Muslim manned check-points.⁵⁶⁰⁶ They were supported by artillery fire and shelling from the surrounding hills.⁵⁶⁰⁷ After the shelling started, the population of Kozarac town and the surrounding villages retreated towards the centre of Kozarac.⁵⁶⁰⁸

1619. Also on 24 May 1992, after inhabitants had been told to hand over their weapons, several shells were fired at the Bosnian Muslim inhabited hamlet of Garibi; Garibi was in Trnopolje, seven kilometres from Kozarac.⁵⁶⁰⁹ At least four Bosnian Muslims from Garibi, including two women and an invalid elderly man, were killed during the attack.⁵⁶¹⁰ The local inhabitants of Garibi fled towards Sivći, Huskići, and other nearby villages.⁵⁶¹¹ In the evening, the other Muslim villages in the area, including Huskići, Kevljani, Hadžići, Jakupovići, Kamičani, Softići, Brdjani, Kozaruša, and Mujkanovići, were shelled.⁵⁶¹² The village of Kozaruša was destroyed and only Serb houses remained, for the most part, untouched.⁵⁶¹³

1620. The units involved in the attack on Kozarac and the operation following the attack included units of the 1st Krajina Corps, such as the Banja Luka Corps, the 343rd Motorised Brigade, and the

6th Krajina Brigade,⁵⁶¹⁴ as well as units of the Prijedor TO, Serb paramilitaries, and members of the Prijedor SJB.⁵⁶¹⁵ The commander of all of the units involved in this attack, including the paramilitary units, was Željaja.⁵⁶¹⁶

1621. The shelling and firing lasted for two to three days and caused panic amongst the local population.⁵⁶¹⁷ Houses and buildings in Kozarac and the surrounding villages were damaged by the shelling and shooting, and some were destroyed.⁵⁶¹⁸ The Serb infantry soldiers also set houses on fire; in some areas, such as Jakupovići and Končari, entire villages were “razed”.⁵⁶¹⁹ Sejmenović witnessed the Serb infantry set fire to houses with people still inside; those who were able to escape said that special bombs were used to set the houses on fire in a second.⁵⁶²⁰ Organised looting also occurred; looted property, including refrigerators and stoves, was collected in a large truck and every three or four days, the truck would take it all away to Kozarac and then come back for more.⁵⁶²¹

1622. The majority of the Bosnian Muslim employees of the Kozarac police station were killed during the take-over of Kozarac; a small number was taken to Omarska and Keraterm.⁵⁶²²

However, the Chamber does not have sufficient evidence as to the circumstances surrounding the deaths of these policemen to make a finding on these killings.

1623. Arifagić was on guard duty in Javori during the attack and he saw six men killed as a result of the shelling.⁵⁶²³ At least three individuals were killed in Duračci, a village outside of Trnopolje in the Kozarac area.⁵⁶²⁴ However, the Chamber does not have sufficient evidence as to the circumstances surrounding the deaths of these three individuals, or as to their status at the time of their deaths, to make a finding on these killings.

1625. On 25 May 1992, Merdžanić decided to move the clinic to a location more accessible to the population on the outskirts of the town.⁵⁶²⁸ When he tried to negotiate through a police radio in order to obtain the safe passage of the wounded, including two children, one of whom had her legs completely shattered, he was told over the radio: “Let all of you balija [...] die there. We’ll kill you all anyway”.⁵⁶²⁹

1626. On the morning of 26 May 1992, the terms of surrender for the population of Kozarac were agreed upon, after which the shelling stopped.⁵⁶³⁰ A convoy was organised to leave the town.⁵⁶³¹ The wounded were allowed to leave first, followed by police officers, and then the remaining civilian population.⁵⁶³² A convoy of primarily Bosnian Muslim villagers formed and moved towards Kozarac town.⁵⁶³³ They travelled through Kozarac town, which was completely destroyed, and by the time they reached the intersection at the main Prijedor-Banja Luka road, their group had been augmented by many others moving in the same direction.⁵⁶³⁴

1627. KDZ048 and his family had travelled in the convoy in their car and at the intersection, they encountered a tank and a lot of troops in various uniforms, who first told them to leave their vehicles behind, but then permitted them to continue on their way towards Prijedor town.⁵⁶³⁵ At the intersection, KDZ048 also saw at least ten dead bodies in police uniforms, one of whom he recognised as a local Bosnian Muslim police officer.⁵⁶³⁶ However, the Chamber does not have sufficient evidence as to the circumstances surrounding the deaths of these ten individuals during the attack on Kozarac to make a finding on these killings.

1628. At the same intersection, the men were separated from the women and children by Serb soldiers; the men were taken to Keraterm and Omarska primarily, though some were sent to Trnopolje, and the women and children were put on separate buses and taken to Trnopolje.⁵⁶³⁷

1629. After the convoy set off, Merdžanić and the other staff members of the clinic went back to the original location of the clinic to check if there were any wounded.⁵⁶³⁸ When they arrived they were captured by Serb soldiers wearing camouflage uniforms, red berets, and armbands.⁵⁶³⁹ After a few minutes, a JNA truck arrived and the soldiers loaded it with all the medical supplies of the clinic and the truck left; Merdžanić and the other staff were taken to the centre of Kozarac.⁵⁶⁴⁰ While in the centre, Merdžanić saw one of the soldiers single out Nihad Bahonjić, the ambulance driver from the Kozarac clinic, and take him away; it was confirmed later that Bahonjić was

1630. By 26 May 1992, most of the population of Kozarac had surrendered; however, those who had not surrendered, amongst whom were armed members of the Bosnian Muslim TO and SDA leaders, retreated to Mount Kozara.⁵⁶⁴³ One group, which included Arifagić, came under fire at a place called Zeciji Kamen and a fight ensued.⁵⁶⁴⁴

1631. Another group of approximately 100 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the Kevljani area was arrested by armed Bosnian Serbs wearing different kinds of uniforms; one man was shot dead after they found a Croatian passport on him.⁵⁶⁴⁵ This group was taken to the Benkovac training grounds, which had been used for military purposes before the conflict, but had been turned into a detention camp run by the military.⁵⁶⁴⁶ At the Benkovac training grounds, the detained group was ordered to line up in front of a building, and a Bosnian Serb soldier with the last name of Romanić singled out four individuals.⁵⁶⁴⁷ They were taken to one of the rooms inside the building and shot dead.⁵⁶⁴⁸ The “hodža” was also beaten to death by the soldiers.⁵⁶⁴⁹ In the course of the day, 60 individuals were taken to the woods in groups, from where bursts of gunfire could be heard; all of these individuals were killed.⁵⁶⁵⁰

1632. Arifagić was not captured with the group taken to Benkovac, but he stayed in the forest with a group of people who then made contact with Čirkin and Medunjanin.⁵⁶⁵¹

⁵⁶⁵¹ Jusuf Arifagić, P689 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Stakić), T. 7078, 7137–7138 (testifying that Čirkin and Medunjanin were in a group of 750 people with whom he met up and they decided to split into three groups—one group wanted to cross over into Croatia while the other two groups wanted to return to Kozarac; conflict ensued between these two groups and “Serb troops” in the centre of Kozarac and ultimately several men were killed and they withdrew).

1633. Another group of approximately 35 to 40 people left Kozarac after the attack and moved towards Kozarački Kamen to reach the Sava River in order to cross over to Croatia.⁵⁶⁵² After the group passed Kozarački Kamen, they were noticed by “uniformed reconnaissance men” who opened fire on them and a member of the group was killed.⁵⁶⁵³ The Chamber, however, does not have sufficient evidence as to the circumstances surrounding the death of this individual, or regarding his status at the time, to make a finding about this killing. The remainder of the group fled and returned to a suburb of Kozarac; they were later captured and brought to the Prijedor barracks on or around 9 June 1992.⁵⁶⁵⁴

1634. On 14 June 1992, Arifagić was captured by Serb soldiers at Mujkanovići, a village close to Trnopolje, where he had gone in the hope of seeing his mother.⁵⁶⁵⁵ He was in a group of about 40 men, who had all been captured at the same time and were ordered to march towards Kamičani.⁵⁶⁵⁶ The men in the group were beaten and forced to sing “Serbian songs” along the way. Upon arriving at a check-point in Kamičani, they were further beaten and mistreated.⁵⁶⁵⁷ This group of men was then put on a bus from the “Prijedor Autotransport” company and they were taken to Omarska, and then on to Keraterm.⁵⁶⁵⁸

1635. While the Chamber took judicial notice of two adjudicated facts which state that as a result of the shelling of Kozarac on 24 May 1992, over 800 of its inhabitants were killed,⁵⁶⁵⁹ the Chamber cannot be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt as to the precise circumstances surrounding these deaths, nor about the status of these individuals in light of the other evidence before it. The Chamber is therefore unable to include these deaths in its findings on the killings for this Scheduled Incident.

⁵⁶⁵⁹ See Adjudicated Facts 1046 (stating inter alia that as a result of the shelling in Kozarac, over 800 of its inhabitants were killed and that the remainder, including those from surrounding Muslim villages, were expelled), 1057 (stating that: “On 27 May 1992 senior military officers met to be briefed on the attack on Kozarac: Lieutenant-General Talić, as Commander of the Banja Luka Corps, the 5th Corps of the old JNA, was informed that 800 people had been killed in the attack on Kozarac and an additional 1,200 had been captured; casualties on the part of the units of the Corps were four soldiers killed and fifteen injured.”).

1636. The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that at least 80 Bosnian Muslim civilians were killed when Bosnian Serb soldiers and police entered the villages of the Kozarac area.⁵⁶⁶⁰ The Chamber has made findings above in respect of approximately 80 individuals who were killed during the attack on Kozarac and the surrounding areas.⁵⁶⁶¹ In addition, the Chamber received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals from Kozarac and the surrounding areas between 24 May and June 1992.⁵⁶⁶²

1637. In light of the above, the Chamber is therefore satisfied that at least 80 Bosnian Muslims, including civilians, were killed by Serb Forces in Kozarac and the surrounding areas between 24 May and June 1992.

(ii) Aftermath of the attack

1638. By 28 May 1992, 50% of Kozarac was destroyed, with the remaining damage occurring between June and August 1992.⁵⁶⁶³ By the end of summer 1992, the area of Kozarac was desolate; many of the buildings which had survived the attack undamaged were subsequently looted and destroyed.⁵⁶⁶⁴ During the attack on Kozarac, however, care was taken to try to avoid damage to Serb houses and property.⁵⁶⁶⁵ After the take-over, Kozarac was occupied by Serb Forces under the control of the Serb authorities.⁵⁶⁶⁶

⁵⁶⁶² P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 15–16, 20, 23 (confirming the deaths of 11 identified individuals from Kozarac and the surrounding areas who were exhumed from graves in Trnopolje-Redži, Huskići, Jakarina Kosa, Dera-Bešići, and Kamičani in 2000, 2001, 2003, 2006, 2007, 2009); P4888 (Bihać Cantonal Court record of Huskići-Kamičani and Prijedor exhumations, 16 June 2000), p. 3 (confirming the exhumation of two of the same individuals identified by Mašović, Enver Huskić and Šerif Huskić, in June 2000). The Chamber notes that there is a discrepancy between the forensic reports regarding the name of one of the victims of this Scheduled Incident. More specifically, Mašović contains a reference to Edhem Huskić, son of Sulejman born on 15 August 1929, while the Bihać Cantonal Court record contains a reference to Šerif Huskić, son of Sulejman born on 15 August 1929. The Chamber considers this inconsistency to be minor. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that this is in fact the same individual. 1639. In early June 1992, KDZ392 saw that the Mutnik mosque in Kozarac was burnt; it was later destroyed.⁵⁶⁶⁷ Unlike the mosque, the Serbian Orthodox church in Kozarac was not damaged during the attack.⁵⁶⁶⁸ When KDZ048 returned to Kozarac in 1997, none of the 16 mosques that had previously been there remained intact.⁵⁶⁶⁹

1640. During his journey on 5 August, Edward Vulliamy, a British journalist covering the conflict in BiH in 1992, was escorted by Major Milutinović, who told Vulliamy that the only remaining inhabitants were the local Serbs and that “some 40,000 Muslims” had left the area by this time.⁵⁶⁷⁰ When KDZ048 returned in 1997, he found Serb refugees from Croatia living in his house.⁵⁶⁷¹

(iii) Scheduled Incident A.10.3

1641. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people were killed in Kamičani on or about 26 May 1992.

1642. Kamičani is a village located approximately two kilometres to the southeast of Kozarac; in 1992, Kamičani was predominantly Bosnian Muslim with 2,000 to 3,000 inhabitants.⁵⁶⁷²

1643. Between 24 and 26 May 1992, Kamičani was shelled by Serb Forces.⁵⁶⁷³ Houses in Kamičani were damaged by the shelling.⁵⁶⁷⁴ Additionally, the mosque in Kamičani was set alight

1651. Jaskići is a Bosnian Muslim village located to the south of Kozarac, near Trnopolje.⁵⁶⁹⁴ During the attack on Kozarac, Bosnian Muslim refugees from all over, including from Brdjani, Jakupovići, Kamičani, Kozaruša, and Bešići, travelled to Jaskići to seek shelter.⁵⁶⁹⁵

1652. On 14 June 1992, soldiers arrived in Jaskići between 2 and 3 p.m.⁵⁶⁹⁶ Senija Elkasović, a Bosnian Muslim woman, heard shots behind her house, two soldiers then came to the entrance of her house, pointed rifles through the front door, and ordered the women and children to step back and for the men to step forward.⁵⁶⁹⁷ Elkasović's husband, brother, and brother-in-law were taken from the house while one of the soldiers ordered Elkasović and eight other family members, all women and children, to lie down in the kitchen.⁵⁶⁹⁸ Before lying down, she saw Duško Tadić, wearing a multi-coloured camouflage military uniform, standing in her yard.⁵⁶⁹⁹ The soldier who remained in the house searched the house for money and jewellery, as well as for anyone hiding; he opened closets, emptied drawers, shouted threats and cursed their mothers and insulted them, saying that they would be sent to Turkey.⁵⁷⁰⁰ Elkasović heard voices and shouts coming from outside and then she heard shots.⁵⁷⁰¹ The soldier left her house and Elkasović looked out of the window to see soldiers leaving towards Kozarac.⁵⁷⁰²

1654. Three days later, Elkasović, her father-in-law, and another man, Huse Jaskić, went to Trnopolje camp to ask permission to bury the bodies of the men killed in Jaskići.⁵⁷⁰⁶ They were told by soldiers guarding the camp to speak to Kuruzović; he then gave them permission.⁵⁷⁰⁷ They returned and buried the bodies in a common grave.⁵⁷⁰⁸ Thereafter, soldiers came through Jaskići, and into Elkasović's home, on a daily basis, as they searched for cars, tractors, fuel, livestock, brandy, and other items.⁵⁷⁰⁹

1655. After 14 June 1992, only a small number of families and Huse Jaskić remained in Jaskići.⁵⁷¹⁰ Elkasović stayed in Jaskići for another month and then she and her children were forced to leave by members of the police and were taken to Trnopolje camp.⁵⁷¹¹

1656. Elkasović confirmed the names of the four men whose bodies she found outside of her house, as well as that of one additional Bosnian Muslim man who was killed on 14 June 1992.⁵⁷¹² In addition, Elkasović never saw or heard from her husband, brother, or her brother-in-law after they were taken out of her house by soldiers on 14 June 1992.⁵⁷¹³ The Chamber has also received forensic evidence to support the deaths of the five men identified by Elkasović as having been killed and of her husband, brother, and her brother-in-law who went missing from Jaskići on 14 June 1992.⁵⁷¹⁴ Further, the Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that at least eight Bosnian Muslim men were shot and killed when Bosnian Serb soldiers entered the village of Jaskići on 14 June 1992.⁵⁷¹⁵

1657. In light of the above evidence, the Chamber is satisfied that at least eight Bosnian Muslim men were killed by Serb Forces in the village of Jaskići on or about 14 June 1992.

(b) Brdo area

1658. The area of Brdo is located to the southwest and west of Prijedor town and comprises the villages of Biščani, Rizvanovići, Rakovćani, Hambarine, Čarakovo, and Zecovi.⁵⁷¹⁶ In 1992, the village of Hambarine was inhabited solely by Bosnian Muslims and was the highest elevation point in Brdo.⁵⁷¹⁷ The village of Biščani itself had a number of hamlets, namely Mrkalji, Hegići, Ravine, Sredići, Duratovići, and Kadići.⁵⁷¹⁸ Prior to the conflict, Čarakovo was a predominantly Bosnian Muslim village with about 800 to 900 houses and Rizvanovići was a Bosnian Muslim village with one Croat.⁵⁷¹⁹ The Brdo area was surrounded by predominantly Serb villages.⁵⁷²⁰

1659. After the take-over of Prijedor, the village of Biščani was cut off; all of the Bosnian Muslims there were dismissed from their jobs, and they could not go into Prijedor town because of the check-points that had been set-up.⁵⁷²¹

1660. There was a check-point manned by Serb soldiers in camouflage uniforms in the village of Gomjenica, and another on the main road between Prijedor town and Sanski Most, in Tukovi.⁵⁷²² After 30 April 1992, Bosnian Muslims also established check-points at the entrance to the villages of Hambarine and Rizvanovići.⁵⁷²³ Nermin Karagić, a Bosnian Muslim 17 year old boy from Rizvanovići, participated in guarding the Rizvanovići check-point with about nine other local men; between them, they only had one M48 rifle.⁵⁷²⁴

1661. Bosnian Muslims in Biščani set up a crisis staff there, which operated starting at the end of April 1992 until 22 May 1992 before the attack on Hambarine.⁵⁷²⁵ In Čarakovo, villagers had no electricity starting on at least 7 May 1992 while the surrounding Serb villages across the Sana

River, as well as Prijedor town, continued to have electricity.⁵⁷²⁶ Sometime in May it became necessary to obtain a permit from the MUP to be allowed to go to Prijedor.⁵⁷²⁷

1662. Prior to the beginning of the conflict, Bosnian Muslim paramilitary groups were active in the Prijedor area and the TO had a presence in Hambarine, although they had no anti-armour weapons.⁵⁷²⁸ Some weapons had been brought to Hambarine and were stored in the community centre for use in case of an attack; however, these weapons were very old and not functional.⁵⁷²⁹

1663. On 22 May 1992, there was a shooting incident involving five to six Serb soldiers at a Bosnian Muslim check-point near Hambarine.⁵⁷³⁰ Later that day, Serb soldiers arrived in Hambarine in a tank and presented an ultimatum to the villagers, namely that Aziz Ališković and Ferid Sikirić, the Bosnian Muslim policemen believed to have been involved in the incident at the

Hambarine check-point, should surrender, or the village would be attacked.⁵⁷³¹ The tank fired four shells at the village that night.⁵⁷³²

(i) Scheduled Incident A.10.2

1664. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people were killed in the Hambarine and Ljubija area between 23 May and 1 July 1992.

1665. On 23 May 1992, a broadcast was issued over Radio Prijedor calling for a number of identified people, including Aziz Alisković, to surrender and warning that all weapons in the possession of non-Serbs should be handed in to the authorities or Hambarine would be attacked.⁵⁷³³

1666. Around noon that day, Hambarine was shelled from different directions for several hours.⁵⁷³⁴ Ivo Atlija witnessed the attack on Hambarine from Briševo and saw two or three tanks firing at the town; he later saw smoke, houses burning, and a large number of soldiers moving around the village.⁵⁷³⁵ All of the houses in Hambarine were shelled and the old mosque in Hambarine was targeted and shelled.⁵⁷³⁶

1667. After several hours of artillery shelling, armed Serb Forces entered the area supported by one or two tanks.⁵⁷³⁷ After a brief period of intermittent fighting, local Bosnian Muslim leaders collected any remaining weapons from villagers and surrendered these, as well as most of the weapons that had belonged to the TO and the local police force, to the Serb Forces.⁵⁷³⁸

1668. The units that took part in the 23 May attack on Hambarine included units of the 1st Krajina Corps, including the 6th Krajina Brigade and the 43rd Motorised Brigade,⁵⁷³⁹ the Prijedor SJB, including the intervention squad, joined by members of Bosnian Serb paramilitary groups.⁵⁷⁴⁰

1669. During the attack, villagers fled south to the Kurevo woods,⁵⁷⁴¹ some were pursued by tanks, which opened fire towards the woods.⁵⁷⁴² KDZ092 testified that as she fled her home, she saw a lot of soldiers in multi-coloured uniforms, armed with automatic rifles, passing by and shooting at the villagers, accompanied by tanks firing at the houses.⁵⁷⁴³ She saw houses burning as a result.⁵⁷⁴⁴ In addition, at least 50 houses along the Hambarine-Prijedor road were damaged or destroyed by Serb Forces.⁵⁷⁴⁵

In his final brief, the Accused argues that Serbian forces were met with “strong resistance” in Hambarine when they attempted to dismantle the check-point there. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1547. However, the Chamber has received credible and mutually corroborative evidence that the fighting in Hambarine on 23 May 1992 was brief, and that the armament on the Bosnian Muslim side was poor. 1670. No one in the group she was with was returning fire, although she conceded that some people had pistols.⁵⁷⁴⁶ KDZ092 also saw the dead body of a woman she knew lying at the entrance to her house with her head severed from her body, and the dead body of another woman she knew who was lying in the entrance to her house with blood surrounding her body.⁵⁷⁴⁷ KDZ092 further testified that her best friend's husband and son were killed in Rizvanovići after having fled Hambarine during the attack.⁵⁷⁴⁸ Her son's throat was slit and her husband was shot and killed as he ran out of the house to his son; his wife buried both men in a shallow grave in Rizvanovići.⁵⁷⁴⁹

1671. Also on 23 May, about 400 refugees from the Hambarine area, mostly women, children, and elderly men, but also some young men, went to Briševo.⁵⁷⁵⁰

1672. On 24 May, KDZ092 and her family went to Ljubija, where they stayed until it was attacked.⁵⁷⁵¹ During this period, Serb soldiers came and took some people away from Ljubija, including a former police officer who KDZ092 knew.⁵⁷⁵² One day, very early in the morning, soldiers in camouflage uniforms came to the house where KDZ092 was staying and told the 38 occupants, all Bosnian Muslim men, women, and children, to go outside.⁵⁷⁵³ The men were separated from the women and children and the men were then taken away to the Ljubija stadium.⁵⁷⁵⁴ However, one of the men, [REDACTED], had a kidney condition and his family called an ambulance to take him to the hospital to receive treatment; a military ambulance with two soldiers took him and on the way home, the soldiers took him out of the ambulance and killed him.⁵⁷⁵⁵ The women and children were returned to the cellar, verbally abused, and robbed of their valuables.⁵⁷⁵⁶

1673. During May and June 1992, announcements calling for weapons to be turned in and for certain individuals to surrender were made on Radio Prijedor.⁵⁷⁵⁷ In particular, the local population of Bišćani was instructed to hand in their weapons and any uniforms they had from previous reserve service in the army.⁵⁷⁵⁸ They did as instructed.⁵⁷⁵⁹ During the attacks on the villages in the Brdo area, Radio Prijedor broadcast that “an Ustasha fundamentalist stronghold” had fallen, and that it had been a great success of the Serb army.⁵⁷⁶⁰

1674. During June 1992, Serb soldiers came to Čarakovo, demanding fuel, vehicles, and livestock, and looking for local men.⁵⁷⁶¹ KDZ014 was aware that some of the local leaders in Čarakovo had a meeting with Serb officials around this time, but that they had not been able to agree on anything except that the Bosnian Muslims should put up white sheets or flags on their houses.⁵⁷⁶² This they did.⁵⁷⁶³ After the attack on Hambarine, life in the area, including in Bišćani, was difficult, as the Brdo area remained isolated.

1675. On 9 June 1992, soldiers wearing drab olive uniforms and helmets arrived at a shop and café in Hambarine, which they looted and subsequently set on fire.⁵⁷⁶⁴ On 11 June 1992, KDZ074 took shelter in his cousin’s garage nearby, along with members of his family, who were all unarmed civilians.⁵⁷⁶⁵ He then departed with two male relatives, and subsequently was told by his mother that one of his brothers had been shot and killed in the garage by four Serb police officers; KDZ074’s wife was also shot in the leg and wounded.⁵⁷⁶⁶ After the survivors escaped, the garage was then set on fire by one of the Serb police officers.⁵⁷⁶⁷

1676. In addition to the deaths of the six individuals confirmed by witnesses above,⁵⁷⁶⁸ the Chamber also received forensic evidence to support the deaths of at least six additional victims who were killed in the areas of Hambarine and Ljubija between 23 May and 1 July 1992.⁵⁷⁶⁹ However, the Chamber does not have sufficient evidence as to the circumstances surrounding the deaths of these six latter individuals to make a finding in this regard.

1677. Based on the above, the Chamber therefore finds that at least six Bosnian Muslims were killed by Serb Forces in the areas of Hambarine and Ljubija between 23 May and 1 July 1992.

(ii) Scheduled Incident A.10.5

1678. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people were killed in the villages of the Brdo area between 1 and 23 July 1992.

1679. Beginning on 20 July 1992, Serb Forces, including units of the 1st Krajina Corps, such as the 6th Krajina Brigade, as well as the Reconnaissance and Sabotage Company and members of the intervention squad, attacked villages around the entire region of Brdo.⁵⁷⁷⁰

1680. On 21 and 22 July 1992, the villages of Rakovčani and Rizvanovići were also attacked.⁵⁷⁷¹ Karagić saw an APC open fire towards Rizvanovići.⁵⁷⁷² Soldiers patrolled the village and some of the villagers took shelter in the basement of one of the houses there.⁵⁷⁷³ The next day, Karagić saw soldiers wearing olive-grey military uniforms throwing hand grenades and shooting; he ran to a vantage point from where he could see the whole area and saw these soldiers taking up positions around the village.⁵⁷⁷⁴ After the attack on Rizvanovići, Karagić saw houses on fire in the area.⁵⁷⁷⁵ During this attack, homes were destroyed and personal belongings were looted.⁵⁷⁷⁶

1681. Karagić also saw a tank fire about 20 shells towards the mosque in Hambarine.⁵⁷⁷⁷ The mosque in Rajkovac was also shelled.⁵⁷⁷⁸ According to Nasić, three young men were taken away from Rizvanovići in late July 1992; they were never seen again.⁵⁷⁷⁹

1682. The village of Čarakovo was attacked on 23 July 1992, after several demands that residents should hand in their weapons.⁵⁷⁸⁰ According to KDZ014, all rifles, pistols, and other weapons in Čarakovo were handed in by residents to Serb Forces by June 1992.⁵⁷⁸¹ Based on the evidence before it, the Chamber finds that the TO and other Bosnian Muslim units were not active in Čarakovo at this time and that there was no armed resistance to the attack on the village by Serb Forces on 23 July.

1683. That day, KDZ014 was hiding in a corn field, trying to get to her children in her house, when she heard the sounds of tanks and shooting and women and children screaming.⁵⁷⁸² She saw houses burning and soldiers in camouflage uniforms moving through the woods nearby.⁵⁷⁸³ During the attack, Čarakovo suffered extensive damage and destruction and houses were looted.⁵⁷⁸⁴

1684. The mosque in Čarakovo, including the minaret, was destroyed by Serb soldiers on 23 July 1992, and 17 people, including the “hodža”, were killed outside.⁵⁷⁸⁵

1685. After the initial attack on Čarakovo, soldiers mistreated and killed some of the villagers.⁵⁷⁸⁶ For instance, on or around 23 July 1992, Besim Musić was approached by Serb soldiers while he was shredding corn; they took him into a car, beat him, and then threw him out on the road.⁵⁷⁸⁷ The soldiers also shot around Musić, causing the bullets to rip skin on his head, arms, and legs, while not actually hitting him.⁵⁷⁸⁸ Another villager told KDZ014 that Musić's wife had been killed, along with another man, by soldiers who questioned them about the whereabouts of hideouts used by the Green Berets.⁵⁷⁸⁹

1686. Also in Čarakovo, KDZ014 saw the dead bodies of Rubija Redžić, a local Bosnian Muslim woman, Fehim Karupović, a local Bosnian Muslim man, and her neighbour, Adem Hopovac. They were all unarmed, wearing civilian clothes, and had been shot.⁵⁷⁹⁰ In the swampy area known as Bare, between Zecovi and Čarakovo, KDZ014 also saw eight dead bodies of Bosnian Muslims in civilian clothes.⁵⁷⁹¹ She and her brothers then collected and buried these bodies.⁵⁷⁹² KDZ014 also assisted in burying the bodies of two Bosnian Muslim men found in a field on 24 July 1992.⁵⁷⁹³ On 27 July 1992, she saw the body of another Bosnian Muslim man as it was buried by his son.⁵⁷⁹⁴

1687. In the days following the attack, KDZ014 and the other local residents sometimes slept in the woods and returned to their homes in the mornings to collect food; they were afraid that if they were found they would be killed.⁵⁷⁹⁵ The Serb soldiers stole vehicles, farm machinery, money, and gold from the local residents in Čarakovo; household items were also stolen and loaded on to vehicles.⁵⁷⁹⁶ KDZ014 also saw men, women, and children from the area being forced on to buses by Serb soldiers and driven away. Other groups of villagers left on foot in the days after the attack; KDZ014 did not know where buses or groups of villagers were going.⁵⁷⁹⁷

1688. In late July 1992, KDZ014 decided to leave Čarakovo; she and approximately 100 other people, primarily women, children, and elderly, assembled and went to the village “dom” carrying a white flag; they were kept there for three hours and verbally abused by Serb soldiers.⁵⁷⁹⁸ They were then escorted by the Serb soldiers to an area of Čarakovo known as Žeger, where the road to Čarakovo meets the main road from Prijedor to Sanski Most.⁵⁷⁹⁹

1689. Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat men were stopped and killed at a bridge in Žeger.⁵⁸⁰⁰ KDZ092 testified that she saw buses from Prijedor with men from Čarakovo stop and unload the men at Žeger Bridge.⁵⁸⁰¹ KDZ014 also testified that she saw men stripped down to their waists and detained at Žeger Bridge.⁵⁸⁰² Soldiers in camouflage uniforms, with white ribbons on the shoulders, and camouflage caps shot the men who were dressed in civilian clothes at the bridge and threw their bodies into the Sana River.⁵⁸⁰³ Other Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat men were put on to buses at Žeger Bridge and taken away.⁵⁸⁰⁴

1690. At Žeger Bridge, women, children, and elderly, including KDZ014, were loaded onto “Autotransport Prijedor” buses driven by Serb soldiers.⁵⁸⁰⁵ She saw one of her neighbours, Hasib Simbegović, try to board one of the buses, but he was prevented from doing so by Dragan Tintar, a local Serb from Tukovi wearing a camouflage uniform, who then shot him in the head.⁵⁸⁰⁶ After they were loaded onto the buses, the women, children, and elderly were driven to Trnopolje, where they spent one night before being transported by trucks and buses to Vlasici.⁵⁸⁰⁷ At Vlasici, they got off of the buses and were told to walk to “their country” and were received by Bosnian Muslim soldiers, who took them to Travnik.⁵⁸⁰⁸

The Chamber notes the discrepancy surrounding the date of the killings at Žeger Bridge. Adjudicated Fact 1070 states that the date of the killings was 23 July 1992. This adjudicated fact is based on KDZ092’s evidence in the Stakić case, as admitted in the Brđanin case, and KDZ092 confirmed in the Stakić case that this incident occurred on the same day as the attack on the village of Čarakovo, which was 23 July. However, KDZ014 testified that she saw men at Žeger Bridge on 28 July 1992, the day on which she left Čarakovo. Based on the evidence before it, the Chamber considers that the killings at Žeger Bridge occurred on or around 23 July 1992 following, and as a part of, the attack on Čarakovo and thus finds that they occurred within the period of the Indictment for this incident.

1691. The Chamber took judicial notice that a large number of killings of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats occurred in the Brdo area around 20 July 1992 as a result of the campaign conducted by Bosnian Serb forces.⁵⁸⁰⁹ In addition, the Chamber has received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals who were killed in the Brdo region between 1 and 23 July 1992.⁵⁸¹⁰ 1692. Based on the above, the Chamber therefore finds that a number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including civilians, were killed by Serb Forces in the Brdo area on or around 23 July 1992.

(iii) Scheduled Incident A.10.6

1693. The Prosecution alleges that a number of men were killed in the village of Bišćani and in the surrounding hamlets of Hegići, Mrkalji, Ravine, Duratovići, Kadići, Lagići, and Čemernica on or about 20 July 1992.

1694. On 20 July 1992, the village of Bišćani and the surrounding hamlets were attacked by Serb Forces, including the 6th Krajina Brigade and members of the police and the intervention squad.⁵⁸¹¹

1695. Starting around 10 a.m. on 20 July, the village of Bišćani was attacked by Serb Forces from the direction of Tukovi.⁵⁸¹²

1696. On 20 July 1992, Bosnian Muslim males in Bišćani as young as 16 years old were told to gather at various collection points manned by Serb soldiers throughout the village; the women stayed in their homes and were eventually taken away to Trnopolje or other places.⁵⁸¹³ Several people were beaten and killed at these collection points in Bišćani.⁵⁸¹⁴ For instance, one of the collection points was a coffee bar; at that location, a uniformed soldier instructed two men, Mirhad Mrkalj and Ferid Sabanović, to carry the dead body of Hamdija Fikić behind a house.⁵⁸¹⁵ KDZ038 saw the soldier fire “into” Mrkalj and Sabanović and they did not come back.⁵⁸¹⁶ Additionally, KDZ038 saw three other men killed at the coffee bar collection point—Mirsad Medić and another colleague who worked with Medić at the petrol station, as well a former policeman, Saša Karagić.⁵⁸¹⁷ The Chamber is therefore satisfied that in total six men were killed by Bosnian Serb soldiers at the coffee bar collection point on 20 July 1992.

1697. A while later, a “Prijedor Autotransport” bus arrived at the coffee bar collection point and soldiers instructed some of the men in the group, including KDZ038, to get on the bus, while other men were instructed to stay behind.⁵⁸¹⁸ In Prijedor town, they stopped and changed to another Autotransport bus, which drove them on the main Prijedor-Banja Luka road and stopped near Keraterm for awhile.⁵⁸¹⁹ They then went to Omarska, where the bus waited outside, before continuing on to Trnopolje.⁵⁸²⁰

1698. Sometime later in the afternoon on 20 July, a second bus arrived at Trnopolje with the other group of men who had stayed behind at the coffee bar collection point; however, KDZ038 noticed that a number of men who had been in this second group were not in the group that arrived at Trnopolje.⁵⁸²¹ KDZ038 later heard from a survivor that the whole second group of men had been

they were lined up, told to run, and then shot and killed.⁵⁸³³ The mosque in Mrkalji was also on fire.⁵⁸³⁴

1702. The hamlet of Čermernica was also attacked on 20 July 1992.⁵⁸³⁵ Soldiers in blue uniforms, along with a few others in green and olive-grey camouflage uniforms, arrived on foot in Čemernica, followed by military vehicles and APCs.⁵⁸³⁶ Around 35 to 40 residents of Čemernica assembled at the village cemetery and were lined up by the soldiers.⁵⁸³⁷ Two soldiers approached one of the men, Muhamed Hazdić, and asked him his name; when he responded, one of the soldiers said “are you a pejgamber?”, referring to a Muslim word about God, and then shot and killed him.⁵⁸³⁸ KDZ094 noticed that elderly people in the line had been beaten and their clothes were cut; [REDACTED].⁵⁸³⁹ Two other soldiers arrived, Rade Bilbija and Miodrag Glusac, also known as “Tosa”, dressed in camouflage uniforms; Bilbija, seemed to be in charge and upon his instructions, the soldiers then left.⁵⁸⁴⁰ KDZ094 buried Muhamed Hazdić the next morning.⁵⁸⁴¹

1703. Around 20 July 1992, 12 persons were lined up in an orchard in Hegići and shot dead.⁵⁸⁴² Also on or around 20 July, between 20 to 30 people were killed at a bus stop at a crossroads between Alagići, Čemernica, and Jugovći; an elderly woman, went looking for her three sons who had gone missing and saw heaps of bodies at this location.⁵⁸⁴³

1704. On 21 July, soldiers returned to Čemernica in small groups and stole television sets, valuables, and gold items.⁵⁸⁴⁴ They took away several of the villagers to collect the bodies of people who had been killed in the area, and two of those men, Husnija Hadzić and Hare Pelak, never returned.⁵⁸⁴⁵

1705. Serb soldiers continued to take away several villagers from Čemernica each day to collect bodies and load them into trucks in the surrounding villages.⁵⁸⁴⁶ On 23 July around 8 or 9 a.m., two Serbs in camouflage uniforms, Ranko Došen and Slavko Petrović, arrived in Čemernica in green military trucks and instructed KDZ094 to go with eight to ten other Bosnian Muslim men to collect bodies from the Bišćani area and load them onto trucks.⁵⁸⁴⁷ They were accompanied by armed escorts, Serb soldiers in green, olive-grey military uniforms with rifles.⁵⁸⁴⁸ They first went to Hegići, where they found the badly decomposing bodies of Salih Hegić and Esef Avdić, both with gunshot wounds, and loaded them into the truck using blankets which they collected from nearby houses.⁵⁸⁴⁹ KDZ094 then went to the clay pit in Mrkalji and saw a number of bodies lying face down, which had been shot in the back.⁵⁸⁵⁰

1706. After Mrkalji, KDZ094 and the other men with the truck went to the neighbouring hamlet of Kadići, where they picked up the bodies of Sead and Kemal Kadić, which had gunshot wounds in the chest.⁵⁸⁵¹ They then went towards Ravine, and KDZ094 observed that the Bišćani mosque no longer had a roof or munara and had been damaged by fire, as had nearby houses.⁵⁸⁵² He stated that he had last seen part of the munara on 23 July 1992, from his house, before it was burned.⁵⁸⁵³ The Chamber received evidence that throughout the whole area of Bišćani, Rizvanovići, and Rakovčani, “all the mosques were burned and looted”.⁵⁸⁵⁴ These mosques had been intact in April 1992.⁵⁸⁵⁵ The mosque in Bišćani was destroyed on 20 July 1992 and the Rizvanovići mosque and other mosques in the area were destroyed in the summer months, and by August 1992.⁵⁸⁵⁶

1707. At some point on 23 July, KDZ094 was ordered by Došen to drive a second truck and they continued to Ravine; they collected a few more bodies along the road and then five or six more in a field about 50 metres from the turn-off to Ravine, all of which had gunshot injuries.⁵⁸⁵⁷ In a forest in Ravine, they picked up another 25 to 30 bodies near the woods and outside of houses; [REDACTED].⁵⁸⁵⁸ One of the bodies was a young female [REDACTED] found naked, lying on a couch inside a house with a bullet hole in her head.⁵⁸⁵⁹

1708. Near a place called Bijela Zemlja, KDZ094 picked up the body of Mirhad Mrkalj and a few other unidentified people.⁵⁸⁶⁰ Further along, they picked up another 15 to 20 bodies close to the main road between Ravine and Biščani.⁵⁸⁶¹ Near the “Diskont” shop in Bijela Zemlja, an area near the hamlet of Duratovići, they found the largest number of bodies and spent some time there collecting them.⁵⁸⁶²

1709. The group continued on towards Tukovi, and at the coffee production plant near the junction leading to Sredice, they picked up another 10 to 15 bodies.⁵⁸⁶³ Further along the road, at the Sredicko Polje sand pit, they retrieved another 15 to 25 bodies from the right hand side of the road, also with gunshot wounds.⁵⁸⁶⁴ Close to the turnpike at Tukovi, they found another two groups of bodies with gunshot wounds, including some women and children, who were 12, 13, and 14 years old.⁵⁸⁶⁵

1710. At the check-point in Tukovi, KDZ094 parked the truck and got out, and some soldiers drove two of the three trucks, which were full of bodies, off in the direction of Sanski Most; KDZ094 heard Došen and Petrović complaining that they did not want to drive much further and that they would go somewhere “closer”, which he interpreted to mean that they did not want to drive all the way to Tomašica, but would rather find somewhere closer to take the bodies.⁵⁸⁶⁶ The 1711. On 24 July, six to eight young men who had been captured were brought to the check-point in Tukovi to help KDZ094 collect bodies; they went to the area of Sredicko Polje to resume collecting bodies.⁵⁸⁶⁸

1712. KDZ094 estimated that in two days, he collected between 300 to 350 bodies, all of which were Bosnian Muslims, as well as a few Bosnian Croats, who had been unarmed and wearing civilian clothes.⁵⁸⁶⁹ While many were from the Brdo area, there were also others who had been displaced from other areas and had taken shelter there.⁵⁸⁷⁰ The women, children, and elderly people who had remained in Bišćani and other villages went to Tukovi and were then transported to Travnik.⁵⁸⁷¹

1713. The Chamber considers that while it does not have specific evidence about the circumstances of each of the deaths of the 300 to 350 individuals whose bodies KDZ094 collected on 23 and 24 July 1992 in Bišćani and the surrounding villages,⁵⁸⁷² the evidence before it establishes a pattern of killings on or around 20 July throughout this area. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that there was no armed activity in the area of Bišćani during this period.⁵⁸⁷³ Accordingly, the Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that most of these 300 to 350 individuals were non-Serb civilians who were deliberately killed by Serb Forces after the attack on the village of Bišćani and the surrounding hamlets.

1714. The Chamber also received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals who were killed in the village of Bišćani and in the surrounding hamlets on or about 20 July 1992.⁵⁸⁷⁴

1715. Based on the above, the Chamber therefore finds that at least 300 non-Serbs, including civilians, were killed by Serb Forces in the village of Biščani and in the surrounding hamlets of Hegići, Mrkalji, Ravine, Duratovići, Kadići, Lagići, and Čemernica on or about 20 July 1992.

(c) Briševo

1716. Briševo is a village in the local commune of Ljubija and is located to the south of Prijedor town.⁵⁸⁷⁵ Prior to the conflict, Briševo was inhabited mainly by Bosnian Croats.⁵⁸⁷⁶ The villages in the Ljubija commune were primarily comprised of Bosnian Croats, while within the town of Ljubija itself, Gornji Ljubija was almost purely Croat, and the other part, Donja Ljubija, was predominantly Bosnian Muslim.⁵⁸⁷⁷

1717. Briševo was first shelled on 27 May 1992 from the direction of the Serb villages of Rasavci and Oštra Luka; the shelling lasted the entire day but there was no physical damage to the village during this attack.⁵⁸⁷⁸ After the attack, Atlija, together with other men in the village, decided to send a delegation of five men to Rasavci and Oštra Luka to ask why they were being attacked.⁵⁸⁷⁹ When the delegation returned, they informed the villagers that the Serbs had issued an ultimatum requesting them to surrender their arms, and that if they failed to do so, the Serbs would search their houses.⁵⁸⁸⁰ The residents of Briševo only had five or six hunting rifles and a few pistols among them which they handed over to the Serbs; however, the Serb representatives demanded more weapons and said that houses would be searched and people would be killed.⁵⁸⁸¹

1718. No one came to search houses in Briševo following the hand-over and the following weeks were relatively peaceful, although the village was completely blocked by Serb-manned check-points and no one could enter or leave for food or medicine.⁵⁸⁸²

1719. On 24 June 1992, a police van from Ljubija came to Briševo and three or four police officers took at least six male villagers from Briševo to be interviewed at the police station in Ljubija.⁵⁸⁸³ These men never returned to Briševo and Atlija later found out that they had been questioned and beaten in Ljubija, taken to Keraterm camp, then to Omarska, and finally to Manjača.⁵⁸⁸⁴

(i) Scheduled Incident A.10.9

1720. The Prosecution alleges that at least 68 people were killed in the village of Briševo between 23 July and 26 July 1992.

1721. On 23 July 1992, a Serb from Oštra Luka told Atlija and his cousin to leave Briševo because it would be “cleansed” the following day.⁵⁸⁸⁵ However, they chose not to leave and Atlija was awoken by explosions at around 3:30 a.m. on 24 July 1992; Atlija ran to hide in a neighbour’s cellar.⁵⁸⁸⁶ Infantry fire increased during the early hours; some people were killed, and the shelling continued until the evening of 25 July.⁵⁸⁸⁷ That evening, Bosnian Serb infantry entered the village.⁵⁸⁸⁸ The soldiers wore JNA uniforms with red ribbons around their arms and some had red ribbons tied around their helmets.⁵⁸⁸⁹ They identified themselves as “Serb soldiers” and told some of the inhabitants that if they went to their homes, nothing would happen to them.⁵⁸⁹⁰ As a result, Atlija and the others who were hiding in the cellar dispersed.⁵⁸⁹¹

1722. After 10 minutes, Atlija heard shouts from the Dimač house and ran towards it, seeing two soldiers engaged in discussion with Pero Dimač, a 65 year old man, and Atlija’s mother.⁵⁸⁹² The soldiers wore JNA uniforms, as well as “Subara” hats with cockades, and carried different hunting knives than those weapons carried by regular JNA soldiers.⁵⁸⁹³ Atlija approached his mother, who was crying and shouting, and she told him that his father had been killed and that he should leave.⁵⁸⁹⁴ Atlija left his mother and ran to the woods from where he saw several hundreds of soldiers arrive in the village.⁵⁸⁹⁵ The soldiers then locked his mother in the pigsty, threw Dimač to the ground, beat him with a bible they had found inside his house, shouted “let the Catholic Jesus help him now”, and asked “why Tudjman wasn’t helping him”.⁵⁸⁹⁶ They then set fire to the house and made Dimač take off his clothes and pray “according to the Catholic ritual”; they continued to beat and taunt him.⁵⁸⁹⁷ The soldiers eventually forced him to run between them and shot him in the head.⁵⁸⁹⁸

1723. From his hiding position in the woods, Atlija saw houses in the village burning and groups of soldiers, both JNA soldiers in uniforms with the JNA insignia and “Chetniks”, passing by, shooting, and taking away looted property; over 100 houses in Briševo were destroyed during the attack.⁵⁸⁹⁹

1724. The units involved in the attack on Briševo were units of the 1st Krajina Corps, including the 6th Krajina Brigade⁵⁹⁰⁰ and 5th Kozara Brigade, as well as paramilitary units.⁵⁹⁰¹ There were no

The Chamber notes that in his final brief, the Accused argues that the soldiers involved in the attack on Briševo were not wearing the regular JNA uniforms and that Kuprešanin described the soldiers as a renegade group of the 6th Sana Brigade, referring to Atlija’s testimony which repeated Kuprešanin’s statement in this regard. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1554, fn. 3528. However, the Chamber finds that members of at least the 6th Krajina Brigade and the 5th Kozara Brigade took part in the attack on the village of Briševo. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber has considered the evidence before it. It also considered that the Accused only refers to evidence from Atlija recounting that Kuprešanin said the soldiers were a renegade group, whereas Kuprešanin announcements or warnings made on Radio Prijedor for villagers to surrender, or do otherwise, before the 24 July attack on Briševo, unlike in Hambarine and other villages.⁵⁹⁰² Furthermore, there were no military units in Briševo and none of the residents were armed when the village was attacked on 24 July 1992.⁵⁹⁰³

1725. The majority of the Serb soldiers left Briševo the evening after the attack, taking with them 36 men.⁵⁹⁰⁴ Atlija later found out that this group of men was taken to Krings Hall in Sanski Most and that, after bribing someone, they were released from the camp alive after two months.⁵⁹⁰⁵

1726. The evening after the attack Atlija found his father's body, with three gunshot wounds to his back, about 15 to 20 metres away from his house.⁵⁹⁰⁶ Atlija buried his father and Dimač that evening in Mustanica.⁵⁹⁰⁷

1727. The following day, Atlija returned to the village and found 68 houses, out of 120 houses in the village, burnt to the ground.⁵⁹⁰⁸ In addition, the Catholic church in Briševo was burnt.⁵⁹⁰⁹

1728. In the weeks after the attack, Atlija went around Briševo and neighbouring hamlets and found piles of bodies, including in the Kurevo hills.⁵⁹¹⁰ Atlija testified that, in total, 68 people were killed during the course of the attack on Briševo, including 14 women, two males under 16 years old, and four invalids, and that in the days after, their bodies were lying around.⁵⁹¹¹

1729. Specifically, Atlija first found the remains of Stipo Dimač, an elderly man around 76 or 78 years old, as well as the bodies of Franjo Marijan and Mara Marijan, in a house in Dimanci.⁵⁹¹² Atlija then found at least six more bodies in a pile in Mlinari, who he helped bury.⁵⁹¹³ Also in Mlinari and nearby the other pile, Atlija found a grave with at least six more bodies, including an invalid, and another grave with the body of Mara Mlinar, a 74 year old woman.⁵⁹¹⁴

1730. In Buzuci, Atlija then found at least three more bodies, Milan Buzuk, Mate Buzuk, and Ivica Buzuk, an invalid, in front of a house.⁵⁹¹⁵ Atlija next found in Jezerce the bodies with bullet wounds of Srečo Buzuk, Ivo Lovrić, Miroslav Buzuk, and Vlatko Buzuk, an invalid.⁵⁹¹⁶ In Cengije, Atlija found the body of Marko Buzuk, which was badly burned from the waist down, and another grave with several bodies, including women.⁵⁹¹⁷

The Chamber notes that Atlija refers to an individual named “Stipo Dimač”, while Mašović’s report identifies a “Stipan Dimač”. The Chamber considers this inconsistency to be minor and concludes that this is in fact the same individual.

The Chamber notes that there are some discrepancies between the forensic evidence and the evidence of Atlija regarding the names of some of the victims of Scheduled Incident A.10.9. More specifically, Atlija’s testimony contains references to “Mate Buzuk” and “Ivica Buzuk”, whereas Mašović’s report identifies the bodies of “Mato Buzuk” and “Ivo Buzuk”. The Chamber considers these inconsistencies to be minor. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that these are in fact the same individuals. The Chamber also notes that the report of Amor Mašović confirms that the bodies of two men named Mato Buzuk, born in different years, were exhumed from graves in Prijedor, one from Briševo in 1998 and one from Stara Rijeka in 1997. Although it is unclear to which “Mato Buzuk” Atlija is referring as being found in Buzuci, the Chamber is satisfied that the body of one man named Mato Buzuk was found in Buzuci by Atlija after the attack on Briševo on 24 July 1992.

1731. In Mustanica, Atlija found and buried the body of Ante Matanović, another invalid, who had a bullet wound to the back.⁵⁹¹⁸ Also in Mustanica, Atlija saw the body of Jozo Jakara lying near a church, but Atlija did not go close enough to the body to see how he died; Atlija was later told by an eyewitness that Jakara's throat had been slit with glass.⁵⁹¹⁹ In Ivandići, Atlija next found several graves and the bodies of "practically the whole Ivandić family" with bullet wounds, including the bodies of Bato Ivandić, Sreto and Danica Ivandić, an elderly couple, Mara Ivandić, and several more women.⁵⁹²⁰ Atlija also testified that several members of the Komljen family were killed in Ivandići, including Luka Komljen, Ivo Komljen, Kaja Komljen, and another son.⁵⁹²¹ On Raljaš Hill, Atlija found two individual graves, one with the body of Luka Mlinar, a 14 year old boy, and another with the body of Mirsad Švraka, a 14 or 15 year old boy.⁵⁹²²

1732. Finally, Atlija also saw a pile of 10 to 12 bodies under a tree in Stara Rijeka, all of whom seemed to be men around 20 years old.⁵⁹²³ The bodies appeared to have bullet holes in them.⁵⁹²⁴

1733. Atlija was able to bury some of the bodies he found in Briševo and the surrounding area after the attack with the help of other villagers who survived.⁵⁹²⁵

The Chamber notes that Atlija refers to an individual named "Sreto Ivandić" who he found in Ivandići, while Mašović's report identifies a "Srećko Ivandić". The Chamber notes that Atlija did not refer to the second Komljen son by name, while Mašović's report identifies "Ante Komljen", who was born in 1956. The Chamber is satisfied that Ante Komljen is the second Komljen son listed by Atlija. The Chamber also notes that Atlija refers to "Kaja Komljen" as being killed in Ivandići, while Mašović's report identifies a "Kata Komljen". 1734. The Chamber also received forensic evidence to support the deaths of at least 57 identified individuals who were killed in the village of Briševo and the surrounding areas between 24 and 26 July 1992.⁵⁹²⁶

1735. Based on the above, the Chamber therefore finds that at least 68 people were killed by Serb Forces in the village of Briševo between 24 and 26 July 1992.

(ii) Visit of ARK authorities to Stara Rijeka

1736. At the beginning of August 1992, representatives of the authorities of the ARK, including Kuprešanin and Nedeljko Rašula, President of the Sanski Most Municipal Assembly, visited Stara Rijeka accompanied by a bishop, Bishop Komarica, to attend an open meeting with several hundred villagers from the village of Stara Rijeka and surrounding villages, including Atlija.⁵⁹²⁷ Kuprešanin said that he had come, at the request of Bishop Komarica, to find out about the situation in the Sanski Most and Prijedor areas.⁵⁹²⁸ Kuprešanin stated that he had heard about some incidents in the area, but before that, he did not know that Croats lived in the area; furthermore, he said that everything was going to be fine as soon as they established a “Serb state” in BiH.⁵⁹²⁹ When Atlija challenged him during the meeting, informing him about what happened in Briševo, Kuprešanin replied that “such things occurred in wars”, and that unfortunately the attack on Briševo and all of the killings had been carried out by a renegade group from the 6th Brigade and were not directed against the Croats in the area, but rather against the Muslims in the area.⁵⁹³⁰ Bishop Komarica promised the villagers that they would receive humanitarian aid and encouraged them to stay in their villages.⁵⁹³¹

1737. One month later, Atlija had another meeting at the Ljubija church with Bishop Komarica and Kuprešanin.⁵⁹³² Kuprešanin asked him if the situation in Briševo had improved and asked him to present the issues to Milomir Stakić.⁵⁹³³ Thus, a couple of days later, Atlija and two others went to Prijedor town and met with Stakić, and asked him for his help to leave the area.⁵⁹³⁴ Stakić suggested that people from Briševo should move to abandoned houses in Bišćani but that he could not help them to leave the area because “they were being accused of ethnic cleansing already at that point”.⁵⁹³⁵ Atlija informed him they were not inclined to accept his offer and would continue to try to leave the area.⁵⁹³⁶

(5) Detention facilities in Prijedor

1738. From about 24 May 1992 until at least the end of September 1992, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained at the Prijedor SJB Building, Omarska camp (“Omarska”), Keraterm camp (“Keraterm”), Trnopolje camp (“Trnopolje”), the Miška Glava community centre or “Dom” (“Miška Glava Dom”), the Ljubija football stadium (“Ljubija Football Stadium”), and the Prijedor JNA barracks (“Prijedor Barracks”).⁵⁹³⁷ The detention facilities in Prijedor were established by the Prijedor Crisis Staff, which was presided over by Stakić.⁵⁹³⁸ There was co-ordinated co-operation between the Crisis Staff and members of the Serb Forces in operating the detention facilities.⁵⁹³⁹ The Crisis Staff participated in overseeing security at the facilities, took decisions on the continuing detention of non-Serbs in Prijedor, provided transport, as well as the necessary fuel, for the transfer of detainees between the various detention facilities, and co-ordinated the provision of food for detainees.⁵⁹⁴⁰ The Crisis Staff also prohibited the release of detainees from the detention facilities and prevented them from returning to their homes in Prijedor.⁵⁹⁴¹

(a) Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.1

1739. The Indictment refers to the use of the Prijedor SJB Building as a detention facility in Prijedor municipality between 24 May and September 1992.⁵⁹⁴²

(i) Arrival of detainees and control over the detention facility

1740. Located in the town of Prijedor, the Prijedor SJB Building was used as a detention facility beginning on or around 26 May 1992 until approximately 24 June 1992.⁵⁹⁴³ During this period, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including many prominent men of the Prijedor community, as well as two women and a 13 or 14 year old boy, were detained there.⁵⁹⁴⁴

1741. The Prijedor SJB Building had two wings; two floors were on one side and three floors on the other, and a courtyard was at the back of the building.⁵⁹⁴⁵ The detention cell where detainees were held was located in an auxiliary building across the courtyard from the main building.⁵⁹⁴⁶

⁵⁹⁴⁰ See Scheduled Detention Facilities C.20.1, C.20.2, C.20.3, C.20.4, C.20.5, C.20.6, C.20.7; see Adjudicated Fact 1107.

⁵⁹⁴² In its Final Brief, the Prosecution notes that the evidence led in relation to the Prijedor SJB Building shows that it operated as a detention facility from approximately 26 May 1992 until around the end of June 1992. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, p. 38, fn. 548.

However, Defence witnesses Dušan Janković and Zdravko Torbica testified that women and minors were never taken into custody at the Prijedor SJB Building. D4228 (Witness statement of Zdravko Torbica dated 18 January 2014), para. 11; Dušan Janković, T. 47283–47284 (18 February 2014). The Chamber, however, does not rely on their evidence on this issue. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considers that Janković and Torbica contradicted themselves on several occasions. The Chamber further considers the body of credible evidence before it which demonstrates that women and a minor were detained at the Prijedor SJB Building.

1742. Before being brought to the Prijedor SJB Building, detainees were arrested by members of the Prijedor SJB, including Ranko “Bato” Kovačević.⁵⁹⁴⁷ Once there, they were held in the detention cell and guarded by members of the intervention squad.⁵⁹⁴⁸

(ii) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1743. The cell in which detainees were held was small, and there were no windows; the only source of light was a tiny hole in the wall.⁵⁹⁴⁹ In that cell, there was a bed frame and a couple of blankets.⁵⁹⁵⁰ There were no toilet facilities; there was only a bag which was used in place of a toilet.⁵⁹⁵¹

1744. Detainees were generally held at the Prijedor SJB Building for a short period and were mistreated during their detention.⁵⁹⁵² Nusret Sivac was arrested on 20 June 1992 and taken to the Prijedor SJB Building.⁵⁹⁵³ He and a group of other detainees, including two women, a 13 or 14 year old boy and a prominent Muslim doctor, Osman Mahmuljin, were forced to gather in the courtyard.⁵⁹⁵⁴ Members of the intervention squad, including Rade Strika, ordered the detainees to remove their belts and the laces from their shoes.⁵⁹⁵⁵ The detainees were then forced to run a gauntlet formed by members of the intervention squad who proceeded to savagely beat the detainees with metal rods.⁵⁹⁵⁶ Following these beatings, the detainees were locked in the detention cell until they heard members of the intervention squad shout: “The doctor didn’t get enough”.⁵⁹⁵⁷ Members of the intervention squad then rushed into the cell and again beat the detainees.⁵⁹⁵⁸ One of the detainees was struck on the head with a metal rod.⁵⁹⁵⁹ Members of the intervention squad threatened to kill Mahmuljin and they beat him the worst.⁵⁹⁶⁰ At one point, he fainted and later it was confirmed that his left arm had been fractured in several places.⁵⁹⁶¹ That evening, the detainees were forced to board a police van and were taken to Omarska.⁵⁹⁶² Sivic and two other detainees had to drag Mahmuljin into the vehicle as he could not move after the beatings.⁵⁹⁶³

Kerim Mešanović was arrested on the morning of 24 June 1992 and held in the detention cell with seven other detainees.⁵⁹⁶⁴ Later that day, one of the detainees, Nihad Basić, was taken out by the intervention squad, subjected to ethnic slurs, and beaten.⁵⁹⁶⁵ When he returned, he was covered in blood.⁵⁹⁶⁶ In the evening, the detainees were removed from the cell and lined up against the wall outside where they were searched again and forced to make a three-finger salute.⁵⁹⁶⁷ The detainees were then ordered to run a gauntlet formed by the intervention squad towards the police van.⁵⁹⁶⁸ Members of the intervention squad yelled ethnic slurs and beat the detainees as they ran.⁵⁹⁶⁹ Mešanović fell and was kicked in the head, losing four teeth from the blows.⁵⁹⁷⁰ Once the detainees were seated in the van, they were so afraid that they held hands.⁵⁹⁷¹ This group of detainees was then transferred to Omarska on 24 June 1992 around 10 p.m.⁵⁹⁷²

1746. All of the non-Serb male detainees held at the Prijedor SJB Building were transferred either to Omarska or Keraterm camps.⁵⁹⁷³

(iii) Conclusion

1747. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serb civilians, including women and a minor, were detained at the Prijedor SJB Building by Bosnian Serb Forces between around 26 May and 24 June 1992. Detainees were held in a small cell for up to two days in poor conditions before being transferred to Omarska or Keraterm camps. The Chamber also finds that detainees were subjected to severe beatings by Bosnian Serb Forces.

1748. The Indictment refers to the use of Omarska as a detention facility in Prijedor municipality between 15 May and 21 August 1992. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people were killed at Omarska and at various places after they were taken from the camp between 27 May and 21 August 1992.

1751. Omarska was established by the Prijedor Crisis Staff through a written order issued by Drljača on 31 May 1992.⁵⁹⁸⁵ As Chief of the SJB in Prijedor, Drljača ordered that security at the camp be provided by the Omarska SJB under the command of Omarska SJB commander Mejakić.⁵⁹⁸⁶ Dušan Janković was Mejakić's superior and was directly subordinated to Drljača and supervised the implementation of Drljača's 31 May 1992 order in Omarska.⁵⁹⁸⁷ Miroslav Kvočka, patrol sector leader in the Omarska SJB, was delegated the authority to activate the reserve police force in order to serve as guards in the camps.⁵⁹⁸⁸ Members of the VRS formed an external security ring around Omarska and members of the TO staffed posts in a second ring and were tasked with preventing unauthorised persons from entering the camp and ensuring that detainees did not escape.⁵⁹⁸⁹

However, the Chamber does not find Janković's evidence on this issue to be reliable, in light of the accepted testimony of Kvočka, who was stationed at Omarska during the relevant period. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber also considered that Janković's evidence in this regard was contradictory; he was also evasive and lacked sincerity.

1752. Drljača further ordered mixed teams of investigators, comprised of representatives from civilian public security, state security, and military security, to interrogate and categorise detainees at Omarska.⁵⁹⁹⁰ Mejakić and the heads of the interrogation teams reported to Drljača every day pursuant to his order.⁵⁹⁹¹

1753. Following interrogation, detainees were grouped into three categories.⁵⁹⁹² The first category was to be comprised of individuals who were suspected of “the gravest crimes” and who had directly organised or participated in “armed rebellion”.⁵⁹⁹³ However in practice, the first category also included intellectuals and political leaders from the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat communities.⁵⁹⁹⁴ The second category included individuals who had supported or assisted detainees in the first category in the armed rebellion, while the third category encompassed detainees who were of “no security interest”, or the “least guilty”, including women and children, and who were to be eventually released.⁵⁹⁹⁵

(ii) Conditions of detention

1754. Conditions at Omarska were appalling. The food was grossly insufficient, the medical care was inadequate, and the hygiene facilities were poor.⁵⁹⁹⁶ Some days, the detainees received no food at all.⁵⁹⁹⁷ Groups of about 30 men at a time were taken to the canteen to receive their daily meal, and had to eat in under two minutes to avoid being beaten.⁵⁹⁹⁸ Nevertheless, detainees were often beaten in the canteen, to the point they could not walk and had to be carried.⁵⁹⁹⁹ Detainees often chose to skip meals in order to avoid the beatings that accompanied them.⁶⁰⁰⁰ Sejmenović recounted how the arms of a 13 year old boy were broken so badly that he had to be carried into the canteen and fed by other detainees.⁶⁰⁰¹ Many detainees lost between 20 to 30 kilograms during their detention, others lost considerably more.⁶⁰⁰² Serb nationalist songs were loudly and continuously played over speakers.⁶⁰⁰³ Detainees were denied drinking water for long periods and when water was provided, it was not potable.⁶⁰⁰⁴ This caused the detainees intestinal problems.⁶⁰⁰⁵

1755. The detainees had only occasional access to water for washing, and were given no soap or toothpaste, or any change of clothing.⁶⁰⁰⁶ Their access to toilet facilities was also limited, depending on which room they were held in; detainees had to wait hours before being allowed to use them, and sometimes risked being beaten if they asked.⁶⁰⁰⁷ Detainees were often forced to excrete and urinate in their rooms.⁶⁰⁰⁸ Skin diseases were prevalent as well as acute cases of diarrhoea and dysentery.⁶⁰⁰⁹ Some detainees were able to receive personal items from their families outside the camp, through individual guards, but these cases were rare.⁶⁰¹⁰

1756. The rooms at Omarska were extremely crowded; sometimes 200 to 300 detainees were confined in rooms that were too small.⁶⁰¹¹ Around 29 May 1992, 120 detainees were transferred to the camp from the Benkovac military barracks and crammed into a garage for several days; two young men suffocated to death as a result.⁶⁰¹² Detainees were also crowded together in the lavatories where they were packed one on top of the other and often had to lie in the midst of excrement.⁶⁰¹³ The crowded and overflowing rooms at Omarska were stifling in the summer heat and guards often refused to open windows or demanded that detainees pay them with one of their possessions in exchange for opening a window or obtaining a glass of water.⁶⁰¹⁴

(iii) Treatment of detainees

Beatings and killings

1757. Upon arriving at Omarska in buses, the guards on duty approached the detainees, demanded all of their belongings, verbally abused them, and then beat them, sometimes to death.⁶⁰¹⁵ On one occasion, the guards who escorted one of the arriving buses formed a gauntlet through which the detainees had to pass while being beaten and forced to sing nationalist songs.⁶⁰¹⁶ The detainees were then escorted to the “pista”, to rooms in the hangar, or in the majority of cases, to the white house, and were often beaten on the way.⁶⁰¹⁷ Kvočka, Drago Prcać, Mladen Radić, or “Krkan”, a

However, Momčilo Gruban testified that (i) the conditions at Omarska were humane under the circumstances; (ii) the detainees had access to water, toilets, and showers; (iii) they received sufficient food, including the same food eaten by the guards; and (iv) detainees did not fear ill-treatment. D4388 (Witness statement of Momčilo Gruban dated 31 January 2014), paras. 8, 16–23. The Chamber does not find Gruban’s evidence to be credible in this regard. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considers that he was not forthright with the Chamber on several occasions and that due to his involvement at Omarska, he had an interest in distancing himself from any knowledge of conditions there.

shift commander at Omarska, and Milojica Kos, or “Krlle”, a shift leader, were often present during these beatings.⁶⁰¹⁸ They did nothing to prevent them.⁶⁰¹⁹

1758. Several non-Serb detainees arrived at Omarska after being held in the same cell at the Prijedor SJB Building earlier that day. When they arrived, they were made to line up against a wall, where they were beaten and insulted.⁶⁰²⁰ They were then taken to the white house and put in a small room, which was already crowded with about 60 to 70 men.⁶⁰²¹ All the men were extremely frightened and were not allowed to speak.⁶⁰²²

1759. Other detainees were immediately brought to an office in the administration building and interrogated upon arrival.⁶⁰²³ For example, upon Sejmenović’s arrival at Omarska from Trnopolje, an inspector from the Prijedor SJB, Dragan Radaković, interrogated him.⁶⁰²⁴ On the third day of questioning, two inspectors from Banja Luka arrived and questioned him for about an hour.⁶⁰²⁵ When Nusreta Sivac arrived at Omarska, she was immediately taken to the reception office of the administration building where Mejakić, Kvočka, Krlle, and others were waiting.⁶⁰²⁶ She was then interrogated by Nenad Babić and Nenad Tomčić about her involvement in implementing the referendum for a sovereign BiH.⁶⁰²⁷

1760. While in detention, beatings of detainees were frequent.⁶⁰²⁸ It was commonplace for detainees to be called out during the night by the guards.⁶⁰²⁹ Indeed, it was the nights that were most feared by the detainees for this reason.⁶⁰³⁰ In addition, detainees were beaten constantly by the guards, at the slightest perceived provocation, and some were beaten to death.⁶⁰³¹ KDZ392 was beaten on numerous occasions during his detention at Omarska.⁶⁰³² At one point, KDZ392 and his father were beaten two days in a row by Dušan Knežević, a.k.a “Duca”, and Zoran Žigić. Afterwards, his father was singled out and beaten more severely.⁶⁰³³ KDZ392’s father was left deformed and in severe pain and as a result of the beatings, he died the next morning.⁶⁰³⁴ His body was taken away in a dark blue police van.⁶⁰³⁵

1761. One room in the white house was reserved for brutal assaults on prisoners, who were often stripped, beaten, kicked, and otherwise abused; many detainees died as a result of these repeated assaults on them in the white house.⁶⁰³⁶

1762. Between 600 and 700 detainees at a time were held outside in the “pista” area of Omarska for prolonged periods.⁶⁰³⁷ The detainees had to sit, and sometimes lie, on the ground, with machine-guns pointed at them.⁶⁰³⁸ While on the “pista”, KDZ026 witnessed the guards forcing a young mentally handicapped detainee by the name of Crnalić to drink motor oil. He then heard gunfire and the young man was not seen again.⁶⁰³⁹ The Chamber is satisfied that this detainee was killed in this incident. On 10 June 1992, Nusreta Sivac saw Žigić call out the names of three male detainees on the “pista”; when these three men finally returned, they were swollen, covered in bruises, and their “faces were completely distorted”.⁶⁰⁴⁰

1763. Detainees were also severely beaten during interrogations.⁶⁰⁴¹ Detainees brought to the red house for interrogation were often killed.⁶⁰⁴² KDZ093 testified that in July 1992, she saw men, including a Muslim or Croat doctor and a Muslim teacher she recognised, being called out from an area in the restaurant building in Omarska called the “glass house”.⁶⁰⁴³ They were taken to the red house and later that night, KDZ093 heard gunfire and guards cursing, using the words “Ustashes” and “balijas”.⁶⁰⁴⁴

1764. After their interrogation, detainees were often made to sign false statements regarding their involvement in acts against Serbs.⁶⁰⁴⁵ Detainees were also ordered to beat other detainees.⁶⁰⁴⁶ They were humiliated in front of other detainees, forced to sing Serbian nationalist songs, make the three fingered Serbian sign, and were subjected to ethnic slurs by the camp guards.⁶⁰⁴⁷ On one occasion, on a Serb holiday, guards at the camp got drunk, set fire to rubber tires, and threw Smail Duratović, a well-known Bosnian Muslim athlete, into the fire, along with at least nine other detainees.⁶⁰⁴⁸ Detainees, including female detainees, were regularly threatened with death.⁶⁰⁴⁹ At one point during his detention in Omarska, KDZ026 was told by two guards that his name was on a list of detainees to be “liquidated”, but that he would be saved if he gave them money.⁶⁰⁵⁰

1765. The beatings were administered by camp guards at Omarska, including Milutin Popović, a.k.a. “Pop”, and Žarko Marmat,⁶⁰⁵¹ as well as by individuals from outside the camp who were permitted to enter and mistreat detainees, including Žigić and Knežević.⁶⁰⁵² Detainees feared these outside individuals even more than the camp guards, as the beatings were worse when they appeared; the detainees were beaten with a variety of sticks, iron bars, and lengths of heavy electric cable, sometimes with nails embedded in them to pierce the detainees' skin.⁶⁰⁵³ They were also attacked with knives.⁶⁰⁵⁴ Members of the intervention squad also mistreated detainees at Omarska.⁶⁰⁵⁵

1766. Prominent Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat political leaders, including SDA officials and members, as well as doctors, professionals, and police, were among the individuals most often mistreated and killed at Omarska.⁶⁰⁵⁶ Detainees frequently saw dead bodies on the lawn in front of or near the white house.⁶⁰⁵⁷ The detainees witnessed bodies being taken away by truck and they could also hear the sounds of earth-moving equipment in the vicinity of the camp.⁶⁰⁵⁸ Detainees were required to clean the white house and the red house and they often found hair, teeth, skin, blood, clothes, footwear and empty pistol cartridges.⁶⁰⁵⁹ Camp guards also forced detainees to load

1767. Detainees were also taken from Omarska and killed outside the camp.⁶⁰⁶² In late July 1992, 46 detainees, including two female detainees, were taken out of Omarska, put on a bus, and told that they would be exchanged in the direction of Bosanska Krupa.⁶⁰⁶³ They were never seen again.⁶⁰⁶⁴ The Chamber finds that these 46 detainees were killed after being taken out of Omarska in late July 1992.

1768. In addition, the Chamber received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals who were detained at Omarska between 25 May 1992 and 21 August 1992.⁶⁰⁶⁵

The Chamber notes that Adjudicated Fact 1186, which is based on Sébire’s testimony in the Stakić case, refers to the name “Sureta” Medunjanin as the wife of Bećir Medunjanin and one of the individuals who was exhumed in Jama Lisac; however based on the other evidence before it, including Sébire’s subsequent testimony in the Brđanin case, the Chamber considers that this was an error and is satisfied that the individual’s name is “Sadeta” Medunjanin. Sexual violence

1769. At Omarska, there were frequent incidents of female detainees who were called out of their rooms by different guards, as well as the camp commander, and were raped or sexually assaulted.⁶⁰⁶⁶ On one occasion, Krkan called a female detainee into his office and told her that he knew high-ranking military officials and could help her if she had sexual intercourse with him.⁶⁰⁶⁷ Nedeljko Grabovac, a.k.a. “Kapitan”, who stayed at Omarska for only a short period and wore an olive uniform similar to the former JNA uniform, also sexually assaulted female detainees.⁶⁰⁶⁸

1770. KDZ093 testified that several times during her detention at Omarska, she was called out at night and during the day, by the same guard, and taken to another room in the restaurant building where she was raped by this guard; afterwards, several other men entered the room and raped her repeatedly.⁶⁰⁶⁹

1771. Guards at Omarska also attempted to force a male detainee to rape another female detainee.⁶⁰⁷⁰ On the night of 26 June 1992, a detainee heard some guards laughing, the voice of a young woman crying, and a man he recognised as Mehmedalija Sarajlić pleading with the guards.⁶⁰⁷¹ Sarajlić was told by the guards to rape the young woman and when he refused he was beaten.⁶⁰⁷² The next morning, the detainee saw Sarajlić’s body lying outside, not far from the white house.⁶⁰⁷³

1772. Female detainees were also physically assaulted at Omarska. On one occasion, a man, wearing a camouflage uniform and a cap with a cockade symbol on it, entered the restaurant and started shouting and hitting a Bosnian Muslim female prisoner sitting at a table; he then carved a cross on her cheek and she started to bleed.⁶⁰⁷⁴ On another occasion, a guard approached a female detainee in the restaurant, uncovered her breast and took out a knife and went over her breast with it for several minutes, while other guards watched laughing.⁶⁰⁷⁵

1773. Female detainees were made to work in the canteen at Omarska.⁶⁰⁷⁶ On one occasion, Milorad Tadić, a.k.a. “Brk”, Mejakić’s driver and bodyguard, entered the kitchen and shouted at the women for giving prisoners more bread than permitted; he ordered them to face the wall with their hands up for 40 minutes, then laughed, and said it was a “warning” and he would shoot them if they gave out too much bread again.⁶⁰⁷⁷ After completing their work duty during the day, the women would clean the interrogation rooms in the evening; they found blood on the floors and walls, traces of torn clothing, and various devices, such as batons, with traces of blood as well.⁶⁰⁷⁸

Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1774. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serbs, including civilians, were transferred to and detained at Omarska by Serb Forces between 25 May 1992 and 21 August 1992. The detainees were held in poor conditions characterised by lack of space, poor sanitary conditions, inadequate medical care, and insufficient food. The Chamber finds that the male detainees at Omarska were subjected to severe beatings by Serb Forces. The Chamber also finds that a number of Bosnian Muslim women detained at Omarska were subjected to acts of sexual violence by Serb Forces and were forced to work.⁶⁰⁷⁹ Finally, the Chamber finds that a large number of non-Serbs were killed by Serb Forces at Omarska, or after they were taken from the camp, between 25 May 1992 and 21 August 1992.⁶⁰⁸⁰

(iv) Scheduled Incident B.15.3

1775. The Indictment refers to the killing of a number of men and women taken from Omarska in the area called Hrastova Glavica on or about 5 August 1992.⁶⁰⁸¹

1776. On 5 August 1992, two bus loads of approximately 120 detainees from Keraterm were brought to Omarska.⁶⁰⁸² Dr. Esad Sadiković, who was regarded by other detainees as a “moral and ⁶⁰⁷⁹ However, the Chamber notes that this type of forced labour is not charged in the Indictment, which only covers forced labour at the frontlines.

⁶⁰⁸⁰ This finding does not include the persons alleged to have been killed in Scheduled Incidents B.15.3 and B.15.4, which are discussed below.

⁶⁰⁸¹ See Indictment, Scheduled Incident B.15.3, fn. 5 (wherein the Prosecution alleges that detainees from Keraterm were among the victims of Scheduled Incident B.15.3).

spiritual authority” at the camp, was called out by Prcać that night and he was made to board one of the buses along with the other detainees from Keraterm already on the buses; they left Omarska in the direction of Sanski Most.⁶⁰⁸³

1777. The Chamber took judicial notice that on the way to Sanski Most, unidentified Bosnian Serbs shot dead a number of the detainees being transported on the buses.⁶⁰⁸⁴ The bodies of 126 individuals were later found in an area called Hrastova Glavica and 46 individuals were identified.⁶⁰⁸⁵ For 121 of the 126 bodies, the forensic experts determined that the cause of death was a gunshot wound.⁶⁰⁸⁶

1778. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that approximately 120 non-Serb civilians taken from Keraterm and Omarska were killed by Serb Forces on or about 5 August 1992 in the area of Hrastova Glavica.

(v) Scheduled Incident B.15.4

1779. The Indictment refers to the execution of over 150 men from the Brdo region of Prijedor at Omarska on or about 20 July 1992.

1780. On 16 July 1992, a group of about 200 people from the Brdo area, including Hambarine, were brought to Omarska in buses and detained in the white house.⁶⁰⁸⁷ In the middle of the night, KDZ048 heard gunshots and saw a number of dead and wounded people lying in front of the white house.⁶⁰⁸⁸ He then saw camp guards, including Zivko Marmat, firing one additional shot into the heads of each of these people.⁶⁰⁸⁹ A truck arrived, and detainees held in the hangar were given the task of loading the bodies on to the truck, which was then driven away.⁶⁰⁹⁰ The truck returned several times to be re-loaded and KDZ048 estimated that there were about 180 bodies in total.⁶⁰⁹¹ All of the detainees held in the white house were killed that night and it was empty the following day.⁶⁰⁹²

1781. Based on the totality of the evidence before it, the Chamber therefore finds that at least 150 non-Serb detainees from the Brdo region were killed by Serb Forces on or around 20 July 1992 at Omarska.

