4132. In terms of the direction of fire, the Chamber recalls that the CSB Sarajevo investigators concluded that the shells originated from a general direction to the west of Alipašino Polje, while Verdy thought that the projectiles in Cetinjska and Klara Cetkin streets originated from the same mortar, positioned in either Stup or Ilidža, that is either to the west or southwest of the incident site. The Chamber recalls that, to Higgs, the two investigations were not far apart in terms of direction as they both essentially concluded that the shells originated from approximately the west of Alipašino Polje in the direction of Nedžarići. However, Higgs considered that the CSB Sarajevo investigation would have been more accurate as it was more contemporaneous. The Chamber agrees with his analysis.

4134. The Chamber finds that the shells originated from the area approximately west of the incident site.

4135. As far as the precise origin of fire is concerned, the angle of descent for the shells was not determined by either the CSB Sarajevo investigators or Subotić, while Verdy concluded that it was more than 1,100 mils and that the shells had a maximum range of between 2,000 and 3,000 metres, thus placing the origin of fire in the SRK-held territory. Given that it is unclear from his report how Verdy managed to calculate the maximum range of the shells, the Chamber is unable to assess his method and thus cannot accept those findings. At the same time, the Chamber does not accept Subotić's analysis that the fire came from the UPI Institute southwest of the incident site either. This is because she based her analysis on Verdy's azimuths being absolutely accurate at 236 and 239 degrees, albeit reversed. However, the Chamber notes that Verdy also concluded in his report that the azimuths were "between" 236 and 239 degrees. In other words, the trajectories plotted by Subotić, which intersect at the UPI Institute, predicate an absolute accuracy. The Chamber finds this to be unrealistic in light of the margin of error with which ballistic experts have to work.

4136. With respect to the origin of fire, the Indictment alleges that the shells came from the SRK-held territory to the west of the incident site and does not specify the exact origin of fire. The Prosecution Final Brief then refers to Nedžarići and the Institute for the Blind, or alternatively the Stup area in the Serb part of Ilidža, as the origin of fire.¹³⁸¹⁰

4137. However, taking all of the above into account, as well as the adjudicated facts relating to this incident, the Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the origin of fire was Nedžarići and the Institute for the Blind. First, the CSB Sarajevo report does not conclude that the fire came from there but only that it came from a westerly direction where Nedžarići and the Institute for the Blind are located. In addition, as noted earlier,¹³⁸¹¹ Sabljica conceded that CSB Sarajevo did not establish the azimuth of the shells, as was normal practice. Finally, the adjudicated facts do not provide that the origin of fire was Nedžarići or the Institute for the Blind.

4138. With respect to Stup, the Chamber notes that the adjudicated facts do not state that it was the origin of fire in this incident. In addition, as noted above, this area was mostly under the control of the ABiH, while a small part was controlled by the SRK.¹³⁸¹² On the basis of the evidence before the Chamber, Verdy is the only person who determined the angle of descent and calculated the potential distance the shells had travelled, and thus placed the origin of fire in the SRK territory in Stup. However, in its Final Brief, the Prosecution states that it has chosen not to rely on his report as Verdy's methodology was criticised by his superiors and he did not come to the scene on the day of the incident.¹³⁸¹³ The Chamber is therefore unable to conclude, beyond reasonable doubt, that the origin of fire was the Serb-held part of Stup, as neither the evidence before it nor the adjudicated facts indicate this location as the origin of fire.

4139. While Adjudicated Fact 303 states that the shells came from the SRK positions "somewhere to the west of the incident site", both ABiH and SRK held positions to the west of the incident site. Given the above findings with respect to Nedžarići and Stup, both of which are locations to the west of the incident site, and bearing in mind that the only report which placed the origin of fire in the SRK territory on the basis of something other than mere guesswork was discredited by the Prosecution, the Chamber is unable to rely on Adjudicated Fact 303. The Chamber therefore cannot conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the fire came from SRK positions.

¹³⁸¹² See para. 4056, fn. 13492. See also P1058 (ABiH map).

¹³⁸¹³ See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix C, para. 52, fn. 330. While Subotić does rely on Verdy's report to a large extent, she concludes that he made a mistake when determining the exact origin of fire. Accordingly, as neither party relies on his report with respect to the origin of fire and he did not give evidence before the Chamber explaining and defending his methodology, the Chamber cannot rely on it in this regard.

(5) Dobrinja, 4 February 1994 (Scheduled Incident G.7)

4140. The Indictment alleges that on 4 February 1994, a salvo of three 120 mm mortar shells hit civilians in the Dobrinja residential settlement.¹³⁸¹⁴ The first shell is alleged to have landed in front of a block of flats at Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street, hitting persons who were distributing and receiving humanitarian aid and also children attending religious classes.¹³⁸¹⁵ The second and third shells are alleged to have landed amongst persons trading at a market in an open area to the rear of the apartment buildings at Mihajla Pupina street and Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street.¹³⁸¹⁶ The shells are alleged to have originated from VRS/SRK-held territory to the east of Dobrinja, and to have resulted in the death of 8 persons and the wounding of at least 18 others.¹³⁸¹⁷ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution submits that the 120 mm mortar shells were fired with at least three charges and originated from the direction of SRK-held territory to the east of Dobrinja, in the vicinity of Lukavica, possibly the Energoinvest complex.¹³⁸¹⁸ The Accused argues that in fact four 120 mm mortar shells exploded at the scene, and that they originated from the ABiH-held positions.¹³⁸¹⁹

4141. On 4 February 1994, humanitarian aid was being distributed along Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street in Dobrinja where a large number of people had gathered waiting for the aid when a number of shells exploded causing a number of casualties.¹³⁸²⁰ One of those present in the area was Sabahudin Ljuša who did not see any soldiers or military personnel at the place where humanitarian aid was being unloaded or in Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street.¹³⁸²¹ The Chamber also took judicial notice that Ismet Hadžić, commander of the Dobrinja Brigade of the ABiH, stated that on that date there were no ABiH military units close to the site.¹³⁸²²

4142. Sabljica and Međedović participated in the investigation of this incident on 4 February 1994, together with a team from CSB Sarajevo, led by an investigating judge, Zdenko Eterović, and including a number of forensic technicians, such as Bešić and KDZ166.¹³⁸²³ According to the

Before the on-site investigation was conducted the bodies and the wounded people were removed and report prepared by Eterović on the day of the incident, three 120 mm shells landed in the area, the first two almost simultaneously at 11:30 a.m.¹³⁸²⁴ One of the two hit the ground floor of an apartment building at number 8 Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street, injuring a boy but causing no deaths.¹³⁸²⁵ The other hit a retaining wall in the backyard of an apartment at number 3 Mihajla Pupina street and a 120 mm shell stabiliser was found on the scene.¹³⁸²⁶ A boy and a woman were killed by this shell.¹³⁸²⁷ The third shell landed a few minutes later, hitting the playground located next to a covered parking lot and surrounded by buildings in the vicinity of Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street.¹³⁸²⁸ More specifically, the report states that this shell landed on the “asphalt sidewalk”, on the side closer to the playground.¹³⁸²⁹ A 120 mm shell stabiliser was found embedded in the asphalt.¹³⁸³⁰ The report also notes that altogether six persons were killed on the scene and two more people died on admission to the Koševo Hospital,¹³⁸³¹ while 22 others were seriously wounded.¹³⁸³² The official report CSB prepared the following day lists eight killed and 18 wounded.¹³⁸³³

¹³⁸³¹ While the report notes that three other individuals died on admission to the Koševo Hospital, the Chamber notes that one of the three listed is Sabahudin Ljuša who in fact survived the attack and is also listed in Eterović’s report as one of the seriously wounded victims. Ljuša was 10 years old at the time of the attack. P1710 (BiH MUP Report re shelling of Dobrinja on 4 February 1994), e-court pp. 3, 5–6. Adjudicated Fact 318 makes it clear that Ljuša survived and went on to give evidence in the Galić case.

¹³⁸³² While Eterović’s report refers to 23 seriously wounded victims, the number is actually 18 as a number of persons appear to have been listed twice. The Chamber notes that “Mukšija Pribinja”/“Muskija Pubinja”—who appears to be the same individual—is listed both among those who died in the hospital and among those who were seriously wounded. The official report, prepared the next day, clarifies that this individual was among the dead and that 18 people were wounded in this incident. P1710 (BiH MUP Report re shelling of Dobrinja on 4 February 1994), e-court pp. 3–6. See also Adjudicated Fact 317, which provides that Eterović’s report found that altogether eight people had been killed by shells and 22 were wounded. The Chamber notes, relying on the

4144. Sabljica testified that the confrontation line to the north and northeast of Dobrinja was between 350 to 400 metres away from the incident site.¹³⁸⁴⁰ He acknowledged that there was a certain difference in his findings as to the origins of the two shells, namely east and northeast, and explained that the Energoinvest complex that is mentioned in the report was only used as an available evidence, that the number of wounded was in fact 18 people. As a result, the Chamber will not rely on this particular Adjudicated Fact in its findings below.

“orientation point” rather than as the actual calculated origin of fire.¹³⁸⁴¹ Međedović testified that there were only one or two buildings between the incident site and the Serb lines.¹³⁸⁴²

4145. As part of the official report one of the CSB Sarajevo, a forensic technician drew a sketch of the incident site marking the three impact sites and noting the direction of the north.¹³⁸⁴³ However, during cross-examination of Sabljica, the Accused successfully established that the sketch was inaccurate, as was the direction of north marked on it.¹³⁸⁴⁴ KDZ166 explained that this mistake occurred because the forensic technician was unfamiliar with Dobrinja and under pressure to work fast.¹³⁸⁴⁵ Despite this error, Sabljica remained of the view that the second shell came from the east, while the third shell came from the northeast.¹³⁸⁴⁶ Both he and KDZ166 testified that the direction of fire was not determined on the basis of this sketch, nor was it indicated on it; rather it was determined on the basis of the traces at the scene.¹³⁸⁴⁷

4146. Shortly after the shelling, having heard about it from a journalist, Rose went to the incident site and ordered that the crater analysis be carried out.¹³⁸⁴⁸ The UNPROFOR determined that between 11 a.m and 11.02 a.m on 4 February 1994, three 120 mm mortar rounds exploded in Dobrinja.¹³⁸⁴⁹ The UNPROFOR found that the “presumed” origin of fire for all three shells was the

It also records the damage at the scene as follows: shell one, hole on the tar lane; shell two, bedroom window; shell three, in front of a building. See P1597 (UNPROFOR report, 4 February 1994), e-court p.1. Thomas stated that based on his experience and under the circumstances the analysis conducted by the UNPROFOR appears to have been conducted in a thorough and professional manner. See P1558 (Witness statement of Francis Roy Thomas dated 13 May 2009), paras. 13, 108.

SRK-held territory, in the general location of Lukavica.¹³⁸⁵⁰ Akashi informed journalists on 5 February 1994 that the UNPROFOR had confirmed that the mortar attack in Dobrinja on 4 February definitely originated from the SRK-held territory.¹³⁸⁵¹ Rose also telephoned the VRS and wrote letters of protest to the Accused and Mladić.¹³⁸⁵²

4147. KDZ450 who was with the UNPROFOR in Sarajevo between 1993 and 1994, testified that this incident demonstrated to him that the SRK targeted the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹³⁸⁵³ On cross-examination, when put to him that Dobrinja was a military target given the presence of the 155th Brigade, KDZ450 acknowledged that Dobrinja was on the confrontation line but maintained that the shells arrived in a residential area and caused only civilian casualties.¹³⁸⁵⁴

4148. Higgs went to the incident site and due to the scene not being well preserved decided to base his conclusions on the reports and data collected at the time of the incident.¹³⁸⁵⁵ Having examined the CSB Sarajevo report, Higgs testified that he had no reason to doubt any of the findings, including the fact that the mortars were of 120 mm calibre and that the direction of fire was from the east.¹³⁸⁵⁶ He also observed that the distance between the three rounds on the ground was within a 40 metre radius, which can be expected from one barrel firing all three rounds.¹³⁸⁵⁷ Given the time delay between the firing of the rounds, as provided by the witness statement he had at his disposal, Higgs concluded that the aim of the fire was to harass those present at the incident site, disrupt whatever was going on, and prevent movement.¹³⁸⁵⁸ According to Higgs, this was a classic example of a harassing mission.¹³⁸⁵⁹

¹³⁸⁵⁰ Without referring to a specific crater, the UNPROFOR report lists the angle of descent as 1200 mils, angle of approach as 2000 mils, and the maximum range of 3500 to 4000 metres. Hogan visited the incident site in 2001 with several victims of the shelling¹³⁸⁶⁰ and on the basis of their recollections recorded the GPS co-ordinates and filmed the locations where two of the shells impacted on 4 February 1994.¹³⁸⁶¹ He conceded that one of the victims made a mistake in relation to one of those locations, namely the point of impact for the shell that landed on or near the playground in the immediate vicinity of Oslobođilaca Sarajeva street, explaining that seven years had passed after the incident and that at the time of the incident this victim probably would not have been in a position to even see the precise point of impact.¹³⁸⁶²

4150. Zorica Subotić visited the incident site on 17 September 2010.¹³⁸⁶³ She confirmed that the CSB Sarajevo team incorrectly marked the position of north on their sketch, meaning that the fire coming from what was in fact the direction of north-northeast would look on the sketch as originating from the direction of east-southeast, namely the SRK positions.¹³⁸⁶⁴ In Subotić's opinion all of the 120 mm mortar shells that exploded on 4 February 1994 in fact originated from ABiH-held positions to the north and northeast.¹³⁸⁶⁵

4151. Focusing first on the shell that struck the building at no 8 Oslobođilaca Sarajeva street and for which CSB Sarajevo conducted no analysis,¹³⁸⁶⁶ Subotić observed that the façade of the

The Chamber notes that it is not clear who the victims in question are from the evidence before it. However, it is clear that they were not witnesses in this case. The Chamber notes that Subotić provides in her expert report that two of those victims were Sabahudin Ljuša and Fata Spahić. Subotić based her conclusions on the documents produced by CSB Sarajevo and the remaining physical evidence at the scene in 2010. There were no remains of the craters, however. Zorica Subotić, T. 38437 (16 May 2013).

On cross-examination, it was put to Subotić that she was misleading the Chamber when she asserted that the CSB findings were inaccurate based on this error as their ballistics experts did not use the sketch in any of their official calculations. She explained that she was not trying to mislead anyone and that without a correct reference point in the sketch and given the limited nature of the CSB investigation documentation it would be impossible to reconstruct and verify their results. ¹³⁸⁶⁶ Subotić contended that it was suspicious that no analysis was conducted for this impact point as, according to her, and contrary to the CSB Sarajevo report, one person was in fact killed and five were injured by this shell. Subotić then lists the names of the relevant casualties in her report. D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), p. 112. However, it appears that building was not repaired after the incident and proceeded to argue that its physical appearance indicates that the shell landed with a large angle of descent and that it originated from the right-hand side of the building, namely to the northeast.¹³⁸⁶⁷ Despite having conceded that she could not determine an accurate origin of fire given the lack of sufficiently preserved evidence, Subotić argued that the UNPROFOR findings for this impact were not accurate and further that the shell was fired from ABiH-held territory.¹³⁸⁶⁸

4152. Subotić determined that the shell that impacted at number 3 Mihajla Pupina street landed in front of a retaining wall, on pavement extending about 80 to 90 centimetres into the back yard.¹³⁸⁶⁹ Whilst the pavement had been repaired, she thought that the building's façade remained in the same condition as it had been when contemporaneously photographed by the CSB Sarajevo.¹³⁸⁷⁰ She then argued that Sabljica's description of the size of the shrapnel marks exceeded the size of the pavement which led her to conclude that his observations were not based on any physical evidence.¹³⁸⁷¹ Subotić also thought that Sabljica's crater analysis was incorrect and that this particular shell was fired from ABiH-held positions approximately to the north of Dobrinja.¹³⁸⁷² She argued that the shell fragment dispersion pattern on the building's façade disapproved Sabljica's findings, as there were fewer shrapnel marks on the left-hand side of the building, which would not have been the case had the shell originated from the direction of Lukavica.¹³⁸⁷³ She also disparaged the CSB's use of a magnetic compass and a map to accurately determine the origin, and argued that Subotić reached this conclusion simply on the basis that the people she lists lived on the Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street itself (their addresses are listed in the report). Given that the evidence shows that a large number of people were congregating in the area outside, queuing for humanitarian aid, the Chamber finds Subotić's assumption unacceptable. It shows her propensity to ignore contemporaneous evidence in order to reach completely unreasonable conclusions based on assumptions. This seriously brings into question her credibility as a legitimate and reliable expert witness.

On cross-examination, it was put to Subotić that she was misleading the Chamber as the shell would have landed at a downwards angle of 45 degrees or greater, and that shrapnel would have been dispersed at the scene accordingly and not on a horizontal axis. She responded that her point was simply that most of the shrapnel damage would have to have been on one side of the point of impact, dependant upon origin. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38452–38455 (16 May 2013); P6323 (Diagram depicting point of impact of shell marked by Zorica Subotić).

the stabiliser that was recovered at this site did not support their findings.¹³⁸⁷⁴ Subotić also argued that the soot traces on the snow at this location, were misinterpreted by the CSB and that Sabljica wrongly marked the origin of fire during his testimony before the Chamber.¹³⁸⁷⁵

4153. Coming to the final impact point, Subotić argued that the material before her indicated that two shells landed there, thus bringing the total to four mortar shells involved in the incident.¹³⁸⁷⁶ She used photographs and footage from the CSB Sarajevo investigation to argue that some of the damage to the footpath and the soil traces around it could not have been caused by a singular shell exploding.¹³⁸⁷⁷ Using these soil traces and the damage to the footpath in a contemporaneous CSB photograph, she calculated that the second shell came from an incoming azimuth of 220 to 240 degrees or smaller, meaning that it had been fired from the northeast and that only ABiH forces could have fired it.¹³⁸⁷⁸ While noting that the stabiliser was found at the scene fully embedded into the soil with an almost vertical angle, Subotić thought that the shell could not have been fired at an almost maximum angle of elevation since the marks on the footpath did not correspond to that angle, indicating thus that the stabiliser changed its position when it penetrated the soil.¹³⁸⁷⁹ She

Subotić argued that contemporaneous photographs of the scene show that parts of the stabiliser not in contact with the surface were deformed, indicating that the stabiliser had changed its position on impact, having already hit the surface and then rebounded to its final resting place. According to Subotić, this meant that it could not have been of use in determining origin of fire. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38276 (14 May 2013); D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 August 2012), pp. 127–128; P1972 (Photographs re shelling of Dobrinja on 4 February 1994), e-court p. 3; D896 (Video footage of shelling of Dobrinja on 4 February 1994, Markale on 5 February 1994, and Markale on 28 August 1995).

On cross-examination, Sabljica was asked by the Accused to mark the incoming direction of fire on a contemporaneous photograph of the scene. He marked it with an arrow, but did not align the arrow with the impact point. See Mirza Sabljica, T. 7797–7798 (12 October 2010); D745 (Photograph re shelling of Dobrinja on 4 February 1994 marked by Mirza Sabljica). The Chamber notes, however, that Sabljica was simply asked during cross-examination to indicate direction of fire, not to be absolutely accurate or align that direction of fire to the actual point of impact.

The Chamber notes, however, that the CSB Sarajevo photograph she used to come to this conclusion is not sufficiently clear to be able to determine with certainty where the arrow is pointing exactly.

Using a map of the disposition of forces in Sarajevo, Subotić conjectured that the boundary line between the SRK and the ABiH was about 239 degrees, and that given the hilly terrain to the northeast of Dobrinja, in her opinion it was impossible that the SRK would have operated a 120 mm mortar battery in that area. She further opined that the video footage taken by the CSB Sarajevo team shows that the stabiliser was marked with the roman letter N, which would not have been the case if it belonged to an SRK shell. D3542 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995", 15 acknowledged, however, that it was practically impossible to verify the accuracy of Sabljica's findings in relation to this shell with any precision, due to the photograph of his investigation being a side view of the footpath and crater.¹³⁸⁸⁰

4154. Noting that the number of casualties recorded in relation to the incident varied, Subotić highlighted the casualty list provided by Eterović where some victims' names are listed among both the injured and the dead, and argued that these mistakes indicate that the investigation was conducted 'sloppily'.¹³⁸⁸¹ She further challenged references made to Džavarhal Nehrua street within the CSB Sarajevo report arguing that there was intent to cover up the inconsistent presence of an eye-witness at the actual scene of the incident, namely the playground near the Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street.¹³⁸⁸²

4155. On cross-examination, Subotić agreed that the mortar shells would have to have been fired with a minimum of charge "three" as this is when a mortar shell penetrates the ground and one of the shell stabilisers had been recovered fully embedded in the footpath.¹³⁸⁸³ However, she did not want to accept, without first consulting the relevant firing tables, that the corresponding minimum firing distance for the shells would therefore have to have been roughly 600 metres.¹³⁸⁸⁴

4156. Galić testified that he did not order an attack on civilians waiting for humanitarian aid in Dobrinja on the day of the incident.¹³⁸⁸⁵ He testified that he was informed of the incident on the day it took place and that he ordered all of the relevant units in the area to report on what happened.¹³⁸⁸⁶ The SRK Command's regular combat report for 4 February 1994, sent at 6 p.m., states that the UNPROFOR did not send any kind of protest in relation to the incident but that

“after checking, it was established that no fire had been opened” by the SRK in Dobrinja.¹³⁸⁸⁷ Galić commented on the report stating that the UNPROFOR did not submit a protest at that time because it did not have enough information about the incident.¹³⁸⁸⁸ To Galić this incident was simply one of the examples of BiH propaganda directed against the SRK, with the Sarajevo media reporting in a politicised manner.¹³⁸⁸⁹ He further opined that UN protests during the conflict were not based on accurate and precise information.¹³⁸⁹⁰

4157. Dragomir Milošević also testified that the SRK did not open fire on Dobrinja on the day of the incident. Instead, the SRK used the period 4 to 10 February 1994 only to reinforce its positions and did not respond to ABiH “provocations”.¹³⁸⁹¹ Savo Simić stated that at the time of the incident all of the artillery weapons of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade were under the control of the UNPROFOR who would record each instance of an artillery weapon being fired.¹³⁸⁹² Dušan Škrba testified that there were twelve 120 mm mortar weapons in his command,¹³⁸⁹³ but that his forces did not open fire on 4 February 1994 as these weapons could not have been fired without his order, which he did not give, and because there were “UNPROFOR observers” at his command who would have heard the firing of shells.¹³⁸⁹⁴ He also testified that neither he nor the members of his unit ever intended to cause civilian casualties or terrorise civilians on the Muslim side.¹³⁸⁹⁵ On cross-examination, Škrba described Dobrinja as a neighbourhood that was exclusively residential.¹³⁸⁹⁶ He disagreed with the Prosecution’s proposition that the UNMOs who were based with his brigade only had information about attacks if informed by local SRK commanders.¹³⁸⁹⁷

4158. The Chamber has received medical records indicating that on 4 February 1994, 26 injured persons were received at Dobrinja Hospital as a result of this shelling incident.¹³⁸⁹⁸ A number of these victims were transferred to Koševo Hospital, including Sabahudin Ljuša who was transferred to the Children's ward,¹³⁸⁹⁹ and "Muškija Pribinja" who was taken directly to surgery after receiving first aid at the scene.¹³⁹⁰⁰ The available medical records indicate that eight people died as a result of the shelling incident in Dobrinja on 4 February 1994 and that 18 persons were injured.¹³⁹⁰¹

4159. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber also took judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts which go to the origin of fire and other controversial issues in this incident: (i) on 4 February 1994 around 11 a.m. three mortar shells struck a residential neighbourhood in Dobrinja killing at least eight civilians including a child and injuring at least 18 people including two children;¹³⁹⁰² (ii) three shells struck civilians engaged in peaceful activities;¹³⁹⁰³ (iii) the origin of fire was SRK-held territory in relation to the two shells that were investigated in detail;¹³⁹⁰⁴ and (iv) the first shell to strike formed part of the same attack and therefore also originated in SRK territory.¹³⁹⁰⁵

4160. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts recounted above, the Chamber is convinced that, on 4 February 1994, three 120 mm mortar shells struck two of the buildings and the playground in the immediate vicinity of Oslobodilaca Sarajeva and Mihajla Pupina streets in Dobrinja. The Chamber is also convinced that these shells struck near persons who had gathered at the incident site to receive humanitarian aid. The Chamber does not accept Subotić's evidence that there were actually four 120 mm mortar shells. Her conclusion was based principally on secondary evidence, such as traces and debris she identified in the contemporaneous video footage and photographs and is therefore not as reliable as the de visu examination that was conducted by CSB Sarajevo and the UNPROFOR. Furthermore, the Chamber considers, as discussed above, that her proposition that one of the two recovered 120mm mortar stabilisers was engraved with a Roman letter "N" is blatantly false. The Chamber also does not accept Subotić's insinuations that references made to a nearby street contained within the amalgamated CSB Sarajevo report are indicative of some sort of conspiracy to pervert the truth. This insinuation simply ignores the evidence to the contrary, namely that the other CSB Sarajevo reports, including the official and on-site investigation reports, all refer to the incident site as being in the immediate vicinity of Oslobodilaca Sarajeva and Mihajla Pupina streets. The Chamber considers that this type of analysis, and Subotić's readiness to resort to conspiracy theory has seriously damaged her credibility both generally and specifically with respect to this incident.

4161. Relying on the medical evidence and the CSB Sarajevo report discussed above, the Chamber finds that the explosions caused by the mortar attack on 4 February 1994 resulted in 26 casualties, eight of whom died as a result.

4162. In terms of the direction of fire, the Chamber recalls that both the CSB Sarajevo and the UNPROFOR investigators came to the scene on the day of the incident and were thus able to observe traces of the impact, and further that they all arrived at the same general direction of fire, namely towards Lukavica, to the east of Dobrinja. The Chamber also notes that Higgs examined the incident site and the CSB Sarajevo investigation and concluded that there were no reasons to doubt any of their findings. In contrast, Subotić concluded that the fire came from the direction of the north and northeast. The Chamber however finds her conclusions in relation to this incident unreliable as they were mainly based on the analysis of secondary evidence or the remains of traces that were found at the scene in 2010 and thus are highly speculative. For example, having conceded that due to a lack of examinable evidence she could not accurately determine the origin of fire in relation to the impact site on Oslobodilaca Sarajeva street, she nevertheless concluded that the UNPROFOR findings were not accurate and that ultimately this shell, like the other shells, was fired from ABiH-held territory.

4163. As for the origin of fire, the Chamber notes that both the CSB Sarajevo and the UNPROFOR investigators concluded that it came from the SRK-held positions in the general direction of Lukavica. Given the location of the incident site and the fact that the confrontation line in the direction of Lukavica was between 350 to 400 metres away from that location,¹³⁹⁰⁶ the Chamber is also convinced that the shells originated in the SRK-held territory. In this respect, the Chamber recalls that Subotić agreed with the Prosecution that the 120 mm mortar shells related to this incident would have to have been fired with a minimum of charge 3 and that this would have increased the minimum firing distance for the shells.¹³⁹⁰⁷ This places the origin of fire firmly within SRK-held territory.

4164. As recounted above, a number of SRK witnesses, including Galić and Milošević, testified that no fire was opened by the SRK on Dobrinja on the day of the incident.¹³⁹⁰⁸ The Chamber cannot accept this evidence, however, in light of the evidence analysed above, as well as the evidence about the general situation in Dobrinja and the shelling that its civilian inhabitants were exposed to on a regular basis during the conflict.¹³⁹⁰⁹

4165. In terms of the nature of the area and the status of the victims, the Chamber recalls that the incident site was a residential neighbourhood in Dobrinja where humanitarian aid was being unloaded and distributed. The Chamber also recalls that there were no ABiH military units close to the site.¹³⁹¹⁰ In addition, the 26 casualties who died or were wounded in this incident were all civilians, including three children, and were all engaged in peaceful activities. The Chamber concludes based on the location of the incident, the lack of ongoing combat and military presence at the time, and the nature of the activity in which the victims were engaged, that the ultimate nature of the area and the population that was gathered on or near the playground on 4 February 1994 was civilian. The Chamber recalls that there was a time delay between the three rounds and is thus convinced that the purpose of fire was to harass those present and prevent movement rather than to destroy any target. The Chamber also has no doubt that the SRK deliberately targeted whomever may have gathered in this residential area.

¹³⁹⁰⁹ See paras. 3783, 4059. The Chamber also recalls here Sladoje's testimony that the ABiH used "practically all" civilian buildings in Dobrinja for its purposes, thereby implying that most if not all of Dobrinja was considered to be a military target by the SRK soldiers and officers in the area. Similar attitude was exhibited by Simić. See paras. 4049, 4101.

(C) Stari Grad (Old Town)

4166. Three of the shelling incidents alleged in the Indictment took place in Stari Grad (Old Town) of Sarajevo.¹³⁹¹¹ Two of those happened in the area of the Markale market (namely Scheduled Incidents G.8 and G.19) and one in Baščaršija fleamarket (Scheduled Incident G.9). According to the Prosecution, these incidents were consistent with the pattern of SRK attacks on Stari Grad, the aim of which was to target large gatherings of civilians or locations with a significant number of civilians present.¹³⁹¹²

4168. The Chamber heard that in 1992 the SRK artillery firing plan included Baščaršija and other areas in its vicinity, although Galić explained that it was merely a plan in case of possible attacks by the ABiH and therefore did not mean that fire was in fact opened on the areas mentioned.¹³⁹¹⁸ In May 1995, most of Stari Grad was placed under “fire control” by the SRK, which, according to Savo Simić, meant that the SRK endeavoured to improve its tactical positions so that it could control the ABiH fire in that area; in other words, it did not mean that fire was in fact opened on the area.¹³⁹¹⁹

4169. Galić testified that the SRK endeavoured not to target certain areas, such as Bašćaršija, as it was a symbol of Sarajevo.¹³⁹²⁰ He did not deny, however, that the SRK forces shelled Stari Grad, noting that it was a municipality that covered a wide area, including Bistrik, from which fire was opened on the SRK forces.¹³⁹²¹ Contrary to Galić's evidence, as discussed above,¹³⁹²² by 28 May 1992, Mladić had already ordered that Velešići and Bašćaršija be shelled.¹³⁹²³

(1) Confrontation lines in the area

4170. The Chamber has already described some of the confrontation lines that surrounded Stari Grad in Sections IV.B.1.b.iii.A and C: Zmaja od Bosne Street (formerly Vojvode Putnika) and Sredrenik and shall not repeat the same evidence here.

4171. It suffices to recall that the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade and the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK held the area of Grbavica and the positions south and east of Grbavica towards Stari Grad.¹³⁹²⁴ The area from Vrbanja Bridge towards the Jewish cemetery up to the foot of Debelo Brdo was held by the 3rd Infantry Battalion of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK.¹³⁹²⁵ This battalion was positioned on the western side of the Jewish cemetery while the ABiH was stationed along its northeastern wall—the two sides were separated only by the width of the cemetery.¹³⁹²⁶ The 1st Romanija Brigade (and later the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade) held

Trebević, with the exception of the area to its north and northwest, lay in those brigades' zone of responsibility, thus covering also the areas of Bistrič Kula and Vidikovac.¹³⁹²⁸ The ABiH held positions on the northern base of Mt. Trebević.¹³⁹²⁹ In addition to the eastern side of the Jewish cemetery, it also controlled Debelo Brdo and Čolina Kapa.¹³⁹³⁰

4172. As far as positions to the north of the city are concerned, the 7th Infantry Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade of the SRK was in control of the nine kilometre long confrontation line in the Kadrijina Kuća—Mala Tvrđava—Špicasta Stijena—Pašino Brdo—Velika Tvrđava—Pašino Brdo—Donje Bioško—Faletići—Zečija Glava—Boriže—Tabakovo Guvno sector.¹³⁹³¹ Blaško Rašević, a commander of a platoon and later a company in Mrkovići,¹³⁹³² which was part of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade,¹³⁹³³ testified that from 5 April 1992 his platoon, as well as another Mrkovići platoon, took up positions on the Velika Tvrđava—Špicasta Stijena axis and

(2) Markale Market, 5 February 1994 (Scheduled Incident G.8)

4173. The Indictment alleges that, on 5 February 1994, a 120 mm mortar shell hit the crowded open-air market called “Markale” situated in Old Town, killing 66 people and wounding over 140.¹³⁹³⁶ It further alleges that the origin of fire was VRS/SRK-held territory approximately to the north-northeast.¹³⁹³⁷ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution claims that the mortar shell struck the market between 12 and 12:30 p.m. and exploded when it hit the ground.¹³⁹³⁸ In response, the Accused puts forth three different arguments: (i) the shelling incident was staged; (ii) alternatively, it was orchestrated by the Bosnian Muslim side; (iii) in a further alternative, he argues that the evidence presented by the Prosecution does not allow for a conclusion beyond reasonable doubt that the shell was fired by the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹³⁹³⁹

4174. In late January and early February 1994 the situation in Sarajevo was difficult as the Bosnian Muslim side had rejected the Owen-Stoltenberg plan and there was no explicit threat by NATO to use force against the Bosnian Serbs.¹³⁹⁴⁰ Thus, neither side had any reason to restrain its military activity, resulting in a period characterised by a high level of shelling and sniping, as well as tight controls on utilities and convoys.¹³⁹⁴¹ On 26 January 1994, Galić ordered the SRK units to “continue with offensive activities and liberate the Serb part of the city of Sarajevo”.¹³⁹⁴²

(a) The incident

4175. On 5 February 1994, around noon, many people were shopping in the Markale open-air market.¹³⁹⁴³ Around 12:20 p.m. a projectile exploded at the market.¹³⁹⁴⁴ The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that Witness AF testified in the Galić case that between 12 and 12:30 p.m. he heard the sound of a heavy weapon like a mortar being fired from behind Špicasta Stijena, at Mrkovići.¹³⁹⁴⁵ It also took judicial notice of the fact that Vahid Karavelić, commander of the 1st ABiH Corps, testified in the Galić case that the nearest location of a brigade headquarters appeared approximately 300 metres away from the market.¹³⁹⁴⁶

(b) BiH MUP investigation

4176. The CSB Sarajevo team that investigated this shelling included, inter alios, an investigative judge; ballistics experts Sabljica and Čavčić; a crime technician, Bešić; and a criminal investigator, Kučanin.¹³⁹⁴⁷ The team arrived at the scene at around 1:20 p.m., after all the bodies had been cleared away and only a few people remained in the area.¹³⁹⁴⁸ The market was already secured by the police, the stalls were overturned and body parts, human tissue, and bloodstains could be seen.¹³⁹⁴⁹ The site was video-recorded and sketched, and Bešić took photographs of the scene.¹³⁹⁵⁰ The team also went to the morgue and video-recorded the bodies of the victims.¹³⁹⁵¹

4178. To determine the direction of fire, Sabljica and Čavčić used the central axis method because, according to Sabljica, that was the only method that could be used in this case.¹³⁹⁵⁵ The projectile, the stabiliser of which was found in the centre of the crater,¹³⁹⁵⁶ was found to be a 120 mm calibre mortar shell that came from the north-northeast, that is, 18 degrees from the north

(plus or minus five degrees).¹³⁹⁵⁷ It was activated at the moment of contact with the asphalt surface.¹³⁹⁵⁸ The depth between the asphalt surface and the top of the stabiliser in the crater was nine centimetres, but the team did not measure the depth of the crater once the stabiliser was removed from it.¹³⁹⁵⁹ Instead, this measurement was taken the next day by Zečević.¹³⁹⁶⁰ Sabljica also explained that his team did not try to determine what type of charge was used for this shell as this was very difficult and also not necessary in order to determine the direction of fire.¹³⁹⁶¹

reliability of the chain of custody.¹³⁹⁶⁵ Bešić also testified that the markings on the stabiliser indicated it had been manufactured in the Krušik Factory in Valjevo, Serbia, in 1987.¹³⁹⁶⁶ He measured the stabiliser in the courtroom and stated that it was around 17 centimetres long, which was some three centimetres less than what could be seen in the photograph of the same stabiliser taken by his team back in 1994.¹³⁹⁶⁷ He explained this difference by the fact that the stabiliser was so damaged that it had to be held at an angle when photographed.¹³⁹⁶⁸

4180. As for the origin of fire, Kučanin testified that it was established that the shell had come from the direction of Mrkovići but did not provide any further explanation as to how this conclusion was reached.¹³⁹⁶⁹ Bešić compiled a criminal technician's report the day after the incident, without having access to Sabljica's ballistics reports, wherein he stated that the shell was fired from the "aggressor's position", basing this conclusion on the direction from which the mortar shell came as established by the ballistic experts on the scene.¹³⁹⁷⁰ He did confirm, however, that in the part of the town from which the shell came, the confrontation lines were such that the SRK and ABiH were close to each other.¹³⁹⁷¹

4181. Sabljica explained that he and Čavčić did not establish the angle of descent, the range of fire, or the origin of fire that day, but he confirmed that another team went to Markale the following day, 6 February, and that this team included Čavčić, Zečević, and an investigative judge.¹³⁹⁷² Zečević's team brought the stabiliser back to the scene and placed it into the crater by first removing a few little stones that had fallen into the hole.¹³⁹⁷³ Zečević then removed the stabiliser from the crater once more and measured the depth of the penetration of the stabiliser, which he found to be at 25 centimetres.¹³⁹⁷⁴ He used this depth to determine the angle of descent, as well as the direction and the origin of fire.¹³⁹⁷⁵ Within 36 hours of starting the investigation, Zečević and his team had compiled a report in which they confirmed that the shell came from the direction of north-northeast, that is, 18 degrees from the north, plus or minus five degrees, with an angle of descent of 60 degrees, plus or minus five degrees.¹³⁹⁷⁶ They also determined that the projectile was a 120 mm shell that detonated upon contact with the ground¹³⁹⁷⁷ and that its destructive power corresponded to the number of victims and the type of injuries they suffered in this incident.¹³⁹⁷⁸ His report concluded that, depending on the charges used to launch it, the shell could have come from six different areas, the first one being between 1,640 and 1,840 metres away¹³⁹⁷⁹ and the last one between 6,170 and 6,546 metres away; only the first one was in the territory held by the ABiH in the area of Grdonj Hill.¹³⁹⁸⁰

¹³⁹⁷⁹ The range in the distances outlined here takes into account the range in the established angle of descent. In other words, if the angle of descent at the lowest spectrum, namely 55 degrees, and the shell was fired on charge one, then it came from 1,840 metres away. If however the angle of descent was 65 degrees, then it came from 1,640 metres away. Zečević used the same method for all other points he listed. The ranges were therefore as follows: on charge two, between 2,972 and 2,577 metres away, on charge three between 4,120 and 3,622 metres away, on charge four between 5,110 and 4,570 metres away, on charge five between 5,979 and 5,500 metres away, and on charge six between 6,546 and 6,170 metres away. These values also show that the higher the angle of descent, the shorter the distance the shell has to travel on a particular charge.