(vi) Visits to Omarska and transfer of detainees

1782. On or around 15 July 1992, a high-ranking delegation from Banja Luka and Prijedor, including Brđanin, Kuprešanin, Župljanin, Stakić, Radoslav Vujić, Predrag Radić, and Talić, visited Omarska and were received by Drljača and Mejakić.⁶⁰⁹³ Nusreta Sivac and other women watched the delegation arrive through the glass walls of the canteen at Omarska; a choir of detainees—“living skeletons”—had been lined up outside the canteen and they sang Chetnik songs and gave the three finger Serbian salute as the delegation passed by.⁶⁰⁹⁴

1783. According to Mejakić, Drljača then met with the delegation in the administration building without Mejakić present, where Župljanin denounced the camp and asked that it be dismantled

⁶⁰⁹² P3528 (Witness statement of Kerim Mešanović, undated), p. 56. However, Mejakić gave evidence that crimes in Prijedor were “fabricated and attributed to Serbs under RS leadership”. According to him, this includes the killing of 3,500 civilians at Omarska and, in particular, the killing of a group of 250 detainees brought in from the Brdo area; he stated that this incident was fabricated and is not supported by evidence. D4138 (Witness statement of Željko Mejakić dated 26 November 2013), pp. 3–4. However, the Chamber does not find Mejakić’s evidence to be reliable on this issue in light of the other evidence before the Chamber regarding this incident.

immediately.⁶⁰⁹⁵ However, the camp was not closed immediately after this visit and, in fact, on 20 July 1992, Župljanin sought the view of RS officials regarding the status of detainees of no security interest being held in ARK detention facilities and recommended that they be treated as “hostages” to exchange for Serb detainees.⁶⁰⁹⁶ Furthermore, following the visit, Brđanin publicly stated that: “What we have seen in Prijedor is an example of a job well done”.⁶⁰⁹⁷ According to Kuprešanin, following the delegation visit, the Accused called Kuprešanin to suggest that he influence the municipal authorities in Prijedor to close the “investigation centres” in the municipality.⁶⁰⁹⁸ Kuprešanin subsequently asked the authorities of Omarska and Keraterm to close the facilities and to improve the living conditions for the detainees until their disbandment.⁶⁰⁹⁹

1784. As mentioned above, pursuant to an order issued by Mladić on 3 August 1992, Talić ordered the authorities at Omarska, Trnopolje, and Manjača to urgently prepare for visits by the ICRC and teams of reporters.⁶¹⁰⁰

1785. In early August 1992, the majority of detainees remaining at Omarska were transferred to either Trnopolje or Manjača camps.⁶¹⁰¹ On 3 August 1992, Dragoljub Prcać came to the restaurant building at Omarska and read out a list of women’s names, including the names of KDZ093 and Nusreta Sivac.⁶¹⁰² Although Prcać said they were “going home”, that day a bus came to pick up this group of women and took them to Trnopolje.⁶¹⁰³

1787. Sejmenović was present when international journalists arrived at Omarska and was brought out to speak to them; however they did not interview him.⁶¹⁰⁹ He had been interviewed by Serbian journalists earlier, but he did not tell the truth; rather he answered in the manner he was told in order to save his life.⁶¹¹⁰ The day after the international journalists visited Omarska, Sejmenović met with Kuprešanin who informed him that he would be leaving Omarska for Banja Luka that day.⁶¹¹¹ Later Sejmenović learned Kuprešanin's intentions for taking him out of Omarska when he overheard a phone conversation between Kuprešanin and the Accused.⁶¹¹² Kuprešanin "received instructions" and responded that he was planning to get a suit for Sejmenović and allow him time to recuperate, and then he was planning round-table discussions for Sejmenović to speak publicly about the situation in Bosnian Krajina.⁶¹¹³ At his own request, Sejmenović was then taken to his sister's house in Vrbanja, where Kuprešanin visited him three times.⁶¹¹⁴ On the third visit, Kuprešanin informed Sejmenović he was going to Banja Luka to meet with the Accused and others.⁶¹¹⁵ Sejmenović was brought by Kuprešanin as one of the two official SDA functionaries to meet with the Accused, Vance, and Owen.⁶¹¹⁶ Following the meeting, Sejmenović confirmed Vance's public statement that Vance did not agree with the Accused that "no ethnic cleansing was taking place" in BiH, and stated that this was consistent with his own observations of what was occurring in the region.⁶¹¹⁷ Sejmenović left Vrbanja on 15 January 1993 after obtaining the proper documents to present to international agencies and officials to be able to leave.⁶¹¹⁸ Kuprešanin wrote an accompanying letter, confirming Sejmenović's identity, which referred to the fact that he was released from Omarska at the request of the Accused.⁶¹¹⁹

1788. On 6 August 1992, around 600 of the Omarska detainees were called out as being "not dangerous" and were sent to Trnopolje.⁶¹²⁰ On the same day, a second group of approximately 1,300 detainees, including KDZ026, were taken to Manjača.⁶¹²¹ The men in this second group were put on to buses by members of the intervention squad and the buses departed Omarska; there were approximately 100 to 120 men on KDZ026's bus.⁶¹²² Between 170 and 180 detainees remained at Omarska after these transfers.⁶¹²³

1789. That evening, approximately 200 military beds were delivered to Omarska and thereafter, detainees received two meals a day and conditions improved.⁶¹²⁴ A delegation of ICRC representatives and journalists visited the camp again a week later, on or around 12 August 1992.⁶¹²⁵ By mid-August 1992, a total of 1,773 detainees were transferred from

(c) Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.3

1790. The Indictment refers to the use of Keraterm as a detention facility in Prijedor municipality between 15 May and 6 August 1992.

(i) Establishment of camp and arrival of detainees

1791. A former ceramic tile factory located on the eastern outskirts of Prijedor, Keraterm operated as a detention facility between 24 May and 21 August 1992.⁶¹²⁸ Keraterm was clearly visible from the main road from Prijedor to Banja Luka.⁶¹²⁹

1792. Keraterm was established by the Prijedor Crisis Staff.⁶¹³⁰ The camp operated under camp commander, Duško Sikirica, and security at the camp was provided by members of the Prijedor SJB and MP.⁶¹³¹

1793. Approximately 4,000 detainees, primarily Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat men, were held at Keraterm throughout its operation as a camp.⁶¹³² Some of the detainees brought to

1794. Keraterm held up to as many as 1,500 prisoners at one time, crowded into a number of large rooms or halls.⁶¹³⁴ Between 200 and 500 Bosnian Muslim and Croat men, between the ages of 17 and 55, were detained in Room 2 at Keraterm.⁶¹³⁵ There were other rooms used to house detainees, known as Rooms 1, 3, and 4.⁶¹³⁶ Between 250 and 270 men were initially held in Room 3 but later two more groups arrived and the number grew to 570.⁶¹³⁷ There were machine guns placed near the entrance to the camp.⁶¹³⁸

However, Dragan Radetić testified that (i) the number of Bosnian Muslims held at Keraterm was much lower than 4,000, and he had never heard of any Serbs or Albanians being held there; (ii) Keraterm camp could not have possibly held 1,500 prisoners at once; (iii) the number of 570 being detainees held in Room 3 is exaggerated. D4226 (Witness statement of Dragan Radetić dated 17 January 2014), paras. 36–38. The Chamber does not find Radetić’s evidence to be credible in this regard. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considers that he was not forthright with the Chamber on several occasions and that due to his involvement in interrogating detainees at Keraterm, he had an interest in distancing himself from any knowledge of conditions there.

(ii) Conditions of detention

1796. Conditions in Keraterm were atrocious.⁶¹⁴² Detainees were crowded into unlit, windowless rooms, with barely enough space to lie down on concrete floors.⁶¹⁴³ In Room 3, the floor was wet and the walls were stained.⁶¹⁴⁴ The rooms in Keraterm were intensely hot in the summer with no ventilation and the detainees were kept locked in these rooms for days on end, crowded together.⁶¹⁴⁵

1797. There were few toilet facilities and the detainees were allowed to go to the toilet only once a day, five men at a time, and escorted by guards.⁶¹⁴⁶ Initially, one lavatory was available for all of the detainees but it became blocked and barrels were supplied instead which leaked, causing an overpowering stench.⁶¹⁴⁷ Detainees were not able to bathe, but they could occasionally wash a little.⁶¹⁴⁸ The detainees received no soap or toothpaste.⁶¹⁴⁹ Infestations of lice appeared.⁶¹⁵⁰ Dysentery was rife and there was no medical care.⁶¹⁵¹

In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber refers to its earlier assessment in fn. 6137 regarding the credibility of Radetić.

1798. At Keraterm, both the quality and quantity of food provided to the detainees were totally inadequate, and they suffered from malnutrition and, in some instances, starvation.⁶¹⁵² The detainees received two pieces of bread that they had to eat very quickly or they would be beaten.⁶¹⁵³ Furthermore, the food was not delivered regularly and sometimes there was no food provided at all.⁶¹⁵⁴ To supplement the meagre camp provisions, detainees were sometimes allowed to receive food brought to the camp by their families, although these occasional supplements were not sufficient to alleviate their hunger and malnutrition.⁶¹⁵⁵

(iii) Treatment of detainees

1799. Detainees were beaten upon arrival at Keraterm.⁶¹⁵⁶ Jusuf Arifagić was brought to Keraterm on 14 June 1992, by bus, along with a group of about 40 other men captured with him in Mujkanovići.⁶¹⁵⁷ When his group arrived at the camp, two “Serb soldiers” entered the bus, ordered the men to get off in small groups, and began beating and kicking them as they lay on the ground.⁶¹⁵⁸ Safet Tači, a young Bosnian Muslim man who resided in Kozarac with his family until 1992, was also taken to Keraterm by “Serb forces” in mid-June 1992.⁶¹⁵⁹ Arifagić and Tači were put in Room 2, where other men from villages in the Prijedor region, who had also been physically mistreated, were being held.⁶¹⁶⁰ On the evening of their arrival, Arifagić and the men who had

KDZ093 visited her husband in Keraterm for the first time in mid-June 1992 and brought him food and clothes, but a guard took the bag at the gate and said he would give it to him; she saw her husband from far away and he looked very thin and exhausted. KDZ093 visited him a second time around the end of June 1992 and as she approached the gate, Zoran Žigić recognised her and brought her husband to the fence and said to her: “Here. Take a good look at your husband. He’s going to fall first for the freedom of this town.” Her husband was very thin and exhausted; he did not say anything to her at the fence, but tears ran down his face. been brought in with him were ordered to leave Room 2 and to lie down on the ground outside, where they were severely beaten and told to confess to being members of the Green Berets.⁶¹⁶¹

1800. KDZ074 was captured in the woods between Čarakovo and Hambarine by armed men in camouflage uniforms and taken to Keraterm on 8 July 1992.⁶¹⁶² Upon his arrival, he was interrogated and beaten, and then taken to Room 2.⁶¹⁶³

1801. While in detention, beatings were very frequent at Keraterm.⁶¹⁶⁴ The guards called out the names of detainees, often at night, and they were taken outside and beaten.⁶¹⁶⁵ Those who returned were bloody and bruised all over; some died of their injuries.⁶¹⁶⁶ Some detainees who were called out never returned, and the other detainees assumed that they had died as a result of the beatings.⁶¹⁶⁷ Arifagić testified that the bodies of the men who died after being taken out at night were deposited in a part of the camp referred to as the “garbage dump”.⁶¹⁶⁸

1802. Detainees were beaten with bars and batons, and made to beat each other.⁶¹⁶⁹ Detainees were often beaten and humiliated in front of other detainees.⁶¹⁷⁰ Two former Bosnian Muslim policemen were severely beaten with chains and metal rods, one of whom died as a consequence of this beating.⁶¹⁷¹ Detainees were also beaten during interrogations at Keraterm.⁶¹⁷² The beatings were administered by the guards at Keraterm, in particular by Nenad Banović, a.k.a. “Čupo”, and

However, the Chamber also received evidence that Žigić was an “armed uniformed person” who entered the camp in the evenings and beat detainees, despite warnings from officials of the camp not to enter, suggesting that Žigić was not a guard at Keraterm. D4140 (Official note of Prijedor SJB, 4 July 1992).

Stakić also testified that at Keraterm, “people would be taken away by armed individuals”, but he did not know who these individuals were. Milomir Stakić, T. 45250–45251 (17 December 2013).

⁶¹⁷⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 1214. See also D1925 (Prijedor SJB criminal report, 2 July 1992) (stating that Zoran Žigić was under suspicion of having received a bribe from Esad Marošlić, a detainee held at Keraterm, on 9 June 1992); D1926 (Order of Banja Luka CSB, 1 July 1992) (ordering that Žigić be detained for three days for accepting the bribe from Marošlić). However, Radetić stated that (i) he never noticed that the persons he interviewed had any signs of physical abuse; (ii) beatings did not occur during interrogations while he worked at Keraterm; (iii) beatings never occurred in his presence; (iv) “Muslim members of the security structures, including the police, were not kept together with the civilians held at Keraterm” and he believed they were interviewed separately; and (v) he never heard of any cases of detainees being made to search for money in their homes by guards and he is convinced it was not done by anyone participating in the commissions interviewing detainees. D4226 (Witness statement of Dragan Radetić dated 17 January 2014), paras. 32, 43–46, 48; Dragan Radetić, T. 45680 (20 January 2014). However, Radetić also admitted that he received information and was aware that Žigić, Knežević, and others beat prisoners at Keraterm, after which the detainees died. Dragan Radetić, T. 45681–45684 (20 January 2014), T. 45689–45690 (21 January 2014). See also D4140 (Official note of Prijedor SJB, 4 July 1992). Based on these internal inconsistencies in Radetić’s evidence, as well as the Chamber’s observation that he was not forthright on several occasions, the Chamber does not find Radetić’s evidence that beatings did not occur at Keraterm to be reliable. The Chamber also notes that during his testimony, as demonstrated by these statements, Radetić attempted to distance himself from any knowledge of mistreatment of detainees or conditions of detention.

neighbour, to two separate offices inside the Keraterm building.⁶¹⁷⁹ KDZ093 was then repeatedly raped by Timarac and “other men” throughout the night on a table.⁶¹⁸⁰ A guard found her in the morning in a pool of blood and ordered her to wash up and brought her out to the yard where she sat for two to three hours in bloodstained clothes.⁶¹⁸¹ The same guard brought KDZ093’s neighbour out that morning; she looked frightened and was crying.⁶¹⁸² That afternoon, KDZ093, her neighbour, and a group of six or seven men were taken to Omarska camp in a “police van”.⁶¹⁸³

1804. Detainees at Keraterm were eventually transferred to Omarska or Trnopolje.⁶¹⁸⁴ Arifagić was transferred by bus from Keraterm to Trnopolje on 1 August 1992, along with many others.⁶¹⁸⁵ On 5 August 1992, a soldier read out a list of names of detainees, numbering about 120 men in total, and they were put on to two buses and drove away.⁶¹⁸⁶ After those two buses were driven away, new buses arrived and the remaining detainees in Keraterm, including KDZ050, were put on these buses and taken to Trnopolje.⁶¹⁸⁷

(iv) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1805. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serb civilians from multiple locations were brought to and detained at Keraterm by Serb Forces from 24 May 1992 until at least 5 August 1992. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included lack of space, inadequate bedding, poor sanitary conditions, lack of food, and inadequate medical care. The Chamber finds that detainees were subjected to regular beatings by Serb Forces at Keraterm. The Chamber finds that at least one detainee died as a result of beatings.⁶¹⁸⁸ The Chamber also finds that a number of Bosnian Muslim women were raped by Serb Forces at Keraterm.

(v) Scheduled Incident B.15.1

1806. The Indictment refers to the killing of approximately 150 people in Room 3 at Keraterm on or about 24 and 25 July 1992.

1807. On 20 or 21 July 1992, the detainees held in Room 3 were relocated to Rooms 2 and 4.⁶¹⁸⁹ Room 3 was then filled with groups of Bosnian Muslim men who arrived in buses from the Brdo area.⁶¹⁹⁰ A few days later, on or around 24 July 1992, the detainees held in Room 3 were allowed to leave the room to lie on the grass outside for two or three hours.⁶¹⁹¹ On that day, there was a noticeable increase in activity at the camp, with more vehicles and more “soldiers” present, who were singing.⁶¹⁹² Early that evening, the detainees were brought back to Room 3, and the door was locked.⁶¹⁹³ The detainees in Room 2 were also told to go into their room early, just before nightfall, face the wall, and stay calm.⁶¹⁹⁴

1808. Later that night, around 9 or 10 p.m., the detainees heard a lot of commotion outside, including trucks and members of the army entering the camp.⁶¹⁹⁵ A table was set up opposite Room 3, with a chair beside it and the area was lit up with strong lights; later, a heavy machine gun was placed on the table, pointed towards Room 3.⁶¹⁹⁶

⁶¹⁸⁸ This finding does not include the persons alleged to have been killed in Scheduled Incident B.15.1, which is discussed below.

1809. At around 11 p.m. or midnight, there was a short burst of gunfire towards the window of Room 3, and later pebbles were thrown at the windows and on the roof.⁶¹⁹⁷ The detainees inside began to behave strangely, their eyes stinging, and KDZ050, who was at the back of the room, began to feel faint.⁶¹⁹⁸ He concluded that some kind of tear gas or other poisonous gas must have been thrown in the room.⁶¹⁹⁹ The detainees began to push against one another, and then broke the door down in an effort to escape, at which point KDZ050 heard the first burst of machine-gun fire from outside.⁶²⁰⁰ The shooting lasted for four or five minutes, and then there was a lull, before it started again.⁶²⁰¹ KDZ050 passed out briefly, but counted three such bursts of machine-gun fire in total.⁶²⁰² He heard men crying out for help, as well as the sound of the soldiers outside trying to prevent people from escaping.⁶²⁰³ Afterwards, he also heard infantry weapons being fired outside a couple of times.⁶²⁰⁴

1810. Detainees in Room 2 heard a burst of gunfire from automatic rifles, the sounds of metal and glass breaking, and men crying out from Room 3.⁶²⁰⁵ One of the detainees in Room 2 heard one of the “Serb soldiers” swearing and saying: “Don’t come out or we’ll shoot. There they are. They’re fleeing” and then the sound of gunfire.⁶²⁰⁶

1811. The next morning, KDZ050 saw blood all over the inside of Room 3, as well as the bodies of injured and killed men lying around.⁶²⁰⁷ He estimated that there were around 200 dead bodies piled inside and outside the room.⁶²⁰⁸ The survivors were then told to come outside, where they stayed on the grass for three or four hours.⁶²⁰⁹ Also that morning, a large truck arrived in the camp and was parked in front of Room 3.⁶²¹⁰ All the detainees were told to come out of their rooms, and those who looked strongest, including Tači and Arifagić, were directed to load bodies from Room 3 into the truck.⁶²¹¹ It took about an hour to load all of the bodies, and then the truck drove away.⁶²¹² In addition, those who had survived but were injured were also taken away in the truck.⁶²¹³ Blood dripped from the truck as it left.⁶²¹⁴ A fire engine, or some type of truck equipped with water and a hose, arrived and was used to wash the blood from the ground of Room 3 and the surrounding area.⁶²¹⁵

1812. Those who survived were returned to Room 3 after it was cleaned.⁶²¹⁶ The following night, Arifagić heard shooting again from Room 3, although it did not last as long as the first time.⁶²¹⁷ At one point he heard someone shouting: “What are we going to do? There are survivors here”, and he then heard about 40 individual shots.⁶²¹⁸ Once again, the next morning, a truck arrived and bodies were loaded on to it.⁶²¹⁹ In addition, the occupants of Rooms 1, 2, and 4 were ordered to go outside, and those who had injuries were told to board the truck, as were the six men who had been involved in loading the bodies, and it drove away.⁶²²⁰ A day or two after the shootings, Arifagić saw Simo Drljača in the camp, near Room 1.⁶²²¹ Some of the detainees approached him, and he said that “this” should not have happened and they had his assurances that they would not be harmed again.⁶²²²

1813. Defence witnesses testified that the killing incident which occurred in Room 3 at Keraterm (i) resulted from a rebellion or an escape attempt by the detainees;⁶²²³ or (ii) were spontaneous killings by local battalions or reservists, committed in revenge for Serbian soldiers killed at the frontline.⁶²²⁴ The Chamber considers that these claims are speculative and hearsay; therefore, the Chamber does not find the evidence of these witnesses to be reliable.

1814. The Chamber took judicial notice that a minimum of 190 persons were killed in Room 3 at Keraterm.⁶²²⁵ Furthermore, in assessing the overall number of persons killed during this incident, the Chamber has considered witness testimony that (i) there were approximately 200 dead bodies piled inside and outside of Room 3 the morning after the killings there;⁶²²⁶ and (ii) out of approximately 570 Bosnian Muslim men who were detained in Room 3, about half of them survived the killings in Room 3 on or around 24 July 1992.⁶²²⁷ In addition, the Chamber received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals at Keraterm in connection with the killings in Room 3 on or around 24 July 1992.⁶²²⁸

1815. In weighing the totality of the evidence before it, the Chamber is therefore satisfied that at least 190 Bosnian Muslim men were killed in Room 3 at Keraterm by Serb Forces on or about 24 and 25 July 1992.

(d) Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.4 and Scheduled Incident

B.15.5

1816. The Indictment refers to the use of Trnopolje as a detention facility in Prijedor municipality between at least 15 May and 30 September 1992. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people were killed at Trnopolje and at various places after they were taken from the camp between 28 May and October 1992.

(i) Arrival of detainees and control over detention facility

1817. Trnopolje is located in the village of Trnopolje, which lies to the southeast of Prijedor town and on the train line from Prijedor to Banja Luka.⁶²²⁹ The camp was established in a former elementary school and its surrounding buildings, which included a gymnasium, shop, the former municipal centre, and an attached theatre, known as the “dom”.⁶²³⁰

1818. Trnopolje became operational on or around 24 May 1992 during the attacks on Hambarine and Kozarac when residents of those areas who had been displaced from their homes were brought there.⁶²³¹ Initially, primarily Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat women, children, and elderly were brought to Trnopolje; however, later Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat men of military age were transferred there from Keraterm and Omarska.⁶²³²

1819. The Accused presented evidence that Trnopolje was an “open reception centre” where Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat refugees went voluntarily and stayed for their own protection and shelter during the conflict.⁶²³³ The Accused argues that due to its “civilian nature”, Trnopolje was only partially enclosed by a fence.⁶²³⁴ The Chamber considers that although Trnopolje was not entirely fenced in, a barbed wire fence surrounded parts of the compound.⁶²³⁵ Further, the Chamber considers that despite Trnopolje being “open” in certain areas, detainees were not allowed to leave unless under certain circumstances.⁶²³⁶ For instance, some people were allowed to leave the camp to collect food from nearby villages, as long as they left their identification documents at the camp men at Trnopolje). See also Adjudicated Facts 1103, 1225, 1296; D470 (CSB Banja Luka Report concerning collection centres, undated), e-court pp. 2–4, 28–29.

However, Puhalić testified that Trnopolje was not surrounded by soldiers, nor were there machine-gun nests or armed positions with guns pointed at the camp. D4008 (Witness statement of Slavko Puhalić dated 11 November 2013), para. 21. The Chamber does not find Puhalić’s evidence to be credible in this regard. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considers that he was not forthright with the Chamber on several occasions and that due to his involvement at Trnopolje, he had an interest in distancing himself from knowledge of conditions there.

(iii) Treatment of detainees

Beatings and killings

1824. Although the scale of abuse at Trnopolje was less than that at Omarska, mistreatment was common there.⁶²⁶² Camp guards cut male detainees with knives and beat them with baseball bats, iron bars, rifle butts, or whatever they had at their disposal.⁶²⁶³ Detainees who were taken out for questioning would often return badly beaten and covered with blood.⁶²⁶⁴

1825. A laboratory inside the clinic at Trnopolje was used for interrogations and beatings.⁶²⁶⁵ Merdžanić could hear the sounds of camp guards beating and verbally abusing the detainees there.⁶²⁶⁶ Merdžanić treated some of the detainees after they were beaten there and photographed them without anyone knowing.⁶²⁶⁷ Beatings also occurred outside and in a boiler room in the school building.⁶²⁶⁸ On one occasion, Žigić beat and kicked one of the detainees who had arrived from Keraterm and no one tried to stop him.⁶²⁶⁹

1826. Detainees, including female detainees, at Trnopolje were verbally abused, insulted with ethnic slurs, and threatened with death.⁶²⁷⁰ Detainees were forced to fight each other in the camp.⁶²⁷¹ Detainees were selected to bury dead bodies in nearby villages and in the camp.⁶²⁷² They were also taken out to perform forced labour.⁶²⁷³

1827. Detainees at Trnopolje were killed inside and outside the camp.⁶²⁷⁴ A number of detainees died as a result of the beatings by the guards during interrogations.⁶²⁷⁵ At least two detainees died in Trnopolje as a result of lack of medical care.⁶²⁷⁶ Others were killed by camp guards or other soldiers who entered the camp.⁶²⁷⁷ For instance, on the first night of KDZ038's detention in the shop building at Trnopolje, a uniformed Serb he knew took out an elderly man, Sulejman Kekić, and beat him.⁶²⁷⁸ Later that night, the same man was taken away, KDZ038 heard two shots, and the man did not return.⁶²⁷⁹ The Chamber is satisfied that this individual was killed. KDZ054 recalled one night during his detention when soldiers from a reserve unit came into the camp and called out six detainees from the Forić family.⁶²⁸⁰ They took them behind the corner of the building and about 10 to 20 minutes later, KDZ054 heard shooting.⁶²⁸¹ Later, the detainees who were selected to bury the bodies confirmed that the six detainees who had been taken out earlier were shot dead.⁶²⁸²

1828. Shortly after KDZ038 arrived at Trnopolje on 20 July 1992, a group of men from Bišćani arrived at the camp on a bus; KDZ038 saw that 12 of the men were called out and sent back to the bus, which drove them away.⁶²⁸³ Later, he was told by people who had walked some of the way from the Brdo area to Trnopolje that they had seen the dead bodies of these men in an area called Kratalj.⁶²⁸⁴ KDZ038 later spoke to a man who had been in this group of 12, who told him that the bus drove them back towards Bišćani, but that it stopped along the way and the men were lined up and shot with some kind of automatic rifle.⁶²⁸⁵ He and one other man survived the incident.⁶²⁸⁶

1829. Furthermore, on or around 8 September 1992, KDZ050 saw some of the detainees taken out to a nearby fish pond.⁶²⁸⁷ Shortly afterwards, KDZ050 heard rounds of fire from that direction, and those detainees never returned.⁶²⁸⁸ The Chamber is satisfied that these individuals were killed in this incident.

Sexual violence

1830. There were many incidents of rape at Trnopolje between May and October 1992.⁶²⁸⁹ During one of these incidents, the perpetrator told the victim: “Muslim women should give birth to

Puhalić also testified that he was aware of rapes committed at Trnopolje in the beginning before the military guard was established by “unknown people who were outside any control” who broke into the camp. He stated that he reported the incidents to Kuruzović and some of the individuals who committed the rapes were arrested by the military police, but he did not know if any of them were prosecuted. However, Puhalić stated that it was not true that people were allowed to visit the camp from the outside. 1831. Camp guards at Trnopolje allowed men from outside the camp, including Serb soldiers and other Serbs, to enter the camp and rape women and girls.⁶³⁰¹ Detainees assigned to work in the clinic at Trnopolje, including Merdžanić and Vasif Gutić, treated and counselled many victims of rape there, including a 12 year old girl.⁶³⁰² The incidents of rape at Trnopolje caused terrible fear and mental trauma among all of the detainees.⁶³⁰³

(iv) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1832. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serbs, including women and children, were transferred to and detained at Trnopolje by Serb Forces beginning on or around 24 May 1992 until at least 30 September 1992. The detainees were held in poor conditions, including lack of space, poor sanitary conditions, inadequate medical care, and insufficient food. The Chamber finds that male detainees at Trnopolje were subjected to beatings by Serb Forces and were forced to work.⁶³⁰⁴ The Chamber also finds that a number of women detained at Trnopolje were raped by Serb Forces, including by the camp commander, Kuruzović. Finally, the Chamber finds that a number of non-

1833. The Indictment refers to the killing on or about 21 August 1992 of approximately 200 men taken from Trnopolje to Vlašić mountain in Skender Vakuf.

1834. On 21 August 1992, a convoy of four buses marked “Autotransport Prijedor”, organised by the Prijedor Crisis Staff and the Prijedor Red Cross to transport people out of Prijedor into Muslim-held territory, arrived at Trnopolje.⁶³⁰⁶ Primarily male detainees, including witnesses KDZ038 and KDZ611, as well as some women and children, were loaded onto them.⁶³⁰⁷ Kuruzović and members of the intervention squad were present as the detainees boarded the buses.⁶³⁰⁸ When the buses were full, they left in the direction of Kozarac, accompanied by members of the intervention squad and escorted by police and military vehicles.⁶³⁰⁹ Near Kozarac, the convoy stopped and was joined by four other buses and eight trucks, which had been loaded in Tukovi with Bosnian Muslim men, women, and children under orders from intervention squad commander, Miroslav Paraš.⁶³¹⁰ Paraš and Kuruzović spoke to each other during this stop.⁶³¹¹ At this point, the convoy included eight buses and eight trucks, accompanied by a number of police vehicles.⁶³¹² The convoy

continued through Banja Luka and on to Skender Vakuf, moving towards their final destination, which was the line of separation between Serb and Muslim controlled territory near Travnik.⁶³¹³

1835. The convoy stopped a number of additional times on the way.⁶³¹⁴ At one stop, one of the guards on the bus ordered KDZ038 to collect money and valuables from the men on his bus.⁶³¹⁵ Members of the intervention squad also collected money and other valuables from the detainees and placed them in plastic bags.⁶³¹⁶ At another stop, soldiers in olive drab uniforms boarded the buses and remained for the rest of the journey.⁶³¹⁷

1836. Shortly after Skender Vakuf, the convoy stopped again near a stream; young men of military age were then pulled out of the convoy by members of the intervention squad at Paraš's orders and loaded into two empty buses.⁶³¹⁸ The men on KDZ038's bus were ordered to line up outside of the bus.⁶³¹⁹ They were then told to board one of two empty buses and to lie on the floor.⁶³²⁰ KDZ038 estimated that there were 100 men packed on to the first bus.⁶³²¹

1837. The men of military age on the bus of KDZ611 were separated and loaded into the other empty bus; some women and older men were allowed to stay on one of the original buses.⁶³²²

KDZ611 estimated that there were “well over 100 people” on his bus, which proceeded, behind the first bus while the rest of the convoy carried on ahead of them, towards Travnik.⁶³²³

1838. The buses continued for another 10 to 15 minutes before stopping again on a road flanked on one side by a steep cliff and on the other by a deep gorge; an area referred to as Korićanske Stijene.⁶³²⁴ Members of the intervention squad directed the detainees on the bus KDZ038 was on to disembark, form a column two by two, and walk down the road.⁶³²⁵ After they walked for about 100 metres, the men were ordered to stop, turn left, take three steps forward, and kneel down facing the abyss.⁶³²⁶ KDZ038 heard a man in police uniform in charge say: “Here we exchange the dead for the dead and the living for the living” and then shots were fired towards the line of men at the edge of the gorge.⁶³²⁷ KDZ038 saw people falling down and shouted at his father to throw himself into the abyss; his father then pushed him into the gorge.⁶³²⁸ KDZ038 then found himself at the bottom, his ankle broken, and his foot hanging by a tendon.⁶³²⁹ Two men came down into the abyss and shot anyone who tried to escape in the head; KDZ038 pretended to be dead.⁶³³⁰ He then heard more shooting and saw dead bodies around him.⁶³³¹

1839. Once the second bus stopped, the men on board, including KDZ611, were told to disembark by a soldier in a red beret.⁶³³² KDZ611 saw the other bus parked ten metres away.⁶³³³ They were

At a place near Vlašić, the convoy stopped again and the remaining people were told to disembark and they walked from there to Travnik. ordered to form a column two abreast and to walk for several minutes until they reached a wooded area with a steep slope on one side of the road and a steep drop on the other side.⁶³³⁴ The men were ordered to face the drop, to step forward to the edge, and to kneel down, at which point gunfire was directed at them by members of the intervention squad.⁶³³⁵ KDZ611 was pushed by the man beside him down the slope.⁶³³⁶ He fell to the bottom uninjured, and continued to hear the sounds of gunfire for a number of minutes.⁶³³⁷ He saw many other men falling down the slope to the bottom.⁶³³⁸ Individuals who did not fall into the abyss were pushed into it by the men shooting at them.⁶³³⁹ Grenades were also thrown into the gorge.⁶³⁴⁰

1840. When night fell, KDZ038 crawled to the river at the bottom of the gorge and spent the night there. He roughly bandaged his foot and the next day began to crawl along the river until he came to a derelict mill where he took shelter.⁶³⁴¹ He was later found by some soldiers who took him to Skender Vakuf, where he was given medical attention and a statement was taken from him about the killings at Koričanske Stijene; he was then taken by ambulance to a hospital in Banja Luka.⁶³⁴²

1841. KDZ611 and another man who had survived the shooting⁶³⁴³ remained hidden in the woods for two or three days, after which they surrendered to a group of Serb soldiers at a place called Galica.⁶³⁴⁴ They were then taken to Skender Vakuf and held with three other wounded survivors of the incident, and interrogated about what had happened at Korićanske Stijene by both an army officer and the police.⁶³⁴⁵ They were then transferred to a hospital in Banja Luka.⁶³⁴⁶

1842. In the hospital, KDZ038, KDZ611, and other survivors were beaten and mistreated by other patients and by local civilians, police, and soldiers, with the permission of the guards who were watching them.⁶³⁴⁷ Later, they were transferred to another hospital at Paprikovac, near Banja Luka, where they and other non-Serbs were also mistreated.⁶³⁴⁸ Following his release from the hospital, and after being interviewed by a judge in Banja Luka about the incident at Korićanske Stijene, KDZ611 was housed by a Muslim charity in Banja Luka called Merhamet.⁶³⁴⁹ Later, an international organisation took him back to Trnopolje to get the necessary papers to permit him to leave RS, and then on to Karlovac, from where he travelled to a third country.⁶³⁵⁰ KDZ038 remained in the Paprikovac hospital until 15 October 1992, when he was told that he was free to leave and, with the assistance of Merhamet, he went to stay at the mosque.⁶³⁵¹ The wound on KDZ038's ankle festered badly and his foot was finally amputated.⁶³⁵²

1843. On 22 August 1992, a meeting was held with Paraš, Župljanin, Bogdan Subotić, Drljača, and other high level officials at the Prijedor SJB to discuss the incident at Korićanske Stijene.⁶³⁵³ That day, members of the intervention squad who had been told to go into hiding after the incident returned to Prijedor and resumed their duties.⁶³⁵⁴ On 23 or 24 August 1992, members of the intervention squad were taken back to Korićanske Stijene to attempt to recover bodies from the abyss; Drljača and Župljanin were both present.⁶³⁵⁵ Approximately 150 to 200 dead bodies were seen at Korićanske Stijene after the incident.⁶³⁵⁶ The attempt to extract the bodies failed as they did not have the heavy machinery required for such an operation.⁶³⁵⁷ A second attempt was made to extract the bodies with a crane but it also failed, as did their attempt to burn the bodies.⁶³⁵⁸ During the second attempt, some of the bodies were destroyed; members of the intervention squad then tried to cover the remaining bodies with stones and branches, under the supervision of Drljača, Paraš, and two other commanders.⁶³⁵⁹

1844. Shortly after the incident, the intervention squad was disbanded and its 40 members were sent on a combat mission to Han Pijesak.⁶³⁶⁰ On 3 September 1992, the 1st Krajina Corps reported to the VRS Main Staff that Drljača was responsible for the incident at Korićanske Stijene and that it had caused indignation among citizens and members of the 1st Krajina Corps, creating a “dark stain”, but that it was fortunate that the “international community did not find out about it in more detail”.⁶³⁶¹

1845. On 14 September 1992, in response to a request by Mićo Stanišić to initiate an investigation into the incident,⁶³⁶² Drljača stated that an investigation could not be carried out because the officers who had participated in the convoy and incident were currently deployed in the battlefield.⁶³⁶³ Although an investigation into the incident was initiated,⁶³⁶⁴ none of the policemen

1846. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that on 21 August 1992, approximately 200 men travelling in a convoy over Mount Vlašić were killed by Serb armed men at Korićanske Stijene.⁶³⁶⁷ Furthermore, in assessing the overall number of persons killed during this incident, the Chamber has considered witness testimony that there were two buses with approximately 100 men or more on each bus.⁶³⁶⁸ In addition, the Chamber received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals in connection with the killings at Korićanske Stijene.⁶³⁶⁹

1847. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that approximately 200 non-Serb men, some of whom were taken from Trnopolje, were killed on 21 August 1992 by Serb Forces at Korićanske Stijene.

(vi) Transfer of detainees out of Trnopolje

1848. Women and children were taken away in convoys from Trnopolje early on until there were primarily only men left in the camp.⁶³⁷⁰

1849. As mentioned above, pursuant to an order issued by Mladić on 3 August 1992, Talić ordered the authorities at Omarska, Trnopolje, and Manjača to urgently prepare for visits by the ICRC and teams of reporters.⁶³⁷¹

1850. When journalists and foreign delegations visited Trnopolje, camp officials would take down the barbed wire fence and sometimes a sign would be put up saying that it was a “collection centre”.⁶³⁷² On 18 August 1992, ICRC representatives were denied access to Trnopolje for a week.⁶³⁷³ In that week, officials prepared the camp for subsequent visits by journalists and ICRC representatives by organising numerous convoys, including the convoy to Mount Vlasić on 21 August 1992, to transfer Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats out of Trnopolje in order to empty the camp.⁶³⁷⁴ The convoys transferring detainees out of Trnopolje were organised and secured by the Prijedor Crisis Staff, Prijedor SJB, Banja Luka SJB, and the VRS.⁶³⁷⁵ ICRC regained access to Trnopolje on 26 August 1992 and began registering detainees for the first time.⁶³⁷⁶

Trnopolje was officially closed at the end of September 1992, but some detainees stayed there longer so that they could be registered and leave.⁶³⁷⁷ A large convoy from Trnopolje was organised by the ICRC on 1 October 1992; 1,560 people were transferred from Trnopolje to a reception centre in Karlovac.⁶³⁷⁸ All of the detainees transferred in this convoy were required to sign documents relinquishing their property rights in Prijedor to Serbs.⁶³⁷⁹ It was only after signing these documents that they were permitted to leave.⁶³⁸⁰ According to the Prijedor Red Cross, over 23,000 people had been “housed” at Trnopolje by the end of September 1992.⁶³⁸¹

1852. Some detainees remained at Trnopolje until the end of 1992.⁶³⁸² On 2 December 1992, Kirudja co-ordinated a convoy of 600 to 800 people out of Trnopolje to Dvor, in Croatia.⁶³⁸³

1855. Around 21 July 1992, a group of approximately 114 Bosnian Muslim men and boys were captured by Serb soldiers and transported in buses to Miška Glava Dom.⁶³⁸⁶ This group had been part of a column of between 200 and 300 men and boys walking in the direction of Bihać.⁶³⁸⁷ The column was attacked by Serb soldiers in the Kalejevo woods and it broke apart.⁶³⁸⁸ A group from the column, including Nermin Karagić and Elvedin Nasić, ran into the woods near Miška Glava and were surrounded by about 20 soldiers dressed in olive-grey JNA uniforms and blue reserve police uniforms.⁶³⁸⁹ The group was lined up in four columns, searched, and ordered to throw all of their possessions in a pile on the ground.⁶³⁹⁰ They were then led to the road, where a van was brought to take them in groups to Miška Glava Dom.⁶³⁹¹ Three men tried to escape on the way to the van, one of whom was shot.⁶³⁹²

(ii) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1857. Detainees were held in the café at Miška Glava Dom for between three to five days.⁶³⁹⁵ The room was small and so overcrowded that detainees had to sit in a crouching position, with their knees to their chests and their arms around their legs.⁶³⁹⁶ It was stiflingly hot.⁶³⁹⁷ While at Miška Glava Dom, detainees received little to no food and they had to “earn” drinking water by singing songs about Greater Serbia.⁶³⁹⁸

1858. Detainees were regularly called out of the café to a smaller room to be interrogated and were beaten by soldiers with their fists and rifle butts.⁶³⁹⁹ They suffered concussions, bleeding, and heavy bruising.⁶⁴⁰⁰ Karagić heard the moaning of his father as he was being beaten and when his father returned, he was covered in bruises.⁶⁴⁰¹ Karagić also saw a man named Islam Hopovac beaten until he was “black and blue”.⁶⁴⁰² Detainees were also beaten when they went outside to go to the bathroom.⁶⁴⁰³

1859. At one point, a man whose son was allegedly killed by Muslims in Rizvanovići entered the room and called out ten men from Rizvanovići, including Ismet Hamulić, and said he would “do

1860. On around 25 July 1992, the remaining detainees were put on to two buses and transferred to the Ljubija football stadium.⁶⁴⁰⁶

(iii) Conclusion

1861. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims, including minors, were detained at Miška Glava Dom by Serb Forces from around 21 July to 25 July 1992. The Chamber also finds that detainees were held in poor conditions characterised by lack of space and insufficient food and were subjected to severe beatings by Serb Forces.

(f) Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.6 and Scheduled Incident

A.10.8

1862. The Indictment refers to the use of the Ljubija Football Stadium as a detention facility in Prijedor municipality on or about 25 July 1992.⁶⁴⁰⁷ The Prosecution alleges that a number of men were killed at the Ljubija Football Stadium and surrounding areas on or about 25 July 1992.⁶⁴⁰⁸

(i) Arrival of detainees and control over the detention facility

1863. On or around 25 July 1992 in the afternoon, Bosnian Muslim civilians who had been detained at Miška Glava Dom were transferred by bus to the Ljubija Football Stadium.⁶⁴⁰⁹ Ljubija ⁶⁴⁰⁷ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution notes a typographical error in the Indictment for Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.6, namely that it omitted to allege the year as 1992. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, p. 43, fn. 642.

⁶⁴⁰⁸ The Chamber notes that these killings are alleged under Schedule A of the Indictment. However, they are killings related directly to the Ljubija Football Stadium listed as Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.6 in the Indictment.

Football Stadium was located at the entrance to Gornja Ljubija.⁶⁴¹⁰ On the way to the stadium, one of the buses stopped at the entrance to an iron ore mine near Gornja Ljubija.⁶⁴¹¹ A policeman named “Simo”, soldiers wearing dark blue and black camouflage overalls, and members of a “Special Forces intervention squad” boarded the bus and began to beat and kick the detainees.⁶⁴¹² The bus then continued on to the stadium, and the detainees were ordered off.⁶⁴¹³

1864. Upon arriving at the stadium, children were separated from the other detainees and held in a building that served as a changing room for athletes.⁶⁴¹⁴

1865. Ljubija Football Stadium was guarded by Bosnian Serb policemen, members of the military, and members of the intervention squad who accompanied the buses.⁶⁴¹⁵ A guard in civilian clothes, who was called “vojvoda”, was also present at the stadium.⁶⁴¹⁶

(ii) Treatment of detainees

1866. As they exited the bus, the detainees were beaten by civilians who had assembled at the stadium, as well as by soldiers and members of the intervention squad and police, with metal rods, rifle butts, baseball bats, and other implements.⁶⁴¹⁷

1867. Some detainees were ordered to bend forward against a brick wall surrounding the stadium and were kicked until there was a stream of blood running along the wall.⁶⁴¹⁸ Karagić was kicked in the face and from behind; he sustained a broken nose and hit his head against the wall.⁶⁴¹⁹ Detainees were made to raise their arms so that their hands were positioned on top of the wall; the driver of the bus then walked on top of the wall, stepping on their fingers.⁶⁴²⁰ While being beaten, the detainees were forced to sing songs about Greater Serbia.⁶⁴²¹ For several hours, the soldiers beat the detainees until some of them died.⁶⁴²²

1868. A group of men were singled out from the detainees at the wall and taken to a wire fence surrounding the stadium to be killed.⁶⁴²³ Karagić witnessed at least one detainee being shot.⁶⁴²⁴ Furthermore, Nasić's cousin, Irfan Nasić, was singled out, sent to the fence, and shot by Stiven with a pistol at close range.⁶⁴²⁵ Nasić saw a guard nicknamed "Duča" fire at Muharem Petrovac, splitting his head in two.⁶⁴²⁶ Nasić also saw a third man shot and killed.⁶⁴²⁷ Nasić was then beaten on the head with a metal baton by a soldier and lost consciousness. When he regained consciousness, he was ordered to move the bodies of the three men who had been killed.⁶⁴²⁸

1869. The surviving detainees were then lined up in columns, with their hands behind their necks, and forced to board a bus as they were beaten further by soldiers with baseball bats.⁶⁴²⁹ Some detainees were ordered to load the dead bodies on to the bus.⁶⁴³⁰ Karagić thought that one of the bodies he was made to carry was his father's, but he was not sure as the body was missing half of the skull.⁶⁴³¹ As Karagić was carrying the bodies, he saw a pile of between 15 and 20 bodies that were already in the back of the bus.⁶⁴³² After loading the dead bodies on to the bus, the detainees had to sit in the bus with their heads down, while the soldiers shouted ethnic slurs at them.⁶⁴³³ The detainees were then transported to the "Kipe" mine.⁶⁴³⁴

1870. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that at least 15 detainees were killed at Ljubija Football Stadium.⁶⁴³⁵ The Chamber also received forensic evidence to support the deaths of three identified individuals who were detained at Ljubija Football Stadium on or around 25 July 1992.⁶⁴³⁶ Furthermore in assessing the total number of detainees killed at the stadium, the Chamber has considered witness testimony that there were between 15 to 20 dead bodies loaded on to the bus before the detainees were transferred out of the stadium.

(iii) Conclusion

1871. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that on or around 25 July 1992, Bosnian Muslims, including minors, were transferred to and detained at Ljubija Football Stadium for several hours by Serb Forces, and that while held there, the detainees were subjected to severe beatings by Serb Forces. The Chamber also finds that at least 15 detainees were killed by Serb Forces at Ljubija Football Stadium on or around 25 July 1992.

⁶⁴³⁷ The Chamber notes that these killings are alleged under Schedule A of the Indictment. However, they are killings related to the Ljubija Football Stadium listed as Scheduled Detention Facility C.20.6 in the Indictment.

1873. On or around 25 July 1992, at least 50 detainees from Ljubija Football Stadium were put on a bus, provided by a local public transport company and guarded by numerous armed soldiers.⁶⁴³⁸ They were taken to an iron ore mine southwest of Ljubija referred to as “Kipe” (“Kipe mine”).⁶⁴³⁹

1874. The bus stopped at Kipe mine between 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. and the soldiers called the detainees off the bus in groups of three and shot them.⁶⁴⁴⁰ The dead bodies were thrown into a hole in the ground.⁶⁴⁴¹ As Nasić and two other men were getting off the bus, four other detainees broke a window and tried to escape, distracting the soldiers.⁶⁴⁴² In the confusion, Nasić and the other two men were not shot, and Nasić hid in the hole between the bodies and pretended to be dead.⁶⁴⁴³ While this was going on, Karagić jumped through the broken bus window.⁶⁴⁴⁴ He managed to run away without being shot because the soldier guarding the bus was changing his ammunition clip.⁶⁴⁴⁵ As he was fleeing, Karagić recognised two other detainees from the bus who had also managed to escape.⁶⁴⁴⁶

1875. After the commotion, one of the soldiers said that some of the men were still alive so they illuminated the area with flashlights to ensure that everyone was dead.⁶⁴⁴⁷ If they noticed any survivors or heard moaning, the soldiers shot them again while cursing their “Muslim mothers”.⁶⁴⁴⁸

Nasić was still lying in the hole but he was not hit by any bullets.⁶⁴⁴⁹ Once the soldiers were certain that everyone had been killed, they left.⁶⁴⁵⁰ Nasić returned to the site a few days later and the hole had been covered with dirt and he saw blood and pieces of clothing and shoes.⁶⁴⁵¹

1876. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that all of the detainees on the bus, save Nasić and Karagić, were killed.⁶⁴⁵² The Chamber also received forensic evidence to support the deaths of some identified individuals who were executed at Kipe mine on or around 25 July 1992.⁶⁴⁵³

1877. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that about 50 non-Serbs were killed by Serb Forces on or about 25 July 1992 at Kipe mine.

1878. The Indictment refers to the use of the Prijedor barracks as a detention facility in Prijedor municipality between at least May and June 1992.

(i) Arrival of detainees

1879. Located in Urije, the Prijedor Barracks, also known as the Žarko Zgonjanin barracks, was used as a transition detention facility in Prijedor in June 1992.⁶⁴⁵⁴ Prijedor Barracks was one of the

1880. In early June 1992, KDZ026 was arrested and detained at Prijedor Barracks for a few hours; while there, he recognised another man detained there.⁶⁴⁵⁶

1881. Around 9 June 1992, KDZ392 and his mother and father were captured in Bešići by soldiers wearing camouflage uniforms.⁶⁴⁵⁷ They had been trying to reach the Sava River in order to cross over to Croatia.⁶⁴⁵⁸ At the time, the father of KDZ392 had a pistol with him but KDZ392 and his mother were not armed.⁶⁴⁵⁹ After being captured, KDZ392 and his parents were taken to Prijedor Barracks.⁶⁴⁶⁰ On the way, the soldiers captured two other men, a father and son named Suad and Fehid Trnjanin.⁶⁴⁶¹ En route, KDZ392 also observed traces of burning in all of the villages inhabited by Bosnian Muslims along the main road leading from Prijedor to Banja Luka; while the villages approaching Omarska and at the exit of Prijedor inhabited by Serbs were not burned.⁶⁴⁶²

(ii) Treatment of detainees

1882. While held at Prijedor Barracks, detainees were interrogated and mistreated by soldiers and military and civilian police.⁶⁴⁶³

1883. When KDZ392 and his parents arrived at the barracks, they were hit and made to kneel down in the field outside of the barracks with their hands behind their heads.⁶⁴⁶⁴ KDZ392 was taken to a building while his mother and father remained in the field.⁶⁴⁶⁵ He could hear the soldiers shouting ethnic slurs outside, and when his father entered the building, he was covered in blood and

v. Stakić, T. 12946 (testifying that he did not see any civilians being detained at Prijedor Barracks when he visited from time to time). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable based on the evidence before the Chamber to the contrary which suggests that non-Serb civilians were brought to the Prijedor Barracks and detained there for a short period before being transferred to other detention facilities. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber also considered that Radetić was not forthright with the Chamber on several occasions.

1884. Detainees were held at Prijedor Barracks for a short period before being transferred to Keraterm or Omarska.⁶⁴⁶⁹

(iii) Conclusion

1885. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serb civilians were detained at Prijedor Barracks by Serb Forces in June 1992. The Chamber also finds that detainees at Prijedor Barracks were subjected to beatings and deprived of medical treatment.

(6) Scheduled Incident D.17

1886. The Indictment refers to the destruction of 18 mosques and two Catholic churches in Prijedor between at least May and December 1992.⁶⁴⁷⁰

1887. The Chamber recalls its finding that Serb Forces burned and destroyed the Čaršijska mosque in Prijedor town on 30 May 1992 during the attack.⁶⁴⁷¹ As it was damaged beyond repair, in July 1992, pursuant to orders from the Prijedor Executive Board, Serb engineers and architects demolished the remainder of the Čaršijska mosque, as well as houses in the area, and removed the rubble.⁶⁴⁷² The Chamber recalls that the Zagrad mosque in Prijedor town was also burned and destroyed on 30 May by Serb Forces.⁶⁴⁷³

1888. The Chamber recalls that the Mutnik mosque, as well as other mosques in Kozarac, were destroyed during the attack on the area by Serb Forces at the end of May and June 1992.⁶⁴⁷⁴ The Chamber further recalls that the mosque in Kamičani was set alight by Serb Forces between 24 and 26 May 1992.⁶⁴⁷⁵

1889. Additionally, the Chamber recalls that the mosque in Hambarine was shelled during the attack on Hambarine in May 1992, and again during the attack on the village in July 1992, by Serb Forces.⁶⁴⁷⁶ The Chamber also recalls that the Rajkovac mosque was shelled in late July 1992.⁶⁴⁷⁷ The Chamber further recalls that the mosque in Biščani was destroyed on 20 July 1992, and that the mosque in Rizvanovići was destroyed in the summer months, before August 1992.⁶⁴⁷⁸ The Chamber also recalls that the mosque in Čarakovo was destroyed on 23 July 1992 by Serb soldiers.⁶⁴⁷⁹

1890. In addition, the Donja Puharska mosque in Prijedor was blown up and destroyed on 28 August 1992 by Serb Forces; the explosion occurred within ten minutes of the explosion that destroyed the Catholic church in Prijedor town.⁶⁴⁸⁰

1891. The Chamber took judicial notice of the facts that within the summer months of 1992, the mosque in Gornja Puharska was razed to the ground,⁶⁴⁸¹ the minaret of the mosque in Kozaruša was badly damaged,⁶⁴⁸² and that the new mosque in Kevljani was completely destroyed by mines.⁶⁴⁸³

1892. The Prijedor SJB reported that by September 1993, not a single Bosnian Muslim place of worship remained in Prijedor.⁶⁴⁸⁴

1893. In regard to the Catholic churches, the Chamber further recalls that on 29 July 1992, the Catholic church in Briševo was destroyed.⁶⁴⁸⁵ Furthermore, the Catholic church in Prijedor town was destroyed on 28 August 1992 when Bosnian Serb soldiers broke into it and planted explosives which later detonated and destroyed the church.⁶⁴⁸⁶ Serb engineers and architects later toppled the bell of the Catholic church and used heavy machinery to remove the rubble.⁶⁴⁸⁷

1894. According to Riedlmayer's reports, a total of 18 mosques and two Catholic churches in Prijedor were damaged or destroyed during the war.⁶⁴⁸⁸ The Chamber notes that with respect to one mosque, the Gomjenica mosque, Riedlmayer describes it as "lightly damaged" and that it was the only mosque in the Prijedor region that still had a roof at the end of the war.⁶⁴⁸⁹ Riedlmayer states that all of the remaining 17 mosques and two Catholic churches were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed. The Chamber therefore finds that 17 mosques and two Catholic churches were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed.

1895. The Chamber has considered the evidence it has received which identified Serb Forces as responsible for the destruction of mosques in Prijedor between May and December 1992.⁶⁴⁹⁰ It also had regard to the fact that almost all mosques in the municipality sustained heavy damage or were completely destroyed after Serb Forces took over the municipality. Having weighed these factors, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Serb Forces were responsible for the attacks on and destruction of mosques and Catholic churches in Prijedor.

⁶⁴⁹⁰ In his final brief, the Accused argues that some of the cultural sites in Prijedor were destroyed by forces outside the control of the legal authorities in Prijedor. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1612. However, the Chamber considers that in support of this argument, the Accused only refers to testimony from Drasko Vujić, who recounted that his soldiers told him that the explosion which destroyed the Donja Puharska mosque was "a total surprise". See D4242 (Witness statement of Draško Vujić dated 24 January 2014), para. 11. The Chamber does not consider that Vujić's evidence in this regard contradicts the evidence which relates to the conduct of Serb Forces in the destruction of the mosques and Catholic churches during the attacks on villages throughout Prijedor.

1896. Therefore, the Chamber finds that 17 mosques and two Catholic churches were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed by Serb Forces in Prijedor between May and December 1992.

(7) Movement of the population from Prijedor and appropriation of property

1897. Following the attacks on towns and villages in Prijedor between late May and end of July 1992, the non-Serb population was expelled from the municipality.⁶⁴⁹¹

1898. At a meeting on 20 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff adopted several conclusions, including that there was “no reason for the population of any nationality to move out of the territory of the [ARK]”.⁶⁴⁹² However, on 29 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff decided that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats would be allowed to leave Prijedor and other municipalities in the ARK, as part of an organised resettlement of non-Serbs in central BiH and Serbs in Krajina.⁶⁴⁹³ On 1 June 1992, Kuprešanin informed the Civil Affairs Office in Sector North that 15,000 Bosnian Muslim refugees from municipalities in the ARK, including Prijedor, were moving across the border towards Dvor, Croatia, and that another 15,000 would likely follow.⁶⁴⁹⁴

1899. On 7 June 1992, Prijedor municipal authorities decided, along with six other municipalities in the region, that “Muslims and Croats should move out to a level at which all the municipalities can maintain Serbian power on their territories”.⁶⁴⁹⁵

1900. Mass departures from Prijedor began to take place after the attack on Hambarine in late May 1992 and gained momentum through June and July 1992.⁶⁴⁹⁶ The Prijedor SJB estimated that 20,000 citizens, primarily non-Serbs, had moved out of Prijedor by mid-1992.⁶⁴⁹⁷

⁶⁴⁹⁷ D470 (CSB Banja Luka Report concerning collection centres, undated), e-court p. 31.

1901. The Prijedor Crisis Staff and civilian authorities facilitated the movement of the non-Serb population of Prijedor out of the municipality through the use of buses, trucks, and other vehicles, and by negotiating with the ICRC and the Prijedor Red Cross regarding the movement of convoys.⁶⁴⁹⁸

1902. The Chamber recalls that thousands of non-Serbs were transferred to, and detained at, detention facilities in Prijedor municipality in 1992.⁶⁴⁹⁹ As detention facilities were closed in Prijedor, detainees held there were transferred around the municipality as well as to camps outside of the municipality and ultimately often to third countries.⁶⁵⁰⁰

1903. Non-Serb residents of Prijedor who left the municipality during the conflict had to sign over their property to the Serb authorities in Prijedor, either to the ARK or to the RS;⁶⁵⁰¹ at first, real property certificates were issued in order to justify the confiscation, but later on certificates were no longer issued.⁶⁵⁰² In contrast, Bosnian Serb residents did not have their property confiscated.⁶⁵⁰³

1904. Property left behind by non-Serbs was appropriated by the Prijedor Crisis Staff as “municipal property”, and was often redistributed to Bosnian Serbs⁶⁵⁰⁴ and, in some cases, to

Bosnian Croats.⁶⁵⁰⁵ On 19 June 1992 the ARK Crisis Staff decided that all “abandoned” property would be proclaimed property of the state and placed at the disposal of the municipal assemblies.⁶⁵⁰⁶

1905. On 16 August 1992, the Prijedor SJB issued termination of residence notices to 13,180 residents, in exchange for the residents receiving permits to leave the municipality.⁶⁵⁰⁷ By the end of September 1992, the Prijedor SJB reported that due to the “increasing migration of the population, especially of the Muslim and Croat population”, it had received and processed 15,280 applications for departure.⁶⁵⁰⁸ Those who desired to leave the municipality were first required to unregister their official residences with the local Serb authorities as a condition to receive an exit permit.⁶⁵⁰⁹

1906. On 19 August 1992, representatives from Prijedor, including both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs, met with UNHCR and the UN Civil Affairs Office to discuss, inter alia, whether the UN would assist in evacuating thousands of Bosnian Muslim “applicants”.⁶⁵¹⁰ The Prijedor delegation wanted a convoy to go through Sector North, and the applicants included 8,000 Bosnian Muslims from Prijedor who, according to the delegation, wanted to leave the municipality “voluntarily”.⁶⁵¹¹ The UNHCR representative responded that UNHCR would not assist with the removal of people.⁶⁵¹² Kirudja did not believe that these people wanted to leave voluntarily and furthermore, thought that the detailed lists of applicants prepared by the delegation demonstrated the “meticulous” system used to remove people from the area.⁶⁵¹³

1907. According to Serb assessments, by October 1992, about 38,000 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats had left the municipality of Prijedor.⁶⁵¹⁴ Approximately 3,600 of these individuals left the area with the help of the ICRC and the Prijedor Red Cross.⁶⁵¹⁵

1908. By 1993, the vast majority of non-Serb towns and villages in Prijedor were uninhabited and destroyed.⁶⁵¹⁶ In September 1993, the Prijedor SJB estimated that 80% of Bosnian Muslim houses in Prijedor had been destroyed.⁶⁵¹⁷ The Chamber also recalls that by mid-1993, most of the Bosnian Muslim places of worship in Prijedor had been almost or completely destroyed.⁶⁵¹⁸

1909. In May 1993, the Bosnian Serb MUP estimated that 42,000 Bosnian Muslims and 2,000 Bosnian Croats had moved out of Prijedor, while 14,000 Bosnian Serbs had moved in.⁶⁵¹⁹ Some of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who had moved out of Prijedor had been “deported in cattle cars”.⁶⁵²⁰ Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats continued to move out of Prijedor into 1994.⁶⁵²¹

1910. Slobodan Kuruzović, the commander of Trnopolje, confirmed that the plan of the Serb authorities was to reduce the number of Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor to 10% or less, and then later to reduce this to 2% or less.⁶⁵²²

1911. The Accused contends that Bosnian Muslims, and to a lesser extent, Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Croats, left Prijedor voluntarily and without external pressure, and that non-Serbs were not forced to sign over their possessions in order to receive permits to leave the municipality.⁶⁵²³ Furthermore, Budimir testified that everyone who applied to him for permission to leave Prijedor received it, but that many people left on their own in their personal vehicles without approval from the municipality.⁶⁵²⁴

1912. However, the Chamber recalls the movement on a mass scale of non-Serbs within and out of Prijedor and the fact that non-Serbs in Prijedor were forced to sign over their property to Serb authorities. The Chamber has had regard to the immense pressure put on Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, given the surrounding circumstances in the municipality, including inter alia: (i) armed attacks against their towns, villages, and homes; (ii) destruction of religious and cultural property; (iii) forcible arrest and removal from their homes; (iv) detention in multiple detention facilities; as well as (v) mistreatment and killings.

1913. For these reasons, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to leave Prijedor. By 1995, the population of Prijedor municipality consisted of approximately 92% Bosnian Serbs, 5% Bosnian Muslims, and 1% Bosnian Croats.⁶⁵²⁵

(E) Sanski Most

(1) Charges

1914. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Sanski Most as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁶⁵²⁶ Under Count 1, the Prosecution further alleges that in certain municipalities, including Sanski Most, this persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical, and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.⁶⁵²⁷

1915. Acts alleged to have been committed in Sanski Most by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings during and after the take-over,⁶⁵²⁸ killings related to one detention facility,⁶⁵²⁹ as well as killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.⁶⁵³⁰ The Prosecution characterises these acts as killing, an underlying act of genocide, under Count 1; persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.⁶⁵³¹

1916. Other acts alleged to have been committed in Sanski Most by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as well as the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution under Count 3.⁶⁵³² In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that in scheduled detention facilities in Sanski Most thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel or inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, and beatings by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs; the Prosecution characterises this inhumane treatment as causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups, an underlying act of genocide.⁶⁵³³ In addition, under Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups were detained under conditions of life calculated to bring about physical destruction, namely through cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, inhumane living conditions, forced labour and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.⁶⁵³⁴

1917. Under Count 3, other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Sanski Most by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include: (i) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁶⁵³⁵ (ii) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;⁶⁵³⁶ (iii) forced labour at the frontlines and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;⁶⁵³⁷ (iv) appropriation or plunder of property during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention, and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;⁶⁵³⁸ (v) the wanton destruction of private property including homes and business premises and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁶⁵³⁹ and (vi) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁶⁵⁴⁰

1918. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁶⁵⁴¹ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Sanski Most in which they had been lawfully present.⁶⁵⁴² It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killings, destruction of houses, cultural monuments, and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear, while others were physically driven out.⁶⁵⁴³

(2) Lead-up

1919. Sanski Most is a municipality centrally located in the ARK and is surrounded by Bosanski Novi, Bosanska Krupa, Bosanski Petrovac, Prijedor, Banja Luka, and Ključ.⁶⁵⁴⁴ In 1991, the population of Sanski Most was approximately 28,000 Bosnian Muslims, 25,000 Bosnian Serbs, and 4,000 Bosnian Croats.⁶⁵⁴⁵ Villages with a predominantly Bosnian Muslim population included Vrhopolje, Hrustovo, Sehovći, Begići, and Kenjari.⁶⁵⁴⁶ Škrljevitica was a village with a predominantly Bosnian Croat population.⁶⁵⁴⁷

⁶⁵⁴⁰ Indictment, para. 60(k). The restrictive and discriminatory measures alleged include the denial of freedom of movement; the removal from positions of authority; the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes; unlawful arrest and/or the denial of the right to judicial process; and/or the denial of equal access to public services.

1920. The SDS, SDA, and HDZ parties were formed in Sanski Most in 1990.⁶⁵⁴⁸ The Accused and Krajišnik came to Lušci Palanka, a Bosnian Serb village in Sanski Most, on the occasion of the formation of the SDS in Sanski Most.⁶⁵⁴⁹ As a result of the multi-party elections in November 1990, the SDS won 23 seats, the SDA won 22 seats, the HDZ won 4 seats, and the reform party won 11 seats in the 60 seat Municipal Assembly.⁶⁵⁵⁰ Nedeljko Rašula, who was then the president of the Sanski Most SDS, became the president of the Municipal Assembly.⁶⁵⁵¹ Vlado Vrkeš was the secretary of the Sanski Most SDS and he later became its president.⁶⁵⁵² Mirzet Karabeg, a Bosnian Muslim, was appointed as the president of the Executive Board.⁶⁵⁵³

(a) Militarisation of Sanski Most

1921. The arming of the Bosnian Serb population in Sanski Most began in late 1990, with the distribution of JNA weapons to SDS members.⁶⁵⁵⁴

1922. As in other municipalities in BiH, the armed conflict in Croatia led to a mobilisation call in Sanski Most for volunteers to fight in Croatia with the JNA.⁶⁵⁵⁵ Those who did not respond to the call-up were ordered to return their uniforms and weapons and were to be deleted from the mobilisation lists.⁶⁵⁵⁶

1923. At the end of 1991, Mladić attended a meeting in Sanski Most and, afterwards, JNA weapons were distributed to Bosnian Serbs in the area.⁶⁵⁵⁷

1924. In November 1991, weapons owned by the staff of the TO were transferred to the goods reserve of the TO.⁶⁵⁵⁸ This order came from the 5th corps of the JNA to the local TO staff.⁶⁵⁵⁹ In 1992, the weapons were taken by Colonel Branko Basara and distributed to the Bosnian Serbs in Sanski Most.⁶⁵⁶⁰

1925. At the end of 1991, the Serbian Defence Forces (“SOS”) an armed group, was formed.⁶⁵⁶¹ They were commanded by Duško Šaović, a.k.a. Njunja.⁶⁵⁶² The SOS received orders from the SDS in Sanski Most.⁶⁵⁶³ On 28 February 1992, members of the SDS and the SOS broke into the premises of the Public Auditing Service and tried to physically remove the head of the institution.⁶⁵⁶⁴ Karabeg and the Executive Board condemned this action.⁶⁵⁶⁵ Soon after, the SOS started targeting buildings and businesses belonging to Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims and blew them up with explosives.⁶⁵⁶⁶

The Chamber does not find his evidence on this point to be reliable. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber found that the evidence of Mudrinić was evasive, contradicted on numerous occasions by other accepted evidence, including P3397 (Report of Sanski Most SOS Intervention Platoon, 16 September 1992), and was overall unconvincing.

1926. Soldiers of the JNA's 6th Partisan Brigade arrived in Sanski Most in early April 1992.⁶⁵⁶⁷ This brigade initially consisted of three battalions but later expanded.⁶⁵⁶⁸ It was commanded by Basara.⁶⁵⁶⁹ Rašula invited the SDA leaders to a meeting with Basara where Basara introduced himself and stated that he had brought the 6th Krajina Brigade to Sanski Most because they were on leave from fighting in Croatia and that they were "guarantors of peace".⁶⁵⁷⁰ The 6th Krajina Brigade was later subordinated to the 1st Krajina Corps.⁶⁵⁷¹ By the end of May 1992, the 6th Krajina Brigade was comprised of 3,907 soldiers, making up 11 battalions and artillery units.⁶⁵⁷²

1927. After the arrival of the 6th Krajina Brigade, check-points were set up throughout the municipality and soldiers from the 6th Krajina Brigade asked residents to stop and show their identity cards.⁶⁵⁷³

1928. On 22 April 1992, the Crisis Staff decided to integrate the SOS as a special unit of the TO.⁶⁵⁷⁴ The Crisis Staff also provided financial assistance to the SOS.⁶⁵⁷⁵

As seen in the documents cited above, the 6th Partisan Brigade was also referred to as the 6th Krajina Brigade or another name. For ease of reference, the Chamber will refer to it as the 6th Krajina Brigade throughout this Judgement. KDZ490 stated that later when it grew to 12 battalions, it changed its name to the 6th Sana Brigade but "[t]his brigade, whether called Partisan/Krajina/Sana brigade was subordinated and under the command of General Momir Talić, Commander of the 5th JNA Corps, later the 1st Krajina Corps during 1992". 1929. On 28 April 1992, the Crisis Staff decided that Basara would meet with the Crisis Staff and “start regulating the relationship” between the TO forces and the JNA.⁶⁵⁷⁶ On 7 May 1992, the Crisis Staff held a meeting where Mladen Lukić and Mirko Vrućinić were ordered to hold talks with Basara to involve him in transforming the JNA into the “Serbian TO”.⁶⁵⁷⁷ The TO was ordered to set up a MP platoon.⁶⁵⁷⁸ All “able-bodied persons” were required to report to the Red Cross, the list would be forwarded to the TO staff, and those who were not registered would be “detained and sent to the municipalities of their residence”.⁶⁵⁷⁹

(b) Establishment of Bosnian Serb institutions

1930. The regionalisation process with the formation of the ZOBK led to increasing disagreements between members of the SDS, SDA, and HDZ in Sanski Most.⁶⁵⁸⁰ Faik Biščević, the president of the SDA, stated that the SDA could not agree with this regionalisation process.⁶⁵⁸¹

1931. In February 1992, the SDS encouraged “all the Serbs of [BiH]” to abstain from voting in the upcoming referendum on the independence of BiH, claiming that it was against the interests of the “Serbian people”.⁶⁵⁸²

1932. In March 1992, the main issue that the SDS raised for discussions in the Municipal Assembly was whether Sanski Most should declare itself as “Serbian Sanski Most”, a part of the ARK.⁶⁵⁸³ Sanski Most was the only municipality (out of the 17 municipalities in the Bosnian Krajina) whose assembly had not yet decided on this matter.⁶⁵⁸⁴ On 25 March 1992, Rašula and Vrkeš signed a proclamation declaring that all Bosnian Serb territories in Sanski Most were part of the SerBiH, “as a unique Serb municipality of Sanski Most”.⁶⁵⁸⁵

1933. On 3 April 1992, Rašula issued a decision on behalf of the “Serbian People’s Assembly” that the “Serbian Municipality” of Sanski Most would become part of the ARK.⁶⁵⁸⁶ This decision was made by the Sanski Most SDS deputies only.⁶⁵⁸⁷ By 6 or 7 April 1992, the Sanski Most Municipal Assembly stopped meeting altogether.⁶⁵⁸⁸

1934. On 14 April 1992, the Crisis Staff of Sanski Most was established at a session of the Municipal Board of the Sanski Most SDS.⁶⁵⁸⁹ Rašula was appointed as president.⁶⁵⁹⁰ The Crisis Staff was the “centre of power” in Sanski Most and had, for instance, authority over the police.⁶⁵⁹¹

1935. On 16 April 1992, the “Serbian Municipality” of Sanski Most was formed.⁶⁵⁹²

1936. On 17 April 1992, Stojan Župljanin, head of the Banja Luka CSB, ordered that all police employees must sign a statement of loyalty to the Serb Municipality of Sanski Most.⁶⁵⁹³ The police then became effectively divided along ethnic lines: all of the Bosnian Serbs signed the statement, only one Bosnian Croat signed it, and none of the Bosnian Muslims did.⁶⁵⁹⁴ Those who did not sign the loyalty oath left the police.⁶⁵⁹⁵ The chief of the SJB ordered all police members to change the emblems on their caps to the Serbian tricolour to show loyalty as Serbs.⁶⁵⁹⁶ This was done in accordance with the order from Župljanin that police employees should wear new uniforms with sleeve insignias of the word “milicija” written in Cyrillic and blue berets with the tricolour badge.⁶⁵⁹⁷ Rašula enforced this order by stating that all police members who accepted this would retain their jobs and those who refused would be transferred.⁶⁵⁹⁸

1937. After refusing to sign the loyalty oath, the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat policemen who had left the police went to the fire brigade building on the other bank of the Sana River to establish their own police force.⁶⁵⁹⁹ Karabeg and other Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat leaders then went to the municipality building in Sanski Most both as a sign of protest and in order to organise their own administration.⁶⁶⁰⁰ In discussions on 18 April 1992, the SDA, SDS, and HDZ agreed that the municipality should be divided; however, the Executive Board of the SDS later rejected the agreement.⁶⁶⁰¹

1938. On 30 April 1992, the Crisis Staff appointed Vrućinić as acting chief of the SJB and Mladen Lukić as president of the Executive Board.⁶⁶⁰² Rašula maintained his power as the president of the Crisis Staff.⁶⁶⁰³

(3) Take-over of Sanski Most

1939. At approximately 9:30 p.m. on 19 April 1992, Rašula issued an ultimatum to the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats inside the municipality building to surrender by 10 p.m. or the Crisis Staff would not be responsible for the consequences—the 6th Krajina Brigade, which had been in Sanski Most since early April, was deployed close by.⁶⁶⁰⁴ In response, the Bosnian Muslims and

Bosnian Croats exited through the back of the municipality building and escaped to Sehovci.⁶⁶⁰⁵ The building was subsequently attacked by the 6th Krajina Brigade and members of the SOS and TO.⁶⁶⁰⁶

1940. The following day, on 20 April 1992, representatives of the SDS, SDA, and HDZ met with military representatives, including Talić, Commander of the 1st Krajina Corps, and Basara, Commander of the 6th Krajina Brigade.⁶⁶⁰⁷ The SDA presented six requests, which the SDS rejected.⁶⁶⁰⁸ Talić ended the meeting by threatening that the SDA should not call anyone for help.⁶⁶⁰⁹ On the same day, the Crisis Staff held a meeting in which it concluded that it only recognised the “Serbian Municipality” of Sanski Most, including the “Serbian TO” and the “Serbian SJB”.⁶⁶¹⁰ The Crisis Staff also declared that the “former Municipal Assembly of Sanski Most” was illegal and that only the laws of the SerBiH would be in effect in Sanski Most.⁶⁶¹¹

1941. On 28 April 1992, the Crisis Staff concluded that all citizens in Sanski Most must surrender their weapons.⁶⁶¹² Radio Sana then broadcast a message that all citizens in Sanski Most must turn in their weapons to the SJB or the TO by 3 May 1992 and that their security would be protected.⁶⁶¹³

Operations were carried out to disarm the citizens in predominantly Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat villages.⁶⁶¹⁴ There were never any efforts made to disarm the Bosnian Serb population.⁶⁶¹⁵

1942. On 11 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued a decision to the presidents of the municipalities in the ARK that the deadline for the voluntary surrender of “illegally acquired” weapons, as ordered in a decision issued by the ARK government on 4 May 1992,⁶⁶¹⁶ was extended to “24:00 on 14 May 1992”.⁶⁶¹⁷

1943. Beginning on 20 May 1992, the Crisis Staff ordered the disarmament of “paramilitary formations” in Sanski Most in accordance with the decision from the ARK government.⁶⁶¹⁸

1944. By 25 May 1992, soldiers from the 6th Krajina Brigade searched the houses of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most in order to disarm them.⁶⁶¹⁹ The Sanski Most SJB reported on the total number of weapons seized from Muslim villages.⁶⁶²⁰ In Mahala, an announcement was made on the radio that people should hand over weapons to check-points.⁶⁶²¹ In addition, an announcement was made that all Bosnian Muslims who were loyal to the Serbian state should fly white flags in front of their houses.⁶⁶²²

1945. On 25 May 1992, the 6th Krajina Brigade attacked the Bosnian Muslim neighbourhoods of Mahala, Muhići, and Otoka in Sanski Most town.⁶⁶²³ The attack started with shelling, followed by soldiers entering the area.⁶⁶²⁴ The soldiers set houses on fire.⁶⁶²⁵ According to a Sanski Most SJB report, the attack against Mahala resulted in the “capture of 2,000 civilians” but no significant amount of weapons was found.⁶⁶²⁶

1946. Attacks continued the following day.⁶⁶²⁷ Neđeljko Aničić ordered “upon completion of the task, [to] take the prisoners to the sports hall” and “hand over the war booty” to the “Sanski Most Serbian TO Staff”.⁶⁶²⁸ Other villages in Sanski Most were subsequently attacked, including Hrustovo, Vrhpolje, Lukavica, and Trnovo.⁶⁶²⁹ According to a military report, there was a “comprehensive operation” undertaken between 25 May and 4 June 1992 to “mop up the terrain and disarm Muslim extremists” in Sanski Most.⁶⁶³⁰

1947. Meetings of the Crisis Staff were to be held daily to discuss a “long-term solution” for the “problem of refugees from the Mahala area, as well as the Muslims and Croats who are not loyal to the Constitution and laws of the [SerBiH]”.⁶⁶³¹ The Crisis Staff concluded that all “those who have not taken up arms and want to change their municipality” should be allowed to move out.⁶⁶³²

1949. On 27 May 1992, Bišćević was arrested, beaten, and taken to Radio Sana, which was by then controlled by the SDS.⁶⁶³⁵ He was forced to read a statement on the radio.⁶⁶³⁶ The statement announced that the VRS had taken over the municipality and all Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats must unconditionally surrender their weapons in order to prevent the destruction of the town.⁶⁶³⁷ After making this statement, Bišćević was taken to Magarice village.⁶⁶³⁸ An additional announcement was broadcast on the radio stating that residents who wished to leave Sanski Most would be allowed to and those who wished to stay were required to submit a request for a permanent residence permit.⁶⁶³⁹

1951. On 8 June 1992, the TO was dismantled, the 6th Krajina Brigade set up a forward command post in Sanski Most, and Aničić was appointed Commander.⁶⁶⁴³ All the former TO units in Sanski Most were integrated into the 6th Krajina Brigade.⁶⁶⁴⁴ Throughout June, July, and August 1992, armed attacks on villages throughout the municipality continued.⁶⁶⁴⁵

(a) Scheduled Incident A.12.1

1952. The Prosecution alleges that about 28 men were killed between Begići and Vrhpolje Bridge on or about 31 May 1992.

1953. Begići is a hamlet in the village of Kljevci with approximately 80 inhabitants.⁶⁶⁴⁶ Begići is divided into two halves: Gornji Begići and Donji Begići, which were several 100 metres apart.⁶⁶⁴⁷ In 1992, the majority of the population in Begići was Bosnian Muslim.⁶⁶⁴⁸

1954. On 25 May 1992, soldiers from the 6th Krajina Brigade entered Gornji Begići and Donji Begići.⁶⁶⁴⁹ They damaged property and beat some of the residents.⁶⁶⁵⁰ The soldiers then returned to their check-point near Stojanovići.⁶⁶⁵¹

1955. On 31 May 1992, soldiers from the 6th Krajina Brigade entered Donji Begići and ordered the residents to come out of their houses and to go towards Gornji Begići.⁶⁶⁵² Once they arrived and judges, were replaced by Bosnian Serbs. Mikan Davidović, T. 44521-44522 (5 December 2013). Vinko Nikolić testified that all citizens were allowed to maintain their employment if they respected the RS constitution. Vinko Nikolić, T. 45446-45451 (16 January 2014). However, his testimony was contradicted by evidence showing that Bosnian Croat and Bosnian Muslim employees were removed from their jobs. The Chamber notes that this was one of many contradictions in his evidence which magnified his lack of credibility on the stand.

there, they saw that the men from Gornji Begići had gathered outside.⁶⁶⁵³ The women and children were separated from the men and taken away.⁶⁶⁵⁴ The soldiers ordered the men, approximately 20 in the group, to go towards the Vrhpolje Bridge where they were told there would be buses waiting to transport them to Sanski Most.⁶⁶⁵⁵ The men walked, two-by-two, in a column through the fields towards the Vrhpolje Bridge.⁶⁶⁵⁶ According to Rajif Begić, there were 20 Bosnian Muslim men in this column, including himself, and they were escorted by eight armed soldiers.⁶⁶⁵⁷

1956. Jadranko Palija, a soldier from the 6th Krajina Brigade, was in charge of leading the column of men from Begići to the Vrhpolje Bridge.⁶⁶⁵⁸ During the walk to the bridge, two of the Bosnian Muslim men were taken out of the column by Palija, shot, and killed near a slaughterhouse.⁶⁶⁵⁹ As the group continued towards the bridge, Palija shot and killed another man near the crossroads of the main road connecting Sanski Most and Ključ.⁶⁶⁶⁰ Before the group reached the bridge, approximately 50 metres away, a military van pulled up and Palija got in to speak to the driver.⁶⁶⁶¹ Palija ordered another man, Ismet Kurbegović, from the column to come to the passenger side of the van, which he did.⁶⁶⁶² Palija shot and killed Kurbegović.⁶⁶⁶³

1957. When the remaining men reached the bridge, armed soldiers were waiting for them.⁶⁶⁶⁴ The men were ordered to line up along the bridge and told that they would be killed because VRS soldiers had been killed.⁶⁶⁶⁵ They were ordered to take off their clothes and shoes.⁶⁶⁶⁶ One of the men was ordered to jump into the river.⁶⁶⁶⁷ He did and as he was swimming in the river, the soldiers leaned over the bridge, shot, and killed him.⁶⁶⁶⁸ The soldiers repeated this with every man.⁶⁶⁶⁹ Begić was the sixth man who was ordered to jump off the bridge.⁶⁶⁷⁰ He did so and instead of swimming to the surface, he dived under the water and swam towards the left bank where he hid under trees and shrubbery.⁶⁶⁷¹ The soldiers continued in this manner with each man on the bridge.⁶⁶⁷² Begić was the only survivor.⁶⁶⁷³

1958. Begić identified 19 Bosnian Muslim men who were killed in relation to this incident.⁶⁶⁷⁴ The Chamber also received evidence that in July 1992, the bodies of 13 males were found buried under the Vrhpolje Bridge on the right bank of the Sana River, the bodies of 11 other males were taken out of the Sana River, and Irfan Begić was found dead by the road near the bridge.⁶⁶⁷⁵ Of the

1959. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that at least 28 Bosnian Muslim men were killed in this event.⁶⁶⁸²

1960. The Chamber therefore finds that approximately 20 men were killed by Serb Forces between Begići and Vrhpolje Bridge on or about 31 May 1992.

1961. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people in the village of Hrustovo were killed on or about 31 May 1992.

1962. Hrustovo is a village in Sanski Most.⁶⁶⁸³ It has six hamlets: Merdanovići, Keranovići, Jelečevići, Kukavice, Handanovići, and Zukići.⁶⁶⁸⁴ In 1992, the population of these hamlets was primarily Bosnian Muslim.⁶⁶⁸⁵

1963. On the morning of 31 May 1992, in Jelečeviči, approximately 20 to 25 Bosnian Muslim civilians, mainly women and children, were ordered by soldiers wearing JNA uniforms to go to Kukavice.⁶⁶⁸⁶ The reason given was that the soldiers were going to search houses for weapons and it would be easier if there were fewer people in the village.⁶⁶⁸⁷ In Kukavice, the group grew to about 30 individuals who were gathered in the garage of a house.⁶⁶⁸⁸ Shortly afterwards, soldiers came to the garage and opened fire at the garage door.⁶⁶⁸⁹ The soldiers yelled for everyone to come out of the garage.⁶⁶⁹⁰ Husein Merdanović went outside and told the soldiers to stop shooting and that there were only women and children inside the garage.⁶⁶⁹¹ The soldiers shot and killed him.⁶⁶⁹² The soldiers opened fire on the garage a second time.⁶⁶⁹³ As the civilians panicked, they came out of the garage and started running away, the soldiers fired at them.⁶⁶⁹⁴ Only eight people survived the attack.⁶⁶⁹⁵

The survivors were Čama Jelečević, Edina Jelečević, Razija Jelečević, Sead Jelečević, Ernes Keranović, Senija Keranović, Dino Keranović, and KDZ097. P715 (Witness statement of KDZ097 dated 21 April 2001), e-court p. 8 (under seal). On cross-examination, Boro Tadić testified that with respect to this scheduled incident, he could not confirm what had happened, nor could he confirm that a prosecution for those responsible had been conducted. Boro Tadić, T. 44414–44415 (3 December 2013). Mihaljo Orlović testified that he did not believe this killing incident happened and that it may have been a rumour or propaganda. Mihaljo Orlović, T. 46646 (6 February 2014). The Chamber does not find his evidence on this point to be reliable as it amounted to mere speculation. The Chamber also found that the evidence of Orlović was marked with numerous contradictions and that he was not completely forthright with the Chamber.

1964. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that at a minimum, 15 people were killed in this incident.⁶⁶⁹⁶ The Chamber received evidence that bodies were found in a mass grave in Hrustovo in relation to this incident.⁶⁶⁹⁷

1965. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that a number of people were killed by Serb Forces in Hrustovo village on or about 31 May 1992.

(c) Scheduled Incident A.12.3

1966. The Prosecution alleges that about 18 men from Kenjari were killed on or about 27 June 1992 in the hamlet of Blaževići.

1967. Kenjari is a hamlet located north of Begići.⁶⁶⁹⁸ In 1992, the population of Kenjari was primarily Bosnian Muslim.⁶⁶⁹⁹ Around 27 or 28 June 1992, Bosnian Serb soldiers, led by Milorad Mijatović, entered Kenjari and started searching houses for weapons.⁶⁷⁰⁰ The Bosnian Muslims in the hamlet were ordered to leave their houses and wait outside at the crossroads.⁶⁷⁰¹ After the soldiers were finished searching the houses, they ordered that all the men be taken elsewhere for interrogation, while the women and children could return to their homes.⁶⁷⁰² KDZ052 testified that about 18 or 20 men were with him when they were taken to a house to be interrogated.⁶⁷⁰³ They were kept at the house in Kenjari until the following day when Vrkeš, the president of the SDS in Sanski Most, came to see the men and told them they would be exchanged for Bosnian Serbs in eastern BiH.⁶⁷⁰⁴ The men were then taken to a house in Blaževići.⁶⁷⁰⁵ While they were in the house, there was an explosion inside.⁶⁷⁰⁶ KDZ052 managed to jump out of the window and hide.⁶⁷⁰⁷ He and others were shot at while they attempted to escape out of the house.⁶⁷⁰⁸ The bodies of the men who were killed were taken by the soldiers back to the house and the house was set on fire.⁶⁷⁰⁹ KDZ052 survived and made his way to Tomina.⁶⁷¹⁰

1968. The Chamber received evidence that the bodies of 18 men were identified in a mass grave and linked to this scheduled incident.⁶⁷¹¹

1969. Based on the evidence presented above, the Chamber finds that approximately 18 men from Kenjari in the hamlet of Blaževići were killed by Serb Forces on or about 27 June 1992.

(d) Scheduled Incident A.12.4

1970. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people from the hamlet of Budim in Lukavice village were killed on or about 1 August 1992.

1971. Lukavice is a village in the northwestern region of Sanski Most municipality.⁶⁷¹² The population of Lukavice was primarily Bosnian Muslim.⁶⁷¹³ The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that on 1 August 1992, Bosnian Serb Forces attacked Budim and killed 14 members of the Alibegović family, all of whom were unarmed civilians.⁶⁷¹⁴ The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that the victims were shot from a close distance with automatic weapons.⁶⁷¹⁵

⁶⁷¹⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 1315. In his Final Brief, the Accused acknowledges that “[o]n 1 August 1992, Serb soldiers attacked Budin[sic] and killed 14 unarmed members of the Alibegović family”. However, the Accused also submits that “KDZ097 testified that large numbers of people roamed his area in uniform”. The Accused therefore argues that there was “no plan to perpetrate killings by official Serb authorities.” Defence Final Trial Brief, p. 437 (section on Persecution), para. 1623. The Accused also submits that the crimes committed in Sanski Most cannot be attributed to him because they were acts committed without his knowledge, against his policies, and by people outside of his control. He also submits that there was no plan to permanently remove non-Serbs from Sanski Most. Defence Final Brief, paras. 2894–2900. This submission will be dealt with in Section IV.A.3.iii: Authority over military and police forces acting in BiH.

1972. The Chamber also received evidence that 14 bodies were exhumed in a mass grave in relation to this incident.⁶⁷¹⁶ These bodies were determined to be Bosnian Muslim male civilians.⁶⁷¹⁷

1973. The Chamber finds that approximately 14 people from the hamlet of Budim in Lukavice village were killed by Serb Forces on or about 1 August 1992.

(e) Scheduled Incident A.12.5

1974. The Prosecution alleges that approximately seven men were killed near the village of Škrļjevita on or about 2 November 1992.

1975. Škrļjevita is a village in eastern Sanski Most.⁶⁷¹⁸ In 1992, the majority of the population in Škrļjevita was Bosnian Croat.⁶⁷¹⁹ On 2 November 1992, Grgo Stojić and his cousin were walking from Sanski Most town to Škrļjevita when they encountered two soldiers from the 6th Krajina Brigade on the road near the Glamošnica forest.⁶⁷²⁰ The soldiers asked them for identification.⁶⁷²¹ After looking at their identity cards, the soldiers asked Stojić and his cousin to follow them.⁶⁷²² They were led through the forest and to the Glamošnica River, where four of Stojić's neighbours were already lined up.⁶⁷²³ A soldier was pointing a machine gun at the four men.⁶⁷²⁴ Stojić and his cousin were told to line up next to his neighbours.⁶⁷²⁵ They were searched, their personal

1977. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that seven Bosnian Croats were killed in relation to this incident.⁶⁷³³ The Chamber received evidence from Stojić, an eye-witness to the incident that five men were killed and he learned after he escaped that an additional four men were killed soon after. The Chamber also received evidence that nine bodies were recovered in a mass grave and in relation to this incident, the identities of which are corroborated by Stojić’s evidence.⁶⁷³⁴

(5) Detention Facilities in Sanski Most

1979. Detention facilities in Sanski Most were established by the Crisis Staff.⁶⁷³⁵ After military operations against Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat villages in Sanski Most, soldiers collected the able-bodied military-aged men from the village and transferred them by bus to Sanski Most town.⁶⁷³⁶ In town, they were handed over to the civilian authorities.⁶⁷³⁷ An inspector from the SJB and an inspector from the CSB interrogated the men believed to be “military prisoners”.⁶⁷³⁸ KW540 estimated that 1,600 “military prisoners” were handed over to the civilian authorities in Sanski Most in 1992.⁶⁷³⁹ The majority of detainees in Sanski Most were transferred to Manjača camp.⁶⁷⁴⁰ They would be labelled into three categories of “prisoners”: (i) politicians, (ii) nationalist extremists, and (iii) people unwelcome in Sanski Most municipality.⁶⁷⁴¹ The majority of detainees in Sanski Most were civilians, as will be addressed below.

⁶⁷⁴¹ P2639 (Conclusions of Sanski Most Crisis Staff, 4 June 1992); see Adjudicated Fact 2558. Mile Dobrijević testified that he had no knowledge of the three categories of detainees and when presented with P2639, he insisted that he made no decisions on categorisation. Mile Dobrijević, T. 44636–44639 (6 December 2013). The Chamber does not accept his evidence on this point given that he was an SJB employee at Betonirka Factory Garage and the Hasan Kikić school and his claim to be unaware of these categories defy credibility.

The chief of the police station was Vručinić.⁶⁷⁴⁴ Miladin Paprić was in charge of the SJB prison until 4 June 1992, when he was dismissed and replaced by Drago Vujanić.⁶⁷⁴⁵

1982. Detainees started arriving at the SJB building and prison on 25 May 1992, after the attack on Sanski Most town.⁶⁷⁴⁶ The majority of the detainees at the SJB building were prominent civilians who held important positions in the community.⁶⁷⁴⁷ There was one underage detainee.⁶⁷⁴⁸

(ii) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1983. The detainees were held in small cells in the SJB prison and guarded by the police.⁶⁷⁴⁹ Due to the size of the cell, it was not possible for detainees to lie down to sleep and they had to sit very closely to each other.⁶⁷⁵⁰ The cells had a concrete roof, a metal door, and a metal plate with holes over the window.⁶⁷⁵¹ During the summer months, the strong heat caused the room to be very hot and damp, with a terrible stench, making it very difficult to breathe.⁶⁷⁵² There was no fresh air until someone removed the metal plate covering the window after approximately 40 days into the detention.⁶⁷⁵³ Furthermore, the guards did not permit the cells to be aired out.⁶⁷⁵⁴ There were blankets and an old mat for bedding.⁶⁷⁵⁵

1984. The detainees were not provided with sufficient food and water.⁶⁷⁵⁶ After the first 15 days, the detainees' meals were reduced from three to two meals per day; these meals were insufficient and resulted in the detainees suffering substantial weight loss.⁶⁷⁵⁷ Meals consisted of a piece of bread, a cup of something to drink and, if available, left-over food from the soldiers.⁶⁷⁵⁸ For water, the detainees were occasionally allowed to fill up bottles, but only when there was enough water for the toilets in the detention facility.⁶⁷⁵⁹ There were no toilets in the cells of the prison.⁶⁷⁶⁰ The detainees had access to two toilets but they became blocked.⁶⁷⁶¹ The detainees were allowed five minutes in the morning and five minutes in the evening to use the toilets.⁶⁷⁶² They subsequently dug a hole behind the building, which they were only permitted to use during lunchtime.⁶⁷⁶³ Save for a couple of exceptions, it was not possible to shower given the lack of water.⁶⁷⁶⁴

1985. The guards took the detainees out of the cells only for about 20 minutes per day, including for meals and for work they had to carry out.⁶⁷⁶⁵ On leaving the cell for work, the detainees were frequently beaten and mistreated.⁶⁷⁶⁶ Despite these conditions, Rašula told a detainee at the SJB: “[y]ou’re safest where you are. If we release you, you will be killed either by your people or by mine”.⁶⁷⁶⁷

1986. The guards, regular police officers, and VRS soldiers beat the detainees.⁶⁷⁶⁸ Sometimes the guards would hand over the keys to the cells to the VRS soldiers, and according to Bišćević, “[a]nyone could come in and beat us if they so pleased”.⁶⁷⁶⁹ Some of the detainees were taken from their cells to the SJB building and interrogated.⁶⁷⁷⁰ During interrogations, regular police officers and VRS soldiers beat the detainees, using rifle-butts, electric cables, poles, and wooden planks.⁶⁷⁷¹ Detainees were also beaten in their cells, and some were forced to beat each other.⁶⁷⁷² The detainees did not receive any medical treatment for injuries sustained in SJB custody.⁶⁷⁷³ As a result of the severe beatings, Karabeg suffered severe injuries to his body and head and lost all of his teeth.⁶⁷⁷⁴ Two men were beaten at the SJB prison and subsequently killed.⁶⁷⁷⁵

1987. In early June 1992, detainees in the SJB prison were transferred to Manjača camp pursuant to an order from the Crisis Staff.⁶⁷⁷⁶

1988. The frequency of the beatings decreased after a visit from the ICRC in July 1992.⁶⁷⁷⁷ Furthermore, visits by family members were allowed after the ICRC visit.⁶⁷⁷⁸

Further, the Chamber notes that there is no Schedule B killing incident charged with respect to this detention facility.

1989. By 27 July 1992, the Crisis Staff estimated that some 1,245 people had been questioned in the SJB.⁶⁷⁷⁹

1990. On 28 August 1992, the detainees were called out of their cells and told to take their belongings.⁶⁷⁸⁰ Some of the detainees were placed on a bus for transfer to Manjača camp.⁶⁷⁸¹ Other detainees were transferred to different detention facilities in Sanski Most, including the Betonirka Factory Garage, the Hasan Kikić School, and a military facility at Magarice.⁶⁷⁸²

(iii) Conclusion

1991. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces detained non-Serb civilians, including prominent political leaders and an underage boy, at the SJB prison from 25 May until August 1992. The Chamber finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions, including lack of adequate food, accommodation, medical care, and sanitary facilities. The Chamber also finds that detainees were subjected to interrogations and beatings.

(b) Scheduled Detention Facility C.22.2

1992. The Indictment refers to the use of the Betonirka Factory Garage as a detention facility at least between 27 May and 7 June 1992.

(i) Establishment and control

1993. The Betonirka Factory was located approximately 100 to 150 metres behind the SJB building in Sanski Most town.⁶⁷⁸³ The factory had a main building and three garages attached.⁶⁷⁸⁴ Each garage was five to six metres long and four metres wide.⁶⁷⁸⁵

1994. In May 1992, the Betonirka Factory Garage was set up as a detention centre by the Crisis Staff.⁶⁷⁸⁶ On 25 May 1992, Paprić, who was also in charge of the SJB prison, was appointed as the head of the detention facility but was later replaced by Vujanić, a member of the police.⁶⁷⁸⁷ Vujanić was the warden of both the SJB prison and Betonirka Factory Garage.⁶⁷⁸⁸ The guards at the Betonirka Factory Garage were members of the Bosnian Serb police and reserve soldiers.⁶⁷⁸⁹ Rade Martić was the chief of the guards.⁶⁷⁹⁰

1995. Approximately 120 detainees, all males, were held at the Betonirka Factory Garage.⁶⁷⁹¹ Members of the core leadership of the SDA were detained at Betonirka.⁶⁷⁹² Detainees were held at Betonirka Factory Garage up to one month.⁶⁷⁹³ In June and July 1992, the detainees were transferred to Manjača camp.⁶⁷⁹⁴

(ii) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1996. The detainees were kept inside the cramped and over-heated garage with little water.⁶⁷⁹⁵ The detainees were given two meals per day, which usually were the left-over food from the staff.⁶⁷⁹⁶ Sometimes family members were allowed to visit the detainees and bring them food.⁶⁷⁹⁷ The sanitary conditions were inadequate as the detainees were only allowed out of their cells for five minutes in the morning and five minutes in the evening to use the toilet.⁶⁷⁹⁸ There were no toilets inside the garage.⁶⁷⁹⁹ There was only one small window in each garage that was open for ventilation, which was inadequate.⁶⁸⁰⁰ One of the garages was so overcrowded that the detainees were forced to sleep standing up.⁶⁸⁰¹

1997. The detainees were interrogated and beaten regularly.⁶⁸⁰² Ahmet Zulić testified that out of the 21 nights he spent at Betonirka, he was not subjected to beatings on only three of those nights.⁶⁸⁰³ The beatings caused serious injuries to the detainees.⁶⁸⁰⁴ There were no medical facilities available onsite.⁶⁸⁰⁵

(iii) Conclusion

1998. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces detained Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat male civilians, including some political leaders, from Sanski Most in the Betonirka Factory Garage from May until June 1992. The Chamber finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions, including lack of adequate food and sanitary facilities. The Chamber also finds that the detainees were subjected to beatings.

(iv) Scheduled Incident B.17.1

1999. The Prosecution alleges that approximately 17 men were taken from the Betonirka Factory Garage to Kriva Cesta near the Partisan cemetery and killed on or about 22 June 1992.

2000. On 22 June 1992, Zulić was taken from the Betonirka Factory Garage, where he had been detained, and driven to Kriva Cesta.⁶⁸⁰⁶ He was taken down to the stream, given a hoe, and ordered to dig his own grave.⁶⁸⁰⁷ He saw 20 to 25 other men there doing the same thing.⁶⁸⁰⁸ The men were being watched by Bosnian Serb soldiers wearing JNA uniforms.⁶⁸⁰⁹ Rašula was also present.⁶⁸¹⁰ During the operation, the soldiers pointed their guns at the men.⁶⁸¹¹ When the men had finished digging the holes, they were killed; their throats were either slit or they were shot to death.⁶⁸¹² Zulić was spared by Rašula, who stated that he should be kept alive in order to tell them where weapons were being hidden in Pobrjeđe.⁶⁸¹³ Zulić was taken back to the Betonirka Factory Garage.⁶⁸¹⁴ In total, three men survived.⁶⁸¹⁵

2001. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that 17 men were killed in relation to this incident.⁶⁸¹⁶ The Chamber also received evidence that bodies of civilians were recovered in a mass grave in relation to this incident.⁶⁸¹⁷

2002. The Chamber finds that approximately 17 men were taken by Serb Forces from the Betonirka Factory Garage to Kriva Cesta near the Partisan cemetery and killed on or about 22 June 1992.

(c) Scheduled Detention Facility C.22.3

2003. The Indictment refers to the use of the “Hasan Kikić School sports halls” as a detention facility at least between May and July 1992. The Prosecution submits that Hasan Kikić School and the sports hall are two separate detention facilities.⁶⁸¹⁸ The Prosecution submits that while civilians were detained in both facilities, it proceeds on the basis that Scheduled Detention Facility C.22.3 relates only to the sports hall.⁶⁸¹⁹ The Chamber will also proceed on the basis that the detention facility referred to in Schedule C.22.3 is the sports hall.

(i) Establishment and control

2004. The sports hall was located in the northeastern part of Sanski Most town.⁶⁸²⁰ On 26 May 1992, the Crisis Staff converted the sports hall into a detention centre.⁶⁸²¹ The sports hall was staffed by guards in police and camouflage uniforms, under the command of Martić.⁶⁸²² Milorad Krunić was appointed as the head of the detention centre.⁶⁸²³

2005. On 27 May 1992, an announcement on the radio ordered all Bosnian Muslims in Sanski Most town to gather at the training grounds of a driving school.⁶⁸²⁴ Sakib Muhić went there.⁶⁸²⁵ He estimated that 1,800 people had gathered there, including women and children.⁶⁸²⁶ There were armed soldiers outside the driving school, and they shouted, “we will slaughter you all” at the people gathered there.⁶⁸²⁷ After an hour, the soldiers ordered everyone to go to the Krkojević football stadium.⁶⁸²⁸ Around dusk, approximately 80 soldiers arrived at the stadium and began ordering people onto buses, which took them to the sports hall—the men left around midnight after the women and children.⁶⁸²⁹

2006. The next day at the sports hall women and children were separated from the men and sent to neighbouring villages.⁶⁸³⁰ Approximately 900-1,000 men remained in the sports hall for approximately five days.⁶⁸³¹ The detainees included 200 men brought in from Ključ.⁶⁸³² People who were detained at the sports hall were also from Mahala, Muhići, and Otoka.⁶⁸³³

2007. The sports hall was guarded by men in both military and police uniforms.⁶⁸³⁴ After approximately five days, Muhić and four other men were taken to the SJB and interrogated.⁶⁸³⁵ Afterwards, they were transported back to the sports hall.⁶⁸³⁶

(ii) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2008. The conditions in the sports hall were extremely overcrowded and lacked basic sanitation.⁶⁸³⁷ The temperature was very hot due to the summer heat wave, which made the conditions worse.⁶⁸³⁸ Some detainees were not provided with food for a few days but family members were allowed to visit and bring some food.⁶⁸³⁹ There was no bedding available for sleeping and no medical attention for the sick.⁶⁸⁴⁰ Some men were taken to the SJB, interrogated, and transported back to the sports hall.⁶⁸⁴¹

2009. The detainees were beaten.⁶⁸⁴² In particular, on 6 June 1992, detainees were beaten severely before being forced to board trucks.⁶⁸⁴³ Two trucks transported approximately 150 detainees to Manjača camp.⁶⁸⁴⁴

2010. On 8 June 1992, pursuant to an order from the Crisis Staff, detainees at the sports hall were screened and those who were “brought in accidentally from other areas, persons from mixed marriages, persons in poor health, and persons who have fought on the front with the JNA” were to be released.⁶⁸⁴⁵ Again on 18 June 1992, certain detainees were screened and released.⁶⁸⁴⁶ By 1 August 1992, the remaining detainees had been transferred elsewhere.⁶⁸⁴⁷

(iii) Conclusion

2011. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces detained non-Serb civilians in the sports hall in Sanski Most from May until August 1992. The Chamber finds that some of the detainees were subjected to beatings. The Chamber further finds that the conditions of detention were poor, including a lack of adequate food and sanitary facilities.

2012. The Indictment refers to the use of Krings Hall as a detention facility at least between May and July 1992.

(i) Establishment and control

2013. Krings Hall is located on the eastern edge of Sanski Most town.⁶⁸⁴⁸ It was a large, empty hall situated next to an office building, that was formerly used to manufacture equipment for the Famos company.⁶⁸⁴⁹ In May 1992, Krings Hall was set up as a detention centre by the Crisis Staff.⁶⁸⁵⁰ Initially, when detainees were brought to Krings Hall, they were guarded by soldiers and after one week, the soldiers were replaced by the police.⁶⁸⁵¹

2014. In early July 1992, VRS soldiers drove into Tomina and ordered all of the “refugees” who were hiding in the town to come out of the houses.⁶⁸⁵² People from Kamicak and Vrhpolje had fled to Tomina.⁶⁸⁵³ People came out of their houses and saw buses lined up on the main street.⁶⁸⁵⁴ Approximately 500 to 600 individuals were boarded onto buses and taken to Krings Hall.⁶⁸⁵⁵ The women and children spend one night there and were transferred out the following day to eastern or central BiH.⁶⁸⁵⁶ The men stayed behind in Krings Hall.⁶⁸⁵⁷

(ii) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2015. In the beginning, when the VRS soldiers were guarding the detainees, there were no beatings or mistreatment.⁶⁸⁵⁸ However, when the police took control of Krings Hall, things changed.⁶⁸⁵⁹ The police regularly interrogated and beat the detainees, sometimes with batons and rifles.⁶⁸⁶⁰ While KDZ052 was detained there, he witnessed one man who died as a result of a beating.⁶⁸⁶¹

2016. The detention facility had running water and a sink but no working toilets.⁶⁸⁶² The hygiene conditions were extremely poor.⁶⁸⁶³ There was inadequate bedding for the detainees.⁶⁸⁶⁴ In the beginning, relatives of the detainees were allowed to bring food to Krings Hall but later this was not allowed.⁶⁸⁶⁵

2017. In August 1992, the detainees from Krings Hall were transferred to Manjača camp.⁶⁸⁶⁶

(iii) Conclusion

2018. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces detained Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilians, mainly males, from Sanski Most at Krings Hall from May to August 1992. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions, including lack of sanitary facilities. The Chamber also finds that the detainees were subjected to beatings and that one person died as a result of the beatings.

(e) Scheduled Detention Facility C.22.5

2019. The Indictment refers to the use of the “Magarica military facility” as a detention facility at least between May and June 1992. In its Final Brief, the Prosecution alleges that the “evidence led shows Magarice military facility operated as a detention facility” in May 1992.⁶⁸⁶⁷

2020. Magarice is a village located on the outskirts of Sanski Most town.⁶⁸⁶⁸ The Magarice military facility consisted of a house and a barn in the village of Magarice that was used by Basara and the 6th Krajina Brigade for operations and the storage of weapons.⁶⁸⁶⁹

2021. On 27 May 1992, Bišćević was arrested at his home and taken to Magarice village.⁶⁸⁷⁰ He saw Basara there, along with other VRS soldiers.⁶⁸⁷¹ He was taken to an orchard where one of the soldiers cursed at him about his “baliya God”.⁶⁸⁷² Bišćević was then taken to a meadow where he was handcuffed, searched, and his pockets were emptied.⁶⁸⁷³ The soldiers took his money and driving license.⁶⁸⁷⁴ They beat him severely with their truncheons and sticks.⁶⁸⁷⁵ He was then taken to the Sanski Most radio station.⁶⁸⁷⁶ After being forced to make a statement on the radio, Bišćević was brought back to Magarice.⁶⁸⁷⁷

2022. Bišćević was detained in the “curing room, hut” in the Magarice military facility for 30 hours.⁶⁸⁷⁸ This was a wooden room with pebble stones on the floor and was two metres by two metres.⁶⁸⁷⁹ There was no toilet in the room.⁶⁸⁸⁰ He was alone on the first day but two other Bosnian Muslim men were brought in the following day.⁶⁸⁸¹ They were beaten and their personal effects were taken from them.⁶⁸⁸² During the time Bišćević was detained, he was not given any food or water.⁶⁸⁸³

2023. Bišćević and the two other men were then taken to the soldiers’ canteen, given food, and transferred to the SJB prison.⁶⁸⁸⁴

2024. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bišćević and two other Bosnian Muslim men were detained in a room at the Magarice military facility on or about 27 May 1992. The Chamber also finds that during their detention, these men were beaten and mistreated by Serb Forces.

(6) Scheduled Incident D.19

2025. The Indictment refers to the destruction of 17 mosques and one Catholic church in Sanski Most between at least between May and December 1992.⁶⁸⁸⁵

2026. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that the mosques in Sanski Most were subjected to major damage by Bosnian Serb forces.⁶⁸⁸⁶ The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that in mid-1992, the SDS ordered the destruction of the Donji Kamengrad mosque and that Mladen Majkić, a military engineer, was ordered by a member of the SDS to set explosives in the mosque.⁶⁸⁸⁷

2027. Bišćević testified that there were 26 mosques and four Catholic churches in Sanski Most municipality, and that all of them were destroyed.⁶⁸⁸⁸ KDZ490 testified that by the end of 1992, all of the mosques in Sanski Most had been destroyed.⁶⁸⁸⁹ According to KDZ490, the mosques were destroyed pursuant to orders from the Crisis Staff and were destroyed so that Bosnian Muslims would not return.⁶⁸⁹⁰

2028. By the end of May 1992, the Trnova mosque and the Hrustovo-Kukavice mosque had been destroyed.⁶⁸⁹¹ In 1992, the mosque in Vrhpolje and the mosque in Stari Majdan were destroyed.⁶⁸⁹²

⁶⁸⁸⁵ The religious sites identified in Scheduled Incident D.19 are the (1) Sanski Most town mosque, (2) Probiježje mosque, (3) Hrustovo-Kukavice mosque, (4) Hrustovo-Kerani mosque, (5) Vrhpolje mosque, (6) Šehovci mosque, (7) Trnova mosque, (8) Stari Majdan (Palanka) mosque, (9) Stari Majdan (Utriška) mosque, (10) Novo Naselje (Dževar) mosque, (11) Husimovci mosque, (12) Donji Kamengrad mosque, (13) Skucani Vakuf mosque, (14) Lukavice mosque, (15) Tomina mosque, (16) Čaplje mosque, and the Town Catholic church. The Indictment refers to the Hrustovo-Kukavice mosque as being two different mosques (the old and new mosque) situated next to each other. Indictment, Schedule D.19, fns. 17–19.

The Pobrježje mosque was destroyed in mid-1992.⁶⁸⁹³ The town mosque in Sanski Most was destroyed by October 1992.⁶⁸⁹⁴ The Šehovci mosque was blown up with explosives.⁶⁸⁹⁵ The mosques in Donji Kamengrad, Čaplje, Hrustovo, Lukavice, Šehovci, Stari Majdan, and Tomina were destroyed.⁶⁸⁹⁶ The Catholic church in Sanski Most was also damaged.⁶⁸⁹⁷

2029. According to Riedlmayer's reports, a total of 17 mosques and the town Catholic church in Sanski Most were damaged or destroyed during the war.⁶⁸⁹⁸ However, the Chamber notes that included in these 17 mosques is the Vrhpolje mosque, which Riedlmayer describes as only "lightly damaged" and as one of three mosques in Sanski Most that survived the war without structural damage.⁶⁸⁹⁹ The Chamber therefore finds that 16 mosques and the town Catholic church were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed.

2030. The Chamber has considered the evidence it has received which identified Serb Forces as responsible for the destruction of mosques in Sanski Most.⁶⁹⁰⁰ It also had regard to the fact that almost all mosques in the municipality sustained heavy damage or were completely destroyed after Serb Forces took over the municipality. Having weighed these factors, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Serb Forces were responsible for the attacks on and destruction of mosques and the Catholic church in Sanski Most.

2031. Therefore, the Chamber finds that at least 16 mosques and the town Catholic church were heavily damaged, almost destroyed or completely destroyed by Serb Forces between May and December 1992.

(7) Movement of the population from Sanski Most and appropriation of property

2032. Following the attack on Sanski Most on 25 May 1992, the non-Serb population was expelled from the municipality.⁶⁹⁰¹

2033. On 2 July 1992, the Crisis Staff adopted a decision on the criteria for voluntary departure from Sanski Most.⁶⁹⁰² It ordered that those citizens who wish to permanently leave Sanski Most must hand over their real property to the Sanski Most municipal authorities.⁶⁹⁰³ People were allowed to take their movable property on the condition that they made a list of all of the property to be verified by an “authorised municipal administration organ”.⁶⁹⁰⁴ People who wished to stay were required to sign a loyalty oath and those who refused were threatened and often left under duress.⁶⁹⁰⁵

2034. On 23 June 1992, the Crisis Staff formed a committee to deal with the “migration” of the population.⁶⁹⁰⁶ Vrkeš was appointed as the person responsible for matters relating to the removal and exchange of the population and prisoners and was to report to Vojo Kuprešanin of the ARK Crisis Staff.⁶⁹⁰⁷

2035. By 27 July 1992, the Crisis Staff estimated that approximately 18,000 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats remained in Sanski Most and that approximately 6,000 to 7,000 had moved away.⁶⁹⁰⁸ It stated that Bosnian Muslims were requesting to move and noted that it should be made possible for them to do so by organising their voluntary resettlement.⁶⁹⁰⁹

2036. On 1 August 1992, the SJB reported that 12,000 individuals, mainly Bosnian Muslims but also some Bosnian Croats, had applied to the SJB to unregister their permanent residences in order to leave the municipality.⁶⁹¹⁰

2037. On 14 August 1992, the Sanski Most Municipal Assembly granted permission to transfer the ownership of movable and immovable property based on exchange contracts and gift contracts.⁶⁹¹¹ It also noted that the first group of 3,000 people would be “resettled” from the municipality and transported by bus.⁶⁹¹² It was decided that while Bosnian Muslims were voluntarily going into exile, their property would be taken over for “safe keeping and use”.⁶⁹¹³

2038. On 19 August 1992, Vrkeš and representatives of the Sanski Most Bosnian Muslims and Croats met with UNHCR and Civil Affairs to discuss, inter alia, whether the UN would assist in evacuating up to 11,000 Bosnian Muslim “applicants” for evacuation.⁶⁹¹⁴ Vrkeš explained that all those who wished to leave, should be able to do so.⁶⁹¹⁵ In addition, Vrkeš stated that those who Boro Tadić, T. 44424–44425 (4 December 2013). The Chamber does not accept Tadić's evidence. The Chamber found that Tadić's testimony was ambiguous, misleading, and often resorted to tu quoque. The Chamber finds that Tadić's reliability was compromised to such an extent that the Chamber could not accept his evidence.

⁶⁹¹⁰ D470 (CSB Banja Luka Report concerning collection centres, undated), e-court p. 15. See also Adjudicated Fact 2557. were leaving would sign a declaration stating they were leaving voluntarily, they had no wish to return, and they were leaving their properties to the authorities.⁶⁹¹⁶ The UNHCR representative responded that UNHCR would not assist with the removal of people.⁶⁹¹⁷

2040. By February 1995, the population of Sanski Most municipality was approximately 3,350 Bosnian Muslims, 1,050 Bosnian Croats, and 33,600 Bosnian Serbs.⁶⁹¹⁸

ii. Regional level

2041. As stated earlier, the Serb-majority community of municipalities called the ZOBK was transformed into the ARK on 16 September 1991.⁶⁹¹⁹ This community of municipalities included the following municipalities relevant to the Indictment: Banja Luka, Bosanski Novi, Ključ, Prijedor, and Sanski Most (“ARK Municipalities”).⁶⁹²⁰ The ARK was vested with both executive and legislative powers within its area of jurisdiction and acted as an intermediate level of authority between the SerBiH and the municipalities.⁶⁹²¹

2042. According to the ARK Statute, the ARK was a voluntary association.⁶⁹²² The statute provided that other municipalities could join the ARK.⁶⁹²³ In this context, in the municipalities where the Bosnian Serbs were a majority, the respective decision to join the ARK was in fact taken only by the Bosnian Serb municipal delegates of these municipalities, with the SDA and the HDZ delegates either opposed to this idea or unaware that such a decision was being taken.⁶⁹²⁴ In the municipalities where the Bosnian Serbs were in a minority, the decision by the respective municipalities to join the ARK was taken either only by the Bosnian Serb delegates in the municipality or by the assemblies of the newly established Bosnian Serb municipalities.⁶⁹²⁵ Despite provisions of the ARK Statute which established the ARK as a multi-ethnic institution,⁶⁹²⁶ the ARK was in practice a Serb body.⁶⁹²⁷ Out of the 189 delegates to the ARK Assembly, only a negligible number were Bosnian Croats or Bosnian Muslims.⁶⁹²⁸

2044. On 4 March 1992, during its 15th Session, the ARK Assembly adopted a decision to form the CSB of the ARK; its seat was in Banja Luka and Stojan Župljanin was appointed as Chief of the CSB.⁶⁹³¹ Furthermore, on 27 April 1992, the ARK Assembly established a “special purpose police detachment” within the Banja Luka CSB.⁶⁹³²

⁶⁹²⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 521. For example, in Ključ, when the decision to join the ARK was confirmed by the SDS delegates of the Ključ Municipal Assembly on 26 December 1991, the SDA representatives at the Municipal Assembly walked out and did not vote on the issue. In Prijedor, the Prijedor Serb Assembly unanimously voted to join the ARK on 17 January 1992. In Sanski Most, Rašula issued a decision on behalf of the “Serbian People’s Assembly” that Sanski Most would become part of the ARK on 3 April 1992; the decision was only made by the Sanski Most SDS deputies. (A) Establishment of ARK Crisis Staff

2045. The ARK Crisis Staff was formally established on 5 May 1992 by a decision of the ARK Executive Council;⁶⁹³³ however, it had been functioning since January 1992.⁶⁹³⁴ Brđanin was appointed as President of the newly created ARK Crisis Staff, which was later renamed the ARK War Presidency on 9 July 1992.⁶⁹³⁵ The Accused supported Brđanin to lead the ARK.⁶⁹³⁶ Brđanin retained this position until the abolition of the ARK on 15 September 1992.⁶⁹³⁷ The ARK War Presidency continued to meet at least until 8 September 1992, one week prior to the adoption of the SerBiH constitutional amendment that abolished the ARK as a territorial unit of SerBiH.⁶⁹³⁸

2046. Other members of the ARK Crisis Staff included Milorad Sajić, Secretary of the Regional Secretariat for National Defence, who was appointed Vice President of the ARK Crisis Staff; Vojo Kuprešanin, Deputy of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and President of the ARK Assembly; Milovan Milanović, Deputy of the Bosnian Serb Assembly; Nikola Erceg, President of the ARK Executive Council; Predrag Radić, President of the Banja Luka Municipal Assembly and Banja Luka Crisis Staff; Radislav Vukić; Talić; Župljanin; and Nenad Stevandić, head of the SOS.⁶⁹³⁹

Furthermore, according to Brđanin, the ARK Crisis Staff was not supported by the central republican authorities in Pale, primarily due to a rift between the ARK leadership and the RS leadership over what city should be the capital of the RS, Banja Luka or Pale; in addition, according to Brđanin, Kuprešanin, Erceg, and Sajić, until a corridor was opened on 28 June 1992, there was limited communication with the central authorities in Pale and Brđanin did not receive instructions from Pale or the Accused while the ARK Crisis Staff existed. The Chamber considers that while there may have been limited communication at times between the authorities in Pale and the ARK authorities, the Chamber finds that instructions were indeed sent from Pale to the ARK and that, as such, the ARK Crisis Staff did not operate entirely independently as a “state within a state” as alleged by the Accused. The Chamber will discuss in further detail the relationship between the ARK Crisis Staff and the Bosnian Serb leadership and the impact of these lines of communication on the Accused’s responsibility. However, Brđanin, Kuprešanin, and Grahovac testified that there was no subordination and hierarchy in the relationship between the ARK Crisis Staff and municipal crisis staffs and they were independent of each other, in particular because the functioning of the ARK was dependent on funds provided by the municipalities and ultimately, the municipalities stopped earmarking funds for the ARK. Further, according to Brđanin, Erceg, Stakić, Mišković, and Sajić, although the ARK Crisis Staff tried to impose its decisions on the municipal crisis staffs, the ultimate implementation rested with the ARK Municipalities themselves and some chose to implement them while others did not. See P6437 (Minutes from inter-municipality talks, 14 June 1992), p. 3. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be convincing in light of other accepted evidence, in particular documentary evidence, demonstrating that the orders and decisions issued by the ARK Crisis Staff were implemented in the majority, if not all, of the ARK Municipalities. For example, the Chamber refers to the implementation of the orders related to the (i) disarmament of the non-Serb population; (ii) policy to “resettle” the non-Serb population; and (iii) dismissals of non-Serbs from management and other positions in the ARK. In addition, the Chamber considers that the evidence provided by these witnesses was marked with contradictions and evasiveness on this issue; they had a clear incentive to distance themselves from events in the ARK Municipalities and the Chamber did not find them forthright when they claimed the ARK Municipalities were acting independently and could not be controlled. The Chamber will therefore not rely on their evidence in this regard.

(B) ARK Crisis Staff decisions

(1) Disarmament of non-Serbs

2051. As discussed above, an imminent threat of war was declared by the SerBiH Presidency on 15 April 1992, and the following day, the mobilisation of the TO was ordered.⁶⁹⁵² Minister of Defence Bogdan Subotić forwarded this decision for implementation to all Serb assemblies, including in the ARK,⁶⁹⁵³ and on 29 April 1992, the decision was then forwarded by Erceg to the President of Banja Luka Municipal Assembly also for implementation.⁶⁹⁵⁴ On 4 May 1992, the decision was implemented by the ARK Regional Secretariat for National Defence in an order issued by Milorad Sajić, the Secretary of the Regional Secretariat for National Defence, and forwarded to the ARK Municipalities, providing for the following measures: (i) general mobilisation of the territory of the ARK; (ii) imposition of a curfew; and (iii) disarmament of “[a]ll paramilitary formations and individuals who illegally possess weapons” by 11 May 1992.⁶⁹⁵⁵ Also on 4 May 1992, Župljanin ordered the SJB chiefs to implement the ARK decision of the same day.⁶⁹⁵⁶ In a decision issued on 11 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff reiterated the same measures as in the 4 May decision and extended the disarmament deadline to 14 May 1992 at 12 a.m. in response to the request of citizens to “return the weapons in a peaceful way and without the intervention of the police”.⁶⁹⁵⁷

2052. On 18 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff further decided that all individuals in the ARK who were “not part of the armed forces of the [SerBiH] or its police must hand in their weapons”.⁶⁹⁵⁸ In accordance with the 18 May 1992 decision, Župljanin ordered all SJBs to report back to the CSB on the disarmament operations.⁶⁹⁵⁹ The municipal SJBs, as ordered, reported back to the CSB on the operations implemented in their respective areas of control.⁶⁹⁶⁰

2053. The measures ordered in the 4 May 1992 decision were implemented in the ARK Municipalities through public announcements and ultimatums to hand in illegally owned weapons.⁶⁹⁶¹ Although the calls for disarmament in the ARK were directed to all “paramilitary units and individuals who illegally possess weapons”, they were selectively enforced against non-Serbs.⁶⁹⁶²

(2) Resettlement of non-Serbs and appropriation of property

2054. In the same 11 May 1992 decision discussed above, the ARK Crisis Staff instructed that the property of all able-bodied men between 18 and 55 years old who failed to return to their municipalities in response to the mobilisation calls would be confiscated.⁶⁹⁶³ At a meeting on 20 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff adopted several conclusions, including that there was “no reason for the population of any nationality to move out of the territory of the [ARK]”.⁶⁹⁶⁴

However, Brđanin, Erceg, and Sajić testified that the ARK Crisis Staff demanded the disarmament of all paramilitary formations, regardless of their nationality, though they were aimed first at Serb paramilitary units and individuals who possessed weapons illegally; its aim was to ensure the safety of all citizens of the ARK. Furthermore, they testified that a hierarchical relationship between the municipal authorities, the CSB, and the SJBs did not exist and it was purely upon the initiative of the municipalities themselves whether to implement these decisions or not. D4034 (Witness statement of Radoslav Brđanin dated 8 November 2013), paras. 24, 42–47; D4086 (Witness statement of Nikola Erceg dated 24 November 2013), para. 108; D4114 (Witness statement of Milorad Sajić dated 24 November 2013), paras. 40, 65–66; Milorad Sajić, T. 44135–44138 (27 November 2013). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be convincing in light of the other accepted evidence before the Chamber demonstrating that the ARK Crisis Staff decision ordering the disarmament of non-Serbs exclusively was implemented throughout the ARK Municipalities.

However, on 29 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued a decision stating that “all Muslims and Croats, who so wish, should be able to move out of the area of the [ARK]” and based on a concern that “several thousand Muslims from Prijedor, Sanski Most and Bosanski Novi wish to move to Central Bosnia, of their own free will”, the ARK Crisis Staff provided for an organised “resettlement” of the population.⁶⁹⁶⁵

Later on 10 June, the ARK Crisis Staff decided that only women, children, and the elderly could be moved from the ARK if they so wish, in co-operation with humanitarian organisations. D4046 (Decision of ARK Crisis Staff, 10 June 1992). See D4034 (Witness statement of Radoslav Brđanin dated 8 November 2013), para. 23(f) (stating that he does not remember the 10 June decision but that the police would have wanted to check able-bodied male non-Serbs before they left the ARK). Furthermore, the ARK Crisis Staff provided that there should be “reciprocity” with regard to the relocation of people throughout the SerBiH, including that Serbs should be given the freedom to choose their place of residence. See also para. 1899. According to Brđanin, the ARK Crisis Staff held a meeting the following day, at which it rejected the request of the municipal authorities as it was “contrary to our policy”. D4034 (Witness statement of Radoslav Brđanin dated 8 November 2013), para. 23(e). However, the Chamber considers that based on the events and specific actions taken by the ARK Crisis Staff following the request from the municipal authorities, it does not find reliable Brđanin’s evidence that the ARK Crisis Staff rejected their request outright. However, Brđanin, Kuprešanin, Sajić, Erceg, and Bojinović testified that the ARK authorities never engaged in forcible displacement and that the positions of the ARK Crisis Staff in this regard developed depending on the “situation on the ground”. The ARK Agency was established to oversee the exchange of property and departure of people of all ethnicities, including Serbs, and furthermore, at the request of non-Serbs who were interested in having such services provided to them and was thus aimed at providing a humanitarian way to exchange property and secure transport. Finally, Brđanin stated that “had we wanted to expel non-Serbs, we would not have set any requirements and conditions for their leaving the ARK”. Kuprešanin further stated he was not aware of the establishment of any agency to implement a policy of resettlement, nor that any such policy was co-ordinated at the regional level by the ARK. D4034 (Witness statement of Radoslav Brđanin dated 8 November 2013), paras. 23, 49, 55, 57; Radoslav Brđanin, T. 43666–43667 (18 November 2013) (testifying further that there was no “strategic plan ever about forcible relocation”, instead they “followed the situation which dictated for people to be relocated rather than to be killed or to perish”); D4011 (Witness statement of Vojislav Kuprešanin dated 11 November 2013), paras. 56–57, 60–61; D4114 (Witness statement of Milorad Sajić dated 24 November 2013), paras. 54, 67–69; D4086 (Witness statement of Nikola Erceg dated 24 November 2013), para. 95; Miloš Bojinović, D4176 (Testimony from Prosecutor v. Brđanin), T. 22776–22777, 22783–22784. However, as further expanded upon above in relation to each of the ARK Municipalities, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be convincing in light of the accepted evidence before the Chamber demonstrating that the resettlement policy promulgated by the ARK Crisis Staff was in fact implemented in the ARK Municipalities, resulting in the movement of the majority of the non-Serb population out of the ARK. The Chamber also does not find the evidence of Brđanin, Kuprešanin, Sajić, Erceg, and Bojinović to be reliable on this issue based on their close involvement in this policy and its implementation, creating an incentive to distance themselves from these events. Therefore, the Chamber will not rely on their evidence in this regard.

2058. The municipal Crisis Staffs of the ARK Municipalities implemented this ARK policy.⁶⁹⁷⁵ For example, on 30 May 1992, the day following the ARK Crisis Staff decision setting out the policy, the Sanski Most Crisis Staff concluded that it would liaise with the ARK leadership regarding the “implementation of the idea on resettlement of the population”.⁶⁹⁷⁶ On 4 June 1992, the Ključ Crisis Staff issued a statement regarding the resettlement of “all citizens who wish to permanently move out of the [m]unicipality of Ključ in an organized manner”.⁶⁹⁷⁷ In August 1992, the Bosanski Novi SJB reported that following the ARK decision on “voluntary resettlement”, it de-registered 5,680 individuals, 5,629 of whom were Bosnian Muslim who had applied to leave the municipality “voluntarily”.⁶⁹⁷⁸ Immediately following the issuance of the decision, the 1st Krajina Corps also reported on the implementation of the policy, reporting that the ARK had issued a decision to facilitate the departures of the non-Serb population and that those departing “will not be allowed to return” and referring to “public statements made in the media by SDS [ARK] leaders who advocate moving and expelling all Muslims and Croats from these areas”.⁶⁹⁷⁹

2059. On 1 June 1992, Kirudja was informed that Kuprešanin had called the Civil Affairs Office in Sector North to report the concerns of mayors from Bosanski Novi, Prijedor, Ključ, Dubica, Sanski Most, and Banja Luka in relation to the situation of the Bosnian Muslim population in those areas.⁶⁹⁸⁰ Kuprešanin informed the office that 15,000 Bosnian Muslim refugees from these municipalities were moving across the border towards Dvor, Croatia, and that another 15,000 would likely follow, appealing to UNPROFOR to “find a way to protect the civilian Muslim population”.⁶⁹⁸¹

2060. The detention facilities in the ARK were also discussed at ARK Crisis Staff meetings; for example, representatives from Prijedor, Stakić, Drljača, and Kuruzović, attended one meeting and reported a shortage of food, clothing, and accommodation in the detention facilities in Prijedor.⁶⁹⁸²

However, Brđanin and Erceg testified that detention facilities in the ARK were not discussed at meetings of the ARK Crisis Staff and that ARK authorities had nothing to do with the facilities. (3) Dismissals of non-Serbs

2061. On 8 May 1992, 11 May 1992, and 13 May 1992, the ARK Crisis Staff issued decisions stating that all management positions in SerBiH must be filled by “people who are absolutely loyal”.⁶⁹⁸³ Later, in a decision adopted on 22 June 1992 and directed to all municipal Crisis Staff presidents, the ARK Crisis Staff stated that all posts important for the functioning of the economy may only be held by “personnel of Serbian ethnicity”.⁶⁹⁸⁴ The 22 June 1992 decision was forwarded by Župljanin to all SJBs on 1 July 1992 for its immediate implementation within the ARK.⁶⁹⁸⁵ In accordance with this decision, numerous municipalities dismissed non-Serb personnel; by the end of 1992, the majority of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the ARK had been dismissed from their jobs and were replaced by Bosnian Serbs.⁶⁹⁸⁶ ARK Crisis Staff member Radić confirmed that the policy of dismissals of non-Serbs originated in Pale at the republic level.⁶⁹⁸⁷ of Nikola Erceg dated 24 November 2013), para. 89. The Chamber considers that the evidence given by Sajić regarding the discussion of the detention facilities in the ARK Municipalities at the ARK Crisis Staff meeting is reliable given the detail he provides regarding at least this one particular meeting. The Chamber shall not rely on the evidence given by Brđanin and Erceg in this regard given their potential interest in distancing themselves from any knowledge of conditions at ARK detention facilities or invoking their lack of recollection of such a discussion at the meetings.

However, Brđanin testified that a leak of sensitive information about the movements of the 1st Krajina Corps resulted in these measures being “temporarily” adopted by the ARK Crisis Staff and its decision involved the removal of executive positions of people that could misuse such positions and threaten the security of Krajina. Furthermore, the non-Serbs were not fired, but only removed from positions considered to be important due to security, and were given different jobs. D4034 (Witness statement of Radoslav Brđanin dated 8 November 2013), paras. 15–17, 39–41. According to Sajić and Erceg, although the 22 June 1992 decision provided for the dismissals of non-Serbs, it was implemented to “some extent”, but was not put into practice in all cases. Furthermore, Sajić did not believe that Brđanin personally called for the dismissal of non-Serbs despite what the decision states. D4114 (Witness statement of Milorad Sajić dated 24 November 2013), para. 41; Milorad Sajić, T. 44139–44142 (27 November 2013); D4086 (Witness statement of Nikola Erceg dated 24 November 2013), paras. 98–101, 107. See Defence Final Brief, paras. 1172–1175 (wherein the Accused submits that he does not dispute that there may have been individual incidents of people being dismissed from their employment, but “this had nothing to do with alleged persecutions”). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be convincing based on the considerable evidence before the Chamber demonstrating that this policy of dismissals of non-Serb personnel as ordered by the ARK Crisis Staff was, in turn, implemented throughout the ARK Municipalities.

(B) Lead-up

2066. Before the conflict, the population of Hadžići municipality was about 24,000 inhabitants with the demographic breakdown of approximately 63.6% Bosnian Muslim, 26.3% Serb, and 3.1% Croat.⁷⁰⁰² The town of Hadžići, however, had a Serb majority.⁷⁰⁰³ Tarčin,⁷⁰⁰⁴ Binježevo, and Pazarić were large settlements within the Hadžići municipality, each of which was composed of a number of villages.⁷⁰⁰⁵

mortar positions were established around the village of Bare.⁷⁰¹⁵ Several tanks were also positioned in Binježevo.⁷⁰¹⁶ During the last week of August and the first week of September, Bosnian Serb reserve soldiers in JNA uniforms who appeared to be mapping the area arrived at a barracks located in the village of Blažuj.⁷⁰¹⁷ Around the same time, Mehmed Musić saw men unloading boxes of ammunition,⁷⁰¹⁸ and Zijad Okić noticed weapons were taken up to trenches built on Tinovo Hill.⁷⁰¹⁹

2070. From its founding until the commencement of the war, the SDS provided Serbs with weapons taken from the JNA military warehouses in Žunovnica.⁷⁰²⁰ Serbs also obtained weapons from the TRZ, which was controlled by the Serbs.⁷⁰²¹ In particular, Marinko Đukanović, who had been a warehouse clerk at the TO (and thus had access to the weapons),⁷⁰²² as well as Ratko Radić, the President of the Hadžići SDS,⁷⁰²³ distributed weapons to the Serb population in Hadžići.⁷⁰²⁴

2071. At the end of September and beginning of October, Croats in western BiH began to organise militarily, which contributed to incipient instability in Hadžići.⁷⁰²⁵ During the course of 1991,

The Chamber notes that Vidomir Banduka originally professed that he was unaware that Serbs obtained arms from the JNA, but when presented with his testimony in the Krajišnik case, wherein he had stated that the Serbs obtained weapons through the mobilisation of the reserve police, as well as the JNA reserves and the TO, Banduka clarified that reservists had obtained weapons through these channels but maintained that Serb civilians had not. However, the Chamber observes that according to a JNA report dated 19 March 1992, by that date, 1,500 “volunteers” who were not part of the JNA or the TO had been armed by the JNA or the SDS in Hadžići. P979 (Report from JNA 2nd Military District to JNA General Staff, 20 March 1992), pp. 1, 6, 11. The Chamber therefore finds that in addition to arms provided during the mobilisation process, arms from JNA sources were also provided to Serbs outside the JNA, TO, and police mobilisation processes.

troops from the JNA engineering unit stationed at the TRZ began to return from Knin and Slavonia and spoke of having seen JNA units fighting in Croatia wearing Chetnik insignia. Thereafter, Muslims began to avoid JNA conscription and training.⁷⁰²⁶

2073. By the beginning of February 1992, residents of the Hadžići municipality had begun to organise nightly patrols and guards in the local areas where each ethnic group was prominent.⁷⁰³² Around the same time, Bosnian Serbs began to leave the regular and reserve police units,⁷⁰³³ and the JNA began distributing firearms to the Serb population at night.⁷⁰³⁴

(2) Division of municipal organs

2075. In the meantime, the work of municipal organs had ground to a halt; shortly after the first mobilisation of the reserve police in October 1991, the SDS delegates had stopped co-operating in the joint Hadžići Municipal Assembly and the Municipal Assembly Executive Board.⁷⁰³⁸ Eventually, only the Municipal Defence Council remained functional.⁷⁰³⁹ Beginning in January 1992, at meetings of the Municipal Defence Council, Ratko Radić called for the establishment of a Serb assembly in Hadžići, an idea which had already been discussed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly in December 1991,⁷⁰⁴⁰ and which was later reiterated by other SDS delegates at successive meetings of the Hadžići Municipal Defence Council.⁷⁰⁴¹

2078. The SDS also decided to create a Serb SJB and appointed Tihomir Glavaš as Chief and Branislav Mijatović as Commander.⁷⁰⁵³ The Serb police wore the same uniforms as the previous

2080. Immediately after the proclamation session, the Hadžići Crisis Staff was established as the highest organ of authority for the Serb municipality, taking over the functions of the Serb Municipal Assembly.⁷⁰⁶⁵ The members of the Hadžići Crisis Staff included the President of the Serb Municipality, the president of the Executive Board of the Serb Municipality, one member of the military, representatives of the management of the TRZ, and the Chief of the Serb police.⁷⁰⁶⁶ The first task of the Crisis Staff was to “organise the defence of the Serb territory of Hadžići and to take care of, feed and organise the citizens as much as war circumstances allow”.⁷⁰⁶⁷ The Crisis Staff authorised security actions, which were then carried out by the military and/or the police.⁷⁰⁶⁸

(3) Continued militarisation of Hadžići

2081. From about 10 April, the co-operation between the SDS and the JNA commanders at the barracks located throughout Hadžići became more overt,⁷⁰⁶⁹ and reserve units from Serbia and Montenegro began to arrive in the municipality to be deployed at the TRZ.⁷⁰⁷⁰ Military preparations also began in the Serb-majority villages of Bare and Miševići.⁷⁰⁷¹

2083. Between the morning of 16 April and the afternoon of 17 April, approximately 2,200 people reported to the SRBiH TO in Hadžići, which had been mobilised during the preceding days after fighting broke out in Zvornik and Bijeljina.⁷⁰⁷⁶ Most of those who reported were non-Serbs,⁷⁰⁷⁷ thereby rendering the SRBiH TO a de facto Bosnian Muslim organ. Because the Bosnian Muslim TO lacked arms, however, the leadership sent the men home, telling them that they would be invited to report again later.⁷⁰⁷⁸

(C) Take-over

(1) Hadžići town

2085. Meanwhile, the SDS had issued an order demanding that the Muslim members of the police, TO Headquarters, and other municipal authorities leave Hadžići by 6 p.m. on 8 May.⁷⁰⁸⁶ The SDS provided residents with a map and indicated that they should leave in the direction of Pazarić.⁷⁰⁸⁷ That night, between roughly 2,000 and 3,000 Muslim and Croat men, women, and children withdrew from Hadžići town, leaving only 200 or 300 behind.⁷⁰⁸⁸ By 9 May, the Serbs had taken control of parts of the municipality of Hadžići and had encircled the TRZ.⁷⁰⁸⁹

2086. Over the following few days, Serb reservists began setting up check-points around Hadžići town, thereby restricting residents’ movements.⁷⁰⁹⁰ Serb women and children were put on buses headed toward Montenegro,⁷⁰⁹¹ and the Serb Forces began to arrest, expel, or kill people who remained in the municipality.⁷⁰⁹² The Serb police went around to homes, instructing people to stay inside.⁷⁰⁹³ Police officers were placed in front of buildings in Hadžići, thus preventing any movement by the residents.⁷⁰⁹⁴ Many houses were searched.⁷⁰⁹⁵

2087. Between 10 and 12 May 1992, Serb Forces and the Bosnian Muslim TO engaged in a “heavy exchange of fire” in Hadžići.⁷⁰⁹⁶ By 12 May, Serb Forces in the Krupačka Rijeka area, near

(2) Attacks against surrounding villages

2088. Meanwhile, villages surrounding Hadžići had also come under attack. On 7 or 8 May 1992, using weapons stationed in front of the Culture and Sport Centre, Serb Forces opened fire on the village of Kovačevići.⁷⁰⁹⁹ On 8 May 1992, some Kovačevići residents were killed by a Serbian paramilitary group.⁷¹⁰⁰ During the following two days, a peace commission was set up to calm the situation.⁷¹⁰¹ The Serb Forces took control of Kovačevići on 11 May 1992.⁷¹⁰²

Musići from Tinovo Hill.⁷¹⁰⁵ Realising that they would not be able to “offer resistance to the Chetniks”, the residents of Musići organised buses and had already begun taking the women and children out of Musići between 7 and 9 May.⁷¹⁰⁶

2090. Around 15 May, Serb Forces shelled houses and other buildings in Musići from positions located in Ušivak.⁷¹⁰⁷ After about two days, two Bosnian Serbs came to Musići and called on the residents to surrender.⁷¹⁰⁸ They refused, so the shelling resumed that evening and continued for three days.⁷¹⁰⁹

2091. On 20 May, pursuant to a decision of the Crisis Staff,⁷¹¹⁰ approximately 50 to 60 members of the Serb Forces entered Musići from all sides, supported by two Praga tanks.⁷¹¹¹ The Serb Forces announced through a loudspeaker that all weapons should be handed over.⁷¹¹² The soldiers then went from house to house to conduct searches and seize weapons.⁷¹¹³

2092. Mehmed Musić was arrested in his home by two members of the Serb MP and was taken along with 14 other men from Musići to Alija Musić's house,⁷¹¹⁴ where he saw three dead bodies.⁷¹¹⁵ Dragan Pušara sent a man to fetch the Musići residents who were still hiding, threatening to kill all of the 14 men if those in hiding refused to surrender.⁷¹¹⁶

2093. Eventually, the Serb soldiers led the 14 men away to the primary school in Hadžići,⁷¹¹⁷ which was guarded by men wearing olive-grey uniforms.⁷¹¹⁸ Once the men had arrived inside a classroom on the first floor, the guards threatened to kill them and began to curse at them, stating, "there would be no balija state soon".⁷¹¹⁹ The guards spat on the detainees and told them that they were finished.⁷¹²⁰ After approximately 30 minutes, the detainees were taken out of the school and marched to the garage of the Municipal Assembly building, which was located approximately 150 metres away.⁷¹²¹

(D) Detention facilities in Hadžići

2094. In the meantime, the Hadžići Crisis Staff had decided to arrest and detain all Bosnian Muslim men of military age from areas in the municipality such as Binježevo, Žunovnica, and Kučice.⁷¹²² According to Tihomir Glavaš, this decision was taken because the Serbs had

The Chamber notes the testimony of Nevenko Samouković, who stated that, as far as he knew, "no one in the territory of Hadžići municipality made a decision to designate certain facilities as camps for detaining Muslims". Nevenko Samouković, T. 34614, 34624 (1 March 2013). Samouković also stated that this was consistent with a report from the Serb police in Hadžići dated 9 August 1992, which asserted that "in the area of Hadžići municipality, we do not have collection camps used by the army to bring in the Muslim population without documents on the reasons for detention". D1074 (Correspondence from Hadžići Police

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.11.1

2095. The Indictment refers to the use of the garage of the Hadžići Municipal Assembly Building as a detention facility from 20 May 1992 until at least June 1992.

2096. After the Hadžići SJB building was shelled around 10 May,⁷¹²⁶ the Serb police moved into the Hadžići Municipal Assembly Building.⁷¹²⁷ From 12 May until 1 June, Bosnian Muslims were arrested and held in the garage under the building “for interrogation”.⁷¹²⁸ Station to Sarajevo CSB, 9 August 1992), p. 5. However, the Chamber observes that Samouković qualified his own testimony by referring to the extent of his own knowledge, which was itself questionable, and that he acknowledged that both the Culture and Sport Centre and the garage of the Municipal Building had been used to house “the remaining Muslim population” and as a holding centre, respectively. D3062 (Witness statement of Nevenko Samouković dated 26 February 1993), paras. 17, 22. The Chamber further notes that the correspondence from the Hadžići Serb police pertained to the situation in August 1992, several months after the arrests and detentions in Hadžići began. The Chamber therefore shall not place weight on either Samouković’s testimony or D1074 in relation to whether there was a decision to arrest and detain Bosnian Muslim men.

⁷¹²³ P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), para. 26.

⁷¹²⁴ P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), para. 45; Tihomir Glavaš, T. 11784 (14 February 2011). See also D3063 (Witness statement of Mladen Tolj dated 25 February 2013), para. 14 (suggesting that the records of detention reflected bona fide reasons for taking each person into custody). According to Tolj, the prevailing security conditions in Hadžići precluded compliance with the requirement that civilians be brought before an investigative judge within three days of their detention. Mladen Tolj, T. 34647 (1 March 2013). See also para. 305, fn. 935; D2915 (Witness statement of Vidomir Banduka dated 9 February 2013), para. 58 (stating that the Law on Criminal Procedure prevented anyone from being held for more than a month). According to Banduka, if there was a need to hold someone for a period that exceeded the three days prescribed by law, they were transferred to Kula prison. D2915 (Witness statement of Vidomir Banduka dated 9 February 2013), para. 58; Vidomir Banduka, T. 33520 (12 February 2013). Banduka also noted that the transport to Kula Prison would have required permission to transit through the airport, which was held at the time by international forces and thus would have required their consent. Vidomir Banduka, T. 33520–33521 (12 February 2013).

⁷¹²⁵ Tihomir Glavaš, T. 11784 (14 February 2011); P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), para. 47 (stating that he as Chief of the Serb police was aware that the Serb TO and the Serb police were taking people out of their homes). Defence witnesses Nevenko Samouković and Vidomir Banduka suggested that Bosnian Muslims had gone voluntarily to the collection centres but when presented with the testimonies of Mehmed Musić, Adem Balić, and Tihomir Glavaš, all of whom acknowledged that the Serb police and Serb TO had taken people from their houses, Banduka admitted that he was not in a position to answer whether they were taken voluntarily or not, while Samouković speculated that the police “probably had some operative intelligence” or that the arrests had been the result of incompetence or abuses of power. Nevenko Samouković, T. 34613–34614 (1 March 2013); Vidomir Banduka, T. 33512–33513 (12 February 2013). The Chamber thus considers the evidence of Samouković and Banduka to be speculative and shall not rely upon it relation to whether Bosnian Muslims were taken “voluntarily” to detention centres.

2097. When the 14 men from Musići arrived on 20 May, one Croat and one Muslim prisoner were already inside the garage.⁷¹²⁹ Mehmed Musić spent six days in the garage with about 47 other men.⁷¹³⁰ The detainees were only fed one slice of bread once or twice a day, as well as some watery soup, and were given only one or two bottles of water for the entire group.⁷¹³¹

2099. On 25 May 1992, all but three of the men from Musići were moved to the Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹³⁴ The other detainees remained behind in the Municipal Assembly Building garage until 22 June,⁷¹³⁵ when they were transferred to the “Slaviša Čiča” Barracks in Lukavica.⁷¹³⁶

Around 25 June 1992, a woman and her sister were moved to the garage of the Municipal Assembly Building from the Hadžići civil defence headquarters. Adjudicated Fact 2613. The Chamber further notes that in early June, Arkan’s men also removed a man from the Culture and Sport Centre and took him to the garage of the Municipal Assembly Building, where he was detained for 40 days. P161 (Adem Balić’s statement to BiH authorities dated 7 February 1993), p. 1. The Chamber therefore concludes that 2100. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that between 20 May and at least late June 1992, approximately 50 Bosnian Muslims, some of whom were civilians and two of whom were women, were detained in the garage under the Hadžici Municipal Assembly Building by members of Serb Forces and that while held there, the detainees were given inadequate food and water and on one occasion were forced to work.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.11.2

2101. The Indictment refers to the use of the Hadžici Culture and Sport Centre as a detention facility from at least 25 May until September 1992.

(a) Establishment and control of detention facility

2102. Sometime prior to 25 May 1992,⁷¹³⁷ the Crisis Staff decided to detain military-aged Bosnian Muslims in the Culture and Sport Centre and to place the facility under military control.⁷¹³⁸ As mentioned above,⁷¹³⁹ on 25 May 1992, 12 men from Musići were moved from the garage of the Municipal Assembly Building to the Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹⁴⁰ By that time, about 60 men—as people continued to be detained in the garage even after the group of men was transferred to the “Slaviša Čiča” Barracks in Lukavica on 22 June 1992.

⁷¹³⁷ The Chamber notes that Vidomir Banduka testified that the Crisis Staff only decided that the Culture and Sport Centre would be used as a “holding centre to accommodate people” after approximately 16 June 1992. D2915 (Witness statement of Vidomir Banduka dated 9 February 2013), paras. 53–54. However, Banduka conceded that he never visited the Culture and Sport Centre. Vidomir Banduka, T. 33510 (12 February 2013). The Chamber therefore considers that, even if taken as true, Banduka’s testimony does not preclude the possibility that the decision to use the Culture and Sport Centre to accommodate Bosnian Muslims was taken earlier than 16 June 1992, and recalls that Adem Balić testified that Serb Forces had taken him from his home in Hadžici to the Culture and Sport Centre already on 16 May 1992. P134 (Witness statement of Adem Balić dated 25 June 1997), p. 4; P161 (Adem Balić’s statement to BiH authorities, 7 February 1993), p. 1. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the detention facility at the Culture and Sport Centre was established prior to 25 May 1992.

⁷¹³⁸ P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), paras. 26, 46, 48; Tihomir Glavaš, T. 11784 (14 February 2011). See also Adjudicated Fact 2615. The Chamber notes that Vidomir Banduka and Mladen Tolj both testified that Muslims had chosen to be accommodated in the Culture and Sport Centre. D2915 (Witness statement of Vidomir Banduka dated 9 February 2013), para. 56; D3063 (Witness statement of Mladen Tolj dated 25 February 2013), paras. 9, 13. When presented with his testimony in the Krajišnik case, wherein he had conceded that Bosnian Muslims had been held against their will but stated that such detention “was for their own protection”, Banduka denied that he had so testified and suggested that his testimony had been misinterpreted. Vidomir Banduka, T. 33516 (12 February 2013); P6110 (Excerpt from Vidomir Banduka’s testimony in Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), p. 3. Having reviewed his prior testimony, the Chamber is of the view that the credibility of Banduka’s testimony in this case on this point is undermined. The Chamber also observes that Tolj conceded that “very few went voluntarily”, stating that “[m]ost were brought there and kept with the best of intentions because that’s where it was the safest for them”. Mladen Tolj, T. 34636–34637 (1 March 2013). The Chamber further notes that Banduka admitted that the guards would have had to give prior approval in order for anyone to leave. Vidomir Banduka, T. 33514–33515 (12 February 2013). The Chamber therefore finds that the people in the Culture and Sport Centre were indeed detained and not accommodated pursuant to mutual agreement. See further P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), paras. 46, 49 (stating that people were “brought in [...] for their safety” and that men were detained because the Serbs needed people for exchange) (emphasis added).

well as a woman⁷¹⁴¹—were already being detained in two locker rooms of the Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹⁴² The facility was first guarded by members of the Serb TO;⁷¹⁴³ although the Serb police began to provide security along with members of the military after approximately August 1992.⁷¹⁴⁴

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2103. Since the men from Musići could not fit in the locker rooms, they were taken to the main gym area, where they slept on the floor without blankets.⁷¹⁴⁵ The detainees were fed one slice of bread each day and some rice or soup in the morning and afternoon.⁷¹⁴⁶ Only two toilets were available to the detainees.⁷¹⁴⁷

2104. While in detention in the Culture and Sport Centre, the detainees were often beaten and sexually abused by members of paramilitary units.⁷¹⁴⁸ On or before 25 May,⁷¹⁴⁹ three of Arkan's

⁷¹⁴⁴ Mladen Tolj, T. 34637, 34639–34640, 34561 (1 March 2013); D1074 (Correspondence from Hadžići Police Station to Sarajevo CSB, 9 August 1992), p. 2 (stating that between April and July 1992, police officers of the Serb police were "included in all combat activities" but since 1 August 1992 had returned from the frontlines and were put back on regular MUP activities). Tihomir Glavaš denied that the Culture and Sport Centre was under the control of the Serb police. P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), paras. 48, 50, 51 (suggesting that the Culture and Sport Centre was under military control). However, the Chamber also observes that Glavaš himself qualified his evidence in this regard, stating, "at least for as long as I was in Hadžići", and conceded that he never personally visited the Culture and Sport Centre. Tihomir Glavaš, T. 11785 (14 February 2011); P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), para. 53. The Chamber further notes that Glavaš testified that by 9 August 1992 he had already been transferred to Ilidža. P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), para. 82. The Chamber is therefore of the view that Glavaš's personal knowledge would therefore necessarily be limited and considers that Glavaš's testimony does not conflict with further evidence indicating that the Serb police were involved in the guarding and organisation of the detention facility at the Culture and Sport Centre from August 1992. See also P1607 (RS Ministry of Justice report on prisons and camps on the RS territory, 22 October 1992), e-court p. 7 (stating that organisation and security were being provided by the Hadžići SJB).

⁷¹⁴⁹ Adem Balić estimated that Arkan's men arrived "around 1 June 1992". P161 (Adem Balić's statement to BiH authorities dated 7 February 1993), p. 1. However, Mehmed Musić was told that Arkan's men had been present at the Culture and Sport Centre on 25 May 1992 before he arrived from the Municipal Assembly Building garage. P2403 (Witness statement of Mehmed Musić dated 28 February 2011), para. 63. In light of Musić's men, who were dressed in black uniforms, arrived and beat and humiliated the prisoners.⁷¹⁵⁰ On approximately 15 June, Šešelj's men arrived at the Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹⁵¹ The men wore gloves with the fingertips cut off, painted their faces black, wore camouflage uniforms, and carried big knives.⁷¹⁵² A woman with dyed blond hair named Ljiljia who was with Šešelj's men removed one man's pants and told another man to "suck the first man's sexual organ".⁷¹⁵³ She then removed her own pants and told the second man to lick her buttocks, threatening to slit the men's throats if they did not comply.⁷¹⁵⁴

2105. Šešelj's men singled out certain detainees and beat them severely,⁷¹⁵⁵ while forcing other detainees to fight each other.⁷¹⁵⁶ These beatings took place in the presence of the Serb TO guards.⁷¹⁵⁷ Later that day, when ten or fifteen people from Žunovnica arrived, Šešelj's men forced further testimony that the second group of paramilitaries arrived on the second day of Bajram, which was 12 June 1992, Balić's testimony that the second group arrived 15 days after the first, and the fact that Musić had not yet been transferred when Arkan's men first arrived, the Chamber concludes that Arkan's men came to the Sport and Culture Centre on or before 25 May, and considers that this is not inconsistent with Balić's estimate of this date.

⁷¹⁵⁰ P161 (Adem Balić's statement to BiH authorities dated 7 February 1993), p. 1; P134 (Witness statement of Adem Balić dated 25 June 1997), p. 4 (stating that the guards revealed that the men were Arkan's men). See also D3063 (Witness statement of Mladen Tolj dated 25 February 2013), paras. 9–10. Arkan's men also removed a man from the Culture and Sport Centre and took him to the garage of the Municipal Assembly Building. See fn. 7136.

⁷¹⁵¹ P161 (Adem Balić's statement to BiH authorities dated 7 February 1993), p. 1. Mehmed Musić referred to this second group as Arkan's men, stating that one of the men had identified himself and the group as such. P2403 (Witness statement of Mehmed Musić dated 28 February 2011), para. 57. However, Musić also testified that this group arrived on the second day of Bajram, which was 12 June 1992. Mehmed Musić, T. 12833, 12866 (3 March 2011). Adem Balić identified the group that arrived 15 days after Arkan's men, which would have been around 12 June, as Šešelj's men. P161 (Adem Balić's statement to BiH authorities dated 7 February 1993), p. 1. This identification is corroborated by the testimony of Tihomir Glavaš, who testified that he heard that Šešelj's men had sexually abused the detainees in the Culture and Sport Centre. P2296 (Witness statement of Tihomir Glavaš dated 13 February 2011), paras. 53–54. The Chamber therefore concludes that the paramilitaries in the second group were Šešelj's men rather than Arkan's men.