The Chamber notes that, unlike the English version, the BCS version of P2317, at e-court page 17, contains a map on which Zečević marked the six locations and that the first location is near Grdonj, which was in the ABiH zone of responsibility during the conflict. See para. 3856. (c) UN investigations

4182. On the day of the incident, Harland was at the Sarajevo airport, meeting with Krajišnik and Koljević.¹³⁹⁸¹ Upon receiving news of the incident, he immediately sent a local doctor to the scene while he returned to UN headquarters to make contact with Rose and debrief him once he heard back from the local doctor and the investigators.¹³⁹⁸² Rose was in Mostar on the day of the incident; on his return to Sarajevo the next day, the BiH government had already accused Bosnians Serbs of firing the shell, which was denied through a statement by the Accused, wherein he accused the Bosnian Muslims of firing on their own people.¹³⁹⁸³

4183. The UN conducted two sets of investigations into the incident.¹³⁹⁸⁴ The first investigation was conducted on the day of the incident and consisted of three separate crater analyses, done by FreBat's Major Cazaux, Sector Sarajevo's Captain Verdy, and Major Russell respectively; the second investigation took place on 11 through 13 February 1994 and was conducted by another UN team, which performed seven different crater analyses.¹³⁹⁸⁵

4184. Cazaux's team excavated the stabiliser fin from the crater and performed the first crater analysis, finding that the bearing of the shell was 620 mils (34.8 degrees).¹³⁹⁸⁶ It also noted that the fin belonged to a 120 mm mortar round and that it was buried approximately eight centimetres below the surface of the asphalt.¹³⁹⁸⁷

4185. Verdy conducted the second analysis for the UN and determined that the bearing of the shell was somewhere between 800 and 1,000 mils (45 to 56.2 degrees), while its angle of descent was 1,400 mils (78.7 degrees) and its maximum range somewhere between 2,000 and 3,500 metres; he further concluded that a 120 mm shell hit Markale market at 12:10 p.m., by first impacting on a market stall and then hitting the ground from short range, low-angle fire.¹³⁹⁸⁸ He informed his command that because of the prior impact on the market stall, the analysis was very difficult.¹³⁹⁸⁹

4186. Major John Russell, who—at the relevant time, was deployed as Military Assistant to Sergio de Mello, the representative of the Secretary-General in Sarajevo, and possessed some experience in crater analysis¹³⁹⁹⁰—was asked to go to the scene of the explosion by UNPROFOR Chief of Staff Ramsey.¹³⁹⁹¹ He arrived at the incident site at about 4:30 p.m. on 5 February 1994, after the above two analyses had been completed, and observed blood and human remains, as well as the crater and a thoroughly swept impact site.¹³⁹⁹² Concluding that the round had come in from east-northeast, at a bearing of 450 mils (25.3 degrees) and with an angle of descent between 1,200 and 1,300 mils (67.5 and 73.1 degrees), he was struck by how steep the angle of descent must have been in order to clear the adjacent large building, which led him to believe that it had come in from a location close to the crater.¹³⁹⁹³ At the time, he concluded that it was not possible to determine which side had fired the round as the minimum/maximum range straddled the confrontation line.¹³⁹⁹⁴ That evening, he noted in his diary that he believed that the ABiH had “shot at themselves” given the close distance from which the round must have been fired.¹³⁹⁹⁵ When put to him that firing tables for 120 mm shells indicate that the angle of descent remains the same regardless the distance from which the shell is fired on different charges, Russell accepted that, had he known this, he would have likely come to a different conclusion about the distance from which the shell was fired at the time.¹³⁹⁹⁶

4187. On 8 February 1994, Rose met with ABiH representatives Generals Divjak and Hajrulahović, and Colonel Dakić at the ABiH headquarters, where he told them that evidence was emerging which indicated that the incident may have been caused by their side.¹³⁹⁹⁷ Rose conceded in cross-examination that after he told the Bosnian Muslim side of the results of the first UNPROFOR investigation, they decided to accept the cease-fire which they were initially refusing.¹³⁹⁹⁸

4188. Because of the significance of the incident, UNPROFOR headquarters in Zagreb ordered that a second investigation be carried out.¹³⁹⁹⁹ The UNPROFOR team was headed by Colonel Michel Gauthier and began its work on 11 February 1994.¹⁴⁰⁰⁰ The team also included, among others, Lieutenant Colonel Rumyantsev and technical advisers John Hamill and Eric Dubant.¹⁴⁰⁰¹ According to Gauthier, the team was instructed to confine its investigation to crater analysis and related technical aspects of the explosion.¹⁴⁰⁰² The investigation was concluded on 15 February and the team reported that the bearing of what was confirmed to have been a 120 mm mortar shell was somewhere between 330 and 420 mils (18.5 and 23.6 degrees).¹⁴⁰⁰³ The team further concluded that the crater analyses conducted by Cazaux and Verdy were flawed and that all of their associated findings were therefore questionable.¹⁴⁰⁰⁴ The report notes that Hamill measured the angle of descent at between 950 and 1,100 mils, (53.4 and 61.8 degrees), which meant that the shell must have come in from between 950 and 5,450 metres, depending on the charge used.¹⁴⁰⁰⁵ However, in its final conclusion, the team noted that the angle of descent measured by Hamill was not “beyond suspicion” due to the crater having been excavated.¹⁴⁰⁰⁶ Therefore, using the height of the buildings in the area to estimate that the minimum angle of descent necessary to clear those buildings was 870 mils (48.9 degrees), the team concluded that the possible range for the mortar shell was between 300 and 5,551 metres in the established direction of fire.¹⁴⁰⁰⁷

4189. In cross-examination, Gauthier confirmed that there were no known fixed mortar positions on the ABiH held-territory along the direction of fire from which the Markale shell had originated and in which the UNMOs were free to move about as they wished, whereas he could recall that the Bosnian Serb side had one such position in the identified area.¹⁴⁰⁰⁸ However, Gauthier also explained that mortars are mobile weapons that can be moved relatively quickly and leave little trace of their use and that, at the time, his team did not go to Bosnian Serb-held territory to investigate, given the extremely low probability of identifying a possible firing point.¹⁴⁰⁰⁹

4190. As noted above, Hamill was one of the technical advisers on the UNPROFOR team participating in the second investigation and was the person who prepared the UNPROFOR report.¹⁴⁰¹⁰ According to him, the team conducted a detailed technical analysis based on the physical evidence gathered, crater analysis, and interviews with eyewitnesses and the UN personnel who conducted the first investigation.¹⁴⁰¹¹ Hamill personally analysed the crater twice, the first time using a “fuse tunnel method”,¹⁴⁰¹² followed by the central axis method, through which he determined that the shell came from a north-northeasterly direction.¹⁴⁰¹³

4191. Hamill concluded that the explosion took place between 12:10 and 12:15 p.m. and was caused by a “conventional factory-produced 120 mm high explosive mortar bomb” which was launched from a 120 mm heavy mortar tube and which detonated on impact with the ground.¹⁴⁰¹⁴ The team was certain that the crater was formed by the explosion of a mortar shell.¹⁴⁰¹⁵ While it was determined that the shell came from the northeast, it was not possible for the investigators to determine the exact distance from the firing point, other than that it was fired between 300 and 5,551 metres from the point of detonation.¹⁴⁰¹⁶ Since this distance “clearly overlaps each side of the confrontation line” and since “both parties are known to have 120 mm mortars” the team concluded that the shell could have been fired by either side.¹⁴⁰¹⁷ The report clarifies that determining the origin of fire was impossible because a number of days had passed since the incident, during which the crater had been tampered with by various personnel making it impossible to determine the angle of descent accurately.¹⁴⁰¹⁸ Hamill testified that these findings were the most comprehensive possible, given the limitations of the methods used and events surrounding the incident, as well as the distance between the explosion and the frontlines of the warring parties.¹⁴⁰¹⁹ The team was certain, however, that the explosion was not caused by a “booby trap” and that the shell could not have been hand-launched from one of the nearby buildings.¹⁴⁰²⁰

4192. Hamill explained that the UNMOs who were interviewed during the investigation indicated that they had been denied freedom of movement by the VRS in the northeast part of Sarajevo since October 1993.¹⁴⁰²¹ Additionally, Hamill testified that he and others from the team personally met with Colonel Cvetković, the Commander of the SRK artillery regiment based in Mrkovići, to the north-northeast of Markale.¹⁴⁰²² According to Hamill, Cvetković confirmed that there were 120 mm mortars in Mrkovići but stated that his unit had not fired the round, while at the same time admitting that in the previous year it had fired 30,000 to 40,000 rounds into the city.¹⁴⁰²³ The Chamber also has in evidence a report on this meeting, sent to the VRS Main Staff and the SRK Command by Cvetković himself, which somewhat contradicts Hamill's evidence.¹⁴⁰²⁴ According to this report, Cvetković informed the VRS Main Staff and the SRK Command that he was told by Gauthier that the shell was of 120 mm calibre, that the angle of descent was not established with precision, and that the shell could have been fired by either side.¹⁴⁰²⁵ Cvetković also reported that he "strongly denied" that the shell was launched by the Serbian side, offered that the commission visit the "suspected place", and asserted that the SRK did not have 120 mm mortars on this part of the frontline.¹⁴⁰²⁶ According to Gauthier, however, the team did not go to the SRK-held territory in the established direction of fire because the area to be inspected was vast and the team judged that they would not be able to locate the position from where the mortar was fired.¹⁴⁰²⁷

4193. While the team was not shown any ABiH mortar positions, the Deputy Chief of Staff of Sector Sarajevo, Colonel Pardon, visited two such positions and an ammunition storage facility on 9 February 1994, which included what appeared to be locally-produced 120 mm mortar bombs.¹⁴⁰²⁸ However, according to Hamill, because Pardon was working off of the results of the first flawed analysis by UNPROFOR, he examined the wrong area.¹⁴⁰²⁹

4194. Having conducted the investigation outlined above, Hamill and his team concluded that there were six possible firing locations in a line along the established direction of fire, two of which were on the ABiH side of the frontline and four on the SRK side.¹⁴⁰³⁰ He confirmed on cross-examination that because it was impossible to determine the charge with which the mortar was fired, it was also not possible to say which of these locations the round came from.¹⁴⁰³¹ As for the fuse tunnel in Markale, Hamill claimed that, while not “completely intact” it was “intact enough” for him to estimate the angle of descent.¹⁴⁰³² In addition, he explained that the team also used other methods to establish the direction, and that there was a remarkable consistency across the results despite the fact that various investigators in his team did their tests independently and used different methods.¹⁴⁰³³

4195. Hamill also thought that the market hit was a fluke since a 120 mm mortar is not a terribly accurate weapon and no adjusting rounds were fired in this particular case.¹⁴⁰³⁴ He did concede, however, that if the market was indeed the target, the probability of hitting it would have been slightly higher the closer the market was to the weapon.¹⁴⁰³⁵ Having looked at the report prepared by Sabljica and the others at the CSB Sarajevo, Hamill confirmed that the methodology used was good and the results consistent with the results he and his team produced.¹⁴⁰³⁶

See Michael Rose, T. 7340–7342, 7359 (6 October 2010); John Hamill, T. 9692–9693 (13 December 2010). Joudry stated that the fact that much of the information was gathered hours or even days after the explosion (rather than from a hot undisturbed crater) in a public area, rendered many of the results questionable. He added that in other field situations, such analyses would have been discarded.

alternatively, the mortar shell could have been dropped from one of the surrounding buildings and the stabiliser inserted into the crater in the “first few moments of confusion”.¹⁴⁰⁴⁰

4197. Rose testified that following the incident he stated to the press that, as with the Dobrinja incident of the day before—which had been determined by the UNPROFOR to have been committed by the Serb side—it was most likely that the shell that landed on Markale market had also come from the Serb side.¹⁴⁰⁴¹ When shown the report prepared by Gauthier’s team, including the statement that the measured angles were not “beyond suspicion” because of the crater disturbance, Rose refused to comment saying that he was not involved in the investigation or the writing of the report.¹⁴⁰⁴²

4198. Harland wrote the portion of the UN’s weekly assessment relating to this incident in which he reported that 68 people were killed and up to 200 injured, almost all of whom were civilians.¹⁴⁰⁴³ While this assessment provided that the mortar bomb was fired from the northeast, from near the confrontation line, it also stated that it was not possible to say with certainty that it came from the Serb positions.¹⁴⁰⁴⁴ However, in Harland’s view, the circumstantial evidence pointed to the Serbs because (i) the incident resembled the incident of the day before which was confirmed by UNPROFOR experts as having been perpetrated by the Serbs; (ii) public claims made by Krajišnik after the incident that body parts had been flown in by the United States or that mannequins were used as a part of an elaborate hoax were completely bizarre and outlandish; and (iii) the Bosnian Muslims gave access to UNPROFOR to all areas and personnel in the course of the UNPROFOR’s investigation of this incident, whereas the Serbs did not.¹⁴⁰⁴⁵

Hill.¹⁴⁰⁴⁶ Hogan measured the distance to this point as being some 2,300 metres from Markale.¹⁴⁰⁴⁷ He also measured the distance to the confrontation line on the bearing of 18 degrees plus or minus five degrees, and testified that it was approximately 2,800 metres away.¹⁴⁰⁴⁸ Hogan also testified that Markale market was at an altitude of 556 metres above sea level while Špicasta Stijena was at 874 metres.¹⁴⁰⁴⁹ According to Adjudicated Fact 335, the distance between Markale market and the SRK side of the confrontation line to the north-northeast at the time of the incident was approximately 2,600 metres.¹⁴⁰⁵⁰

4200. The Chamber further recalls its findings in Section IV.B.1.b.iii.C: Sedrenik that, with the exception of a few days around mid-1994, Špicasta Stijena was in the zone of responsibility of the SRK, more precisely the 7th Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade and that the two sides were very close to each other.¹⁴⁰⁵¹ According to Gengo, the 7th Battalion was deployed at a higher altitude than the ABiH forces in the sector of Špicasta Stijena, Mala Tvrđava, and Velika Tvrđava, whereas the forces at Borije, Faletići, and other sectors were mostly at the same level.¹⁴⁰⁵² He further stated that the ABiH forces opposed to his battalion were in possession of a variety of infantry weapons, including 120 mm mortars, which changed positions often.¹⁴⁰⁵³ According to Gengo, the ABiH units fired at his battalion mostly from the area of Koševo and from the Jajce Barracks.¹⁴⁰⁵⁴

4201. As regards SRK mortar positions, Milorad Džida, then-Assistant Commander for Intelligence and Security of the 7th Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade,¹⁴⁰⁵⁵ stated that the SRK had two fixed mortar positions, one at Debelo Brdo and one at Mrkovići, each equipped with two 82 mm and two 120 mm mortars.¹⁴⁰⁵⁶ According to Gengo, there were no 120 mm mortars beyond Mrkovići¹⁴⁰⁵⁷ and Mrkovići mortars were used to respond to incoming fire from the Mala Tvrđava-Velika Tvrđava axis, whereas the Debelo Brdo mortars were used when the Faletići-Zečija Glava sectors were attacked; he asserted that the mortars' positions were not used on any other axes, including towards the city.¹⁴⁰⁵⁸

4202. Galić testified that he never issued an order for the SRK to fire on Markale on that day and also stated that he never received a report from subordinate units that any of them ordered this fire.¹⁴⁰⁵⁹ On the day of the incident, he ordered a strict ban on fire into urban parts of Sarajevo, in which he stated that “[r]ecently, despite explicit orders, certain units, individuals and artillery weapons’ crews have, arbitrarily and without approval, been opening fire on urban parts of Sarajevo, without need”.¹⁴⁰⁶⁰ As a result, according to the order, the units were to fire into urban parts of Sarajevo only when given a special order of the SRK Commander.¹⁴⁰⁶¹ In the order, Galić also mentioned that Sarajevo was the focus of media attention and that every action would be used for “propaganda purposes” against the Serbs.¹⁴⁰⁶²

4203. Similarly, on 7 February 1994, the Accused issued an order to the VRS Main Staff and the SRK, stating first that “there is evidence that Serbs are not responding in equal measure to Muslim artillery provocations—sometimes twenty to thirty, or even seventy times more” and ordering as a result that the VRS introduce “the strictest possible control of retaliation to provocations”, respond only when threatened and against military targets, and strictly at the commander’s commands.¹⁴⁰⁶³ Harland recalled that this order corresponded to his recollection of events after the Markale market incident, namely that an effective cease-fire did occur.¹⁴⁰⁶⁴

(e) Bosnian Serb calls for joint investigation

4204. Milovanović testified that, in the evening of 5 February 1994, Ramsey phoned him and claimed that the Serbs fired an 82 mm mortar shell killing 96 Muslims and wounding 213 civilians in Markale market.¹⁴⁰⁶⁵ Milovanović in turn asked that a joint commission, comprising of UN, ABiH, and SRK representatives, go to the scene the next day together with ballistics experts to ascertain objectively who was to blame.¹⁴⁰⁶⁶ Milovanović followed up on his exchange with Ramsey with an official request for the establishment of a joint commission addressed to Rose.¹⁴⁰⁶⁷ In the follow-up he stated that if this request was refused, the VRS would suspend all co-operation with UNPROFOR and humanitarian organisations and would block any movement of humanitarian organisations and foreign nationals until further notice.¹⁴⁰⁶⁸ Later that evening, Ramsey informed Milovanović that the Muslim side was refusing to participate in the joint commission.¹⁴⁰⁶⁹ At around 2 a.m. on 6 February 1994, Ramsey finally informed him that there would be no such joint investigation.¹⁴⁰⁷⁰ Thus, neither the Serb nor the Muslim side was represented during the UN investigations of this incident, although their liaison officers were “permitted to maintain contact with the investigation team”.¹⁴⁰⁷¹

4205. On 6 February 1994, Rose met Milovanović at Lukavica Barracks.¹⁴⁰⁷² During this meeting Milovanović adamantly denied that the shell had been fired from the Serb side and repeated his request for a joint investigative commission; however, Rose was “not interested” in the proposal.¹⁴⁰⁷³ In the days following this incident, Rose also met with the Accused, who denied Serb responsibility for the Markale incident.¹⁴⁰⁷⁴

4206. According to Milovanović, the Serb side carried out its own investigation into the incident under the leadership of Colonel Ljuban Kosovac, concluding that the explosion was not caused by a shell but rather by an explosive device detonated at ground level.¹⁴⁰⁷⁵ The Chamber has not received any other evidence about this investigation or its results. However, it did hear from Radojčić, who testified that he was appointed on 5 February 1994 to a mixed commission together with Lugonja and Cvetković, but that this commission was not allowed to work, and that he was then ordered by Dragomir Milošević to establish who had fired the shell.¹⁴⁰⁷⁶ He was subsequently transferred to the SRK Command in Lukavica in order to go to the scene to establish the trajectory of the shell, but the Muslim side did not allow it.¹⁴⁰⁷⁷

4207. Contrary to Milovanović and Radojčić, who testified about an internal SRK investigation, Džida and Gengo claimed that a mixed commission, including an UNPROFOR delegation, “cleared” the SRK upon inspection of SRK mortar positions on 6 February 1994.¹⁴⁰⁷⁸ According to Gengo and Džida, they were informed on 5 and 6 February 1994, respectively, by the command of the 1st Romanija Motorised Brigade that an inspection team escorted by UNPROFOR would come to visit the battalion.¹⁴⁰⁷⁹ This visit took place in the morning of 6 February 1994 and a report thereon was compiled by Jakovljević for the SRK.¹⁴⁰⁸⁰ Members of UNPROFOR and the VRS Main Staff arrived to inspect the Mrkovići mortar positions and while doing so spoke to those who were on duty on the day of the incident.¹⁴⁰⁸¹ Gengo could not remember anything about the members of the UN who attended this visit, including their number, nationality, and/or names while Džida remembered that one of the UNPROFOR officers was Russian.¹⁴⁰⁸² When confronted with daily combat reports of the SRK of 5, 6, and 8 February, which made no mention of any UNPROFOR visit, Gengo remained adamant that the visit did take place.¹⁴⁰⁸³ The Chamber notes that the UN report of the second UN investigation specifically states that the Mrkovići positions had not been visited by the UN in at least four months and that they could not be located with accuracy.¹⁴⁰⁸⁴

4208. Gordan Milinić, the Accused's Security Adviser at the time,¹⁴⁰⁸⁵ testified that when the Accused heard about the incident on the day, he expressed astonishment and said that it was "yet another Muslim hoax"; he then immediately called the "military experts" who explained to him that the shell could not have been fired from the SRK positions and that this was a hoax by the Muslim side.¹⁴⁰⁸⁶ On 6 February, the Accused met with Akashi and told him that it was the other side that fired the shell.¹⁴⁰⁸⁷ On 10 February 1994, the Accused gave a press statement calling for a joint commission to investigate the incident, reminding the public that the Muslim side had previously staged shelling incidents and stating that the Serbs had no reason to continue with peace negotiations until a joint commission was established and findings on the incident were made.¹⁴⁰⁸⁸

(f) Post-war investigations

4209. Years later, in January 2003, for the purposes of the Galić case,¹⁴⁰⁸⁹ Zečević carried out an additional analysis of the Markale market incident and concluded that the first three of the six possible charges could not have been used to fire the shell because the speed of the shell would have been slower than necessary to embed the stabiliser in the crater.¹⁴⁰⁹⁰ Using the angle of descent and having calculated the speed of impact of the shell,¹⁴⁰⁹¹ Zečević determined that it came from between 4,500¹⁴⁰⁹² and 6,400 metres away, and thus from three areas that would correspond to the three highest charges all of which were located in SRK-held territory.¹⁴⁰⁹³

4210. When asked by the Accused why he did not conduct this analysis back in 1994, Zečević explained that there had not been sufficient time.¹⁴⁰⁹⁴ He denied that he changed the original conclusion because he wanted to blame the Serbs for the incident or because he feared for his own safety.¹⁴⁰⁹⁵ When asked how it was possible that he alone was able to establish the origin of fire when all the other teams that worked on this incident could not, Zečević stated that the UNPROFOR investigators were soldiers and not engineers who worked on the design of the ammunition and its effects.¹⁴⁰⁹⁶

4211. Higgs also investigated this incident after the war. He visited the site years later but noted that it offered little evidence due to redevelopment.¹⁴⁰⁹⁷ Higgs agreed with Sabljica's report, noting that the UNPROFOR analyses corroborate it.¹⁴⁰⁹⁸ Like many others, Higgs also noted that while the calibre of the mortar and the direction of fire could be determined through crater examination, the distance from which the mortar was fired was more difficult to ascertain as a mortar can be fired using different charges.¹⁴⁰⁹⁹ According to Higgs, if the aim was to hit

Markale, this would not have been too difficult to achieve as it is easily identified from a distance by other landmarks, especially since parts of the town were "pre-recorded".¹⁴¹⁰⁰

4212. Higgs visited all six potential locations from which the shell could have been fired, depending on the charge used, including the area of Mrkovići located northeast of the incident site and in which he found many suitable sites for placing a mortar, as well as routes that could be used to supply it.¹⁴¹⁰¹ In his view, Mrkovići was the area from which the mortar shell was "possibly fired".¹⁴¹⁰² Elaborating further, Higgs explained that if the shell had been fired using two medium charges this would have placed the mortar in the area right on top of the confrontation line, which was not a good place for tactical reasons.¹⁴¹⁰³ If the two lowest charges had been used, this would have placed the mortar within the confrontation lines and within the built up area of Sarajevo; yet, no shell fire noise was reported.¹⁴¹⁰⁴ Finally, as for the two highest charges, which place the origin of fire farther behind the confrontation line, in Mrkovići, Higgs noted, like Zečević, that the stabiliser of a mortar shell fired on higher charges will usually embed itself into a crater, which is what happened in Markale.¹⁴¹⁰⁵ Furthermore, he had the statement of a witness who heard a mortar being fired in the direction of fire, which indicated that higher charges were used.¹⁴¹⁰⁶ According to Higgs, this witness¹⁴¹⁰⁷ was in a good position to hear mortar fire in the vicinity and "[d]ue to the fact of distance from mortar to target the weapon would probably have been firing on a medium to high charge and therefore making a louder noise".¹⁴¹⁰⁸ Since the attack consisted of only one round fired into the centre of the town, Higgs was of the view that its purpose was to "harass" the population.¹⁴¹⁰⁹ He also noted that, while possible to hit the market with a single “initially sighted round”, it is more likely that the market was “pre-recorded”.¹⁴¹¹⁰

4213. Zorica Subotić investigated this incident and based her conclusions on the previous investigation reports, photographs taken by the different investigation teams, a video recording of the incident and its aftermath, and her own site visit in 2010.¹⁴¹¹¹ In her opinion, the events as established by the various investigation teams do not correctly reflect what happened in Markale as the shell was most likely detonated on site through static activation by means of a timer or remote control device.¹⁴¹¹² She believed that the stabiliser could have been dug into the ground prior to the explosion, using a household tool such as a spade, and then compressed into the ground by the explosion.¹⁴¹¹³ In particular, it was Subotić’s contention that the shell could not have hit the market from the air without first destroying the stall roofs,¹⁴¹¹⁴ as the area was almost completely covered by stall roofs.¹⁴¹¹⁵ She further put forth that the material she examined suggested that the incident did not in fact occur “all at once” or “in some sort of natural process”.¹⁴¹¹⁶

Subotić further argued that a reconstruction of the stall lay-out based on video-recordings and police footage of the incident indicates that the sketches made at the scene do not correctly reflect the actual lay out at the time of the incident. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38298, 38317 (15 May 2013), T. 38564, 38565 (21 May 2013).

¹⁴¹¹⁶ Zorica Subotić, T. 38325–38326 (15 May 2013). Asserting that the incident did not occur naturally, Subotić pointed to the presence of: (i) persons with ID badges whom she asserted to have been officials of some sort; (ii) a military truck; and (iii) civilian vehicles arriving at the Maršala Tita street entrance of Markale market from the prohibited traffic direction of the one-way street, in what she identified as the immediate aftermath of the explosion. She inferred from the presence of the “officials” around the Markale market area that they “were at the location on assignment”. Similarly, from the “well-organised” evacuation of the wounded from both the Dženetića Čikma and Maršala Tita street market entrances she inferred that they “had known in advance that [they] should go in that direction” and that it was “also possible that taxi drivers had a work obligation to be at disposal in situations like that”. See D3551 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Attacks on the Sarajevo Area: Incidents at the Markale Market 5 February 1994 and 28 August 1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 51, 52, 54; P1986 (BiHTV Video footage of Markale, 5 February 1994); P6327 (Excerpt from video footage re shelling at Markale Market); Zorica Subotić, T. 38540–38543 (21 May 2013). The Chamber finds all these assertions to be pure speculation and completely groundless. Furthermore, contrary to Subotić’s suggestions, the Chamber considers the presence of officials on the scene, and of vehicles arriving from all sides, to be perfectly reasonable in the circumstances.

4214. Subotić also questioned whether the incident occurred at 12:15 p.m. as recorded in the UN report, preferring the time recorded by UNMO observers, namely 12:30 p.m..¹⁴¹¹⁷ She concluded that it was possible for the first wounded to have arrived at Koševo Hospital at 12:35 p.m..¹⁴¹¹⁸ Relying on the CSB Sarajevo report of 5 February 1994 as well as witness testimony from the Galić case, Subotić concluded that the evacuation of the dead and the wounded was completed around 12:50 p.m.,¹⁴¹¹⁹ whereas the Stari Grad police station was only informed of the explosion at 12:45 p.m..¹⁴¹²⁰ She thus inferred that the bodies of the dead and the wounded were removed from the site before the police were informed, and within no more than 20 minutes, while photographers and cameramen appeared at the scene almost immediately after the explosion.¹⁴¹²¹ Based on the way in which dead and mutilated bodies were shown to photographers and cameramen on the scene, the repeated showings of severed legs, a prosthetic leg seen in different locations around the market area, the speed at which the evacuations were carried out, and the fact that a military medical vehicle arriving at the scene already contained a dead body, Subotić concluded that the entire incident was planned, staged, and exploited for its impact through media coverage.¹⁴¹²² In her opinion, the staging of the incident required professional preparation, including placing dead bodies at the scene of the explosion to amplify the media impact.¹⁴¹²³

Subotić suggested, inter alia, that photo material depicting a prosthetic leg in a number of different locations around the market in the aftermath of the explosion, a woman seen assisting in the loading of dead bodies onto a truck who later on appeared at the Koševo Hospital dispensary giving an account of what she saw at the market to the reporter, and the fact that a woman seen to have been killed in the incident has not been officially recorded as a victim of the incident, lead to the conclusion that the incident and its documentation were staged. In relation to the prosthetic leg, Subotić did not deny that its owner was killed at Markale that day but claimed that the prosthesis differed from the prosthesis shown in the courtroom as belonging to Ćamil Begić. the surroundings of the crater should have been littered with soil, pebbles, asphalt, and everything else that may have been pushed out by the embedding of the stabiliser, while the stabiliser should have been partially or fully visible.¹⁴¹²⁵ However, when it was later cleared of the rubble, the Markale crater did not have the typical appearance of a crater penetrated by the full length of a stabiliser but rather looked like it had been manually dug out.¹⁴¹²⁶ She concluded, therefore, that a hole was dug out, after which the stabiliser was either buried in the ground prior to the explosion or placed there after the explosion.¹⁴¹²⁷ In her opinion, it was during the investigation of 6 February 1994 that a “bigger and wider crater was made in which the stabiliser was later lowered”.¹⁴¹²⁸ The Chamber notes that in her analysis of another, unscheduled incident, Subotić opined that the stabiliser of an 82 mm mortar shell must embed when fired at charges four to six.¹⁴¹²⁹ Furthermore, when providing an opinion on the second Markale incident of 28 August 1995, Subotić explained that it is “well-known” that a stabiliser, in that case a 120 mm stabiliser, would penetrate the ground when it is fired at a charge of three or higher, whereas shallow craters would be created by shells fired at low speed, such as on a charge one.¹⁴¹³⁰

4216. Subotić also argued that Zečević’s method of re-inserting the stabiliser into a disturbed crater to determine the angle of descent is not a recognised method as its accuracy is dependent on a variety of factors, which would make it impossible to determine a margin of error.¹⁴¹³¹ She also

pp. 85–87, 118, 169, Figure 66; P1711 (Video footage re shelling of Markale, 5–6 February 1994). Subotić also found it suspicious that the crater was initially seen in the video footage as fully covered with rubble but later on, after a 20 or 30 minute break in the footage, the recording jumped to Zečević’s investigation, showing a fully visible crater together with the re-inserted stabiliser, affixed with a number of small stones. See Zorica Subotić, T. 38309–38314 (15 May 2013).

criticised the measurements and estimates of the angle of descent calculated by other investigators and argued that the trajectory of the penetration of the stabiliser does not generally follow the trajectory of the mortar shell.¹⁴¹³² However, using another method, namely the density of the lateral beam of the fragment markings or splinter patterns on the asphalt, she calculated the angle of descent at between 64.6 and 70.32 degrees, that is, still within the range estimated by Zečević.¹⁴¹³³

4217. With regard to the incoming trajectory, Subotić recalled that different investigation teams determined a variety of different bearings of the shell.¹⁴¹³⁴ Based on the fragmentation effect on the UPI supermarket building, she established the baseline azimuth as being between 18 and 23, and up to 25 degrees, and thus was more or less consistent with the findings of CSB Sarajevo team, Zečević's team, and those of the second UN investigation.¹⁴¹³⁵

4218. Derek Allsop was commissioned by the Accused to review Zečević's method of predicting the impact velocity of the stabiliser of the mortar shell based on its depth of penetration.¹⁴¹³⁶ Allsop testified that, in order to determine where a projectile is fired from, its impact velocity and impact angle¹⁴¹³⁷ must be established and compared with trajectory calculations or range tables.¹⁴¹³⁸ According to Allsop, when a mortar shell hits the ground, the fuse at the tip of the mortar shell is driven into the ground and creates a hole—the so-called “fuse furrow”—with parts of the fuse embedded in it; the stabiliser is then either driven backwards or also gets embedded in the ground depending on whether or not its velocity is less than the forward velocity of the mortar bomb.¹⁴¹³⁹ In addition, if the forward velocity of the stabiliser is greater than its ejection velocity, method could produce an accurate result but that it would be necessary to show, using another method, that the results are reliable); Zorica Subotić, T. 38313–38315 (15 May 2013).

it may also fragment the fuse and disperse it sideways so that no fuse fragments remain in the furrow.¹⁴¹⁴⁰ In the case of an embedded stabiliser, its impact velocity will consist of the impact velocity of the mortar bomb itself minus the velocity at which the stabiliser was ejected upon impact.¹⁴¹⁴¹ However, according to Allsop, the latter velocity is almost impossible to determine.¹⁴¹⁴² In addition, since the stabiliser will eject upon detonation of the explosive on impact, its final angle would generally be different from the impact angle of the mortar bomb itself so that measuring it would not in fact provide the angle of the impact of the mortar bomb.¹⁴¹⁴³ Like the other experts, Allsop also testified that a high impact velocity would make it more likely for the stabilising fin to get embedded into the ground,¹⁴¹⁴⁴ meaning that an accurate measurement of the stabiliser penetration would still help calculate the impact velocity of the mortar shell, assuming one took into account a number of factors, such as density of the soil and moisture levels, for example.¹⁴¹⁴⁵

4219. With respect to the Markale crater, Allsop concluded that: (i) there was little evidence on which to base a forensic investigation into where the mortar shell was fired from; (ii) Zečević's method of calculating the ejection velocity of the stabiliser was "over simplistic" and incapable of producing reliable results; (iii) similarly, the method of calculating the impact velocity was flawed because no consideration was given to the fuse furrow or the fact that it would not have been possible to insert the stabiliser at the same depth from which it was removed;¹⁴¹⁴⁶ and (iv) with the information available on the scene of the incident, it would not be possible to accurately calculate the range from which the mortar was fired.¹⁴¹⁴⁷ With respect to (iii) above, he conceded however that he was not aware that investigators at the scene looked for but found no fuse fragments in the crater so that it was possible that the fuse fragmented into several pieces upon impact, rather than ending up in the fuse furrow.¹⁴¹⁴⁸ He also conceded, in line with the evidence of Zečević, Higgs, and Subotić, that in cases where the stabiliser embeds into the ground, it is likely that a higher charge was used, although in practice it may not always be the case for every impact as this will depend on the characteristics of the particular mortar bomb used.¹⁴¹⁴⁹ Similarly, if the launching position was located at a higher altitude than the altitude of the target/impact, the higher launching altitude would increase the acceleration of the bomb.¹⁴¹⁵⁰

¹⁴¹⁴⁷ Derek Allsop, T. 29428 (31 October 2012); D2372 (Report by Derek Allsop on the shelling of Markale Market in Sarajevo on 5 February 1994), paras. 10.7, 11.1–11.5. Allsop conceded, however, that he never visited

4220. Allsop did not think that it was possible to drop the mortar bomb onto Markale from one of the surrounding buildings since a mortar bomb requires set-back forces created through its launch to initiate the fuse.¹⁴¹⁵¹ Dropping it would also have caused it to hit the ground vertically, which was not the case given the appearance of the crater.¹⁴¹⁵² Similarly, Allsop did not consider it possible that a shell could have been activated in a static explosion, since the only way the stabilising fin could have become embedded into the ground was by travelling through the air at a higher velocity than its ejection velocity.¹⁴¹⁵³ To Allsop, the Markale impact site displayed all characteristics of a conventional 120 mm mortar bomb strike.¹⁴¹⁵⁴ Finally, Allsop explained that it would have been extremely difficult to achieve an exact hit of Markale from a very close range given that it would have been very dangerous for the launching crew.¹⁴¹⁵⁵

4221. The Accused also called Poparić, who sought to specifically counter Higgs's suggestion that it would be possible to hit Markale market with a single round if the target was pre-

Markale and had no reason to dispute the observations of the people who were on the scene at the time of the incident. See Derek Allsop, T. 29505–29511 (31 October 2012); P5951 (Three photographs re shelling of Markale on 5 February 1994).

Allsop agreed that firing tests of mortar bombs for research and testing purposes would usually be carried out under controlled conditions on soft surfaces where the crater would be less defined than the crater in Markale was. He also agreed that testing materials for 120 mm mortars suggested high fragmentation of the fuse, with the stabiliser remaining intact. See Derek Allsop, T. 29485–29490, 29522–29523 (31 October 2012); P5947 (Photograph of crater formed by 120 mm mortar projectile); P5948 (Photograph of 120 mm light mortar projectile fragments); P5949 (Results of fragmentation of five 120 mm projectiles).

recorded.¹⁴¹⁵⁶ Based on the dimensions of the market and looking at the different charges and resulting ranges of the 120 mm mortar shell, he calculated the probability of the initial shell striking the market to be between 0.1% and 0.09%, the lowest charge having the highest probability.¹⁴¹⁵⁷ On cross-examination, Poparić was asked to consider the estimated impact area around a set target if a shell were fired at a charge five from a maximum range of 5,782 metres and agreed that the area struck would be within an ellipse of 58 by 24 metres, which would virtually cover the entire area of the market place, assuming the target point was the centre of the market; however, he also explained that these statistics were based on the firing of a group of projectiles, 50% of which would have hit the determined area.¹⁴¹⁵⁸ Thus, according to him, these statistics could not be used to determine the probability in relation to the first and only shell fired, such as happened in Markale.¹⁴¹⁵⁹

4224. Faris Gavrankapetanović, the general manager of Koševo Hospital,¹⁴¹⁶⁷ authenticated a number of records, including admission records, relating to patients brought to the Hospital on the day of this incident.¹⁴¹⁶⁸ These records show that on 5 February 1994, at 12:35 p.m., Koševo Hospital received around 90 victims from Markale market, including both the dead and the wounded.¹⁴¹⁶⁹ Gavrankapetanović also produced a list of persons who had surgery on the day of the incident,¹⁴¹⁷⁰ as well as the records from the Koševo morgue,¹⁴¹⁷¹ both of which show that over 50 people were received by the Koševo morgue in relation to the incident in Markale on 5 February 1994.¹⁴¹⁷² A document with the names of all the victims related to the incident, namely 125 people treated at or registered by the Koševo Hospital,¹⁴¹⁷³ as well as five victims transferred to other hospitals and eight victims transferred to the UNPROFOR hospital, was created shortly after the incident and used to provide information to the relatives of those wounded or killed.¹⁴¹⁷⁴ Gavrankapetanović conceded that some victims could have appeared on different records if they were moved from one Hospital department to another.¹⁴¹⁷⁵ chaotic evacuation that followed, casualties of the magnitude of 275 dead and wounded are conceivable.¹⁴¹⁷⁶ Allsop also explained that the lethal effect of a mortar bomb would vary according to its size and the presence of obstacles in its vicinity.¹⁴¹⁷⁷ While smaller projectiles could be stopped by barriers, larger projectiles could go a long way, pass through a number of soft targets, and even create secondary projectiles, such as splinters.¹⁴¹⁷⁸ He added that tests on the effects of suicide bombs for instance showed that larger projectiles could even pass “through the equivalent of three people”.¹⁴¹⁷⁹

4226. In contrast, Subotić disputed the high number of victims. She noted that the video footage shows traces of blood and destruction of market stalls in a circle of approximately 10 to 11 metres around the point of impact of the mortar shell.¹⁴¹⁸⁰ Having taken into account the lay-out of the market stalls, Subotić calculated that 40 market stalls were in the “lethal radius” of 10.56 metres from the point of impact of the detonation.¹⁴¹⁸¹ Based on these figures, and assuming there was one shopper per square metre and a seller at each stall, Subotić calculated that there were 164 persons within the impact zone—that is, 45 persons less than the number of casualties recorded in the official report on the incident.¹⁴¹⁸² Furthermore, Subotić opined that, given that “only one dead person” and “one trace of blood” could be seen in the video showing the area between Dženetića Čikma and Maršala Tita streets, the number of 164 casualties was unrealistic.¹⁴¹⁸³ direction north-northeast of the market or at a bearing of approximately 18 degrees;¹⁴¹⁸⁴ (ii) the shell could not have been fired from any place on the ABiH side of the confrontation lines in a direction north-northeast of Markale market;¹⁴¹⁸⁵ (iii) the mortar shell which exploded at Markale market on 5 February 1994 was fired from SRK-controlled territory;¹⁴¹⁸⁶ and (iv) there was no reason to consider the market area as a military objective.¹⁴¹⁸⁷

(i) Staged incident and static explosion theories

4228. As noted earlier, two alternative defences the Accused put forward in relation to this incident is that it was staged or that the local authorities detonated an explosive device in the market either by a remotely controlled device or by dropping a mortar shell from one of the surrounding buildings.¹⁴¹⁸⁸

4229. In support of the staged incident theory, the Accused relied on various factors, including the fact that the video footage of the aftermath of the incident shows (i) a large number of empty stalls which in turn implied that the market could not have been so crowded that day; (ii) a man carrying a prosthetic leg around the empty, clean market, with no other traces of the explosion, implying therefore that the leg must have been planted there; and (iii) that the stabiliser cannot be seen in the earliest footage of the crater while Bešić can be heard instructing someone to look for it on the roof of one of the surrounding buildings.¹⁴¹⁸⁹ He also argued that there was a gap of about an hour between the time the incident occurred and the time at which Bešić and his colleagues were informed of it.¹⁴¹⁹⁰

4230. However, witnesses testified that Markale market was usually crowded whenever there was no shelling in the city and that the same would have been the case on the day of the incident.¹⁴¹⁹¹ Bešić, who was at the scene around an hour after the incident, strongly rejected the idea that the video footage of its aftermath shows that the incident was staged and that a prosthetic leg had been planted there.¹⁴¹⁹² In addition, Almir Begić testified that the prosthetic leg visible in the video footage of the aftermath of the incident belonged to his father, Ćamil Begić, who died in the incident and whose body he identified in the Koševo morgue on the day of the incident.¹⁴¹⁹³ The Chamber notes that during his cross-examination of Almir Begić, the Accused attempted to show that the prosthetic leg seen in the Markale market footage could not have belonged to his father Ćamil by using Ćamil's old photograph to show that the prosthetic leg found at the scene was too big for him.¹⁴¹⁹⁴ The Chamber found this line of questioning completely unconvincing and misplaced and finds, in light of the evidence given by Almir Begić, that the prosthetic leg seen in the video footage belonged to his father Ćamil. The Chamber—having reviewed the video footage of the aftermath—further rejects as unfounded the contention that the prosthetic leg was purposely placed in different locations around the market.¹⁴¹⁹⁵

4231. Concerning the Accused's claims as to the timing of the incident, Bešić confirmed that one of the reports on this incident states that the CSB Sarajevo investigation team was informed of the shelling only at around 1:20 p.m. and was at the scene by 1:30 p.m.; however, Bešić was adamant that the information about the incident was received much earlier, namely some 10 to 15 minutes after the explosion, and that it took the team around 40 minutes to come to the scene.¹⁴¹⁹⁶ Contrary to the Accused's position that there was a gap of about one hour before the investigating team was informed of the incident, the Chamber is of the view, based on the timeline given by Bešić and all the other evidence to the effect that the explosion happened some time after 12 p.m., that the time recorded as "1320 hours" in the report as being the time when the CSB Sarajevo investigation team was informed of the shelling incident is in fact a typographical error.

4232. Harland also denied the suggestion that the incident was staged, calling it “completely bizarre” and noting that he personally sent out a member of his team, who was a doctor, to the scene immediately after the incident and who confirmed that there were many dead and wounded victims at the scene.¹⁴¹⁹⁷ KDZ450 was also there an hour after the incident after all the wounded and injured had been removed but testified that he saw “a staggering number of blood traces” and that he spoke to a physician from Sector Sarajevo who had gone straight to the hospital and seen the injured and the dead.¹⁴¹⁹⁸ The continuing presence of blood and human remains in the market area was further confirmed by Russell, who attended the scene at around 4:30 p.m. on 5 February 1994.¹⁴¹⁹⁹ Thus, relying on the above evidence, and having analysed video footage of the immediate aftermath of the explosion in which substantial amounts of blood, human tissue, body parts and injured or dead persons can be seen, the Chamber finds that a large number of persons were killed and injured during the incident.¹⁴²⁰⁰ Accordingly, the Chamber dismisses the claim that the incident was staged.

4233. With respect to his theory that the explosion was caused by a static device placed on the scene by the local authorities or by a shell dropped from a nearby building, the Accused relied primarily on Subotić, as well as on several other witnesses. One such witness was KW554, who worked as an intelligence officer for UNPROFOR in Zagreb and who testified that an American soldier showed him a photograph of a mortar shell being dropped from a window overlooking the market, which he did not examine closely.¹⁴²⁰¹ Similarly, Sergey Moroz, a member of the UKRBAT, testified that Rumyantsev, who was part of Gauthier’s team, told him that “it was definitely proved that it could not be a mortar explosion from [the] Serbian side” but that a special explosive device had been brought in.¹⁴²⁰² The Chamber found this evidence tenuous at best, particularly since KW554 said that he did not examine the alleged photograph closely and given that Rumyantsev was part of the team that unequivocally concluded that a 120 mm mortar bomb struck the market after being fired in a conventional manner.

4234. As noted earlier, the Accused’s expert Subotić was the main proponent of the static detonation theory. However, she based her analysis on secondary material, such as photographs, video footage, previous investigation reports, and a visit to a substantially altered location 16 years after the incident. This renders her findings less reliable than the conclusions reached by the investigation teams that investigated the scene immediately or shortly after the incident. Furthermore, much of her analysis in relation to this incident was based on highly speculative assumptions and conclusions, such as her assumption that there would be only one market vendor per stall in the market.¹⁴²⁰³ The Chamber also found some of her claims and resulting conclusions blatantly unreasonable and/or incorrect. For example, her claim that only one dead person and one trace of blood could be seen in the area between Dženetića Čikma and Maršala Tita streets is obviously inaccurate as can be seen from the video footage available to the Chamber. In addition, her theory about the appearance and manipulation of the crater clearly illustrates that she went to great lengths to fabricate conspiracy theories while wilfully ignoring other evidence such as the fact that none of the witnesses, including some of those called by the Accused, thought that the crater was manually created. Indeed, there is simply nothing in the evidence to suggest that the crater was manually created as opposed to simply disturbed during the excavation of the stabiliser. This has been confirmed by Allsop, who thought that the crater, as seen in the footage of 6 February, was very similar to the crater seen on the video footage of 5 February. This type of analysis on the part of Subotić is a serious stain on her credibility and resulted in the Chamber deciding not to accept her evidence in relation to this incident except when it was corroborated by other evidence.

4235. The Chamber further recalls that a number of witnesses, including Zečević, testified that the damage caused to the scene was consistent with the explosion of a 120 mm mortar, that throwing the mortar bomb from one of the surrounding buildings was unrealistic as it would have exposed the person throwing it to the explosion, and, further, that no one would be strong enough to embed a stabiliser into the asphalt without anyone at the market noticing.¹⁴²⁰⁴ He was supported in this by Allsop's opinion that a stabiliser would embed into the ground only if fired at a higher charge,¹⁴²⁰⁵ as well as Allsop's evidence regarding the lethal effect of the mortar shrapnel.¹⁴²⁰⁶ Finally, neither Sabljica nor Zečević saw anything unusual in Bešić instructing someone to look for the stabiliser on a roof.¹⁴²⁰⁷

4236. For all of these reasons, the Chamber does not accept the Accused's claim that the shell was detonated remotely at ground level or that it was dropped from an adjacent building.

(j) Other defences

4237. The Accused further sought to show during the case that the shell was fired by the ABiH in order for it to be imputed to the Serb side, so as to advance the Bosnian Muslim side's political agenda.¹⁴²⁰⁸ He also claims that there is not enough evidence to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK fired the shell that struck Markale on 5 February 1994.¹⁴²⁰⁹

4238. The Accused relied on a number of witnesses in this respect. For example, KW570 stated that the Serb side was blamed for the shelling of Markale even before the investigation had been carried out, whereas the first crater analysis showed that it could not be determined which side had fired the shell.¹⁴²¹⁰ He personally formed the opinion that it was highly unlikely that the Serbs would have fired a single round, given their pattern of trying to hit their targets with multiple mortar rounds¹⁴²¹¹ [REDACTED].¹⁴²¹² [REDACTED] when Rose confronted the ABiH delegation on 8 February and told them that evidence was emerging which suggested that they had fired the shell on Markale, they reacted with complete silence before "produc[ing] a number of excuses, which included a claim that they had taped a conversation involving the Serbs to the effect that they had confessed to the atrocity".¹⁴²¹³ [REDACTED] UNPROFOR never received any evidence of such taped conversation.¹⁴²¹⁴

4239. The Accused also relies on the evidence of Milovanović and KDZ185. The former testified that incidents such as Markale were a "way of stopping negotiations by way of carrying out combat or turning the whole situation against [...] the Serb delegation" by the Muslim side whenever they did not like the direction in which international negotiations were heading.¹⁴²¹⁵

¹⁴²¹¹ D2770 (Witness statement of KW570 dated 21 November 2012), para. 6 (under seal). KW570 explained that mortars are indirect fire weapons whereby the person launching them cannot see the target and has to fire them more than once in order to account for factors such as the atmospheric and to bed the mortar tube into the ground, thus increasing its accuracy. He also testified that the Serbs would usually fire a number of rounds in order to hit a target. It was for these reasons that he formed the opinion that it was highly unlikely that the Serb side had fired the mortar round on that day. KW570 did accept, however, that he had no experience commanding mortar units. See KW570, T. 32223–32226 (18 January 2013).

KDZ185, an UNPROFOR commander at the time, also testified that the Muslim side wished to keep Sarajevo the focus of international attention and tried to make up for their military inferiority by staging a “kind of media war”, an example being the shelling of a courtyard of a residential block near Markale for which the UNPROFOR carried out a crater analysis and determined that the fire had most likely come from the Muslim territory to the north, close to the frontline.¹⁴²¹⁶

4241. Savo Simić, Chief of Artillery of the 1st Motorised Brigade of the SRK at the time,¹⁴²²¹ claimed that the Markale shell could not have been fired from a Bosnian Serb-held position.¹⁴²²² He testified that it was not possible for the first shot to hit that target, and that, in any event, in order to hit such a small area encircled by high buildings it would have had to have been fired from a position close by to achieve the almost vertical angle of 85 degrees.¹⁴²²³ Furthermore, according to Simić, there was also no observation point on the Serb side from which the market could be seen, and therefore, it could not have been accurately targeted.¹⁴²²⁴

4242. Blaško Rašević, the Commander of the Mrkovići Company at the time of the incident, testified that “there was a firm conviction” in his unit that the SRK forces, particularly the forces from Mrkovići, did not fire the shell that landed in Markale.¹⁴²²⁵ On the day of the incident, Gengo was in Hreša, which is some seven kilometres away from Mrkovići, and testified that he did not hear a missile launch nor saw any reports on such use of weapons from his battalion.¹⁴²²⁶ He was adamant that his unit was not involved in this incident.¹⁴²²⁷

(k) Final analysis and conclusion

4243. Having considered the evidence presented to the Chamber as well as the adjudicated facts recounted above, and having discounted the staged incident and planted explosive theories, the Chamber finds that a 120 mm mortar shell exploded in Markale market on 5 February 1994. Relying on the hospital records, which the Chamber accepts were not entirely accurate given the chaotic situation at the time they were compiled, Adjudicated Fact 338, and the technical evidence regarding the lethal effect of mortar shells, the Chamber also finds that the explosion caused by the shell on 5 February 1994 caused the death of at least 67 people and injured over 140. Given its view of Subotić’s credibility with respect to this incident, and in light of accepted contemporaneous video footage and hospital records, the Chamber rejects her claim that the number of victims is exaggerated and that dead bodies were brought to the scene.