(c) Transfer and exchange of detainees at the Culture and Sport Centre

2106. By 22 June, 282 people had been detained in the Hadžići Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹⁵⁹ On approximately 22 June 1992, "a rather large group" of men, women, and children from Kučice, a settlement located nearby, arrived at the Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹⁶⁰ Soon thereafter, the guards told the detainees that they were going to be exchanged.⁷¹⁶¹ Around 10 p.m. that evening, in accordance with a decision of the Crisis Staff,⁷¹⁶² the male detainees in the Culture and Sport Centre were loaded onto several buses.⁷¹⁶³ While en route, one bus stopped first in front of the garage of the Hadžići Municipal Assembly Building,⁷¹⁶⁴ where it picked up detainees before proceeding to Kula Prison.⁷¹⁶⁵ There, "Chetniks" boarded the bus, beat the detainees with rifle butts, and extinguished cigarettes on their faces.⁷¹⁶⁶ Ultimately, the detainees were taken to the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks in Lukavica.⁷¹⁶⁷

⁷¹⁵⁸ P2403 (Witness statement of Mehmed Musić dated 28 February 2011), para. 61. After leaving the Culture and Sport Centre, Šešelj's men tried to go to the Municipal Assembly Building garage and do the same thing to the detainees there, but were prevented from doing so by Tihomir Glavaš. 2107. On the morning of 7 September, approximately 200 Bosnian Muslims from Binježevo, Garovići, Žunovnica, and Grivići—including men, women, children, and elderly who had been under “house arrest” in Hadžići since the outbreak of armed conflict⁷¹⁶⁸—boarded five buses, which took them to the check-point at Kobiljača for an exchange.⁷¹⁶⁹ The group remained at the check-point until approximately 8 p.m.,⁷¹⁷⁰ but the exchange fell through when the Serbs brought women and children to the exchange instead of the captured Bosnian Muslim men from Hadžići and Ilidža as had been previously agreed.⁷¹⁷¹

2108. Thus, around 8 p.m., the convoy returned to the Culture and Sport Centre, where the detainees were placed under the guard of TRZ employees.⁷¹⁷² At 9 a.m. on 8 September, the detainees were transported back to the check-point at Kobiljača, but again, no exchange took place.⁷¹⁷³ The convoy, which now numbered eight buses filled with approximately 500 people, returned to the Culture and Sport Centre by 10:30 p.m. that evening.⁷¹⁷⁴ When the detainees

The Chamber notes that Okić stated that the extra buses joined the convoy on 7 September rather than on 8 September, but notes that Okić returned to the check-point on the day after the first failed exchange, while Musić, who testified that he was bussed in from Ilidža on 8 September, did not. arrived, they were given some food for the children, who at that point had not eaten for two days.⁷¹⁷⁵ Thereafter, the group spent approximately 12 days in the Culture and Sport Centre, receiving food every third day.⁷¹⁷⁶ On about 18 September, the Serb Forces released all the women and children “to go home”, leaving about 100 male detainees out of the original 500.⁷¹⁷⁷

2110. During his second detention at the Culture and Sport Centre, Mehmed Musić was interrogated twice by Rade Veselinović.⁷¹⁸¹ Zijad Okić gave conflicting evidence regarding whether or not the prisoners were abused, first stating that the detainees were beaten and abused most by Zoran Gašević, Nemanja Jovičić, and Rade Veselinović.⁷¹⁸² However, Okić later stated that the detainees were not beaten or hurt during the 12 days in the Culture and Sport Centre.⁷¹⁸³ The Chamber considers this evidence insufficient to establish that the detainees were beaten during this period.

On 22 October 1992, RS Ministry of Justice representative Slobodan Avlijaš submitted a report to the RS Minister of Justice, Momčilo Mandić, stating that at the time, 90 Muslim “prisoners of war” were being held in the Culture and Sport Centre, which was being secured by the Hadžići SJB.⁷¹⁸⁴ The report also stated that the Hadžići SJB did not have the authority to keep people in custody for longer than three days, and therefore was acting “without any authorisation or justification in law”.⁷¹⁸⁵ On the same day, Mandić ordered the Serb Municipality of Hadžići to transfer all of its detainees to the Butmir KPD Investigations Department in Svrače.⁷¹⁸⁶ On the following day, all but 14 of the remaining men were transferred to Planjo’s house in Svrače.⁷¹⁸⁷

(d) Conclusion

The Chamber recalls that Mladen Tolj testified that the men who were transferred to Planjo’s House had been captured in combat and were not civilians. Mladen Tolj, T. 34652 (1 March 2013). However, the Chamber notes that Tolj did not mention the basis for his knowledge in this regard, and in light of the extensive evidence of Okić and Musić regarding their prior periods of detention, the Chamber shall not rely on Tolj’s testimony in this regard.

Municipality,⁷¹⁸⁸ the “vast majority” of which belonged to Muslims.⁷¹⁸⁹ Radić ordered that the flats be sealed, registered, and placed at the disposal of the Serb municipality.⁷¹⁹⁰ This was done immediately upon Radić’s order.⁷¹⁹¹ On 19 July 1992, the Accused sent a memorandum to the municipality of Hadžići requesting an inventory of all vacant housing facilities following the “voluntary departure of Muslims”, explaining that vacant homes would be used to house Serb residents of the Muslim part of Sarajevo, who would soon be leaving the city.⁷¹⁹²

2115. The Chamber recalls that, as described above, a group of male detainees was transferred to the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks in Lukavica on approximately 22 June 1992,⁷¹⁹⁶ and that another group was transferred to Planjo’s house in Svrake on 23 October 1992.⁷¹⁹⁷ Defence witnesses testified that Bosnian Muslims left these areas of Hadžići of their own volition in order to move to areas with a Bosnian Muslim majority.⁷¹⁹⁸ As a result, a Bosnian Muslim commission based in Tarčin and a Bosnian Serb commission based in Hadžići were formed to visit Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs held in opposing territories and to interview them about their wishes to leave or stay.⁷¹⁹⁹ Defence witnesses also testified that “many” Bosnian Muslims remained in Hadžići until the end of the war.⁷²⁰⁰ Having considered this evidence, however, the Chamber observes that these assertions do not directly contradict the evidence indicating that the groups described above were transferred out of the municipality. The Chamber therefore finds that the two groups of male detainees held at the Hadžići Culture and Sport Centre were forced to leave and transferred out of the municipality on approximately 22 June 1992 and 23 October 1992, respectively.

(A) Charges

However, the Chamber observes that this document only relates to the populations present in the respective territories at that time and as such, is not relevant to any movement of population that occurred in 1992.

2118. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁷²¹² In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Ilidža in which they had been lawfully present.⁷²¹³ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual

(B) Background

2119. Ilidža is one of the ten constitutive municipalities of Sarajevo and is located to the west of Novo Sarajevo, southwest of Novi Grad, and to the northeast of Hadžići.⁷²¹⁵ According to the 1991 census, the population of Ilidža municipality was 43.2% Muslim, 36.8% Serb, 10.2% Croat, 7.6% Yugoslav, and 2.1% identified themselves as other.⁷²¹⁶ Prior to the conflict, the populations of the local communes of Hrasnica, Butmir, Stupsko Brdo, part of Donji Kotorac, and Sokolović Kolonija were predominantly Muslim and those of Otes, Bare, and Stup were predominantly Croat. The populations of the other local communes were predominantly Serb.⁷²¹⁷

2121. After the first multi-party elections held in November 1990, in which the SDA won the highest number of seats in the municipal assembly, there was an inter-party agreement on the division of power in Ilidža.⁷²¹⁹ Husein Mahmutović, of the SDA, became the President of the municipality and Radomir Kezunović, of the SDS, became the President of the Executive Board.⁷²²⁰ Momčilo Čeklić of the SDS became the Secretary of the Assembly.⁷²²¹ Neđeljko Prstojević became the Secretary for Communal Inspections and the SDS President for Ilidža municipality.⁷²²² Of a total of 13 official posts, Bosnian Serbs and Muslims each held six and one post was held by a Bosnian Croat.⁷²²³

2122. Inter-ethnic tensions were rising in Iliđža from at least May 1991; however, Kezunović and Mahmutović made efforts to work together in the joint-Assembly.⁷²²⁴ Despite these efforts, each side created separate institutions. The SDA formed a crisis staff for the Muslim part of Iliđža in July or August 1991,⁷²²⁵ and starting that autumn, Muslim populations in majority Muslim settlements were arming themselves and organising military formations.⁷²²⁶

2123. In accordance with the Variant A/B Instructions, the SDS established a Crisis Staff in Iliđža on 2 January 1992,⁷²²⁷ and Radomir Kezunović declared the Assembly of the Serb Municipality of Iliđža (“Iliđža Serb Assembly”) the following day.⁷²²⁸ However, the joint Assembly of the Municipality of Iliđža made efforts to work together until the beginning of April 1992.⁷²²⁹

2124. On 3 January 1992, the Iliđža Serb Assembly made a proposal to the Bosnian Serb Assembly to regulate, inter alia, the status of members of TO units and military-aged men as well as to take measures for the protection of the interests of Serbs in the territory of the Iliđža municipality.⁷²³⁰ Starting around the beginning of March 1992, local Serbs organised themselves and held neighbourhood watches in front of their houses.⁷²³¹ In March and April 1992, Serb Forces distributed weapons seized from MUP storage units to Bosnian Serb civilians and members of the Serb TO.⁷²³² Bosnian Serbs in Ilidža were also armed with weapons from JNA warehouses.⁷²³³

2125. The Ilidža MUP was divided in March 1992, after Bosnian Muslim police officers were dismissed from the SJBs; the Bosnian Serbs stayed in the Ilidža police station.⁷²³⁴ Edin Mlivić, then Chief of the Ilidža SJB, and Tomislav Kovač, then Ilidža police commander,⁷²³⁵ agreed that the Bosnian Serb police would function in the parts of Ilidža that had a Serb majority and the Bosnian Muslim police would function in those parts with a Muslim majority.⁷²³⁶ Initially, they continued to share the same building.⁷²³⁷ On 6 April 1992, the Bosnian Muslims stationed their MUP in Stup, with Mlivić as its chief, and established their “War Presidency”.⁷²³⁸ Kovač was Chief of the Ilidža SJB from 1 April to 6 August 1992,⁷²³⁹ when Tihomir Glavaš succeeded him.⁷²⁴⁰

2126. On 5 April 1992, the Ilidža Serb Assembly declared the Serb Municipality of Ilidža, to include the territory of settlements with a majority Serbian population in Ilidža and parts of Novi Grad, Kiseljak, and Trnovo.⁷²⁴¹ The Serb Municipality of Ilidža excluded the communities where Muslims and Croats were a majority.⁷²⁴² After 6 April 1992, the Ilidža Serb Assembly became a War Presidency, pursuant to an instruction from the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁷²⁴³ On 6 April 1992, the Ilidža Crisis Staff ordered general mobilisation.⁷²⁴⁴ A new Serb Crisis Staff was established by the Serbian Municipality of Ilidža and was publicly announced on 10 April 1992.⁷²⁴⁵ Prstojević became the commander of the Crisis Staff but Kezunović remained as its President for about 15 to 20 days until he passed over his responsibilities to Prstojević.⁷²⁴⁶

2127. Until 19 May 1992, when the VRS was formed, the Serb TO staff organised defence in Ilidža.⁷²⁴⁷ At that point, the TO defence units became part of the VRS, first as part of the Ilidža Brigade and then as part of the Igman Brigade.⁷²⁴⁸

(C) Armed conflict in Ilidža

2128. Around 3 or 4 April 1992, barricades were erected around Ilidža.⁷²⁴⁹ From April 1992, there was an escalation in combat activity,⁷²⁵⁰ and Ilidža was constantly under fire.⁷²⁵¹ The eastern and western parts of Ilidža were controlled by the Serbs but were divided by Muslim held territory in the middle.⁷²⁵² The eastern and western parts of Ilidža were shelled by Bosnian Muslim forces from Mt. Mojmiilo and Mt. Igman, respectively.⁷²⁵³ By the end of April 1992,

Bosnian Serbs shelled various neighbourhoods in Sarajevo, including Butmir and Hrasnica in Ilidža municipality.⁷²⁵⁴

2129. In April 1992, Prstojević issued orders which resulted in various aspects of daily life being blocked. First, on 14 April, he ordered the suspension of activities of almost all enterprises in Ilidža.⁷²⁵⁵ Then, on 19 April, he ordered that all access to roads be blocked, with the exception of emergency medical assistance, local food supply, water control and electrical power enterprises.⁷²⁵⁶

2130. On 22 April 1992, the Bosnian Muslim forces attacked the western and central parts of Ilidža.⁷²⁵⁷ After this attack, a confrontation line was established. Bosnian Serb and Muslim forces established positions along the roads leading from Sarajevo.⁷²⁵⁸ Combat activity continued in May 1992.⁷²⁵⁹ By 8 May 1992, Serb Forces were in control of the territories composing the Serb Municipality of Ilidža and some areas of life could return to normal.⁷²⁶⁰

Several armed groups were present in Ilidža during 1992.⁷²⁶¹ Most notably, Brne Gavrilović and his group of Šešelj's men,⁷²⁶² arrived in Ilidža on 9 July 1992.⁷²⁶³ On several occasions in 1992 and 1993, members of Gavrilović's group looted and expelled Bosnian Muslims from their homes.⁷²⁶⁴ Other armed groups also engaged in looting.⁷²⁶⁵ When confronted by security forces, members of these groups sometimes issued threats.⁷²⁶⁶ However, at times, members of the MUP tolerated the looting and even participated themselves.⁷²⁶⁷

The Chamber notes that Prstojević testified that he did not say that outside groups should be organised to expel people. Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13295–13298 (11 March 2011), T. 13547–13550 (17 March 2011). However, in his interview with the Prosecution, Prstojević stated that by “outside” groups, he was referring to Arkan’s, Gavrilović’s, and Boban’s groups. P2512 (Excerpt from transcript and video of Nedeljko Prstojević’s interview), pp. 2–3. Having reviewed the video and transcript of Prstojević’s interview, the Chamber rejects Prstojević’s testimony that he was not referring to those groups in the intercepted conversation.

took Dobrinja 1 and Dobrinja 4 under their control.⁷²⁷⁶ Prstojević had a meeting with the Accused, Mladić, and other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership on 15 June 1992, in which it was concluded that they would “clear the Serbian territory”, starting with Mojmir and Dobrinja.⁷²⁷⁷ Around 17 June 1992, SRK units took civilians out of Dobrinja to Lukavica barracks.⁷²⁷⁸ At Lukavica barracks, the MUP separated and classified them according to their ethnicities and the Bosnian Muslims were then sent to Kula Prison.⁷²⁷⁹

2135. From September 1992, there was a confrontation line on the eastern side of Dobrinja, separating the SRK-controlled areas of Dobrinja 1 and 4 from ABiH-controlled areas of Dobrinja 2 and 3B.⁷²⁸² There was combat activity in Ilidža for the duration of the war.⁷²⁸³ Discussions continued among municipal leaders in Ilidža as to expanding control over a broader territory.⁷²⁸⁴

The Prosecution submits that the 10,000 Bosnian Muslim civilians accommodated at Kula Prison were detained. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, pp. 20–21. Having reviewed all the evidence, the Chamber finds that the evidence is insufficient to determine whether these civilians were deprived of freedom of movement such that they were detained, as opposed to being merely accommodated due to the combat activity in the area.

2146. The food was insufficient.⁷³¹⁸ Several detainees were initially kept in crowded cells from which they were not permitted to leave; they were subsequently moved into more spacious cells and given access to the cafeteria.⁷³¹⁹ In the former scenario they were only given one meal per day, which was brought to that cell.⁷³²⁰ However, in the cafeteria, detainees were given two meals per day.⁷³²¹ On 20 May 1992, Tepavčević wrote to the MUP and Ministry of Justice advising of the inadequate conditions of accommodation, food, hygiene, and health of 156 detainees who had been present at Kula Prison since 12 May 1992.⁷³²²

2147. On 7 May 1992, at least five detainees were badly beaten while detained at Kula Prison.⁷³²³ The Chamber also recalls that it found that detainees from Hadžići were beaten on a bus in front of Kula when it stopped there on its way to the Lukavica Barracks.⁷³²⁴ Several detainees testified that they were not beaten or mistreated during their detention at Kula Prison,⁷³²⁵ however others were beaten.⁷³²⁶ In addition, local Serbs and armed groups frequently gathered around the prison compound attempting to gain access and on occasion made it through.⁷³²⁷

2148. Detainees at Kula Prison were detailed to perform work on the frontlines of the conflict, including de-mining, transporting material for barricades, digging trenches and retrieving the

For example, Musić received tea and bread in the morning as well as "some cooked food", such as pea soup, in the afternoon. P2403 (Witness statement of Mehmed Musić dated 28 February 2011), para. 98. D3331 (Witness statement of Soniboj Škiljević dated 5 April 2013), para. 8; Slobodan Avlijaš, T. 35184 (11 March 2013), (testifying that before August 1992 when Kula Prison was under the jurisdiction of the police, prisoners were mostly given dry rations in their rooms but after the establishment of Kula Prison, daily meals were provided to prisoners in the dining room); D3105 (Witness Statement of Slobodan Avlijaš, dated 9 March 2013), para. 17. Having considered all the evidence and taken into account the fact that these Defence witnesses had an incentive to distance themselves from the poor conditions at Kula Prison, and that the witnesses who were detained there were better placed to report on the conditions in which they were detained, the Chamber does not rely on the evidence of these Defence witnesses in this regard. given food or cigarettes by soldiers and locals in the locations where they worked.⁷³³⁶ However, they were not remunerated for their work.⁷³³⁷

2150. Detainees were registered with the ICRC.⁷³³⁸ Around 9 August 1992, Karadžić visited Kula prison with representatives of the media and the ICRC.⁷³³⁹ That day the food was better and only clean rooms were shown.⁷³⁴⁰

(3) Conclusion in relation to conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2152. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces detained non-Serbs from Ilidža and neighbouring municipalities, including civilians, from May 1992 until at least 28 October 1994 in Kula Prison. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions characterised by inadequate space, bedding, and sanitary facilities. The Chamber also finds that detainees were provided insufficient food. The Chamber further finds that male detainees were subjected to forced labour and beatings while detained at Kula Prison.

The Accused argues that detainees requested to work voluntarily to receive cigarettes and pass the time. Defence Final Brief, para. 1675. In light of all the evidence, the Chamber finds that most detainees assigned to work while detained at Kula Prison, had no choice but to perform work.

(4) Scheduled Incident B.13.1

2154. On 7 May 1992, five detainees who had just arrived at Kula Prison from Grbavica were beaten so badly that one died immediately and another detainee, Zlatan Salčinović, died the next morning.⁷³⁴² Mirsad Smajš and at least one other detainee took the bodies of these individuals to a van after which they were transported elsewhere.⁷³⁴³ The Chamber received forensic evidence that the body of an individual identified as Zlatan “Salčin” was discovered in a grave in Sarajevo.⁷³⁴⁴

2155. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that on or about 7 May 1992 two detainees were beaten to death at Kula Prison by Serb Forces.

(5) Scheduled Incident B.13.3

2156. The Indictment refers to the killing of three detainees while performing forced labour at Kula Prison between 23 July and 24 November 1992.

2157. Adem Balić was detained at Kula Prison from 23 June to 24 November 1992.⁷³⁴⁵ After approximately a month in detention there, he was detailed to a work platoon and witnessed the death and wounding of detainees who were forced to work on or near the frontlines.⁷³⁴⁶ Vahid Gačanović was killed by incoming fire at Ozrenska Street; Ramic Smajjić and Zido Nizić were killed by incoming fire in the Kula Prison agricultural complex.⁷³⁴⁷ The Chamber also received forensic evidence that the bodies of Gačanović and Smajjić were found in a mass grave at Vranješ, which was a wartime cemetery located close to Kula Prison.⁷³⁴⁸

⁷³⁴⁶ P161 (Adem Balić’s statement to BiH authorities, 7 February 1993), p. 3. The Chamber notes that KDZ310 gave evidence that he saw detainees from Kula Prison working at Ozrenska street and knew of several cases of them being killed by snipers. P1938 (Witness statement of KDZ310 dated 28 November 2010), para. 46).

2158. Based on this evidence, the Chamber is satisfied that at least three detainees of Kula Prison were killed while performing forced labour between 23 July and 24 November 1992.

(E) Movement of the population from Ilidža

Stanišić & Župljanin*), T. 9484. At the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, Prstojević said that when the Accused “visited [them] in Ilidža and encouraged [them], the Serbs from Sarajevo retained control over the territory, and even extended their territory in some areas, driving the Muslims out of the territories where they had actually been majority.” D92 (Transcript of 17th session of SerBiH Assembly, 24–26 July 1992), p. 66. The Chamber notes that Prstojević objected to the translation of “driving the Muslims out” and said that he did not say that Muslims were expelled, but rather that they were “pushed back”. P2513 (Excerpt from Nedeljko Prstojević’s transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 14664–14665; Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13017–13021 (8 March 2011). The Chamber notes that the BCS version of the transcript of the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly uses the word potjerali which means “to chase away”. The Chamber considers this to be synonymous with “driving away”. P2513 (Excerpt from Nedeljko Prstojević’s transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 14673. However, Prstojević also denied that he would have used the term “potjerali” and testified that he used a BCS word that means to push back (potisnuli). P2513 Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13554 (17 March 2011); (Excerpt from Nedeljko Prstojević’s transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 14674. Given the plain text of the BCS version of the 17th Session of the SerBiH Assembly, the Chamber rejects his evidence in this regard. The Chamber further notes that Prstojević stated that he did not mean that civilians were expelled, rather that combatants were pushed back after armed combat, however, he admitted that the majority of the civilian population left with the combatants gradually. P2513 (Excerpt from Nedeljko Prstojević’s transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 14665–14666.

2161. For the duration of the war, not only Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat prisoners of war but also refugees and unlawfully detained civilians were transferred to non-Serb controlled territory from Kula Prison pursuant to agreements reached with UNHCR and the Central Commission for Exchange of Prisoners and Civilians or pursuant to private agreements.⁷³⁵⁷ Insofar as these exchanges related to refugees or unlawfully detained civilians, the Chamber finds that these individuals were forced to leave the municipality.

intercepted conversation, Prstojević only denied that he issued such ultimatums in public. See Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13839–13842 (21 March 2011). In his testimony in the Krajišnik proceedings, Prstojević testified that: “With the exception of Kotorac, we did not have a policy of expelling civilians in any of the areas except where the circumstances required the population to leave the area because of the combat activities or where the population wanted to leave on their own initiative.” P2513 (Excerpt from Nedeljko Prstojević’s transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 14649. In light of this qualification pertaining to Kotorac, the Chamber is satisfied that there was some truth to Mandić’s comments in the intercepted conversation.

⁷³⁵⁵ P1110 (Intercept of conversation between Momčilo Mandić and Nedeljko Prstojević, 2 July 1992), p. 4. The Chamber notes that Prstojević testified that he had not issued such ultimatums at all and that Mandić was incorrect. Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13804, 13842 (21 March 2011). In his testimony in the Krajišnik proceedings, Prstojević said that he denied to Mandić that he issued such ultimatums at all and questioned where he said such things. P2513 (Excerpt from Nedeljko Prstojević’s transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 14645–14646. However, the Chamber considers that a plain reading of the text of the intercepted conversation indicates that Prstojević merely denied giving such ultimatums in public. P1110 (Intercept of conversation between Momčilo Mandić and Nedeljko Prstojević, 2 July 1992), p. 4.

⁷³⁵⁶ Momčilo Mandić, C2 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 8868–8870, 8886–8889; P1101 (Intercept of conversation between Momčilo Krajišnik and Momčilo Mandić, 26 June 1992), p. 3. Mandić and Avlijaš testified that civilians from Dobrinja left on their own accord to flee the fighting. Momčilo Mandić, C2 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 8869–8870, 8886–8889; P1101 (Intercept of conversation between Momčilo Krajišnik and Momčilo Mandić, 26 June 1992), p. 3; Slobodan Avlijaš, T. 35193–35194 (11 March 2013). However, in light of the evidence, discussed at paragraph 2133 that the Serb Forces took measures to clear the area, discussed giving Muslim owned apartments to Serbs, and that once the SRK took custody of the civilians, they separated the Bosnian Muslim civilians from the Serbs and Croats, the Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslim civilians had no choice but to leave Dobrinja.

by Muslims for temporary use by Bosnian Serb refugees.⁷³⁵⁹ Also in July 1992, the Wartime Commission for the municipality founded a commission to implement the temporary distribution of flats.⁷³⁶⁰ The commission encountered difficulties in carrying out its work.⁷³⁶¹ By the summer of 1993, it made over 3,000 decisions to assign temporary flats.⁷³⁶² The Accused argues that after the war, everyone's tenancy rights were recognised and people were permitted to buy and sell the flats in accordance with the law.⁷³⁶³ However, having considered all the evidence before it, the Chamber finds that the main purpose of the regulation was to facilitate the use of the vacant property in question by Serbs who had just arrived in the municipality. In turn, this ensured that those non-Serbs who left Ilidža would not return. Furthermore, on 4 April 1993, Prstojević issued a decision forbidding the return of Bosnian Muslims and Croats to the Serb Municipality of Ilidža for purported security reasons, unless they had written authorisation from the proper authorities.⁷³⁶⁴

2163. According to Bosnian Muslim SDB Chief Nedžad Ugljen, by July 1995, the Serb-held territory in Ilidža was almost devoid of non-Serbs.⁷³⁶⁵

Muslims who wanted to stay could do so and that many Bosnian Muslims and Croats remained in Ilidža during the conflict,⁷³⁶⁹ this evidence bears limited weight in light of the accepted evidence that Serb Forces participated in the expulsion of Bosnian Muslim civilians in Serb held parts of Ilidža and prevented their return.

2165. In light of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that members of the non-Serb population from the Serb-controlled parts of Ilidža were forced to leave.

iii. Novi Grad

(A) Charges

2166. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Novi Grad as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁷³⁷⁰ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in Novi Grad include killings during the take-over of Novi Grad,⁷³⁷¹ killings related to a detention facility as well as killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at this detention facility.⁷³⁷² The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.⁷³⁷³

2167. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Novi Grad by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over and in a detention facility, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷³⁷⁴ (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in a detention facility, as cruel and inhumane treatment;⁷³⁷⁵ (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in a detention facility in Novi Grad, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷³⁷⁶ (iv) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁷³⁷⁷ (v) unlawful detention in a detention facility;⁷³⁷⁸ (vi) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;⁷³⁷⁹ (vii) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention, and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;⁷³⁸⁰ (viii) the wanton destruction of private property including homes, business premises, and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁷³⁸¹ and (ix) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁷³⁸²

2168. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁷³⁸³ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Novi Grad in which they were lawfully present.⁷³⁸⁴ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, cultural monuments and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear, while others were physically driven out.⁷³⁸⁵

(1) The municipality of Novi Grad

2169. The municipality of Novi Grad, one of the ten constitutive municipalities of Sarajevo, is bordered in the south and in the west by Ilidža, in the north by Vogošća and Ilijaš, and in the east by Novo Sarajevo.⁷³⁸⁶ It was established in 1977, encompassing the areas which had hitherto constituted the western parts of Novo Sarajevo.⁷³⁸⁷ These areas included, inter alia, the local commune of Dobroševići which was comprised of the villages of Ahatovići, Bojnik, Dobroševići, and Mihaljevići, the local commune of Rajlovac, and Dobrinja, a set of large, high-rise residential complexes which housed around 40.000 people before the war.⁷³⁸⁸ According to the 1991 census, Novi Grad's population was 136,616 of which 50.8% were Muslim, 27.5% were Serb, and 6.5% were Croat.⁷³⁸⁹ The village of Ahatovići was inhabited mainly by Bosnian Muslims, while those living in Rajlovac and Dobroševići were mostly Bosnian Serbs.⁷³⁹⁰ Inhabitants of Novi Grad municipality generally lived together peacefully until the beginning of 1992.⁷³⁹¹

2170. Novi Grad was host to a number of important commercial, industrial and military installations, including the Rajlovac Barracks, the Butile Barracks, and Orao (a military industrial factory dedicated to the overhaul of aircraft engines).⁷³⁹²

(2) Establishment of Rajlovac municipality⁷³⁹⁷

2172. Near the end of 1991, members of the SDS municipal board from Novi Grad began contemplating the creation of the Serb municipality of Rajlovac on territory which belonged, in large parts, to the municipality of Novi Grad, in order to prevent Serbs being outvoted in the Novi Grad government and the Novi Grad Municipal Assembly.⁷³⁹⁸ On 26 December 1991, Krajišnik informed the Accused that he had been to a Novi Grad Municipal Assembly session in which voting had been blocked.⁷³⁹⁹ In addition, on 9 February 1992, Krajišnik informed the Accused of the meeting he had recently attended in Reljevo, a village in Novi Grad municipality, and the discussions he had had about forming the Rajlovac municipality.⁷⁴⁰⁰ A few days later, on 11 February, Jovan Tintor told a certain Prodanović that a new municipality called Rajlovac was being created.⁷⁴⁰¹

1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a law according to which the municipality of Rajlovac included, inter alia, Ahatovići, Bojnik, Dobroševići, Rajlovac, Reljevo-Dvor, Zabrđe, and Žuč.⁷⁴⁰⁴ Jovo Božić assumed the role of the President of the Rajlovac municipality.⁷⁴⁰⁵ Sometime after the proclamation of Rajlovac as a new municipality, the Rajlovac municipality Crisis Staff was established and Jovo Božić was appointed as its President.⁷⁴⁰⁶

(3) The arming and mobilisation of Bosnian Serbs in Novi Grad

2174. By 14 October 1991, Tintor and Ratko Adžić, who later became the President of the Serb Municipality of Ilijaš,⁷⁴⁰⁷ had already discussed the issue of arming and mobilisation and noted the inadequate response to the call for mobilisation of Serbs in Novi Grad and surrounding municipalities. Adžić specifically complained that despite a meeting during which he had announced that there was a unique opportunity for Serbs to come and take firearms, nobody from Novi Grad had shown up to collect such weaponry.⁷⁴⁰⁸

Barracks.⁷⁴¹³ They wore uniforms and were taught by Šuput's men how to operate mortars and other types of weapons.⁷⁴¹⁴ In addition, Orao accommodated a Serb "paramilitary unit" which consisted of SDS members from the surrounding villages.⁷⁴¹⁵ The insignias on the uniforms worn by this unit bore four Cyrillic "S" symbols and some of its members wore "kokarda" caps.⁷⁴¹⁶

2177. By March 1992, Bosnian Serbs established a check-point on the bridge across the Bosna river in the Reljevo settlement and near the Butile Barracks, and gradually blocked the passage of Bosnian Muslims.⁷⁴¹⁹ On 9 April 1992, the Rajlovac municipality Crisis Staff ordered the "active observation" of the entire territory of Rajlovac municipality by means of controlling all vehicles and people moving in the direction of the "Distribution Centre".⁷⁴²⁰ The Rajlovac municipality Crisis Staff also ordered that one policeman and two TO members should be present at all times at the check-point towards the Distribution Centre.⁷⁴²¹

2178. By early May 1992, almost all non-Serb soldiers and officers of the JNA had abandoned their posts and left the Butile Barracks.⁷⁴²² However, pursuant to the instructions of Hasan Mujkić who was at the time the commander of the local Muslim TO, Ramiz Mujkić stayed in his post at the Barracks in order to monitor the situation and report back to the TO command.⁷⁴²³ On or about 10 May 1992, the JNA handed over the Rajlovac Barracks and the Rajlovac airport to the Rajlovac TO.⁷⁴²⁴

2180. On 22 May 1992, the SRK commander, Tomislav Šipčić, ordered the formation of the Rajlovac TO Brigade, thus subordinating the Rajlovac TO to the SRK, and appointed the Rajlovac Crisis Staff president, who at that time was Jovo Božić, to the post of the commander of the Brigade.⁷⁴²⁹ On 28 May 1992, Božić reported to the Bosnian Serb government that the “Serbian Army of the Serbian Municipality of Rajlovac” included 1,280 conscripts.⁷⁴³⁰

The Chamber is cognisant of the fact that in his statement, Witness KDZ041 referred to the beginning of March 1992 as the period during which Serbs requested that the inhabitants of Ahatovići leave the area whereas during his testimony, he asserted that the request was in fact made at the end of May 1992, that is, after the outbreak of war in Sarajevo. The Chamber is also mindful that according to Adjudicated Fact 2607, this request was conveyed to the inhabitants of Ahatovići in March 1992. The Chamber considers, however, that the meeting in question took place around the end of May 1992 as stated by KDZ041 during his testimony. First, that period roughly coincides with the outbreak of hostilities in

Bosnian Muslims refused to comply with the demand and the local crisis staff of the Bosnian Muslims led by Hasan Mujkić set up barricades,⁷⁴³² organised village guards, and armed them with infantry weapons.⁷⁴³³ The Muslim TO numbered some 200 men.⁷⁴³⁴

Sarajevo, as well as the alleged attack on the village of Ahatovići. Second, in his statement, Stojan Džino stated that the last meeting between Muslims from Ahatovići and Serbs took place on 27 May 1992. D2387 (Witness statement of Stojan Džino dated 4 November 2012), paras. 12–13. The Chamber notes, however, that this inconsistency in the evidence of KDZ041 is not so grave that it would affect his overall credibility.

⁷⁴³² The Chamber notes that during his testimony before the Chamber, KDZ041 denied that there was a crisis staff in Ahatovići and instead referred to the existence of a group of village elders. See KDZ041, T. 12080, 12087–12089 (17 February 2011). The Chamber, however, does not accept this part of KDZ041’s testimony since in his witness statement, he stated that a crisis staff headed by Hasan Mujkić was formed in Ahatovići, and then proceeded to list its members. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 10 (under seal). Moreover, Ramiz Mujkić also indirectly confirmed the existence of the said crisis staff. See P2314 (Witness statement of Ramiz Mujkić dated 4 February 2011), para. 32. With respect to the existence of Muslim’s barricades, the Chamber notes that in one of his written statements, Ramiz Mujkić stated that Muslims had set up barricades in Dobroševići and Ahatovići. See D1101 (Excerpts from witness statements of Ramiz Mujkić, undated), e-court p. 5. However, during his testimony, he denied that there were such barricades. See Ramiz Mujkić, T. 12417–12420, 12432 (25 February 2011). In assessing this inconsistency, the Chamber considered the following: First, KDZ041 stated that after the Serbs had established barricades, the Muslims erected barricades of their own around Ahatovići. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 6 (under seal). Second, Ramiz Mujkić did in fact concede that the Muslim TO had a number of permanent positions, such as dugouts, around Ahatovići village. See P2314 (Witness statement of Ramiz Mujkić dated 4 February 2011), para. 25. The Chamber therefore does not rely on Ramiz Mujkić’s testimony that there were no Muslim barricades in Dobroševići and Ahatovići.

⁷⁴³³ P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 10 (under seal); Ramiz Mujkić, T. 12417, 12432, 12436–12437 (25 February 2011); P2314 (Witness statement of Ramiz Mujkić dated 4 February 2011), paras. 25, 32. See also Adjudicated Fact 2607.

⁷⁴³⁵ According to KDZ041, the Serbs were ordered to leave their houses so that the paramilitary units could establish their positions. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 8 (under seal); KDZ041, T. 12090 (17 February 2011).

⁷⁴³⁷ KDZ041, T. 12083 (17 February 2011); P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), paras. 6–7 (under seal). The Chamber is mindful that in his statement, KDZ041 stated that the barricades were erected in March whereas during his testimony he indicated that the barricades were erected sometime between 20 May 1992 and 25 May 1992. The Chamber considers that KDZ041’s live testimony is more credible on this particular issue.

(C) Attack on Ahatovići

2184. On 27 May 1992, Serbs in both JNA and camouflage uniforms arrived on the hills around Ahatovići from the direction of Rajlovac with tanks and armoured vehicles.⁷⁴⁴¹ Using megaphones, they urged the villagers to surrender.⁷⁴⁴² They threatened: “Balijs, surrender, or we kill your children.”⁷⁴⁴³ When the villagers refused, at around 11 p.m. Serb Forces launched an attack, which was eventually repelled.⁷⁴⁴⁴ During this initial attack two Muslims were killed and ten were wounded.⁷⁴⁴⁵

2185. On 29 May 1992,⁷⁴⁴⁶ a final attack was launched on Ahatovići and Dobroševići, with heavy artillery.⁷⁴⁴⁷ The shells were fired from all directions, including the Butile and Rajlovac Barracks.⁷⁴⁴⁸ At this time, the women, children, and the elderly were moved to basements of Stojan Džino testified that Hasan Mujkić requested, on 29 May 1992, that Jovo Božić allow the evacuation of the convoy containing women and children from Ahatovići to Sarajevo but this was not allowed because the Serbs suspected the evacuation to be a preparatory step for an attack on Bosnian Serb settlements. See D2387 (Witness statement of Stojan Džino dated 4 November 2012), para. 14.

⁷⁴⁴⁶ The Chamber notes that according to KDZ041, the shelling of Ahatovići commenced sometime between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. whereas according to the statement of Ramiz Mujkić, it began at 3 p.m.. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 17 (under seal); P2314 (Witness statement of Ramiz Mujkić dated 4 February 2011), para. 26. However, the Chamber finds that this discrepancy is not so serious that it would adversely affect the credibility and reliability of either witness.

several houses in the centre of the village.⁷⁴⁴⁹ On 31 May, pursuant to the instructions of Fikret Mujkić, a member of the Ahatovići Crisis Staff, a group of villagers left for Bioča in order to meet two TO platoons from Visoko that were sent to facilitate the withdrawal of the villagers.⁷⁴⁵⁰ Ramiz Mujkić was chosen to be a part of this group but did not manage to meet up with them and instead returned to Ahatovići on 3 June.⁷⁴⁵¹ The shelling lasted until 1 or 2 June 1992, resulting in destruction of, and damage to, nearly 130 houses in Ahatovići and the death of 15 to 20 Bosnian Muslims.⁷⁴⁵²

2186. After the shelling stopped, Tintor as well as the local Serbs and members of paramilitary groups⁷⁴⁵³ mounted an infantry attack against Ahatovići.⁷⁴⁵⁴ During this infantry attack, about 20 Bosnian Muslim men were killed.⁷⁴⁵⁵ Subsequently, about 30 Bosnian Muslim villagers, including KDZ041, who had run out of ammunition decided to break through enemy lines and escape towards Visoko but were eventually hit by artillery fire.⁷⁴⁵⁶ In that instance, four Bosnian Muslim men were killed whereas a number of others, including KDZ041, were wounded.⁷⁴⁵⁷ Soon after, Tintor, the local Serbs, and paramilitaries entered Ahatovići with APCs and tanks.⁷⁴⁵⁸ Sometime during the shelling or the infantry attack, Ramiz Mujkić's younger sister and her daughter Elma

⁷⁴⁵³ While KDZ041 testified that he saw men in JNA uniforms with white armbands and headbands and that those were members of the White Eagles, KDZ601 testified that the attack involved members of the “Oljača group of Chetniks” and that they were reinforced by VRS and MUP forces. See P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 23 (under seal); KDZ601, T. 18588–18589 (8 September 2011). The Chamber also notes that it has received other evidence showing the participation of paramilitaries in this attack. For example, on 5 August 1992, the head of Ilidža Serb SJB lamented that the commander of the Ilidža Brigade had excluded “militia” from joint meals even though those forces had partaken in many combat activities such as those in Hadžići, Rakovica, Ahatovići and Dobrinja. P6639 (SJB Ilidža information, 5 August 1992), p. 6. On the basis of the foregoing evidence, the Chamber finds that paramilitaries took part in the attack against Ahatovići.

Bešić who was only 15 years old at the time, were also killed.⁷⁴⁵⁹ Subsequently, houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims were looted and set ablaze.⁷⁴⁶⁰ The Serbs captured about 400 women and children and 80 men, in addition to the 150 women and children who had been captured in Dobroševići, Bojnik, and Mihaljevići prior to the attack on Ahatovići.⁷⁴⁶¹ Those captured in Ahatovići were subsequently taken in the direction of Rajlovac.⁷⁴⁶² The attack was completed and Ahatovići came under Bosnian Serb control by 3 June 1992.⁷⁴⁶³

2187. On 5 June 1992, Mijatović, from the Rajlovac Municipal Assembly, informed Nedeljko Prstojević, the president of the Ilidža Crisis Staff⁷⁴⁶⁴ that Ahatovići was no longer a threat.⁷⁴⁶⁵ Following a request signed by the Accused and dated 19 July 1992, houses that were not destroyed in Ahatovići were provided to the Serb refugees from the Muslim part of Sarajevo.⁷⁴⁶⁶

2188. In a 1993 report, Tihomir Glavaš, the Chief of the SJB Hadžići referred to the success of the 1 June 1992 military attack against Ahatovići launched by forces under his command and stated that as a result of the attack, the territories of Butile and Rajlovac had been unified.⁷⁴⁶⁷

(D) Scheduled Incident A.9.1

were taken to a nearby road and made to sit.⁷⁴⁷¹ Koprivica and Arnautović then proceeded to shoot the 15 remaining men who were unable to walk, killing them all.⁷⁴⁷² At that point, Tintor, armed with a pistol and an automatic rifle and wearing a JNA uniform, along with a number of paramilitaries, appeared on the scene.⁷⁴⁷³ Tintor then ordered that the men be lined up in pairs and taken to the Butile Barracks.⁷⁴⁷⁴

Contrary to this evidence, Džino stated that the 15 Bosnian Muslim men were combatants who were killed during combat. D2387 (Witness statement of Stojan Džino dated 4 November 2012). The Chamber, however, does not accept Džino’s evidence for the following reasons. First, KDZ041 gave reliable and detailed evidence of the executions of the 15 captured Bosnian Muslim men which he witnessed. Second, the Chamber found Džino’s evidence to be generally marked with contradictions.

On 3 June 1992, Ramiz Mujkić returned to Ahatovići and while moving through the village, was shot at. He escaped to the woods where he met Huso Gačanović and the two of them proceeded towards the forest known as Ptičija Glava, where they stayed until they were captured on 6 August 1992. These 25 individuals are Elma Bešić (female, 1976), Razija Bešić (male, 1953), Džemail Bukalo (male, 1959), Mesud Burić (male, 1965), Admir Čaušević (male, 1972), Osman Čaušević (male, 1948), Elvedin Đedović (male, 1975), Hamid Divolić (male, 1950), Osman Evendić (male, 1954), Avdo Gačanović (male, 1944), Hamid Gačanović (male, 1952), Šerifa Hrustanović (female, 1942), Ramiz Hrvačić (male, 1950), Vahid Ligata (male, 1966), Nihad Mešanović (male, 1970), Samir Mujkić (male, 1966), Ajša Novalija (female, 1951), Šaban Peljto (male, 1969), Meho Rizvanović (male, 1966), Jusuf Suljić (male, 1961), Nijaz Šehović (male, 1962), Nihad Tokmo (male, 1970), Ahmo Uhot (male, 1951), Bećir Žiga (male, 1953) and Meho Žiga (male, 1930). In P4853, the name Šerifa Hrustanović appears twice, once as the daughter of Meho with 1942 as the year of birth and once as son of Jusuf with 1950 as the year of birth. However, in P4883 (Data on exhumations in the Sarajevo region in the period of 1996–1998), p. 18, it is stated that Ramiz Hrvačić was born in 1950 and that his father’s first name was Jusuf. Having had regard to the name of father and the year of birth, the Chamber is satisfied that the second entry in P4853 was intended for Ramiz Hrvačić and not Šerifa Hrustanović. What is more, in P4883, the first name of Nijaz Šehović (male, 1962) is recorded as Nihaz. Nevertheless, the Chamber finds that this discrepancy is so minor that it does not have a bearing on the Chamber’s finding with respect to Scheduled Incident A.9.I. Also, in P4883 Džemail Bukalo’s first name is recorded as Džemal. However, the Chamber finds that this

2193. In light of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that, following the attack on Ahatovići, on or about 1 June 1992, the Serb Forces executed 15 Bosnian Muslim men who had surrendered.

(E) Scheduled Incident D.15

2194. The Indictment refers to the destruction of the Ahatovići mosque on or about 4 June 1992.⁷⁴⁷⁹

2195. The Chamber received evidence that a detonation destroyed the Ahatovići mosque, leaving only the stump of its minaret standing.⁷⁴⁸⁰ Stojan Džino testified that it happened on 4 June 1992, during the combat activities related to the attack on Ahatovići village, and that he observed the explosion from a distance.⁷⁴⁸¹ Džino heard rumours that the ammunitions and the explosives that had been stored in the mosque by Bosnian Muslims had been hit by a heavy-calibre weapon, thus causing a significant explosion which destroyed the entire mosque.⁷⁴⁸² Ramiz Mujkić denied that explosives were stored in the mosque.⁷⁴⁸³ Mujkić, moreover, testified that he returned to Ahatovići in the morning of 3 June 1992.⁷⁴⁸⁴ According to Mujkić, at that time, the Muslim houses were discrepancy is very minor. In P4883 Mesud Burić's first name appears as Mensud. The Chamber finds that this inconsistency is also very minor.

⁷⁴⁷⁷ The individuals identified by KDZ041 as victims of Scheduled Incident A.9.1 are Jusuf Suljić, Nihad Tokmo, Bećir Žiga and Meho Žiga. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), paras. 13, 26.

⁷⁴⁷⁸ These three individuals are Ešref Mujkić (male, 1938), Amir Novalija (male, 1965) and Vejsil Novalija (male, 1936). P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 13–14; Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G (Schedule A.9.1 section).

⁷⁴⁸¹ Stojan Džino, T. 29866–29867 (7 November 2012). However, contrary to Džino's assertion that there were combat activities in Ahatovići on 4 June 1992, the Chamber has received reliable documentary and testimonial evidence that on 3 June 1992, Serb Forces were in control of Ahatovići. See fn. 7484–7486.

being guarded by local Serbs and that for this reason he had to travel through the village via Serb houses.⁷⁴⁸⁵ The Chamber also notes that contrary to Džino's assertion that combat activities were still ongoing on 4 June 1992, a SerBiH MUP Report indicates that by 3 June 1992, Serb Forces had assumed control of Ahatovići.⁷⁴⁸⁶

2196. On the basis of the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the mosque in Ahatovići was destroyed due to a detonation on 4 June 1992 and that Serb Forces were responsible for causing the detonation which destroyed the mosque.

(F) Scheduled Detention Facility C.17.1 and Scheduled Incident B.12.1

there, the detainees were ordered to lie down on the grass where they were beaten with sticks and had a pair of dogs unleashed on them.⁷⁴⁹⁸ Some detainees were then put on a truck and taken to Orao where their wounds were bandaged.⁷⁴⁹⁹ Afterwards, they were taken back to Rajlovac Barracks and placed in a cistern or reservoir, which by that time housed approximately 90 detainees.⁷⁵⁰⁰ Adjoining this cistern was a bigger cistern, which housed approximately 130 Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Dobroševići, Mihaljevići, Bojnik, Kobiljska, and Bioča.⁷⁵⁰¹

2199. The two cisterns formerly belonged to “Energopetrol Company” and had not been used since 1985.⁷⁵⁰² They housed the male detainees.⁷⁵⁰³ Near the cisterns were two buildings which were the premises of “Tehnogas Company” and the Distribution Centre.⁷⁵⁰⁴

On the morning of 2 June 1992, Mile Stojanović arrived and introduced himself as the commander of the “camp”.⁷⁵⁰⁵ He wore a blue uniform which, although very similar to the police uniform, did not have any insignia.⁷⁵⁰⁶ On that occasion, Stojanović was accompanied by an individual named Šok and four others.⁷⁵⁰⁷ Šok wore the same blue uniform and also had a Yugoslav flag sewn onto his shirt.⁷⁵⁰⁸ Stojanović then asked the detainees for their identification cards and made a list of their names,⁷⁵⁰⁹ while Šok asked them about the weapons they had used and the nature of their duties.⁷⁵¹⁰ Šok also inquired whether Hasan Mujkić, Husein Mujkić, and Meho Novalija, who were SDA political leaders, had been present during the attack on Ahatovići.⁷⁵¹¹ After the prisoners were registered, Šok and his four men took two Bosnian Muslim men out of the cistern and beat them while questioning them about the weapons they used.⁷⁵¹² When Stojanović returned on the same day, he saw the bruises on the men and promised that it would not happen again.⁷⁵¹³ Stojanović then indicated that there would be two prisoner exchanges, one involving women and children and the other at Kobilja Glava, involving the prisoners from the smaller cistern.⁷⁵¹⁴ Despite Stojanović's pledge, however, on a nearly daily basis Šok took two or three prisoners in front of the cisterns and subjected them to beatings.⁷⁵¹⁵ On one occasion, he and his men took out two men, beat them and broke the latter's arms.⁷⁵¹⁶

2201. Due to the deposit of rainwater in the cisterns, the detainees were forced to stand for the entire duration of their detention.⁷⁵¹⁷ They received no food or water during the first three days of their detention and afterwards received very little food and water.⁷⁵¹⁸ On or about 3 June 1992, Šok forced a number of prisoners who did not have visible signs of injury to appear before a Serb television crew and state that they were being treated well.⁷⁵¹⁹

2202. During the first week of June 1992, three new prisoners, namely Hajro Delić, his son, and Džemail Sačić were brought to the smaller cistern.⁷⁵²⁰ A few days into his detention, Delić was taken away and brought back the following day, severely injured.⁷⁵²¹ He told the other prisoners that he had been severely beaten and abused by Šok on orders from Nikola Stanišić and that during the questioning, Stanišić had asked for one million German Marks as the price for releasing him.⁷⁵²² Soon after that, Delić succumbed to his injuries and died.⁷⁵²³

2203. On two occasions, a man by the name of Žuti who was rumoured to be Tintor's chauffeur and a former "member of the Special Forces of Dragan Vikić" came to the smaller cistern, called out the names of a number of prisoners, indicating that they were to be taken for exchange in Ilidža.⁷⁵²⁴ None of these individuals have since been seen alive and KDZ041 heard that the remains of some of them were found at the Vlakovo city cemetery.⁷⁵²⁵

2204. On one occasion, Žuti approached one of the cisterns and threw in a gas grenade.⁷⁵²⁶ Immediately after Žuti had left, one of the guards opened the door to the cistern so that the prisoners could come out for fresh air.⁷⁵²⁷

2205. Between 1 and 14 June 1992, Stojanović, Šok, and other members of the special unit accompanied a man to one of the cisterns; this man then pointed out Enver Čelik, alleging that Čelik had abused his sister.⁷⁵²⁸ Šok and the other men took Čelik behind the cisterns, hanged him by his arms and killed him by hitting him twice in the back with iron bars.⁷⁵²⁹

2206. On 12 June 1992, the prisoners from the smaller cistern were told that they would be taken to Kobilja Glava, in order to be exchanged.⁷⁵³⁰ The next day, Stojanović called the names of 56 individuals and instructed them to board two trucks.⁷⁵³¹ The two trucks travelled to a police station in Sokolac, then to the Koran Barracks, on to Rogatica, and finally to Pale, where they stopped near the Panorama Hotel.⁷⁵³² At about 6 p.m., the trucks returned to Rajlovac.⁷⁵³³ At that point, the larger cistern was empty as the people detained there had been exchanged on that day so the 56 detainees were placed there.⁷⁵³⁴ On 14 June 1992, Hamo Karić, whose injuries had become infected, was taken out of the cistern in order to be exchanged.⁷⁵³⁵

2207. During the course of their respective cross-examinations, Stojan Džino and Mihajlo Vujasin both conceded that the civilians from Ahatovići had been taken to the Rajlovac Barracks and detained.⁷⁵³⁶ Vujasin even admitted that a few of the Bosnian Muslims were subjected to beatings there and that he had risked his life when ensuring that the detainees were not harmed by “certain individuals”.⁷⁵³⁷

2208. Between 9 and 18 June 1997, the remains of nine Bosnian Muslim men were exhumed from the Vlakovo cemetery in Ilidža municipality.⁷⁵³⁸ Out of those, six were identified by KDZ041 as having been killed during their detention in the cisterns.⁷⁵³⁹ According to Amor Mašović, with the exception of Edin Brajlović who was recorded as last seen alive on 17 June 1992 in Ahatovići, all these individuals were last seen alive on 1 or 2 June 1992 in Ahatovići.⁷⁵⁴⁰ The forensic evidence establishes the cause of death of seven of the nine victims as either gunshot to the head, gunshot to ⁷⁵³⁸ These nine individuals are Imer Bajramović (male, 1950), Edin Brajlović (male, 1963), Zajko Brajlović (male, 1939), Zijad Brajlović (male, 1962), Refik Džaferović (male, 1955), Džemal Efendić (male, 1958), Amir Habibović (male, 1955), Rusmir Pašić (male, 1969) and Kadrija Ramadani (male, 1933). P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 86–87; P4883 (Data on exhumations in the Sarajevo region in the period of 1996–1998), p. 45; P4884 (Sarajevo Cantonal Court records relating to the Vlakovo Exhumation, 17 June 1997), pp. 8–9, 19–20, 41–42; P4850 (Witness statement of Amor Mašović dated 23 March 2012), Annex A, pp. 5–7; P4885 (Sarajevo Cantonal Court record of post-mortem examination of victims exhumed at Vlakovo, 25 August 1997), pp. 33–39. As regards the death of Edin Brajlović whose date of disappearance is indicated as 17 June 1992 in P4853, the Chamber has given consideration to the following facts. First, Edin Brajlović’s cause of death was established as gunshot wound to the head. Second, according to evidence, Žuti removed him and a number of individuals from the cisterns and none of these individuals ever returned. Third, the body of Edin Brajlović was discovered at the same location where the remains of the eight individuals killed by Serb Forces were found, that is, in the mass grave in Vlakovo cemetery in Ilidža municipality. Based on these considerations, the Chamber finds that the reference in P4853 to 17 June 1992 as the day Edin Brajlović was last seen alive must be erroneous.

⁷⁵³⁹ These six individuals are Edin Brajlović, Zajko Brajlović, Zijo Brajlović, Amir Habibović, Rusmir Pašić and Kadrija Ramadani. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 44 (under seal).

the chest cavity or injury to the head.⁷⁵⁴¹ In light of the foregoing evidence, the Chamber finds that all of these nine individuals were killed, while detained in two cisterns near the Rajlovac Army Barracks some time during the first half of June 1992.

2209. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that two reservoirs or cisterns near the Rajlovac Barracks had been turned into makeshift prisons for the male detainees and that the men detained there were given very little food and water and were forced to stand for the duration of their captivity. Further, the Chamber finds that the guards at this makeshift detention facility routinely subjected the male detainees to interrogations and beatings. The Chamber notes that some of the men, including KDZ041, were combatants prior to their detention.⁷⁵⁴²

2210. The Chamber also finds that sometime during the first week of June 1992, Serb Forces killed two Bosnian Muslim detainees in or near the cisterns⁷⁵⁴³ and that sometime during the first half of June 1992, Serb Forces removed nine Bosnian Muslim men from the cisterns in the Rajlovac Barracks and subsequently killed them.⁷⁵⁴⁴

(G) Scheduled Incident B.12.2

2211. The Indictment alleges that at least 47 men were taken from the cisterns and killed near Srednje in Ilijaš municipality on or about 14 June 1992.

order to fit into the bus.⁷⁵⁴⁷ Žuti drove the bus while two guards watched the detainees.⁷⁵⁴⁸ Four cars containing members of what KDZ041 referred to as “Special Police Forces” were escorting the bus, two in the front, and two behind the bus.⁷⁵⁴⁹ The bus then drove to a barricade near Srednje where Žuti asked for directions to the village of Sokolina.⁷⁵⁵⁰ By this time, the two cars which had been travelling behind the bus had disappeared.⁷⁵⁵¹ Žuti proceeded to drive the bus for another ten minutes before stopping near the separation line.⁷⁵⁵²

2214. The four remaining survivors walked all night and eventually made their way to Vukašovići, a village under the control of Bosnian Muslim TO.⁷⁵⁶⁰ The residents of Vukašovići, along with the Bosnian Muslim TO, then went to the scene in order to pull the dead bodies from the bus and, while at the scene, discovered another two survivors.⁷⁵⁶¹ In addition, two more survivors were later found in the village of Palanka.⁷⁵⁶²

2215. The dead bodies were eventually removed from the bus, while the burned and damaged bus was filmed by a certain Ibrahim.⁷⁵⁶³ Towards the end of the removal, a number of VRS members, headed by Dragan Ikanović, who was from Srednje and who was allegedly a commander of Serb police,⁷⁵⁶⁴ appeared at the scene accompanied by two trucks in order to tow the bus.⁷⁵⁶⁵ Ikanović and his men were told to leave.⁷⁵⁶⁶ Members of the Bosnian Muslim TO then used tractors to take the bodies to the village of Ravne, in Ilijaš municipality, and buried them in a mass grave near that village.⁷⁵⁶⁷ Before the burial, the survivors of the attack managed to identify 40 out of the 47 individuals who had been killed on the bus.⁷⁵⁶⁸ A few days later, Ikanović and his men came back and set the bus on fire.⁷⁵⁶⁹

⁷⁵⁶⁵ KDZ041, T. 12116, 12118 (17 February 2011). The Chamber is mindful that in his witness statement, KDZ041 stated that “[w]hen the villagers of [Vukašovići] reached the spot where the massacre had occurred, they found a Chetnik patrol there with two trucks”. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 55 (under seal). The Chamber however, does not find that this discrepancy is so acute that it would undermine the overall credibility of KDZ041’s evidence with respect to Scheduled Incident B.12.2.

2216. The remains of 47 Bosnian Muslim men were exhumed from a mass grave in the village of Ravne on 24–26 June 1996.⁷⁵⁷⁰ According to Amor Mašović, each of these 47 individuals was recorded as last seen in either Ahatovići or Dobroševići on 1 June 1992.⁷⁵⁷¹

⁷⁵⁶⁸ KDZ041, T. 12078 (17 February 2011); P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), paras. 58–59 (under seal). According to Ramiz Mujkić, his sister's husband and her son who was almost 21 years old were both killed during the attack on the bus on or about 14 June 1992. Ramiz Mujkić stated, moreover, that 13 individuals with the last name Mujkić were killed in the incident. Mujkić added that Zaim Rizvanović who was the fifth son in his family survived the bus incident whereas his four brothers died. P2314 (Witness statement of Ramiz Mujkić dated 4 February 2011), para. 49.

⁷⁵⁷⁰ These 47 individuals are Hamid Adilović (male, 1951), Meho Bašić (male, 1944), Salem Bečić (male, 1945), Ahmilo Bečković (male, 1967), Fadil Bečković (male, 1968), Nusret Bečković (male, 1972), Edin Bešić (male, 1971), Šućrija Bešić (male, 1949), Ibrahim Boloban (male, 1929), Amir Duraković (male, 1960), Jusuf Džuho (male 1949), Alija Gačanović (male, 1949), Čazim Gačanović (male, 1955), Mufid Gačanović (male 1968), Mujo Gačanović (male, 1929), Mustafa Gačanović (male, 1959), Nedžib Gačanović (male, 1952), Samir Hrustanović (male, 1966), Ejub Kalkan (male, 1935), Ale Mehmedović (male, 1956), Nedžad Mešanović (male, 1970), Midhat Muharemović (male 1958), Armin Mujkić (male, 1968), Eldin Mujkić (male, 1974), Emir Mujkić (male, 1973), Fikret Mujkić (male, 1956), Hemed Mujkić (male, 1936), Mirsad Mujkić (male, 1958), Muhamed Mujkić (male, 1949), Refik Mujkić (male, 1952), Salem Mujkić (male, 1952), Šaćir Mujkić (male, 1963), Uzeir Mujkić (male, 1935), Zijad Mujkić (male, 1973), Ramiz Novalija (male, 1946), Ramiz Peljto (male, 1968), Ismet Rizvanović (male, 1958), Izet Rizvanović (male, 1960), Mehmed Rizvanović (male, 1961), Nedžad Rizvanović (male, 1972), Sulejman Rizvanović (male, 1945), Enes Suljić (male, 1950), Enver Suljić (male, 1952), Muhamed Suljić (male, 1936), Salih Suljić (male, 1934), Suad Suljić (male, 1972), and Ramiz Ušto (male, 1972). P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 87–89; P4883 (Data on exhumations in the Sarajevo region in the period of 1996–1998), pp. 32–34. In P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 88, reference is made to Midhat Muharemović, born on 1958 and son of Murat. However, in P4883 (Data on exhumations in the Sarajevo region in the period of 1996–1998), p. 32, reference is made to Fikret Muharemović, born in 1958 and son of Murat. Having had regard to the name of father and the year of birth, as well as the fact that KDZ041 mentions the name Midhat Muharemović, the Chamber is satisfied that the correct first name of the victim in question is in fact Midhat and not Fikret. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), p. 59 (under seal).

⁷⁵⁷¹ P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 87–89. The Chamber notes that there are some discrepancies between the forensic evidence and the evidence of KDZ041 as regards the names of some of the victims of Scheduled Incident B.12.2. More specifically, KDZ041's witness statement contains references to Meho Pašić, Salem Bešić, Ahmed Bečković, Šućro Bečić, Samir Hrustenmović, Almir Mujkić, Edmir Mujkić, Mehmed Mujkić, Šaćir Mujić, Ismet Rizvan, Nedžad Rizvan, and Sulejman Rizvan. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 59 (under seal). By contrast, in the forensic reports of BiH authorities dealing with exhumation and identification of victims, the names of these individuals are recorded as Meho Bašić, Salem Bečić, Ahmilo Bečković, Šućrija Bešić, Samir Hrustemović, Armin Mujkić, Emir Mujkić, Hemed Mujkić, Šaćir Mujkić, Ismet Rizvanović, Nedžad Rizvanović and Sulejman Rizvanović. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 88–89; P4883 (Data on exhumations in the Sarajevo region in the period of 1996–1998), pp. 32–34. However, the Chamber considers these inconsistencies to be minor and accordingly concludes that these are in fact the same individuals. Further, KDZ041's witness statement contains references to four persons who are not listed in the above-mentioned forensic reports, i.e., Nazif Mujkić, Safet Rizvan, Vahid Rizvan, and Nijaz Tiro. P2310 (Witness statement of KDZ041 dated 14 February 2011), para. 59 (under seal). Similarly, the forensic reports refer to 11 individuals who are not mentioned in the witness statement of KDZ041, i.e., Hamid Adilović, Fadil Bečković, Nusret Bečković, Ibrahim Boloban, Jusuf Džuho, Ale Mehmedović, Nedžad Mešanović, Ramiz Peljto, Izet Rizvanović, Mehmed Rizvanović, and Ramiz Ušto. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 88–89; P4883 (Data on exhumations in the Sarajevo region in the period of 1996–1998), pp. 32–34. Having considered these inconsistencies, the Chamber does not consider them to be of significance, as it is satisfied, as will be seen below, that 47 men indeed died in this incident.

2217. The Accused contends that due to conflicting evidence it is impossible to properly ascertain the identity of the perpetrators who carried out the attack on the bus.⁷⁵⁷² He submits that there is evidence that tends to show, on the one hand, that Boro Radić—a man who frequently acted without orders and who was psychologically unstable—had organised the attack, and on the other hand, that the attack had been carried out by Brne’s group—a paramilitary unit led by Branislav Gavrilović, which the Bosnian Serb authorities tried to disband or even liquidate because of their criminal activities and substance abuse.⁷⁵⁷³ Finally, the Accused argues that there is also evidence which indicates that the attack on the bus was carried out by Bosnian Muslims who erroneously thought that the bus was filled with Serbs.⁷⁵⁷⁴

2218. The Chamber will now identify and analyse the relevant evidence which implicates Bosnian Serb forces in the attack on the bus and examine whether there are inconsistencies in such evidence: (i) KDZ041 testified that he heard that the “main organisers” of the attack on the bus were Boro Radić, Dragan Ikanović, and Ratko Adžić;⁷⁵⁷⁵ (ii) Eset Muračević, a Bosnian Muslim who was detained in Vogošća municipality in the second half of 1992, stated that he had heard from a fellow detainee that a Serb prison guard by the name Predrag Žarković, alias Božur, was “[a]mong the group of Chetniks” who carried out the attack on the bus;⁷⁵⁷⁶ and (iii) KDZ601 testified that [REDACTED], he heard [REDACTED] that Branislav Gavrilović from Vučija Luka and his unit had “hit” the bus with Zoljas.⁷⁵⁷⁷

2219. The Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, does not consider that the evidence of KDZ041 contradicts the evidence of Muračević on this issue because Muračević simply stated that Žarković was among the group of Chetniks who carried out the attack on the bus; he did not claim that Žarković was a main organiser of the attack. The Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, is also satisfied that the evidence of KDZ601 is not in conflict with the evidence of KDZ041 on this question because KDZ601 did not testify that Gavrilović and his men were the main organisers of

The Chamber received evidence that Branislav Gavrilović was known and referred to by the municipal authorities of Ilidža as the commander of all SAO Romanija volunteer units. P2302 (Approval of the War Board of Commissioners of Ilidža Municipality, 9 July 1992); Neđeljko Prstojević, T. 12988 (8 March 2011). Witness Velimir Dunjić stated that the unit of Branislav Gavrilović was in the zone of responsibility of the attack. Similarly, the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, is of opinion that the evidence of KDZ601 does not contradict the evidence of Eset Muračević because Muračević merely spoke of one of the participants in the attack. In light of the foregoing, the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, is of the view that there is no conflict in the evidence of these witnesses on the question of the identity of the perpetrators of the bus attack.

2220. The Chamber will now assess the evidence in light of the Accused's argument that the bus was attacked by Bosnian Muslims who mistakenly thought that it was filled with Serbs.⁷⁵⁷⁸ There is indeed evidence that Mirko Krajišnik informed Momčilo Krajišnik that Muslims had intercepted a bus carrying detained Muslims and, mistaking the occupants of the bus for Serbs, had opened fire on the bus, killing all the detainees and heavily wounding two Serb guards.⁷⁵⁷⁹

2221. However, there is also evidence that Momčilo Krajišnik gave instructions to the Bosnian Serbs in Rajlovac that nothing should happen to the Bosnian Muslim men detained there. More specifically, on 8 June 1992, Momčilo Krajišnik informed a certain Mijatović in Rajlovac that his brother Mirko had told him "about problems with these captured men", and stated that nothing should be done which would be wrong or outside of the rules.⁷⁵⁸⁰ He also told Mijatović that he was ready to help find a solution.⁷⁵⁸¹ Krajišnik reiterated his position to another interlocutor in the same conversation, emphasising that nothing should be done to the men.⁷⁵⁸²

2222. In this regard, the Chamber notes that Mirko Krajišnik himself was involved in dealing with the detainees at the Rajlovac Barracks. This was brought out by Ramiz Mujkić, who testified that, on the morning of 7 August 1992 while he was detained at the Rajlovac Barracks, Mirko Krajišnik and others visited him in his cell, and enquired about the whereabouts of Hasan Mujkić and his brother Husein, the witness's son Elvir Mujkić, and a person named Junuz Mujkić.⁷⁵⁸³ Ramiz

The Chamber does not accept the Accused's assertion that since witness Ramiz Mujkić had failed to mention the visit by Vlasto Apostolski, Nikola Poplašen, and Mirko Krajišnik in his previous statements, his evidence on the same should necessarily be ignored by this Chamber. The Chamber has received evidence which corroborates Mujkić's account of the visit by Mirko Krajišnik. On 20 August 1992, during an intercepted telephone conversation, Bakir Alispahić informed Mirko Krajišnik that a person by the name Nikola had paid a visit to Ramiz Mujkić and asked whether Krajišnik could arrange for Mujkić's release. Although Krajišnik did not

Mujkić further testified that on 22 August 1992, Stojanović and two other members of the MP took him from the Žica Hospital in Blažuj to Planjo's House in Svrače.⁷⁵⁸⁴ According to Ramiz Mujkić, Mirko Krajišnik subsequently intervened in order to have him exchanged.⁷⁵⁸⁵

2223. The Chamber also notes that on 20 June 1992 in an intercepted conversation, Mirko Krajišnik informed two individuals with the names Ćamil and Šemso that 284 prisoners from the cisterns near the Rajlovac Barracks had been exchanged whereas 50 additional prisoners had been sent home.⁷⁵⁸⁶ During the same conversation, Mirko Krajišnik, referring to the group of 50 prisoners, told Šemso that there were people with the last name Gaćanović amongst them and added “[y]ou heard that there were some casualties among them.”⁷⁵⁸⁷

2224. An engaging feature about this conversation, in which Mirko Krajišnik told Šemso, a Bosnian Muslim, that 50 detainees were sent home and that there were some casualties amongst them, was that at no stage did Mirko Krajišnik mention that Muslims were to blame for the casualties. The Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, is of the view that had Bosnian Muslims in fact been responsible for the attack on the bus, Mirko Krajišnik would have raised the matter with Šemso in that conversation which occurred less than a week after the bus attack.

2225. The evidence described in the foregoing paragraphs, when taken together, leads the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, to conclude that Mirko Krajišnik deliberately provided Momčilo Krajišnik with misinformation on what had become of those Muslim detainees in respect of whose safety Momčilo Krajišnik had previously articulated his apprehensions.

2227. First, KDZ041 stated that just before the attack, the two escort cars behind the bus left the scene; thereafter, Žuti claimed that the engine of the bus had overheated, and along with the guards left the bus. Merely 10 to 15 seconds after Žuti and the guards had left the bus, the attack on the bus commenced.⁷⁵⁸⁸ The Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, is of the view that had the attack been carried out by Bosnian Muslims, it would have been stretching coincidence past breaking point for them to have anticipated the precise time that the engine of the bus would have overheated and to have been in the right place at that exact time so that they could have sprung their ambush.⁷⁵⁸⁹

2228. Further, the evidence of KDZ041 is that he was face down in the bus and bodies were on top of him; he was therefore unable to see anything. KDZ041 testified that shortly after the shooting had stopped, he heard the engines of the escort cars start up and the cars drive off. He then heard two vehicles pull alongside the bus and two men discuss whether they should check for survivors. According to KDZ041, these two men did not enter the bus and instead got into their vehicles and left the scene.⁷⁵⁹⁰ It is clear to the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, that notwithstanding his inability to see during and immediately after the attack, KDZ041 heard what was happening around him. The Chamber assessed KDZ041 to be a credible and reliable witness and accordingly, found no good reason to reject his evidence about the things he said he heard.

2229. The Chamber also heard from KDZ041 that the residents of the Muslim village of Vukašovići and the Bosnian Muslim TO went to the scene and removed the bodies from the bus; that towards the end of the removal process, a number of VRS soldiers headed by Dragan Ikanović appeared on the scene with two trucks in order to tow the bus away; and that they were told to leave. The Chamber also heard from KDZ041 that a few days later, Ikanović and his men returned and set the bus on fire.⁷⁵⁹¹ The Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, cannot comprehend the inordinate interest displayed by Ikanović and the VRS members in that bus, although allegedly it had been attacked by Muslims, to the extent they were bent on towing it away; and after that attempt failed, they returned and destroyed it a few days later. The actions of Ikanović and the VRS members impel the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, to the conclusion that they manifestly sought to destroy the important evidence of the large killing incident. Their actions would have made no sense if the attack had been carried out by the Bosnian Muslim forces.

2230. Finally, the Chamber must also address the evidence of KDZ601. In the opinion of the Chamber, KDZ601, [REDACTED], evinced pronounced bias in favour of the Accused during cross examination.⁷⁵⁹² In the throes of this bias, however, he implicated Serb paramilitaries in the attack, leaving the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting, with the abiding impression that he was being forthright with the Chamber in this respect.

⁷⁵⁸⁸ See paras. 2212–2213.

⁷⁵⁸⁹ For this reason, the Chamber finds that Žuti and the guards were involved in the attack on the bus, although it is possible that they were not the main organisers of the attack as they could have found easier ways to kill the Bosnian Muslim men.

⁷⁵⁹⁰ See paras. 2212–2213.

2231. In conclusion, having found (i) that there is no inconsistency in the evidence of witnesses on the question of the identity of the perpetrators of the bus attack; (ii) that the evidence of KDZ041 is reliable; (iii) that the initial attempt by Ikanović and the VRS members to tow the bus away and then their ultimate destruction of the bus is indicative of a determination on their part to destroy the evidence of the killing; (iv) that Mirko Krajišnik deliberately misinformed Momčilo Krajišnik; and (v) that KDZ061 testified with forthrightness when he described the involvement of Serb paramilitaries in the attack on the bus, the Chamber, Judge Morrison dissenting is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that on 14 June 1992, Serb Forces, including Žuti, other guards, and paramilitaries, attacked a bus filled with Bosnian Muslim male detainees with grenades and automatic weapons, and killed 47 Bosnian Muslim men.

(H) Movement of the population from Novi Grad

2232. Bosnian Muslims and Croats left the Novi Grad municipality en masse during the conflict. During a conversation that took place on 21 May 1992 between Colonel Milosav Gagović, Acting Commander of the JNA 4th Corps Sarajevo,⁷⁵⁹³ and Neđeljko Prstojević, the former informed the latter that Muslims were fleeing Dobrinja and that he had taken measures to ensure that they knew that only entire families would be allowed to leave the area.⁷⁵⁹⁴

the women and children”, reveals an intention on the part of the Executive Board to confine them in the new part of the Tehnogas-Kiskana building.⁷⁵⁹⁷

2236. The Accused claims that after the take-over of Ahatovići, a number of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat families wished to be taken to Sarajevo whereas some individuals remained throughout the entire war and even joined the VRS on a voluntary basis.⁷⁶⁰³ The Accused brought Stojan Džino and Mihajlo Vujasin, the deputy commander of the Rajlovac Brigade, to testify that the movement of population was voluntary.⁷⁶⁰⁴ However, the Chamber found both witnesses to be evasive, biased and partisan. The Chamber notes, as it did earlier,⁷⁶⁰⁵ that despite their evasiveness, both Stojan Džino and Mihajlo Vujasin conceded that civilians from Ahatovići had been taken to the Rajlovac Barracks and kept there against their will. The Chamber also recalls the evidence of Vujasin about the beatings of the civilians from Ahatovići and the surrounding areas and the dangers that they were exposed to.⁷⁶⁰⁶ The Chamber, further, notes the evidence concerning lootings and destruction of property.⁷⁶⁰⁷ The Chamber also recalls its earlier findings regarding the Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Novo Sarajevo by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include: (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over as well as in the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks in Lukavica, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷⁶¹² (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence during and after the take-over as cruel and inhumane treatment;⁷⁶¹³ (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷⁶¹⁴ (iv) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁷⁶¹⁵ (v) unlawful detention in the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks;⁷⁶¹⁶ (vi) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;⁷⁶¹⁷ (vii) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention, and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;⁷⁶¹⁸ (viii) the wanton destruction of private property, including homes and business premises, and public property;⁷⁶¹⁹ and (ix) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁷⁶²⁰

2240. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁷⁶²¹ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Novo Sarajevo in which they had been lawfully present.⁷⁶²² It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear, while others were physically driven out.⁷⁶²³

(B) Lead-up

2241. Novo Sarajevo, one of the ten Sarajevo municipalities, is located in the eastern part of Sarajevo city between Novi Grad and Ilidža on one side and Centar, Stari Grad, and Pale on the other.⁷⁶²⁴ According to the 1991 census, the population of Novo Sarajevo comprised 95,089 people, among whom 35.7% were Bosnian Muslims, 34.6% were Bosnian Serbs, 15.9% were “Yugoslavs”, 9.3% were Bosnian Croats, and 4.6% were “others and unknown”.⁷⁶²⁵ The municipality included, inter alia, Grbavica, located south of the Miljacka River; Vraca, located 600 to 800 metres to the southwest of Grbavica; Pofalići in the north part of the municipality; and Lukavica in the southwest part of the municipality.⁷⁶²⁶

The restrictive and discriminatory measures alleged include the denial of freedom of movement; the removal from positions of authority; the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes; unlawful arrest and/or the denial of the right to judicial process; and/or the denial of equal access to public services.

Nešković attended the meeting of the SDS Main and Executive Boards on 20 December 1991 where the Variant A/B Instructions were recipients were Serb municipal presidents and representatives as well as possibly SDS municipal board officials.⁷⁶³⁵ The Crisis Staff included SDS members of the municipal assembly of Novo Sarajevo.⁷⁶³⁶

2246. Around February 1992 the Accused and Krajišnik were involved in resolving an internal conflict in Novo Sarajevo.⁷⁶³⁷ The Accused and Krajišnik attended at least one meeting of the Novo Sarajevo SDS Municipal Board.⁷⁶³⁸ The record of the 28 February 1992 meeting of the Novo Sarajevo SDS Municipal Board also indicates that the Accused and Krajišnik were to be notified of the decision taken at the meeting to designate the vice president of the Board to carry out the work of the president of the Board, from which Prijić had been relieved, until a new president was elected.⁷⁶³⁹

2247. On 26 March 1992, SDS deputies of Novo Sarajevo, the presidents of SDS town boards, and deputies of the Sarajevo SDS passed a decision to establish the Serb Municipal Assembly of Krajišnik*), T. 16652–16653. As to whether Novo Sarajevo fell under Variant A or Variant B, Nešković initially thought that Variant B applied to Novo Sarajevo but later stated, based on the tasks assigned in P2575, that Variant A was implemented in the municipality. Radomir Nešković, P2568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 16662–16666; Radomir Nešković, T. 14352–14354 (7 June 2011). Some Defence witnesses from Novo Sarajevo stated that they were not familiar with the Variant A/B Instructions. D2651 (Witness statement of Milorad Katić dated 10 December 2012), para. 2; Branko Radan, T. 31104–31105, 31135–31136 (6 December 2012); Dragan Šojić, T. 31754 (19 December 2012); D2673 (Witness statement of Zdravko Šalipur dated 16 December 2012), para. 5; Zdravko Šalipur, T. 31628–31633 (18 December 2012) (nonetheless testifying that the Novo Sarajevo SDS Municipal Board received extracts of the Variant A/B Instructions). Considering other reliable evidence to the contrary, including Šalipur’s admission above, as well as the witnesses’ evasiveness and lack of forthrightness with respect to the existence and implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions in Novo Sarajevo, the Chamber does not find their evidence on this point to be reliable. Nešković testified that no one from the Government came to or contacted Novo Sarajevo to monitor the implementation of the Variant A/B Instructions in the municipality. Radomir Nešković, T. 14272–14273 (6 June 2011). While the Chamber considers Nešković’s evidence generally with regard to the Variant A/B Instructions to be reliable, the Chamber does not consider this testimony to contradict his or other evidence that the Variant A/B Instructions were carried out in Novo Sarajevo.

⁷⁶³⁷ There was a debate about the role of the SDS Municipal Board versus other municipal institutions, and a conflict emerged between Prijić, the president of the Municipal Board, and Đurović, the president of the Executive Board. 2248. Around 10 April 1992, Radomir Nešković and Mirko Šarović set up a new Crisis Staff.⁷⁶⁴² The Crisis Staff had an executive organ to carry out its decisions.⁷⁶⁴³ Nešković was president of this new Crisis Staff until 5 June 1992.⁷⁶⁴⁴ This Crisis Staff included representatives of the TO.⁷⁶⁴⁵ A 5 June 1992 letter reporting on the activities of the Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff, addressed to the President of the Bosnian Serb Presidency and signed by Nešković, stated: “The Crisis Staff has performed the function of Municipal Assembly in war conditions.”⁷⁶⁴⁶ The letter also indicated that the Crisis Staff co-ordinated and organised a variety of municipal services, including accommodation for “all refugees from the occupied territory and people who were left homeless”, mobilisation, and accommodation of fighters from other areas.⁷⁶⁴⁷ The letter stated that the Crisis Staff has not dealt with and does not intend to deal with police or military command-related matters

2253. On 1 or 2 March 1992, Serbs began to set up barricades at strategic points in Sarajevo and surrounding municipalities.⁷⁶⁶² Those involved in organising the barricades included Serb employees of the BiH MUP such as then-assistant Minister of Interior Momčilo Mandić, Milenko Jovanović, and SDS officials such as Rajko Dukić, Jovan Tintor, and Ratko Adžić.⁷⁶⁶³ In the area of Grbavica, there were barricades at the Vrbanja Bridge and Bratstvo-Jedinstvo Bridge.⁷⁶⁶⁴ Men wearing black masks were manning the barricades, and vehicles without license plates arrived every half hour with armed men inside.⁷⁶⁶⁵

On 4 April 1992, there were clashes between Serb and Muslim police forces at the BiH MUP school in Vraca.⁷⁶⁷⁸ After several hours of fighting Serb Forces placed the school under their control.⁷⁶⁷⁹ A few hours after the clashes, in Miljevići village in Vraca, a vehicle arrived from the military barracks in Lukavica⁷⁶⁸⁰ with automatic and semi-automatic weapons, which were distributed to local members of the TO and other people from the surrounding area.⁷⁶⁸¹ Weapons were also supplied from Pale.⁷⁶⁸²

also stated that those who did not report for mobilisation, in violation of the order, would be subject to the Law on Military Obligation and Military Court and their property would be confiscated.⁷⁶⁸⁴

2260. In a report of 5 June 1992, the Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff informed the President of the Bosnian Serb Presidency that it had mobilised about 900 people over the previous two months, including about 700 in the Lukavica and Tilava area and about 200 in Grbavica.⁷⁶⁸⁵

2261. Pursuant to an order of the SRK Command on 22 May 1992, the Novo Sarajevo TO comprising locals of Grbavica, Hrasno, Vrace, and Kovačići was organised into the SRK.⁷⁶⁸⁶

(C) Take-over

2262. Combat activity increased in late April 1992.⁷⁶⁸⁷ The Serb TO was engaged in Grbavica on 21 April 1992.⁷⁶⁸⁸ Garić requested additional men, and Prstojević, from Ilidža, prepared a platoon from Kasindol to assist.⁷⁶⁸⁹ JNA forces shelled Novo Sarajevo at the end of April 1992.⁷⁶⁹⁰ Fighting also took place in May 1992.⁷⁶⁹¹

2263. By mid-May, Grbavica was occupied by the Serbs, after an initiative by Serb Forces to move the confrontation line.⁷⁶⁹² The line was established on the bank of the Miljacka River, including by the Bratstvo-Jedinstvo Bridge and Vrbanja Bridge, extending west toward Hrasno and east toward Skenderija.⁷⁶⁹³ Serb Forces took Grbavica with little fighting.⁷⁶⁹⁴ After the Serb take-over of Grbavica, it became no longer possible to cross over the Miljacka River.⁷⁶⁹⁵

(1) Searches of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat houses

and was then beaten with rifle butts, punched, and kicked all over for about 15 to 20 minutes.⁷⁷⁰⁰ He was then transported, along with his neighbour Mirsad Dedić, in a military vehicle to the MUP school at Vrace.⁷⁷⁰¹ During the ride they were both beaten and one of the soldiers fired his unloaded automatic rifle three times into his temple; they were beaten again at the MUP school.⁷⁷⁰² Smajš, blindfolded and with his hands tied behind his back, was then transported, along with Dedić, to “Kula prison”.⁷⁷⁰³

2265. Other Bosnian Muslims in Grbavica were frequently subjected to house searches by members of Serb Forces.⁷⁷⁰⁴ All Muslims had been asked to voluntarily surrender their weapons and a Commander Major Petković had told those who did so that the VRS would not search their flats.⁷⁷⁰⁵

2266. The 5 June 1992 report of the Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff stated, in the section entitled “[t]reatment of Muslims and Croats”:

Citizens of all nationalities assemble frequently, especially in Grbavica, and our public attitude is very correct, we appoint a head of every building who is responsible for the situation in his building and for all the information about the occupants. Secretly, the police apply the usual procedure to people who were engaged in military activities against us. We informed the Muslims that they would be safe if they were militarily neutral to us, and so far the situation has been good.⁷⁷⁰⁶

⁷⁷⁰⁶ D885 (Letter from Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff to Radovan Karadžić, 5 June 1992), pp. 3–4. According to Nešković, who signed the report, if “any inhabitants” noticed, in their building, Muslims who did not surrender their weapons and acted against the VRS, they were required to report the fact to the civilian police and “then further police procedures would be implemented”, including arrest of the individual concerned. Radomir Nešković, P2568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 16715–16716. See also Radomir Nešković, T. 14288, 14292–14293 (6 June 2011). The Chamber accepts Nešković’s evidence with respect to his statement that Muslims were arrested. However, considering Nešković’s interest in casting the report and the actions of the Crisis Staff in a favourable light, the Chamber does not consider that Nešković was entirely forthright in his explanation of “the usual procedure”, applied “[s]ecretly”, to which the report refers. The Chamber will therefore not rely on this portion of Nešković’s evidence.

(2) Other acts

2267. Bosnian Muslims and Croats were forced to perform labour under the responsibility of VRS platoon or company commanders in Novo Sarajevo.⁷⁷⁰⁷ There were prisoners from Kula Prison in Ozrenska; there they had to dig trenches between the confrontation lines.⁷⁷⁰⁸ Several men were killed by sniper fire while performing these work duties.⁷⁷⁰⁹ Before the winter of 1992, detainees from Kula Prison were no longer brought to Ozrenska and they were replaced by “people from Grbavica”.⁷⁷¹⁰

Vladimir Lukić stated that there was “chaos” in Grbavica with the outbreak of conflict owing to “self-appointed individuals” like “Batak” mistreating individuals, regardless of their ethnicity. D3563 (Witness statement of Vladimir Lukić dated 18 May 2013), para. 7. In light of other evidence and considering the witness’s lack of candour on this point, the Chamber does not consider as reliable Lukić’s statement in relation thereto.

September 1992, tried to remove Batko and the others from the municipality.⁷⁷²⁴ Radan testified that “something could have been done earlier” to stop Batko’s crimes, before he was eventually removed from the municipality.⁷⁷²⁵ Nešković stated that he informed Šipčić about Batko and that Batko was arrested by Šipčić on several occasions but “somebody would always release him”.⁷⁷²⁶ Batko “terrorise[d]” the population for a period of months; the MP could have arrested him at any time and the prosecutor’s office could have tried him.⁷⁷²⁷ KDZ310 stated that no action was taken against Batko and that at some point he “disappeared” from Grbavica.⁷⁷²⁸ KDZ354 testified that she reported crimes committed by Batko to the Bosnian Serb MP in July 1992 but was not approached at any time by Bosnian Serb authorities regarding any investigation into the incident she reported.⁷⁷²⁹

2271. Republic-level leaders were also aware of the ongoing crimes by Batko and others. Vladimir Lukić stated that he spoke about the situation in Grbavica, though not about “Batak” specifically, with Koljević.⁷⁷³⁰ Nešković also stated that “the top leadership at Pale was told about Batko by Biljana Plavšić and it never yielded any results [...]”.⁷⁷³¹ Dobrislav Planojević, who worked in the MUP from 20 April 1992, stated that he heard about what Batko was doing and the absence of any reporting or investigation due to fear and that he informed Mićo Stanišić about this.⁷⁷³² He also informed Prime Minister Đerić in 1992 about problems with crime in the area and with Batko.⁷⁷³³

2272. On 20 October 1992, Defence Minister Bogdan Subotić proposed to the Accused the introduction of military rule in parts of the territory of RS, including the municipality of Novo Sarajevo.⁷⁷³⁴ Subotić set out as the causes for introduction of military rule “the fact that the political and security situation in some [RS] municipalities has become more tense due to the increasingly active paramilitary formations, quasi-state organs and institutions”, that legal state organs were not performing their duties in accordance with the Constitution and laws and with adopted defence goals, and that decisions by the Government and other state organs were not being respected.⁷⁷³⁵

2273. On 15 November 1992, at a meeting of the SRK Command where then-President of Novo Sarajevo Municipality, Milivoje Prijić, was present, it was noted that among the flaws of the operations was “genocide on other nations”.⁷⁷³⁶ The meeting also noted: “[t]he understanding and practice of individuals and groups that they are masters of life and death to every individual of different ethnicity, resulting in cases of unnecessary mistreatment and killing of members of other ethnicities, especially Muslims. Such people see the Geneva and other conventions as obsolete and unnecessary in this war.”⁷⁷³⁷ Prijić gave a speech about the situation in Novo Sarajevo in which he stated: “A great portion of soldiers is exercising unruly behaviour. Mass removals of property from the municipality, rape, expulsions from flats are going unpunished, affecting morale. Military police are consolidating but are still not strong enough.”⁷⁷³⁸

According to Radan, municipal leaders wanted to stop the crimes by VRS soldiers but lacked the capacity to do so and that they would have required co-operation from the army and the civilian and military police. Branko Radan, T. 31127 (6 December 2012). The Chamber notes Radan’s interest in distancing himself from responsibility for addressing the crimes and does not consider his evidence reliable in this regard. The Chamber also considered its broader assessment of the testimony that the witness was withholding information from the Chamber on certain points.

⁷⁷³⁹ Indictment, Scheduled Detention Facility C.18.1. However, the Prosecution in its Final Brief refers only to detention around 22 June 1992. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, p. 29.

2276. On 22 June 1992, around 9 p.m., approximately 280 men who had previously been detained in the garage of the Hadžići Municipal Assembly Building⁷⁷⁴² and in the Hadžići Culture and Sport centre⁷⁷⁴³ were placed on four buses and transferred to the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks in Lukavica.⁷⁷⁴⁴ The driver of one of the buses was Milan Ačimović.⁷⁷⁴⁵ The buses first went to Kula prison, in front of which two Serb individuals in camouflage uniforms got on the buses and started beating the detainees badly; these beatings resulted in head injuries.⁷⁷⁴⁶ One of the soldiers extinguished a cigarette butt on the face of one of the Bosnian Muslims.⁷⁷⁴⁷ The soldiers threw bullets among the detainees and said, “[h]ey, baliija, you have ammunition!”; they then used that as “a pretext” to beat the detainees.⁷⁷⁴⁸ The detainees were then taken to the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks in Lukavica.⁷⁷⁴⁹

2277. Upon arrival at the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks, the detainees exited the buses and were beaten by Serbs in uniforms as they made their way to the barracks.⁷⁷⁵⁰ Inside, the detainees were beaten with rifles, batons, and various objects when they went to the toilet or to get a drink of water.⁷⁷⁵¹ Some people chose not to go to the toilet because they did not want to be beaten on the way.⁷⁷⁵² All 280 of them were put in two empty rooms; as a result the rooms were very crowded.⁷⁷⁵³ During the first hours of detention, individual detainees were called out and beaten.⁷⁷⁵⁴ All 280 detainees were then taken to one room in another part of the barracks.⁷⁷⁵⁵ Subsequently, a man in uniform called out a list of 48 men.⁷⁷⁵⁶ Each of these men had to walk through a corridor with guards lined up on both sides and was beaten with various objects and kicked.⁷⁷⁵⁷ The guards swore at the detainees’ “balija” mothers.⁷⁷⁵⁸ One of the detainees, Mehmed Musić, saw his brother, covered in blood, lying on the ground and was told to carry him.⁷⁷⁵⁹ Musić carried his brother into the room at the end of the gauntlet as instructed and saw the other detainees who had been called out, lined up against three walls, and three officers at a desk in the middle of the room.⁷⁷⁶⁰ They asked Musić his name, his father’s name, and where he worked and “swore on [his] balija mother”, and one of them kicked him.⁷⁷⁶¹ One of the officers hit him and told him to get out, and as he went through the hallway, he was hit again.⁷⁷⁶² Musić returned to the previous room and has not seen any member of the group of 47 since.⁷⁷⁶³ Soldiers later came twice to beat the detainees.⁷⁷⁶⁴ They also made the detainees make the sign of the cross and sing Serb songs.⁷⁷⁶⁵

P2403 (Witness statement of Mehmed Musić dated 28 February 2011), para. 86; Mehmed Musić, T. 12870 (3 March 2011).

Later “regular JNA soldiers” came in and told the detainees to stop singing, said no one would touch them anymore, and brought them some food.⁷⁷⁶⁶

2278. The next day, the remaining approximately 233 men went back to the buses and were taken to Kula Prison.⁷⁷⁶⁷

2279. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that at the Lukavica barracks, detainees were forced to perform manual labour such as digging trenches and graves.⁷⁷⁶⁸ However, the Prosecution, for the period charged, did not provide evidence on forced labour at this detention facility or on detention other than in relation to the 280 non-Serb men for a few days in June 1992 discussed above.⁷⁷⁶⁹ The Chamber notes that the Prosecution itself limited its discussion of Scheduled Incident C.18.1 in the Final Brief to the detention and beatings of men from 22 June 1992.⁷⁷⁷⁰ The Chamber concludes that it does not have sufficient evidence on which to make a finding that detainees were forced to perform labour at the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks.

2280. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that individuals were detained at the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Barracks in Lukavica for a few days in June 1992. The Chamber further finds that detainees were beaten and that 48 detainees were forced to run through a gauntlet. The Chamber finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions, including a lack of adequate space and access to sanitation facilities and water.

However, as these events fall outside of the temporal scope for the Lukavica Barracks charged in the Indictment, the Chamber will not make a finding of forced labour at the Lukavica Barracks based thereon.

Muslims and Croats were expelled and forced to the other side of the Miljacka River.⁷⁷⁷² KDZ310 testified that he could see from the expressions of the people moving that they were not going of their own free will; people were crying and did not want to leave their property behind to be looted.⁷⁷⁷³ Serb soldiers were kicking and hitting the Bosnian Croats and Muslims.⁷⁷⁷⁴ Both soldiers and the civilian and MP took part in the expulsion of non-Serbs from Grbavica.⁷⁷⁷⁵

2282. Intimidation and threats were employed to impel people to leave.⁷⁷⁷⁶ KDZ079 stated that in early 1992 Serb soldiers would come, sometimes several times in one day, to the apartment where she lived with her husband and children, which made her and her family fear for their lives.⁷⁷⁷⁷ After her husband left to obtain food, Serb soldiers repeatedly came to the apartment asking for him and a photograph of him and his identity card.⁷⁷⁷⁸ The soldiers said they would take the witness and her daughter if her husband did not return.⁷⁷⁷⁹ Because Bosnian Croats and Muslims could not get bread and Serb soldiers were breaking into apartments and taking private possessions, on 26 May 1992 the witness, with her children, left the apartment and all their belongings.⁷⁷⁸⁰

2283. Soldiers entered buildings and made statements such as, “[i]n 10 minutes all Ustašas and Balijas out!”.⁷⁷⁸¹ In one instance where civilians were being expelled from Grbavica, KDZ310 talked to a platoon member who agreed to go to the MP headquarters to ask for an explanation for the expulsions but the member did not receive an answer.⁷⁷⁸²

2284. The 5 June 1992 report of the Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff to the Bosnian Serb Presidency stated that it had provided as accommodation “empty and deserted Croatian and Muslim flats” to fighters from other areas who had joined regular units.⁷⁷⁸³

2285. On 19 July 1992, the Accused sent a memorandum to several municipalities, including Novo Sarajevo, requesting an inventory of all housing facilities “that are vacant following the voluntary departure of Muslims”, explaining that vacant homes would be used to temporarily house Bosnian Serbs from the Muslim part of Sarajevo.⁷⁷⁸⁴

2286. A UN report from 30 September 1992 reported as confirmed that approximately 300 Bosnian Muslim civilians were expelled by Serbs that day from the area of Grbavica and had travelled on foot using one of two bridges, Vrbanja Bridge and a bridge behind the Bristol Hotel.⁷⁷⁸⁵ People were seen carrying bags and bundles, and armed soldiers, with rifles pointed in the air, were standing beside them.⁷⁷⁸⁶ On 1 October 1992, UNPROFOR Acting Commander, Morillon, conveyed in a letter to the Accused that he had received news of “[the Accused’s] forces hav[ing] proceeded with the forced expulsion of nearly three hundred persons from Grbavica”.⁷⁷⁸⁷ The 30 September UN report was brought up by the UNPROFOR Sarajevo sector commander, Hussein Ali Abdel-Razek, during multiple meetings with Plavšić.⁷⁷⁸⁸

⁷⁷⁸³ D885 (Letter from Novo Sarajevo Crisis Staff to Radovan Karadžić, 5 June 1992), p. 3; Radomir Nešković, P2568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 16716–16717 (explaining that this was a way to protect these flats from looting or damage and to provide temporary housing to the fighters). However, KDZ310 testified that permission to use flats was given to fighters but that they looted the apartments they were issued. KDZ310, T. 9251–9252 (29 November 2010). Considering this testimony, which the Chamber finds credible, and considering Nešković’s interest in casting the report and the activities of the Crisis Staff in a favourable light, the Chamber does not accept Nešković’s explanation that the flats of Croats and Muslims were provided to prevent looting or damage.

⁷⁷⁸⁶ P2444 (Witness statement of KDZ354 dated 5 February 2011), paras. 83–84 (under seal). Branko Radan testified that he heard, though did not personally observe, that on 30 September 1992, an estimated 300 Muslim citizens crossed over to Muslim-controlled territory over the Vrbanja Bridge. Branko Radan, T. 31098–31099, 31127–31128, 31131–31135 (6 December 2012). According to Radan, “no pressure was exerted” on the people and they “decided to cross over to the other side” in an “organised” and “satisfactory” move, in order to be safer. Branko Radan, T. 31098–31099, 31132 (6 December 2012). He testified that there was daily shooting, fighting, and shelling in the area of the frontlines in Jevrejsko Groblje, Gornja Kovačići, and Donji Kovačići. Branko Radan, T. 31098 (6 December 2012). Having considered the totality of the evidence in record, the Chamber rejects Radan’s testimony that the movement of the 300 Muslims on 30 September 1992 was voluntary.

2287. In relation to the movement of population, Defence witnesses testified that: (i) with the outbreak of war in BiH, some Serbs and non-Serbs moved to where they thought they were safer;⁷⁷⁸⁹ (ii) Serb and non-Serb civilians alike lacked complete freedom of movement, particularly in Grbavica and Vraca, due to almost continual sniping and shelling from high-rise buildings and other facilities under the control of Muslim forces;⁷⁷⁹⁰ (iii) a significant number of non-Serbs remained in Novo Sarajevo throughout the war;⁷⁷⁹¹ and (iv) some Bosnian Muslims requested to leave.⁷⁷⁹²

2288. Having considered the totality of the evidence, however, the Chamber finds that many Bosnian Muslims and Croats were forced to leave the municipality. The Chamber notes that in some instances people requested to leave; however, the Chamber finds that this was still involuntary considering the surrounding circumstances in which the departures occurred. Consequently, the Chamber is satisfied that Bosnian Muslims and Croats were forced to leave the Serb-controlled parts of Novo Sarajevo municipality.

Radan testified that the Muslims who stayed “enjoyed all the same rights in terms of humanitarian aid, medical assistance and security” as Serbs and Croats. Branko Radan, T. 31099–31100 (6 December 2012). See also D2673 (Witness statement of Zdravko Šalipur dated 16 December 2012), para. 30; D2683 (Witness statement of Dragan Šojić dated 15 December 2012), para. 26. Considering Radan’s interest in distancing himself from the mistreatment that occurred as well as the lack of candour on this point of all three witnesses, the Chamber rejects the evidence that Muslims who stayed were provided for and protected equally as Serbs and Croats.

⁷⁷⁹² Radomir Nešković, P2568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 16700–16701 (stating that before August 1992, there were expulsions of Muslims but that some Muslims requested to cross over to the other side because they did not feel safe and that “secret exchanges” of Muslims and Serbs also took place). See also Branko Radan, T. 31101–31102 (6 December 2012) (testifying that non-Serbs from Grbavica seeking reunion with their families and better living conditions made efforts to cross to the other side with the assistance of “freelancers”). However, Radan recognised the possibility that non-Serbs sought to leave because they were being subjected to harassment. Branko Radan, T. 31126 (6 December 2012).

v. Pale

(A) Charges

2289. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Pale as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁷⁷⁹³ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in Pale include killings related to the “Former Culture Centre/Dom Culture in Pale (also referred to as a Gym)”,⁷⁷⁹⁴ as well as killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at that facility.⁷⁷⁹⁵ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.⁷⁷⁹⁶

2290. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Pale by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse during and after the take-over and in Pale Gym as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷⁷⁹⁷ (ii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in Pale Gym, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷⁷⁹⁸ (iii) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes within Pale;⁷⁷⁹⁹ (iv) unlawful detention in Pale Gym;⁷⁸⁰⁰ (v) the wanton destruction of public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁷⁸⁰¹ and (vi) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁷⁸⁰²

⁷⁷⁹³ Indictment, paras. 48–49.

⁷⁷⁹⁴ The Chamber notes that in the Indictment and in the evidence, this detention facility has been referred to by various names. See e.g. Indictment, Scheduled Incident B.14.1, Scheduled Detention Facility C.19.2 (referring to “Former Culture Centre”, “Dom Culture”, and “a Gym”); P2839 (Witness statement of Hajrudin Karić, dated 13 May 2011), para. 18 (referring to “Pale sports centre” and “old Cultural Centre”); D4368 (Witness statement of Jovan Šarac dated 10 February 2014), para. 55 (referring to “sport complex”). For the sake of clarity, the Chamber will use the term “Pale Gym” to refer to this alleged detention facility throughout this Judgement.

⁷⁸⁰¹ Indictment, para. 60(j). See Scheduled Incident D.16.

⁷⁸⁰² Indictment, para. 60(k). The restrictive and discriminatory measures alleged include the denial of freedom of movement; the removal from positions of authority; the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes; unlawful arrest and/or the denial of the right to judicial process; and/or the denial of equal access to public services. The Prosecution does not allege criminal responsibility for rape and other acts of sexual violence;

2291. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁷⁸⁰³ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Pale in which they had been lawfully present.⁷⁸⁰⁴ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, killing, destruction of cultural monuments and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused some Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear, while others were physically driven out.⁷⁸⁰⁵

(B) Background

2292. Pale, one of the ten constitutive municipalities of Sarajevo, is located to the east of Novo Sarajevo and Stari Grad and to the west of Rogatica.⁷⁸⁰⁶ The municipality of Pale includes, inter alia, the Muslim settlements of Bare, Donja Vinča, Prača, Podgrab and Renovica, and the largely Serb inhabited settlements of Krivodoli, Lapišnica, Mokro, and Vrhprača.⁷⁸⁰⁷ According to the 1991 census, Pale municipality had 16,119 inhabitants, of whom about 27% were Bosnian Muslims and 69% were Bosnian Serbs.⁷⁸⁰⁸

2293. There were a number of military installations in Pale, including an army barracks located in the centre of Renovica, an army depot in Krivodoli, a depot in Jahorinski Potok and a radar forced labour on the frontlines; the appropriation or plunder of property or the wanton destruction of private property in Pale. Indictment, fn. 5, 7, 8, 9.

While the Chamber finds P4994 and D4002 to be generally reliable, for the purpose of determining the population of Pale and the ethnic composition thereof in 1991, it relies on P5964, which is a direct source document and which contains the raw data from the 1991 census in BiH.

installation at Mt. Jahorina.⁷⁸⁰⁹ In late March or April 1992, the Republic Communications Centre was established in Pale and began providing secure communication links in the territory of SerBiH.⁷⁸¹⁰

2294. The founding assembly of the SDA Municipal Board was held in July 1990 in Renovica.⁷⁸¹¹ In August or September 1990, the SDS Municipal Board in Pale, headed by Svetislav Lučić, was founded.⁷⁸¹² In April 1991, Jovan Šarac became the President of the Pale SDS Municipal Board.⁷⁸¹³

2295. From April 1992 onwards, Pale served as the seat of the government of the SerBiH and later of the RS.⁷⁸¹⁴ Between 1992 and 1995, the Accused used the following three locations in Pale as his office: the Kikinda building, the Mali Dom building, situated in the Panorama Hotel complex, and the administrative building of the Famos factory.⁷⁸¹⁵ From April 1992 onwards, the Accused and his family resided at a number of locations in Pale.⁷⁸¹⁶ Momčilo Krajišnik and Biljana Plavšić stayed in the Panorama Hotel complex.⁷⁸¹⁷

(C) Lead-up

2296. In the multi-party elections, the SDS and SDA respectively obtained 65% and 20% of the votes for the Pale Municipal Assembly; subsequently, the SDS and SDA formed a coalition and divided the positions of authority in the municipality between themselves.⁷⁸¹⁸ Slobodan Kovačević became the president of the Municipal Assembly and Malko Koroman was appointed the Chief of 2297. In the beginning of 1991, Bosnian Serbs in Pale organised large public rallies at which they waved Serb flags and shouted nationalist slogans.⁷⁸²⁴ In response to the increasing national sentiments amongst Serbs, the Bosnian Muslims in Pale organised night watches in order to guard their families and homes.⁷⁸²⁵ Bosnian Muslims in Pale owned hunting rifles and pistols.⁷⁸²⁶ charge of distributing weapons to the inhabitants of Vrhpraća and Podgrab.⁷⁸²⁹ From this point on, there was an increase in Serbs firing their weapons.⁷⁸³⁰

2300. In early 1992, the Bosnian Serb police officers who had been disarmed and expelled from the Stari Grad SJB, joined the Pale SJB to work on security tasks.⁷⁸³¹ In January 1992, the Bosnian Serb population in Pale was mobilised by means of written call-ups that were issued to them.⁷⁸³²

2301. During this period, paramilitary groups, including a formation commanded by Radomir Kojić, a special unit commanded by Rajko Kušić as well as Šešelj's men began operating in Pale.⁷⁸³³ In late April or early May 1992, members of Arkan's men, led by a man nicknamed "Čarli", also entered Pale and moved into the Panorama Hotel complex.⁷⁸³⁴ During May and June 1992, a large amount of military equipment and many military personnel arrived in Pale.⁷⁸³⁵ In the same period, an additional number of paramilitaries arrived in Pale.⁷⁸³⁶ They were mainly young Serbs; they had red ribbons on their arms and heads, and carried automatic rifles and knives.⁷⁸³⁷ They often drove around in Pale and confiscated the cars and trucks that belonged to non-Serbs.⁷⁸³⁸

2302. In March 1992, subsequent to talks between the Chiefs of Pale and Stari Grad SJBs, police check-points were created by both sides at Lapišnica.⁷⁸³⁹ Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs also established check-points on various roads leading in and out of Pale.⁷⁸⁴⁰

2303. The Crisis Staff in Pale was established in March or April 1992; its headquarters was located in Pale SJB.⁷⁸⁴¹ Zdravko Čvoro, the President of the Executive Board, was appointed as the President of the Crisis Staff.⁷⁸⁴² The Crisis Staff, which included Šarac and other SDS members in Pale municipality such as Koroman, and Slobodan Ninković, controlled all municipal activities.⁷⁸⁴³ According to Šarac, the Pale Crisis Staff was in essence an expanded version of the Executive Board.⁷⁸⁴⁴

2304. The SDS enjoyed “absolute power” in the municipality and the Pale municipal authorities allocated funds to it.⁷⁸⁴⁵ They also allocated premises and material resources and contributed financially to the Bosnian Serb Press Agency, the SRNA.⁷⁸⁴⁶

2305. In early March 1992, the Bosnian Serb municipal authorities called on non-Serbs to hand in their personal weapons.⁷⁸⁴⁷ Subsequently, in local communes outside of Pale town, authorities designated special locations for the non-Serb population to bring in their weapons; the weapons

⁷⁸⁴⁷ P733 (Witness statement of Sulejman Crnčalo dated 1 November 2009), para. 28. According to Hršum, the reasons for disarming were threefold: (i) in the area of Renovica, there were armed persons in hitherto unseen military uniforms moving about; (ii) there were constant incursions into and attacks against Renovica Barracks; and (iii) two individuals who had been linked with an alleged murder dating back to before the start of the war had hidden in the Renovica area. Tomislav Hršum, T. 32955–32957 (30 January 2013). The Chamber rejects Hršum’s evidence on this point in light of reliable documentary evidence originating from the chief of Pale SJB’s Criminal Investigation Service which indicates that in mid-March, Pale SJB confiscated weapons that were in the possession of Bosnian Muslims, “irrespective of whether they had permits for them or not.” See P6090 (Pale SJB record, 8 February 1993), p. 1.

collected in such locations were then brought to the SJB building in Pale town.⁷⁸⁴⁸ At the same time, men in camouflage uniforms who were not from the JNA conducted searches of Bosnian Muslim houses for weapons.⁷⁸⁴⁹

2306. During the night of 3 March 1992, three Bosnian Serb reservists in dark police uniforms arrested Sulejman Crnčalo and his neighbour and took them both to the SJB in Pale; at the time of his arrest, Crnčalo was guarding his house with a hunting rifle.⁷⁸⁵⁰ At a certain point, Koroman arrived at the SJB and while questioning Crnčalo, stated that if any of his “policemen or soldiers” were wounded in Crnčalo’s neighbourhood, he would completely destroy that neighbourhood.⁷⁸⁵¹ Koroman added that “[a]s long as there is no Serb policeman in Stari Grad, there is not going to be one Muslim policeman in Pale.”⁷⁸⁵² In the early morning hours, Koroman indicated that he was going to escort Crnčalo and his neighbour back to their respective homes.⁷⁸⁵³ When exiting the SJB, Crnčalo noticed at least a hundred reserve policemen outside.⁷⁸⁵⁴ Near his home, Crnčalo saw many heavily-armed soldiers and policemen facing the Bosnian Muslim inhabited parts of Pale.⁷⁸⁵⁵

2307. On 23 March 1992, about 35 Bosnian Muslim active-duty and reserve policemen from Pale SJB met with Koroman at the Prača reserve SJB.⁷⁸⁵⁶ At the meeting, Koroman stated that Bosnian Muslim policemen were required to hand in their weapons and equipment.⁷⁸⁵⁷ Koroman added that this was a countermeasure against the move made by Stari Grad SJB and that the reinstatement of Muslim policemen depended on Serb policemen returning to their jobs in the Stari Grad SJB.⁷⁸⁵⁸ The Bosnian Muslim policemen complied and handed in their weapons.⁷⁸⁵⁹ Later that day, Bosnian Muslim reserve policemen in the Pale SJB were disarmed in a similar fashion.⁷⁸⁶⁰ From this point on, Pale SJB stayed under Bosnian Serb control.⁷⁸⁶¹

2308. Ethnic tensions increased further in April 1992, when a large number of Bosnian Serb refugees from Sarajevo began to pour into Pale.⁷⁸⁶² On 4 April 1992, on the Pale-Sarajevo road, two Bosnian Serb bus drivers and some of the Bosnian Serb passengers who were travelling with them were beaten by Bosnian Muslims.⁷⁸⁶³ In the village of Lapišnica, a Serb was wounded by Muslim gunfire.⁷⁸⁶⁴ Around the same period, certain shops refused to sell products to non-Serbs.⁷⁸⁶⁵ Eventually, most shops in Pale closed down.⁷⁸⁶⁶ By April 1992, many Bosnian Muslims had been suspended from their jobs.⁷⁸⁶⁷

2309. On 11 April 1992, the Pale Crisis Staff promised to provide full security to all residents of Pale regardless of their ethnicity, decided that supplies shall be provided equally to all parts of the municipality, and proposed to hold discussions with SDA officials about supply and security issues.⁷⁸⁶⁸ On or about 16 April, the Bosnian Muslims in the villages of Bare, Renovica, Prača and Podgrab recognised the “legal police” in the municipality and received guarantees of personal and material security as well as normal supplies and regular bus transport.⁷⁸⁶⁹

were kept in the SJB for a few hours and then released.⁷⁸⁷¹ In May 1992, more Bosnian Muslims were randomly arrested.⁷⁸⁷²

2311. In the beginning of May 1992, pursuant to an order issued by the Pale Crisis Staff, the Post Office in Pale disconnected the telephone lines of Bosnian Muslims.⁷⁸⁷³ From this point onwards, Bosnian Muslims went to the Post Office in order to make calls or asked their Serb neighbours to allow them access to their telephones.⁷⁸⁷⁴

(D) Attack against Renovica and other villages

2312. On 22 May 1992, the Bosnian Muslims in Prača, Bogovići, Gornja Vinča, and Podgrab handed over their weapons to Bosnian Serb Forces.⁷⁸⁷⁵ Residents of Renovica, however, refused.⁷⁸⁷⁶

2313. On the same day, members of the Pale MUP and the VRS conducted a military operation against Renovica.⁷⁸⁷⁷ Policemen from Pale SJB detained approximately 30 Bosnian Muslims and took them to the Pale Gym.⁷⁸⁷⁸ On that day, Serb Forces also attacked and shelled the predominantly Muslim village of Donja Vinča, setting houses on fire and forcing the villagers to leave.⁷⁸⁷⁹ SRNA reported on the operation against Renovica, stating that seven MUP members had been killed or wounded.⁷⁸⁸⁰ SRNA also reported that although the casualty figure in relation to the Bosnian Muslims had not been established yet, it was estimated to be “substantially greater”.⁷⁸⁸¹ Furthermore, SRNA quoted the Pale MUP’s instruction to Muslims in Pale to hand over their weapons peacefully in order to prevent more bloodshed.⁷⁸⁸² Around the same period, the Pale SJB also took control of villages that were situated in the direction of Renovica and Goražde.⁷⁸⁸³

2314. On 23 May 1992, Koroman appeared on television and after announcing that war had finally come to Pale, issued an ultimatum to all non-Serbs to surrender their weapons to the SJB.⁷⁸⁸⁴ During the days that followed, Bosnian Muslims handed over hundreds of additional pieces of weaponry to the Pale SJB.⁷⁸⁸⁵ Koroman subsequently informed the Pale Crisis Staff of the attack against Renovica and was advised to transfer the Bosnian Muslims who had been detained there and who were “guilty” to Kula Prison, in Ilidža municipality, and to release the ones that were “not guilty”.⁷⁸⁸⁶

2315. Pale SJB’s chief of Criminal Investigation Service reported that, amongst other things, forcible entry into weekend houses was widespread and that SJB operatives, instead of suppressing such acts, participated and continued to participate in their commission.⁷⁸⁸⁷ policemen, as well as Kojić, a paramilitary, visited Crnčalo's village and during this visit, Škobo told the residents that it was better for them to voluntarily go to an area where the Muslims were a majority now rather than being "chase[d] through the woods" later.⁷⁸⁸⁹ In response, Crnčalo, his brother and a number of neighbours went to see Starčević who assured them that if they had not done anything wrong, they had nothing to worry about.⁷⁸⁹⁰

2317. In May 1992, Crnčalo and his neighbours requested that Koroman organise a meeting at the SJB building and invite a high-ranking government official so that Bosnian Muslims in the Pale municipality could be given guarantees about their safety.⁷⁸⁹¹ Shortly after the start of the meeting, Nikola Koljević arrived and when asked by Bosnian Muslims to give guarantees that they could stay in Pale, he replied that "Serbs don't want to continue living with you here."⁷⁸⁹² During the same meeting and in the presence of Koljević, Koroman told the Muslim delegates that he could no longer guarantee their safety because he was unable to hold back the Red Berets who had come from Knin.⁷⁸⁹³

2318. On 12 June 1992, Starčević asked the secretary of the Pale SDS to urgently call a meeting of the Pale SDS Main Board so that the SDS could adopt a general position on the departure of non-Serbs from the municipality.⁷⁸⁹⁴ On 18 June 1992, during a Pale Municipal Assembly session, the President of the Assembly, Starčević, and the President of the Executive Board, Čvoro, complained that the Pale SJB had taken measures to move the Bosnian Muslim population out of the municipality.⁷⁸⁹⁵ On 19 June 1992, Pale Municipal Assembly adopted a decision which required non-Serbs who wished to leave the municipality to obtain permission from the SJB.⁷⁸⁹⁶ Pursuant to the same decision, the Pale SJB, in co-ordination with municipal commissions, was to compile a list of all property owned by non-Serbs who were leaving the municipality.⁷⁸⁹⁷ The Pale Municipal Assembly also entrusted the Pale SJB with the task of organising the departure of non-Serbs and making sure that they crossed the separation line safely.⁷⁸⁹⁸

2319. In late June and early July 1992, Bosnian Serb authorities in Pale gave Bosnian Muslim property-owners contract forms which already contained their data.⁷⁸⁹⁹ By virtue of these contracts, which the Muslims had to sign before they could depart from Pale, Muslim property in Pale became Serb property in exchange for Serb-owned property in Sarajevo.⁷⁹⁰⁰ Those who refused to sign such contracts were forced to surrender the keys to their houses to the Pale SJB.⁷⁹⁰¹

2320. During the same period, Serb authorities in Pale organised a number of convoys for the transportation of non-Serbs out of the area.⁷⁹⁰² Prior to this, written notices were put up, informing the non-Serb population of the location and time at which they could board the buses.⁷⁹⁰³ Those boarding the buses were allowed to take only what they could carry.⁷⁹⁰⁴ The first convoy left Pale on or about 28 June 1992.⁷⁹⁰⁵ On 2 July 1992, SerBiH MUP ordered the Pale SJB to grant permission to Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats living in Pale centre to move out of the Pale municipality “of their own free will” and instructed “police and military patrols to enable the

However, the Chamber notes that during the war, Čvoro himself had lived in property that belonged to a Bosnian Muslim. See Zdravko Čvoro, T. 30982–30983 (5 December 2012). This leads the Chamber to conclude that there was an obvious underlying self-interest on the part of Čvoro for advancing the claim that Muslims placed their property in Serb hands for safe-keeping.

unobstructed passage of three buses transporting Muslim civilians”.⁷⁹⁰⁶ The third convoy left Pale on 2 July 1992 for Hreša, a small hamlet near Sarajevo.⁷⁹⁰⁷ From Hreša, non-Serbs from Pale went to a reception centre for refugees in Vratnik, which was operated by Bosnian Muslim authorities.⁷⁹⁰⁸

2321. On 6 July 1992, the Bosnian Serb MUP issued a decision, granting the request by non-Serbs living in the inner parts of Pale to move out of the Pale municipality “of their own free will” and “under the escort of police officers” of the Pale SJB, and instructed “police and military patrols” to enable the unobstructed passage of 420 civilians aboard eight buses bound for Stari Grad municipality.⁷⁹⁰⁹

2322. On the same day, pursuant to the instructions of the SerBiH government, the Executive Board decided that non-Serb individuals or families must not be allowed to leave the territory of the municipality until “a list of their property is made and the property is taken over in accordance with the regulations in force.”⁷⁹¹⁰ The Executive Board also requested that the Pale SJB take immediate measures to protect the property left behind by the non-Serbs until such time that this property was taken over by an authorised municipal commission.⁷⁹¹¹

2323. Also on 6 July 1992, the Pale SJB reported that between 30 June and 3 July 1992, it had “organised change of the place of residence from the territory of Pale municipality to the territory of Stari Grad Sarajevo municipality” of 1,042 non-Serbs.⁷⁹¹² The SJB continued to organise the movement of Bosnian Muslims out of Pale municipality for another one or two months.⁷⁹¹³

2324. In a letter dated 7 July 1992, the Executive Board informed Plavšić that despite the Assembly’s decision of 19 June 1992,⁷⁹¹⁴ there had been “forced and wilful” efforts to move Bosnian Muslims out of the municipality, resulting in a large number of criminal acts.⁷⁹¹⁵

⁷⁹¹⁵ P6034 (Report of Pale Executive Board, 7 July 1992).

2325. On 14 July 1992, the Executive Board noted the theft and unlawful use of abandoned property in Pale which in its opinion was attributable to the failure of the commissions established earlier for the purpose of making an inventory of abandoned non-Serb property. The Executive Board then established a new audit commission to re-examine the situation and file a written report.⁷⁹¹⁶

2326. On 19 July 1992, the Accused requested that Pale municipal authorities make an inventory of all housing facilities that were vacant “following the voluntary departure of Muslims.”⁷⁹¹⁷ On 10 August 1992, the Municipal Assembly signed over non-Serb housing property to Serb refugees for “temporary use”.⁷⁹¹⁸ The municipal authorities also concentrated the movable property left behind by Muslims in the premises of various military and non-military institutions.⁷⁹¹⁹

2327. On or about 24 July 1992, the Accused informed the Bosnian Serb Assembly that the Bosnian Serb government was giving assurances to Bosnian Muslims in Pale that “they have nothing to fear.”⁷⁹²⁰

2328. On 20 October 1992, the Executive Board decided to seize all movable property belonging to persons who had been outside of Pale municipality for more than 30 days.⁷⁹²¹ The Executive Board then noted that temporary allocation of such property to Serb refugees in Pale may take place on the condition that such allocation is authorised and recorded by a competent municipal commission.⁷⁹²²

2329. Only a small number of Bosnian Muslims remained in Pale municipality during the war.⁷⁹²³

⁷⁹²⁴ Defence Final Brief, para. 1720. Witnesses testified that through their elected representatives and by signing individual requests, the Bosnian Muslims in Pale sought permission from the municipal authorities to leave the municipality. They testified further that despite the assurances repeatedly given by the municipal and RS authorities, including those given by Biljana Plavšić in Prača, the Bosnian Muslim population of Pale insisted on

Bosnian Muslims of Pale asked to leave because the Bosnian Muslim authorities in Sarajevo had demanded such departure as part of their preparations for a planned military take-over of Pale;⁷⁹²⁵ and (iii) in order to prevent the departure of Bosnian Muslims, Serb authorities guaranteed the civil rights of all people regardless of any ethnic or religious affiliation.⁷⁹²⁶

2331. Having considered the totality of the evidence and assessed the circumstances in which the departures occurred, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave. The Chamber notes that in some instances, Bosnian Muslims requested to leave the municipality; however, the Chamber finds that even when the Bosnian Muslims did request to leave Pale, they were driven by the fear caused by all of the surrounding circumstances. Consequently, the Chamber is satisfied that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave the Serb-controlled parts of Pale municipality.

(F) Scheduled Detention Facility C.19.2 and Scheduled Incident B.14.1

2332. The Indictment refers to the use of Pale Gym as a detention facility at least between May and August 1992, and alleges that between June and July 1992, a number of men died as a result of beatings which they sustained in there.

(1) Establishment and control

2333. Pale Gym was a large sports hall situated near the Pale SJB, in Pale Culture Centre.⁷⁹²⁷ There were windows only on one side of Pale Gym.⁷⁹²⁸

2334. On 10 May 1992, Mirsad Smajš and eight other detainees from the Sarajevo area were transferred from Kula Prison to Pale Gym; at that point Pale Gym already held approximately 100 detainees, including some Serbs and Croats, and was guarded by SJB members in blue uniforms with the Serb flag emblazoned on the shoulder.⁷⁹²⁹ Upon arrival, each detainee was given a sandwich and a bottle of water.⁷⁹³⁰

2335. A few days later, a group of about 400 badly beaten Bosnian Muslim men who had previously been detained at Vuk Karadžić School in Bratunac, were brought to Pale Gym in several trucks.⁷⁹³¹ One by one, the detainees were taken off the trucks, registered and placed in the gym.⁷⁹³²

2338. On 4 June 1992, Azem Omerović and three other men were taken to Pale Gym by Serbs in camouflage uniforms using police cars.⁷⁹³⁷

(2) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2339. The detainees were given sufficient water to drink but insufficient food, only receiving sandwiches with a little bologna once a day; they became weak from hunger and often fainted.⁷⁹³⁸ They slept on the floor and they could only use the toilet after having received permission from the guards.⁷⁹³⁹

2340. The detainees in Pale Gym were constantly subjected to maltreatment.⁷⁹⁴⁰ The guards told them that they would be killed unless they were exchanged.⁷⁹⁴¹ The guards also warned them not to attempt to escape and indicated that guards had been posted near each window.⁷⁹⁴² The detainees were severely beaten with whatever the guards could have put their hands on and had to run the gauntlet when they asked to go to the toilet.⁷⁹⁴³ Smajš observed a man in a police uniform use a curved knife to cut off the detainees' hair.⁷⁹⁴⁴

2341. At one point, a fair-haired man, approximately 40 years old and wearing a police uniform, entered Pale Gym and introduced himself as a police commander from Pale.⁷⁹⁴⁵ He then proceeded

Jovan Šarac stated that he had not received any information about the beatings of the detainees held in Pale Gym. Jovan Šarac, T. 47154–47158 (14 February 2014); D4368 (Witness statement of Jovan Šarac dated 10 February 2014), para. 57. The Chamber notes that even if accepted as reliable, Šarac's testimony does not necessarily suggest that maltreatment and beatings did not occur at Pale Gym. Hršum stopped short of asserting that no Bosnian Muslims had ever been beaten while in the custody of the Pale SJB, and accepted that the police guards might have allowed entry to the gym by “certain individuals”. Hršum, however, insisted that the police guards did not undertake any “repressive measures” themselves. Tomislav Hršum, T. 32942 (30 January 2013). The Chamber found that Hršum worked for SJB Pale and that SJB Pale was involved in the detention of Bosnian Muslims in Pale Gym. D2850 (Witness statement of Tomislav Hršum dated 27 January 2013), paras. 1, 16; Tomislav Hršum, T. 32939–32942 (30 January 2013). These facts, in addition to Hršum's general evasiveness and lack of candour as a witness, lead the Chamber to conclude that Hršum had an incentive to distance himself from the events at the Pale Gym. Accordingly, the Chamber places no weight on Hršum's assertion that the members of the Pale SJB were never involved in beatings of detainees in Pale Gym.

to beat the detainees.⁷⁹⁴⁶ At the same time, a soldier entered Pale Gym and announced that everyone would be killed unless the soldier's brother, who had been captured by Bosnian Muslims, was released.⁷⁹⁴⁷

2342. Sometime after the Bosnian Muslim men from Bratunac had arrived, the guards had a disagreement with "army troops" who were at the door and wanted to enter the gym to beat the detainees.⁷⁹⁴⁸ The guards installed bars on the windows as well as an iron door in order to prevent them from entering the gym.⁷⁹⁴⁹ However, later, during Karić's detention, the police guards allowed paramilitary members, including members of Rajko Kušić's and Srđan Knežević's units, to access Pale Gym multiple times each day and beat the detainees severely with sticks and rifle butts.⁷⁹⁵⁰ Members of these paramilitary groups also took detainees out of Pale Gym to be beaten and some of those detainees never returned to the gym.⁷⁹⁵¹

2343. On 15 May 1992, Branko Đerić ordered Sokolac Crisis Staff to provide "three tow trucks with canvas cover" for transportation of detainees from Pale to Visoko; Nedeljko Lakić requested that the Ilijaš Crisis Staff approve and provide passage through Ilijaš municipality for a group of detainees who were at Pale and who were going to be transported to Visoko under the escort of Pale Crisis Staff. Lakić also requested that the approval be destroyed the moment the detainees left Ilijaš.⁷⁹⁵² On the morning of 16 or 17 May, the guards told the detainees from Bratunac that they were going to be exchanged, took them out of the gym in groups of ten, tied them together, and forced them to sing Serb songs before loading them onto trucks.⁷⁹⁵³ The detainees were then transferred under VRS escort to Visoko where they were exchanged.⁷⁹⁵⁴

⁷⁹⁵⁰ P2839 (Witness statement of Hajrudin Karić, dated 13 May 2011), paras. 28–29, 31. On 6 July 1992, a soldier ordered Karić to help another prisoner, Fahrudin Sipović, who had been beaten and lay on the ground with a broken arm and covered in blood, to stand up. As Sipović attempted to stand, the soldier beat him with a piece of wood. P2839 (Witness statement of Hajrudin Karić, dated 13 May 2011), para. 36.

⁷⁹⁵¹ P2839 (Witness statement of Hajrudin Karić, dated 13 May 2011), paras. 29–30, 42–43. On 28 June 1992, Karić was called out of the main gymnasium by two relations of Rajko Kušić, who swore at Karić and beat him with a wooden stick until he fainted. After approximately 10 minutes, another Bosnian Serb, Milomir Tepeš, arrived and said "it's not him". The paramilitaries then threw Karić back in the main gym while badly injured. 2344. On 18 May, Smajš and 64 other detainees were also called out of Pale Gym.⁷⁹⁵⁵ This group was placed on a military cargo truck and transported to Hreša to be exchanged.⁷⁹⁵⁶

2345. On 6 July 1992, approximately five men belonging to Kušić's unit entered the gym and beat three Bosnian Muslim detainees with wooden sticks and brass knuckles until they were unconscious.⁷⁹⁵⁷ Two of the detainees died about thirty minutes after the end of the beatings, and the third died two days later, without having received any medical care.⁷⁹⁵⁸

2346. On 11 July 1992, Hajrudin Karić and 34 other detainees were transferred, under the escort of reserve police, to Kula Prison.⁷⁹⁵⁹

(3) Conclusion

2347. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces brought to and detained non-Serbs, including at least one woman, at Pale Gym from approximately 10 May to 11 July 1992. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions. These included lack of food and adequate medical care. The Chamber also finds that detainees were regularly subjected to beatings by Serb Forces at Pale Gym and that at least three detainees died as a result of such beatings.

(G) Scheduled Incident D.16

2348. The Indictment refers to the destruction of three mosques, namely the mosques at Prača, Podvitez, and Bogovići, between July and September 1992.⁷⁹⁶⁰

2349. There were at least three mosques in Pale municipality.⁷⁹⁶¹ Crnčalo heard that all three mosques were destroyed between 2 July and September 1992.⁷⁹⁶²

2350. According to Riedlmayer, the Podvitez mosque and the Bogovići mosque were “completely destroyed” in “the first year of the war”⁷⁹⁶³ and the Prača mosque was “completely destroyed” by mining on 10 October 1992.⁷⁹⁶⁴

2351. While the Chamber relies on Riedlmayer for the purposes of finding that the mosques in question were destroyed, and determining the nature and extent of the damage to those sites, it does not rely on his evidence in order to determine who was responsible for the destruction as such matters fall outside Riedlmayer’s expertise and are based on statements which he received from, amongst others, the Islamic Community of BiH and informants.

2352. Having received no other evidence concerning Scheduled Incident D.16, the Chamber is not satisfied, beyond reasonable doubt, that Serb Forces destroyed the Prača, Podvitez, and Bogovići mosques, between July and September 1992.

vi. Vogošća

(A) Charges

2353. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Vogošća as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁷⁹⁶⁵ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in Vogošća include killings related to detention facilities, as well as killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at these detention facilities.⁷⁹⁶⁶ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.⁷⁹⁶⁷

2354. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Vogošća by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include: (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷⁹⁶⁸ (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as cruel and inhumane treatment;⁷⁹⁶⁹ (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in scheduled detention facilities, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;⁷⁹⁷⁰ (iv) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁷⁹⁷¹ (v) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;⁷⁹⁷² (vi) forced labour at frontlines and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;⁷⁹⁷³ (vii) the wanton destruction of private property, including homes and business premises, and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁷⁹⁷⁴ and (viii) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁷⁹⁷⁵

2355. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁷⁹⁷⁶ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Vogošća in which they were lawfully present.⁷⁹⁷⁷ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, cultural monuments, and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear, while others were physically driven out.⁷⁹⁷⁸

(B) Lead-up

2356. Vogošća, one of the ten municipalities making up Sarajevo, is located to the north of the city of Sarajevo, between the municipalities of Novi Grad and Ilijaš.⁷⁹⁷⁹ It includes, inter alia, the largely Muslim inhabited villages or settlements of Barice, Kiše, Tihovići, Svrake, Hotonj, Kobilja

Glava and Ugorsko as well as the mainly Serb inhabited villages of Krivoglavci, Kotorovići, Blagovac, Paljevo Brdo and Semizovac.⁷⁹⁸⁰ According to the 1991 census, Vogošća municipality had approximately 24,700 inhabitants, of whom 51% were Bosnian Muslims, 36% were Bosnian Serbs, and 4% were Bosnian Croats.⁷⁹⁸¹

2357. Vogošća was one of the most industrialised municipalities in the territory of SFRY, hosting several large factories, including the Pretis factory which manufactured artillery and ammunition.⁷⁹⁸² There was also a JNA installation called the Semizovac Barracks, which was used to store weaponry and equipment of the JNA, the Vogošća TO as well as the Ilijaš TO.⁷⁹⁸³

2358. During the 1990 elections, the SDA won 18 seats in the Municipal Assembly, the SDS 15 seats, and other parties secured 18 seats.⁷⁹⁸⁴ Subsequently, the SDA and SDS formed a coalition and divided the positions of authority in Vogošća amongst themselves.⁷⁹⁸⁵ Thus, Bilal Hasanović from the SDA became the President of the Vogošća Municipal Assembly, and Rajko Koprivica, who was the President of the SDS in the municipality, became the President of the Executive Board.⁷⁹⁸⁶ Vehid Hodžić, a Bosnian Muslim, became the Chief of the Vogošća SJB.⁷⁹⁸⁷

While the Chamber has found Tabeau’s evidence to be generally reliable, for the purpose of determining the population of Vogošća and the ethnic composition thereof in 1991, it relies on other evidence before it, such as the direct source document, P5964, which contains the raw data from the 1991 census in BiH.

2359. At times, Koprivica and Jovan Tintor, a high-ranking SDS official in Vogošća,⁷⁹⁸⁸ met with Momčilo Krajišnik in Hotonj.⁷⁹⁸⁹ Before the war, the Accused also visited Vogošća municipality on one or two occasions.⁷⁹⁹⁰

(1) Creation of separate Bosnian Serb institutions

2360. Discussions at the municipal level for the creation of a Serb SJB started in September 1991.⁷⁹⁹¹ In September or October 1991, there were changes in the personnel structure of the Vogošća SJB; Borislav Maksimović, a Serb, was appointed as Commander, and two high-ranking Serb officials were replaced by a Bosnian Croat and a Bosnian Muslim.⁷⁹⁹² Neither Bosnian Muslims nor Bosnian Serbs in Vogošća welcomed these changes.⁷⁹⁹³ Hodžić was warned that the staffing situation could result in demonstrations.⁷⁹⁹⁴ As a result, the Vogošća SJB organised reinforcements at the Pretis gate and the Semizovac flyover.⁷⁹⁹⁵

2361. In early 1992, a Serb Crisis Staff was established and Tintor was appointed as its President.⁷⁹⁹⁶

On 11 September 1991, during a telephone conversation, Rajko Koprivica and Tintor discussed the outcome of a meeting Koprivica had with Hodžić, Kemo Šabović, the head of the CSB, and Mićo Stanišić with respect to the reinstatement of Serb officers. In the same conversation, Koprivica implied that he was unable to proceed further without consulting with Momčilo Krajišnik first whereas Tintor replied by saying “[w]e will not go forward until we get a Martić in each municipality.” P2348 (Intercept of conversation between Jovan Tintor and Rajko, 11 September 1991), pp. 2–3. On 12 September 1991, Tintor and Mićo Stanišić discussed the staffing changes that had taken place in Vogošća SJB and Tintor told Mićo Stanišić that the refusal to reinstate Serbs could entail “bloodshed” in Vogošća and that he would raise 10,000 people against “this injustice”. 2362. In March 1992, the SDS delegates in the Municipal Assembly, led by Koprivica, announced at an assembly session that they were going to organise the Serb Municipality of Vogošća and threatened that those Bosnian Muslims who did not pledge loyalty to this new municipality would be expelled.⁷⁹⁹⁷ Koprivica then stated that “Muslims were simply going to disappear”.⁷⁹⁹⁸ After making this announcement, the SDS delegates walked out of the assembly session.⁷⁹⁹⁹ On 24 March 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly unanimously verified the decision to establish the Serb municipality of Vogošća along with 34 other Serb municipalities.⁸⁰⁰⁰ The Serb municipality of Vogošća was proclaimed in March or April 1992.⁸⁰⁰¹ Svetozar Stanić was appointed as its President and he stayed in that position until November 1992.⁸⁰⁰² Koprivica was appointed as the President of the Serb Municipal Assembly.⁸⁰⁰³

2363. However, in February 1992, even before the adoption of the above decision, there had already been discussions amongst Serb leaders as to the lay-out of the Serb municipality of Vogošća. For instance, during a telephone conversation with a certain Prodanović, Tintor stated that it “will include everything all the way to Krš” but not Barica or Kobilja Glava.⁸⁰⁰⁴ On 22 February 1992, the Accused asked Ljubo Grković, Chef de Cabinet of the SDS Executive Board,⁸⁰⁰⁵ whether the planned Serb municipality of Rajlovac would include the territory of the Serb municipality of Vogošća and was told that Vogošća would be a separate unit.⁸⁰⁰⁶

2364. On 31 March 1992, non-Serb members of the police were invited by Mandić to join the newly established the Bosnian Serb MUP but were warned that before any such engagement, they had to declare their loyalty to SerBiH in writing.⁸⁰⁰⁷ In the Vogošća SJB, all Serb police officers agreed with Mandić's demand but non-Serbs did not.⁸⁰⁰⁸ Subsequently, a meeting was held and the police officers agreed that until further notice Serbs, Muslims, and Croats would stay at the station and work together "in order to prevent bloodshed".⁸⁰⁰⁹ Despite this agreement, in the Semizovac station, Serb and non-Serb policemen carried out their duties separately, though they did coalesce for joint patrols or when there were anti-crime assignments.⁸⁰¹⁰

2365. In April 1992, a number of meetings between SDS and SDA representatives were held in Vogošća.⁸⁰¹¹ During the meetings, Tintor advanced the thesis that Vogošća was Serb land and therefore had to be governed by Serb authority.⁸⁰¹² Tintor, Koprivica, Slavko Jovanović, Svetozar Stanić and other local SDS leaders then insisted on dividing Vogošća along ethnic lines.⁸⁰¹³ The division, as envisaged by them, would have left the Serbs with the town centre, all the industry and all the villages and communes except for Gornje, Donje Ugorsko, Kobilja Glava, and Hotonj.⁸⁰¹⁴ The Bosnian Muslims refused this proposal.⁸⁰¹⁵

(2) Militarisation

2366. From 1991 to spring 1992, both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims engaged in the process of arming and organising themselves in Vogošća.⁸⁰¹⁶

2367. On or about 5 January 1992, there was unusual movement around the Semizovac Barracks; trucks driven by Serbs in military uniforms towed artillery pieces from there towards Mt. Paljevo, a

2368. In early March 1992, both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs erected barricades in areas where they formed a majority.⁸⁰¹⁹ After the erection of barricades around Svrake, the JNA began distributing to local Serbs large quantities of weapons, which belonged to the Vogošća TO and had been stored in the Semizovac Barracks.⁸⁰²⁰ The JNA also trained local Serbs to use the weapons.⁸⁰²¹ All the weapons from the Pretis Factory were also brought to the Semizovac Barracks.⁸⁰²² On 14 May 1992, the Semizovac Barracks were placed under the command of Vogošća Crisis Staff.⁸⁰²³

2369. During the spring of 1992, in the predominantly Muslim village of Svrake, the villagers carried out night watches.⁸⁰²⁴

(3) Increase in inter-ethnic tensions

2370. From September 1991 onwards, inter-ethnic tensions and criminal acts increased dramatically.⁸⁰²⁵ The situation was exacerbated by the arrival of a large group of JNA reservists at the Semizovac Barracks and their involvement in looting and firing of weapons.⁸⁰²⁶ Given the dire security situation and the inability of the police forces to maintain order, Bosnian Muslim municipal representatives led discussions for the mobilisation of the Vogošća TO but the Bosnian Serbs opposed any such mobilisation.⁸⁰²⁷ On 23 September 1991, Koprivica discussed the issue with the Accused who made it clear that he fully supported Koprivica's opposition to the mobilisation of the TO.⁸⁰²⁸

2371. Sometime between 29 February and 1 March 1992, a Bosnian Muslim family was attacked in the predominantly Serb populated village of Krivoglavci.⁸⁰²⁹ On that same day, intense automatic weapon fire was directed at Svrake.⁸⁰³⁰

2372. In early March 1992, there were further acts of violence, including the destruction of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat property situated in predominantly Serb villages.⁸⁰³¹ During the same period, Tintor, on behalf of the Vogošća Crisis Staff, sent a dispatch to the Vogošća SJB and Kemo Šabović, prohibiting the SJB from conducting any investigations in Serb villages in connection with the alleged killing of a young Bosnian Muslim by a Serb.⁸⁰³²

(C) Take-over

(1) Take-over of Vogošća town

2373. On 3 April 1992, a group of armed Serbs led by Boro Radić attacked the police station in Vogošća, disarmed the Bosnian Muslim officers, and took away all the weapons there.⁸⁰³³ Radić and his men then forced everybody out and sprayed the inside of the station with automatic gunfire.⁸⁰³⁴

2374. On the day of the attack against the Vogošća SJB, Tintor ordered the deployment of “[a]ll available manpower” at the check-points in Vogošća.⁸⁰³⁵ On the same day, Tintor instructed a certain Pero Radović not to react until “an agreement is reached” and to open fire “if anybody

2375. On 4 April 1992, Tintor informed Momčilo Krajišnik that Bosnian Muslims from Kobilja Glava were on their way towards Graovište and Žuč.⁸⁰³⁸ On the same day, Koprivica told General Đurđevac that hundreds of Muslim reservists who had fled Ilijaš and the police reserve force had mobilised in order to take over the Vogošća SJB; he then requested intervention by the JNA.⁸⁰³⁹ However, Đurđevac rejected Koprivica’s request and advised him to “[a]ct according to the instructions on operation in the crisis situation, you have those instructions work”.⁸⁰⁴⁰

2376. Between 4 and 17 April 1992, Serb Forces took over major parts of Vogošća municipality.⁸⁰⁴¹ The Municipality building was surrounded by members of the TO and Tintor raised the Serb flag on top of it.⁸⁰⁴²

2377. On or about 18 April 1992, a special unit of the BiH MUP under the command of Dragan Vikić entered a military plant in the Pretis factory and took possession of vehicles and military equipment, including a truckload of shells, and headed to Sarajevo.⁸⁰⁴³ The following day at around noon, Safet Hadžić and other members of the Novi Grad TO also went to the Pretis factory to take weapons but were intercepted by members of the Vogošća TO and the JNA.⁸⁰⁴⁴ During the ensuing gunfight, Hadžić and four other members of the Novi Grad TO were killed and others were wounded.⁸⁰⁴⁵ In response to the Pretis attacks, Tintor ordered the mobilisation of the Vogošća TO.⁸⁰⁴⁶

2378. On 18 April 1992, the JNA deployed heavy weapons and tanks inside and around Vogošća town as well as on the main roads.⁸⁰⁴⁷

2379. Two or three weeks after the take-over of Vogošća, non-Serb policemen moved out and set up separate offices in Donji Hotonj and in Ugorsko, while all Serb reserve staff left the Hotonj station with their weapons and joined the Serb reserve station in Blagovac.⁸⁰⁴⁸ From this point onwards, the Vogošća SJB remained under the control of Bosnian Serb authorities.⁸⁰⁴⁹

(2) Take-over of Svrake

2380. In the evening of 2 May 1992, military formations organised by the SDS, in co-ordination with the JNA, launched an attack against Svrake from their positions in Krivoglavci, Paljevo, Nebočaj, and the Semizovac Barracks.⁸⁰⁵⁰ During this attack, which lasted two days, one villager was killed, four were wounded, and 36 houses were destroyed.⁸⁰⁵¹

2381. On 4 May 1992, using a loudspeaker, local Serbs called on the villagers, announcing that nothing would happen to them if they left.⁸⁰⁵² In accordance with an agreement subsequently reached between local Bosnian Serb and Muslim representatives, most of the Muslim population which numbered about 1,000 left Svrake in order to go to Breza and the surrounding areas via

However, Eset Muračević, the Bosnian Muslim Secretary of the local commune of Svrake until May 1992, testified that it was after an attack on a police patrol in Krivoglavci in early March 1992, that the employees of the Vogošća SJB effectively split on an ethnic basis, with Muslim and Croat policemen setting up a station in Svrake as well as a police check-point on the Sarajevo-Zenica main road. See P2361 (Witness statement of Eset Muračević dated 24 February 2011), paras. 1, 8; Eset Muračević, T. 12649, 12669, 12705 (1 March 2011). (D) Developments in Vogošća after the take-over of the municipality

2382. After the take-over of Svrake, Serbs Forces continued to expel non-Serbs from their homes throughout the municipality, in particular in Svrake and Bioča.⁸⁰⁵⁵ Non-Serb workers at the Vogošća Medical Centre were suspended from their jobs.⁸⁰⁵⁶ Several Serb paramilitary and volunteer groups, including Šešelj's men headed by Vaske Vidović, a paramilitary group led by Boro Radić,⁸⁰⁵⁷ and the Šoša Detachment under the command of Major Jovo Ostojić⁸⁰⁵⁸ took part in combat activities in Vogošća alongside the Bosnian Serb authorities.⁸⁰⁵⁹ Vogošća municipal authorities allocated resources to paramilitary formations, such as Radić's group, and even remunerated them for their services.⁸⁰⁶⁰

2383. In May 1992, Šešelj's men attacked the village of Tihovići and killed about 20 people, including a number of Bosnian Muslim reserve policemen.⁸⁰⁶¹

2384. On 16 May 1992, the Vogošća Crisis Staff concluded that mopping up operations should be conducted in Semizovac and indicated that similar operations were already underway in Svrake.⁸⁰⁶²

2385. Between mid-April and November 1992, police officers engaged in combat operations and many of them also participated in criminal activities.⁸⁰⁶³

2386. On 14 November 1992, Momčilo Krajišnik attended the Vogošća Serb Assembly session during which it was stated that the take-over of the municipality had been a success but that the area up to the predominantly Muslim village Kobilja Glava still had to be cleaned up.⁸⁰⁶⁴

(E) Scheduled Incident D.21

2387. The Indictment refers to the destruction of the Ugorsko mosque as well as the Semizovac Catholic church between April and September 1992.⁸⁰⁶⁵

2388. According to Riedlmayer, the Ugorsko mosque in the southern part of Vogošća was “heavily damaged” by Serb shelling on 1 September 1992, and the Catholic church in Semizovac was “completely destroyed” by Serb forces after they took control of the area at the beginning of May 1992.⁸⁰⁶⁶ While the Chamber relies on Riedlmayer for the purposes of finding that the mosque and the church in question were destroyed, and determining the nature and extent of the damage to those sites, it does not rely on his evidence in order to determine who was responsible for the destruction as such matters fall outside Riedlmayer’s expertise and are based on statements which he received from informants.⁸⁰⁶⁷

2389. Having received no other evidence concerning Scheduled Incident D.21, the Chamber is not satisfied, beyond reasonable doubt, that Serb Forces heavily damaged and completely destroyed the Ugorsko mosque and the Catholic church in Semizovac between April and September 1992.

⁸⁰⁶⁵ Indictment, Scheduled Incident D.21. The Indictment initially also referred to the Karauka-Donja mosque under Scheduled Incident D.21. Subsequently, however, the Prosecution indicated that the Karauka-Donja mosque should refer to the Karaula mekteb which was located in Ilijaš Municipality. See Indictment, Scheduled Incident D.21, fn. 21. In its Final Brief, the Prosecution confirmed the exclusion of the Karauka-Donja mosque from the scope of Scheduled Incident D.21. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, p. 60, fn. 874.

(F) Detention facilities in Vogošća

2390. There were several detention facilities in Vogošća, including a World War II era bunker known as “the Bunker” and “Planjo’s House”.⁸⁰⁶⁸

2391. All detention facilities in Vogošća were run by one reserve police unit under the command of Branko Vlačo.⁸⁰⁶⁹ Vlačo answered to the Crisis Staff and determined who entered or exited the Bunker and Planjo’s House.⁸⁰⁷⁰ Nebojša Špirić was Vlačo’s deputy and was formally appointed as commander of the guards for the Vogošća detention facilities.⁸⁰⁷¹ Špirić later replaced Vlačo and became the warden of all detention facilities in Vogošća.⁸⁰⁷²

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.26.3

2392. The Indictment refers to the use of the Bunker in Vogošća as a detention facility at least between May and July 1992.

(a) Establishment and control

2393. The Bunker was a concrete structure of about 36 square metres that had been built during World War II.⁸⁰⁷³ It had concrete floors, one door and a small window with metal bars.⁸⁰⁷⁴ It was situated in close proximity to a river and a local restaurant and motel called “Kon Tiki”, also known as “Kod Sonja”.⁸⁰⁷⁵ Kod Sonja served as the headquarters of the Vogošća Crisis Staff.⁸⁰⁷⁶

2394. On 2 May 1992, Slavko Jovanović, acting on behalf of Tintor, ordered Željka Beganović, the son of the owner of Kod Sonja, to provide suitable premises to the Vogošća SJB and TO for the purpose of questioning detained persons.⁸⁰⁷⁷ Individuals captured during combat in Vogošća, Svrake and Semizovac were transferred to the Bunker.⁸⁰⁷⁸

2395. There were on average 30 to 70 persons detained in the Bunker.⁸⁰⁷⁹ Initially, four women were held in the Bunker and the adjoining buildings.⁸⁰⁸⁰ Later on, more women were also brought to Kod Sonja.⁸⁰⁸¹ Individuals in the Bunker were detained upon the orders of the Vogošća Crisis Staff and the VRS.⁸⁰⁸² Vlačo gave specific instructions to Radić to arrest people and bring them in for questioning.⁸⁰⁸³

2396. A guard patrolled at the top of the Bunker and approximately ten guards secured its surroundings.⁸⁰⁸⁴ Some guards at the Bunker and Kod Sonja wore old JNA uniforms,⁸⁰⁸⁵ while soldiers there were seen usually wearing camouflage uniforms and cockades.⁸⁰⁸⁶ Some of them boasted that they were from Serbia or that they were Šešelj's men.⁸⁰⁸⁷

2397. As found above, on 4 May 1992, after the take-over of Svrake, a large group of Bosnian Muslim villagers was apprehended by Serb Forces and taken to the Semizovac Barracks.⁸⁰⁸⁸ There, the Bosnian Muslim men, women and children were placed in a hangar which had been previously used for storing tanks.⁸⁰⁸⁹ After two days, the women and children were separated from the men and taken back to Svrake.⁸⁰⁹⁰ Approximately 150 able-bodied men were taken to a place called “Naka’s Garage” whereas a few individuals, including Muračević, were taken to the Bunker by Predrag Žarković and Nebojša Lazić, a paramilitary from Serbia.⁸⁰⁹¹

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2398. The roof of the Bunker had holes through which rainwater entered.⁸⁰⁹² Inside the Bunker, it was very dark, cold and, wet.⁸⁰⁹³ Detainees slept on a dirty concrete floor.⁸⁰⁹⁴ On or about 16 May 1992, the guards brought gym mats but these mats became soaked with rainwater.⁸⁰⁹⁵ All the garbage and leftovers from Kod Sonja were thrown downhill and accumulated around the Bunker.⁸⁰⁹⁶

2399. Little food was provided to the detainees and the guards decided who received food and who did not.⁸⁰⁹⁷ At times, the food which was intended for the detainees was given to dogs.⁸⁰⁹⁸ The guards sometimes used the same bowls they had used to feed the dogs to distribute food to the detainees.⁸⁰⁹⁹

2400. During the initial period at the Bunker, the guards took the detainees outside so that they could use the toilet.⁸¹⁰⁰ As the number of detainees increased later on, however, the guards placed a bucket inside and at times, this bucket was not emptied for days.⁸¹⁰¹ The Bunker did not have a water tap and Eset Muračević only managed to wash his face for the first time during his detention in early August.⁸¹⁰² Slobodan Avlijaš who became a member of the SerBiH Commission for the Inspection of Collection Centres in August 1992,⁸¹⁰³ testified that during an official visit to the

Bunker, he observed the detainees' conditions and found them to be so inhumane that he was left "feeling horror".⁸¹⁰⁴

2401. The women detained at the Bunker were subjected to sexual abuse at the Bunker, at its surrounding buildings, and at Serb frontline positions.⁸¹⁰⁵

2402. During his first day in the Bunker, Muračević was forced to run the gauntlet.⁸¹⁰⁶ Later that same day, he was taken, blindfolded, to a bridge where he was interrogated, threatened, and beaten by Predrag Jovanović, Lazić, and Žarković.⁸¹⁰⁷

2403. In early May 1992, detainees at the Bunker were taken out on a daily basis for interrogation, during the course of which beatings occurred.⁸¹⁰⁸ Later, interrogations continued but they were not always accompanied by beatings.⁸¹⁰⁹ Those involved in the interrogations and beatings were guards and two inspectors by the names of Mile Renovica and Slaviša Mišić, as well as Vlačo and Živko Lazarević, a former inspector at the Vogošća SJB.⁸¹¹⁰

2404. From the Bunker, detainees were also brought to the Vogošća SJB for questioning.⁸¹¹¹ Detainees were also taken out of the Bunker to work on trenches and perform other forms of labour.⁸¹¹²

2405. The guards threatened the detainees, stole from them, or brought people from the outside to mistreat them in the absence of Vlačo.⁸¹¹³ The guards as well as members of Šešelj's men threw smoke grenades, tear gas grenades and stink bombs into the Bunker in the presence of Vlačo.⁸¹¹⁴

2406. On one occasion, six members of Šešelj's men, in the presence of Vlačo and other guards, took Ahmet Hido and Hasan Abaz, kicked them, and hit them with their fists and rifle butts.⁸¹¹⁵

Afterwards, they forced the two Bosnian Muslim men to have oral sex and sexual intercourse.⁸¹¹⁶ The Šešelj's men then forced Hasan Abaz to jump off a three metre high wall with his bare chest first several times.⁸¹¹⁷ Abaz sustained severe injuries from these jumps and subsequently vomited blood.⁸¹¹⁸ Similarly, Nijaz Salkić and Taib Kodžaga were forced to jump off the upper level of the Bunker.⁸¹¹⁹

2407. On 26 May 1992, the detainees were informed that UNPROFOR would visit the Bunker the following day. They were ordered to wash themselves with a hose beside Kod Sonja.⁸¹²⁰ Muračević and four other detainees were selected as spokespersons in case UNPROFOR asked any questions.⁸¹²¹ The detainees were threatened with severe punishment in the event they complained.⁸¹²² The next day, UNPROFOR personnel came but did not enter the Bunker.⁸¹²³

2408. Around the end of May 1992, Muračević was told that he would be sent back to Svrake in order to be killed there by Muslims.⁸¹²⁴ He was then blindfolded and taken to Naka's Garage for one night where he saw 150 individuals, many of them from Svrake.⁸¹²⁵

2409. On 25 May 1992, the Serb municipality of Vogošća Department for Judiciary, Administration and Regulations proposed the exchange of 15 "citizens of Muslim ethnicity" captured in the residential area of Svrake for a number of Serbs who had been detained in Visoko.⁸¹²⁶ Pursuant to a decision made by the Head of the Department for Judiciary, on 25 May 1992, with the approval of the Vogošća Crisis Staff, 21 "[c]itizens of Muslim nationality who were captured in fights in Svrake" were to be exchanged in Lješevu for three Serbs who were detained in prisons in Visoko municipality.⁸¹²⁷

(c) Conclusion

2410. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces detained non-Serbs from Vogošća and surrounding areas, including civilian males and females, at the Bunker. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions. These included a lack of adequate food, sanitary facilities and general hygiene. The Chamber also finds that the male detainees were subjected to beatings and forced labour and that both male and female detainees were subjected to acts of sexual violence.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.26.1

2411. The Prosecution refers to the use of Planjo's House in Svrače as a detention facility from early July 1992 until at least February 1993.⁸¹²⁸

(a) Establishment and control

2412. Planjo's House was situated between Svrače and Semizovac, some 200 metres from the Sarajevo-Zenica road.⁸¹²⁹ It had a garage, an attic, and three spacious floors.⁸¹³⁰ Planjo's House was originally a private property owned by two Muslims, Almas Planjo and Miralem Planjo.⁸¹³¹

2413. In early July 1992, Avlijaš advised the authorities of the Serb municipality of Vogošća that Planjo's House should replace the Bunker as a detention facility.⁸¹³² According to Avlijaš, Planjo's House was chosen for two reasons: (i) it was further away from the frontlines and could therefore not be shelled by Muslim forces; (ii) it was more suitable to serve as a detention facility and conformed with the Accused's instructions concerning the treatment of captured persons.⁸¹³³ On

However, by virtue of the Prosecution Rule 73 bis Submission, Appendix B, p. 92, this period was extended to be from early July 1992 until at least February 1993.