4244. With respect to the nature of the area and the status of the victims of this shelling incident, the evidence clearly shows that Markale market was an open-air market frequented by the civilian population to buy and sell food and other goods. In addition, the Chamber recalls that it has taken judicial notice of the fact that there was no reason to consider it a military objective.¹⁴²²⁸ The Chamber therefore concludes that Markale market and the surrounding area was not a legitimate military target and that the casualties caused by the shelling were almost all civilians who were not taking direct part in the hostilities.¹⁴²²⁹

4246. With respect to the angle of descent, which is relevant to the origin of fire, the Chamber recalls that the second UN investigation established that this angle had to be higher than 49 degrees in order to clear the buildings around Markale. The Chamber also recalls that different experts provided five different estimates as to the angle of descent, most of which were expressed in terms of ranges. All of those experts, with the exception of Subotić, were at the scene either soon after the incident or six or seven days later. Although Verdy was at the scene, the Chamber will not rely on his estimate due to the flaws in his method.¹⁴²³⁰

4247. While the Chamber heard evidence to the effect that measurements and estimates of the angle of descent are unreliable in this incident due to the crater having been disturbed, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting was also struck by the fact that all but one of the estimated angle ranges are relatively close to each other and in fact overlap. The one exception is the angle of descent measured by Russell, which is slightly higher than all the other estimated angles. However, unlike Zečević and Hamill, who were brought into the investigation later and purely on the basis of their extensive technical expertise,¹⁴²³¹ Russell made his estimate quickly on the day of the incident and, when testifying before the Chamber, could not remember having done so or having taken these measurements. At the time, he was a military adviser in Sector Sarajevo and was asked by Ramsey to examine the scene because he had some experience with crater analysis which, according to his own evidence, was not extensive.¹⁴²³² Accordingly, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting, is more persuaded by Zečević's and Hamill's estimates, which—with their margins of error—overlap to a great extent. Even the angle of descent determined by Subotić on the basis of the fragment traces on the scene is in line with the angles provided by Zečević and Hamill. Given that Zečević's estimate contained the largest margin of error, the Chamber, by majority, considers that the angle of descent of the shell that struck Markale was somewhere between 55 and 65 degrees. This also means that the shell could have come from one of the six positions established by Zečević in his report. The Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting, has no reason to doubt the credibility of Zečević and the reliability of his report in this respect.

¹⁴²²⁹ The Chamber heard evidence that one of the victims of this incident wore a uniform. See Sead Bešić, T. 9429–9430 (8 December 2010). While he may have been a soldier, his presence alone does not change the fact that most of those injured in this incident were civilians who were not taking direct part in hostilities but instead came to the market to buy goods. Indeed, many of the victims were women and elderly. See also para. 4330.

¹⁴²³¹ Hamill was a technical adviser to the investigation team as he had extensive knowledge of artillery weapons and was also an instructor in gunnery in a military school. Zečević is a mechanical engineer with years of experience in the weapons industry, including testing of weapons. See John Hamill, P1994 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Galić), T. 6077; P2318 (Report by Berko Zečević entitled “The use of modified aircraft bombs

4248. While the Chamber cannot be sure that the speed of the shell as determined by Zečević is absolutely accurate, particularly in light of Allsop's evidence, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting, is satisfied that the margin of error in his calculations was such that it took into account all possible factors Allsop mentioned as having a significant impact on the calculations. Further, in this respect, the Chamber notes a common feature in the evidence of Zečević, Higgs, Allsop, and Subotić, which is that a mortar bomb fired at one of the higher charges would typically result in the stabiliser penetrating the ground and embedding therein.¹⁴²³³ While Higgs referred to two highest charges in this respect, and Zečević to charges four, five, and six, Subotić considered it "well-known" that a stabiliser would embed when fired with charge three or higher.¹⁴²³⁴ The Chamber recalls that, given the angle of descent of between 55 and 65 degrees, even if the mortar shell that landed on Markale was fired with charge three, this would have still placed the firing position squarely in the territory of the SRK, namely just below the area of Mrkovići.¹⁴²³⁵ As noted above, in this particular case, the stabiliser was found embedded into the ground with its top at a depth of around nine centimetres from the surface, thus leading to the conclusion that the shell was fired on a charge higher than charge one or charge two. While the ABiH forces could have fired the shell on charge three or higher, which then may have resulted in the embedded stabiliser, they would have had to launch it at a much steeper angle in order not to overshoot Markale. As testified by Allsop,¹⁴²³⁶ launching a shell from a closer distance, and thus at a steeper angle, and achieving an accurate hit of Markale would have placed the launching crew at a significant risk. In addition, it would have necessarily resulted in a higher angle of descent than the one measured on the scene.

4249. The majority notes that other evidence also indicates that the shell was fired from the SRK side of the confrontation line, more particularly, from the SRK positions in Mrkovići. For example, the Chamber heard that the SRK's 7th Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade had 120 mm mortars in the area of Mrkovići, which is north-northeast of Markale, whereas the evidence before the Chamber was consistent that the ABiH had no mortars in the area of Grdonj, which it held in the determined direction of fire.¹⁴²³⁷ In addition, Gengo testified that, rather than firing from Grdonj, the ABiH would open fire mostly from the area of Jajce Barracks and Koševo.¹⁴²³⁸ Similarly, Gauthier could not recall any ABiH mortar positions in the established direction of fire.¹⁴²³⁹ While Gauthier also suggested that ABiH could have used mobile mortars, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting, is not convinced that it would have been possible for the ABiH to fire at the market area from a mobile mortar, without being seen, given the densely populated area in the direction of fire and given the proximity of the residential area of Sedrenik to the ABiH positions in Grdonj. The majority also recalls the absence of any evidence as to the sighting of mobile mortars on that day or shell fire noise coming from within the city. In the majority's view, achieving an accurate hit of Markale market from a mobile mortar which has been placed on the back of a truck and the base plate of which has not been static for a period of time, by forces which have not pre-recorded this target and who are also trying to remain unseen and undetected, would have been extremely difficult, bordering on impossible.¹⁴²⁴⁰

¹⁴²³⁹ Michel Gauthier, T. 29417 (30 October 2012).

¹⁴²⁴⁰ The Chamber recalls that having the base plate of a particular mortar in the same position for a long time increases the accuracy of the mortar and thus allows the mortar crew to engage or strike its target with only one round. See P1437 (Richard Higgs's Consolidated Report on Sarajevo Shelling Incidents, 13 March 2009), p. 3; P1925 (Witness statement of Emir Turkušić dated 16 February 2010), p. 6. See also fn. 13140.

4250. Further, the Chamber received evidence that the SRK would open fire on the area of Stari Grad from the SRK positions above Sedrenik.¹⁴²⁴¹ Hamill also testified about Cvetković's admission that the SRK fired a large number of mortar rounds into Stari Grad prior to the incident in Markale.¹⁴²⁴² Even on the morning of 5 February, just prior to the Markale incident, the UNMOs reported that the city centre was shelled on the night of 4 and 5 February.¹⁴²⁴³ The SRK's use of mortar fire on the urban parts of Sarajevo is indirectly confirmed by Galić's stern ban on fire issued on 5 February 1994, as well as the Accused's order of 7 February that the VRS respond only when threatened and do so against military targets and strictly at the commander's commands.¹⁴²⁴⁴ All of this activity on the Bosnian Serb side around the time of the incident suggests to the Chamber that the upper echelons of power were trying to exert and ensure strict control over the undisciplined firing of the SRK forces into the city.

4251. The Chamber unanimously rejects Gengo and Džida's denials of SRK's responsibility in relation to this incident and in particular their evidence as to the alleged visit by the UN to the positions in Mrkovići which apparently cleared the SRK side of any wrong-doing. The Chamber finds them not to be credible with respect to this incident as they were clearly contradicted by the UN report compiled following the second investigation, which specifically states that Mrkovići positions were not visited by the UN as it would have been difficult to locate the mortar positions there and that the Mrkovići positions had not been visited in at least four months prior to the incident.¹⁴²⁴⁵ This is in line with Gauthier's evidence, namely that his team chose not to visit the SRK positions in the direction of fire due to the area being vast.¹⁴²⁴⁶ Furthermore, even the SRK's own combat reports, issued after the incident, make no mention of any such visit. Similarly, the SRK's and the Accused's calls for the joint commission in the days after 6 February also suggest that such a visit never took place. Finally, while Gengo and Džida are consistent with each other as to a visit by a delegation, neither of them could say much about the UN members within that delegation and neither had the names of those members. Thus, the Chamber is convinced that even if the SRK positions in Mrkovići were indeed visited by a certain delegation on 6 February, that delegation did not include any UN members.

4252. While the Chamber accepts the general evidence given by KDZ185, KW570 and Milovanović that the Bosnian Muslim side tried to gain sympathy from the international community and would provoke attacks by the SRK with that goal in mind, it is of general nature and does not, as such, cast doubt on the majority's finding above that the shell came from the SRK positions. Furthermore, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting, does not accept the evidence of KW586 that the Bosnian Muslim side then deliberately targeted Markale so as to achieve international condemnation of the Serbs and thus further its own political agenda. The majority found KW586 to be lacking credibility in relation to this evidence for a number of reasons. The majority found it unlikely that someone in KW586's position would have been privy to such high-level meetings where such sensitive matters were discussed. Furthermore, KW586 exhibited a high degree of animosity towards the current political leadership in BiH, which obviously played a part in his coming forward with his evidence.¹⁴²⁴⁷ There were also inconsistencies between his testimony in court and his witness statement, such as his evidence about the level of involvement of members of the Pakistani UNPROFOR contingent in the Markale incident and the involvement of Halilović, who the witness acknowledged had been removed from his position by Izetbegović at that time. Essentially, KW586's evidence implies a conspiracy of a large scale. However, in the majority's view, such conspiracy is not supported by any other evidence on the record. Finally, if true, it would have meant that the ABiH was able to make a successful hit on Markale market in only its second attempt. Recalling the evidence the Accused led on the low likelihood of such an intentional hit, the Chamber finds this to be impossible.

4253. Thus, for all of the above reasons, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting, is persuaded beyond reasonable doubt that the shell that struck Markale market on 5 February 1994 was fired on one of the higher charges and thus came from the SRK-held territory, having been fired by SRK soldiers. While the market itself may not have been deliberately targeted on that specific day, the majority finds that the SRK forces deliberately targeted the area around it in full knowledge that there were no military targets there and in reckless disregard of potential civilian victims that such fire would cause.¹⁴²⁴⁸

¹⁴²⁴⁷ KW586 repeatedly referred to the leadership as "gang" or "bandits" and at times even "scum". See KW586, T. 47208–47211 (17 February 2014).

¹⁴²⁴⁸ The Chamber recalls that Poparić testified about the very low probability of the first mortar shell striking the market, while Higgs testified that it would not have been very difficult to target the market given that it was visible from the surrounding hills and because the city was pre-recorded. While accepting that the shot would have been a difficult one to make, given the majority's view that it was the general area around the market that was targeted, Poparić's evidence on probabilities of intentionally striking the market itself is ultimately irrelevant.

(3) Bašćaršija fleamarket, 22 December 1994 (Scheduled Incident G.9)

4254. According to the Indictment, two 76 mm shells hit a flea market in the old commercial quarter of Bašćaršija in Stari Grad in quick succession, killing two persons and injuring seven others. The Indictment further states that the fire originated from Trebević, in SRK-held territory.¹⁴²⁴⁹ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution further explains that the shells were fired from an M48 76mm B-1 artillery cannon which was in the SRK's possession, including at Vidikovac and Hreša, and which the ABiH did not have.¹⁴²⁵⁰ The Accused argues, however, that the incident scene was manipulated and that the two explosions were staged.¹⁴²⁵¹ Further, the Accused notes that the Appeals Chamber in the Dragomir Milošević case overturned the Trial Chamber's findings that the SRK fired the shells in question on the basis that it was impossible to determine the source of fire because both armies had positions in the direction from which the shells arrived.¹⁴²⁵² According to the Accused, no additional evidence was led in this case and thus this Chamber has no basis to conclude that the SRK fired the shells in question.¹⁴²⁵³

4255. On the foggy morning of 22 December 1994 at around 9:10 a.m., two shells exploded on the Bašćaršija flea market.¹⁴²⁵⁴ The explosions resulted in civilian casualties; two civilians were killed and seven or eight were injured, three of them seriously.¹⁴²⁵⁵ Investigations into this incident were carried out by the BiH MUP, the FreBat, and two UNMOs, Major Hanga Tsori Hammerton and Major Ilonyosi.¹⁴²⁵⁶

4256. Suljević participated in the investigation of this incident, along with Bešić, Đozo, and others.¹⁴²⁵⁷ According to the official report prepared by CSB Sarajevo on the day of the incident, two shells landed on the Bašćaršija flea market, on Petra Kočića street (now Telali street) and

Danila Ilića street (now Oprkanj street) around 9:10 a.m.¹⁴²⁵⁸ The explosions killed two and wounded seven persons.¹⁴²⁵⁹ The report also states that “judging by the incoming descent angle of the shells and the damage they inflicted, it was established that the shells had been fired from the south at Trebević where the aggressor forces are located.”¹⁴²⁶⁰ While noting that the fragments indicate that they were fired from a B-1 76 mm calibre cannon, the report also notes that “after the required evaluation, officials of the [CSB Sarajevo] will forward the final findings on the type and the calibre of the artillery weapon, direction and place from where the shells were fired” to the judge in charge of the investigation.¹⁴²⁶¹ Suljević then prepared a report concluding that the fragments collected at the scene, including a part of the UTI M68 fuse, belonged to two M70 76 mm calibre shells and that they were fired from the direction of the “enemy’s positions in the area of Trebević”, the azimuth angle being 159 degrees from the north, with a margin of error of five degrees.¹⁴²⁶² According to Suljević, the UNPROFOR soldiers, who were also present at the scene, agreed with his assessment as to the direction of fire but disagreed on the calibre of the projectiles, coming to the conclusion that they were most probably mortar shells of 82 mm calibre.¹⁴²⁶³

on the curb of Danila Ilića street while the second fell near a window of a house located on Petra Kočića street.¹⁴²⁶⁴ KDZ485 testified that the shells fell “in a strictly civilian area, without any military activity”.¹⁴²⁶⁵ He also stated that when the CSB Sarajevo team arrived, all bodies had been removed from the scene and denied that the scene was altered in any other way.¹⁴²⁶⁶ Another investigator on the team, Đozo, was asked about the possibility that the explosion was a result of a device placed at the scene; he explained that the team found shrapnel, which came from a projectile that was not a mortar shell and thus discounted the theory of an explosive device at the scene.¹⁴²⁶⁷ Suljević also denied that anything other than projectiles exploded at the scene of this incident.¹⁴²⁶⁸

4258. With respect to the 76 mm calibre shells, Suljević testified that CSB Sarajevo had samples of fragments from such projectiles, which were collected after they were fired on the city by the SRK.¹⁴²⁶⁹ The Chamber has also received a number of VRS and SRK documents, which show that the SRK was in possession of a large number of M48 B1 cannons that fired 76 mm projectiles, including one such cannon in the area of Hreša and Vidikovac.¹⁴²⁷⁰ In contrast, the ABiH appears to have had only a handful of such cannons, all of which were located to the south and southwest of Ilidža and thus outside the control of the ABiH inside the city itself.¹⁴²⁷¹

4259. Zorica Subotić agreed that two explosions occurred at the incident site but disputed the manner in which they happened and argued that the scene was manipulated.¹⁴²⁷² She claimed that the first explosion, the one related to the crater on the curb of Danila Ilića street, did not take place at that location, but at a location nearby, and that the crater near the curb was manually dug out.¹⁴²⁷³ She concluded this using the contemporaneous photographs made by the CSB Sarajevo team arguing that they show, inter alia, that (i) the crater was too big for a 76 mm round, (ii) the quantity of the debris expelled from the crater onto the left-hand side of the curb (as seen from the alleged incoming direction of the round) was disproportionately greater than the quantity on the right-hand side of the curb, (iii) some of the items surrounding the crater were still covered by snow even though the impact would have blown that snow away, (iv) the pattern of the soil traces and of a number of metal fragments and other objects seen near the crater indicates that the explosion actually occurred some metres away from the crater, and (v) on the house near the crater, damage was limited to the window shutters and not the façade surrounding those shutters, which is inconsistent with the laws of physics.¹⁴²⁷⁴ According to Subotić, this crater and its surroundings were manipulated in order to give the impression that a “fragmentation artillery round” exploded at that location, when in fact the actual explosion near the crater was caused by a “quantity of explosive”; the manipulation also intended to make the scene compatible with the direction of fire eventually determined by the investigators.¹⁴²⁷⁵

4260. With respect to the second explosion, Subotić noted that the crater was too big to have been caused by a 76 mm round and also too shallow when compared to the crater related to the first explosion.¹⁴²⁷⁶ She further noted that the shape of the crater was similar to craters caused by ¹⁴²⁷⁴ D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 145–146, 148–150; Zorica Subotić, T. 38277–38280 (14 May 2013); D3541 (Photograph of crater marked by Zorica Subotić). Subotić also argued that her claim was confirmed by the fact that the contemporaneous photographs show that the scene was “altered substantially for no reason that could be explained to facilitate the collection of physical evidence in the course of the on-site investigation”. Further, she claimed that it was an “incontrovertible fact” that the incoming direction of fire was determined following the alteration of the scene. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 147–148.

¹⁴²⁷⁵ D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), pp. 148, 153.

¹⁴²⁷⁶ According to Subotić, the difference in sizes between the two craters was strange given that the rounds that caused them were meant to have been fired from the same weapon and from the same location. See D3542 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “Mortar Operations in Sarajevo Area in 1992–1995”, 15 August 2012), p. 150; Zorica Subotić, T. 38280–38281 (14 May 2013). In cross-examination, Subotić confirmed that her claim that the crater was too big was the result of her comparison of this particular crater to the craters caused by 82 mm mortar shells. She then acknowledged that the 76 mm cannon projectile weighs over 8 kilograms, while an rounds exploding at low angles of descent or even rounds lying on the ground.¹⁴²⁷⁷ Recalling that a part of the fuse was found on the scene, Subotić opined that one of the contemporaneous photographs showing the fragments of the projectile also showed an intact fuse without the detonator, which in her view is “absolutely impossible” given that the fuse activates once it impacts the ground.¹⁴²⁷⁸ The only way in which this could happen, according to Subotić, was if the round was detonated while stationary, using an explosive charge.¹⁴²⁷⁹

4261. In addition to the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber has also taken judicial notice of one additional Adjudicated Fact which goes to the direction of fire and provides that both shells were fired from the southeast.¹⁴²⁸⁰

4262. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber is convinced that two projectiles struck the fleamarket in Baščaršija on 22 December 1994. Relying in particular on the CSB Sarajevo report and the evidence of Suljević and Đozo, the Chamber is of the view that both projectiles were 76 mm calibre shells and that they came from the direction of southeast. While Suljević noted that the UN established that the projectiles in question were 82 mm mortar shells, the Chamber is persuaded by the CSB Sarajevo team’s conclusions on this issue. First, no traces of a mortar shell, such as its fin, appear to have been found at the scene. Second, the CSB Sarajevo ballistic experts, who were experienced with the ammunition and weapons used in the Sarajevo conflict, conducted a thorough ballistics analysis of the fragments collected at the scene, including a part of a fuse, and concluded that these fragments belonged to a 76 mm projectile. Third, the spray pattern of the craters at the scene tends to suggest that mortar shells did not strike the area. Finally, even the Accused’s expert witness, Subotić, implicitly agreed that the fragments on the scene came from a 76 mm projectile.¹⁴²⁸¹

4263. The Chamber recalls Subotić’s claim that the scene was manipulated and the explosions caused by a device planted at the scene. The Chamber finds her claim plainly unacceptable for a number of reasons. First, Subotić made many of her assumptions solely on the basis of contemporaneous photographs of the scene, which were not of sufficient clarity and thus not particularly reliable. In other words, she was never able to examine the craters in question and yet was able to comment on their size, depth, and even conclude where the actual site of the first explosion was. Second, Subotić claimed that the incoming direction of fire was determined following the alteration of the scene and that the scene was “altered substantially for no reason that could be explained to facilitate the collection of physical evidence in the course of the on-site investigation”. The Chamber finds her claim about substantial alteration untenable as the photographs of the scene all seem consistent and merely indicate that the craters were cleaned at some stage of the investigation, something that was done by CSB Sarajevo in many other scheduled incidents discussed in this judgement.¹⁴²⁸² Finally, with respect to Subotić’s evidence that the fuse found on the scene was intact, the Chamber notes that she reached that conclusion on the basis of an unclear photograph of the various projectile fragments found on the scene.¹⁴²⁸³ At the same time, she did not explain sufficiently why she thought that one of the fragments depicted was an intact fuse.¹⁴²⁸⁴ Furthermore, the Chamber sees no reason to doubt the CSB Sarajevo report which records that only a part of the fuse was found rather than an intact fuse. For all of the reasons above, the Chamber rejects Subotić’s theory that this incident was staged.

4264. Relying on the CSB Sarajevo report, the medical evidence before it, and the adjudicated facts, the Chamber is also convinced that the explosions at the fleamarket resulted in two killed and seven wounded persons, all of whom were civilians and were not taking direct part in hostilities. Furthermore, the fleamarket was located in the residential part of Stari Grad and there were no military targets in or near the area at the time of the incident.

4265. In terms of the origin of fire, the Chamber recalls the Accused’s contention that in both the Dragomir Milošević and Perišić cases, the evidence was found not to have been sufficient to conclude that the shells originated from SRK-held territory. However, contrary to his claim that no additional evidence was led in this case on this particular issue, the Chamber recalls that the Prosecution brought additional evidence, namely the fact that SRK had a large number of cannons that fired 76 mm projectiles in its arsenal, including one in the area of Vidikovac, identified by the ¹⁴²⁸² See e.g. P1709 (Photographs re shelling of Markale on 5 February 1994); P1926 (Photographs re shelling of Markale on 28 August 1995). In addition, in relation to Scheduled Incident G.6, Sabljica testified about the established procedure of CSB Sarajevo technicians clearing and preparing impact locations, which in turn enables the ballistic experts to determine the direction of fire. See P1695 (Witness Statement of Mirza Sabljica dated 11 February 2010), pp. 20–21, 32. See also P1966 (Witness statements of Sead Bešić dated 18 February 2010), pp. 12, 20, 34; KDZ485, T. 8947–8948 (3 November 2010).

¹⁴²⁸³ The Chamber also notes that the annotation made on the photograph itself makes no mention of the fuse being one of the fragments depicted there.

¹⁴²⁸⁴ While Subotić included a photograph of an unexploded 76 mm round in her report—to illustrate that one of the fragments in the CSB Sarajevo photograph was the fuse—it is not obvious to the Chamber that one of the fragments depicted in the CSB Sarajevo photograph is indeed the intact fuse of a 76 mm round. See D3542

CSB report as the origin of fire. In addition, the evidence before the Chamber also clearly shows that the ABiH did not possess such cannons in the direction of southeast from which the shells originated, but rather in the outer circle of Sarajevo in the area of Mt. Igman. Accordingly, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the two 76 mm shells that struck the fleamarket originated in SRK-held territory, in the area of Vidikovac and Trebević. Given that only two shells were fired and that there was no military target nearby, the Chamber is convinced that the SRK forces deliberately targeted the area of Baščaršija, including the fleamarket, and the civilians therein.

(4) Mula Mustafe Bašeskije street, 28 August 1995 (Scheduled Incident G.19)

4266. According to the Indictment, on 28 August 1995, a 120 mm mortar shell landed on Mula-Mustafe Bašeskije street outside the entrance to the city market, killing 43 and injuring 75 people.¹⁴²⁸⁵ The Indictment also alleges that the shell came from the SRK-held territory of Trebević.¹⁴²⁸⁶ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the shell killed “at least 35 people” and injured “at least 78 others”, the vast majority of whom were civilians.¹⁴²⁸⁷

4267. The Accused argues in his Final Brief that the shell could not have come from the SRK positions, thus suggesting, without explicitly saying so, that the shell came from the ABiH.¹⁴²⁸⁸ While the Final Brief does not outline how the ABiH caused the incident, the majority of the evidence led by the Accused throughout his case was that a static explosive device was planted at the scene.¹⁴²⁸⁹ Additionally, as with the first Markale incident, although he makes no mention of it in his Final Brief, the Accused claimed during the case that the incident was staged and bodies

However, Appendix H in which the Prosecution list the names of those wounded and killed refers to 43 killed and 73 wounded, thus contradicting Adjudicated Fact 3081, at least as far as the wounded are concerned. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix H, pp. 20–27.

¹⁴²⁸⁸ Defence Final Brief, paras. 2125–2162.

¹⁴²⁸⁹ The Chamber notes that in his Final Brief the Accused simply summarises the evidence of his witnesses, but then stops short of recounting their ultimate conclusions as to what happened in Markale on 28 August 1995. For example, after outlining much of Subotić’s evidence he fails to state her ultimate conclusion, namely that a static explosive device was planted at the scene. The same is the case with other witnesses, such as Demurenko and Veljović. While there is no explanation in the Final Brief, the Chamber assumes that the position the Accused took in relation to the first Markale incident, as outlined in footnote 5073 of the Final Brief, is the same in relation to this incident. Nevertheless, as with the first Markale incident, in its analysis, the Chamber will consider the evidence the Accused led in relation to this incident in its totality and will therefore consider the conclusions of his witnesses, both in assessing their credibility and in order to determine what happened in Markale on 28 August 1995. See fn. 13939.

brought to the scene.¹⁴²⁹⁰ Given that these two theories were not explicitly abandoned in the Final Brief, the Chamber will consider them below, as it did with the first Markale incident.

(a) The incident

4268. The morning of 28 August 1995 was quiet, as a result of which a large number of people went to the Markale market area.¹⁴²⁹¹ Between 10:50 and 11 a.m., four shells landed in succession on a square near Markale market, approximately 200 to 300 metres away from the market.¹⁴²⁹² Just after 11 a.m.,¹⁴²⁹³ a fifth shell landed in front of the main entrance to the Markale market building, about 100 to 150 metres away from the location that had already been shelled on 5 February 1994.¹⁴²⁹⁴ Đula Leka, who was standing five to seven metres from the point of impact, was wounded in her left breast and upper left arm, while her brother-in-law was killed.¹⁴²⁹⁵ Ismet Svraka was standing in front of the indoor market building with his two friends, Ramo Herceglija and Ibrahim Hajvaz, both pensioners, no more than three to four metres away from the impact.¹⁴²⁹⁶ Svraka lost his left leg in the blast and also sustained injuries to his right foot and stomach, while his two friends were killed.¹⁴²⁹⁷ He testified that there was no warning before the explosion and that he did not hear the other four shells prior to the Markale shell impacting.¹⁴²⁹⁸ Sulejman Crnčalo's wife, who had gone to the market to look for powdered milk, was also killed in this blast.¹⁴²⁹⁹ When she did not come home at the arranged time, Crnčalo went to the market to look for her and, once he arrived there at around noon, saw great commotion, blood traces everywhere, and pieces of human flesh scattered all over the area.¹⁴³⁰⁰ Crnčalo did not see any investigating organs or officials at the scene.¹⁴³⁰¹ He was told to go to the Koševo Hospital and, when he could not find his wife on the list of the wounded there, he went to the morgue where he finally learned that she was dead and saw her body.¹⁴³⁰²

4269. Following the explosion, Leka was taken to the Koševo Hospital where she spent some four or five days; in 1996, she still suffered from some pain in her shoulder and chest.¹⁴³⁰³ While fading in and out of consciousness after the incident, Svraka was driven to the Koševo Hospital where he saw a lot of injured people; he was operated on several times and released 45 days later.¹⁴³⁰⁴ Following that treatment, he had to undergo extensive reconstructive surgery in order to be able to step on his right foot and is now deemed to have a 90% disability.¹⁴³⁰⁵ market.¹⁴³⁰⁸ In addition, the scene was so chaotic that Đozo and his colleagues could not get through to provide assistance so they returned to the police station.¹⁴³⁰⁹ Other than taking a few statements from eyewitnesses later, Đozo did not participate in the investigation of this incident.¹⁴³¹⁰ He did, however, testify that prior to this incident he investigated two other shelling incidents, one on 25 June and another on 1 July 1995, where the shells landed in the immediate vicinity of Markale.¹⁴³¹¹ It was established in the first of these incidents, that the two or three shells that had landed came from the Serb positions in the north, from the settlements of Barice and Mrkovići, while in the later incident four shells came from the direction of Lukavica or Vraca which were also controlled by the SRK.¹⁴³¹² According to Đozo, fire was slowly being adjusted by the SRK until it finally reached Markale market on 28 August 1995.¹⁴³¹³ When put to him that it was unusual that, despite this adjustment of fire, Markale was ultimately only hit twice, once in 1994 and once in 1995, Đozo stated that it was certain that the busiest streets of Sarajevo were targeted and that most people circulated around the Mula Mustafe Bašeskije street.¹⁴³¹⁴

Nedim Bosnić.¹⁴³¹⁹ Turkušić and Bosnić were at the market approximately 10 minutes later, when most bodies had been cleared away and some UNPROFOR members, and personnel from CSB Sarajevo were already there.¹⁴³²⁰ Turkušić described the scene as the “last deepest circle of Dante’s hell” with huge pools of blood, severed body parts, and panic and fear among the people present.¹⁴³²¹

4273. Konings, an UNMO from the Sedrenik team, heard about the incident on the radio and soon after received a phone call from the “Bosnian police” asking the UNMOs to come to the scene.¹⁴³²² Konings and two other UNMOs were on location near the market approximately 30 minutes after the incident where they met with the Bosnian police, including ballistics experts and the investigative judge.¹⁴³²³ The whole group was at the scene of the incident approximately 40 minutes after the explosion.¹⁴³²⁴ By that time, all the victims had been taken away but there was still a lot of glass on the street, large pools of blood, and a large number of severed body parts.¹⁴³²⁵

4275. Turkušić very quickly detected the crater on Mula Mustafe Bašeskije street, near the entrance to the market building and relatively close to the pavement, and testified that it would have been impossible to disturb it at that point since it would have required a lot of manual work that would have been noticed by the dozens of people who were present.¹⁴³³¹ Konings and the other UNMOs also spotted and investigated the crater, and Konings did not notice any sign of tampering with the crater; to him it was immediately obvious that it was caused by a mortar rather than an artillery projectile.¹⁴³³² The UNMOs also found the stabiliser, which, according to Konings, was located 10 to 20 metres away from the point of impact, and which had bent fins and writing in Cyrillic on its back.¹⁴³³³ Bešić testified that the stabiliser was located some 25 to 45 metres away from the point of impact.¹⁴³³⁴ Turkušić confirmed that he did not personally find the stabiliser, although he did see it, and explained that it was marked with letters “KB” in Cyrillic, signifying that the shell was produced in the Krušik Factory in Valjevo, Serbia.¹⁴³³⁵ According to the CSB Sarajevo report, the stabiliser had “KB 9307” and “MK M74” inscribed on it.¹⁴³³⁶ Konings testified that the stabiliser was taken by the “Bosnian police”.¹⁴³³⁷

4276. According to the CSB Sarajevo report prepared on the basis of the initial information obtained on the day of the incident,¹⁴³³⁸ as well as Turkušić's ballistics report prepared following his and Bosnić's investigation, the stabiliser belonged to a 120 mm calibre shell which, based on the measurements of the crater, came from the south, its azimuth being 170 degrees, plus or minus five degrees.¹⁴³³⁹ This azimuth corresponded to "aggressor positions at the Trebević area."¹⁴³⁴⁰ The CSB Sarajevo report also provides that the fact that the "UN observers in the southern part of the city did not notice any artillery actions from the areas controlled by [ABiH] confirms that the shell was fired from the area temporally controlled by the aggressor."¹⁴³⁴¹ According to Turkušić, the shell impacted against the road directly without hitting anything along its trajectory.¹⁴³⁴²

4277. As for the origin of fire, while the team calculated the angle of descent of the shell to have been 70 degrees,¹⁴³⁴³ Turkušić stated that the team was unable to say exactly from which point the shell was fired, as that determination depended on the number of charges used to fire it.¹⁴³⁴⁴ However, based on the UNMOs' information that on that particular day the ABiH did not fire any mortar shells from its positions on the northern side of Trebević, the CSB Sarajevo team concluded that the shell had originated from the part of the Trebević slopes held by the Serb forces.¹⁴³⁴⁵ He also noted that many factors indicated that the shell was launched with three charges, which suggests an approximate distance of 2,400 to 2,500 metres from Markale.¹⁴³⁴⁶ When it was put to him that the UNMO's radar did not register any fire coming from the Serb side, Turkušić responded that this depended on the area the radar was adjusted to monitor.¹⁴³⁴⁷

4278. According to the UNMO report dated 29 August 1995, UNMO team from Sedrenik was tasked with investigating the Markale incident that took place at 11:10 a.m. on 28 August 1995, as well as the other four shells that fell nearby earlier that day, and it did so in conjunction with the local authorities.¹⁴³⁴⁸ As confirmed by Konings during his testimony in this case, this team concluded that all five impacts were 120 mm mortar projectiles, all bearing the same marks, namely "KB 9307" and "MK M74", and that the one that landed on Markale was fired from 170 degrees plus or minus five degrees from the north, with a minimum "angle of impact" of 67 degrees.¹⁴³⁴⁹ As for the other four rounds, the team found that they were fired from 220-240 degrees from the north and impacted the ground 200 to 300 metres from the shell that landed on Markale.¹⁴³⁵⁰ An accurate origin of fire for all five shells could not be determined because it was not known with which charge they were fired.¹⁴³⁵¹ Following the investigation on the scene, the UNMO team went to the morgue where it confirmed that 31 persons had been killed.¹⁴³⁵² In the morgue, Konings could see that the people had been killed by shrapnel and that their bodies were fresh.¹⁴³⁵³ Some hours later, the number of casualties was amended to 34 killed and 84 wounded.¹⁴³⁵⁴ Following a meeting with the Bosnian police at the police station, Konings submitted his report to his superiors.¹⁴³⁵⁵ He explained that during the meeting the Bosnian authorities wanted the UNMOs to declare that the Markale shell had been fired by the Bosnian Serbs but that he was unable to do so at that moment as there was a possibility that the shell had been fired from ABiH-held territory.¹⁴³⁵⁶

4279. Konings testified that the next day, on 29 August 1995, Thomas Knustad and Paul Conway, two UNMOs who had been manning OP-1 on the day of the incident, told him that they did not observe or hear any outgoing shots from the ABiH-held territory or from the part of the VRS-held territory they could see.¹⁴³⁵⁷ OP-1 was located in the south of Sarajevo, on Čolina Kapa Hill, approximately 200 metres north of the ABiH side of the confrontation line and approximately 1,500 metres away from the SRK lines.¹⁴³⁵⁸ Hogan testified that, based on the measurements he made by GPS, the distance between Markale market and the frontline in that area was approximately 1,600 metres.¹⁴³⁵⁹

4280. Knustad confirmed during his testimony that, on the morning of 28 August 1995, which was warm and clear, he was sitting at the UNMO house near OP-1 while Conway was manning the OP.¹⁴³⁶⁰ At around 11 a.m., they saw smoke rising from the area of Markale market and then heard the sound of an impact explosion in the city, which Knustad thought sounded like a mortar impact.¹⁴³⁶¹ Knustad heard only one impact and thought that the mortar did not pass very close to OP-1 otherwise he and Conway would have heard it.¹⁴³⁶² He also explained that the mortar had not been fired from “within the confrontation line” because he would have heard that too.¹⁴³⁶³ Conversely, he testified that, if fired from behind the SRK lines, it is possible that he would not have heard it, as the SRK-held territory was on the other side of the hill.¹⁴³⁶⁴ Accordingly, Knustad excluded the possibility of any mortar being fired from the ABiH-held territory.¹⁴³⁶⁵

4281. Conway testified that he heard the sound of several muffled explosions at around 11 a.m. on 28 August 1995 from OP-1 and that when he looked towards the city he saw several plumes of smoke; he was unable to say, however, if the muffled sounds were from incoming or outgoing fire.¹⁴³⁶⁶ He also testified that he may have missed other explosions from incoming or outgoing fire as he was going in and out of a shed near OP-1.¹⁴³⁶⁷ He noted that the sound of the explosions had been relatively low given that the impacts were only around three kilometres from the OP-1.¹⁴³⁶⁸ Accordingly, he did not agree that if someone at OP-1 did not hear sounds of outgoing mortar fire, then that fire must have come from the SRK side of the confrontation line.¹⁴³⁶⁹ He conceded, however, that if mortar was fired from a reasonably close distance to the listener, one would hear a “very distinctive ‘vrmph’ and ‘trmph’ sound”.¹⁴³⁷⁰

4282. Following his meeting with Knustad and Conway, Konings attended another meeting with the Bosnian authorities where they discussed the results of their investigations and, based on all the information in his possession, he came to the conclusion that the fire originated in the SRK-held territory.¹⁴³⁷¹ He explained that if the round had been fired from the ABiH-held territory, then in combination with all the other parameters, this could only have been done using either charges zero or one.¹⁴³⁷² Using charge zero would have placed the origin of fire near the OP-1 and the UNMOs manning that post would have heard or seen it being fired.¹⁴³⁷³ As for charge one, Konings testified that in his experience it is not normally used with 120 mm mortars, as doing so can result in the round exploding in the vicinity of the firing troops.¹⁴³⁷⁴

(c) UNPROFOR investigation

4283. In addition to the investigation by the UNMOs referred to above, the UN conducted an investigation by its Engineer Cell Sector Sarajevo, after which a follow-up analysis was conducted by Lieutenant Colonel Brian Powers, from the “G2 HQ UNPROFOR”, who considered and analysed both the UNMO and the Engineer Cell Sector Sarajevo reports.¹⁴³⁷⁵ All three reports were then sent to the UNPROFOR Sarajevo HQ Commander by Lieutenant Colonel Baxter who summarised their findings in the final UN official report.¹⁴³⁷⁶

4284. The Engineer Cell Sector Sarajevo came to the conclusion similar to that reached by the Bosnian police and the UNMO teams, finding that the 120 mm mortar shell—of “[S]erb manufacture”—was fired from 2,850 mils, or 160 degrees, from the north.¹⁴³⁷⁷

4285. As for Powers’ analysis, noting that the shell that landed on Markale was found to have a bearing different from the other four shells that fell in the vicinity, he reported on 29 August 1995 that the “analysis of the fuse farrow [sic] shows the bearing of [the Markale] round was most likely from 220–240 degrees and would have been fired from the same position as the other four rounds”, namely from somewhere between Lukavica and Miljevići.¹⁴³⁷⁸ Powers also noted that there must have been some kind of an anomaly with the Markale shell, which was later explained by Baxter to have probably been the result of the shell first striking a building on its flight path.¹⁴³⁷⁹

The Chamber notes that the Engineer Cell Sector Sarajevo report is dated 6 September 1995 even though the Engineer Cell conducted the crater analysis on 28 August and even though Powers ought to have analysed their report by 29 August 1995. The Chamber notes, however, that Demurenko can be seen in his interview of 2 September holding the original French version of the Engineer Cell report in his hand. See fn. 14399. Thus, the Chamber considers the date of 6 September to be the date of the English translation of the original Engineer Cell report rather than the date when the report itself was first prepared or submitted.

4286. Powers' report also provided that the UN radar was operating at the time but that it did not detect any of the mortars fired and that "[a]t least several of the five rounds would have been detected if fired close to the [confrontation line]."¹⁴³⁸⁰ According to the report, if the shells were fired from a longer range, the arc of the trajectory would have most likely been below the beam of the radar and therefore not detected.¹⁴³⁸¹ Powers further noted that the height of the buildings at the market was also considered and that, in order for a round to clear the top of the buildings on the south side of the street, it would have required either a high trajectory from close to the confrontation line or a low trajectory mortar shell fired from a middle to a long range.¹⁴³⁸² However, none of the staff manning the UN OPs in the area along the confrontation line observed or heard any firing at the time of the Markale incident.¹⁴³⁸³ Based on all this data, Powers concluded that the firing position of the five shells was in the SRK territory, and probably fired from the Lukavica area at a range of between 3,000 and 5,000 metres.¹⁴³⁸⁴ Powers' conclusions were presented to Harland and Smith, who from that point on had no doubt that the shell was fired by the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁴³⁸⁵

4287. On 8 September 1995, Baxter reported to the UNPROFOR Zagreb HQ, attaching all the above reports and noting that Powers' report has attempted to clarify the "apparent discrepancy" between the direction of the Markale shell and the direction of the preceding four shells.¹⁴³⁸⁶ His report also noted that the UN radar would have detected any mortar fired at a range of 950 metres or less so that the "assessment was that the mortars were fired at a lower trajectory which passed under the radar beam"; this in turn meant that the round would have come from a firing position, dependent on the charge, at a range between 1,550 and 3,500 metres, whereas the confrontation line

(d) Andrey Demurenko’s investigation

4288. Demurenko, Chief of Staff of Sector Sarajevo at the time of the incident,¹⁴³⁸⁹ testified that he heard about the Markale incident within 30 minutes after it happened.¹⁴³⁹⁰ He went to the incident site two hours later and observed both the crater and the experts working at the site, as well as blood on the street and the pavement.¹⁴³⁹¹ Having spent around 30 minutes at the site and having given instructions to the teams working there, Demurenko returned to the headquarters and about an hour later learned that a spokesperson for UNPROFOR, a British Lieutenant-Colonel, had organised a press conference in which he blamed the SRK for the incident.¹⁴³⁹² Demurenko thought that this was completely groundless as the investigation was still ongoing at that time.¹⁴³⁹³ As a result, in the evening of 28 August he proposed to his superior, at the time General Bachelet, to organise an investigation, to which Bachelet agreed.¹⁴³⁹⁴ Demurenko then selected his closest aids and, relying on the ballistic results he had at the time, they went to inspect possible firing locations both on the confrontation line, which was around 2,000 metres from the incident site, and in SRK-held territory, compiling photographs of those locations.¹⁴³⁹⁵ Their investigation lasted from 29 August to 1 September 1995, following which Demurenko prepared a report concluding that there were no suitable firing positions on the SRK side of the confrontation line; however, when he came to present his report to Bachelet, he was told by Bachelet's aide that the report would never be published due to its conclusions.¹⁴³⁹⁶

4289. As a result, Demurenko contacted the Associated Press and, on 2 September 1995, gave them an interview outlining his conclusions.¹⁴³⁹⁷ In the interview, Demurenko explained that he personally went to the positions from which the shell could have been fired had it been fired with charges three to six and found that these locations were unsuitable for firing positions, as were those found on the bearing line of the other four shells that fell on that day.¹⁴³⁹⁸ The Chamber notes that the video footage shows that Demurenko used a bearing of 176 degrees from the north, rather than 160 degrees as determined by UNPROFOR investigators or 170 plus or minus five degrees as determined by CSB Sarajevo and the UNMOs.¹⁴³⁹⁹ Demurenko testified that having given this interview, he was threatened by an ABiH officer and disciplined by his own command in Sector Sarajevo.¹⁴⁴⁰⁰

4290. Demurenko explained that in three of the four possible positions he visited, the ground was made up of stones, while the fourth position was forested, which is why he concluded that not a single one of these positions was suitable for mortar placement.¹⁴⁴⁰¹ He also stated that he and his team did not have GPS but went to the relevant sites using "traditional old fashioned instruments to determine the location".¹⁴⁴⁰² When asked if the margin of error with which the ballistic experts were working meant that the firing positions would have encompassed an area bigger than the specific positions he visited, Demurenko at first testified that the deviation would have been about

The Chamber notes, however, that contrary to his evidence, Demurenko can be seen in his interview holding the very UNPROFOR report he claimed he did not have or use during his investigation. Later, in re-examination, Demurenko testified that the team also explored the area starting from 160 degrees. See Andrey Demurenko, T. 28991 (17 October 2012). The Chamber notes that Demurenko had not mentioned a visit to the areas covered by the direction of fire of 160 degrees despite having given detailed evidence about his investigation in the Dragomir Milošević case. In addition, he did not mention it in the interview he gave following his investigation. Accordingly, the Chamber does not find his evidence on this matter credible.

15 metres alone; later he conceded that the margin of error in the azimuth (of plus or minus five degrees) meant that each of the locations he visited would have had a radius of between 175 and 315 metres, depending on the charge.¹⁴⁴⁰³ He said that he visited those wider areas and conceded that some of them would have been suitable for placing a mortar, but testified that those showed no traces of mortar placement when he inspected them.¹⁴⁴⁰⁴ On cross-examination, when put to him that this is not what he said previously, in the Dragomir Milošević case, Demurenko agreed, explaining that he wanted to focus on the specific four locations in his testimony but that in fact the team went to many more.¹⁴⁴⁰⁵

4291. Demurenko further conceded that he used firing tables for an M52 120 mm mortar but denied that this would have resulted in different positions to the positions given in firing tables for an M74 120 mm mortar, which was said to have been used in Markale.¹⁴⁴⁰⁶ During cross-examination in this case, he conceded that he did not know which shell was used in Markale when he conducted his investigation, but that this made no difference to his team because they checked the entire slope.¹⁴⁴⁰⁷ The Chamber notes that according to his Associated Press interview, Demurenko placed charge three at 2,000 metres, rather than at 2,400 to 2,500 metres as done by Turkušić.¹⁴⁴⁰⁸

4292. Commenting on the UNPROFOR conclusions relating to the UN radar, Demurenko testified that they were “absolutely wrong” because mortars that fired from middle to long range would have had a higher, not lower, trajectory and thus would have been detected by the UN radar.¹⁴⁴⁰⁹ He also noted that, contrary to the report's conclusion that the confrontation line was 1,050 metres away from the incident site, it was in fact around 2,000 metres away.¹⁴⁴¹⁰

While Demurenko testified that his evidence on the deviation of 15 metres or less was misunderstood by the D. Milošević Chamber, the Chamber considers this not to be the case. Instead, Demurenko has simply changed his evidence following the Milošević judgement.

4293. Demurenko thought that the incident was a "terrorist attack" organised within Sarajevo, as the 120 mm mortar shell could not have caused that many casualties and was not heard or registered by anyone.¹⁴⁴¹¹ Conceding that mortars were designed to hit targets behind obstacles, he also thought that the chances of the first shell hitting Markale was "one in a million" though the market was struck twice during the war.¹⁴⁴¹² According to Demurenko, it would have been very easy to create a crater by a detonation device placed in an urn, although he acknowledged that he had no evidence for this.¹⁴⁴¹³

4294. Hogan testified that he tested Demurenko's evidence by going—as close as possible—to the positions visited by him in 1995 and took photographs and GPS readings of them.¹⁴⁴¹⁴ The Chamber notes that a number of these photographs show locations which are not covered by forest and look suitable for the placement of mortars. The Chamber also notes that Zorica Subotić, while criticising Hogan for checking the positions on this trajectory and implying that he did so in order to find a suitable firing position, contradicted Demurenko's conclusion by testifying that there was in fact a suitable firing position on the trajectory of 176 degrees.¹⁴⁴¹⁵

(e) Aftermath and NATO air strikes

4295. After the incident and before he went to the scene that day, Harland spent much of his time discussing with Smith what the next steps would be and the fact that if it were determined that the shell was fired by the Serbs, there would have to be a major military response.¹⁴⁴¹⁶ On the day of the incident itself and the following day, Smith had three conversations with Mladić, during which they discussed the circumstances surrounding the incident.¹⁴⁴¹⁷ In the first conversation, which took place at 2:13 p.m. on 28 August 1995, Smith explained to Mladić the seriousness of the situation and that all facts at that point were indicating that the incident was committed by the VRS.¹⁴⁴¹⁸ Mladić agreed to carry out a comprehensive assessment to ensure that no weapons had been fired without authority but also claimed that this was an attack by the Bosnian Muslims designed to discredit the VRS.¹⁴⁴¹⁹ Mladić also urged Smith to set up a joint investigation team comprising both warring factions and the UNPROFOR.¹⁴⁴²⁰

4296. On the same day, at around 1 p.m., Colonel Čedomir Sladoje issued an order on behalf of the SRK Command ordering a ban on use of fire and asking all SRK brigades to inform the Command, by 2 p.m. whether they had opened fire on Sarajevo between 10 a.m. and 12 p.m. that day.¹⁴⁴²¹ Later that day the VRS Main Staff reported to the Accused that the SRK brigades did not open fire on Sarajevo between 10 a.m. and 12 p.m..¹⁴⁴²²

4297. At 6:23 p.m. that day, Mladić reported to Smith that no VRS forces were involved in the incident.¹⁴⁴²³ In return, Smith told Mladić that the UNMO investigation had established that the round was a 120 mm mortar round probably fired from the south.¹⁴⁴²⁴ On the evening of 28 August 1995, while Janvier was on leave, Smith decided to initiate the NATO bombing campaign.¹⁴⁴²⁵ He testified that he was confident at that point that the Bosnian Serbs were responsible for this incident based not only the findings on the direction of fire he received from the various UN investigators but, more significantly, on the fact that none of the UN personnel had heard these shells being fired from within the proximity of Sarajevo.¹⁴⁴²⁶

4298. The next day, 29 August at 10 a.m., Smith informed Mladić that it was now beyond reasonable doubt that the shells had come from the VRS territory and that the investigation had revealed that the origin of fire was approximately 3.5 to 4 kilometres southwest of the impact ¹⁴⁴²⁶ Rupert Smith, T. 11456–11458 (9 February 2011). When it was put to Smith during cross-examination that, in light of the first UNMO report prepared by Konings on 28 August, he could not have known on that day that the Bosnian Serbs were responsible for the Markale incident, Smith explained that he had other sources of reporting in his office. See Rupert Smith, T. 11509–11511 (10 February 2011); P150 (UNMO report, 28 August 1995).

point.¹⁴⁴²⁷ Mladić responded that he had checked all SRK firing positions and that the shell had not been fired by his soldiers; he once again urged Smith to set up a joint commission claiming there were a number of indications to suggest that the incident had been “orchestrated by the BiH”.¹⁴⁴²⁸ When shown a report Janvier sent to Kofi Annan on 29 August 1995 at 10:36 a.m.—half an hour after Smith’s third conversation with Mladić—in which Janvier informed Annan that the origin of fire was still being investigated and was difficult to establish due to the impossibility of determining the charge with which the shell was fired, Smith stated that he could not comment on what was going on in the UN Headquarters.¹⁴⁴²⁹ When asked why he was sure “beyond reasonable doubt” that the Bosnian Serbs were responsible for the incident given the fact that the UN reports were using more careful language, such as “most likely”, Smith explained that while his conclusion was not an “absolute positive”, it meant that it was “most likely to be positive” and reiterated that it was based on a number of factors, including that no one heard a round being fired from the proximity of Sarajevo.¹⁴⁴³⁰

4299. Also on 29 August, at 4:30 p.m., the Accused, Mladić, Plavšić, Krajišnik, Tolimir and Gvero, among others, met with the FRY leadership, including Slobodan Milošević, Momir Bulatović, and Momčilo Perišić, to discuss the upcoming peace conference.¹⁴⁴³¹ During this meeting, Milošević proposed that the Bosnian Serb leadership criticise the shelling and the killing of innocent civilians in Sarajevo “in a more severe way” to which Tolimir reacted saying that by 11 a.m. on that day, no one had precise information on where the shell had come from.¹⁴⁴³² Milošević retorted, however, that Akashi had informed him at 2:30 p.m. that the shell came from the Bosnian Serb side to which Mladić said that the shells had come from two different directions (170 and 220 degrees) neither of which could have been from the Serb positions but only from the Muslim

He testified that he did not take Demurenko into account at the time, as the interview was filmed some days after Smith had already made the decision to initiate the bombing. See Rupert Smith, T. 11520–11526 (10 February 2011). See also P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), para. 232; David Harland, T. 2320 (11 May 2010).

mobile launching pads.¹⁴⁴³³ Mladić also voiced his doubt about the number of victims given the size of the crater, which he deemed to be “not bigger than an ashtray”.¹⁴⁴³⁴

4300. On 30 August 1995 at around 2 a.m., the NATO air strikes began and letters were sent to Mladić, the Accused, and Slobodan Milošević informing them of this fact.¹⁴⁴³⁵ The letter to Mladić was written by Janvier, informing him that a thorough investigation was conducted and found that the fire on Markale came from the VRS positions south-southwest of Sarajevo¹⁴⁴³⁶ thus resulting in the initiation of the air strikes, that the object of the air strikes was to prevent further shelling of Sarajevo, and that the attacks would cease once Janvier was convinced that the threat of further shelling by the SRK had been eliminated.¹⁴⁴³⁷ Letters to Milošević and the Accused were written by Akashi, wherein he informed them what the UN teams concluded with respect to Markale and about the initiation of the air strikes; in the letter to the Accused Akashi also wrote that the “key to stopping the air action” was in the Accused’s and Mladić’s hands and strongly urged him to ensure that the attacks on Sarajevo stopped.¹⁴⁴³⁸

4301. On 1 September 1995, the air strikes stopped and Janvier and Banbury met with Mladić, Perišić, Gvero, and Tolimir in Mali Zvornik to discuss the current situation; they told Mladić that the investigation results clearly identified the Bosnian Serbs as the perpetrators, to which Mladić responded that Markale was “a pretext to gain a corridor for the Muslims to Sarajevo”.¹⁴⁴³⁹

4302. Smith also conceded that the preparations for military action against the Bosnian Serbs began before the Markale incident, namely following the London Conference, when he started withdrawing UN troops from Goražde, and that he was waiting for an “event to occur”, such as an attack on a safe area, that would lead to a military action.¹⁴⁴⁴⁰ He testified that in the immediate aftermath of the incident he was under pressure from UNPROFOR Headquarters in Zagreb, BiH authorities, and the NATO itself to make the “decision that was required of him”.¹⁴⁴⁴¹

4303. On 2 September 1995, Janvier sent a telegram to Annan, wherein he addressed speculation in the media that the shell could not have come from the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁴⁴⁴² According to this telegram, “[t]here is no disagreement about the difficulty of deliberately hitting [that area]” but that it is “most likely that the shot was just fired in the general area” and that it was “blind fire”; the fact that it then landed in the market was a “great misfortune”.¹⁴⁴⁴³ It also provides that “[a]fter 40 months of shelling the City, it should not be a cause of surprise that one should eventually find such a tragic target.”¹⁴⁴⁴⁴ Finally, the telegram summarises the findings that point to the VRS being responsible for the incident, namely that (i) all five shells had the same markings on the stabiliser; (ii) the radar was observing the area at an elevation of 960 metres 24 hours a day such that anything fired above that height would have been detected; and (iii) had the mortar rounds been fired from the ABiH side, the UNMOs, FreBat 4, EgyBat, would have heard the fire and it would have been picked up by the radar.¹⁴⁴⁴⁵ The telegram also notes that the idea that the shell was fired from few streets away is not supported by the entries in the logs of the neighbouring OPs.¹⁴⁴⁴⁶

4304. Harland testified that the principal doubt as to who fired the five mortar shells arose because Smith made a statement to the press, on Harland’s advice, that UNPROFOR’s investigation showed that it was unclear who fired the shell.¹⁴⁴⁴⁷ Harland advised Smith to make a neutral statement even though both men already knew that the Bosnian Serbs were found to be responsible.¹⁴⁴⁴⁸ According to Harland, this was a “necessary deception” as they were about to initiate large-scale air strikes against the Bosnian Serbs for which they had been preparing for some time in order to end the war, and therefore did not want to make any public statements that would allow the Bosnian Serbs to prepare by, for example, taking international hostages.¹⁴⁴⁴⁹ While still convinced that it was the right course of action to take, Harland noted that it has been a cause of distress to him that he may have contributed to an “enduring myth” that there was doubt about who was responsible for this incident.¹⁴⁴⁵⁰

4305. On 4 September 1995, Mladić sent an angry letter to Smith, suggesting again a joint commission of experts for an investigation of the incident, and posing the following questions, among others:

Why do you not inform the public of the role which the Muslim side and a foreign country’s Intelligence experts had in the screenplay ‘Markale-2’? Why the public has never been informed about the scenario of ‘Markale-1’? Are you hiding from the public the truth about ‘Markale-1’ and ‘Markale-2’ in order to justify the aggression against the [RS] made by NATO [...]?¹⁴⁴⁵¹

4306. Prvoslav Davinić, director of the UN Centre for Disarmament Affairs at the time,¹⁴⁴⁵² testified that he heard about the incident on the day it happened in a meeting with Under Secretary Goulding, who told the attendees that there were no clear indications at the time that the shell came from the Serb side and that one could not exclude the possibility that it came from the ABiH.¹⁴⁴⁵³ According to Davinić, Goulding then instructed one of his staff to follow the developments on the ground and the next day the staff member filed a report in which she emphasised that the aim of the investigation on the ground was to show that the Bosnian Serbs fired the shell as it made no sense that the other side would; according to Davinić, once the Bosnian Serb side was blamed, there was talk in the UN corridors that the incident was not investigated properly and that political considerations had prevailed.¹⁴⁴⁵⁴

4307. The Chamber has already outlined the positions of the SRK units in the area south and southeast of Stari Grad and Markale, and recalls that much of Mt. Trebević was in the zone of responsibility of the 1st Romanija Brigade and later the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade.¹⁴⁴⁵⁵ In early August 1995, the SRK was re-organised again and the 4th Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade was created, which incorporated the Trebević and other battalions of the 1st Romanija Brigade, with Stevan Veljović as the Commander of the new brigade.¹⁴⁴⁵⁶ The zone of responsibility of this new brigade included the area of Trebević and Vidikovac, and its weapons arsenal included a 120 mm and 82 mm mortar battery with firing positions in the Brus sector, southeast of Sarajevo on Mt. Trebević.¹⁴⁴⁵⁷ According to Veljović, on 24 August, on the order of the SRK Commander,¹⁴⁴⁵⁸ he sent the whole battery, together with its firing crew, to Trebinje to assist the Herzegovina Corps dealing with attacks from Croatia, and they remained there until mid-September.¹⁴⁴⁵⁹ Veljović was adamant that at the time of the Markale incident there was therefore not a single 120 mm mortar pointed in the direction of Markale.¹⁴⁴⁶⁰

4308. Dušan Škrba, at the time the Chief of Artillery in the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade,¹⁴⁴⁶¹ testified that no fire was opened on the day of the incident from his zone of responsibility southwest of Markale, particularly not from 120 mm mortars as those were relocated outside of the 20 kilometre circle around Sarajevo; thus, there were no firing positions for 120 mm mortars on the Miljevići axis or on the road towards the tower of Trebević.¹⁴⁴⁶² Contrary to Veljović, however, he did not deny that smaller calibres, such as 82 mm mortars, remained in the area south of Sarajevo.¹⁴⁴⁶³

While Veljović referred to this brigade as the “4th Serbian Brigade”, the documents indicate that the brigade’s official name was 4th Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade. See e.g. P5944 (Report of 4th Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade to SRK, 31 August 1995).

Also contradicting Veljović’s evidence was Miloš Škrba, a member of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade, who lived in Petrovići and had relatives in the village of Studenkovići, south of Markale. He testified that while he never saw 120 mm mortars in Studenkovići or in the vicinity of the road connecting Petrovići and Studenkovići, he saw one 82 mm mortar on that road in August 1995. See D2344 (Witness statement of Miloš Škrba dated 14 October 2012), para. 10; D2346 (Map of Sarajevo marked by Miloš Škrba); Miloš Škrba, T. 29195–29198 (22 October 2012) (appearing to then contradict his witness statement by testifying that his evidence about the lack of 120 mm mortars in the area concerned mostly 1992 and 1993 and that he did not in fact know about 1995); P5939 (Map of Trebević marked by Miloš Škrba). Miloš Škrba’s witness statement is also contradicted by the SRK order of 9 May 1995 in which Dragomir Milošević refers to 4309. Prior to becoming Chief of Artillery, Dušan Škrba was the Commander of the Mixed Artillery Battalion of the brigade, which had four firing positions, that included, among other weapons, 120 mm mortars; these mortars were located east of Lukavica, in the Prljevo Brdo and Uzdojnica sectors (that is, southwest of Markale), and were permanently positioned there until they had to be relocated outside of the TEZ in August 1995.¹⁴⁴⁶⁴ Contradicting Dušan Škrba was Blagoje Kovačević, whose unit's zone of responsibility covered the area at 220 degrees from the north, and who testified that there was no SRK artillery on that line, not even 82 mm mortars.¹⁴⁴⁶⁵

4310. Dragomir Milošević testified that following the incident he was told by Čedo Sladojević, Lugonja, and other SRK officers that on the day of the incident no fire was opened on Markale by the SRK.¹⁴⁴⁶⁶

4311. As noted earlier,¹⁴⁴⁶⁷ the ABiH held positions on the northern base of Mt. Trebević.¹⁴⁴⁶⁸ Asim Džambasović testified that the 10th Mountain Brigade of the ABiH 1st Corps held the area roughly from Miljacka River to the south up to the northern slopes of Trebević, and all the way up to Zlatište and the Vraca Monument beyond the Jewish cemetery; its zone of responsibility covered the areas of Soukbunar, Skenderija, Bostarići and the neighbourhood of Cicin Han Lipa.¹⁴⁴⁶⁹ Debelo Brdo and Čolina Kapa were also held by the ABiH.¹⁴⁴⁷⁰ Conway recounted that in December 1995, as the UNMO mission was coming to a close, he came across four ABiH mortars “at the bottom of a steep hill in the southern hills of Sarajevo”, an area in which the UNMOs had not been permitted to patrol; the four mortars were pointed north, towards the city, and appeared to have been there for a considerable period of time as they were sandbagged and maintained.¹⁴⁴⁷¹ At first Conway indicated, by placing them just north-east of Mrakuša, that these mortars were positioned south-southeast of Markale market.¹⁴⁴⁷² However, when shown a more detailed map on cross-examination, he placed them north of Mrakuša, and thus south-southwest of Markale.¹⁴⁴⁷³

4312. The Chamber notes that an ABiH working map for the period relevant to the incident does show an ABiH mortar position in the relevant area; however, that position was located immediately northeast of Čolina Kapa, and thus southeast of Markale, rather than north of Mrakuša as testified to by Conway.¹⁴⁴⁷⁴

(g) Post-war investigations

4313. Higgs was asked by the Prosecution to investigate this incident based on many of the reports and investigative materials referred to above, including BiH MUP reports and videos, the statements of Konings and Knustad, and the UNPROFOR and UNMO reports.¹⁴⁴⁷⁵ He confirmed that the stabiliser found at the scene indicated the projectile was a 120 mm shell, the range of which spanned from 300 to 6,200 metres.¹⁴⁴⁷⁶ Higgs thought that Powers' report was incorrect as its conclusion was based on the fuse furrow despite the furrow not being of the best quality due to the nature of the ground and the shell's angle of descent.¹⁴⁴⁷⁷ Since there was no visible or reliable fuse furrow, the correct methodology for determining the bearing was to use the crater shape as the primary source of information, which was done by all the other investigation teams, who all came to the conclusion that the bearing was 170 degrees from the north.¹⁴⁴⁷⁸ Higgs commented on the four other shells that landed near Markale on the day of the incident, noting that the fact that they came from 220 to 240 degrees from north is what may have caused the confusion because the

UNPROFOR investigators simply presumed that all five shells must have come from the same firing position.¹⁴⁴⁷⁹ Finally, Higgs conducted his own analysis of the bearing using the data supplied to him and came to the conclusion that the bearing of the Markale shell was one of 175 degrees.¹⁴⁴⁸⁰

4314. As for the angle of descent, while difficult to ascertain, Higgs thought it probable that it was between 67 and 75 degrees and probably nearer 70 degrees, as determined by Turkušić.¹⁴⁴⁸¹ Using that angle, Higgs identified several locations as the possible origin of fire, namely 900, 1,600, 2,400, and 3,000 metres away from Markale in the established direction of fire, starting with charge one and ending with charge four respectively.¹⁴⁴⁸² Plotting these locations on the map, and noting the shallow crater and the fact that the UNMOs did not hear the shell being fired and that their radar did not detect it, Higgs concluded, again confirming Turkušić's testimony, that the shell was most likely fired from 2,400 metres away using charge three, as this would have put the firing position out of the ear shot of the UNMOs.¹⁴⁴⁸³ In this position, the mortar was also much higher than the target, giving it a large range and steeper angle of descent.¹⁴⁴⁸⁴

4315. According to Higgs, the firing of one single shell meant that there was only one objective to the fire, namely to "harass the enemy" by preventing free movement, causing casualties—which in urban environment will nearly always be civilian—and "pray[ing] on the minds of the people."¹⁴⁴⁸⁵ Due to the nature of the conflict in Sarajevo, Higgs noted that it was simple to have the targets pre-recorded all over the city and to know where the main meeting points were.¹⁴⁴⁸⁶ Thus, if one

¹⁴⁴⁷⁹ Richard Higgs, T. 5929–5932 (18 August 2010). Based on the traces around the crater, Turkušić also excluded the possibility of the bearing in the case of the Markale shell being between 220 and 240 degrees from the north. See Emir Turkušić, T. 9020–9022 (4 November 2010); P1929 (Photograph re shelling of Markale on 28 August 1995 marked by Emir Turkušić); P1930 (Photograph re shelling of Markale on 28 August 1995 marked by Emir Turkušić). Konings conceded that the team had to work very quickly and that there may have been a margin of error in the established bearing of 170 degrees. However, he thought that this was not sufficient to account for the difference between the bearing of the shell that hit Markale and the four earlier shells, concluding that the difference arose simply because the Markale shell was fired from a completely different location. wanted to cause maximum effect from a single shell, then Markale would have been a prime target.¹⁴⁴⁸⁷ With respect to the other four shells that landed near Markale on the same day, Higgs noted that it is a common ploy to fire a shell that causes casualties in one area and then shortly afterwards fire others nearby where people may be gathering.¹⁴⁴⁸⁸ While it was not possible to determine that this was the case here, Higgs stated that the circumstances on that day were “similar and suspicious”.¹⁴⁴⁸⁹

4316. Zorica Subotić analysed this incident as well. Observing that it was the last of the nine Sarajevo incidents in which a large group of civilians died, she claimed that they all had in common a projectile of “unbelievable accuracy”, with explosions occurring in places where many people were gathered.¹⁴⁴⁹⁰ According to her, while statistically possible for this to happen in one case, it is “statistically very improbable” and “for practical purposes [...] impossible” in nine separate cases.¹⁴⁴⁹¹

4317. Subotić also thought, having analysed the video footage of the incident, that it was difficult to find a “valid technical explanation” for certain scenes.¹⁴⁴⁹² For example, she claimed that the nature of injuries sustained by some of the wounded persons “cannot be accepted as correct” given their respective proximity to the point of impact, so that it was inexplicable that they even survived the explosion, let alone were conscious, moving, and sitting up straight.¹⁴⁴⁹³ She dismissed Turkšić’s evidence that a man seen hanging over a fence, with a large chest wound, was injured by mortar shell fragments, asserting that his injury could only have been caused by a “dense narrow beam” of fragments, which is not how a mortar shell fragments.¹⁴⁴⁹⁴ She added that his injuries were even less realistic in view of the fact that there was “almost no blood under this body on the pavement.”¹⁴⁴⁹⁵ Another example, according to her, was the presence of glass in front of the market hall building and up to the point of impact, which Subotić claimed was unusual as the glass should have been pushed into the market hall due to the detonation wave created in the street.¹⁴⁴⁹⁶ She also pointed out the presence of persons wearing camouflage uniforms, arguing that these were most likely members of the ABiH who were not there by accident but were organised, with one person issuing orders.¹⁴⁴⁹⁷

4318. With respect to the other four other mortar shells that fell on that day, Subotić noted that they struck the area of the National Theatre, some 235 metres from Markale market, and yet were not heard by any of the 71 witnesses interviewed by the police or by the UNMOs at Sedrenik’s OP-1, including Knustad.¹⁴⁴⁹⁸ Thus, Subotić claimed that the four explosions did not precede the Markale explosion.¹⁴⁴⁹⁹

4319. Noting that the video footage of the impact site shows that the crater and the traces of shrapnel can hardly be seen, Subotić thought that this was because the traces in the asphalt were shallow, which is typical of cases where the mortar shell has very low speed or when it is activated in static conditions.¹⁴⁵⁰⁰ She thus concluded that if the crater was caused by a mortar shell, that shell impacted at very low speed and thus could not have been fired with a charge larger than charge one.¹⁴⁵⁰¹ According to her, the fact that the stabiliser was not found near the crater supported this conclusion, since the stabiliser of a shell fired at a charge higher than three is usually embedded in the ground.¹⁴⁵⁰² On the other hand, a shell fired at charges one or two will usually propel the stabiliser into the immediate vicinity of the crater or is propelled back along the approximate trajectory of the shell.¹⁴⁵⁰³

4320. In Subotić's opinion, the conclusion of the final UNPROFOR report that all five shells were fired from the same weapon as part of the same salvo has no technical merit as it is inconceivable that the Markale shell could have travelled more than 200 metres farther than the other shells.¹⁴⁵⁰⁴ She further rejected the conclusion that the projectile hit a building first because the shell would have been activated upon the first impact and would have left a visible trace on the building; however, such trace was not registered.¹⁴⁵⁰⁵

4321. Subotić submitted that, while his method was acceptable, Higgs made a deliberate error when calculating the angle of the trajectory of the shell, as he took into account the wrong azimuth of the kerb on Maršala Tita street.¹⁴⁵⁰⁶ Correcting this mistake, she found that the trajectory of the shell was 155 degrees rather than 175 degrees, the former being within the margin of error of the azimuth determined by the Engineer Cell, namely 160 degrees plus or minus five degrees.¹⁴⁵⁰⁷

4322. Recalling that the minimum angle of descent had to be 67 degrees for the shell to clear the buildings, Subotić disputed the angle of descent determined by CSB Sarajevo and, using the specifications of an M62 120 mm mortar shell, calculated that the angle of descent was in fact 64

Turkušić, however, denied that one could tell from the location of the stabiliser, some metres away from the point of impact, that the speed of the shell was low. See Emir Turkušić, T. 9078–9079 (4 November 2010) Higgs testified that the stabiliser could have landed any distance away from the crater and also could have bounced back off buildings to end up where it did. degrees.¹⁴⁵⁰⁸ Thus, the shell could not have landed in the location where the crater was but must have been statically activated or “reached the pavement in front of the Market Hall in some other way”.¹⁴⁵⁰⁹

4323. With respect to the stabiliser, Subotić claimed that because it was found 29 metres away from the crater, “laterally to the incoming trajectory”, the explosion could not have occurred in a “regular” way, in which case the stabiliser would have been either embedded or located at the point of impact, or it would have been propelled back in the approximate direction from which it came.¹⁴⁵¹⁰ Subotić also noted that the stabiliser fins were deformed in an unusual way and showed signs of erosion in some of the video footage, whereas the stabiliser in evidence, namely P1454, does not bear such traces.¹⁴⁵¹¹ Further, she thought that the holes on the cap of the stabiliser¹⁴⁵¹² which is in evidence, namely P1454, were differently aligned when compared to the video footage of the stabiliser at the scene, thus confirming that P1454 was not the stabiliser that hit Markale.¹⁴⁵¹³ Looking at the video footage of the scene, Subotić saw an object marked by the police and thought that it was another stabiliser, which was purposefully not reported on by the police and the UN investigators; she also asserted that this stabiliser could not have been in that place as a result of an explosion.¹⁴⁵¹⁴

4324. In order to support its case that P1454 is the stabiliser that was found in Markale on 28 August 1995, the Prosecution used it during Subotić’s cross-examination to show that its cap was loose so that screwing it in or out would change the alignment of the holes; having confirmed this to be the case, Subotić claimed that when she had earlier looked at the stabiliser, in preparation

4325. Subotić challenged UNPROFOR’s conclusion that the shell came from between 1,550 to 3,500 metres away, arguing that had that been the case, it would not have attained the minimum angle of descent necessary to clear the buildings.¹⁴⁵¹⁷ Looking at the ranges used by the UNPROFOR in its analysis in relation to the UN radar, Subotić guessed which firing tables they used and then used the same tables to determine the height at which the radar beam would detect a shell, namely 550 metres or higher.¹⁴⁵¹⁸ Analysing the possible trajectories, based on the angles of descent of 67 and 70 degrees, she found that the UN radar would have detected every shell fired from the SRK positions.¹⁴⁵¹⁹ Arguing further that the shell would have been heard if fired from the ABiH positions, that is, with charges one and two, she concluded that the explosion at Markale market must have been static, the mortar shell having been activated in “one of the known ways” or thrown from a roof.¹⁴⁵²⁰ Nevertheless, she visited sites that corresponded to charges three and four for all the trajectories relevant to this incident and found no suitable firing positions due to hilly and forested terrain, except in one location, at the trajectory of 175 degrees and a distance of 3,800 from the point of impact; the azimuth she determined was around 250 degrees, which was similar to the azimuth of the other four shells that no one heard); Zorica Subotić, T. 38330, 38352–38353 (15 May 2013).

(h) Casualties

4326. In terms of casualties, both Milan Mandilović and Bakir Nakaš, doctors at the Sarajevo State Hospital at the time, testified that following the explosion at Markale market, which was about a kilometre away from the hospital, cars started “flowing in” bringing in large numbers of seriously wounded persons.¹⁴⁵²³ Mandilović could immediately see that their injuries were caused by shell shrapnel.¹⁴⁵²⁴ He testified that in total approximately 40 persons arrived at the hospital, most of whom were civilians; he did see a “military person here and there” but testified that their number was “negligible”.¹⁴⁵²⁵ Nakaš also confirmed that most of the victims were wearing civilian clothes.¹⁴⁵²⁶ Mandilović authenticated a number of medical records from both the State and Koševo Hospitals relating to the victims of this incident, including autopsy reports.¹⁴⁵²⁷ These autopsy reports refer to 43 dead victims, one of whom is Crnčalo’s wife.¹⁴⁵²⁸ Nakaš also authenticated a number of State Hospital’s medical records relating to the victims of the Markale incident.¹⁴⁵²⁹

While the English translation of this document contains 47 certificates, four of those are duplicates (relating to Zeno Bašević and Salko Duraković, Najla Duraković, and Husein Duraković), thus leaving 43 autopsy certificates. In addition, two of those certificates, namely those related to Najla Duraković and Husein Duraković are in fact certificates for Najla Fazlić and Husein Bektašević. The Chamber considers this to have been a typographical error during translation.

4327. The CSB Sarajevo report notes that on the day of the incident 35 persons were confirmed dead and 78 wounded, which was verified by KDZ485 who went to the hospitals and the morgue and identified the individuals in question.¹⁴⁵³⁰ Turkušić's ballistics report differs slightly as it notes that 34 persons were killed and 84 wounded in the explosion.¹⁴⁵³¹ Both Bešić and KDZ485 testified that more people died later, with Bešić estimating that 30 other individuals later died from their injuries.¹⁴⁵³² While in the morgue, Crnčalo saw, in addition to his wife, another eight bodies, most of whom were female.¹⁴⁵³³ He testified that around 40 people died in this incident and noted that they were brought to another part of the same morgue.¹⁴⁵³⁴

4328. With respect to casualties, Subotić argued that the final list of 118 casualties does not match what the findings of the police and the investigating judge during the on-site investigation, as the latter registered 35 dead and 78 wounded persons on 28 August 1995, which is a total of 113 casualties.¹⁴⁵³⁵ According to Subotić, the final total of 118 victims was eventually determined, albeit without explanation, by the CSB Sarajevo in a report under the codename "Action Truth" sent to the SDB that same day, whereby it was specified that 33 persons were killed, eight of whom could not be identified, and 85 wounded.¹⁴⁵³⁶ Thus, according to her, the final number of victims was in fact not determined by the teams investigating the incident.¹⁴⁵³⁷ Based on her own calculations of the parameters of the affected area,¹⁴⁵³⁸ she asserted that the final number of victims was exaggerated and that the number reported by the UNMOs, namely 90 casualties in total, is

The Chamber notes that the BCS version of this document does not fully correspond to the translation, however, the Chamber was able to discern the lists of victims from the BCS version as well as the reference to the "Action Truth" and thus was able to follow Subotić's reasoning. The Chamber notes that Subotić's claim that there is no explanation as to the discrepancy in numbers is plainly incorrect as the report in question clearly states that CSB Sarajevo was in constant contact with medical staff in different hospitals who are still working on identifying patients. Thus, it is clear that at that point the information was still being updated.

¹⁴⁵³⁸ In making this calculation, Subotić assumed that the main street on which the trams were running must have been empty at the time and not crowded, which then meant that the remaining area was too small to contain all the people who were wounded or killed. D3551 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "Mortar Attacks on the Sarajevo Area: Incidents at the Markale Market 5 February 1994 and 28 August 1995", 15 August 2012), p. 130. The Chamber finds this calculation extremely speculative.

more likely to be correct.¹⁴⁵³⁹ Relying on the evidence of a doctor who testified in the Dragomir Milošević case, but not in this case, Subotić then asserted that based on the photo documentation of the 35 persons killed in the incident, two of these persons were not killed by shrapnel but by a bullet from a small firearm.¹⁴⁵⁴⁰ In addition, she claimed that in the video footage, the appearance of two wounds on the body of another victim cast doubt on whether he was killed by shrapnel from the explosion.¹⁴⁵⁴¹

4329. According to the Adjudicated Fact 3081, at least 35 persons died and at least 78 persons were wounded, many of them seriously, in Markale market. The great majority of those wounded were civilians, while one of the deceased was a soldier of the ABiH.¹⁴⁵⁴²

(i) Markale area as a potential military target

4330. Addressing whether there was a military target at or nearby the market, Konings testified that the area was a civilian area, noting that he had passed by the location that morning at around 9 or 10 a.m. and that it was crowded with mostly civilians.¹⁴⁵⁴³ Leka testified that the shell landed in a “strictly civilian area” and that there was no military activity in the neighbourhood.¹⁴⁵⁴⁴ Svraka also testified that he had never seen any military installations or activities in the Markale area.¹⁴⁵⁴⁵ He was never personally in the ABiH but was under a work obligation and would dig trenches at the frontlines, including at Mt. Igman and Žuč Hill.¹⁴⁵⁴⁶ Dozo also testified that there were no army facilities in that part of town but that he did not know whether ABiH used any civilian facilities there.¹⁴⁵⁴⁷ Turkušić explained that, while there may have been some soldiers passing through Markale, the highest concentration of people there were civilians, usually people selling or buying goods.¹⁴⁵⁴⁸ He was of the view that the shell was fired for its psychological impact, namely in order to cause terror and put pressure on the authorities.¹⁴⁵⁴⁹ Bešić stated that Markale was frequented by a large number of people—both civilians and those wearing military uniforms—and noted that he was not aware of any ABiH military facilities nearby but that there may have been some in the former military hall which was 400 to 500 metres away from Markale, separated by a park.¹⁴⁵⁵⁰ Bešić denied that a nearby building called Semberija was used by the ABiH as a storage area, stating that it was in fact used as a bakery where bread was made for the ABiH.¹⁴⁵⁵¹

(j) Accused's defence theories

4331. As with the first Markale incident, while not referring to this theory in his Final Brief, the Accused attempted to show throughout the trial that this incident was staged such that the bodies were brought from elsewhere in order to provoke NATO into bombing the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁴⁵⁵² However, as with the first Markale incident, most witnesses rejected this theory.¹⁴⁵⁵³ For example, Konings was adamant that the incident could not have been staged because he had passed Markale earlier that morning, at around 9 or 10 a.m., and did not see a crater there, noting that making a crater artificially would have taken a long time, longer than one or two hours.¹⁴⁵⁵⁴ Furthermore, he stated that he saw fresh bodies in the morgue and noted that there were no reports that morning that such a large number of people had been killed somewhere else.¹⁴⁵⁵⁵ Bell testified that his cameraman filmed some of the very graphic footage at the scene, which BBC would not broadcast due to viewer discretion concerns.¹⁴⁵⁵⁶ Bell stated that this was one of the scenes that could not be replicated in a movie and that it was real.¹⁴⁵⁵⁷

4332. One of the bases for the Accused's contention was the type of injuries sustained by the victims and, in particular, those of one man who can be seen in the footage of the aftermath of the incident lying over the rail near the point of impact without much blood around him. In addition, Subotić mentioned a number of victims who, according to her, had small arms wounds on their bodies. However, Turkušić convincingly testified that the damage to the area, as well as the injuries sustained by the victims, were consistent with what one would expect from an impact of a 120 mm mortar shell at that particular place, in particular that those closest to the impact would have serious blast and shrapnel injuries to their lower limbs while those further away would suffer upper body injuries from shrapnel.¹⁴⁵⁵⁸ He also pointed out that the bodies were taken to the Koševo Hospital where anyone, including journalists, was able to see them and check how fresh they were.¹⁴⁵⁵⁹ Bešić too confirmed that the footage of the scene as well as the diversity of injuries that can be seen on people is consistent with what one would expect following such an explosion.¹⁴⁵⁶⁰ Furthermore, noting that he had experience with exchanges of dead bodies, Bešić stated that the bodies visible on the photos taken at the morgue and in the video footage were all fresh, with no soil on them or puckered up skin.¹⁴⁵⁶¹ Konings testified that a single mortar shell could cause all these casualties given the area in which it happened, namely between two buildings.¹⁴⁵⁶²

it.¹⁴⁵⁶⁵ However, Bešić stated that the stabiliser was a “mobile artefact” which was moved around in the commotion of the investigation.¹⁴⁵⁶⁶

4334. The Accused also claimed that the condition of the stabiliser provided to the court and admitted as exhibit P1454 indicated that it was not damaged due to the explosion but was instead modified manually. However, Konings, Higgs, Turkušić, and Bešić all testified that the stabiliser that was found on the scene looked exactly as a stabiliser of an exploded shell should look like, and explained that its fins could have been deformed due to a car running over it.¹⁴⁵⁶⁷ When shown P1454 in the courtroom, both Turkušić and Bešić testified that it seemed to be the stabiliser shown on the video footage of the incident and described in the reports.¹⁴⁵⁶⁸ Bešić, who personally photographed the stabiliser on the scene on the day of the incident, was in fact adamant that P1454 was identical to the stabiliser on the scene despite agreeing with the Accused that the holes on its cap looked to be in a slightly different position from the holes on the pictures of the stabiliser at the scene.¹⁴⁵⁶⁹ He theorised, however, that it was possible that the stabiliser cap was unscrewed in the lab following its removal from the scene, thus shifting the position of the holes on the cap.¹⁴⁵⁷⁰

4335. The Accused’s alternative defence was that the ABiH was responsible for the incident by either firing the shell or planting an explosive device at the scene in order to garner sympathy from the international community and provoke NATO air strikes.¹⁴⁵⁷¹ As noted above, the main proponent of the planted explosive device theory was Subotić. In addition, Veljović testified that it was impossible for a 120 mm mortar shell to hit Markale, which is why the SRK thought that the

(k) Final analysis and conclusions

4336. Looking first at the Accused's suggestion that the incident of 28 August 1995 in Markale was staged, the Chamber is convinced, as with the first Markale incident, that this was not the case. In this respect, the Chamber accepts the evidence of the witnesses who were at the scene at the time of the incident or in its immediate aftermath and who were adamant that what they saw could not have been staged. Any suggestion to the contrary by the Accused and/or his witnesses is simply preposterous.

4337. The Chamber, relying on Konings, Higgs, Turkušić, and Bešić and having examined the stabiliser in its possession, is also convinced that it is the stabiliser that was found in Markale on 28 August 1995. As eventually accepted by Subotić, it is clear that the cap of the stabiliser is loose and that it can be screwed in and out, thus resulting in a different alignment of the holes to the one seen in the photographs taken by the CSB Sarajevo. The Chamber therefore rejects Subotić's evidence, reliant as it was on these photographs and video footage, that this was a different stabiliser than the one seen in those secondary materials. Further, the Chamber does not accept her evidence that there was one more stabiliser at the scene as the photograph she based this conclusion on is so unclear that it is impossible to determine what the object seen therein is. The Chamber, therefore, finds Subotić's conclusion that this was a second stabiliser arbitrary and bordering on dishonest. Given that she was quick to resort to conspiracy theories based on photographs and video footage, to the point of seeing another stabiliser in them, the Chamber has decided not to accept any of her evidence relating to this incident unless corroborated by other credible evidence. The Chamber also rejects her theories about what she thought were inexplicable scenes and injuries seen in the video footage and photographs of the incident, as well as her conclusion that having nine incidents involving such mass casualties was impossible.¹⁴⁵⁷³

4338. Finally, the Chamber rejects her evidence, as well as the evidence of Veljović, Demurenko, and others, that the explosion was a result of an explosive device planted at the scene. The Chamber found this proposition untenable given the weight of the evidence to the contrary, including the fact that the 120 mm stabiliser was found on the scene. In addition, a number of witnesses who were on the scene immediately after the incident, such as Turkušić, Bešić, and Konings, testified that the damage to the people and the buildings could have been the result of the explosion of a 120 mm mortar bomb, given the enclosed space in question and the large number of people present. The Chamber found their evidence particularly convincing because they had by that point dealt with countless shelling incidents in the city.¹⁴⁵⁷⁴ Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that the explosion on 28 August 1995 in the Markale area was caused by the 120 mm mortar bomb that struck the Mula Mustafe Bašeskije street.

¹⁴⁵⁷² Stevan Veljović, T. 2926229265 (23 October 2012). See also Nikola Mijatović, T. 30702–30706 (30 November 2012); D2514 (Video clip of Nikola Mijatović's speech, with transcript); Momčilo Krajišnik, T. 43330–43332, 43334 (12 November 2013).

¹⁴⁵⁷³ The Chamber found this particular suggestion, namely that having nine incidents with mass casualties would have been impossible, simply unreasonable, particularly when one takes into account the fact that the conflict lasted from 1992 to 1995 and considers the number of shells that fell on the city in that period.

4339. Relying on the autopsy reports in evidence, the Chamber finds that 43 people died in this explosion. Relying further on CSB Sarajevo reports and various lists of wounded provided therein, the Chamber also finds that this explosion resulted in at least 70 wounded. The Chamber is satisfied that the great majority of those casualties were civilians who were not taking active part in hostilities at the time of the incident. Only one of those killed in the incident was a soldier.¹⁴⁵⁷⁵

4340. As found above in relation to the first Markale incident, the Chamber is also satisfied that there were no military facilities or targets in the area of Markale market. It was a market frequented by the civilian population in order to buy and sell food and other goods. In addition, the Chamber recalls that it has taken judicial notice of the fact that there was no reason to consider it a military objective on the day in question.¹⁴⁵⁷⁶ While there may have been some soldiers passing through Markale at any given time, the majority of people gathering there were civilians.

4341. In terms of the direction of fire, the Chamber recalls that the CSB Sarajevo team, the UNMOs, the UNPROFOR team that conducted the crater analysis, and Subotić, all came to the conclusion that the 120 mm shell came from the general south-southeasterly direction. According to the various calculations, it had an azimuth of between 155 and 175 degrees and a minimum angle of descent of 67 degrees, with the most likely angle of descent being 70 degrees.¹⁴⁵⁷⁷ The Chamber accepts this evidence and therefore rejects the final conclusion made by UNPROFOR's Powers and

¹⁴⁵⁷⁶ Adjudicated Fact 342.

¹⁴⁵⁷⁷ The Chamber rejects the angle of descent determined by Subotić, both due to her weak credibility and because it considers that the local investigators would have been better able to establish the angle of descent having observed the scene and the crater first hand in the immediate aftermath of the incident.

Baxter that the Markale shell probably came from the same direction as the other four shells that hit an area near Markale on that day, namely from 220 to 240 degrees from the north. The Chamber agrees with both Higgs and Subotić that Powers and Baxter's analysis was speculative and ultimately wrong, particularly given Turkušić's evidence that the shell that struck Markale area was a direct hit and not a ricochet. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that the four shells came from a different direction and thus were fired by a different mortar.¹⁴⁵⁷⁸ That being the case, they cannot be considered to have been adjusting fire for the shell that hit Markale.

4342. Turning back to the Markale shell, as noted above, both the ABiH and SRK had positions in the established direction of fire, with the confrontation line located approximately 1,600 metres from Markale. Given the vastness of the area covered by the established direction of fire and the margin of error involved, the Chamber is convinced that there were many positions on the SRK side of the confrontation line suitable for placing a 120 mm mortar. Indeed, Veljović testified that he had a mortar battery in the Brus sector, which is in the established direction of fire. Thus, the Chamber did not find Demurenko credible when he testified that no suitable positions existed on the SRK side of the confrontation line nor did it believe him when he testified that he in fact examined an area much larger than the one he discussed in his interview of 2 September 1995 and in his evidence in the Dragomir Milošević case. The Chamber considers that examining an area covering all of the directions of fire established at the time, together with the margin of error, would have been impossible in the limited amount of time Demurenko had. In addition, the Chamber finds it telling that he only mentioned this broader inspection after the Trial Chamber in the Dragomir Milošević case had dismissed his investigation as having been too narrow. The Chamber is, therefore, convinced that Demurenko simply changed his testimony in order to counteract the findings of that Trial Chamber. Thus, the Chamber considers that Demurenko's investigation was based solely on the azimuth of 176 degrees from north as he had indicated in his interview at the time, which was ultimately the wrong azimuth. As such, his investigation was somewhat irrelevant to this incident. In addition, even if 176 degrees was the direction from which the Markale shell originated, the Accused's own expert witness, Subotić, contradicted Demurenko's evidence by testifying that there was one suitable mortar position in that direction of fire. For all these reasons, the Chamber does not accept Demurenko's evidence as credible and finds that there were a number of suitable positions for placing a mortar, both in the area of the established direction of fire, namely between 155 and 175 degrees, and in the area actually examined by Demurenko.