8 July 1992, the Municipal Secretariat for Town Planning temporarily turned Planjo's House over to the Ministry of Justice, for the needs of the Prison Department of Vogošća.⁸¹³⁴

2414. From August 1992, mainly non-Serbs,⁸¹³⁵ including women and children, were detained in Planjo's House.⁸¹³⁶ On 11 August 1992, Vlačo and a few guards transferred Muračević and about 30 of the 40 or so detainees who were left in the Bunker to Planjo's House which was at the time empty.⁸¹³⁷ The detainees were placed in the cellar.⁸¹³⁸ On 17 August 1992, the Ilijaš SJB brought 91 Bosnian Muslims who had been detained in Ilijaš.⁸¹³⁹ On 22 August 1992, Ramiz Mujkić who had been detained in the Rajlovac Barracks, in Novi Grad municipality, was also transferred to Planjo's House.⁸¹⁴⁰ In late September or October 1992, about 70 Bosnian Muslim men who had been detained in the Hadžići Culture and Sport Centre were transferred to Planjo's house.⁸¹⁴¹ Apart from these instances, detainees were brought from other places around the municipality of Vogošća, such as Visoko, Sokolac, Hadžići, Bioča, Doglodi, and Nahorevo.⁸¹⁴² In December 1992, four girls between the ages of 16 and 22 were brought to Planjo's House.⁸¹⁴³

2415. From 22 August 1992 until mid October 1992, Planjo's House alone housed between 100 and 150 detainees.⁸¹⁴⁴ This number later increased to 200.⁸¹⁴⁵ Women and children were held in separate quarters.⁸¹⁴⁶

2416. Armed soldiers and policemen who were dressed in camouflage uniforms guarded Planjo's House at all times.⁸¹⁴⁷

2417. Around mid August 1992, Momčilo Mandić and a Serb journalist visited Planjo's House.⁸¹⁴⁸ When queried by one of the detainees about possible exchanges, Mandić replied that there was no need for any exchanges as the detainees were at their "homes".⁸¹⁴⁹

2418. At some point, those detained in Naka's Garage were allowed to return to Svrake under the condition that they (i) report on a daily basis to the Serb authorities in order to be assigned and carry out work and (ii) go back to Planjo's House every night in order to spend the night there.⁸¹⁵⁰ However, eventually, these individuals were confined to Planjo's House during day-time as well.⁸¹⁵¹

2419. On 23 October 1992, ICRC representatives came to Planjo's House, registered the individuals held there. Some of the detainees were exchanged a few days later.⁸¹⁵²

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

2420. The food served in Planjo's House was of poor quality.⁸¹⁵³ Some detainees slept in the beds that were available, others slept on the floor, and a number slept on the stairs.⁸¹⁵⁴ Blankets were provided.⁸¹⁵⁵ Detainees were allowed to use the bathroom, situated in the basement.⁸¹⁵⁶

2421. Muračević stated that although the conditions were slightly better in Planjo's House, the treatment was the same as that in the Bunker, if not worse.⁸¹⁵⁷

2422. In Planjo's House, some detainees were placed in a small isolation room.⁸¹⁵⁸ Siniša Đurđić and Nikola Jovanović, Tintor's personal driver, beat and abused the detainees and brought their friends to watch.⁸¹⁵⁹ After one such beating as a result of which one of the detainees was left unconscious, one of Đurđić's friends drew out his gun and placed it in the mouths of several detainees, threatening to kill everybody.⁸¹⁶⁰

2423. One of the guards, Dragan Damjanović, often forced detainees to beat one another with batons.⁸¹⁶¹ He also accompanied them to their work duties and physically abused them there.⁸¹⁶² On one occasion, Damjanović forced Bego Selimović and another man to carry the body of someone who had been killed in the battlefield.⁸¹⁶³ While Selimović and the man were carrying the body, Damjanović repeatedly hit them with a piece of wood, to a point that Selimović's back turned black.⁸¹⁶⁴

Trifunović who was the commander of the Vogošća Brigade at the time, testified that the conditions at Planjo's House were generally good, in particular, that the rooms had large windows with good light and heating, and that there were toilets, showers, and a kitchen available to the detainees. D2444 (Witness statement of Miladin Trifunović dated 11 November 2012), para. 1; Miladin Trifunović, T. 30373–20374 (15 November 2012). However, the Chamber rejects Trifunović's assertions in light of his lack of forthrightness as a witness and because of the consistent and reliable evidence which indicates that contrary to Trifunović's claim, the conditions at Planjo's House were poor.

The Chamber, however, does not find this part of Mujkić's testimony to be reliable and notes that Mujkić contradicted himself on this point on two occasions. In his statement, Mujkić stated that a mentally disabled individual was beaten unconscious by the guards and that a professor by the name of Zahid Baručija was mistreated by a guard who claimed to have been Baručija's former student. 2424. On 20 August 1992, Muračević and a group of approximately 50 prisoners were taken to Ravne Hill in order to clear a small forest which had been burnt during fighting the day before.⁸¹⁶⁵ The prisoners spent the entire day working without any food or water. Some fell from exhaustion and were beaten with rifle butts.⁸¹⁶⁶ On that same day, Muračević injured his hand while working.⁸¹⁶⁷ Due to lack of adequate medical care, the injury eventually became infected.⁸¹⁶⁸

2425. One day, a mentally disabled detainee by the name of Pinjo cursed the Serb guards who then beat him unconscious.⁸¹⁶⁹ That same afternoon, Vlačo came to Planjo's House and after hearing from the guards about what Pinjo had said, hit him with his pistol, causing him to fall.⁸¹⁷⁰

2426. Sometimes during the weekends, intoxicated volunteers from Serbia came to Planjo's House to beat and mistreat the detainees.⁸¹⁷¹ These individuals were called "weekend Chetniks" by the prison guards.⁸¹⁷² On one occasion, one of these "weekend Chetniks" entered Planjo's House and ordered Mirsad Šehić to eat cigarette butts.⁸¹⁷³ Šehić proceeded to chew the cigarette butts but when he proved unable to swallow them, he was ordered to perform oral sex with another man in front of his own father.⁸¹⁷⁴ According to Mujkić, in another instance, another "weekend Chetnik" forced a young detainee in Planjo's House to climb up a fence from the balcony and dive onto the ground, head first.⁸¹⁷⁵ for “occasional use of detainees for construction and other work”.⁸¹⁷⁷ Three days, later, Mandić gave Poplašen approval.⁸¹⁷⁸

Trifunović also asserted that the detainees who were taken on compulsory work assignments were in no danger because VRS was always there with them. Miladin Trifunović, T. 30398, 30400, 30405–30407, 30412 (15 November 2012). The Chamber, however, does not find this evidence to be reliable for the following reasons. First, the Chamber found that Trifunović’s testimony to be marked by indicators of lack of forthrightness. Second, the Chamber is not convinced that the presence of the VRS alongside the detainees at the frontlines would have assured the latter’s safety. On the contrary, the Chamber is of the view that such presence would have further exacerbated the extremely precarious situation in which the detainees were already forced into by Serb Forces. Third, the Chamber received and found to be reliable the detailed evidence of a number of former detainees who personally experienced being forced to serve as human shields and who observed others get injured or killed while doing the same thing.

Muslim side.⁸¹⁸³ On 29 July 1992, the War Commission ordered the release of two Muslim “prisoners of war”.⁸¹⁸⁴ In mid-August 1992, Mirko Krajišnik and a Bosnian Muslim negotiated the exchange of several other individuals.⁸¹⁸⁵ On 25 October 1992, 53 detainees, including Ramiz Mujkić and Mustafa Fazlić, were exchanged and later crossed into BiH-controlled territory.⁸¹⁸⁶ On 6 November 1992, the War Presidency of the Serb municipality of Vogošća ordered that 14 Bosnian Muslims be exchanged with 14 Serbs.⁸¹⁸⁷ On 25 December 1992, Špirić handed over 18 Bosnian Muslims from the detention facilities in Vogošća to Hadžići SJB officials so that they could be exchanged.⁸¹⁸⁸

(c) Conclusion

2430. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces used Planjo’s House as a detention facility at least from August 1992 until at least February 1993. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions. These included a lack of adequate food, sanitary facilities, general hygiene and medical care. The Chamber also finds that non-Serbs, including women and children, were detained in Planjo’s House and that the guards there routinely subjected the male detainees to beatings and maltreatment, including acts of a sexual nature. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces routinely took non-Serb males who were detained in Planjo’s House in Svake to the frontlines and forced them to carry out labour or to serve as human shields.

(d) Scheduled Incident B.19.1

2431. The indictment alleges the killing of “a number of detainees” who were taken out from Planjo’s House in Svake between August and September 1992 in order to carry out forced labour and to serve as human shields.⁸¹⁸⁹

2432. On 29 August 1992, Vlačo reported that eight detainees were taken to work at Žuč and that one of them was “wounded by an enemy sniper while working”.⁸¹⁹⁰ In the second half of September 1992, pursuant to an order issued by Trifunović, 50 detainees, including Mustafa Fazlić

⁸¹⁸⁹ Indictment, Scheduled Incident B.19.1. The Indictment originally referred to the period between 30 May and December 1992 as the time frame for Scheduled Incident B.19.1. However, as per the Prosecution Rule 73 bis Submission, Appendix B, p. 92, this time frame was reduced to August and September 1992.

and Bego Selimović, were selected by Vlačo, divided in groups, and taken to Žuč in order to look for mines, dig trenches and serve as human shields.⁸¹⁹¹ Trifunović ordered that on 26 September 1992, 30 detainees be transported to Žuč by military vehicles in order to carry out construction work and be given food by the Vogošća Brigade Command.⁸¹⁹² Near the end of September, detainees were again taken to Žuč and at one point ordered to walk close by a Serb tank that was, together with a number Serb infantry troops, engaged in combat activities. As a result, a number of detainees were seriously wounded.⁸¹⁹³ At one point, the tank lost control and slipped down a hill near the Bosnian Muslim positions.⁸¹⁹⁴ Some of the remaining detainees were made to retrieve the ammunition from the tank.⁸¹⁹⁵ During this operation, several detainees were killed by Muslim fire.⁸¹⁹⁶

The Chamber heard additional evidence on incidents which occurred after September 1992 and which involved the use of human shields as well as forced labour and resulted in casualties. See P124 (Witness statement of Zijad Okić dated 24 June 1997), e-court p. 7, P46 (Witness statement of Bego Selimović dated 21 June 1997), paras. 34–35, 38, P124 (Witness statement of Zijad Okić dated 24 June 1997), e-court p. 9. The Chamber notes, however, that these incidents are not charged in the Indictment. The list of the killed and missing civilians in Vogošća, prepared by Muračević, refers to 10 individuals who died while performing forced labour or serving as human shields during September 1992. These individuals are Enver Činara, Azem Durmić, Nail Durmić, Bajro Holujić, Bajro Hujić, Safet Kruezi, Hamid Rizvo, Hasan Rizvo, Nermin Skando and Avdo Tirić. P2397 (List of people arrested in Vogošća during 1992–1995), pp. 5–6, 10, 14, 21, 23, 25. By contrast, Amor Mašović refers to 16 individuals, namely Azim Čović, Bajram Salkić, Avdo Tirić, Azem Durmić, Bajro Hujić, Džmail Šehić, Enver Činara, Ferid Šehić, Hamid Rizvo, Mehmed Šehić, Nail Durmić, Nermin Skando, Nusret Selimović, Ramiz Handžić, Rasim Avdukić and Safet Kruezi, as victims of Scheduled Incident B19.1. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 97–98. Having considered these inconsistencies, the Chamber does not consider them to be of relevance, as it is satisfied, that a number of men indeed died in Scheduled Incident B.19.1. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that there are some discrepancies in evidence as regards the names of some of the victims of Scheduled Incident B.19.1, but it considers these inconsistencies to be minor. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that these are in fact the same individuals.

2434. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that as a result of the detainees in Planjo's House being forced by Serb Forces to carry out labour at the frontlines or to serve as human shields, at least 16 detainees were killed and a number were wounded during August and September 1992.

(G) Movement of the population from Vogošća and appropriation of property

2435. According to Muračević, between May 1992 and mid-June 1993, approximately 13,000 individuals, of whom the greater majority were Bosnian Muslims, left the Serb-controlled parts of the municipality of Vogošća.⁸¹⁹⁸ Muračević further stated that almost all the Bosnian Muslim inhabitants of Svrake and Tihovići left during the same period.⁸¹⁹⁹ On 31 May 1993, the Executive Board of the Serb municipality of Vogošća established the municipal commission for the census of the population.⁸²⁰⁰ According to the census that was subsequently conducted, the villages of Svrake had not a single Muslim resident, the village of Hotonj had one, whereas Semizovac had 16.⁸²⁰¹ The same census indicates that the population of the 14 villages that were surveyed in the municipality of Vogošća was 93.5% Bosnian Serb, 1.8% Bosnian Muslim, and 2.6% Bosnian Croat.⁸²⁰²

2436. Bosnian Muslims leaving Vogošća were required to obtain certificates of departure and were forced to either sign their property over to the municipal authorities or exchange it with Serb property in other municipalities in BiH.⁸²⁰³ In an interview, published on 13 July 1992, Koprivica admitted that the distribution to Serb refugees of empty houses in the municipality of Vogošća had not been carried out appropriately and implied that there had been various cases where individuals had simply occupied houses without any form of registration whatsoever.⁸²⁰⁴

2437. By reference to the evidence of Nikola Poplašen, the Accused argues that (i) the intention behind the regulation requiring the departing non-Serbs to sign documents transferring ownership of property to the Bosnian Serb authorities was to preserve it and to prevent its misuse by organised armed groups,⁸²⁰⁵ (ii) the enactment of this regulation in itself suggests that there were no

⁸²⁰⁵ Defence Final Brief, para. 1754 (referring to D4027 (Witness statement of Nikola Poplašen dated 11 November 2013), para. 14). In the same vein, the Accused asserts that the regulation created an inventory of expulsions, because non-Serbs could otherwise not leave the municipality,⁸²⁰⁶ and (iii) non-Serbs relocated on their own accord to the areas where they were in the majority and where they thought they would be safer.⁸²⁰⁷ The Chamber rejects these arguments. Poplašen himself conceded that the regulation did not provide for the return of ownership rights to the original owners and that it had to be annulled before such restoration could take place.⁸²⁰⁸ Furthermore, it is clear from the evidence before the Chamber that the main purpose of the regulation was to facilitate the use of the vacant property in question by Serbs who had just arrived in the municipality. In turn, this ensured that those non-Serbs who left Vogošća, due to the circumstances there, would not return.

2438. In light of the foregoing, and considering the surrounding circumstances in the municipality, the Chamber finds that the non-Serb population from the Serb-controlled parts of Vogošća was forced to leave.

2. Legal findings on crimes

a. Chapeau requirements for Articles 3 and 5 of the Statute

2439. In the Municipalities component of the case, in addition to a count of genocide under Article 4 of the Statute, the Accused is charged with a count of violations of the laws or customs of war under Article 3 of the Statute, namely murder, as well as with five counts of crimes against humanity under Article 5 of the Statute, namely persecution, murder, extermination, deportation, and forcible transfer as an inhumane act.⁸²⁰⁹ The Prosecution alleges that there was a state of armed conflict at all times relevant to the Indictment.⁸²¹⁰ It further alleges that all acts and omissions charged as crimes against humanity, except those that formed part of the sniping and shelling campaign in Sarajevo, were part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH.⁸²¹¹ all property which subsequently helped “immensely” in returning them to their rightful owners upon their return to Vogošća. Defence Final Brief, paras. 1747, 1754. The Chamber is unable to assign any weight to this assertion as there is no evidence in support of it.

⁸²¹¹ Indictment, para. 88.

i. Article 3 of the Statute

2440. Based on the evidence set out in detail above regarding the events related to this case, the Chamber finds that there was an armed conflict in BiH throughout the period relevant to the crimes alleged in the Indictment. At the latest, the armed conflict in BiH started in early April 1992. In the wake of the referendum on the independence of BiH on 29 February and 1 March 1992, armed clashes between Serb Forces on the one hand and Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat forces on the other ensued.⁸²¹² These armed clashes intensified and in early April 1992, municipalities starting with those in Eastern BiH were taken over by Serb Forces.⁸²¹³

2441. For murder charged under Article 3 of the Statute, the Chamber has examined whether it was closely related to the armed conflict and made such findings where relevant in this Judgement.⁸²¹⁴

2442. In relation to the four so called “Tadić Conditions”, the Chamber refers to the applicable law sections of this Judgement, which expanded on the legal basis for each of the crimes charged in the Indictment under Article 3 of the Statute.⁸²¹⁵ In relation to murder, the prohibition stems from Common Article 3 which is deemed to be part of customary international law.⁸²¹⁶ Further, the Appeals Chamber has confirmed that violations of the provisions of Common Article 3 entail individual criminal responsibility.⁸²¹⁷ The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the four Tadić Conditions are met, and consequently that the chapeau requirements for Article 3 of the Statute are fulfilled, in relation to murder.

ii. Article 5 of the Statute

2443. As found above, there was an armed conflict in BiH throughout the period of the Indictment. The evidence admitted at trial and explained in detail in the relevant factual sections of this Judgement, demonstrates that there also existed a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH at all times relevant to the crimes charged in the Indictment. The attack took many forms, as shown below in relation to each of the relevant components of the case. As reflected below, the Chamber is also satisfied that the crimes

⁸²¹² See paras. 609, 952, 958, 1242, 1500, 2258, 2306–2308, 2368–2369, 2373.

⁸²¹⁴ See para. 2455. The Chamber notes that in relation to the Municipalities component, murder is the only charged violation of the laws or customs of war pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute.

⁸²¹⁵ See Section III.A.1: Article 3 of the Statute of the Tribunal.

⁸²¹⁶ Čelebići Appeal Judgement, para. 143.

⁸²¹⁷ Čelebići Appeal Judgement, paras. 167, 170, 173–174 (holding at para. 173: “It is universally acknowledged that the acts enumerated in common Article 3 are wrongful and shock the conscience of civilised people, and upon which the Chamber has entered findings formed part of that attack and that the perpetrators knew of the attack and that the crimes were part of it.⁸²¹⁸

2444. In the Municipalities, at the time relevant to the Indictment, the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations were the subject of a widespread and systematic campaign of violence, including through acts of murder, and forcible displacement.⁸²¹⁹ The acts of violence and crimes committed against the Bosnian Muslim and Croat populations included killings, cruel and inhumane treatment such as torture and rape, the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions, unlawful detention, forced labour at the frontlines and the use of human shields, plunder of property, wanton destruction of private and public property, as well as the imposition of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁸²²⁰ While the Chamber finds differences in each of the Municipalities, it is satisfied that there was a generally similar pattern of co-ordinated violence during and after the take-over of these Municipalities and in detention facilities throughout. Indeed, in twenty municipalities in Eastern BiH, the ARK, and the Sarajevo area, and in detention facilities therein, Serb Forces committed acts of murder, persecution, and forcible displacement, which resulted in a vast number of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat victims. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that this demonstrates the systematic and widespread nature of the attack.

2445. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the chapeau requirements for the crimes charged under Article 5 of the Statute are met.

b. Crimes

i. Murder: Counts 5 and 6

(A) Killing incidents

2446. The Chamber recalls its factual findings in Section IV.A.1 above, that a large number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were killed by Serb Forces during and after the take-over⁸²²¹ thus are, in the language of Article 15(2) of the ICCPR, ‘criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations’.”).

⁸²¹⁸ See paras. 2456, 2463, 2481–2482, 2517, 2521, 2529, 2537, 2546, 2558, 2569.

⁸²¹⁹ See Sections IV.A.2.b.i: Legal findings on crimes (Murder: Counts 5 and 6), IV.A.2.b.iii: Legal findings on crimes (Deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer): Counts 7 and 8).

⁸²²⁰ See Section IV.A.2.b.iv: Legal findings on crimes (Persecution: Count 3).

2447. The Chamber also recalls its findings in section IV.A.1 above, that many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were killed by Serb Forces while detained at detention facilities⁸²³³ in Banja Luka,⁸²³⁴ Bijeljina,⁸²³⁵ Bratunac,⁸²³⁶ Brčko,⁸²³⁷ Foča,⁸²³⁸ Iliđža,⁸²³⁹ Ključ,⁸²⁴⁰ Novi Grad,⁸²⁴¹ Pale,⁸²⁴² Prijedor,⁸²⁴³ Rogatica,⁸²⁴⁴ Sanski Most,⁸²⁴⁵ Vlasenica,⁸²⁴⁶ Vogošća,⁸²⁴⁷ and Zvornik.⁸²⁴⁸

⁸²²³ The killing of at least four people in the village of Hranča and the killing of at least 65 Bosnian Muslims in the village of Glogova: Scheduled Incidents A.3.1, A.3.2. The Chamber recalls that it did not have sufficient evidence to make a finding beyond reasonable doubt as to the circumstances surrounding the death of some Bosnian Muslims killed in Hranča in the municipality of Bratunac.

⁸²³¹ The killing of at least 20 Bosnian Muslim men in the village of Drum and the killing of at least 60 people including women and children in the village of Zaklopača: Scheduled Incidents A.15.1, A.15.2.

⁸²³⁴ The killing of six Bosnian Muslim men in front of the gates of Manjača, the suffocation of 20 detainees during transportation to Manjača, Banja Luka, the killing of eight or nine Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats on their arrival at Manjača, and the killing of at least 15 Bosnian Muslim men detained at Manjača: Scheduled Incidents B.1.1, B.1.2, B.1.3, B.1.4.

The Chamber notes that the Indictment originally included Kula Prison as being located in Novo Sarajevo municipality; however it was subsequently 2448. The Chamber further recalls its findings in section IV.A.1 above, that some Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats died as a result of cruel and inhumane treatment by Serb Forces at detention facilities in Banja Luka,⁸²⁴⁹ Bijeljina,⁸²⁵⁰ Bratunac,⁸²⁵¹ Foča,⁸²⁵² Prijedor,⁸²⁵³ Rogatica,⁸²⁵⁴ Sanski Most,⁸²⁵⁵ and Zvornik.⁸²⁵⁶

(B) Intent of perpetrators

2449. The Chamber recalls its findings that the death of the victims for each of the incidents identified above was a result of the acts of Serb Forces. The Chamber finds that the perpetrators of each of these incidents acted with the intent to kill the victims or at least wilfully caused serious bodily harm, which they should reasonably have known might lead to death.

2450. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the circumstances and the manner in which the victims were killed. With respect to the Schedule A killing incidents, the Chamber found that many of the victims were deliberately shot.⁸²⁵⁷ In other incidents, while the Chamber did not have evidence that the victims were deliberately shot, the Chamber did find that they were killed during or after the take-over of towns or villages by Serb Forces⁸²⁵⁸ and is satisfied considering the surrounding circumstances that these killings were deliberate.⁸²⁵⁹

2451. With respect to killings in scheduled detention facilities under Schedule B of the Indictment, the Chamber found that the victims (i) were shot by Serb Forces during their detention;⁸²⁶⁰ (ii) died as a result of severe beatings by Serb Forces during their detention;⁸²⁶¹ or (iii) were taken away from the detention facilities by Serb Forces and killed.⁸²⁶²

2452. The Chamber recalls its finding that in Vogošća and Ilidža a number of detainees were taken from their place of detention by Serb Forces and killed while carrying out work on the front-lines or while being used as human shields.⁸²⁶³ The victims died as a result of the actions of Serb Forces who used them for work on the front-lines or as human shields. In using the victims for work on the front-lines or as human shields, the members of the Serb Forces deliberately took the risk that they would be killed. The Chamber finds that in using them as human shields or in forcing ⁸²⁵⁸ Scheduled Incidents A.5.2, A.5.4, A.12.3.

⁸²⁵⁹ For example with respect to the three civilians killed as a result of the shelling by Serb Forces in Pudin Han, Ključ municipality, the Chamber found that the mosque was blown up and levelled and that upon his return, KDZ024 found everything in the village burned, destroyed, and in ruins: Scheduled Incident A.7.1. On this basis the Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the shelling was carried out with the intent to cause serious bodily harm which the perpetrators should reasonably have known might lead to the death of civilians.

⁸²⁶⁰ Scheduled Incidents B.2.1, B.4.1, B.5.1, B.10.1, B.12.1, B.15.1, B.15.4, B.15.5, B.16.2, B.18.1, B.18.3, B.20.1, B.20.2, B.20.3, B.20.4.

The Indictment refers to a separate category of killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment and detention facilities. Indictment, para. 60(a)(ii). However, the Chamber notes that some of the Schedule B killing incidents pertain to deaths resulting from such cruel and inhumane treatment.

⁸²⁶² Scheduled Incidents B.8.1, B.12.1, B.12.2, B.15.2, B.15.3, B.15.6, B.16.1, B.18.2, B.1.1, B.1.3, B.17.1.

them to work on the frontlines, the perpetrators wilfully caused the victims serious bodily harm, which they should reasonably have known might lead to death.

2453. With respect to victims who died as a result of cruel and inhumane treatment at detention facilities, the Chamber found that the victims died in circumstances which showed an intent by the perpetrators to kill or at least wilfully cause them serious bodily harm, which they should reasonably have known might lead to death.⁸²⁶⁴ For example the Chamber found that the detainees were severely beaten⁸²⁶⁵ inter alia with chains and metal rods.⁸²⁶⁶ Others were subjected to such conditions that they died from starvation, exhaustion,⁸²⁶⁷ lack of medical care,⁸²⁶⁸ intense heat,⁸²⁶⁹ or suffocation.⁸²⁷⁰

(C) Status of victims

2454. The Chamber also finds that the victims of each of these incidents were civilians⁸²⁷¹ or had been rendered hors de combat at the time of their killing. Many of the victims were executed or killed after being captured by Serb Forces,⁸²⁷² some were killed while trying to escape from Serb Forces⁸²⁷³ while others were killed after being detained by Serb Forces in scheduled detention facilities.⁸²⁷⁴

(D) Conclusion

2455. The Chamber has found that there was an armed conflict in BiH throughout the period relevant to the Indictment. As demonstrated by the Chamber's factual findings explained above, the Chamber finds that the killings referred to in this section were closely related to that armed conflict and thus constitute murder as violation of the laws or customs of war.

2456. The Chamber has also found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the killings referred to above were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these killings knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these killings, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber therefore finds that these killings constitute murder as a crime against humanity.

ii. Extermination: Count 4

2457. The Chamber has also had regard to each of the killing incidents identified above to determine whether they amount to extermination. While the Chamber recalls that there is no minimum threshold of victims for the purposes of extermination, it still has to be satisfied that the killings occurred on a mass scale and needs to conduct a case-by-case assessment in that regard.⁸²⁷⁵

2458. As previously noted, extermination may be established based on the accumulation of separate incidents.⁸²⁷⁶ However, it has been found that “as a general matter, the element of killing on a large scale cannot be satisfied by a collective consideration of distinct events committed in different prefectures, in different circumstances, by different perpetrators, and over an extended period of time”.⁸²⁷⁷

2459. In this case, the Chamber noted that a large number of killing incidents charged in the Indictment with respect to the Municipalities were committed in different locations, in different circumstances, and by different perpetrators over an extended period of time. Having considered these factors, where the Chamber found that the incidents in question were distinct, the Chamber assessed on a case-by-case basis whether each incident amounts to a mass scale killing for the purposes of the actus reus of extermination. In making that assessment, the Chamber has had regard to the scale of each of the killing incidents and the circumstances in which the killings occurred. The Chamber has done so where the circumstances indicated that the killings were committed in geographically proximate locations, in similar circumstances, over a relatively short period of time and were thus considered to be part of the same operation.

⁸²⁷⁵ See Section III.A.2.c: Extermination as a crime against humanity.

⁸²⁷⁶ See Section III.A.2.c: Extermination as a crime against humanity.

⁸²⁷⁷ See Section III.A.2.c: Extermination as a crime against humanity.

2460. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the element of killing on a mass scale is established with respect to each of the following incidents which occurred during and after the take-over of the Municipalities: (i) the killing of at least 45 civilians in the town of Bijeljina;⁸²⁷⁸ (ii) the killing of at least 65 Bosnian Muslims in the village of Glogova in Bratunac;⁸²⁷⁹ (iii) the killing of 52 Bosnian Muslims in Prhovo in Ključ;⁸²⁸⁰ (iv) the killing of approximately 200 Bosnian Muslims in Biljani in Ključ;⁸²⁸¹ (v) the killing of 80 Bosnian Muslims in Kozarac in Prijedor;⁸²⁸² (vi) the killing of at least 300 non-Serbs in the village of Bišćani and surrounding hamlets in Prijedor;⁸²⁸³ (vii) the killing of about 50 persons at a mine in Kipe in Prijedor;⁸²⁸⁴ (viii) the killing of at least 68 people in the village of Briševo in Prijedor;⁸²⁸⁵ (ix) the killing of approximately 40 Bosnian Muslim men in the village of Novoseoci in Sokolac;⁸²⁸⁶ (x) the killing of approximately 45 Bosnian Muslim civilians near Paklenik after being taken from Višegrad;⁸²⁸⁷ (xi) the killing of at least 60 people, including women and children, in the village of Zaklopača in Vlasenica;⁸²⁸⁸ and (xii) the killing of a large number of Bosnian Muslim men at Gero's slaughterhouse in Zvornik.⁸²⁸⁹

2461. Similarly, the Chamber finds that the element of killing on a mass scale is established with respect to each of the following incidents which occurred in charged detention facilities: (i) the killing of at least 50 detainees at the Vuk Karadžić School in Bratunac;⁸²⁹⁰ (ii) the killing of a large number of non-Serb men at the Luka Camp in Brčko;⁸²⁹¹ (iii) the killing of over 200 detainees at KP Dom Foča;⁸²⁹² (iv) the killing of 77 Bosnian Muslim men at Velagići School in Ključ;⁸²⁹³ (v) the killing of 47 Bosnian Muslim detainees who had been taken away from Rajlovac in Novi Grad;⁸²⁹⁴ (vi) the killing of at least 190 persons in Room 3 at Keraterm camp in Prijedor;⁸²⁹⁵ (vii) the killing of a large number of non-Serbs at Omarska or after they were taken from Omarska in

2463. The Chamber found there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the killings above were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these killings knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these killings, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack. Further, given the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Croat civilian populations of BiH, the Chamber further finds that the perpetrators knew of the attack and that the crimes were part of it. The Chamber therefore finds that these killings constitute extermination as a crime against humanity.⁸³⁰⁴

⁸³⁰⁴ For the remaining killing incidents the Chamber was not satisfied that the element of killing on a mass scale was established. The Chamber also found that these remaining incidents were distinct and that it was impermissible to aggregate them for the purposes of assessing the mass scale element of the killings for the actus reus of extermination.

2464. The Chamber will deal with the issue of cumulative convictions later in this Judgement and the impermissibility of entering convictions for both extermination and murder under Article 5 of the Statute where the elements of both crimes have been established.⁸³⁰⁵

iii. Deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer): Counts 7 and 8

(A) Actus reus

(1) Movement of population

2465. The Chamber recalls its findings in Section IV.A.1 of this Judgement that a large number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities⁸³⁰⁶ were displaced. Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Bijeljina,⁸³⁰⁷ Bratunac,⁸³⁰⁸ Foča,⁸³⁰⁹ Pale,⁸³¹⁰ Prijedor,⁸³¹¹ Rogatica,⁸³¹² Sanski Most,⁸³¹³ Sokolac,⁸³¹⁴ Vlasenica,⁸³¹⁵ Zvornik,⁸³¹⁶ Bosanski Novi,⁸³¹⁷ Ilidža,⁸³¹⁸ Novi Grad,⁸³¹⁹ Novo Sarajevo,⁸³²⁰ Ključ,⁸³²¹ Hadžići,⁸³²² and Vogošća⁸³²³ were displaced from their homes, villages and towns in which they were lawfully present to other locations in BiH. The locations to which they moved were mostly under Bosnian Muslim control including Tuzla, Konjević Polje, Srebrenica, Goražde, Visoko, Zenica, and areas of Sarajevo. In the case of Bijeljina, the Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims were transferred to “no-man’s land” before being able to cross to ⁸³⁰⁵ See Section IV.F.

⁸³⁰⁶ The Prosecution does not allege criminal responsibility for forcible transfer or deportation in Banja Luka, Brčko and Višegrad as an underlying act of persecution under Count 3 of the Indictment. Indictment, fn. 6. The Chamber notes that in fn. 13 of the Indictment, the Prosecution only states that with regard to deportation as a crime against humanity under Count 7 of the Indictment, it does not allege criminal responsibility for Višegrad. However, the Chamber has interpreted this restrictively in light of fn. 6 of the Indictment in favour of the Accused and will not make findings with respect to forcible transfer or deportation in Banja Luka, Brčko, and Višegrad under Counts 3, 7, or 8.

Bosnian Muslim controlled territory.⁸³²⁴ With respect to these incidents the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were displaced within the national boundaries of BiH.

2466. The Chamber also found that Bosnian Muslims in Bijeljina, Zvornik and Bosanski Novi were displaced from their homes, villages and towns in which they were lawfully present to Serbia or Croatia.⁸³²⁵ In addition, the Chamber found that following the attack on Zvornik in April 1992 by Serb Forces, thousands of Bosnian Muslims fled to Mali Zvornik in Serbia.⁸³²⁶ The Chamber also found that some Bosnian Muslims from Foča were transferred to Montenegro.⁸³²⁷ The Chamber also recalls that Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat detainees from Prijedor were transferred in convoys to locations in Croatia.⁸³²⁸ With respect to these incidents the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were displaced across a de jure or de facto border between states.

2467. The Chamber recalls that the scale and extent of the expulsions and movement of civilians from the Municipalities resulted in the displacement of a vast number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.⁸³²⁹

(2) Forcible nature of movement

2468. The Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats referred to above were forcibly displaced. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the surrounding circumstances in the Municipalities and found that the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were displaced as a result of physical force,⁸³³⁰ threat of force,⁸³³¹ or coercion.⁸³³² Others fled out of fear.⁸³³³ This fear was caused by ongoing violence and various crimes committed against non-Serbs including inter alia, killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, unlawful detention, rape and other acts of sexual violence, discriminatory measures, and wanton destruction of villages, houses and cultural monuments.⁸³³⁴

2470. In many cases Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to leave following attacks against their villages or after the take-over of towns by Serb Forces.⁸³³⁹ In other cases, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were first arrested, and detained in detention facilities before being transported out of the municipality.⁸³⁴⁰ While the transfers of some detainees out of detention facilities were described as “exchanges”, the Chamber finds that given that these “exchanges” were predominantly in relation to unlawfully detained civilians, they also amount to forced displacement.⁸³⁴¹

2471. The Chamber recalls its findings that in some Municipalities Bosnian Muslims may have requested assistance or permission to leave, and in some cases they paid exorbitant fees to do so. However, these departures were not voluntary and occurred under circumstances in which they had no real choice but to leave.⁸³⁴² Even when Bosnian Muslim leaders or other non-governmental organisations were involved in trying to evacuate Bosnian Muslims, this occurred in an environment of fear and threats which does not suggest that the population left voluntarily.⁸³⁴³ The Chamber finds that even though non-governmental organisations may have been involved in facilitating some of these displacements, this does not render lawful what were otherwise unlawful transfers. The Chamber found that in other municipalities while the Bosnian Serb authorities referred to movement of the population as “voluntary departure”, in reality civilians were fleeing out of fear for their lives; this occurred in intimidating and violent circumstances which negated any suggestion of voluntariness in their departures.⁸³⁴⁴

2472. In addition the Chamber recalls its finding that even in municipalities where Bosnian Serb authorities did invite citizens to return, the number of those who returned was extremely limited, and the pattern of mistreatment, intimidation and expulsions continued.⁸³⁴⁵ In Vlasenica for example, Bosnian Muslims when they returned to their villages found that their homes had been burnt down.⁸³⁴⁶ In another incident the Chamber found that Serb Forces turned away Bosnian Muslims who tried to return after fleeing their village in Zvornik.⁸³⁴⁷ population within a national border. In relation to the incidents in paragraph 2466, the Chamber finds that members of the Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs intended to forcibly displace the population across a de jure or de facto border.

2475. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the involvement of Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in the systematic movement of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities. The Chamber also considered the similar pattern in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forcibly displaced and the involvement of Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in creating an environment of fear in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats had no choice but to leave the Municipalities. As found above, this environment of fear was caused by ongoing violence, killings, cruel and inhumane treatment, unlawful detention, rape and other acts of sexual violence, discriminatory measures, and wanton destruction of villages, houses, and cultural monuments. In many cases the population fled following attacks against their villages and homes by Serb Forces. The Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that these circumstances demonstrate the requisite intent to forcibly displace the population.

2476. In addition, the Chamber was able to infer intent from a number of explicit examples. In this regard the Chamber also recalls its finding that during attacks on Bosnian Muslim villages in Bratunac for example, members of Serb Forces said “this is a Serb country” and the Bosnian Muslims should be expelled.⁸³⁴⁸ The Chamber also recalls its finding that Bosnian Muslims were told that they would have to go to Tuzla because Bosnian Serbs were going to live in Bratunac.⁸³⁴⁹ In Pale, Bosnian Muslims were told it was better to go “voluntarily” to areas where they were a majority than to be “chase[d] through the woods” later.⁸³⁵⁰

2477. Bosnian Muslims in Rogatica were also threatened and warned about the forthcoming “cleansing” and were told they would be allowed to leave to Visoko and Zenica because this was where Bosnian Muslims were “supposed to live”.⁸³⁵¹ In Vlasenica, members of Serb Forces were instructed to “cleanse” specific areas of Bosnian Muslims and that the “territory had to be 100 percent clean and that none of the Muslims should remain in the area”.⁸³⁵² In Zvornik, the Chamber recalls its finding that Bosnian Serb authorities met to discuss the removal of Bosnian

Muslims and that the Zvornik TO was ordered to organise and co-ordinate the movement out of the Bosnian Muslim population.⁸³⁵³

2478. The Chamber found for example in Bijeljina, that there was a plan for the organised expulsion of Bosnian Muslims.⁸³⁵⁴ This involved multiple phases which created an atmosphere of fear, hardship, intimidation and humiliation where a large number of Bosnian Muslims were expelled or fled the municipality out of fear.⁸³⁵⁵ In Rogatica the Bosnian Serb authorities were involved in the organised displacement of the Bosnian Muslim population and maintained lists of Bosnian Muslims who had been sent away from the municipality.⁸³⁵⁶ In Pale, Bosnian Serb authorities convened meetings to discuss and take a position on the departure of non-Serbs from the municipality. They informed Bijljana Plavšić that there had been “forced and wilful” efforts to move Bosnian Muslims out of the municipality.⁸³⁵⁷

2479. The intent to forcibly displace the population was also demonstrated by statements from Bosnian Serb leaders that for example in Foča, not a single Bosnian Muslim was in Foča and that there was “only one people” living in the municipality and “one religion” being practised there.⁸³⁵⁸ With respect to Zvornik, the Drina Corps reported that “Turks made up 60% of the municipality’s population and it has now been cleansed and replaced with an ethnically pure Serb population”.⁸³⁵⁹

(C) Conclusion

2480. With respect to the incidents above, which relate to forcible displacement within national boundaries, the Chamber finds that those who were displaced left their homes, belongings and livelihoods, without any guarantee concerning the possibility to return in the future and this caused the victims serious mental suffering or injury. These acts were committed with the intent to inflict serious mental suffering, or with knowledge that these acts were likely to cause such suffering. These acts are of similar seriousness to deportation which is listed under Article 5(d) of the Statute. The Chamber therefore finds that these acts are sufficiently serious to amount to “other inhumane acts” pursuant to Article 5(i) of the Statute.

2481. The Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that these acts of deportation and forcible transfer were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these acts knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these killings, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber therefore finds that these incidents constitute deportation and other inhumane acts (forcible transfer) as crimes against humanity.

iv. Persecution: Count 3

(A) Killings

2482. The Chamber refers to its legal findings which address murder as a crime against humanity and a violation of the laws or customs of war charged under Counts 5 and 6 of the Indictment, respectively. The Chamber found above that many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats (i) were killed by Serb Forces during and after the take-over of the Municipalities; (ii) were killed by Serb Forces while detained at multiple detention facilities in the Municipalities; or (iii) died during and as a result of cruel and inhumane treatment by Serb Forces at a number of detention facilities in the Municipalities. The Chamber also found that the perpetrators of each of these incidents acted with the intent to kill the victims or at least wilfully caused serious bodily harm, which they should reasonably have known might lead to death. The Chamber further found that the victims of each of these incidents were civilians or had been rendered hors de combat at the time of their killing.

2483. The Chamber also finds that the perpetrators of the killings mentioned above intentionally targeted their victims solely on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats; these killings were carried out on discriminatory grounds. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber also had regard to the insults, taunts and threats directed at the victims by Serb Forces on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁸³⁶⁰ As found earlier, these killings were part of a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH and the perpetrators knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it.

2484. Therefore the Chamber finds that these killings constitute persecution as a crime against humanity.

(B) Cruel and/or inhumane treatment

(1) Torture, beatings, physical and psychological abuse

2485. The Chamber refers to its factual findings in Section IV.A.1 with respect to acts carried out by members of Serb Forces in the Municipalities. These factual findings demonstrate an egregious level of mistreatment suffered by Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats throughout the Municipalities while in detention or during and after the take-over of the Municipalities.

2486. For example, the Chamber found that detainees were cut or stabbed with knives.⁸³⁶¹ Some detainees had crosses carved with knives on their body including on their face, arm, and chest.⁸³⁶² One detainee alone had 30 crosses carved onto his body with a hunting knife.⁸³⁶³ In one incident a detainee had salt rubbed into his wounds after being cut.⁸³⁶⁴ In another incident a knife was used to carve out a detainee's tattoo which depicted a crescent and star.⁸³⁶⁵ In another detention facility, detainees were forced to eat body parts which had been severed from other detainees.⁸³⁶⁶

2487. The Chamber also recalls its finding that detainees were severely beaten and mistreated during interrogations.⁸³⁶⁷ Some detainees were questioned about military operations and security issues and mistreated at the same time.⁸³⁶⁸ They had their arms and legs tied and were beaten over an extended period of time.⁸³⁶⁹ Detainees were tied with chains and belts and some were beaten for several hours including on the soles of their feet with a bat,⁸³⁷⁰ while others were physically mistreated with pliers during questioning.⁸³⁷¹ In another incident, a boy was tied to a fence and beaten with a rope.⁸³⁷² Some detainees were also forced to lie on the ground where they were severely beaten and told to confess about their involvement with Bosnian Muslim forces.⁸³⁷³ At another detention facility, a guard repeatedly beat a detainee after he could not answer questions; the detainee fell to the ground and the guard then jumped on him until the detainee lost consciousness and was revived with water poured on him.⁸³⁷⁴ Detainees were also threatened or beaten before being forced to sign statements regarding their involvement in certain activities.⁸³⁷⁵

2488. In detention facilities, some detainees were forced to kneel on the floor, they had knives, bayonets, or guns put in their mouths as a scare tactic;⁸³⁷⁶ others were ordered to lie on the ground and then a guard jumped on them.⁸³⁷⁷ In one incident a detainee was forced to lick his own blood off the floor after being severely beaten.⁸³⁷⁸ Detainees were ordered to bend forward against a wall and kicked until there was a stream of blood running along the wall; their fingers were then stepped on as they were instructed to position them on top of the wall.⁸³⁷⁹ Members of the Serb Forces also threw smoke grenades, tear gas grenades, and stink bombs into areas where the detainees were held.⁸³⁸⁰

2489. Other incidents of mistreatment included detainees being forced to swallow bullets,⁸³⁸¹ hair which had been pulled from their armpits,⁸³⁸² cigarettes,⁸³⁸³ broken glass,⁸³⁸⁴ and motor oil.⁸³⁸⁵ Detainees were also burnt with lit cigarettes⁸³⁸⁶ and had their teeth pulled out.⁸³⁸⁷ Other detainees were ordered to sit for 40 hours in water, with their hands behind their heads and legs spread on the ground, as they were kicked and beaten.⁸³⁸⁸ Detainees were also forced to stand up for several hours which in one incident caused the weaker detainees to faint and fall to the ground.⁸³⁸⁹ The Chamber also recalls an incident where detainees were packed on top of each other in lavatories and forced to lie in the midst of excrement.⁸³⁹⁰

2490. In another incident a prominent Bosnian Muslim detainee was thrown down the stairs and had to be carried out of the detention facility unconscious.⁸³⁹¹ Some detainees were forced to jump, sometimes head first or chest first, from high points, and, as a result they sustained severe injuries.⁸³⁹² In another incident, detainees were thrown into a fire made of rubber tires.⁸³⁹³

2492. Detainees were also beaten when they were given permission to use the toilet or get water,⁸³⁹⁹ or while receiving food.⁸⁴⁰⁰ Some detainees were beaten when forced to carry dead bodies,⁸⁴⁰¹ while others were beaten for any attempts they made to improve the conditions of their detention.⁸⁴⁰² Other detainees were severely beaten on arrival at detention facilities and when they were searched for valuables.⁸⁴⁰³

2493. Detainees were also subject to verbal and mental abuse, intimidation, and threats, including threats that they would be killed.⁸⁴⁰⁴ In addition, detainees were in constant fear as they were involved in moving dead bodies or could hear the screams of other detainees being beaten and physically abused during the night.⁸⁴⁰⁵ Some detainees were also forced to carry and bury dead bodies, clean toilets with their bare hands, clean traces of blood of detainees who had been beaten or killed, and were also taken to loot or clean Bosnian Muslim houses in the town for the use of Bosnian Serb families.⁸⁴⁰⁶

2494. Some detainees were singled out for severe beatings in front of other detainees as an example of what could happen to them.⁸⁴⁰⁷ Detainees were also taunted when forced to carry dead bodies.⁸⁴⁰⁸ Detainees were subjected to humiliation; this included being forced to (i) make the “Serb three-finger sign”,⁸⁴⁰⁹ (ii) make the sign of the cross,⁸⁴¹⁰ (iii) walk or kneel with their heads bowed,⁸⁴¹¹ (iv) eat carbonised bread without dropping anything,⁸⁴¹² and (v) graze grass like animals at gun point.⁸⁴¹³ Some detainees were spat at and verbally degraded.⁸⁴¹⁴ In one case a Bosnian Muslim priest was targeted for humiliation; he was forced to drink beer, make the “Serb three-finger sign”, and sing “Chetnik” songs.⁸⁴¹⁵ Some Bosnian Muslim detainees were also forced to sign papers saying that they had “voluntarily joined the Serbian Orthodox religion”.⁸⁴¹⁶ The Chamber also found that Serb nationalist songs were played loudly and continuously in a detention facility.⁸⁴¹⁷ In Pale, the Chamber found that detainees had their hair forcibly cut with a knife.⁸⁴¹⁸ In another incident detainees in Novi Grad were forced to lie on the ground, beaten, and then subject to attacks by dogs.⁸⁴¹⁹

⁸⁴⁰⁶ See Scheduled Detention Facilities C.7.2, C.21.3, C.25.3, C.20.2, C.20.4, C.27.4. were also severely kicked and beaten in hospitals when it was discovered that they were Bosnian Muslims.⁸⁴²²

2496. The Chamber also recalls its finding that prominent Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including professionals and leaders, were targeted, taken away, detained, and subjected to intimidation and beatings.⁸⁴²³ The Chamber also found that members of Serb Forces mistreated and intimidated Bosnian Muslims by making derogatory remarks, by shooting at their homes and mosques, and by stopping, beating, and mistreating Bosnian Muslims at check-points and barricades.⁸⁴²⁴

2497. The Chamber recalls its finding that many detainees had visible wounds and bruises following this mistreatment and some were unable to walk or talk for days.⁸⁴²⁵ Some detainees were subjected to multiple beatings on a daily basis.⁸⁴²⁶ Injuries included broken and fractured bones, bleeding, severe bruises, swelling, and knocked-out teeth.⁸⁴²⁷ In one case a detainee began to urinate blood after being beaten severely,⁸⁴²⁸ and others had their eyes knocked out or were blinded.⁸⁴²⁹ Some detainees were beaten severely until they lost consciousness.⁸⁴³⁰ The Chamber also found that detainees continued to suffer ongoing physical and psychological effects.⁸⁴³¹

2498. Having considered these incidents, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to intentional acts which caused severe physical and mental pain or suffering. These acts were intentionally carried out by members of Serb Forces and were aimed at (i) obtaining information or a confession; (ii) punishing, intimidating, or coercing the victim or a third person, or (iii) discriminating against the victim or a third person. The Chamber therefore finds that acts of torture were carried out against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities.

2499. In addition, these incidents establish that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were also subjected to deliberate beatings, physical and psychological abuse, including harassment, constant humiliation, and degradation. The Chamber finds that these beatings and abuse caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury or constituted a serious attack on human dignity and amounted to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right. The Chamber therefore finds that these acts of beatings, physical and psychological abuse are of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

(2) Rape and other acts of sexual violence⁸⁴³²

2500. The Chamber found in Section IV.A.1 above that Serb Forces committed rape against Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat women and men in Bijeljina,⁸⁴³³ Brčko,⁸⁴³⁴ Foča,⁸⁴³⁵ Novo Sarajevo,⁸⁴³⁶ Prijedor,⁸⁴³⁷ Rogatica,⁸⁴³⁸ Vlasenica,⁸⁴³⁹ Vogošća,⁸⁴⁴⁰ and Zvornik.⁸⁴⁴¹ Some Bosnian Muslim women and girls were raped on multiple occasions, sometimes on a continuous basis by members of Serb Forces while in detention facilities.⁸⁴⁴²

2501. In one case a woman was raped approximately 150 times during her detention.⁸⁴⁴³ There were incidents where Bosnian Muslim women who had been detained were taken out of the facilities and raped by Serb Forces; in some incidents the rape was accompanied by additional threats or use of violence and sometimes involved gang rape.⁸⁴⁴⁴ Some Bosnian Muslim women were moved to houses and apartments where they were raped on some occasions in front of each other.⁸⁴⁴⁵ Other incidents included women being raped and further humiliated publicly by members of Serb Forces in villages which had been taken-over.⁸⁴⁴⁶ The Chamber also found that some Bosnian Muslim male detainees, including a 13-year-old boy, were also raped by Serb Forces who used police truncheons and similar objects.⁸⁴⁴⁷

⁸⁴³² The Prosecution does not allege criminal responsibility for rape and other acts of sexual violence in Banja Luka, Bosanski Novi, Bratunac, Pale, and Višegrad. Indictment, fn. 5.

2503. Other acts of sexual violence included male and female detainees who were ordered to undress, dance, and perform sexual acts in front of Bosnian Serb soldiers.⁸⁴⁵⁰ In other incidents detainees were forced to remove their underwear and bite or suck each others' penises while soldiers stood by and laughed.⁸⁴⁵¹ In another incident detainees were forced to lick the buttocks of a Bosnian Serb woman, who threatened to slit their throats if they did not comply.⁸⁴⁵² A female detainee had her breast exposed while a guard went over it with a knife and the other guards watched and laughed.⁸⁴⁵³

2504. The Chamber finds that each of these acts of rape and other acts of sexual violence were committed by members of Serb Forces without the consent of the victims, that the perpetrators intentionally committed these acts, and that the perpetrators were aware that the victims did not consent to such acts. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber has had regard to the circumstances in which they occurred and the horrific nature of the acts themselves. This includes the fact that the victims were often detained and subjected to threats of or actual violence and humiliation.

2505. With respect to the other acts of sexual violence referred to above, the Chamber finds that they involved serious abuses of a sexual nature which were inflicted upon the integrity of the victims by means of coercion, threat of force, or intimidation in a way that caused the utmost humiliation and degradation to the dignity of the victims. The Chamber finds that these acts of sexual violence amounted to denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and were of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

2506. The Chamber therefore finds that Bosnian Muslim women, men, girls, and boys were subject to rape and other acts of sexual violence.

(3) Establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions

2507. The Chamber found in Section IV.A.1 above that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained in multiple detention facilities. The Chamber recalls its findings that the detainees were held in terrible living conditions characterised by severe over-crowding;⁸⁴⁵⁴ poor sleeping conditions, including insufficient bedding and blankets;⁸⁴⁵⁵ insufficient or no heating;⁸⁴⁵⁶ lack of ventilation and light; stifling heat;⁸⁴⁵⁷ poor sanitation and hygiene, including inadequate washing and toilet facilities;⁸⁴⁵⁸ the provision of inadequate food and in some cases rotten food;⁸⁴⁵⁹ insufficient or restricted access to water;⁸⁴⁶⁰ and inadequate or non-existent medical care.⁸⁴⁶¹

2508. At some detention facilities, the detainees were held in dark, cold, and wet conditions due to leaking roofs.⁸⁴⁶² In one of these facilities, food was distributed in bowls which had been used to feed dogs and in some cases the detainees' food was given to the dogs.⁸⁴⁶³ The Chamber also recalls its finding that in some detention facilities, there was a terrible stench due to the inadequate and leaking toilet facilities and that at night detainees were forced to use a pot and when this filled, they relieved themselves in their pants or in their rooms.⁸⁴⁶⁴

2509. In some cases detainees experienced extreme weight loss, malnutrition, and a deterioration of their health during their detention as a result of the lack of food and medical attention.⁸⁴⁶⁵ The poor hygienic conditions also resulted in a major problem with lice, skin diseases, and dysentery at some facilities.⁸⁴⁶⁶ The Chamber also found that the living conditions in some detention facilities caused lasting physical and psychological problems for some detainees.⁸⁴⁶⁷ The Chamber also refers to its findings in Section IV.A.2.b.i regarding the detainees who died as a result of the conditions of detention.

2510. While the Chamber did find that the conditions improved in some facilities with time, this does not detract from the fact that prior to these modest improvements conditions were deplorable in the overwhelming majority of detention facilities referred to in the Indictment.⁸⁴⁶⁸ The Chamber also notes in this regard its findings that Bosnian Serb authorities and officials attempted to cover up and prevent the leakage of information regarding the conditions of detention and the condition of detainees.⁸⁴⁶⁹ These attempts included hiding detainees before the arrival of international representatives and threatening detainees with severe punishment if they complained about conditions and treatment.⁸⁴⁷⁰

2511. Having considered these factors the Chamber finds that members of the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and Serb Forces deliberately established and perpetuated inhumane living conditions at a number of detention facilities in the Municipalities.⁸⁴⁷¹ Having considered the extent and the deplorable nature of these inhumane conditions in so many detention facilities, and the grave consequences for those detained, the Chamber concludes that these acts amount to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and reach the level of seriousness of other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

(4) Conclusion on cruel and inhumane treatment

2512. As found above, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities were subjected to (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse; (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence; and (iii) inhumane living conditions. These acts and/or omissions resulted in serious mental or physical suffering or injury for the victims; this amounts to a serious attack on human dignity. The perpetrators of these acts or omissions were members of Serb Forces. The Chamber finds that the perpetrators committed these acts or omissions (i) with intent to cause serious mental or physical suffering or injury; (ii) with intent to cause a serious attack on human dignity; or (iii) with knowledge that serious mental or physical suffering or injury or a serious attack on human dignity was a probable consequence of these acts or omissions.

2513. In addition, the Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these acts or omissions chose their victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. The Chamber finds that these acts or omissions discriminated in fact and denied or infringed on fundamental rights. The Chamber also finds that these acts or omissions were carried out deliberately with the intent to discriminate on the basis of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁸⁴⁷² In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber infers intent from the fact that those targeted by these acts of cruel and inhumane treatment were almost exclusively Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. In addition, the Chamber also had regard to the insults, taunts, and threats directed at the victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats, which expressly demonstrated this discriminatory intent.

2514. Examples of such insults and taunts which the Chamber found were connected to these acts of cruel and inhumane treatment include the following. Detainees who were subject to beatings or mistreatment were called “balijas” and a “Turkish gang, a fictitious people, a non-existent people” and told that they would all be killed or exterminated.⁸⁴⁷³ Other detainees were subject to similar ethnic slurs during the beating and mistreatment.⁸⁴⁷⁴ In one incident a detainee was forced to run around the detention facility and swear at the detainees’ “balija mother”.⁸⁴⁷⁵ Some detainees were called “Ustasha” before or during their mistreatment.⁸⁴⁷⁶ Detainees were also forced to sing “Chetnik” songs⁸⁴⁷⁷ and to make the “Serb three-finger sign”.⁸⁴⁷⁸ Detainees were also taunted with political comments such as “You wanted a state: here is a state for you”, “where is now your Alija to save you?”, and “Where is Naser, your liberator?”.⁸⁴⁷⁹ Bosnian Muslims were told “there would be no balija state soon” and they were “finished”.⁸⁴⁸⁰ The Chamber recalls that it found that during one rape, a Bosnian Muslim woman was told that “Muslim women should give birth to Serb children”, and the perpetrator also said that Muslims were not human beings.⁸⁴⁸¹ The ⁸⁴⁷¹ The Chamber recalls that it did not have sufficient evidence to make a finding as to the conditions of detention at the TO military warehouses at Livade in Foča. See Scheduled Detention Facility C.10.6.

⁸⁴⁷² The Chamber considers that discrimination on the grounds of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats falls within the prohibited grounds of discrimination under Article 5(h) of the Statute.

discriminatory nature of the conditions of detention was shown, for example, by the finding that in facilities where some Bosnian Serb detainees were also held, they received better food and did not suffer the extreme weight loss of non-Serb detainees.⁸⁴⁸²

2515. In finding discriminatory intent for these acts of cruel and inhumane treatment, the Chamber also had regard to the surrounding circumstances in the Municipalities in the lead-up to, during, and after the take-over of the Municipalities including specific statements directed against the Bosnian Muslim population. In Foča for example, Bosnian Serb leaders made radio announcements that it was no longer possible for Bosnian Serbs to live with their Bosnian Muslim neighbours, that they could not be woken every morning by the hodza from the mosque, and that the “the time had come for the Serbs to settle accounts with the balijas once and for all, and that the Serbs would no longer allow their ribs to be broken. They will no longer allow their children to be circumcised”.⁸⁴⁸³ Similar radio broadcasts were made in Prijedor which referred to the destruction of the “balijas” and their property and mosques.⁸⁴⁸⁴

2516. In addition, the Chamber found in Bratunac, for instance, that in the lead-up to the conflict, SDS members wrote slogans on street and traffic signs as well as on public and private property, which were derogatory towards Bosnian Muslims, including messages to the effect: “Muslims, Balijas, Turks move out, you’re going to be slaughtered”.⁸⁴⁸⁵ In Vlasenica, Bosnian Serb leaders declared that when BiH “was proclaimed a sovereign state, we will draw up our borders in blood”.⁸⁴⁸⁶ Similarly in Vlasenica, graffiti was written on the houses of prominent Bosnian Muslims saying “Ustasha”, “Muslims out”, “We will slaughter”, “Out”, and “This is Serb, this is Serbia”.⁸⁴⁸⁷ Bosnian Serb leaders in Vogošća said that “Muslims were simply going to disappear”.⁸⁴⁸⁸

2517. Further, the Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the acts or omissions referred to above were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Croat civilian populations of BiH.

2518. The Chamber therefore finds that these incidents of cruel and inhumane treatment constitute acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(C) Forcible transfer and deportation

2520. The Chamber also finds that the perpetrators of these acts of forcible transfer and deportation chose their victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. These acts were carried out on discriminatory grounds and with discriminatory intent. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber recalled its finding that Bosnian Muslims who were removed from their villages were subjected to a “barrage of insults” with respect to their “Muslim ethnicity”.⁸⁴⁸⁹ Similarly during expulsions in Novo Sarajevo Serb Forces made statements such as “all Ustašas and Balijas out!” and in Prijedor victims were cursed and told they would be sent to Turkey.⁸⁴⁹⁰ The Chamber also refers to its findings above relating to mens rea which are also indicative of this discriminatory intent.⁸⁴⁹¹ The Chamber also had regard to its finding that these acts of forcible transfer and deportation were discriminatory in fact given that the victims of these acts were almost exclusively Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.

2521. As the Chamber found above, these acts were part of a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH and the perpetrators knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In addition the Chamber found that the acts of forcible displacement within national boundaries were sufficiently serious to amount to “other inhumane acts”. Therefore the Chamber finds that these acts of forcible transfer and deportation constitute acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(D) Unlawful detention

2522. The Chamber found in Section IV.A.1 that a large number of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilians were detained by members of Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and

Governmental Organs in detention facilities in Banja Luka,⁸⁴⁹² Bijeljina,⁸⁴⁹³ Bosanski Novi,⁸⁴⁹⁴ Bratunac,⁸⁴⁹⁵ Brčko,⁸⁴⁹⁶ Foča,⁸⁴⁹⁷ Hadžići,⁸⁴⁹⁸ Ključ,⁸⁴⁹⁹ Ilidža,⁸⁵⁰⁰ Novi Grad,⁸⁵⁰¹ Novo Sarajevo,⁸⁵⁰² Pale,⁸⁵⁰³ Prijedor,⁸⁵⁰⁴ Rogatica,⁸⁵⁰⁵ Sanski Most,⁸⁵⁰⁶ Sokolac,⁸⁵⁰⁷ Vlasenica,⁸⁵⁰⁸ Vogošća,⁸⁵⁰⁹ and Zvornik.⁸⁵¹⁰

2523. The arbitrary nature of this detention was shown by the Chamber's findings that in some detention facilities the detainees (i) were not detained on any legal grounds; (ii) were not informed as to why they were arrested and detained; (iii) were not suspected, charged, tried, or convicted for any crime before being detained or while detained; (iv) were not advised of their rights before or during their detention and (v) their detention was not subject to review.⁸⁵¹¹ The Chamber also recalls, for example, that the local authorities in Brčko were informed that people were being detained without any legal grounds, and while some detainees were released, this was done in a selective manner and based on personal connections.⁸⁵¹²

2524. The arbitrary nature of the detention is also evidenced, for example, by the decision by the Bosnian Serb authorities in Hadžići to arrest and detain all Bosnian Muslim men of military age from certain areas in the municipality⁸⁵¹³ and that in the Omarska camp the detainees were categorised, and included a category of detainees of "no security interest".⁸⁵¹⁴

2525. The Chamber found that these detainees were arrested and taken to these detention facilities from their homes, following attacks on villages or towns, or transferred from other detention facilities.⁸⁵¹⁵ In some cases, the Bosnian Muslim population was ordered to gather en masse and then moved to detention facilities.⁸⁵¹⁶ Most of those detained were civilians and included women, children, the sick, and the elderly.⁸⁵¹⁷

2526. The Chamber noted that a small number of detainees in some facilities were Bosnian Muslim soldiers or combatants.⁸⁵¹⁸ The Chamber is not satisfied that their detention was unlawful.

2527. The Chamber considered the circumstances in which detainees were brought to and detained at these facilities, the extended period of detention, the large number of individuals detained across multiple municipalities, and the status of the overwhelming majority as civilians including women, children, and the elderly. On this basis the Chamber finds that with the exception of the Bosnian Muslim soldiers referred to in the previous paragraph, the detainees at these facilities were arbitrarily deprived of their liberty with no legal basis and that the perpetrators intended to arbitrarily deprive these individuals of their liberty. The Chamber finds that this amounted to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and was of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute. The Chamber therefore finds that there was unlawful detention of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.

2528. In addition, the Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these acts of unlawful detention chose their victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. The Chamber finds that these acts were carried out deliberately with the intent to discriminate on the basis of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁸⁵¹⁹ In concluding that these acts were carried out with discriminatory intent, the Chamber had regard to its finding that these acts of unlawful detention were discriminatory in fact given that the unlawful detention was almost exclusively directed against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats whereas the guards and those in charge of the detention facilities were Bosnian Serbs. In addition, the Chamber also had regard to the insults, taunts, and threats directed at the victims on the basis of their identity as

Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats, which expressly demonstrated this discriminatory intent.⁸⁵²⁰ For further evidence of discriminatory intent with respect to unlawful detention, the Chamber also recalls its finding that, for example, in Vlasenica, the Sušica camp was established pursuant to an order of the VRS, following a decision of the SAO Birač on regulating the “moving out of the Muslim population”.⁸⁵²¹ In addition, the Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims during their transportation to the Sušica camp were subjected to threats and racial slurs.⁸⁵²² In Zvornik, the Chamber found that a member of the Serb Forces said that they would bring in every Bosnian Muslim who was found in town.⁸⁵²³

2529. Further, the Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the incidents of unlawful detention were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these acts knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations and time period of those acts, and the identity of the victims, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack. Further, given the magnitude of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH, the Chamber further finds that the perpetrators knew of the attack and that the crimes were part of it.

2530. The Chamber therefore finds that these incidents of unlawful detention constitute acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(E) Forced labour and the use of human shields⁸⁵²⁴

2531. The Chamber recalls its findings in Section IV.A.1 that detainees at a number of detention facilities in Bijeljina,⁸⁵²⁵ Foča,⁸⁵²⁶ Hadžići,⁸⁵²⁷ Ilidža,⁸⁵²⁸ Novo Sarajevo,⁸⁵²⁹ Rogatica,⁸⁵³⁰

Vlasenica,⁸⁵³¹ and Vogošća.⁸⁵³² were forced to perform labour on the front lines including, inter alia, digging trenches, clearing mines, burying bodies, and carrying munitions.⁸⁵³³

2532. By way of illustration, the Chamber found, that while undertaking work on the front lines the detainees were exposed to sporadic crossfire.⁸⁵³⁴ The Chamber found that some detainees were forced to work in all weather conditions which affected their health.⁸⁵³⁵ The Chamber further recalls that in some municipalities, detainees who did not work fast enough or do exactly as they were instructed were beaten, insulted, and threatened.⁸⁵³⁶ The Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims in Bijeljina were subject to a work obligation including on the front lines.⁸⁵³⁷ Those who did not comply with this work obligation were either sent to Batković camp or expelled from the municipality.⁸⁵³⁸

2533. The forcible nature of this work was demonstrated by the Chamber's finding that detainees were afraid for their lives and of being beaten if they refused to work.⁸⁵³⁹ The Chamber also found that in one incident detainees were also severely beaten and did not receive any food or water while they worked.⁸⁵⁴⁰

2534. Bosnian Muslims in Rogatica,⁸⁵⁴¹ Ključ,⁸⁵⁴² Vogošća⁸⁵⁴³ were also used as human shields on front lines to protect Serb Forces. In one incident Bosnian Muslim detainees were instructed to lead Serb Forces through an area, which had been mined, to recover dead bodies.⁸⁵⁴⁴

2535. The Chamber also had regard to the nature of the forced work, the circumstances in which the detainees were held, and the vulnerable position of the detainees, including the cruel and inhumane treatment and unlawful detention discussed above. Having considered these factors, the Chamber finds that the acts of forced labour and use of human shields amounted to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and were of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

2536. In addition, the Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these acts of forced labour and use of human shields chose their victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. The Chamber finds that these acts were carried out deliberately with the intent to discriminate on the basis of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁸⁵⁴⁵ In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber had regard to its finding that these acts were discriminatory in fact given that only Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats who had been detained were forced to work or used as human shields. The Chamber also had regard to its findings with respect to the insults, taunts, and threats which were discussed in the context of other underlying acts of persecution which expressly demonstrated this discriminatory intent. In addition, the Chamber recalls its finding that in Vlasenica some detainees who were taken away for forced labour were subject to insults such as references to “Balija’s mother”.⁸⁵⁴⁶ In another incident where Bosnian Muslims were used as human shields in Rogatica, when one person was hit by incoming fire, a member of the Serb Forces cursed the detainees by reference to their “Balija mothers”.⁸⁵⁴⁷

2537. Further, the Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the acts of forced labour and use of detainees as human shields were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these acts knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these acts, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH.

2538. The Chamber therefore finds that these incidents of forced labour and use of human shields constitute acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(F) Plunder of property⁸⁵⁴⁸

2539. The Chamber found in Section IV.A.1 that Bosnian Muslims were expelled from their homes, which were then seized by the local authorities and assigned to Serb refugees.⁸⁵⁴⁹ Some ⁸⁵⁴⁵ The Chamber considers that discrimination on the grounds of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats falls within the prohibited grounds of discrimination under Article 5(h) of the Statute.

⁸⁵⁴⁷ See para. 1019.

Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to sign statements leaving their property to the local authorities.⁸⁵⁵⁰ The Chamber recalls its finding that in Ključ, for example, the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs effectively seized the abandoned property of Bosnian Muslims on a permanent basis.⁸⁵⁵¹

2540. Serb Forces also looted property and homes belonging to Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats during and after the take-over of towns and villages in Bijeljina,⁸⁵⁵² Bosanski Novi,⁸⁵⁵³ Bratunac,⁸⁵⁵⁴ Foča,⁸⁵⁵⁵ Ključ,⁸⁵⁵⁶ Iliđža,⁸⁵⁵⁷ Novi Grad,⁸⁵⁵⁸ Novo Sarajevo,⁸⁵⁵⁹ Prijedor,⁸⁵⁶⁰ Rogatica,⁸⁵⁶¹ Vlasenica,⁸⁵⁶² Zvornik.⁸⁵⁶³ The Chamber also recalls its finding that in some cases Serb Forces used Bosnian Muslim detainees to loot Bosnian Muslim homes and move furniture and belongings to Bosnian Serb residences.⁸⁵⁶⁴

2541. The Chamber found that Bosnian Serb authorities allocated premises left vacant by Bosnian Muslims for the use of refugees in Sokolac.⁸⁵⁶⁵ However, it has insufficient evidence to determine whether this amounted to an unlawful appropriation of property given that there was evidence that the Bosnian Serb authorities prohibited the unlawful and unauthorised occupation of premises, and that when property was allocated to refugees, these were temporary measures and followed a set criteria including the taking of an inventory of contents by a committee which was created for the allocation of this property.⁸⁵⁶⁶

2542. Bosnian Muslims had their money, identification documents, jewellery, and valuables taken away from them before leaving the municipality,⁸⁵⁶⁷ on arrival at detention facilities,⁸⁵⁶⁸ or before their execution.⁸⁵⁶⁹ The Chamber found on one occasion that Serb Forces were also instructed to search the bodies of killed Bosnian Muslims for valuables before the bodies were taken away for burial.⁸⁵⁷⁰ Serb Forces also seized the vehicles of Bosnian Muslims.⁸⁵⁷¹

2543. The property of Bosnian Muslim businesses was also looted or confiscated.⁸⁵⁷² The Chamber also found that Bosnian Croat companies were looted by Serb Forces in Bijeljina.⁸⁵⁷³

2544. The Chamber finds that these acts involved the unlawful appropriation of the private property of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs. Having considered the extent and scope of the unlawful appropriation of property owned by Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in multiple municipalities, the Chamber concludes that these acts had grave consequences and amounted to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and are of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

2545. The perpetrators of these acts of plunder chose their victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. The Chamber finds that these acts were carried out deliberately with the intent to discriminate on the basis of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁸⁵⁷⁴ In concluding that these acts were carried out with discriminatory intent, the Chamber had regard to its finding that these acts were discriminatory in fact given that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were systematically targeted by these acts of plunder which were directed at their homes and property. The Chamber also had regard to its findings with respect to the insults, taunts, and threats which were discussed in the context of other underlying acts of persecution which expressly demonstrated this discriminatory intent.

2546. Further, the Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the acts of plunder were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these acts knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these acts, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH.

2547. The Chamber therefore finds that these incidents of plunder constitute acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

(G) Wanton destruction of private property and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites⁸⁵⁷⁵

2548. The Chamber recalls its findings in Section IV.A.1 that during attacks by Serb Forces, Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat homes and businesses were set on fire and Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat villages were destroyed by Serb Forces in Bosanski Novi,⁸⁵⁷⁶ Bratunac,⁸⁵⁷⁷ Foča,⁸⁵⁷⁸ Ključ,⁸⁵⁷⁹ Novi Grad,⁸⁵⁸⁰ Pale,⁸⁵⁸¹ Prijedor,⁸⁵⁸² Rogatica,⁸⁵⁸³ Sanski Most,⁸⁵⁸⁴ Sokolac,⁸⁵⁸⁵ Vlasenica,⁸⁵⁸⁶ Vogošća,⁸⁵⁸⁷ and Zvornik.⁸⁵⁸⁸ For example, in the municipality of Ključ alone, the Chamber found that approximately 3,500 houses were razed to the ground and burned in Bosnian Muslim villages.⁸⁵⁸⁹

2549. The Chamber also found that Bosnian Muslim neighbourhoods in the centre of Rogatica were extensively shelled by artillery, mortars, anti-aircraft guns, and tanks and, as a result, a large part of the town was destroyed.⁸⁵⁹⁰ The Chamber also recalls its finding that Bosnian Muslim

detainees were ordered to set fire to property which had been taken from a Bosnian Muslim house in Vlasenica.⁸⁵⁹¹ Some Bosnian Muslim houses were dismantled for materials.⁸⁵⁹²

2550. The Chamber finds that the property referred to in paragraphs above was destroyed or damaged extensively and such destruction or damage was not justified by military necessity.

2551. While the Chamber also found that Serb Forces shelled Konjević Polje in Bratunac,⁸⁵⁹³ the villages of Kramer Selo, Kozarde, Dobrašina, and Borovsko in Rogatica,⁸⁵⁹⁴ the village of Musići in Hadžići,⁸⁵⁹⁵ the village of Blagaj in Bosanski Novi⁸⁵⁹⁶ it has insufficient evidence about the property destroyed or the extent of damage to conclude whether this amounts to wanton destruction of private property.

2552. The Chamber recalls its finding that Serb Forces completely destroyed, almost destroyed, or heavily damaged multiple mosques, Catholic churches and other cultural monuments and sacred sites in Bratunac,⁸⁵⁹⁷ Bosanski Novi,⁸⁵⁹⁸ Foča,⁸⁵⁹⁹ Ključ,⁸⁶⁰⁰ Novi Grad,⁸⁶⁰¹ Prijedor,⁸⁶⁰² Rogatica,⁸⁶⁰³ Sanski Most,⁸⁶⁰⁴ Sokolac,⁸⁶⁰⁵ and Zvornik.⁸⁶⁰⁶ The Chamber finds that the Serb Forces intended to destroy these monuments and sites. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber had regard to the nature and extent of the damage to these monuments and sites and the manner in which they were destroyed. For example, the Chamber notes evidence that Bosnian Serb fire brigades stood by and watched while mosques were burnt in Foča.⁸⁶⁰⁷ Many of the mosques were completely destroyed by explosives; the rubble was removed from the site and the location was later used for other purposes including as garbage dumps and parking lots.⁸⁶⁰⁸

2553. The Chamber recalls its finding that the evidence presented with respect to Bijeljina,⁸⁶⁰⁹ Pale,⁸⁶¹⁰ and Vogošća⁸⁶¹¹ was insufficient to allow for an inference to be drawn that Serb Forces destroyed the cultural monuments and sacred sites in those municipalities. The Chamber did not enter a finding with respect to the destruction of the Catholic Church in Ključ.⁸⁶¹² The Chamber also found that three mosques in the Vragolovi area of Rogatica were destroyed but had insufficient evidence to determine when they were destroyed and who was responsible for their destruction.⁸⁶¹³

2554. The Chamber finds that the destruction of these mosques, cultural monuments, and sacred sites was not justified by military necessity. For example, with regard to Foča, where the Accused argued that certain mosques were used for military purposes in Foča, the Chamber concluded that this evidence was unreliable and further that there was no other indication that the mosques were used for military purposes.⁸⁶¹⁴

2555. The Chamber also finds that these acts of wanton destruction of private and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites, were carried out with discriminatory intent against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.⁸⁶¹⁵ In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that in some cases adjacent Bosnian Serb homes were untouched and there were notes which identified them as Serb property that should not be torched.⁸⁶¹⁶ In addition, fire engines were used to protect Bosnian Serb houses while Bosnian Muslim houses burned.⁸⁶¹⁷ In an attack on a Bosnian Muslim village in Vlasenica, Serb Forces were specifically ordered to torch all Bosnian Muslim houses and told “you can see for yourselves that if we don’t set fire to these houses, they’ll return later on”.⁸⁶¹⁸

2556. With respect to the cultural monuments and sacred sites, the Chamber found that the sites destroyed were targeted given their significance to the Bosnian Muslim or Bosnian Croat people in those locations and were discriminatory in fact and were carried out with discriminatory intent.

2557. Having considered the nature and extent of the private and public property destroyed, the Chamber finds that the impact of the destruction was serious given that it affected indispensable and vital assets of the population, including homes and religious sites. The Chamber therefore finds that these acts of wanton destruction of private and public property amounted to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and were of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

2558. Further, the Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH. The Chamber finds that the acts of wanton destruction were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these acts knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these acts, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH.

measures⁸⁶¹⁹ (H) Imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory

2560. The Chambers found in section IV.A.1 that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were removed from positions of authority and dismissed from their employment in Bijeljina,⁸⁶²⁰ Bosanski Novi,⁸⁶²¹ Bratunac,⁸⁶²² Foča,⁸⁶²³ Ključ,⁸⁶²⁴ Pale,⁸⁶²⁵ Prijedor,⁸⁶²⁶ Sanski Most,⁸⁶²⁷ Vogošća,⁸⁶²⁸ Vlasenica,⁸⁶²⁹ and Zvornik.⁸⁶³⁰ In Foča for example, announcements were made that the administration of the entire municipality would be run by Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁶³¹ In addition, after the dismissal of Bosnian Muslims in Bratunac, all key positions in local government were taken over by Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁶³² In some municipalities, Bosnian Muslims were prevented or discouraged from reporting for work,⁸⁶³³ while others were subject to threats, harassment, and insults after which they stopped going to work.⁸⁶³⁴ In Vlasenica, the Chamber also found that the salaries of Bosnian Muslim workers were stopped while Bosnian Serb workers continued to be paid.⁸⁶³⁵

2561. In Bratunac, Vlasenica, and Zvornik, Bosnian Muslim judges were expelled,⁸⁶³⁶ while in Pale,⁸⁶³⁷ Sokolac,⁸⁶³⁸ and Vlasenica,⁸⁶³⁹ Bosnian Muslim members of the SJB were dismissed. The Chamber also recalls its finding that a Bosnian Muslim officer in the JNA was progressively stripped of his duties and authority until he was told that his safety could not be guaranteed and he left the JNA.⁸⁶⁴⁰

2562. Other discriminatory measures included forcing Bosnian Muslim police officers to pledge loyalty to the Bosnian Serb authorities and wear the Serb flag on their caps to retain their jobs.⁸⁶⁴¹ Similarly in Bratunac, Bosnian Muslims were given a deadline to pledge loyalty to the Serbian Municipality of Bratunac but continued to be subject to searches of their homes and other intimidation.⁸⁶⁴² Bosnian Muslims in Zvornik who returned were required to register and sign a pledge of loyalty to the Bosnian Serb authorities in order to remain employed.⁸⁶⁴³

2563. The dismissal of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their employment was discriminatory in fact. In addition, the Chamber found in Ključ that the Bosnian Serb authorities expressly decided that only Bosnian Serb officials could occupy certain important posts in the municipality and that those dismissed from their jobs were so treated because of their ethnicity.⁸⁶⁴⁴

2564. In Foča there were widespread arrests of Bosnian Muslim male civilians who were rounded up and arrested in the streets or in their homes, workplaces, or hospitals.⁸⁶⁴⁵ Similarly the Chamber found that there were random arrests of Bosnian Muslims in Pale and Prijedor.⁸⁶⁴⁶ For further evidence on arbitrary arrests, the Chamber refers to its findings in Section IV.A.2.iv.D above regarding unlawful detention. During and after these arrests, Bosnian Muslims were referred to by Serb soldiers by the derogatory term “balija” and cursed.⁸⁶⁴⁷ Bosnian Muslim homes were also subject to arbitrary searches sometimes accompanied by violence or intimidation towards the occupants.⁸⁶⁴⁸ On occasions those searches were on the pretext of searching for weapons but intimidated the Bosnian Muslim population.⁸⁶⁴⁹

2565. The Chamber also found that restrictions were placed on the movement of Bosnian Muslims, including the issuance of movement passes which did not apply to Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁶⁵⁰ Some Bosnian Muslims who were involved with the SDA were not issued with passes, and others who did have such passes were still often arrested and detained.⁸⁶⁵¹ Some Bosnian Muslims were only able to secure transit passes if they had connections or they had to pay substantial amounts of money in order to leave the municipality.⁸⁶⁵²

2566. The Chamber also recalls that there were restrictions on Bosnian Muslims meeting each other, their phone lines and utilities were cut, and some were placed under virtual house arrest.⁸⁶⁵³ The Chamber found that in Zvornik, for example, Bosnian Serb authorities banned the sale or trade of real estate in the municipality unless it was between Bosnian Serbs and and only ordered the back pay of pensions for Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁶⁵⁴ In Vlasenica, the Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims had restrictions placed on the amount of money they could withdraw from the bank.⁸⁶⁵⁵

See para. 2086.