¹⁴⁵⁷⁸ As a result of this finding, the Chamber will not rely on the UN analysis relating to the UN radar as that analysis was based on the direction of fire of 220 to 240 degrees from the north and on the distance to the confrontation line in that direction. Furthermore, the evidence does not indicate where the radar was located, how high or low it was emitting radio-waves, or whether it covered only the area in the direction of 220 to 240 degrees or also the area of the direction of fire established in relation to the Markale shell. Similarly, the Chamber does not accept Subotić's analysis relating to the radar as it is based on pure speculation as to its location and effectiveness. Unlike Subotić, the Chamber does not exclude the possibility of the radar failing to record a shell fired from far

4343. As also noted above, the ABiH too had positions in the established direction of fire, including mortar positions near Čolina Kapa.¹⁴⁵⁷⁹ Nevertheless, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the Markale shell was fired from the SRK side of the confrontation line.¹⁴⁵⁸⁰ First, the Chamber notes that the markings on the shell indicate that it came from Krušik Factory in Valjevo, Serbia, while its serial number indicates that it was tested in Serbia towards the end of the conflict, namely in 1994. The same is true for the other four shells that landed near Markale market on that day, all of which bear the same markings. This in turn means that the five shells were not part of the JNA arsenal in 1991 and thus could not have been part of the ABiH weapons arsenal at the time of the incident. All five therefore must have been fired by the SRK.

4344. Second, focusing on the Markale shell alone, the Chamber is persuaded by the evidence of Knustad and Konings that no firing sound—which would have been loud and distinctive in the case of a 120 mm mortar—was heard near OP-1 on the day of the incident, thus indicating that the shell was not fired from ABiH mortar positions near Čolina Kapa, or anywhere near the confrontation line. While Conway challenged the idea that one could draw such conclusion from the sounds of the explosions he had heard, he also conceded, in line with other witnesses,¹⁴⁵⁸¹ that the sound of a mortar firing nearby would have been distinct whereas he had only heard muffled sounds on the morning of the incident. Given that the morning was quiet, it is clear from Conway's evidence and the description of the events he provided that the muffled sounds he heard were the sounds of the explosions in the centre of the city rather than the sound of a 120 mm mortar firing near OP-1.¹⁴⁵⁸² Even the Accused's expert witness Subotić thought that the firing noise would have been heard had away (as outlined by the UN), particularly given the configuration of the terrain and the elevation from which it would have been fired.

¹⁴⁵⁷⁹ While Conway testified that in December 1995 he saw ABiH mortars positioned north of Mrakuša and facing the city, this does not necessarily mean that these mortars had also been there in August 1995 or that they had been turned towards the city at that time. Even if this were the case, the Chamber notes that those positions were not in the established direction of fire but were located southwest of Markale.

¹⁴⁵⁸⁰ The Chamber notes that part of the Accused's case was that ABiH fired the shell (or staged the incident) in order to provoke NATO air strikes, which indeed took place following the incident. He outlined this theory mostly during his cross-examination of Smith and Harland. While the evidence of these two witnesses does show that the NATO attacks were initiated by Smith before the higher echelons of power within the UN were absolutely convinced that the SRK was responsible, this does not, contrary to the Accused's position, lead to the conclusion that the ABiH was responsible for the attack.

¹⁴⁵⁸¹ See para. 4281.

¹⁴⁵⁸² The Chamber also notes that at that time of the incident Conway had only been in Sarajevo for nine days and thus was not as familiar as Knustad was with the sounds in and around the city.

the ABiH fired the shell in question, which in turn led her to conclude that the explosion was caused by a planted explosive device.¹⁴⁵⁸³

4345. Finally, while the SRK soldiers and officers called by the Accused testified that no 120 mm mortars were located in the established direction of fire, the Chamber found their evidence unpersuasive and insincere as they were inconsistent when explaining why the 120 mm mortars were not there in August, despite their presence earlier in the year when the 4th Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade was formed. For example, Veljović testified that he sent all his mortars from the Brus sector to another frontline, while Dušan Škrba testified that 120 mm mortars were simply moved outside of the 20 kilometre heavy weapons exclusion zone. They were also inconsistent as to the calibres that did remain in the area. In general, the Chamber found the evidence of these witnesses, as well as the evidence of Dragomir Milošević, to have been largely self-serving—their credibility was affected by their desire to minimise the responsibility of the SRK for the incident.

4346. While Mula Mustafe Bašeskije street and the Markale market may not have been deliberately targeted on the day of the incident, the Chamber is convinced on the basis of the evidence above, including Dozo's evidence about earlier incidents in the area and the fact that another four shells landed near Markale on the day of this incident, that the SRK deliberately targeted the general area of the market, in full knowledge that there were no military targets there and with reckless disregard as to potential civilian victims such fire would create.

(D) Scheduled modified air bomb incidents

4347. Throughout this case, the Chamber heard evidence about the nature and the use of so-called “modified air bombs” in Sarajevo during the conflict as six of the 16 shelling incidents charged in the Indictment, namely Scheduled Shelling Incidents G.10, G.11, G.12, G.13, G.14, and G.15, are alleged to involve such bombs.¹⁴⁵⁸⁴

4348. The Prosecution argues that the evidence establishes that modified air bombs were (i) possessed solely by the SRK; (ii) used by the SRK in the above mentioned incidents; and ¹⁴⁵⁸³ Subotić reached this conclusion arguing that a shell fired on a charge three or higher would have resulted in an embedded stabiliser at the scene. As discussed in the section dealing with the first Markale shelling incident, the other experts, who were found by the Chamber to be more credible than Subotić, thought that a stabiliser will embed if a shell is fired on charges higher than charge three. See para. 4248. Thus, Subotić's analysis that the lack of embedding in this particular case necessarily excludes the possibility that the shell was fired on charge three is not persuasive. The Chamber finds it perfectly plausible that the SRK fired the shell using charge three as testified by Higgs and Turkušić, resulting in the stabiliser being ejected at the moment of impact and landing near the impact site. The Chamber also notes that the location of the stabiliser as photographed by the CSB Sarajevo some 40 minutes after the incident is not necessarily the location at which the stabiliser first landed, as it could have been pushed around in the chaos of the evacuation of the wounded.

¹⁴⁵⁸⁴ Indictment, Schedule G.

(iii) inherently incapable of targeting anything more specific than a general neighbourhood in a densely-populated Sarajevo.¹⁴⁵⁸⁵ The Prosecution also claims that because of their great destructive power and because of their imprecision, these bombs were a “quintessential urban weapon of terror, used deliberately to that end in Sarajevo”.¹⁴⁵⁸⁶ In addition, according to the Prosecution, the SRK also used these bombs in retaliation against the population in response to ABiH or NATO actions, often on areas where there was no combat activity.¹⁴⁵⁸⁷

4349. The Accused argues that the VRS used modified air bombs against military targets on the ground as a defensive measure due mainly to a shortage of artillery and mortar ammunition in 1994 and 1995 and because the ABiH grew in manpower and equipment at that point.¹⁴⁵⁸⁸ The Accused further claims that the modified air bombs were tested by expert engineers and were perfected such that they could be considered precise.¹⁴⁵⁸⁹ Finally, he claims that the ABiH also used modified air bombs in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁵⁹⁰

(1) Expert evidence

4350. The parties called a number of expert witnesses to testify about the nature of modified air bombs and to give their opinions as to the above-mentioned shelling incidents. Zečević was called by the Prosecution, while Subotić, Poparić, and Mirjana Anđelković-Lukić were called by the Accused.

4351. Earlier in the Judgement, the Chamber discussed the professional qualifications of both Subotić and Poparić and provided its assessments of these witnesses’ credibility and of the reliability of their evidence.¹⁴⁵⁹¹ These general assessments are equally applicable in relation to this section of the Judgement and will not be repeated here.¹⁴⁵⁹²

4352. Zečević is an expert in rocket motors and warheads who also worked in the Pretis Factory in Vogošća until April 1992.¹⁴⁵⁹³ This factory produced artillery and rocket ammunition, rocket projectiles, and aircraft bombs, and was under VRS control during the conflict.¹⁴⁵⁹⁴ Zečević prepared a report and gave evidence on (i) the nature of modified air bombs, (ii) his involvement in investigating their mechanics during and after the conflict in Sarajevo, and (iii) his analysis of the above-mentioned scheduled incidents.¹⁴⁵⁹⁵ All three experts called by the Accused challenged Zečević's evidence and produced a joint report pointing out inconsistencies in his report.¹⁴⁵⁹⁶ Because of his expertise in rocket motors and warheads and given that he had an opportunity to examine the remnants of modified air bombs in Sarajevo, the Chamber has found Zečević to be a knowledgeable and trustworthy witness, particularly in relation to the process of modification of air bombs and their operation. The Chamber also found that many of the challenges outlined in the joint report prepared by Defence experts bordered on trivial and were at times completely irrelevant to the issues in this case.¹⁴⁵⁹⁷ On the other hand, some of the more relevant aspects of Zečević's evidence remained unchallenged, including his findings that modified air bombs were used in Scheduled Incidents G.10 to G.15.¹⁴⁵⁹⁸ Accordingly, the Chamber accepted much of Zečević's evidence as credible and reliable. On occasion, the Chamber rejected some of his conclusions as they were either contradicted by other accepted evidence or not sufficiently persuasive in light of other, more convincing, evidence.¹⁴⁵⁹⁹ This, however, did not affect the Chamber's assessment of Zečević's credibility in other aspects of his testimony.

¹⁴⁵⁹⁶ D3644 (Expert report by Mile Poparić et al entitled "Inconsistencies of Experts Berko Zečević and Richard Higgs in Cases of the Shelling of Sarajevo", 15 August 2012). The Chamber notes that it ordered the redaction of a large part of this report. See Decision on Prosecution's Request to Exclude Portions of Reports of Mile Poparić, 12 March 2013, paras. 26–29. The Chamber also notes that the remaining analysis in D3644 contains more or less identical challenges to those outlined in Anđelković-Lukić's report (D2662).

¹⁴⁵⁹⁷ For example, in their report, at page 67, Poparić et al point out inconsistencies in Zečević's report regarding the weights of aircraft bombs discussed therein. In the Chamber's view, those inconsistencies are minor and ultimately irrelevant to the major issues in this case. Poparić et al also argue on pages 66, 67, and 70 that many of the weapons and technical concepts discussed in Zečević's report are irrelevant to this case. The Chamber notes that in his report Zečević clearly acknowledges that such weapons and concepts are used simply as examples and therefore does not mislead the Chamber in any way. Accordingly, being able to discern for itself the most relevant parts of Zečević's report, the Chamber does not consider that his analysis of additional weapons and ballistics concepts undermines his credibility in relation to the issues relevant to this case.

¹⁴⁵⁹⁸ The major challenge raised by the Accused regarding the Scheduled Shelling Incidents relates to Zečević's conclusions as to the type of modified air bomb used and the Chamber has dealt with this challenge in relation to each specific incident.

¹⁴⁵⁹⁹ See e.g. the Chamber's discussion of Scheduled Incidents G.10 to G.15 where the Chamber rejected Zečević's evidence that the bomb used was a fuel-air bomb.

4353. Anđelković-Lukić is an expert on explosives who participated in the testing of various explosive weapons for the JNA.¹⁴⁶⁰⁰ The Prosecution asserts that her arguments regarding the weight and in some cases the explosive composition of the bombs were not credible and were ultimately irrelevant, given the overall destructiveness of all the types of modified air bombs used in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁶⁰¹ The Chamber found Anđelković-Lukić evasive at times. In addition, some of her evidence was contradicted by other evidence on the record, including on one occasion by her own report, prepared jointly with Poparić and Subotić.¹⁴⁶⁰² Nevertheless, the Chamber analysed her evidence on modified air bombs and each related scheduled incident separately and, as will be seen below, at times accepted certain parts thereof.

(2) Modified air bombs in Sarajevo

4354. Modified air bombs were first used in Sarajevo in early 1994 and then again at the end of 1994 and throughout 1995.¹⁴⁶⁰³ A modified air bomb is an aircraft bomb to which rocket motors have been attached so that it does not have to be dropped from an aircraft, as originally intended, but can instead be delivered from a launching pad.¹⁴⁶⁰⁴ It is comprised of three primary components: (i) a bomb intended for aircraft use; (ii) a rocket system made of rockets from a multiple rocket launcher; and (iii) the “adapting plate” joining the two.¹⁴⁶⁰⁵

4355. Several different weight categories of general purpose aircraft bombs, or “FABs” as they were referred to in the SFRY, were modified during the Sarajevo conflict. “FAB” is a Russian term to which a number is added to indicate the nominal value of the bomb mass; thus, a FAB-250 refers to an aircraft bomb with a nominal weight of 250 kilograms.¹⁴⁶⁰⁶ The explosive charge, which makes up around 40% of the aircraft bomb’s nominal mass and usually consists of solid TNT or a mixture of TNT and other ingredients, is located within the casing of the FAB.¹⁴⁶⁰⁷ According to Zečević, Pretis produced FAB-100 and FAB-250 general purpose aircraft bombs.¹⁴⁶⁰⁸

4356. The aircraft bombs can also contain fuel-air explosive instead of TNT, which is a gaseous, liquid, or powder fuel dispersed into the air by a small explosion and then oxidised; the oxidation initialises the second explosion—a massive detonation wave.¹⁴⁶⁰⁹ According to Zečević, these types of modified air-bombs produce a longer lasting but less intense blast than bombs with solid explosive charges.¹⁴⁶¹⁰ Zečević also explained that the best-known Russian fuel-air bomb is ODAB-500 aircraft bomb, which has a nominal mass of 520 kilograms and a fuel-air charge of 193 kilograms.¹⁴⁶¹¹ Prior to the war, Pretis was developing a fuel-air bomb called FAB-275, but the development was transferred to Belgrade in 1991.¹⁴⁶¹²

4357. Based on the fragments found around the city and the photographs of the bombs obtained from the Dutch team tasked with the disposal of various weapons systems after the war, Zečević determined that FAB-100 and FAB-250 aircraft bombs, as well as a fuel-air bomb based on ODAB-500, which was given a code-name KREMA, were all modified by the Bosnian Serbs in order to be launched from the ground and used in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁶¹³ In addition, according to Zečević, the damage to some of the sites in Sarajevo indicated that a fuel-air explosive was often used with FAB-250 modified air bombs.¹⁴⁶¹⁴ Based on the recovered fragments he determined that various types of rockets were used to assist the flight of the air bombs, including 122 mm GRAD rockets.¹⁴⁶¹⁵ Thus, the modified FAB-100 had either one or three rocket motors, the FAB-250 had three rocket motors, and the bomb based on ODAB-500 had four rocket motors attached to it.¹⁴⁶¹⁶ According to Zečević, the three-rocket motor system was extremely primitive and inferior to the four-rocket system because it would deviate from the direction of flight due to the slightly non-parallel alignment of the rocket motors.¹⁴⁶¹⁷ Zečević testified that he examined the fragments of the first modified air bomb ever launched into Sarajevo and that it was a fuel-air bomb with four 122 mm GRAD rocket motors.¹⁴⁶¹⁸

Anđelković-Lukić therefore seems to contradict Subotić’s evidence on the issue of Pretis’ work on a fuel-air bomb, as well as Subotić’s report to which she contributed.

4358. According to Poparić, attaching rockets to aircraft bombs essentially turned those bombs into rocketised projectiles from a ballistics point of view, meaning that the dispersion of fragments was larger at a shorter range than when fired at a longer range.¹⁴⁶¹⁹ Poparić also testified that 122 mm GRAD rockets had a long range of up to 21 kilometres, were not recommended for use in ranges under five kilometres, and would usually be used from the rear and over friendly troops to target a larger area and provide fire support.¹⁴⁶²⁰

4359. While accepting that FAB-100 and FAB-250 aircraft bombs were modified and used in Sarajevo, Subotić testified that there is no evidence, in the form of material traces, that a single fuel-air bomb was used in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁶²¹ Anđelković-Lukić also challenged Zečević's evidence on this issue, arguing that removing the solid explosive charge from the FAB-250 and filling its casing with fuel-air explosives would have been arduous, pointless, and dangerous work, and almost impossible to perform in war-time conditions.¹⁴⁶²² She also stated that in case of the explosion of a fuel-air bomb, large parts of the bomb's metal casing should be found at the incident site, but that, according to materials available to her, no such pieces were found anywhere in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁶²³

When put to Poparić that attaching a 122 mm GRAD rocket to an aircraft bomb and then firing the resulting modified air bomb at targets less than five kilometres away was highly irresponsible, he responded that aircraft bombs have a much smaller range than GRAD rockets, meaning that modified air bombs could not be compared to the rockets when looking at the appropriate range. When asked if Pretis would have had empty casings which it could then fill with fuel-air explosives, Anđelković-Lukić responded that there was no need to stock empty casings due to the longevity of TNT. See Mirjana Anđelković-Lukić, T. 31520–31522 (14 December 2012).

Anđelković-Lukić also denied that one could easily confuse the remains of FAB-250 modified air bombs with those of FAB-275 modified air bombs, as the former has thicker walls. See Mirjana Anđelković-Lukić, T. 31512–31513 (14 December 2012).

Finally, she claimed that the SRK had no launchers for bombs based on ODAB-500 due to their heavy weight and thus discounted the existence of 500-kilogram bombs.¹⁴⁶²⁴ In addition, she challenged Zečević's evidence about the existence of KREMA bombs as baseless.¹⁴⁶²⁵

4360. On cross-examination, however, Anđelković-Lukić was confronted with a number of documents contradicting her evidence. For example, when confronted with an SRK document referring to a launcher for bombs weighing 500 kilograms, she observed that the document also noted that the testing had yet to be done.¹⁴⁶²⁶ When shown an article and a photograph describing and depicting the disposal of 58 modified and regular FAB-275 fuel-air bombs in Glamoč after the war, she concluded that this meant that all the FAB-275 that were produced prior to the war were disposed of after the war and thus had not been used in the conflict.¹⁴⁶²⁷ When further shown two SRK documents referencing preparation for the use of FAB-275 modified air bombs, she remained adamant that she never encountered any evidence about the use of this bomb.¹⁴⁶²⁸ She conceded, however, that she did not go to Sarajevo, including to the sites struck by modified air bombs, and did not inspect any of the recovered fragments of modified air bombs.¹⁴⁶²⁹

4361. As for the issue of KREMA rockets, the Chamber notes that Anđelković-Lukić is also contradicted by an UNPROFOR report, in which Captain Guegan reported to Sector Sarajevo that on 9 July 1995 the Liaison Officer of the Ilidža Brigade, Captain Novak Prodanović, acknowledged that around 12 "KREMA rockets" had been fired on Sarajevo, including on the TV building, as part of the "psychological warfare aimed at upsetting the Bosnian soldiers on the Treskavica front who would be worried about the safety of their families in Sarajevo".¹⁴⁶³⁰ According to this report, Prodanović referred to the weapon as "Terror".¹⁴⁶³¹

4362. Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber is convinced that modified FAB-100 and FAB-250 general purpose air bombs were used on targets in Sarajevo. The Chamber also finds, relying in particular on the documentary evidence outlined above and Zečević's evidence, that Pretis produced FAB-275 fuel-air bomb before the war, that such bombs also featured in the Sarajevo theatre of war. However, as indicated by the article shown to Anđelković-Lukić, a large number of FAB-275 bombs seem to have been disposed of—unused—after the war. In addition, the Chamber saw only two SRK documents referring to the use of these bombs in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁶³² Finally, as will be seen below, the Chamber is not convinced that a fuel-air bomb was in fact used in any of the scheduled shelling incidents, either because the evidence was clear that another type of bomb was used or because it was insufficient to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that a fuel-air bomb was used. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that while these fuel-air bombs may have been used in Sarajevo, their use was not prevalent during the war.¹⁴⁶³³

4363. As for the reasons behind the SRK's use of modified air bombs, while the Chamber accepts that the lack of ammunition may have prompted their creation and usage, the Chamber is also convinced that the SRK found them to be a valuable means of psychological warfare, knowing full-well that they had a devastating effect on the civilian population as well as the ABiH forces. It also used them in retaliation against the civilian population in response to ABiH actions, often on areas where there was no combat activity. This is shown not only by the witnesses who testified about the devastating psychological effect these bombs had but also by (i) documentary evidence, such as the UNPROFOR report of 9 July 1995 referred to above; (ii) the intercepted conversation between Momčilo Krajišnik and Milorad Motika of 17 June 1995; and (iii) evidence outlined below in relation to several Scheduled Incidents.¹⁴⁶³⁴

(3) Who possessed modified air bombs?

4364. It is clear from the evidence before the Chamber that the SRK had and used modified air bombs in Sarajevo. Many of the witnesses called by the Accused, including the SRK Commander Dragomir Milošević, confirmed this fact.¹⁴⁶³⁵ In addition, UNMOs Knustad and Per Anton ¹⁴⁶³² See P1296 (VRS Main Staff Order, 19 April 1995); P2652 (Letter from VRS Main Staff to Igman Infantry Brigade, 17 November 1994).

¹⁴⁶³³ The Chamber also does not accept Zečević's evidence that FAB-250 bombs were modified such that the solid explosive charge was removed and fuel-air explosive inserted. The Chamber finds the evidence of Anđelković-Lukić more persuasive on this matter. It is likely that Zečević simply confused the fragments of FAB-275 with the fragments of FAB-250 and thus came to the conclusion that a FAB-250 was filled with fuel-air explosive.

4365. In addition, a large number of documents issued by the VRS Main Staff and the SRK also indicate that modified air bombs were assembled by Pretis and that their use was directed by the SRK Commander and strictly controlled by the VRS Main Staff.¹⁴⁶⁴⁰ Pretis would assemble the aircraft bombs and rockets, some of which were obtained from the FRY.¹⁴⁶⁴¹ Lieutenant-Colonel

Milan Ugrešić, the Chief of Anti-Aircraft Defence in the SRK,¹⁴⁶⁴² was in charge of dealing with weapons experts who were working on the assembly of the bombs and on modifying launchers for their use.¹⁴⁶⁴³

4366. In addition to the modified air bombs themselves, the SRK also had a number of launchers produced for the specific purpose of launching such bombs.¹⁴⁶⁴⁴ In spring of 1995, Milomir Šoja, an electrical engineer and a former Ilidža Brigade member,¹⁴⁶⁴⁵ was asked by members of the Ilidža Brigade to go to Pretis and make certain modifications to the modified air bomb launchers.¹⁴⁶⁴⁶ The modifications were ordered and made—despite the protest from Major Krsmanović who headed the aircraft bombs department at Pretis¹⁴⁶⁴⁷—in order to solve ignition problems experienced up until that point.¹⁴⁶⁴⁸ However, Šoja's modifications were unsuccessful and Krsmanović demanded the removal of electrical components placed on the launchers.¹⁴⁶⁴⁹ Thus, it is also clear that the SRK faced problems with modified air bomb launchers. These events also confirm Zečević's opinion, based on the photographs he inspected, that launchers used by the SRK were simple, with no capacity for precise adjustment of angles of elevation and azimuth, which in turn meant that their precision was not on par with standard rocket launchers.¹⁴⁶⁵⁰

4367. The Chamber also heard that the SRK decided to use modified air bombs due to the shortage of ammunition within its units and because the ABiH forces were getting stronger and 4368. As far as the ABiH is concerned, most of the witnesses, including some of those called by the Accused, consistently testified that ABiH did not have modified air bombs because it had no means to modify or launch aircraft bombs in Sarajevo, particularly fuel-air bombs.¹⁴⁶⁵³ Milošević claimed that ABiH had air bombs at its disposal because in mid-April 1992 the special forces of the BiH MUP led by Dragan Vikić entered Pretis and took away ammunition, including a stock of general purpose aircraft bombs.¹⁴⁶⁵⁴ In addition, according to Milošević, three air bombs landed on Vraca but did not explode, although he did not know what method was used to launch them.¹⁴⁶⁵⁵ The Accused also put forward an audio recording of the 291st session of the BiH Presidency, held in August 1995, in which mention was made of 800 aerial bombs which were yet to arrive.¹⁴⁶⁵⁶

¹⁴⁶⁵⁶ D2816 (Extract from transcript of 291st session of RBiH Presidency, 10 August 1995).

Nikola Mijatović, Chief of Security and later Chief of Staff in the Ilidža Brigade,¹⁴⁶⁵⁷ was the only witness who testified that the ABiH had modified air bombs and stated that his knowledge on this came from a documentary he saw after the war.¹⁴⁶⁵⁸

4369. Based on the evidence above, the Chamber is convinced that only the SRK possessed modified air bombs of the type discussed in this part of the judgement. The evidence is clear that only the SRK had the means to modify and then launch the air bombs in their possession, while the ABiH simply lacked such means. The Chamber does not accept Milošević's evidence that Vikić and his forces took air bombs from Pretis, as none of the witnesses, including those called by the Accused, confirm this. Instead, the evidence shows that Vikić and his forces removed artillery projectiles from Pretis. Similarly, the Chamber does not believe Milošević's evidence about three air bombs that landed in Vraca, particularly since he could not explain how they were launched by the ABiH and finds Mijatović's evidence equally unpersuasive. Thus, although there is some evidence that suggests that ABiH may have had (or was waiting to obtain) air bombs in its arsenal, there is no credible evidence that it modified them in the way described above or that it used them against targets in Sarajevo.

(4) Accuracy and range of modified air bombs

4370. As noted above, the Accused argues that modified air bombs were an accurate weapon properly tested by expert engineers. In addition, according to a number of SRK soldiers and officers, modified air bombs were used exclusively against military targets and with no intention to target or terrorise civilians.¹⁴⁶⁵⁹ Milošević suggested that the fact that only five people were killed in all the modified air bomb incidents alleged in the Indictment meant that these bombs were used selectively on non-residential targets.¹⁴⁶⁶⁰

4371. However, the Chamber heard a plethora of evidence indicating that modified air bombs were highly inaccurate because of the way in which they were constructed and because they were propelled by unguided rockets.¹⁴⁶⁶¹ The trajectory of such bombs did not follow the classic ballistic arc of an artillery round; rather, the bomb would travel until the rocket motors stopped and then it would fall down to the ground.¹⁴⁶⁶² Furthermore, the precision of modified air bombs was affected by their multiple rockets, which would not always ignite simultaneously and by the fact that the rocket motors would fire for different durations; these factors also affected the direction of the bomb.¹⁴⁶⁶³ Accordingly, while the forces firing such bombs would have some idea of the direction in which the bombs would be propelled, they could not be sure of the exact location where it would eventually land.¹⁴⁶⁶⁴ Veljović also confirmed that modified air bombs were not precise and could be off target by two kilometres, which is why the SRK forces were authorised to use them only outside of the urban areas.¹⁴⁶⁶⁵ In fact, according to Veljović, because these bombs were “completely inaccurate”, they caused panic even among the SRK troops.¹⁴⁶⁶⁶ In his interview with the Prosecution, Nedeljko Prstojević, the Commander of the Ilidža Crisis Staff,¹⁴⁶⁶⁷ stated that one of the SRK unit commanders told him that another name for modified air bombs was “wherever it lands” because it was so imprecise.¹⁴⁶⁶⁸

4372. According to Zečević, the inaccuracy was to be expected because modified air bombs did not pass through any of the normal phases for the adoption of new weapon systems (which normally take five to seven years) and thus no stable production process was established.¹⁴⁶⁶⁹ Zečević conceded that he had no proof that this was the case, but explained that based on his knowledge of procedures for testing weapons, such testing could not have been done in the BiH at the time due to wartime conditions.¹⁴⁶⁷⁰ This was indeed confirmed by Veljović, who testified that modified air bombs were not tested, resulting in a few deaths among the firing crews.¹⁴⁶⁷¹

4373. On the other hand, all three Defence experts argued in their joint report that Zečević could not be sure that modified air bombs were not tested.¹⁴⁶⁷² When asked how long it would have taken the VRS to develop a modified air bomb, Poparić speculated that three years would have been enough because it was an integration of two properly tested weapons.¹⁴⁶⁷³ Further, Šoja testified that he heard of a testing exercise in an area where there were no residential buildings.¹⁴⁶⁷⁴ Sometime in 1994, Mihajlo Vujasin, Chief of Engineers in the SRK,¹⁴⁶⁷⁵ also observed a testing exercise of a modified air bomb in Nišići Plateau, which was unsuccessful as the bomb failed to launch due to rocket motors failing to ignite.¹⁴⁶⁷⁶ Radojčić testified that both “the missile engines and the whole aerial bomb kit were tested” in Kalinovik, following which his brigade received

“temporary firing tables”.¹⁴⁶⁷⁷ Zečević himself acknowledged that there probably existed some “basic firing tables” for firing conditions of the rocket motors.¹⁴⁶⁷⁸

4374. Whether tested or not, Zečević claimed that none of the three types of modified air bombs was designed for firing at individual targets as they could only be used for firing at “area targets with lengths and widths of hundreds of meters”.¹⁴⁶⁷⁹ Additionally, these bombs were very sensitive to cross-winds, changes in the impulse of the rocket engines, and air temperature changes.¹⁴⁶⁸⁰ Finally, all three types of modified air bombs would ricochet if the impact angle was less than 25 degrees.¹⁴⁶⁸¹ Thus, according to Zečević, the use of these bombs in urban areas would inevitably lead to civilian casualties.¹⁴⁶⁸² Similarly, a number of UN witnesses thought that modified air bombs had no military value as they were an indiscriminate weapon that had more detrimental effects on civilians and infrastructure,¹⁴⁶⁸³ and that its use in Sarajevo was inappropriate,

According to Zečević, the modified FAB-100 could only target an area measuring 500 metres by 200 metres, on the condition that no changes were made to the rocket motors and that firing was done in salvos. As for the FAB-250, it was only possible to target an area measuring 600 metres by 250 metres, so long as the same conditions mentioned above applied. See P2318 (Report by Berko Zečević entitled “The use of modified aircraft bombs during the siege of Sarajevo, 1994–1995”), pp. 79–80. See also P1309 (SRK Order, 21 April 1995), p. 2 (showing that the SRK Commander at the time, Dragomir Milošević, recognised that salvos of fire would be needed to hit the target using a modified air bomb); P1310 (SRK report to VRS Main Staff re weapons, 26 April 1995) (indicating that the SRK refrained from launching a modified air bomb at a certain target because UN soldiers were some 200 metres from the target and SRK troops were 500 metres from that target); Emir Turkušić, T. 5712–5713 (22 July 2010); Dušan Škrba, T. 29160–29161 (22 October 2012). But see D3644 (Expert report by Mile Poparić et al entitled “Inconsistencies of Experts Berko Zečević and Richard Higgs in Cases of the Shelling of Sarajevo”, 15 August 2012), pp. 72–73 (challenging the area measurements on the ground that they were taken out of context and do not represent the characteristics of a rocket artillery system). See also Dragomir Milošević, T. 33165–33166 (4 February 2013), T. 33185–33186 (5 February 2013) (explaining that his order in P1309 was a question of terminology and that it was impossible to carry out given that only one modified air bomb could be launched at a time, after which two hours were needed to prepare for the next launch).

particularly given that the city was populated by civilians and that civilian houses were everywhere.¹⁴⁶⁸⁴

4375. Dragomir Milošević, on the other hand, claimed that the weapon experts working on modified air bombs perfected their design such that the bombs were precise and could pinpoint and hit a target.¹⁴⁶⁸⁵ He also argued that making these bombs precise was essential because they were fired from behind the SRK lines and over Serb residential areas.¹⁴⁶⁸⁶ Radojčić also testified that the precision of the modified air bombs was “satisfactory” as shown by the testing done in Kalinovik and that the deviation range in these bombs was, on average, 10 metres per 1,000 metres.¹⁴⁶⁸⁷ According to Savo Simić, Chief of Artillery of the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade of the SRK,¹⁴⁶⁸⁸ there was almost no deviation in the trajectory of the modified air bombs.¹⁴⁶⁸⁹ Zečević claimed, however, that modifications made on the FAB-100 and FAB-250 at the Pretis Factory, as shown by documents found there in early 1996, fell well below the professional standards of Pretis and were inferior in comparison to the modifications made to the bomb based on ODAB-500.¹⁴⁶⁹⁰ This meant that it was in fact impossible to fire FAB-100 and FAB-250 modified air bombs in accordance with any firing tables.¹⁴⁶⁹¹

On the other hand, modified air bombs would cause more damage to physical structures. 4376. Subotić also claimed that modified air bombs were accurate and based this claim on her analysis of 16 modified air bomb incidents in Sarajevo, whereby she compared the locations at which the bombs landed with what she thought were the most likely targets, assuming that each bomb had an average range of 6,000 metres.¹⁴⁶⁹² She concluded that in all incidents but one, the projectiles met the “general exterior ballistics demands for unguided rockets”.¹⁴⁶⁹³ She conceded, however, that for any rocket-assisted projectile firing tables are necessary to hit the target.¹⁴⁶⁹⁴ In terms of the rockets themselves, she agreed that they were not designed for a simultaneous launch but thought that rocket motors on a modified air bomb launched “almost” simultaneously.¹⁴⁶⁹⁵ She also conceded that general purpose aircraft bombs were designed and tested for air-to-surface delivery, rather than surface-to-surface delivery, but then argued that there was not much difference between those bombs and mortar bombs in terms of their design.¹⁴⁶⁹⁶ She also agreed that for the modified air bomb to be accurate it was vital that each rocket was parallel to the longitudinal axis of the air bomb.¹⁴⁶⁹⁷

4377. Finally, she agreed that modified air bombs, including their rocket motors and the launchers, would have to be thoroughly tested before they were approved for use and conceded that she never participated in any such testing or saw any such test data for modified air bombs.¹⁴⁶⁹⁸ She denied that in her analysis of the incidents she simply combined the available testing data for aircraft bombs with the data for rockets and attempted to fuse those into one set of data for modified air bombs.¹⁴⁶⁹⁹

On cross-examination, Mile Poparić, who co-authored Subotić’s report, conceded that these calculations were made based on the assumption that the modified air bombs were fired six kilometres away from the target. He also explained that this was close to the maximum range for those bombs. Mile Poparić, T. 39022–39033 (30 May 2103); P6346 (Excerpt from Military Lexicon, 1981).

4378. As for the range of modified air bombs, Zečević determined¹⁴⁷⁰⁰ that if launched at 45 degrees, the maximum range of the FAB-100 and FAB-250 is 5,560 and 7,680 metres respectively.¹⁴⁷⁰¹ As noted above, Subotić assumed that the average range of modified air bombs was 6,000 metres.¹⁴⁷⁰² Ratimir Maksimović, the Chief for Morale in the SRK Command,¹⁴⁷⁰³ testified that modified air bombs had a range of one to two kilometres.¹⁴⁷⁰⁴

4379. Having considered the evidence above, the Chamber is convinced that modified air bombs which were used in Sarajevo by the SRK were an inherently inaccurate weapon system and, as such, were not capable of targeting specific targets but only large areas. This is shown not only by witnesses who testified to that effect but also by the SRK's own documents indicating that the SRK was fully aware of the weapon's inaccuracy.¹⁴⁷⁰⁵ Indeed, even Veljović spoke of the panic the use of this weapon would produce among the SRK forces located in its flight path. The witnesses who testified to the contrary were SRK soldiers and officers, including Milošević, all of whom had a personal interest in minimising the danger these bombs posed to both the civilian population and their own troops. The Chamber therefore rejects their evidence on the accuracy of modified air bombs as unconvincing and marked by bias.

4380. While some test launches of modified air bombs were conducted by the SRK and its ballistics experts, the Chamber is of the view that they were inadequate as far as ensuring the necessary precision and optimal performance of the weapon was concerned. Given that all expert witnesses agreed that adequate testing of a new weapon system would take around five to seven years, any testing that was performed was obviously rushed and therefore deficient. The Chamber also rejects Poparić's evidence that three years of testing would have been sufficient to ensure the accuracy of this weapon system. Furthermore, even if correct, there is no evidence that the SRK did in fact spend three years doing so. Instead, the Chamber received evidence of only a few occasions on which modified air bombs were tested, sometimes unsuccessfully. The Chamber further notes that these few testing occasions took place in wartime conditions, which would not have been an ideal environment for adequate testing, in turn raising doubt as to the reliability of the testing results. Finally, while some firing tables may have been produced to aid the SRK troops in launching modified air bombs, the Chamber does not consider that their existence made modified air bombs precise.

¹⁴⁷⁰⁵ See P1309 (SRK Order, 21 April 1995), p. 2 (showing that the SRK Commander at the time, Dragomir Milošević, recognised that salvos of fire would be needed to hit the target using a modified air bomb); P1310 (SRK report to VRS Main Staff re weapons, 26 April 1995) (indicating that the SRK refrained from launching a modified air bomb at a certain target because UN soldiers were located 200 metres from the target while the SRK troops were 500 metres from that target).

(5) Damage caused by modified air bombs

4381. The quantity of explosive in modified air bombs was much higher than in mortar shells and thus its purpose was to be destructive, in contrast to the mortar shells the purpose of which is to kill personnel with shrapnel.¹⁴⁷⁰⁶ Zečević explained that standard 250 kilogram aircraft bombs with solid TNT explosive will produce a crater that is between 1.8 and 3 metres deep, with a radius of anywhere between seven and 12 metres, depending on the fuse and the weight of the bomb used.¹⁴⁷⁰⁷ When they detonate, the primary effects will be caused by the blast wave and the kinetic energy of fragments.¹⁴⁷⁰⁸ On the other hand, when fuel-air bombs detonate, they do not create a crater and their primary effect is a lower intensity but longer lasting blast wave, with less fragmentation.¹⁴⁷⁰⁹ Accordingly, if human targets are in the open without any barriers shielding them, the bombs with solid TNT explosive charges would be more efficient at “destroying” them, while the fuel-air bombs would be better at “destroying” human targets hidden in the bunkers or tunnels.¹⁴⁷¹⁰ Anđelković-Lukić explained that in case of solid TNT charges, the wounds inflicted on the human body come from shrapnel and thus resemble those inflicted by bullets, whereas fuel-

However, the Chamber notes that Zečević clearly indicates in his report, at page 49, that he made this calculation on the basis of the Mott method.

air bomb injuries happen due to the blast effect of the cloud; this latter blast can cause the heart to stop or force the eyes from their sockets, in addition to causing burns and injuries to the internal organs as a result of the pressure of the blast.¹⁴⁷¹¹

4382. Fraser testified that an air bomb of 250 kilograms landing on a concrete or brick apartment building might punch a hole in the building but would do little to no damage to an apartment block; however, it would probably have a much greater effect on a brick and mortar house, and if it landed on the ground, it would have a great impact because it would send up shrapnel and fragments, and would create a large crater.¹⁴⁷¹² According to Konings, modified air bombs had a 50-60 metre radius of destruction and could destroy a complete block of offices.¹⁴⁷¹³

4383. Given the large quantity of explosive the modified air bombs contained, the Chamber finds that they were extremely destructive and as such capable of causing large craters and great damage to the surrounding buildings. Given that they were not an anti-personnel weapon, the Chamber also does not consider that they would necessarily result in a high number of casualties, unless a fuel-air bomb was used.

(6) Investigations of modified air bomb incidents

In most cases involving air-bombs investigated by Suljević, there were four rocket motors attached to the bomb to carry it to the point of impact. See P1276 (Witness statement of Ekrem Suljević dated 9 February 2010), para. 38; KDZ477, T. 10952–10953 (31 January 2011).

¹⁴⁷¹⁶ P1276 (Witness statement of Ekrem Suljević dated 9 February 2010), para. 38. Suljević used literature about the 250-kilogram aerial bomb to find the diameter of that bomb and then compared this to the diameter of the adapter plate which was often found at the scene of an incident. This in turn enabled him to identify the type of the aerial bomb used. See Ekrem Suljević, T. 5725–5727 (22 July 2010).

whether an explosion was caused by a modified air bomb was the scale of destruction, the type of fuse used (if located), and the presence of shrapnel.¹⁴⁷¹⁷

4385. During their investigations, Suljević and his colleagues did not calculate the impact velocity of these bombs and instead arrived to their conclusions on the basis of fragments found at the incident sites and the damage caused there.¹⁴⁷¹⁸ They did not calculate the angle of descent as they did not have the necessary resources and there would be no point given that the bombs were propelled by rocket motors.¹⁴⁷¹⁹ However, it was possible to determine the direction from which the modified air bomb came by analysing the crater using the central axis method and by analysing the pattern of the fragments in the crater.¹⁴⁷²⁰ In addition to the central axis method, which for modified air bombs had a margin of error of plus or minus ten degrees,¹⁴⁷²¹ in some cases it was possible to determine the direction of fire on the basis of the position of embedded rocket motors, as they would face the from which they came.¹⁴⁷²² On occasion, direction of fire was also determined through the statements of witnesses who saw the modified air bomb flying low or heard the distinct sound of its rocket motors.¹⁴⁷²³

4386. As noted earlier, the Chamber generally gave considerable weight to the CSB Sarajevo and UN reports when analysing the scheduled shelling incidents.¹⁴⁷²⁴ In doing so, the Chamber was constantly cognisant of the shortcomings of investigations conducted during the war. Whenever issues arose with respect to particular reports, they were considered by the Chamber in relation to each particular incident. Accordingly, as stated earlier, while finding this type of evidence to be generally reliable and credible, the Chamber approached it as one piece of the puzzle assessed against the totality of evidence tendered in relation to each incident.