⁸⁶⁴⁹ See para. 1149.

⁸⁶⁵⁵ See para. 1119.

2567. The Chamber considered the circumstances and the environment in which Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to restrictive and discriminatory measures. The Chamber did not consider these measures in isolation, but also had regard to its findings that contemporaneously Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities were also subject to killings, torture, beatings, physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, cruel and inhumane living conditions, forcible displacement, unlawful detention, forced labour, plunder, and the wanton destruction of private and public property.⁸⁶⁵⁶ When these restrictive and discriminatory measures are considered in conjunction with these other underlying acts of persecution which were perpetrated at the same time, against the same category of victims, the Chamber finds that this amounted to a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right and was of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute.

2568. In addition, the Chamber finds that the perpetrators of these restrictive and discriminatory measures chose their victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats. The Chamber finds that these acts were carried out deliberately with the intent to discriminate on the basis of the identity of the victims as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁸⁶⁵⁷ In concluding that these acts were carried out with discriminatory intent, the Chamber had regard to its finding that these acts were discriminatory in fact given that the restrictive and discriminatory measures were directed against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats whereas Bosnian Serbs were not subject to the same restrictions. In addition, the Chamber also had regard to the insults, taunts, and threats directed at the victims on the basis of their identity as Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats in the Municipalities which expressly demonstrated this discriminatory intent with respect to other underlying acts of persecution.⁸⁶⁵⁸

2569. Further, the Chamber found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations in the Municipalities. The Chamber finds that the incidents of restrictive and discriminatory measures were part of this widespread and systematic attack and the perpetrators of these acts knew of the attack and that their crimes were part of it. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the identity of the victims of these acts, which correspond with the scope of the widespread and systematic attack, as well as the magnitude and systematic nature of the attack on the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat civilian populations of BiH.

2570. The Chamber therefore finds that the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures constitute acts of persecution as a crime against humanity.

v. Genocide: Count 1

2571. In Count 1 of the Indictment, the Prosecution charges the Accused with genocide pursuant to Article 4 of the Statute. It alleges that between 31 March and 31 December 1992, in seven of the Municipalities, namely Bratunac, Foča, Ključ, Prijedor, Sanski Most, Vlasenica, and Zvornik (“Count 1 Municipalities”), the alleged persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.⁸⁶⁵⁹ It submits that the crimes charged in the Indictment were not aimed at the victims as individuals but as members of an “undesired community”; the Accused “intended the demographic restructuring of Bosnia to be accomplished by the destruction of substantial parts of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat communities” in the Count 1 Municipalities.⁸⁶⁶⁰ According to the Prosecution, the proper name for this crime is “genocide”.⁸⁶⁶¹

2572. In his Final Brief, the Accused concentrates his argument in relation to Count 1 on the lack of genocidal intent from his part or from anyone in the Bosnian Serb leadership; this argument will be addressed below. The Chamber notes that at the end of the Prosecution’s case, in his submissions pursuant to Rule 98 bis, the Accused argued that there was no genocide in the Municipalities in 1992 and that there was therefore no evidence upon which the Chamber could conclude that the Accused was guilty of genocide as charged in Count 1.⁸⁶⁶² More specifically, he argued that “displacement does not equal destruction”,⁸⁶⁶³ and referred to all of the previous Tribunal judgements in which genocide was not found to have been committed in the Municipalities, or at least in some of the Municipalities.⁸⁶⁶⁴

⁸⁶⁵⁹ Indictment, paras. 36, 38. The Chamber gives a restrictive interpretation to paragraph 38 of the Indictment, which states that the “most extreme manifestations of an intent to partially destroy these groups took place in [the Count 1 Municipalities]”. This is in conformity with the Prosecution Final Brief focusing on the Count 1 Municipalities, by reference only to the “municipalities specified in Count 1”. Prosecution Final Brief, para. 570.

(A) The protected group

2573. For the purpose of Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that the protected groups are the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.⁸⁶⁶⁵

2574. The Chamber notes that other Chambers have concluded that both the Bosnian Muslims and the Bosnian Croats are protected groups within the meaning of Article 4 of the Statute.⁸⁶⁶⁶ The Chamber is satisfied for the purpose of Article 4 of the Statute that the protected groups were the Bosnian Muslims and the Bosnian Croats.

(B) The actus reus

2575. In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution charges three types of acts under Article 4(2) of the Statute: (i) the killing of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including leading members of these groups;⁸⁶⁶⁷ (ii) the causing of serious bodily or mental harm to thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including leading members of these groups, during their confinement in detention facilities;⁸⁶⁶⁸ and (iii) the detention of thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including leading members of these groups, in detention facilities, under conditions of life calculated to bring about their physical destruction.⁸⁶⁶⁹ The Prosecution alleges that the evidence is overwhelming that these acts of genocide within the meaning of Article 4(2) of the Statute occurred on a massive scale.⁸⁶⁷⁰

⁸⁶⁶⁵ See Indictment, para. 38; Prosecution Final Brief, fn. 2147 (making reference to the “national group of Bosnian Muslims and of Croats”).

⁸⁶⁶⁶ In relation to the Bosnian Muslim group, see Krstić Appeal Judgement, para. 15 (holding that identifying “the protected group as the national group of Bosnian Muslims” comports with the guidelines in relation to the definition of the protected group pursuant to Article 4 of the Statute). See also Popović et al. Trial Judgement, para. 840; Krstić Trial Judgement, para. 560. In relation to both the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups, see Stakić Appeal Judgement, para. 36 (concluding that the Trial Chamber did not err in law either by defining the groups allegedly targeted for genocide as Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats”). See also Brđanin Trial Judgement, para. 736.

⁸⁶⁶⁷ Indictment, para. 40(a) (referring to killings carried out during and after take-overs and in detention facilities, including those committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at detention facilities).

⁸⁶⁶⁸ Indictment, para. 40(b) (referring to cruel or inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence and beatings).

⁸⁶⁶⁹ Indictment, para. 40(c) (referring to cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, inhumane living conditions, forced labour and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities).

⁸⁶⁷⁰ Prosecution Final Brief, para. 572; Prosecution Closing Argument, T. 47577 (29 September 2014).

2576. When presenting the Accused's closing arguments on genocide under Count 1, the Accused's legal adviser acknowledged that "crimes such as murder and infliction of serious harm, were committed during the 1992 events in the municipalities in Bosnia".⁸⁶⁷¹

2577. The Chamber will examine below each of the categories of acts charged under Article 4(2) of the Statute.

(1) Killing members of the group

2578. The Chamber entered findings that a large number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were killed by Serb Forces throughout the Count 1 Municipalities. Victims were killed during and after the take-over of these municipalities. Victims were also killed while they were detained at detention facilities; some of them died as a result of cruel and inhumane treatment inflicted on them.⁸⁶⁷²

2579. The Chamber is therefore satisfied for the purpose of Article 4(2)(a) of the Statute that members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups were killed.

(2) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group

2580. Throughout the Count 1 Municipalities, the Chamber found that a large number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel treatment, including torture, beatings, as well as physical and psychological abuse. The Chamber described these acts in detail above in relation to Count 3 and provided vivid examples of the most egregious acts found to have been committed against the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in detention facilities as well as during and after take-overs in the Count 1 Municipalities. The Chamber also found that prominent Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including professionals and leaders, were targeted for such treatment. Following these acts, the Chamber found that many detainees bore serious injuries, had visible wounds, were unable to walk or talk for days, and suffered long-term psychological and physical effects. These acts were found to cause serious mental or physical suffering or injury.

2581. The Chamber also found that in some of the Count 1 Municipalities, namely Foča, Prijedor, Vlasenica, and Zvornik, Bosnian Muslim women, men, girls, and boys were subjected to rape and other acts of sexual violence, involving serious abuses of a sexual nature.⁸⁶⁷³ These acts were found to cause serious mental or physical suffering or injury.⁸⁶⁷⁴

2582. The Chamber considers that these acts were of such a serious nature as to contribute or tend to contribute to the destruction of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 Municipalities. The Chamber is therefore satisfied for the purpose of Article 4(2)(b) of the Statute that members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups were subjected to serious bodily or mental harm in the Count 1 Municipalities.

(3) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part

2583. The Chamber recalls that when the same acts are charged under Articles 4(2)(b) and 4(2)(c), a chamber will consider whether these alleged acts amount to conditions calculated to bring about physical destruction only when it does not find them to amount to “causing serious bodily or mental harm”.⁸⁶⁷⁵ The Chamber shall therefore limit its assessment to the acts which are not included above. These include the imposition of inhumane living conditions, forced labour and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.⁸⁶⁷⁶

2584. In all of the Count 1 Municipalities, the Chamber found that Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat detainees were held in terrible conditions.⁸⁶⁷⁷ For the purpose of Article 4(2)(c), the Chamber recalls its findings that the detainees faced severe over-crowding in the detention facilities.⁸⁶⁷⁸ This combined with stifling heat and lack of ventilation led to unbearable conditions for the detainees and some died.⁸⁶⁷⁹ In these detention facilities, medical care was non-existent or inadequate, at best.⁸⁶⁸⁰ Access to water and food was insufficient, which led to severe weight loss, malnutrition, and at times, starvation.⁸⁶⁸¹ Hygienic conditions were poor and the lack of access to washing facilities led to dysentery, lice, and skin diseases spreading throughout the facilities.⁸⁶⁸²

⁸⁶⁸² See para. 2509.

The Chamber further found that the living conditions in some of the detention facilities had serious effects on some of the detainees.⁸⁶⁸³

2585. Further, in Foča, Ključ, and Vlasenica, the Chamber found that a number of Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat detainees were forced to perform labour at the frontline.⁸⁶⁸⁴ They were put in dangerous situations, were afraid for their lives and of being beaten if they refused to work.⁸⁶⁸⁵

2586. However, the Chamber recalls that the “actus reus of Article 4(2)(c) of the Statute ‘covers methods of physical destruction, other than killing, whereby the perpetrator ultimately seeks the death of the members of the group’”.⁸⁶⁸⁶ While Article 4(2)(a) and (b) in that Article 4(2)(a) and (b) proscribes acts causing a specific result, i.e.: death and serious bodily or mental harm, respectively, Article 4(2)(c) concerns “those methods of destruction that do not immediately kill the members of the groups, but which, ultimately, seek their physical destruction”, i.e.: slow death.⁸⁶⁸⁷

2587. While the conditions in the detention facilities in the Count 1 Municipalities were dreadful and had serious effects on the detainees, the Chamber is not convinced that the evidence before it demonstrates that they ultimately sought the physical destruction of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. The Chamber is therefore not satisfied for the purpose of Article 4(2)(c) of the Statute that conditions of life calculated to bring about the physical destruction of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were deliberately inflicted on these groups in the Count 1 Municipalities.

(C) The mens rea

2588. The Prosecution first alleges that there is direct evidence that the Accused had genocidal intent.⁸⁶⁸⁸ This is exemplified, according to the Prosecution, through the statements the Accused made as to the fate of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats if they persisted in pursuing independence.⁸⁶⁸⁹ The Prosecution also claims that by casting the conflict as existential and genocidal and by requiring the use of reciprocal force, the Accused “prepared his followers for the use of destructive forces”.⁸⁶⁹⁰

2589. Second, the Prosecution alleges that the existence of genocidal intent is confirmed through indirect evidence.⁸⁶⁹¹ For the Prosecution, the pattern of crimes in the Count 1 Municipalities, taking Prijedor as the core example,⁸⁶⁹² demonstrates the intent to destroy the very existence of the Bosnian Croat and Bosnian Muslim communities in the Count 1 Municipalities and to prevent their ability to reconstitute themselves.⁸⁶⁹³ The Prosecution submits that “[n]ot only can the paramount leader of the Bosnian Serbs’ intent to destroy be inferred, it is compelled by the nature and extent of the underlying genocidal acts”.⁸⁶⁹⁴ It further claims that other members of the Overarching JCE shared the Accused’s genocidal intent, in particular Mladić, whom the Accused personally selected to command his military forces and continued to entrust with carrying out his policies, even when the VRS was perpetrating widespread acts of genocide.⁸⁶⁹⁵

2590. On the contrary, the Accused submits that there is no direct or indirect evidence that he or the Bosnian Serb leadership had genocidal intent with regard to the Count 1 Municipalities.⁸⁶⁹⁶

2591. The Chamber recalls that in the present case the required mens rea for genocide is the intent to destroy, in part, the Bosnian Muslim and the Bosnian Croat groups as such.⁸⁶⁹⁷ The Appeals Chamber held that given that the Accused is charged under Count 1 for his participation in the first form of JCE, “it is the genocidal intent of Karadžić and other alleged JCE members, not the physical perpetrators of the underlying alleged genocidal acts, that is determinative”.⁸⁶⁹⁸ The Chamber notes, however, that the Accused’s responsibility under Count 1, is alleged in relation to all modes of responsibility under Articles 7(1) and 7(3) of the Statute and therefore at this stage the Chamber must examine whether there was genocidal intent present at any level from the physical perpetrators of the crimes to Bosnian Serb representatives not named as alleged Overarching JCE members, all the way up to the named alleged JCE members, including the Accused himself.

2592. In determining the existence of such specific intent, the Chamber has considered the evidence as a whole and examined whether there existed direct evidence or whether such inference could be drawn from all the facts and the circumstances in the case. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that such inference must be the only reasonable inference that could be made based on that evidence.⁸⁶⁹⁹ Given that the intent of the named alleged JCE members, including the Accused, is intrinsically connected to all of the evidence on the record pertaining to the existence and the scope of the Overarching JCE, the Chamber conducted a holistic and contextualised assessment of this evidence and will indicate below, where relevant, the appropriate cross-references to these sections.

(1) Intent to destroy the group as such, in part

2593. In the instant case, under Count 1, the Prosecution refers to the intent to destroy a part of the protected groups of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, namely the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 Municipalities.⁸⁷⁰⁰ It argues that the part of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups in each of the Count 1 Municipalities satisfies the substantiality requirement when considering the numeric size and significance of the targeted parts as well as the areas of the perpetrators' activity and the possible extent of their reach.⁸⁷⁰¹ Prijedor is taken as the primary example of the part of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups that would meet the substantiality requirement with regard to numeric size and the significance of targeting these communities, given that Prijedor represented a symbol of "brotherhood and unity".⁸⁷⁰²

2594. The Chamber will examine below whether it can be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that there was intent to destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups, namely the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 Municipalities.

(2) Evidence of genocidal intent of the Accused and named alleged Overarching JCE members 2595. In assessing whether or not the Accused or any of the named members of the alleged Overarching JCE had genocidal intent for the purposes of Count 1, the Chamber relies on the findings in the section of the Judgement pertaining to the ideology and objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership, and in particular paragraphs 2634 to 2903 therein.

2596. The Chamber found that the speeches and statements made by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership denigrated Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, portrayed them as their historic enemies, and exacerbated ethnic tensions in BiH. This evidence also demonstrates an intent to create an ethnically homogeneous Serb state in BiH, to separate from Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, and remove them from Bosnian Serb controlled territory. It also shows that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership advocated a position that co-existence with non-Serbs within Bosnian Serb-controlled territory in BiH was impossible.⁸⁷⁰³ However, the Chamber is not satisfied that the evidence which demonstrates this objective also shows an intent to physically destroy a part of either of those protected groups.

2597. Even where the Bosnian Serb leadership called into question the identity of the Bosnian Muslims as a nation or a people,⁸⁷⁰⁴ these speeches were delivered in the context that the Bosnian Muslim population residing in Bosnian Serb-claimed territory should be separated from the Serbs—by force if necessary—but did not suggest that a part of that group should be physically destroyed as such.

2598. The Chamber also found that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership repeatedly referred to the historic grievances of the Serb people.⁸⁷⁰⁵ The Chamber found that these speeches were used by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership to remind the Bosnian Serb population about crimes committed against Serbs by Muslims and Croats and emphasised the need to ensure that they would not be repeated.⁸⁷⁰⁶ The Chamber also found that these references were used as justification for renewing historical Bosnian Serb claims to land in BiH where they had once been a majority.⁸⁷⁰⁷ These speeches also had the effect of creating fear and inciting inter-ethnic hatred amongst the population.⁸⁷⁰⁸ This rhetoric then made it easier for the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership to promote their objectives of ethnic separation and the creation of an ethnically homogeneous state. However, the Chamber did not find any evidence to demonstrate that these constant references to the historic genocide against Serbs were used to call on the Bosnian Serbs to do the same. The Chamber therefore finds that while these statements had the effect of identifying the historic enemies of the Bosnian Serbs and furthering the objective of ethnic separation, they do not demonstrate that the only reasonable inference is that the Bosnian Serb leadership intended to physically destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups in order to achieve these aims.

2599. While there were certainly highly inflammatory speeches and statements in which the Accused and other alleged members of the Overarching JCE spoke about the “disappearance”, ⁸⁷⁰³ See Section IV.A.3.a.i.D.2: Conclusion.

“annihilation”, “vanish[ing]”, “elimination”, and “extinction” of the Bosnian Muslims, the Chamber has considered these statements in the full context in which they were delivered and not in isolation.⁸⁷⁰⁹ The Chamber finds that the early speeches which contained this kind of rhetoric were delivered mainly as a warning that Bosnian Muslims should not pursue a path to independence which was contrary to the Bosnian Serb interests, and as a threat that if they did do so there would be war which would lead to severe bloodshed. The Chamber also recalls that some of the statements made by the Accused himself reflected how angry he was about the proposed moves towards the independence of BiH, which would lead to violence if Bosnian Serb demands were not met.⁸⁷¹⁰ The Chamber finds that when the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership issued these threats they envisaged that any attempt to circumvent the interests of the Bosnian Serbs would result in chaos and extreme violence. The record shows that the Bosnian Serbs were prepared to use force and violence against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in order to achieve their objectives and assert their historic territorial claims. However, in light of the totality of the evidence, the Chamber is not convinced that the only reasonable inference to draw from these statements is that the respective speakers intended to physically destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups.

2600. For example, the Chamber recalls its finding that in the Accused’s speech in October 1991 to the SRBiH Assembly in which he spoke about a “highway of hell”, he issued very specific threats about what would happen if the Bosnian Muslims continued to pursue the path of independence and ignored the will of the Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁷¹¹ The Chamber finds that the Accused was clearly threatening war if the Bosnian Serb interests were ignored, and that he also envisaged that such a war would be “hell” and that the Bosnian Muslims would be unable to defend themselves in such a scenario. The Chamber finds that through this speech the Accused intended to threaten the Bosnian Muslims against pursuing independence for BiH and that he was fully aware that a potential conflict would be extremely violent. However, the Chamber is not satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that this statement demonstrates that the Accused intended to physically destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim group .

2601. Another example is the speech the Accused delivered in July 1992 before the Bosnian Serb Assembly where he said that the conflict had been “roused in order to eliminate the Muslims [...] They think they are being nationally established, but in fact they are vanishing”.⁸⁷¹² The Prosecution refers to this statement as evidence that the Accused was preparing his followers for the use of destructive force.⁸⁷¹³ However, the Chamber also notes that right after making this statement, the Accused went on to say: “I think we have to save the Serb people in their ethnic and also historical territories [...]. We’ll have for sure, we’ll have in the beginning so many Serbs, but I think that they will leave those states, both the Muslim and the Croat state. In the state that we are building, we have to ensure that they have all the rights that we have, under the condition that they are not hostile and that they leave the weapons”.⁸⁷¹⁴ When read in the full context, the Chamber is not satisfied that the Accused’s statement at the Bosnian Serb Assembly demonstrates that he intended to physically destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups.

2602. Similarly, the Chamber considers that while Šešelj, Plavšić, and Koljević sometimes delivered highly inflammatory and violent statements,⁸⁷¹⁵ the evidence before the Chamber does not lead to the conclusion that the only reasonable inference was that they intended to physically destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups.

2603. With respect to an order of 10 April 1994 in which Mladić is quoted as encouraging VRS operations because “The [t]urks must disappear from these areas”, the Chamber notes that the area covered by this order is not related to the Count 1 Municipalities.⁸⁷¹⁶ In any event, the Chamber also notes Michael Rose’s testimony with regard to this order, namely that he and other international representatives had thought that the objective of the combat operations in Goražde was to move the Bosnian Muslims out of the right bank of the town and therefore he suspected the reference in the order to “[t]he Turks must disappear from these areas” to mean just that: the removal—not the destruction—of the Bosnian Muslim population in those areas.⁸⁷¹⁷ The Chamber also noted statements made by Mladić at the Bosnian Serb Assembly where he stated that their enemies should be eliminated but later stated that there are ways of neutralising the Muslims which do not mean that they have to be expelled or drowned.⁸⁷¹⁸ The Chamber therefore considers that, while the evidence clearly evinces the intent to separate and move Bosnian Muslims out of Bosnian Serb claimed territory, it is not satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that Mladić intended to destroy a part of that group in the process.

2604. In relation to the 20 September 1994 entry in Mladić's diary, in which Slobodan Milošević stated that he opposed the view of Krajišnik to "kill off all the Muslims and Croats",⁸⁷¹⁹ the Chamber notes that it has very limited information about when or in which context Krajišnik expressed this sentiment, and therefore, that it is of low probative value. The Chamber is therefore not satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that this demonstrates intent to destroy a part of either of the protected groups.

2605. The Chamber has also analysed the totality of the evidence relating to the statements, speeches, and actions of the Accused and the named members of the alleged Overarching JCE. The Chamber has characterised each of these statements and reached a conclusion about what they meant and what they showed in terms of intent. In conducting that assessment, the Chamber did not simply look at these statements in isolation, but also had regard to their meaning in the context of the totality of the evidence on the record. As has been discussed in this section, the Chamber has found that these statements, speeches, and actions were consistent with the Bosnian Serb objective of ethnic separation and the forceful creation of an ethnically homogenous state. However, the Chamber is not satisfied that this evidence—even when considered in the context of the pattern of crimes found to have been committed in the Count 1 Municipalities as will be detailed below—allows the Chamber to conclude that the Accused or the named members of the alleged Overarching JCE had genocidal intent for the purposes of Count 1. In other words, the evidence does not support a conclusion that the only reasonable inference is that the Accused or any of the alleged members of the Overarching JCE had the intent to physically destroy the Bosnian Muslim and/or the Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such.

(3) Evidence of genocidal intent of Bosnian Serbs not named as alleged members of the Overarching JCE

2606. In relation to the intent of the Accused's "followers", the Prosecution refers to what it coins as a threat by Miroslav Deronjić that the Muslims of Bratunac would disappear.⁸⁷²⁰ At a meeting between SDS and SDA representatives in early April 1992, Deronjić reiterated that the police should be divided into separate Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim units and when the SDA representatives opposed the idea, fearing it would lead to further tensions, Deronjić threatened that if they did not comply, "Muslims would disappear".⁸⁷²¹ He went on to say that the division would be the best way for the Bosnian Muslims to prevent violence breaking out.⁸⁷²² In the context of negotiations at the republic and the municipal levels to divide the police into separate entities,⁸⁷²³ the Chamber considers that, in the statement above, Deronjić clearly intended to intimidate the SDA representatives and coerce them into accepting the division. However, the Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the only reasonable inference to be drawn from this statement is that Deronjić possessed genocidal intent.

2607. The Prosecution also refers to a speech made before the Bosnian Serb Assembly in July 1992 by Miladin Nedić, member of the SDS Main Board and representative at the Bosnian Serb Assembly, which the Prosecution coins as “the executioners’ speech”.⁸⁷²⁴ The Accused, on the contrary, refers to Nedić’s evidence that this particular statement must be understood in light of his later address during the same session.⁸⁷²⁵ During his first address to the 17th Bosnian Serb Assembly session, Nedić stated the following

I am against solving the situation in Bosnia in haste, we must admit that the Muslims have been planted to us as a people whose executioners we are to be. I do not want the Serb people to be executioners but I am also against us giving up our state, our land and our territory.[...] Therefore we should not hurry, because we are a people who have been determined to be executioners and to do someone a favour.⁸⁷²⁶

2608. Nedić testified that the essence of his statement was that he was advocating a peaceful solution to avoid the war.⁸⁷²⁷ The Chamber notes that Nedić indeed described the Serb people as having been called upon to be the executioners of the Muslims. However, it also notes that he immediately stated: “I am against any defined borders while people are getting killed”.⁸⁷²⁸ Furthermore, later in the session, during a second address, Nedić reiterated that he opposed any discussion on the definition of borders and advocated the following:

Let us leave the time to solve that, but I am not for waging a war in order to enslave some and us to become oppressors. Let us treat the soldiers in accordance with military codes, let us not kill women and children for wearing dimijas. [...] I told a colonel that I am for a knightly warfare and not for genocide.⁸⁷²⁹

2609. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution refers to later statements made by Nedić before the Bosnian Serb Assembly, which it claims contradicts Nedić’s evidence that he was advocating peace.⁸⁷³⁰ Having considered these statements, the Chamber finds that they show Nedić's exasperation with the position of the Bosnian Muslims during negotiations and his wish that peace be established; albeit solely under the conditions established by the Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁷³¹

2610. In light of the above, the Chamber is not satisfied that the only reasonable inference that can be drawn from Nedić's statement at the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly is that he possessed the intent to destroy a part of the Bosnian Muslim group as such.

2611. The Chamber notes that these are merely examples referred to by the Prosecution to show genocidal intent of the "Accused's followers" but that the Chamber conducted its own assessment of the remainder of the trial record to examine whether there was genocidal intent towards the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such, on the part of Bosnian Serbs not named as alleged Overarching JCE members.

2612. In light of the above and having assessed the entire trial record, including the pattern of crimes described below,⁸⁷³² the Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the facts and circumstances is that Bosnian Serbs not named as alleged Overarching JCE members possessed the intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslim and/or the Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such.

(4) Evidence of genocidal intent of the physical perpetrators

2613. The Chamber examined the record to assess whether there was evidence of genocidal intent by the perpetrators of the above acts in relation to the Count 1 Municipalities. In relation to Count 3, the Chamber found that victims of crimes during the take-overs of the Count 1 Municipalities and in detention facilities in those municipalities were targeted solely on the basis that they were Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.⁸⁷³³ This led the Chamber to find that the said crimes were committed with discriminatory intent.⁸⁷³⁴ The Chamber is not satisfied, however, that there is evidence establishing, beyond reasonable doubt, that the perpetrators of these crimes possessed intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such.

(5) Evidence of genocidal intent through the pattern of crimes

2614. The Chamber will now examine whether the pattern of crimes in the Count 1 Municipalities, as considered in light of the whole trial record, satisfies the Chamber that the only reasonable inference that could be drawn from the facts and circumstances was that the acts described above in the Count 1 Municipalities were committed with genocidal intent.

2615. The Chamber recalls a few key factual findings made above in relation to each of the Count 1 Municipalities, first in relation to eastern BiH (Zvornik, Foča, Bratunac, and Vlasenica) before turning to the ARK (Ključ, Prijedor, and Sanski Most).

2616. In Zvornik, preparations for the division of municipal organs and the creation of Serb institutions started at the end of 1991.⁸⁷³⁵ The take-over of the town of Zvornik by Serb Forces started on or about 8 April 1992 and by the following morning, a Serbian flag was flying over the main mosque.⁸⁷³⁶ During the take-over, Bosnian Muslims were killed by Serb Forces.⁸⁷³⁷ Restrictive measures were imposed and Bosnian Muslims were dismissed from employment.⁸⁷³⁸ Paramilitaries looted, mistreated, raped, and killed inhabitants.⁸⁷³⁹ After the attack on the town, Serb Forces attacked surrounding villages; they set houses on fire, cut the electricity supply, and rounded up people who were then either transferred out of the municipality or detained in detention facilities there.⁸⁷⁴⁰ Hundreds of Bosnian Muslims were arrested and detained in detention facilities throughout Zvornik; there, they were held in appalling conditions, subjected to severe mistreatment, rape and other acts of sexual violence; some detainees were killed.⁸⁷⁴¹ The Chamber also found that 26 mosques were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed by Serb Forces from April 1992.⁸⁷⁴² Finally, the Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave Zvornik and that towards the end of June 1992, there were very few Bosnian Muslims remaining in the town.⁸⁷⁴³

⁸⁷⁴³ See paras. 1364–1365.

2618. In Bratunac, the Chamber made findings that at the end of 1991 and the beginning of 1992, preparations were made to divide municipal structures and create separate Serb institutions.⁸⁷⁵² On or about 17 April 1992, Serb Forces entered the town.⁸⁷⁵³ From then on, Bosnian Muslim houses were searched and looted,⁸⁷⁵⁴ Bosnian Muslims were dismissed from their jobs,⁸⁷⁵⁵ Bosnian Serb refugees settled in the homes of Bosnian Muslims who had left,⁸⁷⁵⁶ and mosques and other Muslim monuments were destroyed.⁸⁷⁵⁷ In the days following the attack on the town, surrounding Bosnian Muslim villages were attacked by Serb Forces; during the course of these attacks, houses were looted and burned, and villagers were told to leave.⁸⁷⁵⁸ Bosnian Muslims were also killed by Serb Forces in these villages.⁸⁷⁵⁹ From May 1992, hundreds of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were rounded up from their homes and detained in facilities throughout Bratunac, where they were subjected to severe mistreatment and held in cramped condition; some detainees died.⁸⁷⁶⁰ In these detention facilities, prominent Bosnian Muslims intellectuals were targeted.⁸⁷⁶¹ The Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave Bratunac and that by the end of June 1992, very few remained in the town.⁸⁷⁶²

2619. In Vlasenica, measures were adopted to divide municipal institutions and create Serb organs at the end of 1991 and the beginning of 1992.⁸⁷⁶³ Serb Forces took over Vlasenica on or about 21 April 1992.⁸⁷⁶⁴ After the take-over, the movement of Bosnian Muslims was restricted and they were dismissed from their jobs.⁸⁷⁶⁵ They were arrested and interrogated.⁸⁷⁶⁶ During the course of the take-over of villages within the municipality, Bosnian Muslim houses were set on fire.⁸⁷⁶⁷ Bosnian Muslims were also killed during the course of these attacks.⁸⁷⁶⁸ There were a number of detention facilities in Vlasenica; there, Bosnian Muslims were detained, held in appalling conditions, beaten, raped, and some were killed.⁸⁷⁶⁹ The Chamber found that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave Vlasenica in 1992 and early 1993 and that by then there were very few Bosnian Muslims left in Vlasenica town.⁸⁷⁷⁰

2620. In Prijedor, measures were also taken for the division of municipal organs and the establishment of Serb institutions at the end of 1991 and the beginning of 1992.⁸⁷⁷¹ At this time, propaganda in the municipality against Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats was common.⁸⁷⁷² The town of Prijedor was taken over on 30 April 1992 by Serb Forces.⁸⁷⁷³ After the take-over, non-Serbs were dismissed from the workforce and their houses were searched and looted.⁸⁷⁷⁴ About a month later, villages in the predominantly Muslim areas of Kozarac and Brdo, as well as in Briševo were attacked by Serb Forces; villages were shelled, set ablaze, and for the most part destroyed,⁸⁷⁷⁵ During the course of these attacks, Bosnian Muslims and Croats were killed.⁸⁷⁷⁶ Thousands of

Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained in detention facilities in Prijedor.⁸⁷⁷⁷ The Chamber has made findings that the conditions in these detention facilities were, in general, abysmal, that detainees were subjected to frequent and severe beatings, rape and other acts of sexual violence, and that some were killed.⁸⁷⁷⁸ In Prijedor, 17 mosques and two Catholic churches were heavily damaged, almost destroyed, or completely destroyed by Serb Forces.⁸⁷⁷⁹ The Chamber found that following the attacks on towns and villages in Prijedor between late May and end of July 1992, the non-Serb population was expelled from the municipality.⁸⁷⁸⁰ As detention facilities were closed in Prijedor, detainees held there were transferred around the municipality as well as to camps outside of the municipality and ultimately often to third countries.⁸⁷⁸¹ The Chamber found by 1995, the population of Prijedor municipality consisted of approximately 92% Bosnian Serbs, 5% Bosnian Muslims, and 1% Bosnian Croats.⁸⁷⁸²

2621. In Sanski Most, Serb municipal organs were only established in early April 1992.⁸⁷⁸³ Bosnian Muslim neighbourhoods and villages were attacked on 25 May 1992.⁸⁷⁸⁴ Houses were destroyed and individuals were captured.⁸⁷⁸⁵ Thereafter, Bosnian Muslims were dismissed from their work and Bosnian Croat and Muslim political leaders were arrested.⁸⁷⁸⁶ Bosnian Muslims and Croats were killed.⁸⁷⁸⁷ After military operations against Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat villages in Sanski Most, soldiers collected the able-bodied military-aged men from the village and transferred them by bus to Sanski Most town.⁸⁷⁸⁸ Over a thousand individuals were thus detained in detention facilities throughout the municipality in poor conditions; they were beaten and some were also killed.⁸⁷⁸⁹ The Chamber also found that at least 16 mosques and the town Catholic church were heavily damaged, almost destroyed or completely destroyed by Serb Forces between May and December 1992.⁸⁷⁹⁰ The Chamber also found that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in Sanski Most were forced to leave and that by February 1995, the population of Sanski Most municipality was approximately 3,350 Bosnian Muslims, 1,050 Bosnian Croats, and 33,600 Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁷⁹¹

2622. In Ključ, preparations to establish separate Serb institutions started at the end of 1991.⁸⁷⁹² Violence intensified in March 1992 and the town was taken over in early May 1992.⁸⁷⁹³ After the take-over, Bosnian Muslims were expelled from the police, administrative organs, and the workforce.⁸⁷⁹⁴ A large number of Bosnian Muslim houses were destroyed and Bosnian Muslims were killed during the course or after attacks on villages.⁸⁷⁹⁵ Other Bosnian Muslims from Ključ were rounded up and detained in facilities throughout the municipality, where they were subjected to mental abuse and physical mistreatment.⁸⁷⁹⁶ The Chamber found that eight mosques were destroyed by Serb Forces between May and August 1992.⁸⁷⁹⁷ The Chamber also found that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were forced to leave Ključ and that by 1995, only 1,200 of Ključ's original 17,000 Bosnian Muslims remained.⁸⁷⁹⁸

2623. As summarised above, the Chamber's findings in relation to the Count 1 Municipalities show a clear pattern of widespread intimidation, violence, killings, and expulsions targeted at the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, for the most part of 1992 and, in some instances, into 1993. The Chamber has already found that there was a widespread and systematic attack against the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat population of BiH, demonstrated by the existence of a campaign of co-ordinated violence during the take-overs and in the detention facilities.⁸⁷⁹⁹ Further, the acts which the Chamber has determined herein to constitute acts under Article 4(2) of the Statute were found to have targeted their victims solely on the basis of their ethnicity and were therefore found to constitute persecution.⁸⁸⁰⁰ This campaign of violence resulted in the Serb-claimed territories of the Count 1 Municipalities being cleared of the overwhelming majority of their Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat populations, as most had left by the end of 1992 and into 1993.

2624. This pattern of crimes in the Count 1 Municipalities is illustrated by the commission of dreadful crimes, namely crimes against humanity and violations of the law or customs of war, against the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats on a widespread scale. As a result, many Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats in the Count 1 Municipalities, including some prominent members of that group, were subjected to the acts described above. The Chamber found that the scale and extent of the expulsions and movement of the civilians from the Municipalities, including the Count 1 Municipalities, resulted in the displacement of a vast number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and in drastic changes to the ethnic composition of towns with almost no Bosnian Muslim remaining there.⁸⁸⁰¹ As recalled above, by early 1993, practically all of the Bosnian Muslims had been moved out of Serb held territory in the Count 1 Municipalities. The total number of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats displaced—especially when examined in light of the portion of the groups of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats allegedly targeted for destruction in the Count 1 Municipalities through the commission of the acts under Article 4(2) of the Statute identified above as well as the fact that Serb Forces exercised control over these territories—does not satisfy the Chamber that the only reasonable inference is that there existed an intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such. Rather, the Chamber considers that a reasonable inference to be drawn from the pattern described above is that the intent behind those crimes was to ensure the removal of members of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from the Count 1 Municipalities.

2625. In assessing this pattern of crimes also in the context of its findings on the objectives of the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused,⁸⁸⁰² the Chamber recalls that their objective was to create an ethnically pure Bosnian Serb state as well as contiguous Serb areas, which would require a redistribution—rather than the physical destruction—of the population.⁸⁸⁰³ Bosnian Serbs promoted the idea that they could not live with anyone else and therefore that BiH had to be divided along ethnic lines.⁸⁸⁰⁴ The results on the ground, including in the Count 1 Municipalities, were consistent with these goals. As an example that this pattern of crimes is consistent with the Bosnian Serb leadership's intent to create ethnically pure territories through the removal of the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, the Chamber refers to the Accused's speech at the 37th Bosnian Serb Assembly in 1994 where he congratulates Foča, then renamed as Srbinje, for being “a true Serbian town” as well as to the broadcast in which he announced that Bosnian Muslims have given up on Foča in their negotiations.⁸⁸⁰⁵ When seen in this context, the Chamber is not satisfied that the only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the pattern of crimes described above is that there existed intent to destroy the parts of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such.

(6) Conclusion

2626. Having reviewed all of the evidence on the record, for the purpose of Count 1, the Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the acts under Article 4(2) identified above in the Count 1 Municipalities were committed with genocidal intent. Further, it is not convinced that the only reasonable inference to be drawn from the evidence is that named members of the alleged Overarching JCE, including the Accused, other Bosnian Serbs not named as alleged members of the Overarching JCE, or physical perpetrators possessed such intent to destroy the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat groups in the Count 1 Municipalities as such.

3. Overarching JCE and the Accused's responsibility

2627. The Chamber recalls that with respect to the Overarching JCE, the Prosecution alleges that from at least October 1991 to 30 November 1995, the Accused participated in an "overarching" JCE, the objective of which was to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory in BiH.⁸⁸⁰⁶

2628. The named individuals who are alleged to have been members of the Overarching JCE and to have acted in concert with the Accused are Krajišnik, Mladić, Slobodan Milošević, Plavšić, Koljević, Mićo Stanišić, Mandić, Jovica Stanišić, Franko Simatović, Arkan, and Šešelj.⁸⁸⁰⁷

2629. In addition, the Prosecution alleges that other members of the Overarching JCE included members and leaders of the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and commanders, senior officers, chiefs of the Serbian MUP, JNA, VJ, VRS, RS MUP, Bosnian Serb TO, and leaders of Bosnian Serb paramilitary forces and volunteer units.⁸⁸⁰⁸ In the alternative, the Prosecution alleges that some or all of these individuals were not members of the Overarching JCE, but were used by members of the Overarching JCE to carry out the crimes committed in furtherance of its objective.⁸⁸⁰⁹

2630. The Prosecution alleges that the objective of the Overarching JCE was achieved through the commission of the crimes of genocide, persecution, extermination, murder, deportation, and inhumane acts (forcible transfer).⁸⁸¹⁰ The Prosecution charges the Accused with the first and the third form of JCE in relation to the Overarching JCE.⁸⁸¹¹ It primarily argues that the Accused shared the intent for the commission of each of these crimes with other members of the Overarching JCE.⁸⁸¹² Alternatively, the Prosecution argues that the shared objective of the Overarching JCE included at least the crimes of deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) and that for the remaining crimes the Accused is responsible as it was foreseeable that the remaining crimes might be perpetrated in order to carry out the actus reus of the crimes which formed part of the shared objective.⁸⁸¹³

2631. The Prosecution alleges that members of the Overarching JCE implemented its objective by personally committing crimes, and/or by using others to carry out crimes in furtherance of its objective.⁸⁸¹⁴ Those alleged to have been used by members of the Overarching JCE to carry out these crimes were members of the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and members of the Serb Forces.⁸⁸¹⁵

2633. The Chamber will consider the evidence presented with respect to (i) the objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership; (ii) the Accused's authority over Bosnian Serb political and governmental structures; (iii) the Accused's authority over Serb Forces; (iv) the knowledge and acts of named alleged members of the Overarching JCE; and (v) the Accused's knowledge of crimes and measures taken to prevent and punish crimes in the Municipalities. The Chamber will analyse this evidence to determine whether the Overarching JCE existed, and if so, when it came into existence, what was its common purpose, and whether a plurality of persons, including the Accused, shared and acted pursuant to that common purpose. The Chamber will then analyse whether or not the Accused significantly contributed to the alleged Overarching JCE and which crimes if any were intended or, alternatively, whether any of the alleged crimes were foreseeable in the implementation of the objective of the Overarching JCE.

a. Responsibility related facts

i. Objectives of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership

(A) Unity of the Serb people and promotion of Serb interests

(1) Analysis of evidence

2634. In the period leading up to the start of the conflict, the Accused made statements calling for the unity of the Serb people and the promotion of Serb interests. These are discussed below.

2635. The Chamber recalls that the SDS was established on 12 July 1990, and the Accused as president of the party stated that the objectives of the SDS included “a federative Yugoslavia, and in it an equal federal Bosnia and Herzegovina”.⁸⁸¹⁷ During this speech he also spoke about how decades of “single-party rule have intensely disturbed the natural development of the Serbian nation”.⁸⁸¹⁸ In addition, he spoke about how “Serbian entities” in BiH had been broken down and had been left in an inferior “economic, demographic and political position”.⁸⁸¹⁹

2636. On 13 October 1990, in a speech before Serb representatives in Banja Luka, the Accused expressed his view that the “Serbian nation” was united and spoke of his fear that BiH would set its course to separate from Yugoslavia and that the Serbs would be separated from Serbia and be a national minority.⁸⁸²⁰ The Accused also said “[w]hether a greater Croatia or greater Bosnia and Herzegovina as some kind of independent state, separate from Yugoslavia, they are equally unfavourable for us, the Serbs. [...] The Serbian people of Bosnia and Herzegovina will not abandon its demands to live in a state which also includes its main country, the country of Serbia”.⁸⁸²¹ In the same speech, the Accused spoke about changes to “the essence of the borders, the quality and nature of our internal borders. So the administrative lines which are supposed to join us have been transformed, or will soon be transformed into firm state borders which separate us. [...] They would like to chop the Serbian nation up in pieces against its will.”⁸⁸²² The Accused also expressed his concern regarding the collapse of Yugoslavia “into the abyss” and warned that the Bosnian Serbs would take any threat of civil war seriously.⁸⁸²³

2637. At this same meeting, Koljević identified the purpose of establishing the SDS as a means of expressing the national objective of the Bosnian Serbs, which was “a federative Yugoslavia and for the Serbs to be able to survive [...] in that Yugoslavia and for all the other peoples to be able to survive together”.⁸⁸²⁴ Koljević also emphasised that the SDS was formed in “response to the new situation which has arisen and which we will not and must not tolerate” and that they should not remain unprepared.⁸⁸²⁵ In this same speech Koljević called on the other national parties in BiH to think about “what the partition of a confederal Yugoslavia means and for them not to push us into another civil war”.⁸⁸²⁶

2638. In an interview in November 1990, the Accused discussed the possibility of Serbs being outvoted in the BiH Assembly and predicted that if that happened “all conditions for a civil war would be in place, because the Serbs in BiH are no longer helpless, but very powerful and united”.⁸⁸²⁷ The Accused stated that he did not think civil war would happen “because the Serbs won’t start the skirmish first and others are afraid to. No one has reason to fear the Serbs if they have no misdeeds against them”.⁸⁸²⁸ The Accused further stated that “under no circumstances will Serbs accept to live in several independent states, and to become a national minority everywhere outside Serbia. The Serbs will stay in one state – Federative Yugoslavia” and would not be separated from Serbia.⁸⁸²⁹

The Chamber does not find Martić’s evidence in this regard to be reliable. In reaching that 2639. The Accused also indicated that the political life of Bosnian Serbs “had been fully revived and established”, which was the main purpose of setting up the SDS, and that in all places where Serbs lived they had set up municipal organisations with municipal and local boards.⁸⁸³⁰ He spoke about how the SDS had become the party of all Serbs and there was now “only a unified Serbian people”.⁸⁸³¹ These statements were made before the first multi-party elections, which the Chamber recalls were held in BiH on 18 November 1990.⁸⁸³²

2640. The Accused delivered a speech in 1990 in which he said that Bosnian Serbs did not agree to “sacrifice any Croat, any Muslim, and any human being in organizing a state” and that those who did not know how to organise their state “except with blood and corpses, they must go!”.⁸⁸³³ In this speech the Accused also said they would act democratically and be benign so long as democracy was able to function but that the “moment anyone attacks us, we shall bring out the spear”.⁸⁸³⁴ The Accused also stated that one of the objectives of the SDS was to improve multi-ethnic relations but that it would not co-operate with any parties which “have even the slightest trace of anti-Serbism”.⁸⁸³⁵

2641. In May 1991, the Accused and Plavšić discussed preserving the common state of Yugoslavia, the danger of BiH “sliding into chaos and civil war”, and the need to reach an agreement with Izetbegović in line with their interests.⁸⁸³⁶ The Accused, in June 1991, repeated his position that BiH would never be independent and that it would not follow the footsteps of Croatia.⁸⁸³⁷ He also said that if BiH were to collapse, there would be chaos but that they would not bow their heads.⁸⁸³⁸ The Accused warned Izetbegović out of frustration that they would form a conclusion the Chamber found that his testimony was marked by contradictions, evasiveness, and indicators of bias.

In addition, Milinčić’s evidence was marked by extreme evasiveness and indicators that he lacked candour. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence in this regard to be reliable.

parallel government and parallel police if their people were excluded and that the Bosnian Serbs were all armed.⁸⁸³⁹ The Accused also said in a related conversation that they had “prepared an alternative, which will be atrocious. We prepared it and we’ll fuck their mothers”.⁸⁸⁴⁰ The Accused in another conversation also spoke about territories which would be integral to the Serb part of BiH in the event that there was a split and that they would have their own “army and militia”.⁸⁸⁴¹

2642. On 23 July 1991, the Accused told Kuprešanin that the referendum for an independent Krajina would be a mistake for negotiations at that time because the Bosnian Muslims had prepared “all the evidence that the Serbs are creating the Greater Serbia. And now you are playing right into their hands, as if they are paying you. [...]. They have to make a mistake. They will definitely make a mistake we know that”.⁸⁸⁴²

2643. In an intercepted conversation on 4 September 1991, the Accused said that the army had been invited to Tuzla and that the Bosnian Muslims should be warned that the Serbs could defend themselves.⁸⁸⁴³ When informed about tensions in Bratunac, the Accused responded “we will arrest them and kill them. [...] Tell them that Serbs in Bosnia and Herzegovina [...] can defend themselves and defend themselves successfully. There are two hundred thousand armed men and they should not mess around”.⁸⁸⁴⁴ On 13 September 1991, referring to a proposal by Izetbegović to resolve the question of the army in BiH and demilitarisation, the Accused said to Koljević “we will put the army in all our areas, Serbian Bosnia, right? Down there, on Neretva...”.⁸⁸⁴⁵ The Accused also told international representatives that unless the Serb areas in BiH could remain tied to D2923 (Witness statement of Vitomir Žepinić dated 11 February 2013), paras. 40, 43, 48–49. While the Chamber accepts that Žepinić formed this impression during these conversations, the Chamber finds that these conversations show that the Accused was indeed angry about proposed moves towards the independence of BiH and was prepared to change their strategy if Bosnian Serb demands were not met and this would include violence.

Yugoslavia war would result.⁸⁸⁴⁶ On 30 September 1991, the Accused stated that the “war goal” of the Serbian people was Yugoslavia.⁸⁸⁴⁷ The SDS was ready to have Serb territories secede from an independent BiH if that was the only way for Serbs to remain in Yugoslavia.⁸⁸⁴⁸

2644. In May 1991, Slobodan Milošević told the Accused that his position should be that they were against the secession and wanted BiH to remain in Yugoslavia, to which the Accused agreed.⁸⁸⁴⁹ In another conversation in July 1991, Milošević told the Accused that their objective was to “have disintegration in [...] line with our inclinations” and that they “should take radical steps and speed the things up”.⁸⁸⁵⁰

2645. In other conversations, Slobodan Milošević told the Accused that the Serbs would not be divided into many states, and that this “should be the basic premise for your thinking”.⁸⁸⁵¹ He also questioned who could “take the Serbian people out of Yugoslavia if it is against their will”, to which the Accused responded that it was important to emphasise that the borders had been artificially created by Tito and did not follow an “ethnic [or] historical principle”.⁸⁸⁵²

2646. In July 1991, Milošević encouraged meetings between Serbs and Muslims because the population did not want war.⁸⁸⁵³ The Accused agreed but said that it was Izetbegović who was preparing for civil war and suggested to “let everybody identify themselves now, who does not want an agreement with the Serbs obviously wants a dispute with the Serbs”.⁸⁸⁵⁴ Milošević made it clear that they were “offering nothing else but an integral Bosnia, equal to other republics in Yugoslavia”.⁸⁸⁵⁵ The Accused repeated that they wanted to have strong ties with Yugoslavia and if the Bosnian Muslims refused, the alternative would be war.⁸⁸⁵⁶ This was confirmed in an intercepted conversation towards the end of the conflict, where the Accused and Krajišnik spoke about the fact that they had waged war because they did not accept BiH as “integral and separate from Yugoslavia”.⁸⁸⁵⁷

2647. On 2 October 1991, in an intercepted conversation with Krajišnik, the Accused alluded to there being “very concrete plans for transfer” and combat operations from Western Herzegovina to “that Ustasha’s oasis in Goražde and further to the Drina River”.⁸⁸⁵⁸ In this conversation, the Accused and Krajišnik agreed upon and discussed the importance of unifying Serbs in a common state, and Krajišnik stated that they had a clear, unified vision of a “state over the state”.⁸⁸⁵⁹ At a joint meeting between the government of the SAO Krajina and the ARK Executive Council in Banja Luka on 20 October 1991, which was attended by the Accused and Krajišnik, a conclusion was reached to support and implement the objective that the Serb people would remain in a single joint state.⁸⁸⁶⁰ The Accused also spoke to Milošević and told him that Serbs had one third of the electorate in BiH and that they were “going to forcefully make some other moves and they can no longer keep up with us”.⁸⁸⁶¹

2648. In an intercepted conversation in January 1992, the Accused emphasised his ideology with municipal leaders and said that the policy of the SDS “is the unified Serbianhood” in BiH and that if anybody had a problem they could create their own party.⁸⁸⁶² The Accused also spoke about working towards an option involving a “union of Serbian states” which would involve preparing a Serbian federation and defending “it with arms and at any cost”.⁸⁸⁶³ He also said that if they could not preserve Yugoslavia, the Serbs would find their own “place in the Sun” and that the “back up option” was to have all Serb territories in one state.⁸⁸⁶⁴ Similarly in February 1992, in the context of discussing their position at international negotiations, the Accused emphasised that: “Our optimum is a Greater Serbia, and if not that, then a Federal Yugoslavia” and that while they could settle for a cantonal structure he stated that “[t]here are no further concessions”.⁸⁸⁶⁵

2649. The Accused also spoke derisively of Serbs who did “not comply with the policy of the SDS, which advocates a single solution for the Serb people in Yugoslavia”.⁸⁸⁶⁶ At a rally in February 1992, attended by Bosnian Serb leaders including Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević, speeches were delivered, including by a minister from Serbia, who said that nobody had the right to separate the Serbian people from Serbia and that if the Bosnian Serbs did not get what they were asking for in BiH they could rely on the support of Serbia.⁸⁸⁶⁷

2650. On 29 February 1992, the Accused, Krajišnik, and Koljević attended the 14th session of the ARK Assembly.⁸⁸⁶⁸ At the meeting, the Accused declared that if BiH changed its status in Yugoslavia then the Serbs would change their status as well.⁸⁸⁶⁹ In a March 1992 interview, the Accused stated: “I am convinced that the Serbs will never find peace until they have achieved their age-old aspiration of living in one state. Whether now or in a few years’ time, I don’t know. But they will achieve it.”⁸⁸⁷⁰

(2) Conclusion

2651. Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber finds that from 1990 and into mid-1991, the political objective of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership was to preserve Yugoslavia and to prevent the separation or independence of BiH, which would result in a separation of Bosnian Serbs from Serbia.

2652. The Chamber also finds that the Accused emphasised that the Bosnian Serbs did not want to be a minority in an independent BiH and would not accept separation from Serbia. In these speeches, the Accused also spoke about the marginalisation of the Serb people and the need to protect their interests. These speeches and statements also demonstrate that the Accused was passionate about a common Serb identity and working towards creating a unified Serbian nation, which was viewed as an age-old aspiration of all Serbs living in one state. The Accused continued to adhere to this ideology of Serb unity and the importance of creating a Serb state into 1992.

2653. The Chamber finds that this evidence demonstrates the central role which the Accused played in developing the ideology and role of the SDS after its formation in 1990. The Accused also promoted the SDS as the party which would address the political aspirations of Bosnian Serbs and spoke against Serbs who did not follow the policy of the SDS.

2654. In this period, the Accused also foreshadowed the prospect of civil war if the Bosnian Serbs were politically outvoted in the BiH Assembly or if Serb areas could not remain tied with Yugoslavia. He also warned that the Bosnian Serbs were prepared for such a threat of civil war and were powerful and united. It was clear that even in the speeches in which he spoke in favour of improving multi-ethnic relations and against violence, the Accused stressed that the Bosnian Serbs were ready to use violence if they considered that they had been attacked and would not co-operate with anyone seen to be against the Serbs. He also adumbrated chaos and violence if BiH followed the path towards independence. The Accused also spoke about alternative preparations Bosnian Serbs had made if their demands were not met, and it was clear that these alternatives envisaged violence.

(B) Identification of historic enemies

(1) Analysis of evidence

2655. At the founding assembly of the SDS in July 1990, the Accused called for the unity of the Serbs and also made reference to the genocide which had been carried out against them by their “enemies” and his opposition to a system in BiH “which seemed to have been established to ensure our national annihilation”.⁸⁸⁷¹ At the founding meeting of the SDS in Brčko, the Accused delivered a speech in which he said that the “Serbian people for the first time in its history had a chance to set up its own party and that for the first time in history the Serbian people would have enough political strength to avoid the repetition of the bloody history”.⁸⁸⁷²

2656. In an interview in May 1991, the Accused stated:

We have today at play the Croat-Muslim party coalition, but we cannot be outvoted in the Assembly. The Serbs cannot allow the Muslims to declare themselves the majority people on the basis of the Ustasha genocide against the Serbs in World War II, before which the Serbs were the majority people in Bosnia. We are a state-building people even if we are just five, let alone 31%.⁸⁸⁷³

2657. Both Šešelj and the Accused spoke at a rally in May 1991, where Šešelj stated that in the Serbian part of BiH, they had only one political party, the SDS, and its leadership had “saved the dignity of the all-Serbian brotherhood”.⁸⁸⁷⁴ Šešelj in this speech also spoke about the “traditional enemies” of the Serbian people and the need for Serbs to be united to prevent a “new genocide against the Serbian people”.⁸⁸⁷⁵ He emphasised that they would avenge the current and historic Serb victims and that they would not “give an inch of the Serbian land”.⁸⁸⁷⁶ He also warned the Muslims not to “become a weapon of the Croatian Ustashas again” and that if they repeated history again it would be “fatal to the Muslims, because us Serbs shall no longer forget or forgive. Our revenge is going to be terrible”.⁸⁸⁷⁷

2658. In January 1991, at a commemoration ceremony, the Accused stated, “Serbs are the only people in the world who were persecuted and killed only because they exist. That is why we will no longer allow them to separate us and divide us in three states and gradually destroy us.”⁸⁸⁷⁸ He also assured the population that the Bosnian Serb leadership would “not let you be slaughtered like in 1941”.⁸⁸⁷⁹ The Accused told Koljević in June 1991 that he had told Izetbegović that “nobody can form a state on a territory where there was genocide”.⁸⁸⁸⁰ At a meeting with Bosnian Serb representatives on 10 June 1992, the Accused stated that the plan was to empty BiH of Serbs and that Bosnian Serbs should persist and defend their borders against attacks but not attack themselves.⁸⁸⁸¹

2659. The Accused in his speeches before the Bosnian Serb Assembly repeatedly referred to the threat faced by the Serb people and the historic threats they faced dating back to World War II and the need to protect themselves from their “enemies”.⁸⁸⁸² In June 1992, the Accused signed the “political platform for the survival of the Serbian people in BiH” which noted that a war to extinction had been imposed on the Serbs.⁸⁸⁸³ This platform called for the Bosnian Muslims to end the war and negotiate and claimed that both Muslims and Serbs had a right to stay in the country.⁸⁸⁸⁴ The Accused continued to make speeches which emphasised the historic suffering and victimisation of the Serbs.⁸⁸⁸⁵ For example, in September 1992, the Accused spoke about the continuation of the fascist policy of World War II in which one third of Serbs were to be expelled, one third converted to Catholicism, and one third were to be killed.⁸⁸⁸⁶

2660. These constant references to World War II and the historic suffering and grievances of the Serbian people polarised the population in BiH and incited inter-ethnic hatred.⁸⁸⁸⁷ The media was also used as a propaganda tool to emphasise the historic suffering of the Serb people and to encourage people to fight for their “motherland” so that all Serbs would be together.⁸⁸⁸⁸ In August 1992, VJ General Panić told Mladić that there should be “propagators among ordinary people”, that is a person in every region instructed to say one thing but do another.⁸⁸⁸⁹ At a meeting with Sarajevo municipality presidents and commanders of SRK units on 14 January 1994, the Accused suggested to “give a little more thought to the propaganda war” and to create a small propaganda staff.⁸⁸⁹⁰

2661. These messages of suspicion and hatred were also reflected at a municipal level where messages were broadcast on the radio in the lead-up to the conflict to the effect that “the time had come for the Serbs to settle accounts with the balijas once and for all, and that the Serbs would no longer allow their ribs to be broken. They will no longer allow their children to be circumcised”.⁸⁸⁹¹

2662. International observers such as Okun noted the constant references to, and intensity with which the Accused spoke about, the genocide committed against the Serbs and warned him that if he kept “talking about the genocide of the Serbs so much, you will commit a pre-emptive genocide”.⁸⁸⁹² Okun made this statement to the Accused to express his shock at the argument that the genocide committed during World War II “justified all of Bosnian Serb behaviour”.⁸⁸⁹³ Mladić in meeting with international representatives also spoke about the genocide committed against Serbs in World War II in areas including Srebrenica and Sarajevo.⁸⁸⁹⁴

2663. Other Bosnian Serb leaders including Biljana Plavšić,⁸⁸⁹⁵ Nikola Koljević,⁸⁸⁹⁶ and Momčilo Krajišnik⁸⁸⁹⁷ delivered speeches about the historical and contemporary threats faced by Serbs, the importance of all Serbs living in one state, and the political decisions made by Muslim and Croat representatives which made it impossible to live together. This sentiment was also reflected in political rallies attended by other Bosnian Serb leaders; for example at a rally in Banja Luka in November 1991, Predrag Radić stated “[t]wice they slaughtered us. We have forgiven but not forgotten. If they try to do the same for the third time, we shall neither forgive nor forget, regardless of how non-Christian it may be”.⁸⁸⁹⁸ At this same rally Krajišnik spoke about not allowing the “dark forces” to “destroy our common fatherland, to tear us into pieces”.⁸⁸⁹⁹ The Accused spoke and said that by voting to remain in a federal state “with all the Serbian lands and those who wish to stay with us, we hope to, once and for all, put a circle by state where there will be no traitors, a state that will not fall apart every 20 years or so”.⁸⁹⁰⁰

2664. In January 1993, other deputies such as Vlado Kovačević spoke in the Bosnian Serb Assembly about the threat faced by the Serb people, and described the Islamic and Catholic threat as a “two-headed dragon” which wanted to destroy the Serb people and that Europe wanted to push them into being “imprisoned in the dark realm of Islam”.⁸⁹⁰¹ Krajišnik thanked Kovačević for his speech and praised him, saying “you are the best when we have opponents”.⁸⁹⁰² Krajišnik went on to say that the Bosnian Muslims were not a nation or a people and called on the Bosnian Serb Assembly to take a position that Muslims were a group of unbelievers, a sect, “a communist creation and that they are a religious group of Turkish orientation”.⁸⁹⁰³ Krajišnik also spoke about the need to “take the Muslims out of Serbism for ever”.⁸⁹⁰⁴ Šešelj also did not recognise the Bosnian Muslims as a people but described them as “Muslim Serbs” and stated that there was no such thing as a Bosnian language and that the Croatian nation was an “artificial nation under the direct patronage of the Catholic church”.⁸⁹⁰⁵

2665. In addition to historic crimes committed against Serbs, there were also references made to the killing of Bosnian Serbs during the conflict. For example, when 29 Bosnian Serb soldiers were killed by ABiH forces, the funeral was held on 30 September 1992 at the Orthodox church in Vlasenica.⁸⁹⁰⁶ Over 1,000 people attended the funeral, including the Bosnian Serb leadership from Pale that consisted of the Accused, Ostojić, Koljević, and Svetozar Andrić.⁸⁹⁰⁷ The Accused and others gave speeches at the funeral and the speakers and the crowd “were very agitated and embittered” by the death of the Bosnian Serb soldiers.⁸⁹⁰⁸ The Accused delivered a speech in which he said:

Nor must we forget their executioners and attackers. I do not know if I am allowed to say that we must not forgive either. Who knows how many times this century our brothers, who are no brothers at all, have been at our throats. They assault our good men. But the Lords sees that and has given us strength to resist [...] I will keep telling the international powers that Serbs do not persecute anyone, that Serbs only defend their homes. And if they do not want to believe, it's up to them. The God believes, and he turned his face to us, and He will help us get out of the darkness of slavery, fears, lies, pretence, and to become what every nation in the world deserves.⁸⁹⁰⁹

These speeches created a feeling that the Bosnian Serbs would be pardoned for whatever they did and created a fear that Bosnian Muslims who remained in Vlasenica would be killed.⁸⁹¹⁰ The Chamber recalls its finding that following this funeral, approximately 140 detainees were taken from Sušica camp and killed by Serb Forces.⁸⁹¹¹ The Accused also gave an interview on the day of the funeral and said: “We are concerned about Muslims, we want them to have their own territory. Since we wanted to separate from them, since we see that we can’t live together any longer. But, if they do not proclaim a realistic objective concerning territories, they may lose everything.”⁸⁹¹²

2666. Such speeches were in contrast to statements the Accused made to international representatives. For example, in a meeting with General Morillon in February 1993, the Accused claimed that their army had discovered a mass grave containing more than 50 bodies in the recaptured territory south of Zvornik and that General Milovanović had requested that he not release this information as it would “inflame the local Serb population in the area”⁸⁹¹³

2668. In May 1993, the Accused described the situation as a “conflict between us and the greatest enemy”.⁸⁹¹⁵ He also spoke of the Serbs’ neighbours as those who “every 20 years, turn into our executioners”.⁸⁹¹⁶ In September 1993, the Accused said “[w]ho knows when we will settle our relations with Moslems? Most probably never if the fundamentalists keep coming from the East

However, the Chamber notes that Savkić’s evidence was marked by multiple contradictions and indicators that he was not forthright in his testimony and therefore does not rely on his evidence in this regard. In addition the Chamber has had regard to the text of the speech itself, and Savkić’s evidence is in direct contradiction to the content of that speech.

[...]. Under this kind of circumstances we must have a different kind of the Army”.⁸⁹¹⁷ He spoke about recognising the “ancient danger posed by the toxic, all-destructive Islamic octopus” which was “constant in its irreconcilable poisonousness towards the Serbian Orthodox being”.⁸⁹¹⁸

2669. At a symposium of the VRS held on 15 January 1994, in the presence of the Accused, Mladić opened his speech with: “For three years now our people have been shedding blood, defending their country and infants from Ustasha and Islamic hordes which have, for decades, in secret and from within the bosom of our people, been preparing its extermination”.⁸⁹¹⁹

(2) Conclusion

2670. The evidence above demonstrates that the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership in their speeches repeatedly and consistently referred to the historic grievances of the Serb people and the crimes which were committed against them by Muslims and Croats. The Chamber finds that these speeches were used by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership to remind the Bosnian Serb population about crimes committed against Serbs and emphasised the need to ensure they would not be repeated. In order to convey this message the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership often portrayed the Muslims and Croats as the historic enemies of the Serbs and stressed the importance of recognising this fact for the future survival of the Serb people. The Accused also used these historic references to emphasise the important role of the SDS in protecting the Serbs.

2671. The Accused also often referred to the genocide committed against Serbs during World War II which made them a minority in BiH and asserted that they could not allow the Bosnian Muslims to declare themselves a majority people in BiH on this basis. The references to the genocide committed against the Serbs was also used as justification for renewing the historical claims to land in BiH where they had once been a majority.⁸⁹²⁰ The Chamber finds that speeches and messages of this nature were delivered by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership from as early as 1990 and continued throughout the conflict in BiH.

2672. As these speeches demonstrate, the reference to the historical threats faced by the Serbs was used by the Accused to justify his position that the Serbs would not allow themselves to be separated or outvoted in BiH. It was also used to promote the idea that the Bosnian Serbs could not live together with the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats and formed the foundation for the separation of the three people and the creation of an ethnically homogeneous Serb state. The Chamber also finds that this rhetoric, which was amplified by the media, had the effect of adding to ethnic divisions and tension in BiH and incited inter-ethnic hatred. The Chamber further finds that it encouraged Serbs to fight for what was portrayed as their survival and to fight for the creation of a state where all Serbs would be united.

2673. These speeches also demonstrate that the Bosnian Serb leadership went so far as to suggest that the Bosnian Muslims were not a nation or a people at all and that Islam posed a threat to the Bosnian Serbs.

(C) Reaction to proposed independence of BiH

(1) Analysis of evidence

2674. The Chamber took judicial notice that a confidential SDS document, dated 23 February 1991, considered specific actions to be taken should BiH move towards independence.⁸⁹²¹ This document provided that in this situation, municipal authorities were to ensure that only Yugoslav (federal) law would apply, suspending the implementation of republican regulations and thus creating a foundation for direct communication and co-operation between the municipalities and Yugoslavia and its organs. It also provided for the engagement of the JNA and the Federal Secretariat for National Defence.⁸⁹²² This policy was adopted by the SDS Deputies' Club, the parliamentary caucus of the party, and was made public in a document dated 10 June 1991.⁸⁹²³ This document indicated the opposition of the Serbian deputies to unilateral action which would break up Yugoslavia.⁸⁹²⁴ They also expressed their opposition to the separation of the Bosnian Serbs from Yugoslavia.⁸⁹²⁵ At a meeting of the SDS Deputies' Club on 30 September 1991, the Accused stated: "We are politically most numerous in Yugoslavia and Bosnia. Nothing can be done in BiH without the Serbs and their will".⁸⁹²⁶

2675. The Chamber recalls that in October 1991, the coalition government in SRBiH broke down and during the night of 14 to 15 October 1991, the Accused addressed the SRBiH Assembly, stressing that the proposed secession of BiH from Yugoslavia was unconstitutional and was against the will of the Bosnian Serb people.⁸⁹²⁷ While the Accused professed that he was not acting like the “God of war”, he emphasised that the Serb people wanted to live in Yugoslavia and that if the same situation developed in BiH as it did in Slovenia and Croatia, “the hell would be one thousand times worse”.⁸⁹²⁸ He also stated that while he was not threatening the Bosnian Muslims, he was asking them one more time to take seriously the will of the Serbian people. He finished with a warning that “[t]his is the road that you want [BiH] to take, the same highway of hell and suffering that Slovenia and Croatia went through. Don’t think you won’t take [BiH] to hell and Muslim people in possible extinction. Because, Muslim people will not be able to defend itself if it comes to war here!”.⁸⁹²⁹ Given that these speeches were broadcast, the sentiments and particularly the suggestion that a people would disappear created fear among the Bosnian Muslim population.⁸⁹³⁰

2676. This statement was greeted with a loud reaction from the BiH assembly to which the Accused responded “I know these are serious words. Serious situations call for serious words. How will you prevent that everybody start killing everybody in [BiH]” and he concluded that he wanted them to take the matter of the independence of BiH off the agenda.⁸⁹³¹

2677. This was not the only occasion on which the Accused spoke in these terms about the inability of the Bosnian Muslims to survive if they insisted on independence which would lead to civil war. On 4 September 1991, he told Krajišnik: “We’ll make our point, you see, that’s where it leads, where your policies lead!!! [...] Do you realise that you will disappear in all this?! [...] Man, you will disappear. Many of us will also disappear, but you will be annihilated!”.⁸⁹³² In response,

Krajišnik suggested that they should deliberately say that both sides would disappear and the Accused agreed.⁸⁹³³

2678. The Accused made a similar observation in an intercepted conversation on 12 October 1991 where he said that if the Bosnian Muslims started a war “they should be thrashed” and that they would “disappear, that people will disappear from the face of the earth [...], if they start now. Our offer was their only chance”.⁸⁹³⁴ The Accused continued and said that they did not understand that they would be “up to their necks in blood and that the Muslim people would disappear, the poor Muslims would disappear, who don’t know where he is taking them” and that it would be a “real bloodbath”.⁸⁹³⁵ In a similar vein in another conversation on the same day, the Accused repeated that the “Muslims know what it is, it is hell in which five-six hundreds of thousands of them will disappear, they will disappear”.⁸⁹³⁶

2679. The Accused echoed this sentiment in an intercepted conversation with Mandić on 13 October 1991 in which he also referred to what happened in Croatia. The Accused said that what would happen had nothing to do with his decision or anyone else’s decision but they knew what was going to happen in BiH and that “[i]n just a couple of days, Sarajevo will be gone and there will be five hundred thousand dead, in one month Muslims will be annihilated in BiH”.⁸⁹³⁷

2680. In a telephone conversation on 15 October 1991, the Accused spoke about the attempt to create an independent BiH, and said “[t]welve percent of Serbs made hell in Croatia, they didn’t allow an Ustasha state to be introduced into their homes, and these here are trying to do this with thirty-five percent” and further stated: “[t]hat would mean war until their extinction. [...] The Serbs would never forgive them such a thing, it would destroy them completely. First, none of their leaders would survive, they’d all be killed in three to four hours. They’d stand no chance of surviving whatsoever”.⁸⁹³⁸

2681. The Accused also warned Izetbegović that if the Bosnian Muslims proceeded with a constitution and referendum for BiH, the Serbs would not be able to recognise BiH since “events will overrun you” and that he would not be able to hold back the “extremists” who he had until then restrained with “all [his] might”.⁸⁹³⁹ In October 1991, the Accused told Milošević that the solution Izetbegović was pursuing could “trigger a long-lasting civil war” and that the Bosnian Serbs would not accept the BiH authorities “in 40 municipalities and all forces would be turned towards opposing this”; in short, the situation would be even worse than in Croatia.⁸⁹⁴⁰ Milošević responded that it would be better than in Croatia because the balance of forces was “vastly more favourable”.⁸⁹⁴¹

2682. The Chamber recalls that after the SRBiH Assembly was adjourned on 15 October 1991 and the Bosnian Serb delegates walked out, the HDZ and SDA delegates reconvened without the Serb delegates and passed a declaration of sovereignty.⁸⁹⁴² The SDS Political Council then met to assess the situation.⁸⁹⁴³ At this meeting it was noted that the Serbs had to “shed the illusion that a form of coexistence with the Muslims and Croats can be found”.⁸⁹⁴⁴ The SDS leadership demanded that the declaration of sovereignty be repealed before 24 October 1991.⁸⁹⁴⁵ The SDS position was that unless the declaration of sovereignty was withdrawn within seven days, the SDS would instruct its members to leave governmental institutions and start creating parallel institutions.⁸⁹⁴⁶ The Bosnian Serb leadership also objected to earlier violations by the Bosnian Muslims of the inter-party agreement on the sharing of power in BiH.⁸⁹⁴⁷

2683. On 24 October 1991 the Accused complained to Slobodan Milošević about the steps which had been taken by Izetbegović towards the independence of BiH.⁸⁹⁴⁸ The Accused indicated that they had given Izetbegović a deadline to abolish the decisions taken with respect to the independence of BiH, but Izetbegović did not intend to abolish them.⁸⁹⁴⁹ The Accused explained that they would “respond with all means possible” and that they would “establish Yugoslavia in all the areas where we live”.⁸⁹⁵⁰ He continued and told Milošević that the Bosnian Muslims wanted “Europe, to give them a state in which we would be locked within these borders by international agreements, we can’t allow that, we have to [...] prepare everything, and we have prepared everything to create a de facto situation [...] which they will break their teeth on, they simply have to break them, there is no way we will live in a country with them. No, no way at all, that's it".⁸⁹⁵¹

2684. Slobodan Milošević encouraged the Accused to speak to Izetbegović to explain the position of the Bosnian Serbs but the Accused responded that Izetbegović was a religious fanatic who could not be talked to.⁸⁹⁵² When Milošević asked whether he should speak to Izetbegović, the Accused responded that he could tell Izetbegović that "Karadžić and the others will not give up on establishing an Assembly and parallel organs of authority" and that the "Serbian Assembly" would decide on what was to be respected and not.⁸⁹⁵³ The Accused also suggested that Milošević tell Izetbegović "that the Serbs are moving on [...] that you can't exert influence over us to mellow things down. We are moving on. We will establish full authority over the Serbian territories in BiH [...]. He will not be able to exercise power. He will not have control over 65% of his territory. That is our goal".⁸⁹⁵⁴

2685. Milošević questioned whether it was wise to use "an illegitimate act in response to another illegitimate act" and questioned the legality of forming a Bosnian Serb Assembly. However, the Accused dismissed this and stressed the illegality of the measures taken by the Bosnian Muslims and the importance of the Bosnian Serb interests.⁸⁹⁵⁵ The Accused emphasised that they held power in 37 municipalities and had relative majority in about ten municipalities and that they would not implement "any of their decisions" given that they were leading them to secession from Yugoslavia.⁸⁹⁵⁶

2686. Milošević also suggested that they should not announce the Bosnian Serb Assembly but the Accused responded "[b]ut we have to announce it! There can be no discussion about it, this is an obligation of the Serbian people and the representatives of the Serbian people in [the] executive, because they will start arresting us, they'll start pacifying municipalities forcibly, forcibly, installing special forces, we will not allow that".⁸⁹⁵⁷ When Slobodan Milošević suggested that the Accused not call it an assembly, the Accused insisted: “No [...] we can’t do that to the people. The people [...] feel they have been robbed and destroyed”.⁸⁹⁵⁸

2687. In this same conversation Slobodan Milošević expressed his reservations about how a Bosnian Serb Assembly could exclude the Muslims who were “for Yugoslavia”, but the Accused replied: “There are none, President! Not even 10% [...] we can’t take a risk for those 10%! That’s out of the question! The Serbian people want a clear situation. We cannot go on pretending anymore. They’ve destroyed us, we have to respond. We can’t just mobilise the people for nothing”.⁸⁹⁵⁹

2688. The Accused also stated that “the army can no longer agree to cease-fires, it is out of the question. Tuđman has to be militarily crushed, the military might of Croatia has to be destroyed. I guarantee you that after Friday 500,000 Serbs must rise again, there can be no more discussion about it, this is destroying, exhausting, crippling, dragging us into the winter and we will all be ruined”.⁸⁹⁶⁰ When Slobodan Milošević suggested a more considered approach without getting excited, the Accused replied: “No, we’re not excited at all. Our steps are calculated and we have to establish authority and control over our territories, so that he doesn’t get his sovereign Bosnia. Croatia doesn’t have control over 30% of its territory, and Bosnia will not have control over 60% of its territory!”.⁸⁹⁶¹

2689. Despite these words of caution, Slobodan Milošević, in meetings with international representatives, did not accept the independence of BiH and spoke of the desire of all Serbian people to live together.⁸⁹⁶² In September 1991, Milošević told the Accused that they should “get mobilised, acquire the arms and get going”.⁸⁹⁶³ In November 1991, when the Accused informed Milošević that Izetbegović did not want BiH to be in Yugoslavia, Milošević asked him to “take care of this and nothing else”.⁸⁹⁶⁴ The Accused responded that he would but that they should “prepare a reserve variant” because he did not “know what will it be like tomorrow”.⁸⁹⁶⁵ In a conversation with General Uzelac on 2 November 1991, the Accused discussed the mobilisation of the Serb population in BiH, stating “I’ll call all the presidents of the municipalities [...] to deploy the army”.⁸⁹⁶⁶

This conversation was referred to by the Accused in his final brief. Defence Final Brief, para. 266. The Chamber finds that in light of the weight of evidence, the Accused’s observation was purely rhetorical and he had no intention of acknowledging the independence of BiH.

2690. The Chamber recalls that a plebiscite was held in November 1991 to determine whether Serbs in BiH wished to remain in a joint state of Yugoslavia, and the overwhelming majority voted in favour.⁸⁹⁶⁷ The Accused delivered a speech connected with the plebiscite where he said if there was a sovereign BiH it would be “without our areas” unless there was an exchange of population.⁸⁹⁶⁸ The Accused in this speech said that he had openly told Izetbegović that “no Muslim foundation shall ever be laid in Serb areas and Serb villages whether or not you import Turks because we will instruct Serbs not to sell land to Muslims. [...] The first foundations that are laid will be blown up, and all foundations that are laid will be blown up”.⁸⁹⁶⁹ He also envisaged that there was a chance that they would fight, and they were prepared to “let the chips fall where they may” in the knowledge that the Serbs were better armed and that the war would be bloody.⁸⁹⁷⁰ He also emphasised that they would not give up on their territories and that it was “a fight to the finish, a battle for living space”.⁸⁹⁷¹

2691. In December 1991, Milošević told the Accused that he should not give in to Izetbegović and that they had to stick to their line and that “if they want to fight, we’ll fight” given that the Serbs were stronger.⁸⁹⁷² They also spoke about the unconstitutional nature of the decision changing the status of BiH.⁸⁹⁷³ In an intercepted conversation on 17 December 1991, the Accused affirmed his commitment to use force to ensure that the establishment of a sovereign and independent BiH did not result in the separation of Bosnian Serbs from other Serbs in the former Yugoslavia.⁸⁹⁷⁴ In relation to the possible secession of BiH, the Accused stated “we will completely defend the country”, including if necessary by war, “fuck them, if they fuck around, the country should be defended with all powers”.⁸⁹⁷⁵

2692. On 21 December 1991, at the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused issued another warning about the hundreds of thousands of deaths, destruction, displacement of people and population homogenisation which would occur if there was a civil war in BiH.⁸⁹⁷⁶

2693. In January 1992, the Accused spoke to Krajišnik and said “we have to realise our minimum aim, there’s no other way. Nothing should and nothing can stop us. No way”.⁸⁹⁷⁷ The Accused was also angry about Izetbegović speaking openly about a sovereign and independent BiH, and said: “Does he want someone to destroy Sarajevo? [...] he’s really crazy [...] fuck him. We will release our tigers and let them do their job”.⁸⁹⁷⁸ He went on to say that he had been calming the Serb people for a year, but that he “will not be calming anyone anymore, nor can I” and that they could no longer hold back their people anymore.⁸⁹⁷⁹

2694. As early as January 1992, Koljević warned of the danger of an Islamic republic being created.⁸⁹⁸⁰ In this regard, Koljević spoke with Tuđman and noted that they had a common interest of separating people, that an independent BiH did not suit them as it would separate them from their “mother lands”, and that they advocated a sovereign Muslim, Serbian and Croatian Bosnia.⁸⁹⁸¹

2695. At a meeting of the SRBiH Assembly on 24 January 1992, the issue of a national referendum was discussed and the speakers from the SDS opposed the holding of a referendum.⁸⁹⁸² The Serb position was that they would not accept or allow themselves to become a minority in BiH and that they would not be forced to do something they did not want to do. The Serbs also expressed their concern that the SDA wanted to create an Islamic state in BiH and that the only recognition and so on, leads directly into a conflict” and the Accused responded: “[d]irectly to war, a bloody, bloody and dangerous war”).

guarantee for the Serbs was to have a separate state in BiH.⁸⁹⁸³ The SDS under the leadership of the Accused withdrew from the session when no agreement could be reached and, following their withdrawal, the BiH Assembly supported a referendum being held between 29 February and 1 March regarding the sovereignty and independence of BiH.⁸⁹⁸⁴ On 19 February 1992, the Chairman of the SDS Executive Board ordered the municipal and regional boards of the SDS to hold immediate meetings and to draw up a plan of action to stop the referendum and to explain to “every adult Serb” that they should boycott the referendum which would be illegal after the adoption of the Constitution of the SerBiH.⁸⁹⁸⁵

2696. The Chamber recalls that on 23 February 1992, the Cutileiro Plan was proposed and called for an independent and geographically continuous BiH, comprised of the three constituent units that represented the Bosnian Muslims, Bosnian Croats, and Bosnian Serbs.⁸⁹⁸⁶ The Cutileiro Plan included constitutional principles for BiH and proposed the structure of the Assembly and government of BiH.⁸⁹⁸⁷ The Accused decided to accept the Cutileiro Plan notwithstanding the fact that it contemplated BiH as an independent state, with cantons where ethnic minorities would remain, even though this was less than what the Bosnian Serb leadership had wished for, namely to remain in Yugoslavia.⁸⁹⁸⁸ In a conversation with Kuprešanin on 23 February 1992, the Accused expressed satisfaction with the recent international negotiations where the Cutileiro Plan was discussed, stating:

We achieved maximum success because we achieved that Bosnia cannot be a single state anymore and that it will be composed of three republics. In one paper they even called them states. [...] Our police on our territory. Our national guard on our territory. Our national guard, and we're pushing further: our army on our territory, one that is placed under a single command in case of an external enemy.⁸⁹⁸⁹

2697. On 25 February 1992, the Accused summarised the outcome of the talks at a session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and stated that the Bosnian Serbs had agreed to the three main principles of the Cutileiro Plan which stated that BiH would (i) be an independent state, (ii) maintain its present borders; and (iii) consist of three constituent parts.⁸⁹⁹⁰ However, when war broke out the option of an independent BiH with cantons was dropped.⁸⁹⁹¹

2698. The Chamber recalls that the referendum on the question of SRBiH independence was held on 29 February and 1 March 1992 and resulted in a vote in favour of independence.⁸⁹⁹²

2699. In February 1992, Jovanović spoke with the Accused and Koljević about the Cutileiro Plan; they discussed internal borders in BiH and the establishment of cantonal units in BiH based on ethnic principles.⁸⁹⁹³ Jovanović explained to the Accused that his priorities should be to synchronise the negotiations in order to provide the maximum protections for the Serbian people and to form cantons which were both economically and geographically sustainable.⁸⁹⁹⁴ Jovanović warned the Accused that Europe could ask for a commitment towards an independent BiH, and told the Accused not to mention state borders.⁸⁹⁹⁵ The Accused spoke about having three entities in BiH as a confederation “based on the national territories where national communities make a majority and they have their organs plus common organs”.⁸⁹⁹⁶ Jovanović spoke with Koljević about maintaining the right to self-determination and to independently organise or integrate with “the mother country” but that in negotiations they did not have to mention directly integration with the mother countries.⁸⁹⁹⁷

2700. In February 1992, the Accused in meetings with international representatives expressed his view that the request of BiH for independence was a “very irresponsible move” and he had a tough time keeping Serbs quiet and that he was worried about deaths and disaster.⁸⁹⁹⁸ He also stated that it was very hard to disarm the people in BiH because individuals held 500,000 weapons.⁸⁹⁹⁹ He emphasised that any moves towards the independence of BiH would imply a very cruel war.⁹⁰⁰⁰ The Accused was described by international representatives as “very radical” and they observed that it was important that the Accused’s “illusions” were overcome.⁹⁰⁰¹ International representatives also identified that negotiations with the Accused, Koljević, and Krajišnik were the most difficult.⁹⁰⁰²

2701. The Accused also told international observers that Bosnian Serbs would not fight after the map of BiH was decided.⁹⁰⁰³ At an SDS Deputies’ Club meeting on 28 February 1992, the Accused spoke about a confederal BiH with an “integral Serbian Bosnia and Herzegovina within it”.⁹⁰⁰⁴ At this meeting the Accused also said:

Bosnia and Herzegovina will remain in Yugoslavia until we say it has left Yugoslavia. If Bosnia and Herzegovina is to leave Yugoslavia, then only three Bosnia and Herzegovinas will leave Yugoslavia. As Mr Krajišnik says, Muslims who used to be a religious sect, and have recently been given the status of a people, that’s what I say, should now get their independence. For what? [...] If they want independence, then we want independence too!⁹⁰⁰⁵

2702. The Chamber recalls that the Cutileiro Plan was further refined through a Statement of Principles which was agreed upon by the parties to the conflict on 18 March 1992.⁹⁰⁰⁶ The Statement of Principles stated that BiH would be one state “composed of three constituent units, based on national principles and taking into account economic, geographic, and other criteria”.⁹⁰⁰⁷ The Statement of Principles also provided for a working group to be established to define the territory of the constituent units.⁹⁰⁰⁸ Bosnian Serb negotiators reported back to the Bosnian Serb Assembly regarding this plan and noted that it aimed at a division of BiH into three constituent units based not only on nationality, but also on economic and geographic considerations and would be marked as a “basis for further negotiations”.⁹⁰⁰⁹

The Chamber noted that Skoko’s testimony was marked by multiple contradictions, evasiveness and indicators of partiality and bias and therefore does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard.

2703. In April 1992, the Accused in a meeting with international representatives agreed that all sides would lose if there was a conflict and complained about propaganda against the Serbs.⁹⁰¹⁰ He also said that they founded the TO because many troops were out of control.⁹⁰¹¹ Koljević at this meeting said that he and the Accused had agreed that they should divide Sarajevo.⁹⁰¹² During a discussion with international observers in September 1992, the Accused proposed constructing a wall in Sarajevo to separate the Serb controlled areas and the Muslim controlled areas.⁹⁰¹³

2704. Krajišnik wrote to Cutileiro on 3 April 1992, suggesting a continuation of negotiations based on the Statement of Principles.⁹⁰¹⁴ In June 1992, Izetbegović withdrew his agreement to the Cutileiro Plan.⁹⁰¹⁵ By July 1992, Izetbegović stated that he could not agree to certain elements of the Statement of Principles.⁹⁰¹⁶ The Accused stated that while he continued to agree with the Statement of Principles, the proposal of BiH being a unitary state was not satisfactory.⁹⁰¹⁷

2705. The Chamber recalls that during a meeting in September 1992, the Accused and Koljević stated that the Bosnian Serbs and the Bosnian Croats would not accept a unitary BiH state; a state based on one-man, one-vote.⁹⁰¹⁸ Koljević also stated that the Bosnian Serbs would not accept the internal borders of BiH without some form of cantonisation.⁹⁰¹⁹ At international negotiations, the Accused also expressed the Bosnian Serb position that while they wanted a political resolution they would not abandon their sovereignty or accept a unitarian state or a “loss of national status on our land”.⁹⁰²⁰ The Accused also called for three units for the three constituent peoples in BiH and emphasised the security of the Serb people who he presented as the “principal victims”.⁹⁰²¹

2706. At first the Accused expressed that he wanted to be loyal to Yugoslavia and for the Bosnian Serbs to stay in this joint state.⁹⁰²² When the situation deteriorated and it became clear that BiH would not remain in Yugoslavia, the Accused adapted this goal.⁹⁰²³ In October 1992, Plavšić stated that the “establishment of a Muslim state without observing the interests of the Serbian people verges on insanity” and that Izetbegović had walked into that situation and “the consequences are now obvious”.⁹⁰²⁴

(2) Conclusion

2707. The Chamber finds that the Accused’s speech to the SRBiH Assembly in October 1991 in which he spoke about a “highway of hell” clearly shows the Accused’s consistent opposition to the proposed independence of BiH. While the Accused in the speech stated that he was not threatening the Bosnian Muslims, the Chamber finds that on the contrary, the speech contained very specific threats about what would happen if the Bosnian Muslims continued to pursue the path of independence and ignored the will of the Bosnian Serbs. The Chamber finds that the Accused was clearly threatening war if the Bosnian Serb interests were ignored, and he also envisaged that such a war would be “hell” and that the Bosnian Muslims would be unable to defend themselves in such a scenario.

2708. The Chamber also finds that these warnings by the Accused were not just an isolated aberration. The Chamber finds, by reference to multiple intercepted conversations in September and October 1991, that the Accused discussed how he would warn the Bosnian Muslims that if they persisted with their policies relating to the independence of BiH, this course of action would lead to extreme bloodshed, annihilation and the disappearance or extinction of the Bosnian Muslims. These conversations, in addition to speeches made by the Accused in 1991, underscore that the Accused intended to threaten the Bosnian Muslims against pursuing independence for BiH and that he was fully aware that a potential conflict would be extremely violent and result in thousands of deaths, the destruction of property, and the displacement of people and that it would be particularly devastating for the Bosnian Muslim population.

The Chamber does not rely on Bulatović’s general opinion that everything that the Bosnian Serbs did was in response to acts and threats by Bosnian Muslims.

⁹⁰²³ Vladislav Jovanović, T. 34269 (26 February 2013); D3051 (Witness statement of Momir Bulatović dated 25 February 2013), para. 16. See also P1349 (Transcript of 6th session of SerBiH Assembly, 26 January 1992), p. 8.

⁹⁰²⁴ P1360 (Transcript from Joint session (21st session) of RS Assembly and Assembly of Serbian Krajina, 31 October 1992), pp. 9–10.

2709. The Chamber finds that the declaration of sovereignty by the SRBiH Assembly in the absence of the Bosnian Serb delegates on 15 October 1991, escalated the situation. The Bosnian Serb leadership made it clear once again that they would not accept a sovereign BiH and issued an ultimatum for the revocation of this declaration. However, it is clear from the conversation on 24 October 1991 between the Accused and Slobodan Milošević that the Accused did not expect the Bosnian Muslims to abolish the decisions they had taken with respect to the sovereignty of BiH.

2710. The conversation with Milošević in October 1991 is also instructive as it shows that the Accused envisaged responding in such a way that the Bosnian Serbs would establish full authority in Bosnian Serb territories, create a de facto situation to ensure that the Bosnian Serbs would never live in the same state as the Bosnian Muslims, and create their own parallel and separate institutions and structures. It is also clear from this conversation that Slobodan Milošević was attempting to take a more cautious approach while the Accused was adamant that their goal was to ensure that they would establish full authority in their territories, which would mean that Izetbegović would not have control of 65% of BiH, and that they would announce their own Bosnian Serb Assembly.

2711. The Chamber also finds that while Milošević expressed reservations about excluding Bosnian Muslims, the Accused was adamant that there were not even 10% of Bosnian Muslims who supported Yugoslavia and that they could not take such a risk. The Accused also spoke clearly about steps Bosnian Serbs would take to establish authority and control over territories which they claimed and that the Bosnian Serbs would be moving towards mobilisation. The Chamber finds that this demonstrates that the Accused from October 1991 vehemently opposed the independence of BiH and planned on taking over Bosnian Serb claimed territory. This conversation also demonstrates that the Accused envisaged a separation of the Bosnian Serbs from non-Serbs in BiH and that war in BiH would result in “population homogenisation”. The Chamber also finds that the Accused supported the creation of ethnically based entities in BiH. The Accused also encouraged the identification of Serb areas which would be to the exclusion of Bosnian Muslims.

2712. The Accused’s conversation with Krajišnik in January 1992 also demonstrates the Accused’s continuing anger with respect to the proposed independence of BiH. In this regard the Accused said that he would not be calming the Bosnian Serb people any further and that he would “release [their] tigers and let them do their job”. The Accused also spoke about the non-negotiable character of the Bosnian Serb objectives and his position that they would not allow anything to stop them. The Chamber finds that the Accused’s position was that the Bosnian Serbs would not allow BiH to secede from Yugoslavia, and if BiH insisted on independence so would the Bosnian Serbs.

2713. The Accused also described the Bosnian Muslims as a “religious sect” who had only recently been given the status of “people” and that they had no basis for their independence. The Chamber finds that this rhetoric when combined with the Accused’s references to the Bosnian Muslims as their historic enemies, created an environment which sought to quash any claim to independence by BiH and to re-assert the Bosnian Serb interests in BiH.

2715. The Chamber also finds that there was a disjuncture between what the Accused said in private conversations or before a Bosnian Serb audience and the tone he took in international negotiations where he was more conciliatory, spoke against conflict, and claimed that the Serbs were the victims of propaganda. The Accused took a leading role in portraying the Bosnian Serbs as the victims of the conflict and used this as justification for pursuing their territorial and political objectives of a separate Serb state in BiH.

(D) Advocating separation of population and creation of a Bosnian Serb state

(1) Analysis of evidence

(a) Separation of population—inability to co-exist

2716. On 27 August 1991, in an intercepted conversation with Koljević, the Accused expressed his opposition to BiH independence and indicated his willingness to divide BiH along ethnic lines by stating “[l]et us see what it is, what the solution for each ethnic group would be, and for everyone to agree to it [...]. Because if there is no solution acceptable to us in [BiH], we will find our own solution”.⁹⁰²⁵

2717. In November 1991, the Accused spoke about the “principle of reciprocity” and that the Serbs alone would not move out of certain areas and then allow the Bosnian Muslims to “stay in our areas to settle and build their colonies”.⁹⁰²⁶ The Accused called on the Bosnian Serbs to “get ready and establish your authority in your territories; in municipalities, regions, local communities, and to prepare yourselves for restructuring and regionalizing the municipalities” and for them to control the process until the very last moment.⁹⁰²⁷ The Accused concluded that after and during the plebiscite it was important to “seize power wherever you can”.⁹⁰²⁸

2718. With respect to the “three national communities” in BiH, the Accused suggested that “the more separate things there are the better it will be”.⁹⁰²⁹

2719. The Accused in a speech in January 1992 stated that the Bosnian Serbs would “not impose anything on each other” and that they would work towards a form of state organisation to which Croats, Serbs and Muslims would agree.⁹⁰³⁰ The Accused also said that they had “no influence over the war or peace” and that if an inter-ethnic or religious war started in BiH, Serbs, Muslims, and Croats would run away and go to their own “fully homogeneous” areas and that there would be severe bloodshed and destruction of towns.⁹⁰³¹ Similarly the Accused told Vance that BiH independence could lead to war and that there “will be great mass movements, homogenisation of territories, migrations from one area into another and, of course, accompanied by instances of shooting out of hand”.⁹⁰³²

2720. In January 1992, in a conversation in which there was discussion about having Bosnian Muslims within their borders, the Accused said “they will have their region, we will have our own region”.⁹⁰³³ The Accused also spoke about the importance of creating their country first and then establishing “krajinas” and the danger that they would never create their state if they started establishing “krajinas” first.⁹⁰³⁴

2721. In February 1992, Krajišnik stated that if they were successful in creating a confederal BiH it would consist of three states and he was “not interested in Muslims in [BiH]”.⁹⁰³⁵ He also stressed that everything which the Bosnian Serb Assembly did, and everything he did, was “for pure areas” of BiH, that he was in favour of a “monolithic Serbian state” where all Serbs live together.⁹⁰³⁶ Koljević also emphasised that they would not allow the Bosnian Muslims to have a sovereign state which extended over both the Serb and Croat parts of BiH and that they had therefore constituted a Serb Assembly.⁹⁰³⁷ Koljević acknowledged that the process of re-organising municipalities was with the aim of creating “homogeneity of certain areas” and argued that contrary to the political assertions, it was not impossible to divide BiH.⁹⁰³⁸ Koljević stated that at a municipal level they had tried separate municipal assemblies and formed new municipalities.⁹⁰³⁹ Further, he repeatedly called for the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims and the homogeneity of territories, claiming it was impossible for Serbs to live with anyone else.⁹⁰⁴⁰

2722. Krajišnik also stated that “[o]ur aim is to divide with the Muslims, if the Muslims were to capitulate we would remain with them, if they remained with us they would soon be the majority?” and outlined the Strategic Goals, including dividing from Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.⁹⁰⁴¹

2723. In February 1992, the Accused spoke about having less than 10% of Bosnian Muslims in their “canton” of BiH according to the proposed maps.⁹⁰⁴² The Accused continued to deliver speeches in which he (i) spoke about avoiding the subjugation of the Serb people; (ii) advocated the creation of a “Serbian state”; and (iii) blamed the Muslims and Croats for destroying the unity of BiH and Yugoslavia.⁹⁰⁴³ The Accused in May 1992 spoke with Krajišnik, Mladić, and other military leaders and said that BiH as a state did not exist because it did not have any territory and that the Serbs were “on the threshold of achieving our centuries-old dream of creating our own state without many internal enemies”.⁹⁰⁴⁴ In this regard, the Accused also stated that they were “controlling the Serbian settlements” in Sarajevo and were expanding them.⁹⁰⁴⁵

2724. In February 1992, the Accused went on to state “now our main goal is the only goal that can be achieved: to solve the issue of the majority of the Serbian people”, namely the creation of their republic of BiH.⁹⁰⁴⁶ He also stated that “it is clear to every Serb that Croats and Serbs cannot live in a single state. Consequently, they cannot be in the same army, and also that BiH cannot have its army. There would remain national guards in each of the republics, and the police which would be under the control of the respective republics”.⁹⁰⁴⁷ The Accused emphasised that there was tension and conflict in undefined territories where “two national communities touch each other” and that they should be defined as soon as possible.⁹⁰⁴⁸

2725. In meetings with international representatives, Bosnian Serb leaders including the Accused, Krajišnik, and Plavšić openly stated that it was impossible for Bosnian Serbs to co-exist with the other communities, particularly the Bosnian Muslims, and that it was better to separate the communities.⁹⁰⁴⁹ For example in discussions with Owen and Morillon, the Accused repeated that separation from the Bosnian Muslims and Croats was essential.⁹⁰⁵⁰

2726. In meetings with Harland, the Accused as well as Plavšić openly said that the basic Serb war aim was to redistribute the population of BiH so that the Serbs would be left in control of a single continuous block of territory embracing the whole border with Montenegro and Serbia and also including all of the traditionally Serb-inhabited areas.⁹⁰⁵¹ The Bosnian Serb leadership said that due to “an historical accident”, Bosnian Muslims were a majority in certain areas and to achieve their goal, large numbers of Bosnian Muslims had to be removed because the majority of the population along the Drina River in northeast BiH, was Muslim.⁹⁰⁵² They openly stated that the purpose of war was for the Bosnian government to accept this redistribution of the population and the Accused acknowledged that some “old people will probably want to remain” but he envisaged that to a large extent the overwhelming majority of the population that would remain in Serb areas would be Serb and Muslim in Muslim areas.⁹⁰⁵³ At these meetings, some members of the Bosnian Serb leadership openly stated that it was good if all non-Serbs left and that they wanted them to go because they were not living well together.⁹⁰⁵⁴

2727. Biljana Plavšić spoke about the importance of the partition of territory and executing this partition “properly as this business awaits us”.⁹⁰⁵⁵ She also expressed the idea that Bosnian Serbs could no longer live with Bosnian Muslims; on one occasion at a funeral for a Bosnian Serb soldier she said that the Bosnian Muslims should be slaughtered or exterminated.⁹⁰⁵⁶ In May 1992, Plavšić spoke of the entitlement of the Serbs to 70% of the territory and that Bosnian Serbs “were used to living in wide spaces” while Muslims typically lived in cities.⁹⁰⁵⁷ Plavšić further stated that “if it takes the lives of 3 million people to solve this crisis, lets get it done and move on”.⁹⁰⁵⁸ Plavšić also spoke about creating the conditions for “forced emigration” and that the “last thing that can be allowed [...] is a compromise at the expense of conquered territories” and that foreign countries should be reminded that the Bosnian Serbs would not give up what they had conquered.⁹⁰⁵⁹

2729. Krajišnik often recalled that the main Bosnian Serb objective was to separate from the Bosnian Muslims and to create their own state which was ethnically “pure”.⁹⁰⁶⁴

2730. In July 1992, Mandić spoke about the Bosnian Serb territories which were “supposed to be taken”, had already been taken, and identified areas which were still disputable, including in Sarajevo.⁹⁰⁶⁵ Mandić also questioned “what to do with the Turks” and suggested that there “should be an airlift established with Turkey and let them go, we should split Bosnia in two parts”.⁹⁰⁶⁶ In this same conversation, Mandić said “[w]e don’t want to have a single-nation state, man. We want to have democratic state where the Serbian people would be in the majority.”⁹⁰⁶⁷ Mandić acknowledged that Croats and “the rest of Muslims” would also have rights after “we clean them out”.⁹⁰⁶⁸

2731. The Chamber recalls that Kuruzović, the Commander of Trnopolje, confirmed that the plan of the Serb authorities was to reduce the number of Bosnian Muslims in Prijedor to 10% or less, and then later to reduce this to 2% or less.⁹⁰⁶⁹ The Chamber also heard from KDZ051 that around September 1992, he was told by the President of the Rogatica SDS, Sveto Veselinović, that “all the Muslims were going to disappear from the territory” and that in conversations with the Accused in Pale, “[i]t has been decided that one third of Muslims would be killed, one third would be converted to the Orthodox religion and a third will leave on their own”.⁹⁰⁷⁰ Sveto Veselinović testified that he did not meet KDZ051 in person, that he did not make such a statement, and that he did not have such a conversation with the Accused, as he did not speak to him between Stakić testified that he never had any knowledge or heard of such a plan and the municipal authorities in Prijedor never planned for the municipality to be mono-ethnic and that the rights of all citizens were maintained. In light of the weight of contrary evidence received by the Chamber and Stakić’s interest in distancing himself and the authorities from events in Prijedor, the Chamber does not find his evidence in this regard to be reliable.

January 1992 and autumn of 1993.⁹⁰⁷¹ The Chamber finds that Veselinović's evidence casts reasonable doubt on this issue and thus dismisses KDZ051's evidence on this point.

2732. The Accused made a number of speeches which spoke about the inability of the "three peoples" in BiH to live together, and for example compared them to "plants which cannot grow side by side. They have to be separated to flourish".⁹⁰⁷² He also stated that "they lived together only when occupied or under a dictatorship. [...] We can only be together like oil and water. When you mix us, we are together. When you leave us alone, we separate" and that if they were put in the same pot the soup would not mix.⁹⁰⁷³ The Accused stated that "[w]e are really something different [...] we should not hide that. We are not brothers. We must know that" and that when the world asked why they could not live together, he would answer that "we are three cultures, three peoples and three religions" and that they had never lived together in democracy.⁹⁰⁷⁴

2733. This sentiment was also reflected in speeches delivered by Bosnian Serb leaders at a municipal level. For example, the Chamber recalls that in early April 1992, there were radio announcements in Foča in which SDS President Miroslav Stanić said it was no longer possible for Bosnian Serbs to live with their Bosnian Muslim neighbours, that they could not be woken every morning by the hodža from the mosque, and that there was a danger that the Bosnian Serb population would be circumcised.⁹⁰⁷⁵ In May 1992, the Accused attended a meeting where he said

Similarly Karabeg, the President of the SDA Executive Board in Sanski Most, testified that the "goal of the Serbian side was not to have more than 10 per cent of the population in Sanski Most". Mirzet Karabeg, T. 18700-187002 (13 September 2011). However, the Chamber does not consider that Karabeg's testimony provided any basis for him to reach this conclusion, or that he was privy to that kind of information. The Chamber therefore does not rely on his evidence in this regard.

While the Chamber accepts that this was Žepinić's own assessment, it does not rely on his opinion in this regard.

⁹⁰⁷⁴ P12 (Extended session of Main and Executive Boards of the SDS, 14 February 1992), pp. 19-20. KDZ310 testified that the Accused as the head of the SDS pursued a policy which was designed to prove to "both peoples that they can no longer live together" even though they had lived together for years. KDZ310, T. 9178, 9182-9183 (29 November 2010). During cross-examination, KDZ310 acknowledged that he was in no way involved in politics and he formed these views based on conversations with people and what was reported in the media. The Chamber therefore places no weight on his assessment. Similarly the Chamber places no weight on Mujadžić's opinion that in Prijedor, the Accused placed his confidence in Stakić as a municipal leader, as he came from a typical "Chetnik" background, to create a rift between Bosnian Muslims and Serbs and to impair the belief that it was possible for the two ethnic groups to co-exist. that if there was a response to the mobilisation of the 1st Krajina Corps, “then we clear the Posavina of Croats”.⁹⁰⁷⁶

2734. These speeches are in stark contrast with an interview on 20 July 1990, where the Accused stated that an illusion was created about a discord between the Serbs and the Muslims. [...] Basically, there is nowhere a conflict of interest between the Serbs and the Muslims. Regardless of what may happen, the Serbs and the Muslims will always live in a common state, and they know how and they will know in future how to live together. There is no need for a third party to fix the things between them.⁹⁰⁷⁷

2735. The Accused also stated:

Here, the Muslims are Slavs, people with our blood and language who, for the most part, opt for the European quality of life and preservation of the Islamic faith. There is no room for panic neither among the Serbs nor among the Muslims. According to my estimation, the Serbs do not have to defend the boundaries of the Christian Europe and fight the Islam. We are much closer to our Muslims than with that Europe.⁹⁰⁷⁸

2736. The Chamber notes, however, that these statements were made by the Accused in a very different environment and were delivered in a period where the political objective of the Bosnian Serb leadership was to emphasise the unity of Yugoslavia and the existence of a common state.

2737. Similarly the Chamber recalls that in the summer of 1991, the Accused attended an SDS rally in Zvornik;⁹⁰⁷⁹ thereafter, the SDS and SDA issued a joint declaration expressing the need to maintain peace in the municipality and calling for greater tolerance between ethnic groups there.⁹⁰⁸⁰ In August 1991, the Accused spoke about peace and reaching an agreement with the Bosnian Muslims.⁹⁰⁸¹

The Chamber notes that Vasilić’s testimony was marked by inconsistencies, evasiveness and other indicators that he was not forthright in his evidence. The Chamber therefore does not consider his evidence on what the Accused said at SDS rallies to be reliable.

2738. On 12 May 1992, there was a large public rally in Banja Luka. The Accused, Mićo Stanišić, and Stojan Župljanin, amongst others, were present.⁹⁰⁸² The Accused addressed the rally and said that it demonstrated the organisation and power of the SerBiH and that he regretted that the war in BiH had been imposed on them by the two other national communities and that the “mutual extermination, killings and tortures have been imposed to us”.⁹⁰⁸³ The Accused stated that while they had no conflict with the Croats and Muslims they would not allow their “militant leadership” to make them second class citizens and this was the reason why they created their state unit in BiH.⁹⁰⁸⁴ The Accused also said that they were proud to say that Muslims and Croats were not in danger in SerBiH and that they had to defend the borders of SerBiH for all citizens of BiH regardless of their “confession or nationality”.⁹⁰⁸⁵ Similarly in June 1992, the RS Presidency issued a press statement condemning the BiH declaration of war and noting that this placed pressure on Serbs to fight “against their brothers” and that they wanted a peaceful resolution of the conflict and that all those who sought protection in SerBiH would be provided the bare necessities “irrespective of their nationality”.⁹⁰⁸⁶

2739. In contrast to these public statements, when the Accused spoke to Žepinić about his view that the different nationalities could not live together in BiH, Žepinić expressed his concern about what was going to happen to the large number of mixed families in BiH and the difficulty of dividing people who lived in the same high-rise buildings.⁹⁰⁸⁷ Žepinić was threatened by Mićo Stanišić and later arrested for his opposition to ethnically based parties and also faced pressure from both Koljević and the Accused.⁹⁰⁸⁸

⁹⁰⁸⁸ Vitomir Žepinić, T. 33603–33607, 33619–33620 (13 February 2013). Žepinić testified, however, that the Accused did in certain situations try to protect him from extremists in the SDS. When questioned about whether the Accused took a position that Bosnian Muslims and Croats should be expelled, he testified that if the Accused

2740. In May 1992, the Accused issued an announcement to Bosnian Muslims appealing for a cessation of hostilities and assured them that Muslims who remained in SerBiH and had laid down their arms had full protection and lived peacefully.⁹⁰⁸⁹ The Accused warned against the “crazy idea of an Islamic state” and that the West wanted Muslims to be “obliterated” but the Serbs wanted to reach an agreement with them.⁹⁰⁹⁰ He also assured Bosnian Muslims that they would be allowed to leave in the direction of their choice with the right to return when the war was over.⁹⁰⁹¹ Okun described this announcement as “thoroughly disingenuous” and noted that it was issued at the same time as the Bosnian Serb Assembly issued its war aims.⁹⁰⁹²

2741. On 2 June 1992, the Accused issued a decision which called for all citizens who had temporarily left the territory of the SerBiH to return and report to the Crisis Staff in their place of residence by 20 May 1992.⁹⁰⁹³ It also promised the right of return to “[p]ersons whose actions were not contrary to the interests of the [SerBiH]”.⁹⁰⁹⁴ It provided that persons who had left and did not return or did not explain their inability to return to the relevant municipal crisis staff, would be denied the right of citizenship of SerBiH and all acquired rights regarding employment, housing, health and retirement insurance would cease and their property would be used temporarily for the needs of defence of SerBiH.⁹⁰⁹⁵

2742. On 4 July 1992, at the 36th session of the Bosnian Serb Government, it was noted that the “question has been raised whether there are agreed criteria regarding the moving out of the Muslim population from the territory of the [SerBiH]. It has been concluded that the Government has not until now had a point of view on this matter. The Ministry of the Interior is entrusted with preparing information on this issue that the Government would consider and take the appropriate standpoint”.⁹⁰⁹⁶ This idea of ethnic separation was also supported and reinforced by municipal leaders such as Prstojević who said that “those who convert to Orthodox religion on the spot, they can stay”.⁹⁰⁹⁷ or the SDS had directly made such a statement he would have been arrested for such an unconstitutional decision. Vitimir Žepinić, T. 33619–33620 (13 February 2013), T. 33655–33656 (14 February 2013).

2743. At a meeting of the Bosnian Serb leadership on 10 July 1992, the Accused stated that unlike the Bosnian Muslims and Croats, the Bosnian Serbs were going to build a law-abiding state rather than an ethnically clean state. Other attendees expressed their agreement as to the stance to be taken in that regard.⁹⁰⁹⁸

2744. On 11 July 1992, at the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Presidency, attended by the Accused, it was decided “that a decision be adopted on the signing of a proclamation on the moving out and retention of citizens from certain parts of the former [BiH], and on guarantees and safety, on condition that the people be disarmed, enemy activities halted and peace established”.⁹⁰⁹⁹ On the same date, the Presidency made an announcement to the citizens of RS stating that civilians living in areas affected by war must be allowed to leave those areas and that any emigration had to be voluntary and cannot be obstructed or encouraged.⁹¹⁰⁰ This same announcement indicated that Croats and Muslims in the RS were “guaranteed all rights granted by a legal state” and that the authorities were not forcibly detaining people in war zones, as that would make them hostages, or forcing them to emigrate as that would amount to “ethnic cleansing”.⁹¹⁰¹ The announcement also indicated that all refugees would be allowed to return.⁹¹⁰²

2745. Despite these public announcements, the Accused continued to advocate the division of BiH on ethnic lines.⁹¹⁰³ For example in July 1992, he spoke about the dangers of living in a unitary state where they could not control the Muslims. In this regard he said “[w]e know very well what the fundamentalism is and that we cannot live together, there’s no tolerance, they quadruple through the birth-rate, and we Serbs are not up to that”.⁹¹⁰⁴ The Accused also spoke about the Bosnian

Muslims overwhelming the Bosnian Serbs “with their birth rate and their tricks. We cannot allow that to happen”.⁹¹⁰⁵

2746. In meetings with international observers, these sentiments were repeated by Bosnian Serb who kept emphasising that “they simply couldn’t live with the Muslims” and that Bosnian Muslims wanted all of BiH which they could achieve through their higher birth rate.⁹¹⁰⁶ The Accused continued to emphasise this issue and stated that in “all variants we must be cautious so that Muslims don’t wind up in our state” and cited to the example of Serbia as being unstable even though the population was 65% Serb.⁹¹⁰⁷ Other Bosnian Serb deputies also spoke about the danger faced by the Serb people due to the high birth-rate of Bosnian Muslims which would change the demographic percentages in BiH.⁹¹⁰⁸

2747. The SDS leadership also commissioned a number of studies on the changing demographics in BiH which showed the growth rate of the Muslim population and reflected the fears of the SDS leadership that Bosnian Muslims would soon become an absolute majority in an independent BiH and impact the position of the Serbs.⁹¹⁰⁹ This concern about demographics and the Bosnian Muslim birth rate continued to be emphasised by the Accused throughout the conflict. For example, at the 37th Bosnian Serb Assembly Session on 10 January 1994, the Accused stated that the Muslim population increases by 1% daily because “that is how it is with them”.⁹¹¹⁰

2748. Rajko Dukić in July 1992 delivered a speech at the Bosnian Serb Assembly in which he asked “why we expelled all Muslim judges from Vlasenica, Bratunac and Zvornik. Will we be accused then, I hope we will not [...] I would be ashamed and I would regret all the victims if I lived in a state in which Muslims and Muslim ideology would judge and where their justice is done”.⁹¹¹¹ Dukić also stated that there were 120,000 Muslims in the Birač region and he hoped that this number “has at least been halved”.⁹¹¹² In August 1992, at a Bosnian Serb Assembly session, Brđanin proposed that they “appoint only those judges who are of Serbian nationality. say this to Europe or the rest of the world, but we can say it here between ourselves. Our people do not have the right to live, yet here we are, crying over those ones”.⁹¹¹³

2749. On 2 September 1992, the Accused was among the Bosnian Serb political and military leaders who met in Bijeljina on 2 September 1992.⁹¹¹⁴ At this meeting, the Accused observed that “[w]e are close to the goal and we must run across it [...] the Serbian people will either create their own state [...] or we will be squeezed into a small area”.⁹¹¹⁵ At this meeting it was observed that there was “no political position as to how to proceed with Muslims who have declared loyalty”.⁹¹¹⁶ The Accused expressed his view that “we must have ethnic minorities in the state as well”.⁹¹¹⁷ Krajišnik reminded those present that the VRS should not distance itself from the SDS. He also recalled that the aim of the Bosnian Serbs was to divide with the Muslims.⁹¹¹⁸ The Accused then noted that he had not heard a “single political difference”.⁹¹¹⁹ At a meeting with the Bosnian Serb Presidency and VRS commanders in October 1992, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs must insist on having a single Serbian community.⁹¹²⁰

2750. The Bosnian Serb leadership did envisage small enclaves in RS where Bosnian Muslims could live.⁹¹²¹ For example, the Accused said that while Bosnian Muslims could stay in the enclaves, “it is going to be our state”.⁹¹²² At a meeting on 19 June 1993 in Pale with members of the Supreme Command with, inter alios, Krajišnik, Koljević, Lukić, Mladić, and Milovanović in attendance, the Accused stated that the Serbs and Croats should work together so that the Muslims get some territory in central BiH.⁹¹²³

2751. At the 34th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, Mladić stated that they had not allowed “any connection of the enclaves in Eastern Bosnia” and that his “aim was, and I am sure that if we establish Republika Srpska they could not wait to get out of the enclaves. However, if they don’t want to, we have to provide the conditions so that they could feel glad when we offer it to them”.⁹¹²⁴

2752. The Accused in meetings with international negotiators stated that “Serbs would never accept to be ruled by Muslims”, but that if Muslims gave up their claim to rule over all of BiH, “they could quite happily live alongside each other” but each with their own administrations and safeguards for minorities.⁹¹²⁵ In contrast, at a meeting on 8 September 1992, the Accused stated that there were no Serbs, except in Sarajevo, who wanted to live with the Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Muslims in one state.⁹¹²⁶

2753. Later on, in meetings with international negotiators, the Bosnian Serb leadership indicated that they were prepared to accept changes in internal borders “to accommodate ethnic realities”.⁹¹²⁷ However, by the time these statements were made, there had already been a large forcible displacement of Bosnian Muslims from their homes and the Bosnian Serb leadership sought a peace deal on the basis of the large percentage of territory in BiH which they had already taken.⁹¹²⁸ Similarly, the Bosnian Serb leadership also suggested holding referenda in early 1993 to solve “controversial areas” but in reality by this time there were very few Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats who remained to vote.⁹¹²⁹

2754. In September 1992, the Accused continued to stress that their objective was to have a state and that its borders “towards the Muslims and Croats are to be thicker than our borders towards Serbia and Montenegro and the Serbian Krajina”.⁹¹³⁰ When the Accused discussed maps of BiH and issues of population and division of territories this also caused a feeling of fear, anxiety, insecurity and uncertainty amongst people who “saw themselves living in the territory of another people or another nation”.⁹¹³¹

2755. On 30 October 1992, the Accused delivered a speech at the 21st Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly in which he described an artificial state in which we were forcefully held in an artificial creation that is Bosnia and Herzegovina together with our centuries-old foes. It all reminds me of the experiment in which a dog and cat are held in a box together against their will, or a bad marriage maintained by all sorts of forceful means. It transpired that a dog and cat can remain in the box together under only one condition, namely that they lose their natural characteristics and cease being a dog and a cat. We will remember that we could not be Serbs and live in such a box.⁹¹³²

2756. The Accused characterised the conflict in BiH as a “conflict among peoples” and stated that “Muslims cannot live with others. We must be clear on that. They couldn’t live with the Hindu, who are as peaceful as sheep. [...] They couldn’t live with the Greek on Cyprus, they couldn’t live in the Lebanon with Arabs of the same blood, same language, but of a different faith. There can be no discussion here [...] We are in power, and we should exercise that power”.⁹¹³³ In this regard the Accused noted that there was nothing new, and that in the case of India and Pakistan there had been a “huge resettlement of the people” and the separation was “covered in blood”.⁹¹³⁴

2757. At a gathering in January 1993 attended by UN personnel, the Accused emphasised that they could not live together anymore with the Bosnian Muslims, they would not allow the past to repeat itself, and that therefore the Bosnian Muslims would be transferred out of Bosnian Serb territory.⁹¹³⁵ The Bosnian Serb leaders who attended included Mladić, Krajišnik, and Plavšić, and they all agreed with what the Accused said in this regard.⁹¹³⁶ They spoke about “ethnic cleansing” as something which was necessary.⁹¹³⁷

2758. In January 1993, at a meeting attended by Bosnian Serb and Serbian leaders, Vladislav Jovanović spoke about the importance of ensuring the territory they got was “nationally homogeneous as soon as possible”.⁹¹³⁸ Jovanović stated that this was not to be achieved by “ethnic cleansing” but through the “exchange of inhabitants”, and stressed that where life in BiH becomes impossible everybody rushes off to their “original provinces”.⁹¹³⁹ This was described by Jovanović as a “strategic goal to which we should aspire, and which should be achieved”.⁹¹⁴⁰ Jovanović stated that they had to be conscious that there was attention on Serbs and they were trying to catch them on “anything that even resembles ethnic cleansing or linking” and that they would have to look out for these traps and try to ‘catch’ them where they are weak”.⁹¹⁴¹

2759. Jovanović also spoke of the need to ensure in an “indisputable way” a territorial link with Serbia and Montenegro.⁹¹⁴² Jovanović also cautioned against freedom of settlement which could result in the “mixing of the composition of the population to our disadvantage” and that what they had gained would “gradually erode”.⁹¹⁴³

2760. The Accused went on to say that “this which Jovanović is talking about, has already happened to a huge extent. There was fifty-fifty of us in Zvornik. The number of inhabitants of Zvornik is now the same, approximately 50,000, and they are all Serbs. More than 24,000 Serbs from Zenica and Central Bosnia have arrived and stopped in Zvornik.”⁹¹⁴⁴ The Accused also stated that there will not be a unitary BiH of the civic type or one in which the Muslim majority will come to the fore.⁹¹⁴⁵

⁹¹³⁹ P794 (Excerpt from expanded session of Council for Harmonising State Policy Positions, 21 January 1993), e-court p. 3. See also Herbert Okun, T. 1824–1825 (28 April 2010). Jovanović acknowledged that this meeting took place but that when he spoke about developing an area which would be as “nationally homogeneous” as soon as possible, this was to be achieved by allowing people to freely move to other cantonal units if they did not want to live in a particular canton. D3015 (Witness statement of Vladislav Jovanović dated 22 February 2013), paras. 53, 64; Vladislav Jovanović, T. 34318–34319 (26 February 2013). The Chamber notes however, that Jovanović’s testimony was marked by indicators of evasiveness and bias. In addition, the Chamber considers that he had an interest in characterising his own words in a favourable light. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence to be reliable with respect to the voluntary nature of the movement of population which was envisaged.

2761. The Accused further stated that Serbs must fight for these territories to get a quality piece and said “we want some of our rich areas to belong to us”.⁹¹⁴⁶ The Accused also said that the Neretva was disputable and that they could live without it, but that they could not give up Podrinje and Posavina.⁹¹⁴⁷ Further, the Accused agreed with Slobodan Milošević and Kontić that they could not invoke the democratic principle if they abandoned the “ethnic criterion”.⁹¹⁴⁸ The Accused said that they would gladly exchange prisoners but would no longer make unilateral releases.⁹¹⁴⁹ Slobodan Milošević also expressed the view that had there not been the war, the changes on the ethnical basis would not have taken place, but that now they had the changes based on the ethnical principle.⁹¹⁵⁰

2762. Krajišnik said that what was important was not how big the territory was but the “quality of that territory” and that they had to seriously consider the issue of maps.⁹¹⁵¹ Krajišnik also stated that they had to “solve one part at a time – something through politics, something else through migration, and some things through settlement”.⁹¹⁵² He also emphasised that the continuity of the territory which they had was very important to allow for the unification of Serb territory in the RS and also spoke in favour of connection with their motherlands in Serbia and Montenegro.⁹¹⁵³ Koljević stated that they would have to “develop the activity of settlement homogenisation” while there was still time.⁹¹⁵⁴

2763. In 1993, Velibor Ostojić also referred to their goal of “ethnical – geographical continuity of Serb population” and that they were “building new demographic politics for the RS” and the need to have Serbs settle in areas which they held.⁹¹⁵⁵ Ostojić was responsible for the Commission for Refugees and Humanitarian Aid which organised this settlement of Serbs and did not provide for the return of Bosnian Muslims or Bosnian Croats.⁹¹⁵⁶ Ostojić was the Minister of Information and was trusted by, and had direct contact with, the Accused.⁹¹⁵⁷ This process of settling Serbs was done with a view to filling a particular area so Bosnian Muslims did not have a place to return to.⁹¹⁵⁸ This was in contrast with statements made at sessions of the Bosnian Serb Government in March and May 1993 where they emphasised the need to create conditions for the return of refugees who had left the RS during the conflict.⁹¹⁵⁹

2764. In April 1993, in discussions with international representatives, the Accused stated that he could not persuade Bosnian Serbs to remain in the Posavina and that they were asking for new land and territories.⁹¹⁶⁰ Mladić also spoke at this meeting and suggested that all sides sit down to resolve the problems.⁹¹⁶¹ The Accused also explained why the proposals at the time were absolutely unacceptable to the Serbs and questioned whether they could set up a regime to identify areas where they had to withdraw from and areas where they would have to resettle Bosnian Serbs.⁹¹⁶² In April 1993, Krajišnik also expressed his opposition to “any kind of joint state with the murderers of Serbian people, Muslims and Croats”.⁹¹⁶³ In August 1993, Krajišnik noted with respect to Banja Luka that the Muslims and Croats had asked for the municipality during negotiations, but he stressed that the Bosnian Serbs did not accept that “because we must have that territory clean”.⁹¹⁶⁴

The Chamber finds that Vladimir’s Lukić’s testimony with respect to this issue was marked by evasiveness and indicators of insincerity particularly when confronted with the speeches made by Ostojić which suggested that the Bosnian Serb policy on refugees was connected with its goal of achieving ethnic geographic continuity of the Serb population and did not make provision for the return of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. The Chamber therefore does not find his evidence in this regard to be reliable.

2765. The Accused also suggested that Krajina would “take on an appearance of a rotten apple” if their enemy was in Krajina.⁹¹⁶⁵ Similarly the Accused spoke about a “green stain” which had appeared on maps given that there were proposals for portions of territory to be allocated to Bosnian Muslims and that the Serbs in that area would not allow that to happen.⁹¹⁶⁶

2766. At the 37th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 10 January 1994, Mladić addressed the assembly on the issue of lack of resources and material support for the VRS.⁹¹⁶⁷ He went on to describe how the Bosnian Serbs had an historical chance to create an “all Serbian state” with as little enemies as possible and that the Muslims and the Croats represented a danger.⁹¹⁶⁸ He thus recommended to keep on fighting as the enemy the Bosnian Serbs were facing was getting stronger and stated: “They started the war at first, they are heading this war, but that is not my concern. My concern is not that they will create the state. My concern is to have them vanish completely.”⁹¹⁶⁹

2767. At the same session, Krajišnik stated that “the biggest tragedy would be if the Muslims accepted to live with us now. [...] That is the only thing I would never accept, and I would rather accept that we get a smaller percentage of the territory than it is the case now, provided that we remain separated from the Muslims and that we have our country”.⁹¹⁷⁰ He also spoke about their goal being “to separate from the Croats and Muslims forever”.⁹¹⁷¹ Krajišnik continued to make similar statements and by 1995 spoke about their first Strategic Goal being to separate from the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats.⁹¹⁷²

2768. At the same Bosnian Serb Assembly session on 10 January 1994, the Accused noted that they were now a “state and what we hold is 100% ours”.⁹¹⁷³ The Accused also acknowledged that “[i]f we are going to divorce from the Muslims, we must give them something. It is impossible to make the Muslims vanish, and that we keep the entire territory”.⁹¹⁷⁴ The Accused also noted that they could not declare a ban on the return of refugees according to international law and that in principle they would say that all refugees could return on a reciprocal basis.⁹¹⁷⁵

2769. In April 1994, Mladić was quoted as encouraging VRS operations because “[t]he Turks must disappear from these areas”.⁹¹⁷⁶ Michael Rose testified that he and other international representatives had thought that the objective of the combat operations in Goradže was to move the Bosnian Muslims out of the right bank of the town and therefore he suspected the reference in the order to “[t]he Turks must disappear from these areas” to mean just that.⁹¹⁷⁷

2770. In July 1994, the Accused in an address before the Bosnian Serb Assembly, spoke about achieving our primary strategic aim, which is to get rid of the enemies in our house, the Croats and Muslims, and not to be in the same state with them any more. Every divorce has a price, we have to give something up, but we are the winners, we have a majority of the territory now, not only under our control, but also in our ownership.⁹¹⁷⁸

2771. In August 1994, in video footage taken of Mladić and Milan Lešić, the founder of a Canadian charitable organisation called “Serbian Humanitarian Public Organisation”,⁹¹⁷⁹ in a car as they drove through Han Pijesak and Crna Rijeka, Mladić boasted that he “kicked the hell out of the Turks [...] who gives a fuck about them!” and commented that Lešić should film what they had done to the Turks and pointed to abandoned Bosnian Muslim houses.⁹¹⁸⁰

2772. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in November 1994, the Accused gave a speech in which he explained that “[w]e have created new realities” and that Zvornik used to be 60% Muslim but that Bosnian Serbs from Zenica arrived, occupied Kozluk and the Bosnian Muslims left.⁹¹⁸¹ He went on to say that they were requesting Zvornik “which comes out of a new reality. [...] This war has created the new reality, there are now the Serbs from Zenica here. [...] We request Zvornik according to this right”.⁹¹⁸² At this same session, Krajišnik stated that “the primary strategic goal of our people and this Parliament is partition and separation from Croats and Muslims. And the partition can only be made if they will have their state while we have our own. How big these states will be is another issue. We cannot get entire Bosnia".⁹¹⁸³ The Accused in 1995 confirmed this objective when he stated that if they were able to secure the territory they decided on and if it was "nearly 100% Serbian", they would be great victors and would have realised their ultimate dream, a Serbian State west of the Drina.⁹¹⁸⁴ The Accused also acknowledged that they had undertaken military operations to expand the territory but that after the Bosnian Muslims had been packed into small areas, "thus achieving their concentration", there was not much more that could be done.⁹¹⁸⁵

2773. At a meeting of the Supreme Command on 31 March 1995, the Accused made reference to the danger posed by Bosnian Muslims who remained in their territory and stated that "Muslims remaining there in any way is disastrous for us", and that their policy had been the "separation of peoples, of cultures, of worlds", based on the idea that "birds of a feather flock together".⁹¹⁸⁶ He also spoke about turning a blind eye to private agencies and arrangements through which Bosnian Muslims left for western Europe because in those situations "no one can accuse us", whereas if a state institution was involved they would be accused of "ethnic cleansing".⁹¹⁸⁷ Krajišnik stressed that freedom of movement was allowed in order to pull Serbs out of Muslim territory and "if the Muslims want to go from our territory, then we enable them to leave our area, without coercion, because we do not have the right to do that, nor should anyone take on himself their ethnic cleansing, but there would be no crying if they left from here".⁹¹⁸⁸

(b) Territorial claims and control

2774. On 23 December 1991, the Accused spoke about the plebiscite which had been conducted and stated that in principle, even if Serbs constituted only 5% of the population, "everywhere where Serbs live and where they have voted against secession, or to remain in Yugoslavia, no one can break away there. In other words, there remain only five municipalities that could separate from Yugoslavia".⁹¹⁸⁹ In a conversation with Koljević in December 1991, the Accused stated that there was great media interest in whether the Serbs wanted war but they had said that “we want war by no means” and that “we have no aims, we don’t want to take what belongs to someone else”; “we just don’t want them to take ours”.⁹¹⁹⁰

2775. In February 1992, Krajišnik suggested that the Serbian people had two options, to either fight by political means or to “break off the talks and go for what we have done over the centuries: win our own territories by force”.⁹¹⁹¹ In this regard, Krajišnik said “[y]ou know what our profession has always been – to wage war”.⁹¹⁹²

2776. In March 1992, Krajišnik also stated that “[s]ince municipality borders may be adjusted, we have already made some adjustments and we plan to include all parts that will be Serbian territory in our municipalities, and what remains to be discussed, the discussion will be about where it is going to be, where are we going to put our lines” and that for strategic reasons “we could start implementing what we have agreed upon, the ethnic division on the ground. That we start determining the territory”.⁹¹⁹³ Krajišnik, in interviews, also spoke about the borders and territory held by the VRS but refuted the suggestion that they were holding territories populated by other national communities, although he acknowledged that it may have been the case with certain enclaves within their territory.⁹¹⁹⁴

2777. In March 1992, the Accused explained that SerBiH existed, that there would be no return to a unitary BiH and the only contest was of “quantity, there is a tug of war about who will have more. We won, we have drawn the rope to a certain point and we are not going to yield it back”.⁹¹⁹⁵ The Accused stated that the goals of the Bosnian Serbs were being accomplished stage by stage.⁹¹⁹⁶ The Accused also said that the Bosnian Muslims were forced to accept that BiH was divisible along national lines, and that the Bosnian Serbs would “decide what our constituent unit is” based on “what conditions we establish on the ground”.⁹¹⁹⁷

2778. On 23 April 1992, Mandić was informed that Višegrad had been taken.⁹¹⁹⁸ On 30 April 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government was informed about the situation in Foča and that Bosnian Serb authorities had control over “liberated areas”.⁹¹⁹⁹

2779. In meetings with international representatives in April 1992, the Accused showed maps on which the ethnic composition was marked, as was Bosnian Serb claimed or controlled territory; in total, this amounted to approximately 70% of BiH.⁹²⁰⁰ This was consistent with earlier speeches by the Accused where he stated that it would be impossible for Izetbegović to establish authority in 70% of the territory in BiH.⁹²⁰¹ Many of the areas which the Bosnian Serbs claimed included municipalities along the Drina River and in the Posavina area which had a majority Bosnian Muslim population but later became Bosnian Serb controlled areas with very few Bosnian Muslims remaining.⁹²⁰²

2780. The Accused had previously spoken about territorial issues. For example in an intercepted conversation in September 1991, the Accused spoke about negotiations regarding territories and the plan to free Bosanska Krajina, Semberija and Doboј and said that Eastern Herzegovina and Romanija were “clean”.⁹²⁰³ In November 1991, the Accused had a conversation about the situation in Novo Sarajevo and said that they would teach the SDA “the law pretty soon” given that they had blocked the work of the Municipal Assembly and that they would “probably carry out some kind of reorganisation of the city”.⁹²⁰⁴ The Accused then said, “[a]nd they can go to fucking hell”.⁹²⁰⁵ The Accused also asked where Bosnian Muslim settlements were in Novo Sarajevo and questioned how many Bosnian Muslims lived in specific areas and in the municipality generally.⁹²⁰⁶

2781. On 6 May 1992, Mladić was at a meeting where he was informed that “Foča has been finished”.⁹²⁰⁷ At the 16th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 12 May 1992 the Accused stated that the conflict in municipalities, including Foča, Zvornik, and Višegrad, had ended successfully.⁹²⁰⁸ On 19 May 1992, in an intercepted conversation, Mićo Stanišić said that Foča had fallen along with Višegrad and that all those who had left these municipalities were in Goražde.⁹²⁰⁹ Stanić reported to Mladić that in contrast to what it was before the conflict, the percentage of Serbs in Foča was 99%.⁹²¹⁰

2782. On 8 May 1992, the National Security Council tasked the Ministry of Justice with proposing the state borders of SerBiH.⁹²¹¹ On 24 May 1992, Prime Minister Branko Đerić wrote a letter in which he stated the Serbs in BiH were “not an invented people as we have been living on this land for thirteen centuries”. He also wrote that the Bosnian Serbs held title to 64% of the arable land, and that they used to be a majority in BiH before the genocide jointly carried out against Serbs by Muslims and Croats during World War II.⁹²¹²

2783. The Accused also stated “[w]e must prove to the international factor that [...] we hold no siege over Sarajevo. Basically, we are protecting our territories and here it is visible that Sarajevo sprung up in Serbian territory, as Serbian property, and the entire surrounding of Sarajevo is Serbian”.⁹²¹³ The Accused spoke about Serbian villages, towns, and settlements which were beyond dispute and that they should seek to solve issues where ethnic areas and maps overlap.⁹²¹⁴

2784. At a meeting of the Bosnian Serb leadership on 6 June 1992, Krajišnik stated that “we have to conquer what is ours and be prepared to defend our state” and that the goal was to form and unite the “Birač-Romanija area”.⁹²¹⁵

2785. After a meeting on 30 June 1992 when he received reports on the combat success of voluntary formations, the Accused stressed that the Bosnian Serbs had “by and large outlined their territory” and the most pressing tasks involved successfully establishing democratic civilian authorities and that the Serb side was ready for a political outcome and negotiations.⁹²¹⁶ At a meeting on 30 June 1992 attended by the Accused and General Mladić, a municipal leader from Vlasenica reported that part of Cerska would be liberated in the days to come and if they brought back their forces from Kalesija they “would liberate everything” and that “[w]hoever controls Vlasenica, controls eastern Bosnia”.⁹²¹⁷

2786. At the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly held in July 1992, Krajišnik stated that there were territories which were not under their control but which should be part of SerBiH “due to them being ethnic territories” and over which the Bosnian Serbs claimed their rights.⁹²¹⁸ Krajišnik on this issue explained that the territories they held constituted the SerBiH and were indisputable to them, “[w]hat is ours, is ours. We do not want to take the territories of others and we cannot give away what is ours”.⁹²¹⁹ He also emphasised that the final goal was the formation of a state and that the “single space” of the SerBiH “must be achieved”.⁹²²⁰

2787. At the same session, the Accused reported that “we control all of our territories, and perhaps also some territories that will be given to other national communities once a deal is reached” but that those territories could not be handed over during the war.⁹²²¹ The Accused gave credit to the JNA, the TO, and the army of the SerBiH and stated that the borders of their state had been marked by a difficult and bloody battle.⁹²²² Koljević also acknowledged how much had been achieved militarily.⁹²²³ The Accused emphasised the significance of controlling territory and the factual situation on the ground.⁹²²⁴ At this session there was a statement made about the danger of losing Foča which would allow the creation of the “green transversal”.⁹²²⁵

2788. Prstojević also spoke at the 17th Bosnian Serb Assembly session and said that after the Accused visited Ilidža and encouraged them, “the Serbs from Sarajevo retained control over the

2789. At the same session, the Accused said that the conflict had been “roused in order to eliminate the Muslims. [...] They think they are being nationally established, but in fact they are vanishing. If that’s the case, then we have our interests for our historical territories”.⁹²²⁷ Right after making this statement, the Accused went on to say:

I think we have to save the Serb people in their ethnic and also historical territories [...]. We’ll have for sure, we’ll have in the beginning so many Serbs, but I think that they will leave those states, both the Muslim and the Croat state. In the state that we are building, we have to ensure that they have all the rights that we have, under the condition that they are not hostile and that they leave the weapons.⁹²²⁸

2790. At the end of the 17th Bosnian Serb Assembly session in July 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted the “Decision on establishing disputable and indisputable borders of its territory” and identified where those borders would run, which could be subject to corrections and verifications in accordance with international agreements.⁹²²⁹

2791. The Accused acknowledged with time that during negotiations they risked losing traditional and “centuries-old Serb territories”.⁹²³⁰ These historical territorial claims were also reflected in the proclamation of the Bosnian Serb Assembly in January 1992 where reference was made to “areas in which the Serbian people is now a minority due to the genocide carried out against it in World War II” and in the statements to the international observers that these areas should be part of the RS.⁹²³¹

2792. The objectives which the Bosnian Serb leadership spoke about in the lead-up to and during the conflict were also reflected in VRS reports. For example, the VRS Main Staff analysis of armed activities in 1992 noted that the declaration of independence by BiH and its premature

Čeklić testified that the Bosnian Serb leadership did not want to occupy territories but instead wanted to protect Serbian people in those territories. Savo Čeklić, T. 41227–41229 (11 July 2013). However, the Chamber does not find Čeklić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Čeklić’s evidence was marked by evasiveness and contradictions and as such did not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard.

recognition threatened the Bosnian Serbs and made them a national minority that faced the prospect of being “subjected to genocide”.⁹²³² This report noted that in order to prevent this “humiliation”, the Serbian people organised itself politically and when it was attacked, “it started a defensive and liberating war” with the SDS taking on the most significant political role in the organisation of the Serbian people.⁹²³³

2793. The VRS reported that during the early phase of the conflict in the RS there were units of the Serb TO which had been “formed on the initiative and under the leadership” of the SDS and had been able to protect the Serbs until the formation of the VRS.⁹²³⁴ The VRS reported however, that these units failed to achieve the “main strategic objectives of the armed struggle of the Serbian people” in BiH.⁹²³⁵ They failed to open and secure the required corridors and to “gain control over a considerable part of the territory of former [BiH] which historically and ethnically belongs to the Serbian people”.⁹²³⁶ This report further noted that the VRS was capable of protecting the Serbs and “liberating territories which by [historic] birthright are ours” and that this would lay the foundations for a Serb state.⁹²³⁷

2794. This report noted that the strategic objectives of the war were promptly defined and formed the general guidelines for their operations.⁹²³⁸ Mladić reflected this sentiment and said that the people and the VRS had carried out most of the tasks and the Strategic Goals set for them.⁹²³⁹ He noted that the VRS had “liberated the territories we consider our own” which had created conditions for the Bosnian Serb leadership to go to negotiations in a stronger territorial position.⁹²⁴⁰ The report further noted that the Accused, as the Supreme Commander, orally assigned a number of tasks which were vital to “protecting the Serbian people and its territories” and the Main Staff “translated the set objectives and tasks into general and individual missions”.⁹²⁴¹ The Accused spoke in favour and praised the military successes of the VRS under Mladić.⁹²⁴²

2795. On 26 August 1992, in a meeting with Vance and Carrington at the London Conference, the Accused stated that following the recognition of BiH, “Serbs had been forced to act in order to protect the Serbian population” and that they wanted full autonomy.⁹²⁴³ The Accused further stated that the Bosnian Serbs were willing to negotiate and even return some territory as part of an overall agreement, as long as Serb property rights in predominantly Croat and Muslim areas were protected.⁹²⁴⁴ When the Accused spoke about Bosnian Serb territory being geographically continuous, Vance asked how this could be achieved without “moving people”.⁹²⁴⁵

2796. At an international press conference in September 1992, the Accused stated that Bosnian Serbs owned, possessed, and controlled 64% of BiH and that they were only a minority in BiH because of the genocide during World War II.⁹²⁴⁶ When questioned about whether those in the “wrong part of the territory” would have to leave their homes, the Accused denied the suggestion vigorously and stated that they had to guarantee minority rights.⁹²⁴⁷

2797. The Accused told Van Lynden in September 1992 that the Serbs had to have the northern areas and Banja Luka. He also said that Eastern Bosnia was all Serb and that the enclaves of Goražde, Srebrenica, and smaller enclaves were unacceptable and had to become part of Serb territory.⁹²⁴⁸

2798. Šešelj, on behalf of the SRS, also expressed his support for the formation of the SerBiH and his view that the Bosnian Serb authorities should demarcate Serbian territory, proclaim its own TO and police in territories under its control, and simultaneously “liberate” those areas which were not under Serbian control but which were “part of the Serbian territorial corpus”.⁹²⁴⁹ In April 1992, Šešelj spoke about the necessity of dividing BiH, where Serbs would end up with the majority of the area.⁹²⁵⁰ In an interview in September 1992, Šešelj recognised that it was “obvious that Serbs hold larger territories today than they would have if there had been a peaceful demarcation of borders with Croats and Muslims”.⁹²⁵¹ He further stated that Serbs would continue to gain more and more territories and Muslims would end up with nothing.⁹²⁵²

2799. In November 1992, in a meeting attended by General Morillon, Piers Tucker, Mladić, and Koljević, the Accused showed maps with the ethnic distribution in BiH and claimed that “Bosnian Serbs had only seized those territories to which they had a right, which [were] territories where the population was more than 50 per cent Bosnian Serb” and they had “no wish to live with the Muslims”, whom he called “Turks”.⁹²⁵³ On 7 November 1992, at a meeting attended by Đerić and other ministers, the situation in a number of municipalities was discussed and it was reported that the largest part of the municipality of Vlasenica was “free”.⁹²⁵⁴ In January 1993, the Accused also spoke about how they had created a state with their own forces.⁹²⁵⁵

2800. The Chamber recalls that on 15 January 1993, at a meeting with Okun and Vance, the representative for the Bosnian Serbs, Aleksa Buha, stated that the Bosnian Serbs needed the Posavina “corridor”, which was a road that connected Belgrade to Banja Luka via Bijeljina and Brčko.⁹²⁵⁶ For territories still under dispute, Buha noted the Accused’s request for a resolution by referendum.⁹²⁵⁷ The importance of certain municipalities to the political objectives of the Bosnian Serbs was underscored by statements in the Bosnian Serb Assembly in January 1993 to the effect that there could be no Serbian state or prospects for the Serbian people “without Podrinje [...] from Foča to Bijeljina”.⁹²⁵⁸ A deputy from Prijedor spoke against the proposal of sharing the municipality of Prijedor and stated that they had “conquered, actually restored only the Serb territory that they took away from us back in 1941”.⁹²⁵⁹ This sentiment reflected the statements by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership regarding the historical crimes committed against the Serb people and their historical claim to the land which they viewed as belonging to them.

2801. Following the ICFY, the Vance-Owen Plan was formally introduced on 2 January 1993 and provided for constitutional and military arrangements in BiH and a map of the provincial structure.⁹²⁶⁰ Izetbegović objected to the map on the basis that regions from which the population had been removed could not come under the control of those who removed them.⁹²⁶¹ The Accused noted that certain territories were still under dispute and when the map was discussed, he asked for a larger Bosnian Serb territory and proposed his own boundaries.⁹²⁶²

2802. In April 1993, the Accused also spoke about the importance of certain Serb areas in the context of international negotiations pertaining to maps of BiH.⁹²⁶³ In the context of discussing whether or not to accept the Vance-Owen Plan, Brđanin at the Bosnian Serb Assembly stated “[e]verything we have liberated is Serbian land. No one will be able to convince the people of Prijedor, Sanski Most [...] and all the places under threat all the way to Foča that we have passed a just decision”.⁹²⁶⁴ The Accused stressed for example that they could not give up on Sanski Most because it was in the middle of their territory.⁹²⁶⁵ The Accused also spoke about Brčko being their “mutual concern” and that they would “finish with Brčko the way it should be [...] [a]nd if there is war we will be strong and repel them 50 kilometres to the south”.⁹²⁶⁶ The Chamber recalls that on 2 May 1993, the Accused signed the Vance-Owen Plan in Athens, but this was subject to ratification by the Bosnian Serb Assembly, which ultimately rejected the plan.⁹²⁶⁷

2803. At a meeting on 28 May 1993 between members of the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused, and the leadership of the FRY, disagreements were voiced among the participants as to whether to continue fighting, or whether to negotiate a path towards peace.⁹²⁶⁸ During this meeting, the Accused stated that there was “no other way but to fight”.⁹²⁶⁹

2804. At the 34th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly in August 1993, the Accused cautioned against the view that they had given up on their far-reaching goals with respect to the union of Serb states and explained that “[i]t is a phase we have to finish”.⁹²⁷⁰ When the Accused refused to accept the Vance-Owen Plan, he claimed that the old BiH ceased to exist and that there was now a state with three constituent peoples.⁹²⁷¹ Given the Accused's refusal, Owen stated "I weep for your country. The path you are heading on is bitterness, hatred and death".⁹²⁷²

2805. At this same session, the Accused stated that while he did not think there would be a broader war in Europe, if there was one "we shall be stronger" and that they would have a corridor again on the map of BiH.⁹²⁷³ The Accused explained that "[i]f we want it by force, we could have taken some more, we can still do it".⁹²⁷⁴ He went on to state that they were militarily ready and would not withdraw from anywhere until they had firm guarantees about the resolution of the conflict.⁹²⁷⁵ He stated that while they did not want the war to continue and would be willing to lessen their territory, he wanted the land they retained to remain theirs "for all [...] time".⁹²⁷⁶ The Accused also suggested that the Serbs would vanish if they were weakened, but they would be given a state if they were seen as strong militarily, economically, and politically.⁹²⁷⁷

2806. Koljević at the 34th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly stated his view that they had entered "this fight" not with the aim of winning the most territory but with the aim of the "spiritual and moral revitalisation of Serbhood".⁹²⁷⁸ At the same Bosnian Serb Assembly session, Mladić stated that if the negotiations and agreement failed, they would "have to find the means and organise ourselves for the continuation of the even bloodier war".⁹²⁷⁹ Another deputy spoke and recognised that they held 13 municipalities including Prijedor, Sanski Most, Ključ, Zvornik, Vlasenica, Rogatica, Višegrad, Foča and part of Brčko even though they "did not belong to Serbs, according to indicators of relative or absolute majority".⁹²⁸⁰ The Chamber recalls its finding that the control of municipalities, including Bijeljina and Vlasenica,⁹²⁸¹ was geographically important with respect to the Strategic Goals of the Bosnian Serb leadership.

2807. The municipality of Brčko was an example of where the Accused and the Bosnian Serbs continued to emphasise their territorial and strategic interests. Brčko was considered of strategic importance by the Bosnian Serb leadership as it was viewed as necessary for the formation of a corridor in the Posavina region through to Bosanska Krajina; this was in accordance with the second Strategic Goal.⁹²⁸² Given the strategic importance of Brčko, despite the Bosnian Serbs constituting a minority, the Bosnian Serb leadership insisted that it would become a province of RS.⁹²⁸³ The Accused also spoke about negotiations relating to Brčko and the importance of protecting Serb interests.⁹²⁸⁴ A representative from Brčko acknowledged that it had never been a Serb town, but that even before the war there had been “strictly defined Serb areas within the town, separated from the areas in which the other two peoples lived” and by agreement this area had been defined.⁹²⁸⁵ This representative spoke about the possibility of having to return “Muslim territories that we have liberated” but emphasised which areas of Brčko should be retained.⁹²⁸⁶

2808. At a meeting held in August 1994 between the Accused, Krajišnik, and Milan Martić, Krajišnik stated: “Everyone is telling us not to give up Brčko”.⁹²⁸⁷ The Accused stressed that the corridor being offered to them through Brčko was too narrow and could not be defended.⁹²⁸⁸ In a meeting with UNPROFOR on 19 August 1994, the Accused expressed his view that if an “arrangement” was reached for Brčko similar to the plan for Sarajevo, it should “not prevent the

While the Chamber notes that the only crimes charged in Indictment with respect to Brčko are limited to the Luka camp, it has had regard to this evidence as supporting the pattern of what occurred in the Municipalities and how this corresponded with the strategic interests of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership.

Serbs from transiting the area with their armaments” and that if the Bosnian Serbs kept “sovereignty in Brčko” they would seriously consider the proposal of not attacking Tuzla.⁹²⁸⁹

2809. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session on 11 May 1994, the Accused stated: “We have never been [a] majority in Brčko, but we were always the third, but we have to solve that with a combination, we cannot call upon one principle, that is ethnic and historical. [...]This is not [an] important town for the Muslims, but it is important to us”.⁹²⁹⁰ In meeting with Akashi in May 1994 the Accused warned of an ABiH offensive on Brčko and that they would not agree to withdraw Bosnian Serb troops to make Brčko a safe area because it was historically a Serb area and it had been under Bosnian Serb control since the beginning of the war.⁹²⁹¹

2810. When the Accused visited Foča to open a medical school, he gave a speech in which he said that he was “satisfied and happy that Foča has been preserved” and it was important for the citizens to know that the Bosnian Muslims had given up on Foča in negotiations.⁹²⁹² In 1994, Krajišnik attended a celebration in Foča with other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership and delivered a speech in which he addressed the people of Srbinje, which was the new Serb name of Foča.⁹²⁹³ In this speech Krajišnik said:

Today you are not as you were before. Now I see a true Serbian town. And you proudly bear your Serbian name. You are the example to every Serb. All that was coming from this town you’ve managed to eliminate you prevented it from happening. [...] Izetbegović said that this town would be another Mecca. But you did not let them. And for that, in the name of all Serbs, I thank you.⁹²⁹⁴

2811. The Accused also noted that in Foča the Bosnian Muslims had a plan to “build a big Islamic centre” and that Foča was extremely important to the Bosnian Muslims but “it will never be theirs again”.⁹²⁹⁵

2812. In 1993 and 1994, commemorations were held to celebrate the anniversary of the “liberation” of Zvornik which were attended amongst others by the Accused, Koljević, and

Arkan.⁹²⁹⁶ The Accused in an interview also said that the Bosnian Serbs would “never leave Zvornik again, and the state of facts established by this war, by this one year of the war, will not be reconciled without large crimes”.⁹²⁹⁷ The Accused’s position was that Zvornik could not be given to the Bosnian Muslims because that would mean that the Serbs could not return and would be refugees.⁹²⁹⁸

2813. The Accused stated that during the war he had placed the SDS on hold but that in the first 45 days of the conflict, the SDS had been instrumental in “practically defin[ing] the borders”.⁹²⁹⁹ In an interview in July 1995 the Accused stressed that everyone should accept the reality that BiH was completely Serbian. He went on to state:

We now possess 64% of the land and control 70% of the territory of that false State Bosnia, which does not exist, and we are not going to accept anything less than 50% We are not going to give up on our own State, the ultimate objective for any nation; it is like our home. And we are not going to end up homeless in a Bosnia dominated by Muslims.⁹³⁰⁰

2814. In the same interview, the Accused stated that they were ready to end the war on the condition that the Bosnian Serbs’ right to self-determination was recognised and observed that if “we are fighting and dying for certain places, we cannot hand them over afterwards. Nobody can expect us to guarantee the Muslims that they are always going to keep the same percentage of territory [...]. If they want a military solution, they will get to keep what they have now, at most. But if they want a political solution, we are ready to be flexible”.⁹³⁰¹ The Accused also said that they would “never accept giving up a single Serbian place, especially if it was taken by force”.⁹³⁰²

2815. In August 1995, Mladić issued a notice to the Main Staff of the VRS which, inter alia, praised the VRS and observed that it had thwarted “a planned and prepared genocide of the Serbian people, protecting the greater part of Serbian territories, and achieving victory after victory in the liberation of occupied historically and ethnically Serbian areas”.⁹³⁰³

2816. At a Bosnian Serb Assembly session in August 1995, the Accused said:

To tell the truth, there are towns that we've grabbed for ourselves, and there were only 30% of us. I can name as many of those as you want, but we cannot give up the towns where we made up 70%. Don't let this get around, but remember how many of us were in Bratunac, how many in Srebrenica, how many in Višegrad, how many in Rogatica, how many in Vlasenica, in Zvornik, etc. Due to strategic importance they had to become ours, and no one is practically questioning it any more.⁹³⁰⁴

(c) Creation of a Bosnian Serb state

2817. In December 1991, the Accused spoke about how in some municipalities it was “really necessary to create separate municipalities” and to have dual municipal authorities.⁹³⁰⁵

2818. The Chamber recalls that on 11 January 1992, the first session of the Council of Ministers was attended by Bosnian Serb leaders including the Accused, Krajišnik and Plavšić.⁹³⁰⁶ At this meeting one of the identified priorities with respect to the declaration on the promulgation of the SerBiH was “the defining of ethnic territory, establishment of government organs in the territory and the economic disempowerment of the current authorities in the [SRBiH]”.⁹³⁰⁷ On 17 January 1992, the Council of Ministers discussed the need to adopt the Constitution of the Republic as soon as possible and to consolidate and organise the territory of the regions, including through the formation of new municipalities.⁹³⁰⁸

2819. In February 1992, the Accused spoke about their hope that nearly 90% of the Serb population would be in their republic in BiH and that this would be a “sovereign area of the Serbian people”.⁹³⁰⁹ At a meeting of the SDS Deputies' Club in February 1992, the Accused stated until two or three months ago we were hoping to be able to play the ‘Yugoslav card’ [...]. This is slipping out of our grasp. That's why we started on another track: a Serbian Bosnia and Herzegovina. Our sovereign right, our army. We are preparing the constitutional framework to be able to have immediately [...] to have a national guard, to 2820. At this meeting Koljević expressed his agreement with the Accused over the outcome of the recently held peace negotiations and the proposed division of BiH into a confederation.⁹³¹¹ Koljević stated “our only chance is to draw borders, to tear them down. That’s what we have been doing in Bosnia and Herzegovina, what we have begun in order to be able to draw the borders and to create our own, and then not to give up on our goal until the times are better”.⁹³¹² Krajišnik stated with respect to the creation of a unitary Islamic BiH, “that will not succeed. We are a force to be reckoned with. We will not agree to that [...] there is nothing more important than Serbian freedom”.⁹³¹³