(7) Bosnian Serb leadership and modified air bombs

4387. As addressed earlier in Section IV.B.1.a, during the ABiH offensives, the Accused indicated to Smith that a decision had been made to start a counter-offensive and that the Bosnian Serbs would employ weapons they had not used before.¹⁴⁷²⁵

4388. On 17 June 1995, Momčilo Krajišnik called Milorad Motika, the Director of Pretis at the time, to inquire about the availability of modified air bombs and whether Motika could arrange their purchase from the Krušik factory,¹⁴⁷²⁶ located in Valjevo, Serbia.¹⁴⁷²⁷

4389. On 20 June 1995, the Accused issued a decision establishing a team within the state committee for the procurement for armed forces, which included Mirko Krajišnik and Momčilo Mandić, whose task was to transfer the “relevant means” from the FRY and place them in a number of previously agreed upon locations.¹⁴⁷²⁸ Dragomir Milošević testified, however, that he and the Accused never discussed modified air bombs nor was the issue discussed in any meeting attended by the Accused.¹⁴⁷²⁹

(8) Scheduled incidents involving modified air bombs

(a) Alekse Šantića street, Hrasnica, 7 April 1995 (Scheduled Incident G.10)

4390. The Indictment alleges that on 7 April 1995, a modified air bomb fired from the SRK-held territory in Ilidža hit a residential area in Hrasnica at the foot of Mt. Igman, killing one person and injuring three others, as well as destroying one dwelling while severely damaging 11 others.¹⁴⁷³⁰ The Accused argues that the modified air bomb, a FAB-100 filled with solid explosive, was fired by the SRK in response to the violation of the truce then in force by the ABiH and that the intended

¹⁴⁷²⁷ P5653 (Intercept of conversation between Milorad Motika and Momčilo Krajišnik, 17 June 1995). While Momčilo Krajišnik denied that the conversation was about modified air bombs specifically and stated that he was simply asking for a bigger weapon to be used in retaliation in Visoko, the Chamber finds his denials in this respect false and is convinced that the conversation concerned modified air bombs, as illustrated by Motika’s reference to all rocket motors having been attached to a “250”. target was the Alekse Šantića School located approximately 20 metres from the dwelling that was destroyed.¹⁴⁷³¹

4391. Hrasnica is a civilian settlement located south of the Butmir airport at the foot of Mt. Igman.¹⁴⁷³² It was in the ABiH zone of responsibility during the war, under the control of the 4th (later the 104th) Motorised Brigade of the ABiH, commanded by Fikret Prevaljak.¹⁴⁷³³ Slightly north of Hrasnica, but south of Butmir, is Sokolović Kolonija, also in the zone of responsibility of the 4th Motorised Brigade.¹⁴⁷³⁴ This ABiH brigade was also deployed on Mt. Igman.¹⁴⁷³⁵

4392. To the northwest of Hrasnica is Ilidža, which was under the control of the SRK during the war, more precisely the Ilidža Brigade.¹⁴⁷³⁶ Famos Factory is located to the east of Hrasnica, and was on the confrontation line, but under the control of the 2nd Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade commanded by Milorad Šehovac.¹⁴⁷³⁷

4393. Thorbjorn Overgard, an UNMO stationed in Hrasnica between October 1994 and May 1995,¹⁴⁷³⁸ testified that Hrasnica was essentially surrounded by the SRK forces and was exposed to shelling and sniping incidents on a daily basis.¹⁴⁷³⁹ According to him, the UNMOs in the area investigated a number of such incidents and established in all instances that the fire had come from SRK-held territory.¹⁴⁷⁴⁰

4394. Overgard further testified that the 4th Motorised Brigade of the ABiH had (i) one company headquarters in Hrasnica, close to the confrontation lines with Ilidža;(ii) the brigade command further east, in the centre of Hrasnica; and (iii) four mortars positioned in Kovači, not far from the company headquarters.¹⁴⁷⁴¹ While Radojčić also testified that the 4th Motorised Brigade's command was in the centre of Hrasnica, he stated that it was located in the post office building, which he identified as being in a different location to the location marked on the map by Overgard.¹⁴⁷⁴² Ilija Mišćević, a resident of Hrasnica during the war, confirmed that the command of the 4th Motorised Brigade was located in the post office, but placed the post office building in a location further west of the location marked by Radojčić.¹⁴⁷⁴³ In addition, the Accused also tendered, through Radojčić, an official note from Ilidža Brigade dated 16 March 1995, which seemed to suggest that the brigade's headquarters had moved to Sokolović Kolonija by that time.¹⁴⁷⁴⁴

4395. The Chamber further heard that the ABiH was digging a tunnel under Butmir with the exit in Sokolović Kolonija, which was often targeted by the SRK forces, and that both civilians and the ABiH used the road between Mt. Igman and Hrasnica, referred to as the “Blue” or “Convoy” road.¹⁴⁷⁴⁵ Furthermore, according to the evidence, ABiH soldiers going to their positions on Mt. Igman would have to pass through Hrasnica.¹⁴⁷⁴⁶

4396. In April 1995, Ziba Šubo was living with her husband Zemir, twin sons Elmir and Elvir, daughter Emira Brajlović, and grandson Elvis Brajlović in a two-storey house at Alekse Šantića street, number 1, in Hrasnica.¹⁴⁷⁴⁷ On 7 April 1995, around 8:50 a.m., a projectile exploded at the house.¹⁴⁷⁴⁸ The projectile injured her and killed her cousin, Ziba Čustović, who was sitting in front of the house in Šubo’s courtyard in which she lived.¹⁴⁷⁴⁹ Present in the house at the moment of the explosion were Šubo’s two teenage sons and her grandson, all of whom survived the incident.¹⁴⁷⁵⁰ Following the explosion, Šubo saw that her 11 year old grandson was bleeding.¹⁴⁷⁵¹ Šubo’s husband, who was involved with “Civilian Protection”, was not at home at the time of the explosion, neither was her daughter, who was a “member” of an ABiH brigade.¹⁴⁷⁵²

4397. Following the explosion, Šubo was taken to hospital, treated for her injuries, and released on the same day.¹⁴⁷⁵³ Six months after the incident, she still suffered back and arm pain as a result of this incident, as well as high blood pressure, and one of her sons continued to have problems with hearing.¹⁴⁷⁵⁴ Because their house was completely demolished, the family stayed in a field near their house for seven days after the explosion, following which they were given an apartment by her daughter's brigade.¹⁴⁷⁵⁵

4398. She also explained that, in the year and a half prior to the incident, there had been a lot of shelling in Hrasnica, often preventing her and her family from leaving their house and that about four shells had impacted within 100 metres of her garden.¹⁴⁷⁵⁶

4399. KDZ166, a criminal technician in CSB Sarajevo, was a member of the team that investigated this incident on the day it happened.¹⁴⁷⁵⁷ He prepared a sketch of the scene, took photographs, and prepared an on-site investigation report.¹⁴⁷⁵⁸ He testified that Šubo's house was completely demolished by the explosion while 11 surrounding houses were "rendered roofless",¹⁴⁷⁵⁹ and that the projectile was a modified air bomb fired from the northwest, where Ilidža is located.¹⁴⁷⁶⁰ He explained that the team came to this conclusion based on the statement provided by an eye-witness who saw "where the projectile was fired from" and "saw it flying and dropping".¹⁴⁷⁶¹ The report itself notes that "according to the witnesses", the projectile was fired from "a truck located in the area of the rug weaving factory in Ilidža" and that the "truck left the factory area, fired a projectile and returned to the factory."¹⁴⁷⁶² KDZ166 also explained that the air bomb struck the house and then detonated inside the house, which caused it to collapse "like a pile of cards".¹⁴⁷⁶³

¹⁴⁷⁶⁰ KDZ166 explained that he made a mistake in his report when he referred to the direction of fire as being "southwest" but observed that in the report he also refers to fire coming from Ilidža, meaning that it came from northwest rather than southwest. He confirmed on cross-examination that the projectile flew over the secondary school in Hrasnica. 4400. According to KDZ166's report, one person, Ziba Čustović, was killed in the incident while three people, Ziba Šubo, Šerif Brajlović, and Gara Sarajkić, were wounded.¹⁴⁷⁶⁴

4401. Overgard and another UNMO who, by virtue of being stationed near the incident site, heard the explosion went to the scene immediately.¹⁴⁷⁶⁵ Once there, they observed a totally demolished house and human legs in a camouflage uniform, protruding under the rubble, as well as a number of other damaged houses.¹⁴⁷⁶⁶ At that point, the Commander of the 4th Motorised Brigade came to the scene and instructed the UNMOs to go to their base where they were guarded by ABiH soldiers; they were eventually allowed to return to the scene the next day when they conducted their own investigation and consulted with the local ballistics experts.¹⁴⁷⁶⁷ The next day they went to the morgue and confirmed that one woman died in the incident.¹⁴⁷⁶⁸ Overgard was told by the local authorities that the legs he saw belonged to a soldier who was wounded but did not die in the incident, which he found difficult to believe.¹⁴⁷⁶⁹

4402. Following their investigation, the UNMOs reported that the projectile that fell on Šubo's house was a modified air bomb fired from a truck in Ilidža on the Serb-held side of the confrontation line.¹⁴⁷⁷⁰ They determined the direction and the origin of fire on the basis of eye-witnesses they spoke to who were on Mt. Igman and who saw and heard the bomb being launched, as well as through traces on the scene, particularly the fact that all the windows in the direction

While the report refers to a "Šerif Brajlović" as one of the injured victims in this incident, the Chamber recalls Šubo's evidence that her 11 year old grandson, Elvis Brajlović, was bleeding following the explosion. She made no mention of "Šerif" being present. Accordingly, the Chamber considers this reference to a "Šerif" in the report to be a mistake.

from which the bomb came were broken.¹⁴⁷⁷¹ Being near the incident site just prior to the explosion, the UNMOs themselves also heard a noise, similar to an airplane flying low, and coming from the direction of Ilidža.¹⁴⁷⁷² As for the type of the projectile, they concluded it was a modified air bomb on the basis of shrapnel they found on the scene and through having observed one of the rocket motors on the day of the incident.¹⁴⁷⁷³

4403. In an order issued on 6 April 1995, Dragomir Milošević states that “for the past three days, Muslim forces have been attacking” the positions of the 2nd Sarajevo Infantry Brigade, in particular in the area of the Famos Factory, resulting in the wounding of several soldiers and a number of civilians.¹⁴⁷⁷⁴ In order to thwart “the enemy” and give them “a warning so they are forced to accept this truce”, Milošević ordered the Ilidža Brigade to immediately prepare a “launcher with an aerial bomb and transport the bomb for launching”, and to select “the highest yielding target in Hrasnica or Sokolović Kolonija, where there will be greatest human and material losses”.¹⁴⁷⁷⁵

4404. Milošević explained this order by saying that the units of the Ilidža Brigade and the 2nd Light Infantry Brigade, as well as the Serb villages east of Famos, were constantly under fire, including artillery fire, from Hrasnica and Sokolović Kolonija, an area through which weapons arrived and ABiH units were passing.¹⁴⁷⁷⁶ Further, the slopes of Mt. Igman controlled by the ABiH towered over those Serb villages and over parts of Lukavica and Dobrinja, thus exposing them to direct fire.¹⁴⁷⁷⁷ When informed by his subordinates that the ABiH fire was becoming unbearable and advised that the modified air bomb should be used, he decided to follow that advice but asked them to identify a specific target that would ensure that the ABiH attacks ceased.¹⁴⁷⁷⁸ Milošević also explained that the reference to the “greatest human and material losses” was not a reference to civilians and that he had in mind only military targets, noting that the language he used was military parlance and that it would have been superfluous for him to provide further instruction on the nature of the targets.¹⁴⁷⁷⁹ He also thought that the recipient of the order would not have interpreted it in any other way.¹⁴⁷⁸⁰ This was confirmed by Radojčić who received and implemented this order.¹⁴⁷⁸¹ However, during his testimony, Fraser interpreted the order as an order to shoot at the civilian population; even if there were ABiH units in Hrasnica at the time, he considered the use of modified air bomb in this densely populated area completely inappropriate.¹⁴⁷⁸²

4405. Later on the day of the incident, the SRK Command reported to the VRS Main Staff that in the morning the ABiH opened “fierce fire” on Famos from the area of Gradina-Igman and Lasica with, inter alia, infantry weapons and an 82 mm mortar, in response to which the Ilidža Brigade fired one air bomb weighing 250 kilograms “at the centre of Hrasnica”.¹⁴⁷⁸³ The VRS Main Staff then sent a combat report to the Accused, informing him of these events, including the attack on Famos, as well as the fact that “[t]he enemy was adequately responded to whereby an A/B /air bomb/ (250kg) was launched on the centre of Hrasnica.”¹⁴⁷⁸⁴

4406. Contradicting Milošević’s order of 6 April and the SRK combat report of 7 April, Overgard testified that he could not remember any unusual military activity in the days prior to the incident, except for some small arms fire in the area of the Famos factory, which was a common occurrence.¹⁴⁷⁸⁵ He could not recall any unusual military activity the morning of the incident, describing it as a quiet morning with only some shooting.¹⁴⁷⁸⁶ He also did not hear any outgoing fire from the centre of Hrasnica.¹⁴⁷⁸⁷ However, on 8 April 1995, the UN reported on the incident, stating that the “rocket which impacted in Hrasnica was most likely retaliation for the mortar round fired from Hrasnica some minutes before.”¹⁴⁷⁸⁸

4407. Šubo testified that there was “some kind of military structure” on her street but that it was not close to her house and that she did not see any mortars in the vicinity of her house.¹⁴⁷⁸⁹ KDZ166 testified that there was nothing but “family houses” at the incident site, which was in the centre of Hrasnica.¹⁴⁷⁹⁰ He confirmed on cross-examination that the projectile flew over the secondary school in Hrasnica but denied any knowledge about the school being used to house members of the 4th Brigade of the ABiH.¹⁴⁷⁹¹ Overgard explained that the two headquarters of the 4th Motorised Brigade in Hrasnica¹⁴⁷⁹² were somewhere between 800 and 1,000 metres away from the incident site.¹⁴⁷⁹³ Similarly, the road between Mt. Igman and Hrasnica was over a kilometre away from the incident site.¹⁴⁷⁹⁴

4408. In contrast, Milošević testified that four ABiH 120 mm mortars were in the “immediate vicinity” of the incident site.¹⁴⁷⁹⁵ When confronted with the VRS Main Staff report to the Accused referred to above—in which the ABiH fire on Famos was said to have come from areas outside of Hrasnica—Milošević explained that the modified air bomb was not fired to respond to the forces

The Chamber notes that, according to the scale on the maps marked by Overgard, the company headquarters was located almost two kilometres to the northwest of the incident site, while the brigade headquarters was some 750 metres to the northeast of the incident site. The four mortars were located almost two kilometres away from the incident site.

When confronted with D779 showing the locations of ABiH weapons none of which was in the immediate vicinity of the incident site, Milošević claimed that this order was unrelated to the issue of the mortars in Hrasnica.

firing on Famos but to neutralise the four mortars in Hrasnica because those were a long-standing problem for the SRK.¹⁴⁷⁹⁶ He could not recall, however, if following the incident, the subordinate units confirmed that the mortars had been neutralised; he assumed this to be the case as there was no more fire on the SRK from that area.¹⁴⁷⁹⁷

4409. The Chamber also heard from witnesses called by the Accused that the Alekse Šantića School in Hrasnica was used by the ABiH to anneal shells and train members of the 4th Motorised Brigade.¹⁴⁷⁹⁸ Radojčić testified that this is why he chose the school as the target after receiving Milošević's order of 6 April.¹⁴⁷⁹⁹ He stated that he used the temporary firing tables the brigade had received to launch the modified air bomb and missed the school by only 20 to 30 metres, striking instead a house in which ABiH guards were billeted.¹⁴⁸⁰⁰ He further testified that he was told by Overgard that only one soldier was killed, and that Overgard had seen the legs of this soldier.¹⁴⁸⁰¹ When a map was shown to him to illustrate that the school was in fact some 150 metres away from the incident site, Radojčić seemed to accept that this was so but disputed that the location marked as the incident site was accurately marked.¹⁴⁸⁰²

While the other Defence witnesses argued that ABiH in fact produced or manufactured shells in the school, the Chamber does not consider this possible given that this was a school building and, as such, would not have had the equipment necessary for the production of shells. See Dragomir Milošević, T. 32796 (29 January 2013), T. 33162–33163 (4 February 2013); D2562 (Witness statement of Vladimir Radojčić dated 8 December 2012), paras. 20, 108; D2590 (Map of Hrasnica marked by Vladimir Radojčić); D2353 (Report of 2nd Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade to SRK, 5 August 1994); Vladimir Radojčić, T. 31257–31259 (11 December 2012), T. 31261–31263 (12 December 2012); D2633 (Witness statement of Milorad Šehovac dated 8 December 2012), paras. 21, 63. Instead, the Chamber is more persuaded by Mišćević's evidence that the school's furnace was used to anneal the shells.

¹⁴⁸⁰² Vladimir Radojčić, T. 31267–31268 (12 December 2012). The Chamber notes that the map of Hrasnica used with Radojčić was not admitted into evidence but that an almost identical map has been admitted into evidence through KDZ166, Overgard, and Mišćević. See P1792 (Map of Hrasnica); P2063 (Map of Hrasnica marked by Thorbjorn Overgard); P2064 (Map of Hrasnica marked by Thorbjorn Overgard); D2766 (Map of Hrasnica marked by Ilija Mišćević). Using the scale on these maps, the distance between the school and the incident site, which has been correctly marked, does appear to be over 100 metres. This was confirmed by Ilija Mišćević. See Ilija Mišćević, T. 32081–32082 (17 January 2013). See also Milorad Šehovac, T. 31370 (13 December 2012).

4410. Zečević reviewed the material compiled by the CSB Sarajevo investigators on the day of the incident and concluded, based on the damage to Šubo's house, namely the undamaged interior wall with the destroyed exterior wall, as well as the damage to the surrounding houses, that the modified air bomb used in this incident must have been filled with fuel-air explosive.¹⁴⁸⁰³ He testified that the azimuth of the modified air bomb was around 320 degrees from the north, as opposed to 305 degrees estimated by KDZ166 in his sketch, because 320 degrees would have placed the launcher in an area that avoided inhabited parts of Ilidža municipality, while KDZ166's azimuth would have placed it in an open area, exposed to fire.¹⁴⁸⁰⁴ He also established, on the basis of the probable point of impact (the top of one of the windows of the house) and the place where the rocket motors were found, that the angle of descent was around 25 degrees; this in turn enabled him to estimate that the origin of fire was somewhere between 5,820 and 4,800 metres from the incident site, in the area between Rimski Most and Plandište, in Ilidža municipality.¹⁴⁸⁰⁵

4411. Contrary to Zečević, both Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić argued that the modified air bomb fired in this incident was a FAB-100 with a solid explosive charge, as indicated by (i) the type of damage caused to the destroyed house and the neighbouring houses; (ii) the fact that two persons inside the house remained uninjured while two were wounded;¹⁴⁸⁰⁶ (iii) the fact that only two rocket motors were found on the scene of the incident whereas a FAB-250 would have required three; and (iv) the fact that no fragments of an air fuel container were found on the scene.¹⁴⁸⁰⁷ As for the direction of fire, Subotić agreed with Zečević and the CSB Sarajevo investigators, noting further that the azimuth determined by Zečević meant that the bomb flew over the Aleksa Šantića school, the schoolyard of which was 20 metres away from the incident site and which housed members of the 4th Motorised Brigade of the ABiH.¹⁴⁸⁰⁸ Finally, Subotić argued that Zečević's estimates as to the distance from which the modified air bomb was fired was highly questionable and made without taking into account the specifications of the modified bomb used.¹⁴⁸⁰⁹

4412. In addition to the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber also took judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts that go to the origin and the nature of fire in this incident: (i) the projectile that exploded in Hrasnica on 7 April 1995 was a modified air bomb;¹⁴⁸¹⁰ (ii) one civilian was killed and three civilians were injured, one of them seriously, in the explosion;¹⁴⁸¹¹ (iii) the modified air bomb was fired from the area northwest of the impact site, in the area of Ilidža, an area that was controlled by the SRK;¹⁴⁸¹² and (iv) the modified air bomb was launched by members of the SRK.¹⁴⁸¹³

4413. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, and in particular the SRK combat report of 7 April, the Chamber is satisfied that the projectile that landed at Alekse Šantića street in Hrasnica on 6 April 1995 was a FAB-250 modified air bomb. The Chamber is also satisfied that it was launched by the members of the Ilidža Brigade, in direct application of the order issued by Dragomir Milošević on 6 April 1995.¹⁴⁸¹⁴ Given that the SRK's own report states that the bomb used in this attack was a modified FAB-250, the Chamber does not accept the evidence of Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić that it was in fact a FAB-100. Similarly, it is also not persuaded by Zečević's evidence that the bomb in question was a fuel-air bomb.

4414. The Chamber is further satisfied that one person, Ziba Čustović, died in this incident, while three others, Ziba Šubo, Elvis Brajlović,¹⁴⁸¹⁵ and Gara Sarajkić, were wounded. All four were civilians who were in their houses and not taking direct part in the hostilities at the time the incident took place.

4415. The Chamber recalls the Accused's argument that the intended target of the modified air bomb was the Alekse Šantića school, which according to him was some 20 metres away from the incident site and which was used by the ABiH's 4th Brigade. The Chamber further recalls that it was Subotić who measured the distance between the school's backyard and the incident site as being some 20 metres away from the incident site. While the Chamber is satisfied that the school was used by the ABiH, as confirmed by various SRK documents and by both Ilija Mišćević and

Ziba Šubo, it does not accept Subotić's evidence that the school was 20 metres from the incident site. Instead, as noted above, the evidence shows that the school building itself was over 100 metres away from the incident site.¹⁴⁸¹⁶ In addition, all the other ABiH-related locations in Hrasnica, including the four ABiH mortars, were far from the incident site.¹⁴⁸¹⁷ The Chamber considers, therefore, that there were no legitimate military targets in the immediate vicinity of the incident site.¹⁴⁸¹⁸

4416. The Chamber recalls that Radojčić testified that he was the one who selected the Alekse Šantića School as the target following Milošević's order of 6 April, thus contradicting the argument that the SRK was targeting civilians in this incident. However, as noted above, the modified air bomb overshot the school by over 100 metres. Given the inherent inaccuracy of modified air bombs and their destructive power, as found by the Chamber above, and the fact that the target selected was located in the central, mainly residential, part of Hrasnica, Radojčić and the other SRK soldiers involved in this launch should have been aware that such an attack would cause casualties among the civilian population and extensive destruction of civilian property.

4417. The Chamber also recalls here the Accused's argument that the launch was made in response to ABiH violation of a truce and its constant attacks on the SRK in the area. However, noting the combat report of 7 April, it is clear that while there was ABiH fire on the Famos Factory in the morning of 7 April, it came from infantry weapons and from an 82 mm mortar, which were fired from the area of Gradina-Igman and Lasica. The SRK response of launching the FAB-250, a highly destructive modified air bomb, was therefore disproportionate. In addition, it was directed at a location different to the one from which the fire was opened. The SRK response thus appears to have been an attempt to exact revenge rather than to neutralise incoming fire or defend the SRK positions at the moment of the attacks. In the Chamber's view the report of 7 April is also indicative of the general mind-set of the SRK units, including its command, according to which no distinction could be or was made between the civilian population and legitimate military targets. This meant that large areas of Sarajevo, such as the centre of Hrasnica, were considered to be legitimate military targets no matter how many civilians lived there.¹⁴⁸¹⁹

¹⁴⁸¹⁷ In this respect, the Chamber accepts Mišćević's evidence as to the location of the post office in Hrasnica which housed the 4th Brigade headquarters.

4418. According to the Indictment, on 24 May 1995, a missile projectile landed on Safeta Zajke street, killing two people and wounding five others.¹⁴⁸²⁰ The alleged origin of fire was the SRK-held territory southeast of the incident site.¹⁴⁸²¹ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution claims that the projectile was a modified air bomb and that it came from the direction of Lukavica.¹⁴⁸²² According to the Indictment, also on 24 May 1995, a modified air bomb landed on Majdanska street “bb”, killing two and wounding five civilians.¹⁴⁸²³ As with scheduled incident G.11, the alleged origin of fire was the SRK-held territory southeast of the incident site.¹⁴⁸²⁴

4419. The Accused argues that there was fierce combat in Sarajevo on the day of these incidents and that the modified air bomb used in both was a FAB-100, filled with solid explosive charge.¹⁴⁸²⁵ With respect to the Safeta Zajke incident he claims that the “most likely target” was the Žica factory, which was a part of an industrial complex and housed a command post of the 102nd Motorised Brigade.¹⁴⁸²⁶ He also argues that the SRK used the bomb to neutralise six ABiH mortars near Stupsko Brdo.¹⁴⁸²⁷ As for the Majdanska street incident, the Accused argues that the intended target was the transformer station, located within an industrial zone and surrounded by military objects, such as the forward command post of the 102nd Motorised Brigade; the point of impact was, according to the Accused, within the expected error range for unguided rocket projectiles.¹⁴⁸²⁸

4420. In May 1995, Anđa Gotovac lived at 43 Safeta Zajke street, in Alipašino Polje, approximately 100 to 150 metres behind the TV building.¹⁴⁸²⁹ Her house was also close to the power transformer station, the Žica Factory, and the Novi Grad municipality building.¹⁴⁸³⁰ This area was far from the frontlines, so there was no sniper fire, although there was constant shelling.¹⁴⁸³¹ She could recall two other occasions on which the shells passed over her house, targeting the TV building.¹⁴⁸³²

4421. On 24 May 1995, it was a quiet morning and just after 10 a.m., Gotovac was outside her house when she heard something that sounded like a plane.¹⁴⁸³³ Before she could raise her head to see what the sound was, there was an explosion and she was blown over by the blast.¹⁴⁸³⁴ The roof of her house was also blown away and her house was destroyed.¹⁴⁸³⁵ According to Gotovac, as a result of this explosion, two people were killed and at least three, including Gotovac, were injured.¹⁴⁸³⁶ Gotovac sustained a deep wound in her shoulder and ribs from shrapnel, and had to have surgery; after she was discharged from hospital several days later but she had to be visited by a nurse on a daily basis for the next two months.¹⁴⁸³⁷ Two years after the incident, she still had breathing problems and could not lean on her left side.¹⁴⁸³⁸

4422. Gotovac testified that the explosion was caused by an air bomb and noted that, as she was being taken to hospital, she saw a “barrel” on the ground.¹⁴⁸³⁹ She admitted, however, that she did not know what a modified air bomb looked like.¹⁴⁸⁴⁰ Gotovac also testified that she never saw any ABiH weapons, positions, or military facilities in her street and that on the day of the explosion she did not see any ABiH soldiers nearby.¹⁴⁸⁴¹ She confirmed, however, that ABiH troops were located on Žuč hill, which was to the north of her house, some distance away, and that they had to pass through her street in order to get to the hill.¹⁴⁸⁴² Gotovac was told that the projectile came either from Hresa or from Trebević but noted that she did not know if that was really the case.¹⁴⁸⁴³

4423. On the same day, at around 2 p.m., another projectile exploded, this time on the nearby Majdanska street in Alipašino Polje.¹⁴⁸⁴⁴

4424. A team from CSB Sarajevo, which included Kučanin and KDZ166, investigated both incidents.¹⁴⁸⁴⁵ They first went to Safeta Zajke street and arrived at the incident site at 2:30 p.m.; no ballistics experts were on the scene but they were consulted later.¹⁴⁸⁴⁶ At Safeta Zajke street, KDZ166 took photographs, sketched the incident site, and marked all the physical evidence.¹⁴⁸⁴⁷ He concluded, based on the bomb fragments found embedded into the crater in the southeasterly direction, that the projectile came from the southeast.¹⁴⁸⁴⁸ He also noted that the crater was 250 centimetres long, 110 centimetres wide, and 30 centimetres deep.¹⁴⁸⁴⁹ In his report dated 26 May 1995, Kučanin stated that the crater made by the projectile was about two metres long and one metre wide, and that it stretched toward the south,¹⁴⁸⁵⁰ “that is the aggressor’s positions in the Lukavica area”.¹⁴⁸⁵¹ Based on the connecting plate, parts of the fuse of the aircraft bomb, and two ¹⁴⁸⁵¹ P1322 (BiH MUP Report re shelling of Safeta Zajke and Majdanska streets on 24 May 1995), e-court p. 1. KDZ166 explained that the conclusion on the origin of fire was based on the assumption that the ABiH would rocket tail fins found in the crater, it was determined that the projectile was a modified air bomb with four 128 mm multiple rocket launcher rockets and that it weighed between 400 and 450 kilograms.¹⁴⁸⁵² According to the report, two people were killed and five, including Gotovac, were wounded as a result of this explosion.¹⁴⁸⁵³ KDZ166 testified that they were all civilians.¹⁴⁸⁵⁴

4425. Having completed the investigation on Safeta Zajke street, the CSB Sarajevo team then moved to Majdanska street and investigated this incident as well.¹⁴⁸⁵⁵ As with the previous incident, KDZ166 took photographs, marked the evidence, and prepared a sketch of the scene noting that the incident site overlooked the transformer station.¹⁴⁸⁵⁶ He observed that the crater was five metres in diameter, two metres wide, and one metre deep, while the surface was soil.¹⁴⁸⁵⁷ On the basis of the positioning of the crater, he determined that the bomb came from the southeast, that is, from the area of Pavlovac.¹⁴⁸⁵⁸ Later, during his cross-examination, KDZ166 appeared to agree with the Accused's incorrect assertion that the location he noted in his report was Prljevo Brdo, which is a location northeast of Pavlovac and further east of Lukavica.¹⁴⁸⁵⁹

4426. Kučanin also prepared a report, dated 26 May 1995, and noted, based on the fragments found and the damage caused, including a crater that was five metres long, 1.5 metres wide, and about 1.5 metres deep, that the projectile was a modified air bomb with four 128 mm rockets.¹⁴⁸⁶⁰

He also testified that he did not know why Kučanin's report recorded slightly different measurements for the size of the crater and had a slightly different direction of fire. According to the report, the crater stretched towards the south, indicating that the modified air bomb came from the same location as the bomb that struck Safeta Zajke street earlier in the day.¹⁴⁸⁶¹ The report also notes that two people were killed in the explosion and six were seriously wounded; in addition, serious damage was caused to the Novi Grad power transformer station and one electricity pylon was destroyed.¹⁴⁸⁶²

4427. The fragments found on both sites were then sent to ballistics experts for analysis. The experts established that both projectiles were modified air bombs made of a destructive FAB-250 aircraft bomb and five 122 mm GRAD type rockets which served as a power unit.¹⁴⁸⁶³

4428. With respect to the facilities surrounding the incident sites, the Chamber heard that both sites were close to the TV building, the Novi Grad's Municipal Assembly building, Geodesic Institute, Žica Factory,¹⁴⁸⁶⁴ ŠIK Factory, and Energoinvest.¹⁴⁸⁶⁵ While the command post of the 102nd Motorised Brigade of the ABiH was located in Žica factory,¹⁴⁸⁶⁶ Safeta Zajke street itself was

¹⁴⁸⁶⁴ At first, KDZ166 stated that Žica Factory was about 300 to 500 metres away from the incident site on Safeta Zajke street but when asked to measure that distance on a map agreed that it was just under 100 metres away. See KDZ166, T. 8336–8338 (26 October 2010). See also D3540 (Zorica Subotić's expert report entitled "The Use of Modified Aircraft Bombs in the Sarajevo Area in 1994–1995", 15 March 2012), pp. 58, 188. lined with residential houses, with ABiH positions approximately two kilometres behind it.¹⁴⁸⁶⁷ The Novi Grad police station is located on Prvomajska street.¹⁴⁸⁶⁸ A number of residential buildings are located some 100 metres away from the incident site on Majdanska street.¹⁴⁸⁶⁹

4429. Zečević, Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić all analysed the reports and various witness statements in relation to the two incidents. With respect to the Safeta Zajke incident, Zečević thought that the projectile used was a modified fuel-air bomb with three 122 mm GRAD rocket motors.¹⁴⁸⁷⁰ He based this conclusion on (i) a “three pointed star” or “three pointed centering system” found on the scene, which was used to centre the three rocket motors; (ii) Gotovac’s statement that after detonation she had a burning sensation; (iii) the absence of a large number of fragments on the facades of the surrounding buildings; and (iv) the fact that rocket motors were found in the crater.¹⁴⁸⁷¹ Zečević determined, based on the sketch of the incident, that the azimuth of the modified air bomb was 155 degrees, plus or minus five degrees.¹⁴⁸⁷² According to him, the modified air bomb was launched from a distance greater than 4,800 metres from the incident site as the angle of launch would otherwise have to have been 20 degrees; this would have resulted in the bomb ricocheting.¹⁴⁸⁷³ He testified that it probably came from a distance of about 5,800 metres or more.¹⁴⁸⁷⁴

4430. Both Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić argued that the modified air bomb that landed on Safeta Zajke street was most probably a FAB-100 with three rocket motors¹⁴⁸⁷⁵ because the crater

¹⁴⁸⁷⁴ P2318 (Report by Berko Zečević entitled “The use of modified aircraft bombs during the siege of Sarajevo, 1994–1995”), p. 120.

¹⁴⁸⁷⁵ Subotić explained that local ballistics experts concluded that the bomb contained five rocket motors because they overlooked the fact that 122 mm GRAD rockets have two chambers each, meaning that the five tubes found on the scene indicated that the projectile had at least three motors. See D3540 (Zorica Subotić’s expert report entitled “The Use of Modified Aircraft Bombs in the Sarajevo Area in 1994–1995”, 15 March 2012), p. 62.

was smaller than craters created by FAB-250 bombs and because a three-pointed star was found among the fragments.¹⁴⁸⁷⁶ Both also thought that the bomb contained conventional explosive rather than fuel-air explosive because, inter alia, (i) no large fragments of projectile casing were found, indicating that the casing fragmented from the effects of a solid explosive charge; (ii) traces from the blast, such as blown-off rooftops and broken windows and doors, point to the conclusion that solid explosive was used; and (iii) had it been a fuel-air bomb more people would have been killed as they were near the explosion.¹⁴⁸⁷⁷

4431. Noting that the direction of north was marked incorrectly in KDZ166's sketch, Subotić corrected the mistake and determined that the azimuth of the bomb was 146 degrees, rather than 155 degrees as established by Zečević.¹⁴⁸⁷⁸ She argued that both directions cross over the Žica Factory, which was most likely the intended target.¹⁴⁸⁷⁹ Finally, Subotić criticised Zečević's analysis in relation to the distance from which the modified air bomb came and argued that it would have been more than 6,200 metres, and probably even farther than 7,000 metres.¹⁴⁸⁸⁰

4432. As for the Majdanska street incident, Zečević noted that on the basis of KDZ166's sketch, the azimuth was around 135 degrees from the north, but speculated that the actual azimuth was "probably identical" to the azimuth of the bomb that struck Safeta Zajke street, particularly given the proximity of the two locations.¹⁴⁸⁸¹ Subotić disagreed and—having once again corrected the direction of north on KDZ166's sketch—found that the azimuth of the bomb was around 137 degrees.¹⁴⁸⁸² Noting that the alleged origin of fire, namely Pavlovac, was on a trajectory that had an azimuth of 152 degrees, she concluded that it was impossible to establish with certainty which direction was correct but thought that it was definitely southeast and that it was between 120 and

150 degrees.¹⁴⁸⁸³ According to her, the analysis of the possible trajectories indicates that the launching site was chosen so that the trajectory of the bomb passed over the least populated part of the city.¹⁴⁸⁸⁴

4433. To Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić, the size of the crater in Majdanska street, as measured by KDZ166, indicated that the projectile that landed there was a FAB-100 modified air bomb filled with solid charge.¹⁴⁸⁸⁵ Noting the discrepancy between KDZ166's report and Kučanin's report on the size of the crater, Subotić thought that Kučanin purposefully enlarged the crater so that it would fit with the damage caused by a FAB-250 bomb.¹⁴⁸⁸⁶ Further, she recalled that an electricity pylon was destroyed and thought that the most likely target in this incident was the transformer station.¹⁴⁸⁸⁷

4434. A number of SRK witnesses called by the Accused testified about these two incidents. According to Radojčić, there was a "fierce" ABiH offensive on 24 May 1995; further, the area surrounding Majdanska street was an industrial zone, packed with military installations, including the forward command post of the 1st Battalion of the 102nd Motorised Brigade of the ABiH located on Prvomajska street.¹⁴⁸⁸⁸ Dragomir Milošević confirmed that there was an ABiH offensive on 24 May and testified that the ABiH had six 120 mm mortars on Safeta Zajke street with which they opened fire on Ilidža and Nedžarići but which were neutralised with the air bomb.¹⁴⁸⁸⁹ As part of that offensive, the ABiH forces were also trying to break through from Majdanska street onto Ozrenka street and were thus firing mortars on the SRK positions from there.¹⁴⁸⁹⁰ Milošević also claimed that the modified air bomb that struck Majdanska street caused no casualties according to

“their [ABiH] reports” and that the distance between Majdanska street incident site and the closest residential area, namely over 100 metres, was safe.¹⁴⁸⁹¹

4435. Savo Simić, who had been Chief of Artillery in the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade positioned in Lukavica prior to the incident,¹⁴⁸⁹² testified that not a single modified air bomb was launched from the brigade’s zone of responsibility.¹⁴⁸⁹³ Similarly, Dušan Škrba, Simić’s subordinate, testified that Prljevo Brdo was in his zone of fire and immediately in front of his command post and was adamant that no air bomb was ever fired from there or from Lukavica.¹⁴⁸⁹⁴ He did concede, however, that his brigade had air bombs in its arsenal.¹⁴⁸⁹⁵

4437. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, particularly the fragments found at both incident sites, the Chamber is satisfied that the projectiles that landed on those sites were modified air bombs. The Chamber does not accept the evidence of Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić that in both incidents the bombs in question were FAB-100 bombs. Instead, it is more persuaded by the analysis of the local ballistics experts who had the opportunity to examine the fragments found at the two incident sites and who reached the conclusion that FAB-250 bombs were used on both occasions.¹⁴⁹⁰¹ Subotić showed yet again that she was prone to jumping to conspiracy theories when she speculated that Kučanin purposefully enlarged the description of the size of the crater in Majdanska street in order to implicate a larger modified air bomb. The Chamber does not accept her evidence on this point.¹⁴⁹⁰² The Chamber is also not persuaded beyond reasonable doubt by Zečević's evidence that the bomb that landed on Safeta Zajke street was a fuel-air bomb. In fact, the Chamber considers that the damage he mentions in support of that conclusion could have equally been the result of an explosion of a modified air bomb with solid charge, as explained by Anđelković-Lukić and Subotić. Accordingly, the Chamber cannot accept as accurate that part of Adjudicated Fact 3044 which refers to the fuel-air explosive. Ultimately, however, the Chamber considers that the type of the charge used in the bombs here is irrelevant given their size and highly destructive nature.

4438. Given the proximity of the two incident sites, and the fact that they are on the same firing line, the Chamber is further of the view that both modified air bombs were launched from the same location and by the same launching crew.¹⁴⁹⁰³ Given the long range from which the two modified air bombs were fired, as testified to by Zečević and Subotić in relation to the Safeta Zajke incident, the Chamber is also satisfied that they were fired by the SRK. Additionally, the fact that the ABiH did not possess such bombs also indicates that they were launched by the SRK. The Chamber is also satisfied, that they were launched from the SRK positions southeast of the incident sites as determined by the CSB Sarajevo. While Dušan Škrba claimed that they were not launched from his zone of fire, namely from Prljevo Brdo, this location was never said to have been the origin of fire; instead, KDZ166 referred to the area of Pavlovac in his report, which is located south of Lukavica and is southeast of the incident sites. Ultimately, however, the Chamber does not consider it necessary to determine the exact origin of fire, given its findings above.¹⁴⁹⁰⁴

¹⁴⁹⁰⁰ See Adjudicated Fact 3051.

¹⁴⁹⁰¹ In addition, the Chamber recalls that both Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić came to the same conclusion in relation to Scheduled Incident G.10, despite the fact that the SRK itself reported that the bomb launched on that occasion was a FAB-250. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that their reliability has been compromised in relation to their assessments of the type of the modified air bomb used in the scheduled incidents.

¹⁴⁹⁰² The Chamber notes that in relation to the Safeta Zajke street incident, Kučanin described a crater that was in fact smaller than the crater measured by KDZ166. Thus, the Chamber considers that the differences between Kučanin and KDZ166 in their descriptions of the incident site were most likely the result of imprecision when describing and/or measuring the crater.

¹⁴⁹⁰³ The passage of time between the two modified air bomb launches on 24 May 1995 is in line with Milošević's evidence that launching crews needed at least two hours between launches. See fn. 14679.

4439. With respect to the casualties, based on the evidence and adjudicated facts outlined above, and particularly the medical records and photographs of those killed, the Chamber is satisfied that four people died in these two incidents, while 11 were wounded.¹⁴⁹⁰⁵ The Chamber is also satisfied that they were civilians and were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time the bombs landed. Accordingly, Milošević's evidence that there were no casualties on Majdanska street is clearly incorrect and rather indicates that he was trying to minimise the damage caused by the SRK's actions on that day.

4440. Finally, with respect to the Accused's argument that both incident sites were located in an industrial zone, close to military facilities, the Chamber accepts that a number of industrial facilities were indeed in the vicinity of the two incident sites. However, this industrial zone was also interspersed with residential areas and many civilians lived and worked there. While the command post of the 102nd Motorised Brigade of the ABiH was located in the Žica Factory, some 100 metres away from the incident site on Safeta Zajke street, the street itself was lined with residential houses and was a purely residential area. Even if, as speculated by Subotić, the Žica Factory had been the intended target of the modified air bomb that eventually struck Safeta Zajke street, the SRK missed it by around 100 metres.

4441. With respect to the Majdanska street incident, the Chamber recalls the Accused's claim that the target was the transformer station, while the forward command post of the 1st Battalion of the 102nd Motorised Brigade was nearby. Assuming that the transformer station was indeed the target, the Chamber does not accept that it was a legitimate military target; rather it was a civilian object, the purpose of which was to provide electricity for the city and its population. The same can be said for the electricity pylon that was destroyed in this incident. As for the presence of the forward command post of the 1st Battalion of the 102nd Motorised Brigade near Majdanska street, the Chamber received no evidence about its precise location or its distance from the incident site. Radojčić only testified that it was in a school building on Prvomajska street. The Chamber notes that this street is some 150 metres away from the incident site.¹⁴⁹⁰⁶ Once again, assuming that this school was indeed the target of this attack, the SRK missed it by over 100 metres.

4442. Accordingly, while the two modified air bombs were indeed launched on 24 May 1995 into an area with a number of industrial facilities and at least one military target, the Chamber is not particularly given Subotić's evidence that the distance from which the Safeta Zajke modified air bomb was launched was over 6,000 metres.

convinced that they were launched with the aim of neutralising any military targets. Had the SRK sought to destroy the command post located in the Žica Factory, it would have tried to do so with the second modified air bomb it launched later in the afternoon. However, the second bomb landed in the area that was about 600 metres from the Žica Factory. This happened either because the SRK was not in fact intent on destroying the command post in Žica or, if it was, then the second bomb deviated from its target by a large margin, indicating yet again the inherent inaccuracy of this weapon. Either way, given this inaccuracy and noting the destructive power of modified air bombs and the fact that there were residential areas around the above-mentioned industrial facilities, the SRK soldiers and officers who ordered and executed the launch of the two modified air bombs should have been aware that such an attack would cause casualties among the civilian population, as well as the extensive destruction of civilian property.

(c) Safeta Hadžića street, 26 May 1995 (Scheduled Incident G.13)

4443. According to the Indictment, on 26 May 1995, a modified air bomb struck a building near apartment blocks in Safeta Hadžića street (currently Prvomajska street)¹⁴⁹⁰⁷ destroying the top three floors of an apartment building and was followed by several artillery rounds.¹⁴⁹⁰⁸ The Indictment alleges that 17 persons were injured, two seriously, and that the fire came from the SRK-held territory in the west-southwest.¹⁴⁹⁰⁹ The Accused argues that the modified air bomb used in this incident was a FAB-100 and that it ricocheted off of its intended target, namely the TV building, and then struck the building on Safeta Hadžića street.¹⁴⁹¹⁰ The Accused also argues that there is no evidence to support the police reports that ten artillery rounds were fired in the area after the modified air bomb; these projectiles, he claims, either did not land in the area or were staged.¹⁴⁹¹¹

4444. On 26 May 1995, at about 11 a.m., KDZ036 was in the square outside an apartment building on Prvomajska street, in Švrakino Selo.¹⁴⁹¹² There were between 40 and 50 people in the square at the time as the weather was fine and there was a lull in the shelling, with no military operations in the area.¹⁴⁹¹³ KDZ036 heard a noise resembling that of a fast moving plane or a ¹⁴⁹⁰⁷ The address of this building changed several times. It was first Prvomajska street number 52, then it became Safeta Hadžića street 52, and then, in November 1995, it became Prvomajska street 4. See P5061 (Letter from the BiH Office of the Bosniak Liaison Officer to ICTY, 10 April 2012).

helicopter and a couple of seconds later there was a large blast, which knocked him to the ground.¹⁴⁹¹⁴ When he looked around, he saw bricks falling down from one of the buildings and people screaming.¹⁴⁹¹⁵ He was taken to the Koševo Hospital as he had a deep cut on the right side of his back.¹⁴⁹¹⁶ Later KDZ036 learned that the explosion occurred on the roof of a five storey building nearby and destroyed the three top floors; he saw a large crater in the roof of that building.¹⁴⁹¹⁷ In addition, all the surrounding buildings had their windows blown out.¹⁴⁹¹⁸ No one died as a result of this explosion,¹⁴⁹¹⁹ but at least two persons were seriously injured and 14 others were slightly injured.¹⁴⁹²⁰ KDZ036 did not hear any other explosions that day.¹⁴⁹²¹ He testified that this explosion was the loudest one he ever heard and that it was different from any other type of mortar or shell he had heard previously.¹⁴⁹²²

residential area with apartment buildings and offices, close to the Majdanska street.¹⁴⁹²⁶ Pieces of artillery projectiles, some of which were marked with a swastika, were examined—the team concluded that they were all 90 mm armour piercing artillery projectiles produced in Nazi Germany and that all were fired from an unspecified weapon located west of the incident site, in the direction of Ilidža.¹⁴⁹²⁷ As for the highly destructive explosive device, the report notes that it hit the roof of the apartment building at 52 Safeta Hadžića street (formerly Prvomajska street),¹⁴⁹²⁸ completely destroyed an apartment on the top floor, and damaged a number of others down to the third floor.¹⁴⁹²⁹ Three GRAD rocket motors were also found on the scene, as well as pieces of the connecting plate.¹⁴⁹³⁰ Upon inspection of its traces, it was determined that the projectile came from the south-southwest, corresponding to the positions of the Serbs in Lukavica.¹⁴⁹³¹ According to the report, two persons were seriously injured while 16 others, including a two-month old baby, sustained light injuries.¹⁴⁹³²

4446. KDZ477 testified that the artillery shells and the modified air bomb that landed in the area on 26 May 1995 did not appear to be targeting anything in particular and that the area was a purely civilian neighbourhood with civilian buildings and the police station; there were no ABiH weapons there.¹⁴⁹³³

4447. Following the investigation at the scene, the CSB Sarajevo asked for an expert opinion on the projectile that was said to have come from the west-southwest and hit an apartment building at 52 Safeta Hadžića street.¹⁴⁹³⁴ As a result, Suljević prepared a report analysing the fragments found and concluded that it was a modified air bomb, consisting of an aircraft bomb, the type of which could not be established, and “many 122 mm calibre GRAD type rocket projectiles used as engines”.¹⁴⁹³⁵ When asked about the projectile with a swastika, he observed that it was not part of the material he inspected, but noted that he did encounter such a shell in another incident, where it was established that it was an 88 mm calibre artillery shell.¹⁴⁹³⁶

4448. Zečević analysed the incident and concluded that the projectile was a modified air bomb, filled with fuel-air explosive.¹⁴⁹³⁷ Noting that the reports of local investigators provided two different directions of fire, namely west (Ilidža) and south-southwest (Lukavica), Zečević thought, relying on eye-witness accounts which are not in evidence in this case, that the bomb in fact came from the direction of Ilidža-Rajlovac.¹⁴⁹³⁸ He speculated that the azimuth was most likely 285 degrees, as that would have avoided the inhabited parts of Ilidža.¹⁴⁹³⁹ Reasoning that the angle of descent had to have been higher than 25 degrees, he determined that the distance the modified air bomb travelled was around 5,800 metres, placing the origin of fire somewhere in Butile.¹⁴⁹⁴⁰

On cross-examination, Suljević conceded that the type of air bomb could not be established but remained adamant that, when taking into account the fragments found on the scene, there was no doubt that this device was a modified air bomb. See Ekrem Suljević, T. 5783–5785 (22 July 2010). When asked how the CSB Sarajevo managed to determine the trajectory of the projectile, Suljević did not know and reiterated that he was asked only to determine the type of projectile. See Ekrem Suljević, T. 5779–5781 (22 July 2010). See also KDZ485, T. 8955–8956, 8958 (3 November 2010) (also testifying that he did not know how the direction of fire was determined and that no member of the team on the scene was a ballistics expert); KDZ477, T. 10923–10924 (31 January 2011).

4449. Anđelković-Lukić disputed Zečević's analysis and thought, based on the damage caused, that the modified air bomb that exploded in this incident was a FAB-250 with three rocket motors filled with solid explosive charge.¹⁴⁹⁴¹ While Subotić agreed that this was not a fuel-air bomb, she thought, based on the type of damage caused to the fifth floor of the apartment building and the survival of one of the victims who was located there, that it was in fact a FAB-100.¹⁴⁹⁴² Subotić also challenged the azimuth that Zečević determined, noting that it was speculative and contrary to all local investigators' reports.¹⁴⁹⁴³ Further, based on the image of the damage caused to the fifth floor of the building, she challenged the directions of fire identified by the local investigators and argued that the modified air bomb in fact came from the direction of the TV building, the possible target of the attack, having ricocheted off of that building first.¹⁴⁹⁴⁴ As for the ten artillery projectiles that also landed in the area on 26 May 1995, Subotić argued that not a single one could be considered "proven" and opined that some of the damage seen in the photographs of the impact points indicated that some craters were dug out manually, while other damage was caused by planted explosive or by fire opened close to the incident site.¹⁴⁹⁴⁵ She also claimed that the traces on the projectiles with Nazi insignia indicated that they were fired during World War II.¹⁴⁹⁴⁶

4450. As with the incidents that took place on 24 May 1995, Radojčić recalled that there was a "fierce" ABiH offensive at the time of the incident¹⁴⁹⁴⁷ and that the incident site was "in the

As part of his case that the modified air bomb ricocheted off of the TV building before exploding at 52 Safeta Hadžića street, the Accused challenged Suljević on the trajectory of the modified air bomb established by CSB Sarajevo in the TV building incident, which occurred one month later and which was withdrawn from the Indictment (Scheduled Incident G.17). However, Suljević explained that he only knew the sequence in which the modified air bomb hit the TV building on 28 June, not the precise trajectory in which it travelled before doing so. ¹⁴⁹⁴⁷ The Chamber notes that Radojčić's statement refers to 26 June instead of 26 May 1995. However, given his evidence on Scheduled Incident G.12, the Chamber considers this to be a typographical error and will proceed on the assumption that the witness was referring to the period of 24 to 26 May 1995. The same is the case with immediate vicinity of the television building and an industrial complex, which was packed with military installations”, including the forward command post of the 1st Battalion of the 102nd Motorised Brigade of the ABiH located on Prvomajska street.¹⁴⁹⁴⁸ He testified that he never issued an order to open fire on the incident site or received information about this incident; he did allow, however, for the possibility that a military target may have been missed.¹⁴⁹⁴⁹ Milošević testified that the SRK would not have fired had it not been attacked and that at the time of this incident the ABiH forces were attempting a break-through in order to link up with the other ABiH forces through Nedžarići.¹⁴⁹⁵⁰

4452. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber is satisfied that the projectile that landed on Safeta Hadžića street on 26 May 1995 was a modified air bomb. While CSB Sarajevo did not determine the type of bomb used, the Chamber is convinced, based on the extent of the damage caused to the three floors of a five-storey apartment building, that the bomb in question was larger than FAB-100. Relying on Anđelković-Lukić’s evidence, the Chamber considers that this was most likely a FAB-250 modified air bomb with three rocket motors and thus is not convinced that this was a fuel-air bomb, as claimed by Zečević. Ultimately, however, the Chamber considers that the type of the charge used in the bomb is irrelevant given the size and the highly destructive nature of the bomb.

4453. The Chamber is also satisfied, relying on the CSB Sarajevo reports on the incident and the adjudicated facts, that the explosion of this modified air bomb resulted in significant damage to the five-storey residential building as well as the buildings around it. In addition, two persons were seriously wounded, while at least 14 others—including KDZ036 and a two month-old baby—were lightly wounded. All of them were civilians, who were in their apartments and were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the explosion.

4454. The Chamber recalls that the reports of local investigators provided two different directions of fire, namely west-southwest and south-southwest, while Zečević and Subotić thought that the bomb came from west-northwest and north-northwest, respectively. Adjudicated Fact 3057 refers to the direction of Ilidža–Rajlovac, which is the direction established by Zečević. Accordingly, there does not appear to be any agreement on the direction of fire in this incident. Ultimately, however, the Chamber considers this to be irrelevant as it is convinced, beyond reasonable doubt, that it was the SRK that launched the modified air bomb. This conclusion is based on the fact that (i) the SRK positions were located in all those directions of fire;¹⁴⁹⁵⁴ (ii) the range at which these bombs have to be fired to be effective is long, usually somewhere between 4,000 and 6,000 metres, thus placing the origin of fire within the SRK-held territory;¹⁴⁹⁵⁵ and (iii) only the SRK had modified air bombs in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁹⁵⁶

4455. As noted earlier, Subotić argued that the most probable target in this incident was the TV building, which she measured as being some 620 metres away from the incident site, and that the modified air bomb first ricocheted off of the roof of the TV building and then landed on Safeta Hadžića street. According to Subotić, the traces left by the ricochet were then wrongly assumed to have been part of a modified air bomb incident that took place on 28 June 1995, that is, over a month later. The Chamber rejects that evidence as it was based on secondary materials, such as photographs of the scene, and site visits that took place years later. It also finds it extremely speculative and tenuous. The Chamber is more persuaded by the reports of the local investigators who considered that the relevant traces on the roof of the TV building occurred on 28 June 1995, that is, one month after the incident in Safeta Hadžića street. However, even if Subotić’s analysis is correct and the modified air bomb did indeed ricochet off of the roof of the TV building on 26 May 1995, the Chamber considers that the TV building was not a legitimate military target but a civilian object.¹⁴⁹⁵⁷

¹⁴⁹⁵⁶ See para. 4369.

¹⁴⁹⁵⁷ The Chamber notes that it heard no credible evidence that ABiH units were located in the TV building. While Demurenko mentioned in his witness statement that ABiH had units “in and around” the TV building, he did so in the context of an UNPROFOR report of 16 June 1995 which notes the movement of ABiH weapons to a “TV tower” and records ABiH mortar fire coming from a “TV2 building” at 1:45 p.m. on that day. See D2270 (Witness statement of Andrey Demurenko dated 13 October 2012), p. 80; D2299 (UNPROFOR daily report, 16 June 1995), p. 19. It is unclear, however, where this “TV2 building” was located and if it is the TV building referred to in Subotić’s analysis. Demurenko was not asked to clarify this. The Chamber also recalls that 4456. Furthermore, the Chamber finds that following the explosion of the modified air bomb a number of artillery projectiles were fired by the SRK and landed in the area. The Chamber rejects Subotić's evidence that those projectiles were either planted or fired from nearby, that is, by the ABiH. Once again, she based her conclusion on secondary materials, such as photographs of the damage, while at the same time discounting all of the findings of the local investigators. In addition, if true, her claim would mean that there was a large conspiracy whereby a number of people would have had to plant exploded and unexploded pieces of artillery projectiles in the area, while ABiH was firing other projectiles from its positions nearby, and do all that while remaining unseen. This claim is simply unreasonable and once again indicates that Subotić was not an impartial expert witness and that her evidence was marked with bias in favour of the Accused.

4457. While the witnesses called by the Accused claimed that this incident happened during an ABiH offensive, the Chamber recalls KDZ036's evidence that the area where the incident took place was peaceful on that day and that a number of people were outside in the square before the modified air bomb struck. Thus, even if there had been fighting that day somewhere in Sarajevo, the Chamber does not consider that it was anywhere near the incident site. As for the suggestion that this was an industrial area and that the forward command post of the 102nd Brigade was on Prvomajska street, the Chamber has heard no other evidence about this command post, including its distance to the incident site. Further, while some industrial buildings were in the neighbourhood, the incident site itself was part of a residential complex, strewn with residential buildings and civilians living therein. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider that the modified air bomb and the artillery projectiles that followed it were aimed at neutralising a specific military target. Rather, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK soldiers fired this modified air bomb into a generally residential area, and that, given the inaccuracy of modified air bombs and their destructive power, these soldiers should have been aware that such an attack would cause great damage to civilian objects and result in civilian casualties.

(d) UMC/Oncology Department at Dositejeva street, 16 June 1995 (Scheduled Incident G.14)

4458. The Indictment alleges that on 16 June 1995 at about 10 a.m., a modified air bomb was fired from SRK-held territory in the northwest and struck the building of the "UMC and Oncology Department at Dositejeva street 4-a", resulting in substantial damage and in three persons being wounded.¹⁴⁹⁵⁸ In its Final Brief, the Prosecution alleges that the explosion injured "three or four civilians” and that the bomb came from SRK-held territory, without specifying the direction of fire.¹⁴⁹⁵⁹ The Accused argues that the bomb that struck Dositejeva street was a FAB-100 filled with solid explosive charge, and that the damaged building housed the offices of the Ministry of Defence and was near the command of the 1st Corps of the ABiH, as well as other military targets, including the BiH Presidency.¹⁴⁹⁶⁰

4459. On 16 June 1995, a projectile exploded at the University Medical Centre, Institute of Radiology and Oncology (“UMC”) at Dositejeva street, number 4a.¹⁴⁹⁶¹ CSB Sarajevo conducted an on-site investigation of this incident on 17 June 1995.¹⁴⁹⁶² Two UNMOs were also present, including Konings.¹⁴⁹⁶³ The report prepared by the CSB Sarajevo noted that a “modified device with rocket projectiles was fired from the northwest direction” and exploded when it hit the window frame of the toilet on the first floor of the Sarajevo UMC/Oncology Department at around 11:03 a.m., wounding three persons and causing great material damage to that and the surrounding buildings.¹⁴⁹⁶⁴

4460. Suljević prepared an additional report, upon request from CSB Sarajevo, determining the type of projectile used in this incident as well as the direction from which it came.¹⁴⁹⁶⁵ He went to the incident site, together with the CSB Sarajevo team, to collect the fragments and examine the traces of the explosion.¹⁴⁹⁶⁶ His report recounts that a projectile fell at Dositejeva street following the shelling of the Centar municipality; it injured four people and caused great material damage.¹⁴⁹⁶⁷ Having examined the fragments found at the scene of the incident, including remains of rocket motors and a three-forked metal part, Suljević concluded that they were “remains of a device with three 122 mm calibre GRAD type rocket projectiles, most likely adapted with an aerial bomb.”¹⁴⁹⁶⁸ A fragment of an irregular shape from the exhaust duct of a 128 mm Plamen rocket was also found, which “most probably was not a part of the device that exploded.”¹⁴⁹⁶⁹ As for the type of air bomb used, Suljević thought it was either a 100- or a 250-kilogram air bomb.¹⁴⁹⁷⁰

4461. Suljević determined the direction from which the projectile came, on the basis of the fragments found and the position of the rocket motor parts.¹⁴⁹⁷¹ The impact was on the north side of the building so he thought that the azimuth was 348 degrees from the north, plus or minus ten degrees, which coincides with the direction of “enemy positions in the general sector of Pionirska Dolina.”¹⁴⁹⁷² Suljević confirmed that the separation line between ABiH and VRS in that direction was somewhere in Pionirska Dolina.¹⁴⁹⁷³ However, he was adamant that the projectile was a modified air bomb launched by the VRS, as ABiH had no such weapon.¹⁴⁹⁷⁴

4462. Konings was also at the scene and testified that it was not possible to use the crater analysis so that the direction of fire, which was a “general northerly” direction, was established from the traces of damage.¹⁴⁹⁷⁵ Like Suljević, Konings thought that the bomb was fired by the Bosnian Serb side as he had never seen such a bomb on the ABiH side of the confrontation line and because, had it been fired by the ABiH, the sound of firing would have been heard.¹⁴⁹⁷⁶

4463. Suljević testified that the BiH Railway Company was in the vicinity of the incident site, as was the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the CSB Sarajevo, and the BiH Presidency.¹⁴⁹⁷⁷ He did not know if there were any residential buildings in the area immediately surrounding the incident site but noted that to the south, towards Mis Irbina street, there was a series of residential buildings.¹⁴⁹⁷⁸

KDZ485 testified that the Presidency housed the kitchen of the Ministry of Defence.¹⁴⁹⁷⁹ According to the letter sent by Alija Izetbegović to Haris Silajdžić, UNPROFOR viewed the building as a military target because of this.¹⁴⁹⁸⁰

4464. The official CSB Sarajevo report also provides that later that day, at around 5 p.m., another modified air bomb landed, this time on Čobanija street.¹⁴⁹⁸¹ It was also investigated by the CSB Sarajevo team, as well as by Konings and another UNMO.¹⁴⁹⁸² According to Konings, this bomb came from the same direction in the north as the bomb that struck at Dositejeva street, namely the general northerly direction.¹⁴⁹⁸³

4465. Having analysed the materials relating to this incident, Zečević concluded that the projectile in question was a modified air bomb with three rocket motors and that it was filled with fuel-air explosive as indicated by the damage caused to the scene.¹⁴⁹⁸⁴ He disagreed with Suljević's azimuth, as it meant that the launching site was "deep in the canyon within the Pretis [F]actory" where the terrain would not allow for the launch.¹⁴⁹⁸⁵ He thought that the bomb "most probably" came from the direction of Kobilja Glava, that is, with the azimuth of 315 degrees plus or minus ten degrees (northwest); Zečević based this conclusion on the azimuth he had determined for the incident on Čobanija street because—in his view—both bombs were fired from the same position.¹⁴⁹⁸⁶ He then determined the distance to the launch site "on the basis of the ballistic analysis" as being around 5,820 metres, placing it inside the Pretis Factory compound.¹⁴⁹⁸⁷

4466. Anđelković-Lukić thought, based on the destructive effects at the scene and the fact that the UMC was an old brick building, that the bomb in question was a modified FAB-100, with three rocket motors, filled with solid explosive.¹⁴⁹⁸⁸ Subotić agreed, arguing that, contrary to Zečević's opinion, the effects on the scene were not typical of damage caused by fuel-air explosive; in addition no large pieces of the metal casing housing the fuel-air explosive were found on the scene.¹⁴⁹⁸⁹ Subotić also disputed Zečević's azimuth arguing that he failed to explain how he determined it and that he incorrectly dismissed Suljević's azimuth, ignoring the fact that there were other suitable areas for the launch in that direction of fire.¹⁴⁹⁹⁰ She also challenged the distance to the origin of fire determined by Zečević on the basis that it was pure speculation and that it meant that the launch took place right on the confrontation line, which would not have been wise from a security point of view.¹⁴⁹⁹¹ Ultimately, Subotić agreed with the azimuth determined by Suljević, basing her conclusion on the position of the rockets found on the scene.¹⁴⁹⁹²

4467. While accepting that the area where the bomb struck was in the centre of Sarajevo, Subotić argued that the building itself was not in a residential zone, as the BiH Presidency, CSB Sarajevo, the command of the 1st Corps of the ABiH and the command of the 105th Mountain Brigade were all in the immediate vicinity of the building.¹⁴⁹⁹³ In addition, she claims that the command of helicopter units of the ABiH was located "where this modified bomb landed".¹⁴⁹⁹⁴ Thus, according to her, the modified air bomb that struck the UMC was "practically directly at the target".¹⁴⁹⁹⁵ As for the fragments of the 128 mm Plamen rocket found on the scene, Subotić opined that the "only logical explanation” was that it was in one of the rooms in the UMC, which to her was further confirmation that ABiH officers were in the building at the time of the incident.¹⁴⁹⁹⁶

Relying on the letter from Alija Izetbegović to Haris Silajdžić, namely D860, Subotić also claimed that the Ministry of Defence was "later transferred" to the UMC. The Chamber sees no basis for her claim in the letter cited. Even if true, there is no evidence as to when the transfer happened and whether it was before or after this incident. This, however, did not prevent Subotić from claiming later in her report (on pages 183 and 188) that the Ministry of Defence was located in the UMC building, which was misleading on her part.

4468. The Chamber also heard that the ABiH mounted an offensive in mid-June, directed primarily at the SRK positions.¹⁴⁹⁹⁷ When giving evidence about this incident, Dragomir Milošević testified that, on the night between 15 and 16 June, the ABiH forces moved against the SRK from both the inner and outer circles of Sarajevo as part of the beginning of the offensive to “lift the blockade of Sarajevo”.¹⁴⁹⁹⁸ Thus, on 16 June, he reported to Mladić on the situation, including that the SRK had inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.¹⁴⁹⁹⁹ During this conversation, Mladić instructed Milošević to “attack the Turks until the last one is gone” and said “they’re fighting tooth and nail and they should be made to pay for it”.¹⁵⁰⁰⁰ Mladić also ordered Milošević to “one by one, destroy, attack, only military targets” which, according to Milošević, was the way the war in Sarajevo was waged throughout.¹⁵⁰⁰¹ Milošević then vehemently denied that the SRK fired the bombs that landed on Dositejeva and Čobanija streets.¹⁵⁰⁰² He also testified that the command of the 1st Corps of the ABiH was in the vicinity of the incident site, while a helicopter squadron crew had residence at the incident site.¹⁵⁰⁰³

4469. In another intercepted conversation of 16 June 1995, Prstojević told Rade Ristić, another member of the Ilidža Crisis Staff,¹⁵⁰⁰⁴ that there was an attack by the Muslim side in Nedžarići but that it was successfully deflected, and that his side “pounded” the “Turks” and sent a “krmača” or two to them, to which Ristić responded: “we need to shake them up a bit by all means”.¹⁵⁰⁰⁵

4470. The 3rd Sarajevo Infantry Brigade of the SRK, which was created by merging the Vogošća, Rajlovac, and Koševo Brigades,¹⁵⁰⁰⁶ was located in the northwestern part of the Sarajevo front.¹⁵⁰⁰⁷ Zoran Kovačević, the Commander of the Mixed Artillery Battalion of the 3rd Sarajevo Brigade at the time of the incident,¹⁵⁰⁰⁸ testified that the brigade’s command post was in Vogošća while its firing positions were located in Blagovac and Krivoglavci and orientated towards the city and Žuč.¹⁵⁰⁰⁹ Kovačević testified that no one from Pretis or from his brigade launched the bomb that struck the UMC, explaining that he would have heard the launch had it happened.¹⁵⁰¹⁰ Kovačević did confirm, however, that his brigade probably had an air bomb launcher.¹⁵⁰¹¹ This is corroborated by an SRK document which shows that Milošević reported to the VRS Main Staff on 15 June 1995 that four aerial bomb launchers were with the brigades in the northwestern part of the front.¹⁵⁰¹²

¹⁵⁰⁰⁴ D1193 (Ilidža Crisis Staff members, 10 April 1992).

¹⁵⁰⁰⁵ P5638 (Intercept of conversation between Nedeljko Prstojević and Radomir Ristić, 16 June 1995). The Chamber notes that during his testimony, Prstojević denied that the term “krmača” was a reference to a modified air bomb, and claimed that it was also used to refer to artillery weapons of higher calibre. Having been confronted with his interview with the Prosecution given in 2006 where he discussed “krmača” bombs and their imprecise nature—which in light of all the evidence about these bombs clearly indicates that he was discussing modified air bombs—Prstojević rejected the 2006 interview, on the basis that it was wrongly interpreted. As noted earlier, the Chamber has reviewed the audio portion of the relevant interview and found that it was accurately interpreted and transcribed. Accordingly, the Chamber does not accept Prstojević’s evidence on this matter and is convinced that in this intercepted conversation with Ristić he was referring to modified air bombs. See Nedeljko Prstojević, T. 13570–13577 (17 March 2011); P2516 (Excerpt from transcript of Nedeljko Prstojević’s interview, with audio); P2517 (Excerpt from transcript of Nedeljko Prstojević’s interview, with audio).

4471. Miladin Trifunović, a former Commander of the Vogošća Brigade and a Director of Transportation at Pretis at the time of the incident,¹⁵⁰¹³ testified that no modified air bomb was ever launched from Pretis or from the brigade's zone of responsibility.¹⁵⁰¹⁴ He stated that he was within the perimeter of Pretis at the time and did not hear anything that would resemble a modified air bomb launch.¹⁵⁰¹⁵

4472. In addition to the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber also took judicial notice of the following adjudicated facts: (i) on 16 June 1995, a modified air bomb exploded at the UMC;¹⁵⁰¹⁶ (ii) three or four civilians were injured as a result of the explosion and some surrounding buildings were destroyed;¹⁵⁰¹⁷ and (iii) the modified air bomb was fired from outside the confrontation lines and within SRK-held territory and was launched by members of the SRK.¹⁵⁰¹⁸

4473. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber is convinced that a modified air bomb with three rocket motors struck the UMC on 16 June 1995. While Zečević thought that the bomb was a fuel-air bomb (and thus a FAB-250), Subotić and Anđelković-Lukić thought it was a FAB-100. Suljević thought that it was either a 100- or a 250-kilogram modified air bomb. Given that the UMC was indeed made of brick as seen in the photographs of the damage, and given that both FAB-100 and FAB-250 bombs could be mounted with three rocket motors, the Chamber is unable to determine whether a FAB-100 or FAB-250 bomb was used in this incident. The Chamber is also not convinced that the bomb in question was filled with fuel-air explosive as the damage could have also been caused by a bomb filled with solid charge, as argued by Anđelković-Lukić. Ultimately, however, there is no doubt that the projectile in question was a highly destructive modified air bomb, as indicated by the damage caused by the explosion and the fragments gathered at the scene.

4474. Relying on the evidence and Adjudicated Fact 3059, the Chamber is further satisfied that the explosion resulted in the wounding of three civilians who were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incident.¹⁵⁰¹⁹

4475. In terms of the direction of fire, the Chamber is satisfied that it came from the northwest. While there is some discrepancy between Zečević's and Suljević's azimuths, ultimately the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the modified air bomb was fired from SRK-held territory. This is confirmed by the intercepted conversation on the day of the incident in which Prstojević told Ristić that they had sent over a "krmača" or two to the Bosnian Muslim side. Konings was also convinced that the bomb came from the SRK side of the confrontation line as the launch of a modified air bomb would have been heard had it come from within the city. Furthermore, as noted above,¹⁵⁰²⁰ the SRK positions were located in the established direction of fire, the range at which modified air bombs have to be fired is long, thus placing the origin of fire for this incident squarely within the SRK-held territory, and only the SRK had modified air bombs in Sarajevo.

4476. With respect to the Accused's argument that the bomb landed in a non-residential zone, and on a legitimate military target, the Chamber first recalls that Dositejeva street is in the centre of Sarajevo, not far from Mis Irbina street, and is thus in an area brimming with civilian objects and the civilian population. The Chamber also notes that, aside from the evidence given by Milošević and Subotić, it has heard no other evidence about members of a helicopter squadron residing in the UMC at the time of the incident, or even about the helicopter squadron as such. Further, the Chamber found both Subotić and Milošević to be lacking in credibility, as they both tried to minimise the damage caused by the SRK's activities in Sarajevo and were exceedingly biased during their testimony. Thus, the Chamber is not persuaded, without other corroborating and credible evidence, that a helicopter squadron was in the UMC building at the time of the incident. Furthermore, the Chamber has already dismissed Subotić's claim that parts of the Ministry of Defence were in the building at the time and, as indicated earlier, found her disingenuous on this issue.¹⁵⁰²¹

4477. As for the commands of the 1st Corps and the 105th Brigade of the ABiH, the Chamber finds that they were located in Danijela Ozme and Trampina streets respectively, as testified to by Džambasović. However, as noted earlier, both those locations were around 200 metres away from the incident site.¹⁵⁰²² Similarly, the BiH Presidency was some 100 metres away from the incident site. Assuming any one of these locations was indeed the intended target of the bomb that struck the UMC, it was missed by the SRK by around 200 and 100 metres respectively. Yet, when another modified air bomb was launched later in the day, it landed in Čobanija street, which is even farther away from these locations, while another landed in Alipašino Polje.¹⁵⁰²³ Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider these locations to have been the intended targets. Even if they were, the fact that they were not hit but were, rather, missed by large margins simply shows the inherent inaccuracy of modified air bombs.

¹⁵⁰²¹ See fn. 14994.

¹⁵⁰²² See fn. 14993.

4478. While there may have been some fighting on the day, given that ABiH was in the middle of the offensive in those days, the Chamber is persuaded by Konings who explained that there was a lot of fighting at the time but that it took place on the confrontation lines; as noted earlier, his evidence that the fighting took place on the confrontation lines is confirmed by various combat reports of both the SRK and the ABiH.¹⁵⁰²⁴ Further, the UMC was in the centre of Sarajevo and not on the confrontation line. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider that the modified air bomb that landed in Dositejeva street was aimed at neutralising a specific military target. Rather, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that it was launched into a generally residential area in retaliation for the attacks mounted by the ABiH on the confrontation lines. This is confirmed by Mladić's instruction to Milošević that the Bosnian Muslim side should be made to pay for fighting. Further, given the inaccuracy of the modified air bombs and recalling their destructive power, the Chamber is of the view that the SRK soldiers launching this modified air bomb into the central area of Sarajevo should have been aware that such an attack would cause great damage to civilian objects and result in civilian casualties.

(c) Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva, Alipašino Polje, 16 June 1995 (Scheduled Incident G.15)

4479. According to the Indictment, on 16 June 1995 at about 3:20 p.m., a modified aircraft bomb, fired from SRK-held territory in Lukavica exploded next to 10 Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva, lightly injuring seven persons and causing considerable damage to the neighbouring buildings.¹⁵⁰²⁵ The Accused argues that the bomb that exploded in this incident was a modified FAB-250 with three rocket motors and that its "most probable" target was the Bitumenka factory, which was 140 metres away from the incident site and in which ABiH was deployed.¹⁵⁰²⁶ He also argues that a "major ABiH offensive was underway at the time of the incident".¹⁵⁰²⁷

4480. On 16 June 1995, the weather was fine and there was good visibility.¹⁵⁰²⁸ KDZ079 and four others were at the community centre office located at 10 Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva in Alipašino Polje.¹⁵⁰²⁹ That centre was located in a residential area, across the street from the PTT Building, where UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo Headquarters was based.¹⁵⁰³⁰ Throughout the day, there was sporadic shooting and shelling in the vicinity of Ilidža and, around 3:30 p.m., a bomb exploded near the centre, throwing KDZ079 onto a large table and then into a wall with significant force.¹⁵⁰³¹ She lost consciousness and was taken to a nearby shelter, where she stayed for three to four days due to intensive shooting and shelling.¹⁵⁰³² She had scratches on the side of her body, her hearing was damaged, and she could not hear properly for a year after the incident throughout which she also suffered from headaches and had pain in her liver and lungs.¹⁵⁰³³ No one was killed in the explosion or suffered serious injuries but the whole office was destroyed and only the exterior walls remained standing.¹⁵⁰³⁴ In total, seven people were injured in the explosion.¹⁵⁰³⁵

4481. KDZ079 described hearing a strange sound, “like a plane coming”, just before the explosion.¹⁵⁰³⁶ She also testified that she heard later that the explosion was caused by an air bomb which landed about five to ten metres away from the community centre.¹⁵⁰³⁷ Several weeks later, when she visited this location, KDZ079 saw a large crater and noticed that the balconies and windows of the surrounding buildings were damaged.¹⁵⁰³⁸

4482. KDZ079's witness statement records that at the time of the incident the TO had an office in the community centre.¹⁵⁰³⁹ When giving evidence in the Dragomir Milošević case, however, she testified that this office dealt with "civilian protection" or "civilian defence", which was a civilian institution, supplying the civilians with medicine, food, and humanitarian aid.¹⁵⁰⁴⁰ She also testified that there were no soldiers in the community centre, only civilians; usually these were the elderly people from the neighbourhood, who would come to take shelter in the building and help distribute aid.¹⁵⁰⁴¹

4483. This incident was investigated by the CSB Sarajevo team, including Turkušić and KDZ166, but only 10 days later due to intensive shelling in the area.¹⁵⁰⁴² The team noted in the official report prepared following the investigation that (i) the scene had been altered, (ii) parts of four rockets were found on the scene, and (iii) the projectile was a modified air bomb, probably fired from around Lukavica.¹⁵⁰⁴³

4484. As the criminal technician working on the case, KDZ166 took photographs, drew a sketch of the scene, and prepared his own report of the on-site investigation.¹⁵⁰⁴⁴ According to that report, the projectile landed on a "concrete path which runs above no. 10, Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva and leads to Ive Andrića St."¹⁵⁰⁴⁵ It was "probably a modified aircraft bomb with four in-built rocket engines" which came "from the direction of the aggressor's positions in the west" and created a large crater, over 11 metres long and 2.5 metres deep.¹⁵⁰⁴⁶ Seven people were wounded as a result.¹⁵⁰⁴⁷ During cross-examination, KDZ166 testified that the direction of fire was "west, north-west, roughly speaking", which meant that its trajectory was either over the student dormitories or over Bitumenka Factory.¹⁵⁰⁴⁸ He also slightly corrected the direction of the north on the sketch he prepared, and stated that in his opinion the projectile did not come from Lukavica but, based on the diameter of the crater, from the west or the northwest.¹⁵⁰⁴⁹

4485. KDZ166 testified that Alipašino Polje was a residential area.¹⁵⁰⁵⁰ On cross-examination, he confirmed that Energoinvest was in the vicinity and that the area to the north of the incident site was industrial.¹⁵⁰⁵¹ In addition, the TV building was nearby, as was the police station.¹⁵⁰⁵²

4486. Zečević thought that the damage and the effects experienced by KDZ079 and other victims pointed to a blast wave effect and thus to a fuel-air bomb.¹⁵⁰⁵³ Looking at other incidents in the area, including the one on Safeta Hadžića street, Zečević determined that the azimuth of the modified air bomb in this case was 285 degrees, which corresponds to the area of Butila and Ilidža-Rajlovac, namely to the northwest of the incident site.¹⁵⁰⁵⁴

4487. Basing her analysis on the size of the crater, Anđelković-Lukić thought that the bomb used in this case was a modified FAB-250 with three rocket motors and with solid explosive charge as indicated by the strong blast effect on the victims.¹⁵⁰⁵⁵ She challenged Zečević's determination that this was a fuel-air bomb, arguing that the victims who were in the vicinity of the explosion would not have survived had that been the case.¹⁵⁰⁵⁶ Finally, she challenged his determination of the azimuth, stating that he used the other incidents because he had no parameters from which he could determine that angle for this specific incident.¹⁵⁰⁵⁷

4488. Subotić also thought that the modified air bomb used in this incident was a FAB-250 with solid explosive charge, as the victims would not have otherwise survived and because the shape and the depth of the crater ruled out a fuel-air bomb.¹⁵⁰⁵⁸ Using the photographs of the rockets found on the scene, Subotić noted that only three nozzles can be seen and thus concluded that the bomb probably had three rocket motors, rather than four.¹⁵⁰⁵⁹ She noted the disagreement on the azimuth between KDZ166's report (west) and the official report (Lukavica, which is to the south), and determined based on KDZ166's corrected sketch of the incident site, that the azimuth was north-northwest, and that the bomb's trajectory went over the Bitumenka Factory, which was 140 metres away and was "most probably" the target.¹⁵⁰⁶⁰ She also claimed that both the CSB Sarajevo and Zečević wanted to "show at any cost that the only target in this attack was a residential area and this is why they determined that the incoming trajectory crossed only the residential area".¹⁵⁰⁶¹

4489. Radojčić testified, like Milošević above,¹⁵⁰⁶² that this incident occurred in the midst of a "fierce" ABiH offensive and that he "allow[ed] for the possibility that the target may have been the [Bitumenka] building" which housed ABiH forces and mortars.¹⁵⁰⁶³ Moreover, according to him, the building of the Prvi Maj school, now called Fatima Gunić school, accommodated the command of one of the units of the 102nd Brigade of the ABiH.¹⁵⁰⁶⁴ Finally, he testified that he never ordered that fire be opened on Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva nor received any reports about this incident.¹⁵⁰⁶⁵ Milošević testified that the bomb was used in order to stop the attack of the 102nd Brigade of the ABiH on Nedžarići.¹⁵⁰⁶⁶

4490. In addition to the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber also took judicial notice of the following two facts: (i) the projectile that exploded on Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva 10 was a modified air bomb;¹⁵⁰⁶⁷ and (ii) it was fired from an SRK position, having been launched by members of the SRK.¹⁵⁰⁶⁸

4491. The Chamber, relying on the evidence and the adjudicated facts recounted above, is satisfied that the projectile that landed on Trg Međunarodnog Prijateljstva on 16 June 1995 was a modified air bomb. Given the extensive damage caused by the explosion, the Chamber is also convinced that it was a heavier bomb, most likely FAB-250 with three rocket motors. Given the conflicting evidence on this issue, the Chamber is not convinced that it was a fuel-air bomb as claimed by Zečević. Ultimately, however, the Chamber considers that the type of the charge used in the bomb is irrelevant given its highly destructive nature.

4492. In terms of the casualties, the Chamber finds, relying on the evidence and the Adjudicated Fact 3063, that seven people were injured in the explosion, including KDZ079. The Chamber also considers that they were all civilians and that they were not taking direct part in the hostilities at the time of the incident.¹⁵⁰⁶⁹

4493. With respect to the direction of fire, while there are some discrepancies among the experts and local investigators, the evidence nevertheless shows that the modified air bomb came from the general northwesterly direction. While Subotić claims that Zečević's direction of fire was closer to the west than to the north because he was trying to show that civilians were the only target, the Chamber does not accept her claim and recalls that Zečević explained the basis on which he determined this direction of fire, namely from his experience of other incidents in the area. Ultimately, as with the incident on Dositejeva street, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the modified air bomb in this incident was fired from SRK-held territory. This is confirmed by the intercepted conversation in which Prstojević told Ristić that they sent over a "krmača" or two to the Bosnian Muslim side that day. Milošević also admitted that the SRK used the bomb in order to stop the attacks in Nedžarići.

4494. The Chamber further finds that the area of Alipašino Polje was a residential area with a large number of civilians living there. While Radojčić testified that Fatima Gunić School housed an ABiH command, the Chamber has received no evidence about the location of this school or its distance from the incident site. In any event, the Accused's argument is that the most probable target was the Bitumenka Factory, not the school, the factory being about 140 metres away from the incident site. The Chamber notes, however, that it has received no evidence that Bitumenka was used by ABiH or that it otherwise was a legitimate military target. Even if it was, however, the modified air bomb missed it by at least 140 metres, confirming once again the inherent inaccuracy of this weapon.

¹⁵⁰⁶⁹ While KDZ079 testified that the civilian protection, or civilian defence, was located in the community centre building, the Chamber considers that this did not make the building and the persons located therein a legitimate military target since, according to KDZ079, there were no soldiers in the building. Those in the building were usually the elderly from the neighbourhood who would come to take shelter there and help distribute aid. In addition, none of the Defence witnesses suggested that they considered this building to be a legitimate military target.

4495. Finally, while there may have been some shelling and fighting during the day, KDZ079 testified that it was sporadic and that it took place in the vicinity of Ilidža, on the confrontation line. This is consistent with Konings who explained that there was a lot of fighting in those days but that it took place on the confrontation lines.¹⁵⁰⁷⁰ The incident site here was not on the confrontation line and there is no evidence that fire was opened from it on the SRK positions that day.

4496. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider that the modified air bomb was aimed at neutralising a specific military target. Rather, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the bomb was launched into a generally residential area, in retaliation for the attacks mounted by the ABiH on the confrontation lines. This is confirmed by Mladić's instruction to Milošević that the Bosnian Muslim side should be made to pay for fighting as well as by Milošević's admission that the bomb was used in order to stop the ABiH attacks in Nedžarići. Further, given the inaccuracy of the modified air bombs and recalling their destructive power, the Chamber is of the view that the SRK soldiers launching this modified air bomb into the central area of Sarajevo should have been aware that such an attack would cause great damage to civilian objects and result in civilian casualties.

iv. Findings on shelling in Sarajevo

4497. Having considered all the evidence presented in this case in relation to shelling in Sarajevo in the period relevant to the Indictment, the Chamber is convinced that throughout the conflict the SRK units engaged in deliberate, disproportionate, and indiscriminate shelling of the civilian objects and civilians in the city.¹⁵⁰⁷¹ They did so using a multitude of heavy weapons, such as 80 and 120 mm mortars, as well as other artillery and higher calibre weapons. These were located, more or less permanently, on the hills surrounding Sarajevo, their permanent placement allowing the firing crews to acquire a certain degree of targeting accuracy. Nonetheless, the evidence of the witnesses who were in the city during the conflict shows that there often seemed to be no military value in the targets that were selected and that fire was often randomly scattered around the city. The evidence is also overwhelming as to the high numbers of shells that fell on the city during the conflict, including on its residential areas and civilian objects. The shells would fall on an almost daily basis, with the exception of a few quiet periods as outlined in Section IV.B.1.a, while the heaviest shelling took place in the early days of the conflict and in the summer of 1992. The fact that this type of shelling of the city continued for over three years indicates to the Chamber that the intention of the SRK forces was not in fact to target military targets alone, but rather to target civilians and/or use random and disproportionate fire in the city. Further, as with sniping, the Chamber is particularly persuaded by the evidence of international witnesses who worked for the UN in the city and, therefore, could not only observe the shelling practices of the SRK but were also able to have a more complete picture of the events on the ground through UNPROFOR and UNMO reports and through their dealings with the warring sides. All those witnesses were consistent as to the illegitimate nature of the SRK's shelling of the city and their heavy weapon supremacy. Further, the evidence outlined above clearly indicates that even when used in response to ABiH fire, the SRK fire was usually disproportionate and/or indiscriminate. The specific scheduled shelling incidents discussed in detail above also clearly illustrate the non-selective nature of the SRK fire. Furthermore, on top of the regular artillery weapons and mortars, the SRK used highly destructive modified air bombs, which were imprecise and completely unsuitable for an urban environment such as Sarajevo. Finally, the Chamber's finding that the SRK was shelling Sarajevo civilians, either through deliberate targeting or through indiscriminate and disproportionate attacks, is further reinforced by the high number of civilians who either died or were wounded as a result of the shelling undertaken by the SRK.

¹⁵⁰⁷¹ In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber relied not only on the findings on scheduled shelling incidents discussed above, but also on the general evidence relating to the situation in the city and the types of shelling it was exposed to on a regular basis.

4498. In coming to the above conclusions, the Chamber also carefully assessed the evidence of the former SRK soldiers and officers who claimed that they were not deliberately targeting civilians and that their use of heavy weaponry was always selective and proportionate. The Chamber found this evidence disingenuous, as it flies in the face of the overwhelming and highly persuasive Prosecution evidence as to the facts on the ground. It is also contrary to the evidence specifically related to the scheduled shelling incidents. Finally, it is further contradicted by the SRK's own analysis of the targeting practices conducted by the SRK's Chief of Artillery in July 1994, as well as by the orders of the SRK and of the Accused concerning the preservation of ammunition.¹⁵⁰⁷² All those documents clearly show that SRK units opened disproportionate and non-selective fire, achieving poor results in terms of striking relevant military targets.¹⁵⁰⁷³ The Chamber therefore considers that the evidence these witnesses gave on the issue of selectivity and proportionality was self-serving and dishonest and undermined their credibility. Furthermore, while the Chamber accepts that SRK units would sometimes open fire that was directed at the ABiH forces on the confrontation lines and/or was a proportionate response to ABiH fire, as confirmed by many of the above-mentioned international witnesses, this does not impact on the ultimate finding that much of the heavy weapon fire on the city was neither selective nor proportionate.

¹⁵⁰⁷² See para. 3999.

4499. While the evidence of the above-mentioned SRK witnesses on the selective and proportional nature of SRK fire is unreliable, their evidence on other aspects of SRK targeting shows that KDZ182's assessment that mortar and artillery fire was strictly controlled at higher command levels while leaving some leeway for "underlings" was ultimately accurate. As noted above, Galić and Indić confirmed that higher calibre artillery was controlled at the corps level while the basic assets of the brigade were controlled by the brigade commanders. Similarly, both Galić and Simić testified that authorisation of the brigade command or of the corps command was necessary before mortar or artillery fire could be opened. In addition, as confirmed by Dušan Škrba and Nikola Mijatović, SRK units were allowed to open fire without permission and using simple preparation, without waiting to hear from the SRK observers, if directly threatened. Finally, as found above in the section dealing with modified air bombs, the use of such bombs was under strict VRS Main Staff control.

4500. In terms of the Accused's arguments that the ABiH was responsible for civilian casualties in the city because it did not remove the civilians from the vicinity of the military objectives or because it abused civilians objects for military purposes, the Chamber recalls that the parties to a conflict are indeed under an obligation to remove civilians, to the maximum extent feasible, from the vicinity of military objectives and to avoid locating military objectives within or near densely populated areas.¹⁵⁰⁷⁴ However, the failure of a party to abide by this obligation does not relieve the attacking side of its duty to abide by the principles of distinction and proportionality when launching an attack.¹⁵⁰⁷⁵ The evidence is clear that the SRK units did not abide by those principles.

4501. As for the use of mobile mortars by the ABiH from civilian areas, the Chamber accepts that this practice caused difficulties to the SRK units and that it was illegal. However, the legality or otherwise of ABiH firing practices is only relevant to the allegations made in this case if they go to one of the main allegations in this case, such as showing that the SRK observed the principles of distinction during the conflict in Sarajevo. In that respect, the Chamber agrees with Fraser that given the low probability of the SRK response actually hitting and destroying the mobile mortar in question, the SRK units should have refrained from firing back if the mobile mortar was intermingled with civilians.¹⁵⁰⁷⁶ In addition, as discussed in a later section of this Judgement, the ABiH would usually fire one or two rounds from those mortars but the SRK would then respond in ¹⁵⁰⁷³ The Chamber finds D2587 particularly telling in this context as it alludes to the fact that the SRK units all wanted to liquidate as many Bosnian Muslims as possible. See fn. 13248.

¹⁵⁰⁷⁶ Indeed, Golić testified that in early June 1992 he received an order from the Chief of Artillery not to fire at a mobile mortar located in the National Museum. See D2665 (Witness statement of Izo Golić dated 15 December 2012), para. 29.

a disproportionate manner, indicating that the aim was retaliation rather than that of neutralising the mobile mortar in question.¹⁵⁰⁷⁷

4502. Finally, the Accused's argument that the Bosnian Muslim units within the city opened mortar and artillery fire on their own civilians in order to lay the blame on the Serbs has been rejected by the Chamber for the reasons outlined in more detail in the later section of the Judgement.¹⁵⁰⁷⁸

d. Bosnian Muslim side targeting own civilians

4503. Throughout this case the Accused argued, both generally and in relation to specific scheduled incidents, that it was the Bosnian Muslim side that sniped and shelled civilians in Sarajevo in order to gain international sympathy and to provoke an international response against the Serbs; he also claimed that the Bosnian Muslims were responsible for all major incidents in the city which resulted in civilian casualties.¹⁵⁰⁷⁹

4504. The Prosecution argues that these claims by the Accused should be rejected as "international witnesses" consistently "debunked" them; further, the Prosecution claims that, to the extent it occurred, any such activity was insignificant in light of the frequent sniping and shelling conducted by the Bosnian Serb Forces during the conflict.¹⁵⁰⁸⁰

4505. To support his claims, the Accused cross-examined a number of Prosecution witnesses on the topic and also called a number of witnesses, including Edin Garaplija. Soon after the war Garaplija, a former member of the BiH MUP's SDB,¹⁵⁰⁸¹ conducted a police interview with Nedžad Herenda, a member of a secret police unit established in 1992 as part of the SDB called Ševe.¹⁵⁰⁸² According to Garaplija, during this interview Herenda admitted that during the war he operated as a sniper and was tasked with shooting at Serb positions, which he often did from the Executive Council building.¹⁵⁰⁸³ He also admitted that, in 1995, while positioned at the Executive Council building, he shot and killed the FreBat soldier who was erecting an anti-sniping barrier near the Holiday Inn¹⁵⁰⁸⁴ in order to cause the UN to “blame the Serbs”.¹⁵⁰⁸⁵ Herenda further admitted that he and other members of Ševe attempted to kill Sefer Halilović by placing explosives in his house and by making it look as if the explosion was caused by a Serb projectile.¹⁵⁰⁸⁶ Mistaking Halilović’s brother-in-law for Halilović, they activated the explosive before Halilović arrived home and killed his wife and brother-in-law instead.¹⁵⁰⁸⁷ Finally, Herenda confessed that he shot and wounded Ismet Bajramović Čelo, a military police commander in the ABiH who was also involved in organised crime, and that he shot at an ABiH unit that got out of control, killing two of the commander’s guards.¹⁵⁰⁸⁸ Garaplija and his colleagues were shocked by these revelations as up until that point they thought that the Bosnian Serb side alone engaged in such activities.¹⁵⁰⁸⁹ When asked in cross-examination if Herenda ever confessed to sniping at Bosnian Muslim civilians in the city, Garaplija responded in the negative.¹⁵⁰⁹⁰

4506. Gray testified that he believed the ABiH strategy in Sarajevo involved, in part, “the killing of their own citizens” and that the “Presidency was killing their own people for the media”.¹⁵⁰⁹¹ As an example, he referred to the incident of 13 July 1992 when several mortar shells fell around the PTT building, killing and wounding a number of “young people” who had gathered nearby—

Garaplija’s evidence is indirectly corroborated by KDZ182’s evidence outlined below about a sniper operating in one of the BiH government buildings. Accordingly, the Chamber considers Garaplija’s evidence about Herenda being responsible for shooting the French soldier persuasive and therefore rejects the evidence of Harland, Fraser, KDZ304, and KDZ182, that this soldier was shot by the Bosnian Serb Forces. See para. 3608.

When cross-examining Garaplija the Prosecution focused on his conviction relating to the mistreatment of Herenda during the interview. See Edin Garaplija, T. 33404–33409 (7 February 2013). However, there was no meaningful challenge by the Prosecution to Garaplija’s evidence concerning Herenda’s activities. In any event, the Chamber found Garaplija to have been truthful and credible in that respect and accepts his evidence in relation thereto.

though Gray conceded that he and his team were unable to determine the origin of fire on that occasion, he believed the ABiH was responsible due to (i) the lack of an unobstructed line of sight from the SRK positions to the incident site and (ii) because the accuracy of the round indicated to him that it was fired from close range.¹⁵⁰⁹² Another example was an incident involving Douglas Hurd, a foreign dignitary who was visiting Izetbegović at the Presidency building. According to Gray, whenever foreign dignitaries were visiting the Presidency, shells would fall just outside of the building.¹⁵⁰⁹³ Gray suspected that this was an ABiH strategy, which he says was confirmed when he started talking to two ABiH officers while waiting on the steps of the Presidency for Hurd to arrive; the two soldiers at one point looked at their watches and swiftly moved inside the Presidency building, following which mortar bombs landed nearby, causing casualties.¹⁵⁰⁹⁴

4507. Demurenko stated that he and others in UNPROFOR had the impression that Bosnian Muslims were sniping at their own civilians, but that this was impossible to prove.¹⁵⁰⁹⁵ According to Demurenko, there was an effort within UNPROFOR not to blame Bosnian Muslims for the fighting in and around Sarajevo.¹⁵⁰⁹⁶ Demurenko nevertheless reported to his command on a small number of incidents of ABiH forces shelling and sniping at Bosnian Muslim civilians.¹⁵⁰⁹⁷

4508. Desimir Šarenac, Chief of Security in the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade,¹⁵⁰⁹⁸ testified that the SRK obtained intelligence that ABiH forces occasionally shelled certain facilities and areas in order to portray it as Serb fire.¹⁵⁰⁹⁹ In addition, it appeared to him that some projectiles were simply makeshift projectiles, which were fired at Serb positions but accidentally exploded on ABiH-held civilian areas.¹⁵¹⁰⁰ Dragomir Milošević claimed that there were instances of ABiH targeting their own territory with high-calibre weapons.¹⁵¹⁰¹ Both Galić and Milošević testified that whenever important delegations would come to Sarajevo and visit ABiH-controlled parts, the ABiH leadership would “try to attribute fire to [the Serbs]”; as a result, they had to warn SRK units to refrain from responding to the ABiH’s provocative fire.¹⁵¹⁰² Galić further claimed that ABiH forces would shell the Presidency building.¹⁵¹⁰³ This was confirmed by KW570 who noticed a pattern in Sarajevo such that whenever there were high-level meetings or negotiations there, the ABiH would open mortar fire towards the Presidency.¹⁵¹⁰⁴ The Accused himself made a claim in a video interview that Bosnian Muslims were placing explosives on the streets of Sarajevo in order to “kill their own people”, particularly when “some high dignitary is coming”.¹⁵¹⁰⁵

4509. Some witnesses called by the Prosecution also acknowledged certain incidences of ABiH targeting its own population in order to garner international sympathy. For example, Fraser testified that he was aware of one sniping and one shelling incident where Bosnian Muslims forces targeted their own civilians.¹⁵¹⁰⁶ With respect to the sniping incident, Fraser heard stories from UN soldiers that the FreBat soldiers had video footage of ABiH sniper firing on his own people but he himself never saw the tape nor was told when this happened.¹⁵¹⁰⁷ As for the shelling incident, Fraser recalled that it started with Serbs firing one shell, followed by the ABiH firing a shell at the same target some 40 minutes later.¹⁵¹⁰⁸ A protest was lodged against the Bosnian Muslims forces for such actions.¹⁵¹⁰⁹

4510. Harland agreed that there were some cases of Bosnian Muslims sniping at their own side, but not many—he could recall only two during his time in Sarajevo.¹⁵¹¹⁰ He further recalled the

ABiH statement that such sniping activities in September and October 1993 were carried out by “renegades”.¹⁵¹¹¹ Harland also agreed that the media was a key strategy of the Bosnian Presidency and that they had a need to engage in provocations where the media was present.¹⁵¹¹²

4511. KDZ185 testified that ABiH forces carried out a “media war” in Sarajevo which included staging “dramatic events” around the city and targeting their own citizens.¹⁵¹¹³ One such incident involved the firing of a shell into the Markale market area which UNPROFOR investigated immediately after the event and concluded that the shell was likely fired from a position close to the frontline in the north of the city.¹⁵¹¹⁴ In total, he could recall only a few occasions where the UN suspected that ABiH was responsible for firing on the city and also admitted that ABiH would occasionally fire at the airport.¹⁵¹¹⁵

4512. Other Prosecution witnesses testified, however, that while they were aware of the allegation that ABiH forces sniped or shelled their own civilians, they never personally observed it or received any conclusive proof to that effect.¹⁵¹¹⁶ For example, Mole acknowledged that there was a general perception that the BiH Presidency would gain more if they were perceived as the “beleaguered party” and that there may well have been instances in which ABiH forces fired on their own territory in order to maintain that perception.¹⁵¹¹⁷ However, no UNMO report established this as fact; the most UNMOs were able to establish is that there was doubt as to the origin of fire in certain incidents.¹⁵¹¹⁸ According to Mole, there were “sufficient unknowns” for UNPROFOR members to be “reasonably sure” such allegations were true, emphasising that in war conditions it was impossible to conduct a complete forensic analysis that would conclusively determine whether ABiH forces targeted their own population.¹⁵¹¹⁹

4513. Rose also stated that, during his time in Sarajevo, allegations were made both in the media and by FreBat members that ABiH forces were firing on their own people; however, he himself never saw evidence of this and testified it was impossible for UNPROFOR to determine conclusively who fired a particular shot.¹⁵¹²⁰ Further, the incidents in which UNPROFOR suspected Bosnian Muslims of firing at the UN, NATO aircrafts, or their own citizens were “very few”.¹⁵¹²¹ KDZ182 also testified that in all UNPROFOR investigations of shelling incidents, nearly all fire came from the Bosnian Serb side, although some shells did appear to have come from the Bosnian Muslim side.¹⁵¹²² According to him, small arms shots originated from both sides, with the larger proportion coming from the Serbs.¹⁵¹²³

4514. Finally, the Chamber also heard from a number of Prosecution witnesses who vehemently denied that ABiH units would target their own civilians.¹⁵¹²⁴ For example, Bell testified that he never saw or reported any instances of ABiH forces firing upon themselves or staging incidents, and would give no credence to such allegations.¹⁵¹²⁵ Bowen testified that he was first introduced to the theory that Bosnian Muslim forces were shelling their own territory in late August 1992 by a military aide to UNPROFOR Sarajevo Sector commander who admitted to having no proof for such theory.¹⁵¹²⁶ Bowen did not accept this theory, noting that even now, some twenty years after the war, no “smoking gun” evidence of ABiH shelling its own people had come out.¹⁵¹²⁷ KDZ304 also thought that the allegations that Bosnian Muslims shelled themselves were baseless and testified that during his time in Sarajevo he did not witness any fire from the ABiH frontline against the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁵¹²⁸

4515. The Chamber has analysed the evidence outlined above in the context of all the evidence it has heard in this case in relation to sniping and shelling in Sarajevo. While the Chamber found Garaplija to be credible, his evidence did not go as far as to show that the Bosnian Muslim side targeted its own civilians, let alone that the Bosnian Muslim side was responsible for all major shelling or sniping incidents in the city. Instead, his evidence merely showed that Herenda, a member of a special police unit, was engaged in political executions of notorious Bosnian Muslim individuals who were not civilians. Garaplija's evidence further revealed that Herenda killed an UNPROFOR soldier in order to blame the Bosnian Serb side and provoke international reaction against them.¹⁵¹²⁹ However, as recounted above, when asked about the targeting of Bosnian Muslim civilians, Garaplija responded that Herenda did not admit to any such practice.

4516. Having said that, the Chamber accepts the evidence of Fraser, Harland, KDZ185, and other Prosecution witnesses that there were some incidents where Bosnian Muslim side targeted its own territory, usually near the Presidency building, for political purposes. However, all those witnesses limited the occurrence of such incidents to a minuscule number and all were firm in their position that most of the fire on Sarajevo came from the Bosnian Serb side.

4517. Furthermore, Harland testified that these few incidents were attributed to the "renegade forces" on the Bosnian Muslim side. In contrast, the Accused's claim, if true, would have meant a conspiracy on a large scale involving many, if not all, ABiH and police units in the city colluding over a number of years in order to secretly snipe and shell their own people. The Chamber does not accept this. In addition, as seen in preceding sections, in many of the charged sniping and shelling incidents, the Chamber found they were committed by the SRK.¹⁵¹³⁰ There is therefore no evidence of such a wide scale conspiracy.

4518. Even the witnesses called by the Accused did not go as far as to claim that all or most major incidents in the city involving civilian casualties were caused by the Bosnian Muslim side. As noted earlier, Garaplija's evidence did not concern sniping on Bosnian Muslim civilians at all.

¹⁵¹²⁸ P2106 (Witness statement of KDZ304), p. 28 (under seal); KDZ304, T. 10517 (18 January 2011).

¹⁵¹²⁹ D2270 (Witness statement of Andrey Demurenko dated 13 October 2012), e-court pp. 85–86; D2271 (UNPROFOR daily report, 18 July 1995), pp. 4–5 (indicating that ABiH opened fire on UNPROFOR soldiers); D2398 (Witness statement of Richard Gray dated 22 April 2012), para. 10 (testifying that ABiH units sniped at UN personnel in the PTT building and that he was personally targeted by ABiH fire).

¹⁵¹³⁰ The Chamber also recalls that it has discussed some of the evidence on the issue of ABiH targeting its own civilians in the sections dealing with specific scheduled and sniping incidents, when it was relevant to those.

Demurenko testified of the impression he had that the Bosnian Muslims were sniping their own people, conceding that this impression was difficult to prove. More significantly, while he authored a large number of UN daily reports during his time in the city, many of which were admitted into evidence in this case, only a miniscule number of those recorded specific incidents in which the fire was said to have come from the ABiH-held territory.¹⁵¹³¹ Similarly, KW570's testimony was confined to the ABiH's pattern of firing towards the presidency when an important delegation was visiting the city. However, he made no mention of civilian victims resulting from such fire. Gray also mentioned ABiH fire on the Presidency during foreign visits but recalled only one such Presidency incident where civilian casualties were involved.¹⁵¹³² The SRK soldiers and officers, such as Galić, Milošević, and Šarenac, who testified on this subject, were not located in the city during these incidents and their testimony was based primarily on rumours and intelligence gathered by their units. As such, it is of limited value.

4519. Finally, it is clear from the evidence above that, with the exception of a few individuals, most of the international witnesses present on the ground never received any conclusive proof that the Bosnian Muslim side was sniping or shelling its own civilians. Had there been a large scale conspiracy of the kind alleged by the Accused, there is no doubt that those witnesses would have been informed of or would have reported on such incidents with much greater frequency. They would have also observed some of those incidents first-hand. Thus, for all these reasons, the Chamber rejects the Accused's argument that the Bosnian Muslim side was responsible for all major incidents in the city or was, as part of a general policy, sniping and shelling its own civilians throughout the conflict in Sarajevo. While such incidents may have taken place on a few occasions, this did not occur frequently enough to throw doubt on the other findings made in this Judgement relating to the conflict in Sarajevo.

e. Hospitals in Sarajevo

4520. The Prosecution alleges that as part of the sniping and shelling campaign against civilians in Sarajevo, the "Serb forces" repeatedly targeted ambulances and hospitals, killing and injuring

One example is the evidence of KW586 who blamed ABiH for the first Markale market incident and whose evidence was rejected, by majority.

¹⁵¹³¹ See fn. 15097. The same is the case with respect to the other UN reports tendered into evidence in this case: the vast majority of those contain no reports of the Bosnian Muslim side targeting its own civilians.

¹⁵¹³² Much of Gray's evidence focused on the ABiH targeting UN personnel, including himself. The Chamber also notes that the shelling incident near the PTT building Gray used as an example of ABiH forces targeting their own civilians was in fact inconclusive as it was not possible to tell where the shell came from. His belief that it was an ABiH shell was based on the assumption that the youths gathered near the PTT building were specifically targeted which would have been impossible for the SRK to do. However, it is equally possible that these youths were victims of a random shell fired by the SRK.

members of staff and patients.¹⁵¹³³ During the trial, the Prosecution called doctors who worked in the State Hospital,¹⁵¹³⁴ the Koševo Hospital,¹⁵¹³⁵ and the Dobrinja Hospital; they gave evidence about the fate of those hospitals during the war. Additionally, they authenticated various medical records relating to scheduled incidents and provided general information about Sarajevo casualties.

4521. The Accused in contrast argues that the “ABiH abused for military purposes premises of civilian character, such as hospitals” and that the SRK never fired on the Koševo Hospital.¹⁵¹³⁶ The Prosecution in turn rejects that claim and argues that it is “misguided” as the hospitals were shelled even when there were no mortars or military targets in their vicinity; further, the Prosecution claims that hospital buildings showed damage which reflects disproportionate attacks by the SRK.¹⁵¹³⁷

i. State Hospital

4522. Bakir Nakaš, a doctor at the State Hospital, a large building complex located in the centre of Sarajevo in the Marin Dvor area,¹⁵¹³⁸ testified that the hospital was sniped and shelled from 13 May 1992 onwards, despite its south side being clearly marked with a Red Cross emblem.¹⁵¹³⁹ He estimated that, between 1992 and 1995, the hospital was hit by over 200 projectiles and was subjected to direct shooting, with the worst shelling taking place right after the departure of the JNA from Sarajevo, namely between 13 and 16 May 1992, when it was hit by around 40 shells.¹⁵¹⁴⁰

The Accused challenged Nakaš’s evidence about the State Hospital being hit by 200 projectiles on the basis that no extensive damage could be seen in a photograph of the hospital shown to Nakaš in court. However, the

Milan Mandilović, also a doctor at the State Hospital during the war, confirmed that the hospital was shelled with varying levels of intensity by Bosnian Serbs and that it was hit by both infantry and artillery fire.¹⁵¹⁴¹ As it is situated near the Sniper Alley, the hospital was also subjected to sniper fire which injured both the hospital staff and its patients.¹⁵¹⁴² Almost 85 to 90% of the fire hit the south side of the State Hospital building which, according to Nakaš, meant that the source of the fire was the VRS-held area of Trebević, Vraca, and Grbavica.¹⁵¹⁴³ As a result, the front part of State Hospital, facing south, was not operational throughout 1992 to 1995.¹⁵¹⁴⁴

4523. It was determined, on the basis of the fragments found at the hospital, that the shells originated from various tanks and other types of artillery and mortar pieces.¹⁵¹⁴⁵ Nakaš thought that “the Serbs were intent on destroying the vital parts of the hospital” once the JNA left, since the very first shelling targeted the pillars on the eighth floor, which were key to the building’s stability, and also because the operating theatres were often targeted.¹⁵¹⁴⁶

4524. The shelling negatively affected the functioning of the State Hospital.¹⁵¹⁴⁷ Hospital staff and patients were wounded in the hospital on several occasions from September 1992 to mid-1994, and there was a particular incident, sometime in late summer 1994, where two patients in the hospital were injured by sniper fire.¹⁵¹⁴⁸ The rooms above the second floor were abandoned as they were more exposed, and the only operating theatre used regularly was located in the basement.¹⁵¹⁴⁹ The intensive care unit was in the gym and the rest of the patients were located in the corridor.¹⁵¹⁵⁰ The medical staff could not respond to emergencies properly as only the most vital parts of the State Hospital were provided with electricity and there was lack of medical supplies, food, and water.¹⁵¹⁵¹ The most difficult period was from late July to the beginning of September 1993, when the State Hospital had no water, electricity, or gas.¹⁵¹⁵² The number of staff was greatly reduced and the only way the hospital could cope with the high demand for medical services was by only admitting patients with life-threatening conditions and injuries.¹⁵¹⁵³ Because the higher floors of the State Hospital provided a good position for filming, international TV crews occupied some of them, including Sky News war correspondent Van Lynden.¹⁵¹⁵⁴

ii. Koševo Hospital

4525. Koševo Hospital is a large compound containing 36 clinics, located just south of Breka, in the northeastern part of Sarajevo.¹⁵¹⁵⁵ Fatima Zaimović, who was the head of nursing at the Children's Surgery ward at the Koševo Hospital,¹⁵¹⁵⁶ testified that the main entrance of the hospital was on Bolnička street, close to her ward.¹⁵¹⁵⁷ This ward dealt with children up to 14 years of age, but would also occasionally assist with the intake of civilian adults.¹⁵¹⁵⁸

4526. As was the case with the State Hospital, the number of the medical staff in Koševo Hospital was greatly reduced during the war and the hospital itself was often shelled, resulting in death of and injuries to both staff and patients.¹⁵¹⁵⁹ As a result, neither the staff nor the patients felt safe.¹⁵¹⁶⁰ In addition, during the conflict, Koševo Hospital lacked necessary medical and surgical supplies; there was often no electricity, and very little water.¹⁵¹⁶¹ All this made work conditions, and in particular the operating conditions, extremely difficult.¹⁵¹⁶² When Koševo Hospital was shelled or sniped, the children would be taken down to the basement while those who were bed-ridden, would be kept in the corridors and the nursing staff would stay with them.¹⁵¹⁶³ Zaimović testified that in such times, the children would panic, start screaming, and rush to the nurses for protection.¹⁵¹⁶⁴ Many of these children were so traumatised they withdrew into themselves and started wetting their beds.¹⁵¹⁶⁵ Zaimović herself had a serious stress-related heart attack at the end of 1995.¹⁵¹⁶⁶

iii. Dobrinja Hospital

4528. As stated earlier, Youssef Hajir is a doctor who, based on the needs in the beginning of May 1992, established a medical clinic that eventually became Dobrinja Hospital and worked there during the conflict.¹⁵¹⁶⁸ While this hospital was also referred to as a military or war hospital in some documents, the name arose because the Civilian Protection and Ismet Hadžić, who later became the Commander of the 155th Brigade of the ABiH, decided to use that name.¹⁵¹⁶⁹ However, this was done against Hajir's will and eventually, in 1993, at Hajir's insistence, the hospital was registered with the Ministry of Health and named the "General Hospital of Dobrinja".¹⁵¹⁷⁰

¹⁵¹⁶⁸ Hajir explained that around 5 May 1992 he created an improvised emergency room in a storeroom, which is still a part of the Dobrinja Hospital today. This slowly expanded into a “low level hospital”, which became fully operational and staffed by 17 July 1992, since by that time Mojnilo came under the control of the ABiH and Hajir was able to source supplies from the city centre. See P1866 (Witness statement of Youssef Hajir dated 25 February 2010), paras. 1–2, 25–33; Youssef Hajir, T. 8786–8787, 8808 (1 November 2010); P1870 (Excerpts from Youssef Hajir’s book entitled “Dobrinja Hospital”).

4529. Dobrinja Hospital was located in the Dobrinja 2 apartment block, on the ground floor of an eight storey building, and was marked by a Red Cross sign above its door.¹⁵¹⁷¹ The medical staff in the hospital was often targeted by sniper fire when coming to and from work, leaving many killed and injured.¹⁵¹⁷² Furthermore, the few ambulances the hospital had, which were also marked with the Red Cross sign, were also targeted by sniper fire, leaving two drivers injured and one killed.¹⁵¹⁷³ The hospital building itself was hit by heavy artillery shells on at least 15 occasions and "countless times by smaller projectiles".¹⁵¹⁷⁴

4530. Initially, Hajir was the only surgeon in the hospital and he would operate day and night in improvised conditions with any tools he could find; later on, additional surgeons and doctors arrived as well as better supplies.¹⁵¹⁷⁵

iv. Military targets in and around hospitals

4531. A number of SRK officers and soldiers called to give evidence by the Accused testified that their positions and units were often targeted by both mortar and sniper fire from civilian premises within Sarajevo, including the city's hospitals.¹⁵¹⁷⁶ Blaško Rašević of the 1st Romanija Infantry

Brigade, testified that ABiH maintained a firing position in the Koševo Hospital grounds and would fire from there daily.¹⁵¹⁷⁷ Lučić testified that the ABiH used recoilless guns at night from the Koševo Hospital grounds.¹⁵¹⁷⁸ Maletić testified that he had information on military targets deep in the territory on the Muslim side, and that these included positions within the perimeter of the State and Koševo Hospitals.¹⁵¹⁷⁹ Dragomir Milošević also testified that the ABiH had a position at Koševo Hospital.¹⁵¹⁸⁰ While Milošević testified that the ABiH used only Koševo Hospital for military purposes,¹⁵¹⁸¹ Galić claimed that several hospitals were “abused” in order to fire at SRK positions.¹⁵¹⁸² Radojčić stated that his position was frequently targeted from Dobrinja Hospital.¹⁵¹⁸³

4532. On the other hand, Nakaš testified that no armed members of the ABiH were allowed to be inside the State Hospital and that there was not a single military facility in the hospital’s vicinity.¹⁵¹⁸⁴ He confirmed, however, that towards the end of 1992, two buildings in the State Hospital complex were requisitioned by the 1st Corps of the ABiH and used purely as a rehabilitation centre for ABiH soldiers.¹⁵¹⁸⁵ Mandilović also testified that the State Hospital did not have any military positions or combatant personnel located within its premises at any time during the war.¹⁵¹⁸⁶ Van Lynden explained that he and his crew made sure that the hospital was not being used by the military as they did not want to have their base on or near a military target.¹⁵¹⁸⁷ In the months he was there he never saw the hospital building or its immediate surroundings being used by ABiH forces.¹⁵¹⁸⁸ The Chamber notes that an ABiH report from January 1993 indicates that HOS units were located in Avde Jabučice street near the hospital premises.¹⁵¹⁸⁹

4533. As far as the Dobrinja Hospital is concerned, the ABiH command building was some 150 to 200 metres west from the hospital and, according to, there were no ABiH organised military units or barracks in the area around the hospital.¹⁵¹⁹⁰

4534. With respect to the Koševo Hospital, Zaimović claimed that she never saw any ABiH positions, weapons, or ABiH activities close to the complex.¹⁵¹⁹¹ In addition, according to her, there was no military equipment in the hospital itself.¹⁵¹⁹² Abdel-Razek also testified that the “main hospital” of Sarajevo contained no military value.¹⁵¹⁹³ Van Lynden never saw any artillery within the Koševo complex nor did he hear that the hospital was being used “for artillery purposes”, although he did see one 82 mm mortar next to the hospital in July 1992.¹⁵¹⁹⁴

4535. A number of international witnesses confirmed, however, that ABiH would position its forces and/or fire at the SRK from Koševo Hospital, using mobile mortars, in order to provoke retaliatory fire.¹⁵¹⁹⁵ Richard Gray’s military observers witnessed ABiH forces firing from mortars mounted on the back of trucks from the Koševo Hospital car-park, while he personally witnessed ABiH armoured vehicles located in the vicinity of Koševo Hospital.¹⁵¹⁹⁶ Rose testified that ABiH “often fired 120 mm mortars at the Serbs in the Jewish cemetery from the grounds of the Koševo hospital”.¹⁵¹⁹⁷ Tucker recalled that on 11 January 1993 UN soldiers delivering fuel to the hospital’s boiler witnessed an 82 mm mortar on the back of a truck being fired from a derelict house on the western side of the Koševo Hospital, some half an hour before a press conference which had been called by the hospital; this was then followed by retaliatory anti-aircraft, artillery, and mortar fire.¹⁵¹⁹⁸ Morillon reported this incident to Izetbegović, noting that “this disreputable and cowardly act” was a blatant breach of the Geneva Conventions and urging Izetbegović to take strong measures to stop the reoccurrence of this practice.¹⁵¹⁹⁹ Mole testified that the ABiH units used mobile mortars around the Koševo Hospital in order to attract Serb fire.¹⁵²⁰⁰ According to him, the ABiH would fire one or two rounds and leave immediately; the SRK response would then attempt to target the mortar but it was neither immediate nor accurate enough to do so successfully.¹⁵²⁰¹ In addition, there was a “degree of overkill” such that the SRK would respond in a heavily disproportionate manner.¹⁵²⁰² This indicated to him that the response fire was retaliation rather than a military strategy and it also resulted in the hospital being frequently hit.¹⁵²⁰³ Mirko Šošić, another doctor who worked at the Koševo Hospital until summer 1992,¹⁵²⁰⁴ testified that, on several occasions, he saw a “cannon” the ABiH used to fire from the grounds of the Koševo Hospital, which was stored in the underground area below the traumatology clinic.¹⁵²⁰⁵

4536. Some contemporaneous SRK documents also indicate that Koševo Hospital was used by the ABiH. According to a report of the 1st Romanija Brigade to the SRK Command, dated 1 October 1992, there were two ABiH intervention platoons positioned in the grounds of Koševo Hospital.¹⁵²⁰⁶ On 3 September 1993 the same brigade reported to the SRK Command that a TO unit and an intervention platoon were based in the Koševo Hospital grounds.¹⁵²⁰⁷ Almir Begić testified that his ABiH unit, consisting of around 50 men, was located in a dentistry clinic some 500 metres from the Koševo Hospital.¹⁵²⁰⁸ In a combat report of 15 May 1993, the SRK Command reported to the VRS Main Staff that the ABiH opened mortar fire on SRK positions “from the area of Koševo hospital”.¹⁵²⁰⁹ On 28 July 1993, the SRK Command reported to the VRS Main Staff that the ABiH fired 82 mm mortar shells from the Koševo Hospital at the SRK positions.¹⁵²¹⁰ The Chamber also received an ABiH order of 11 June 1995, which states that the forward command post of the 105th Brigade of the 1st Corps of the ABiH was located in the “Koševo hospital sector (building under construction)”.¹⁵²¹¹

4537. Some of the SRK soldiers and officers then testified that their units did not return fire on the city hospitals at all, despite being fired on from there. Dušan Šrkba stated that his brigade, namely the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade, never opened fire on the State and Koševo Hospitals or the area around them as they were afraid of inflicting major civilian casualties.¹⁵²¹² Izo Golić, a mortar platoon commander in the Rogatica Battalion of the 1st Romanija Brigade, testified that his unit’s positions were fired upon from the Koševo Hospital some 10 to 15 times during 1992 but that they were never ordered to return fire on the hospital complex.¹⁵²¹³ However, earlier in his statement he also said that the Koševo Hospital complex was one of the targets at which his unit opened fire in case of large concentration of ABiH forces or in case the ABiH forces fired first.¹⁵²¹⁴ Similarly, Veljović testified that his unit was not allowed to fire at certain targets in the depth of the territory, such as “the hospital”, even though they knew there were military targets there.¹⁵²¹⁵

4538. On the other hand, Mirko Šošić testified that SRK shells fell on Koševo Hospital on a number of occasions but that this was a result of the ABiH forces opening artillery fire from within its grounds.¹⁵²¹⁶ Dragomir Milošević first claimed that the SRK never fired on the Koševo Hospital but then proceeded to explain that if fire was opened from certain locations, such as the hospital, it would be returned, although not before the SRK units assessed the target and the presence of civilians at that location.¹⁵²¹⁷ Blagoje Kovačević admitted that a response would be forthcoming when fire was opened from schools and hospitals.¹⁵²¹⁸

v. Protests regarding fire on hospitals

4539. Abdel-Razek testified that on one occasion, after Koševo Hospital was shelled,¹⁵²¹⁹ he raised the issue with Galić who responded, as he always did in relation to any civilian target, by saying that the Bosnian Muslims shelled the hospital in order to gain sympathy from the international community.¹⁵²²⁰ Abdel-Razek was convinced, however, that the shells came from the hills held by the SRK.¹⁵²²¹

4540. Abdel-Razek and Tucker were also present during meetings on 18 and 19 December 1992 between Lord Owen on one side and the Accused, Mladić, and Koljević on the other wherein Owen protested about the shelling of the Koševo Hospital and told the attendees that he had visited the hospital and that the situation was a “disgrace” and “very very depressing”.¹⁵²²² At one stage during these meetings Owen became angry and told Mladić that the shelling of Sarajevo was a disgrace and that it had to stop; Mladić became angry and ended up shouting at Owen.¹⁵²²³

4541. The Chamber also heard that during the SerBiH Assembly session of 12 May 1992, Mladić stated that the Muslims would not be allowed to benefit from the State or Koševo Hospitals until they accepted peace.¹⁵²²⁴

vi. Conclusion

4542. Having considered the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber finds that, just like the rest of the city, the hospitals in Sarajevo were subjected to shelling and sniping by the SRK. This in turn affected their capacity to provide adequate medical care to their patients. In this respect, the Chamber accepts the evidence of the doctors who testified about the difficulties they faced while working in those hospitals and the dangers they, and other medical staff, exposed themselves to on a daily basis, in order to provide medical care to the citizens of Sarajevo. The Chamber also accepts their evidence regarding the frequent shelling and sniping their respective ¹⁵²¹⁹ Abdel-Razek referred to the “main hospital” when discussing this incident. See P1258 (Witness statement of Hussein Ali Abdel-Razek dated 16 July 2002), e-court p. 16. As noted earlier, the Chamber considers this to have been the Koševo Hospital complex.

¹⁵²²⁰ P1258 (Witness statement of Hussein Ali Abdel-Razek dated 16 July 2002), e-court pp. 16, 21. According to Abdel-Razek, this was Galić’s usual response, namely to deny that the Serb side conducted the shelling and to accuse the Bosnian Muslim side of it. If or when challenged on this by Abdel-Razek he would acknowledge that the Serbs conducted the shelling but then argue that they had been provoked. See P1258 (Witness statement of Hussein Ali Abdel-Razek dated 16 July 2002), e-court p. 21.

hospital buildings were subjected to. While Dušan Škrba claimed that the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised Brigade never fired on the hospitals, this is clearly contrary to the evidence before the Chamber, namely that the State Hospital was shelled from the south of the city. While it is possible that Škrba's and Veljović's specific units did not open fire on these hospitals, there is no doubt that other SRK units did. Indeed, this was confirmed by Blagoje Kovačević, Šošić, and even Dragomir Milošević. Similarly, while Golić stated that in 1992 his unit never returned fire when fired upon from the Koševo Hospital complex, in doing so he contradicted his earlier statement wherein he accepted that his platoon would open fire on the Koševo complex if fired upon from there.

4543. As noted above, the Accused claims that hospitals were abused by the ABiH for military purposes. However, the majority of the evidence supporting this claim concerned the Koševo Hospital complex and not the State or Dobrinja Hospitals. While military units may have occasionally been located in the vicinity of the State and Dobrinja Hospitals, the Chamber is nevertheless convinced that those hospitals were civilian objects and were not used for military purposes by the ABiH. Furthermore, if the aim of the SRK forces was to target military units in the vicinity of the State and Dobrinja Hospitals, the frequent shelling and the extensive damage caused to those hospitals—particularly to the State Hospital—indicate that they were either deliberately targeted by the SRK forces or, at the very least, hit as a result of an indiscriminate fire onto the city by the SRK.¹⁵²²⁵

4544. In light of the evidence and the adjudicated facts outlined above, the Chamber is also satisfied that the SRK forces deliberately opened fire on the Koševo Hospital. At the same time, it is clear that there were occasions when the ABiH units used the grounds of Koševo Hospital to fire at SRK positions, usually with mobile mortars. In such cases, the SRK response fire was counter-fire aimed at ABiH military targets. However, the Chamber also finds, in light of Mole's evidence above, as well as the general evidence about the nature of the SRK shelling in Sarajevo,¹⁵²²⁶ that the SRK response to such mobile mortars was often disproportionate and indiscriminate, targeting the hospital complex as a whole in a retaliatory manner, rather than neutralising the specific mobile mortar that opened fire. Furthermore, while parts of the Koševo Hospital complex may have become a military target whenever the ABiH opened fire from them, the SRK units returned fire without issuing an adequate warning as they were required to do by Geneva Convention IV and Additional Protocols I and II.¹⁵²²⁷

¹⁵²²⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 3019 which provides that SRK intentionally targeted the State Hospital.

f. Siege of Sarajevo

i. Blockade/Encirclement/Siege

4545. The Prosecution alleges that, starting from early April 1992, the city of Sarajevo was subjected to “blockade”.¹⁵²²⁸ It further argues that the campaign of shelling and sniping in Sarajevo furthered the blockade and refers to the city as being “besieged”.¹⁵²²⁹ The Accused argues that Sarajevo was not under “siege”; instead the SRK practiced a “containment strategy”—directed at the ABiH forces in the city—and tried to maintain the status quo rather than alter the positions at the Sarajevo frontlines.¹⁵²³⁰ He also claims that the Bosnian Muslim authorities in Sarajevo conducted an “internal siege” by preventing the population from leaving the city.¹⁵²³¹

4546. Many of the Prosecution witnesses and some witnesses called by the Accused testified that during the Indictment period, Sarajevo was a city kept under “siege” by the Bosnian Serbs and/or that it was “encircled” by them.¹⁵²³² Okun stated that the situation in Sarajevo was “obviously a siege” because “Serb forces surrounded the city” and the only way in or out of Sarajevo was “through Serb lines with Serb permission”.¹⁵²³³ Bell thought that the situation in Sarajevo was one of “total siege”.¹⁵²³⁴ There were “very few” places within Sarajevo that were “entirely safe” and the civilian population suffered shortages of food, water, gas, and electricity.¹⁵²³⁵ Doyle stated that in April 1992, Sarajevo was “practically a city under siege” by the Bosnian Serbs and was “in and besieged.¹⁵²⁴⁴ When the Accused put to KDZ185 that Sarajevo was a divided rather than a besieged city, KDZ185 responded that Sarajevo proper, that is the central city itself and the area near the airport, were in fact surrounded, and as such under siege.¹⁵²⁴⁵ KW570, a witness called by the Accused, also testified that Sarajevo was, “in reality”, under siege, with the Bosnian Serbs dominating the high ground around the city; he considered it a siege even though UN convoys were going in and supplying the people with aid.¹⁵²⁴⁶ Similarly, Demurenko, also called by the Accused, testified that in terms of human suffering, Sarajevo was a case of “a full siege”, even though it was not completely encircled, because all the roads were blocked and there was very little space for manoeuvre.¹⁵²⁴⁷ Noting that the tunnel under the airport allowed the Bosnian Muslims to move troops and humanitarian aid in and out of Sarajevo, Demurenko viewed the situation in Sarajevo as “a case of siege with [a] certain qualification”.¹⁵²⁴⁸

4547. Contrary to the evidence above, a number of Defence witnesses, mainly former SRK soldiers and officers, claimed that Sarajevo was not besieged and that the term “siege” was created and misused by the biased media.¹⁵²⁴⁹ For example, Luka Dragičević testified that the “siege of Sarajevo” was a media term that did not accurately describe the situation since SRK positions in Sarajevo were “very disadvantageous”, ABiH units were able to pass through the tunnel under the airport, and the SRK had not cut off utilities and humanitarian aid.¹⁵²⁵⁰ While acknowledging that the SRK blockaded part of the ABiH forces inside Sarajevo, he noted that the SRK was in turn completely encircled on the outside ring by the ABiH.¹⁵²⁵¹ Similarly, Veljović disputed the accuracy of what he termed the “prevailing view” at the time, namely that the SRK had “laid siege to Sarajevo” by being positioned on dominant features around the city and constantly firing upon

In addition, Bell testified that the pattern of the siege, that of ABiH forces attacking outward with small arms and infantry and SRK responding with heavier weapons, gave the world the impression that Sarajevo was subjected to constant and unprovoked bombardment by the Serb side, when the war was in fact being waged by both sides. See P1996 (Witness statement of Martin Bell dated 8 March 2010), para. 57.

anyone within it.¹⁵²⁵² Instead, he claimed that it was the ABiH forces that in fact held a number of elevations in and around Sarajevo, all of which were dominant in relation to SRK positions and from which the ABiH forces opened mortar and sniper fire.¹⁵²⁵³ Simić also testified about SRK being at a disadvantage because it was “surrounded doubly, internally and externally” by the ABiH,¹⁵²⁵⁴ while Ratomir Maksimović claimed that the SRK was in an “unfavourable operational position” because it was twice surrounded by a “ring” of the ABiH units inside Sarajevo and outside Sarajevo.¹⁵²⁵⁵ Dragomir Milošević noted that the “encirclement” of Sarajevo by SRK forces was “not complete” because there was a way out of Sarajevo between Butmir and Donji Kotorac (a distance of about one kilometre) where no SRK forces were present.¹⁵²⁵⁶ Zurovac denied that the SRK had a policy of “containment” of Sarajevo or that the objective of his battalion was to keep Sarajevo “under siege”.¹⁵²⁵⁷ He claimed that the city was closed from the inside by “criminals” who became high-ranking officers in the ABiH.¹⁵²⁵⁸ However, he then acknowledged that ABiH units would fire out of Sarajevo in order to break out of the “siege”.¹⁵²⁵⁹ Milosav Gagović also testified that Sarajevo was under “blockade” from the inside, not from the outside, because the Bosnian Muslim authorities would not allow people to leave the city.¹⁵²⁶⁰

4548. With respect to the Accused’s argument that it was the Bosnian Muslim authorities that in fact prevented the population from leaving the city, KDZ450 indeed confirmed that the civilians were “held hostage” in Sarajevo by their own leaders who were using a strategy of “victimisation”; however, he thought that the population was also “obviously” held hostage by the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁵²⁶¹ Similarly, while conceding that ABiH forces were preventing people from leaving

Sarajevo “up to a point”, Van Lynden remained adamant that Sarajevo was “besieged by [Bosnian Serb] forces who would have shot these people or taken them prisoner if they had tried to get out”.¹⁵²⁶² UN officials were also aware of the Bosnian Muslim strategy to prevent civilians from leaving the city.¹⁵²⁶³

4549. In terms of the use of the word “siege”, the Chamber also heard that in the summer of 1993 the UNPROFOR spokesman was ordered to avoid using the word “siege” and to use phrases like “tactical encirclement”, “strategic encirclement” and “containment” instead.¹⁵²⁶⁴ According to Bowen, the rationale for this seemed to be that using the term “siege” would harm negotiations in Geneva, but in his view it had the effect of denying “an obvious reality” and “one of the most straightforward facts of a complicated war”.¹⁵²⁶⁵ Richard Phillips, an expert witness called by the Prosecution, testified that he did not use the term “siege” in relation to Sarajevo because it is not a “military term currently in use”; he preferred to describe the events in Sarajevo as either “the battle for Sarajevo”, the “encirclement” of Sarajevo, or the “blockade” of Sarajevo.¹⁵²⁶⁶ Radovan Radinović, a military expert called by the Accused, testified that he viewed the situation as one of a “blockade” of the ABiH forces inside Sarajevo.¹⁵²⁶⁷ He further testified that, in the military documents he obtained, there were references by the ABiH to the need to “deblockade” Sarajevo and references by the SRK to “preventing deblockade”.¹⁵²⁶⁸ Other witnesses thought that terms such as “encirclement” and “siege” describe the same situation, namely that in which people are kept inside an area and denied the “freedom to go about their daily lives”.¹⁵²⁶⁹

As noted above, a number of witnesses referred to the lack of gas, electricity, and water as one of the reasons they considered the city to have been under siege.¹⁵²⁷⁰ By April 1992, hostilities in BiH had seriously damaged the country’s electricity system; as a result, Sarajevo was receiving very little electricity and thus very little running water, which was directly dependent on the supply of electricity.¹⁵²⁷¹ When Abdel-Razek arrived in Sarajevo in August 1992, there was no water, electricity and gas for the majority of the civilian population.¹⁵²⁷² There were periods in Sarajevo where the utilities situation improved; for example, after the first Markale incident in early 1994 and after the COHA was signed in early 1995.¹⁵²⁷³ However, generally speaking, and as reported by the UN, there were severe shortages of electricity, water, and gas in Sarajevo throughout the conflict.¹⁵²⁷⁴ This lack of utilities in Sarajevo made life especially difficult in winter time.¹⁵²⁷⁵ For Rose, the lack of utilities for heating during Sarajevo winters was “catastrophic”,¹⁵²⁷⁶ while Van Lynden recalled an “endless” battle to obtain fuel.¹⁵²⁷⁷ Civilians cut down hundreds of trees for firewood, and when trees were depleted, they burned furniture, carpet, shoes, floorboards, doors,

4551. When the water supply failed, international aid agencies supplied water pumps which were installed at suitable locations around the city and where residents had to wait their turn to fill up their containers, sometimes for the whole day.¹⁵²⁸⁰ Civilians would venture out of their homes at great risk to collect water from Miljacka River or from wells around the city and would be shelled or sniped at, either on the way or while queuing for water.¹⁵²⁸¹ Indeed, UNPROFOR reported incidents in which dozens of civilians were killed or injured while queuing for water.¹⁵²⁸²

4552. The Chamber heard that water pumps and electricity stations were located on Bosnian Serb territory, which enabled them to shut off the supply of water and electricity.¹⁵²⁸³ In addition, the ¹⁵²⁸² See P892 (UNPROFOR Weekly Situation Report Sarajevo, 24 June 1995), p. 3 (reporting that 13 civilians were killed and 27 injured in Bosnian Serb attacks on water lines in Dobrinja on 18 June and 21 June 1995); P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), para. 197–198. These killings are not listed in Schedule G of the Indictment. See also P1442 (UNPROFOR report re shelling of Dobrinja on 12 July 1993) (relating to Scheduled Shelling Incident G.5). Milorad Skoko, who was the General Director of the RS Electricity Supply Board, testified that the supply of electricity to ABiH-held Sarajevo was not a power supply disaster because, by his calculations, enough electricity was produced per household to satisfy basic needs. See D3321 (Witness statement of Milorad Skoko dated 1 April 2013), para. 21; Milorad Skoko, T. 36719–36721 (5 April 2013). However, the Chamber notes that in making these calculation Skoko assumed that there were 35,000 to 40,000 households within the confrontation lines in Sarajevo, whereas a household survey conducted within those confrontation lines in 1994 put the number of households as high as 85,000. See Milorad Skoko, T. 36727–36730 (8 April 2013) (testifying that he relied on the BiH census for 1991); P4997 (Ewa Tabeau’s expert report entitled “Persons Killed and Wounded in Sarajevo During the First Months of the ‘Siege’ from 1 April to 9 September 1992”, 1 May 2009), p. 1, fn. 4. Skoko’s evidence also contradicts the overwhelming amount of accepted evidence that the civilian population of Sarajevo was not adequately supplied with electricity throughout the conflict. Indeed, at certain times in the conflict, the only source of electricity for Bosnian Muslim Sarajevo was a cable running over Mt. Igman and under the airport tunnel. See P888 (UNPROFOR Weekly Situation Report (Sarajevo), 3 June 1995), p. 4; P897 (UNPROFOR Weekly Situation Report (Sarajevo), 15 July 1995), p. 5; P6276 (UNPROFOR Weekly Situation Report, 31 July 1995), p. 7; D3321 (Witness statement of Milorad Skoko dated 1 April 2013), para. 20; P6269 (Excerpt from annual report of Elektroprivreda BiH for 1993). Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider Skoko’s evidence as to the level of utilities in the city to be reliable.

engineers, and shelled utilities soon after they were repaired.¹⁵²⁸⁹ They did so because they saw the flow of utilities as benefiting primarily the Bosnian Muslims living in Sarajevo or because they would use the issue of repairs as leverage in negotiations.¹⁵²⁹⁰ That the Bosnian Serbs had a strategy of obstructing repairs is indicated by a speech Mladić gave to the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 12 May 1992, where he declared:

We are not going to say we are going to destroy the power supply pylons or turn off the water supply, no, because that would get America out of its seat, but gentlemen, please, fine, well, one day there is no water at all in Sarajevo. What is it, we do not know, damage, we should fix it, no, we will fix it, slowly. [...] [W]e have to wisely tell the world, it was [the Bosnian Muslims] who were shooting, hit the transmission line and the power went off, they were shooting at the water supply facilities, there was a power cut at such and such a place, we are doing our best repairing this, that is what diplomacy is [...].¹⁵²⁹¹

4554. In contrast to some of the above evidence, the witnesses called by the Accused testified that the Bosnian Serbs did not disrupt, but instead facilitated, the supply of utilities to civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁵²⁹² To Galić's knowledge, the SRK never manipulated electricity, water, and gas supplies to Sarajevo.¹⁵²⁹³ Similarly, Dragomir Milošević testified that the SRK respected UNPROFOR's requests to repair utilities and did whatever was necessary to ensure there was

¹⁵²⁹³ Stanislav Galić, T. 37609 (23 April 2013), T. 37874 (7 May 2013), T. 38022 (9 May 2013). Galić explained that the SRK did not manipulate utilities because the SRK and ABiH were equally affected by power cuts. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37878–37879 (7 May 2013); P6300 (Letter from City Assembly of Sarajevo to Radovan Karadžić, Momčilo Krajišnik, and RS Prime Minister, 27 September 1994), pp. 4–5. “water, electricity and all the other bare necessities for everybody”.¹⁵²⁹⁴ While Skoko acknowledged that there may have been individual incidents of SRK soldiers obstructing repairs to utilities, he denied that there was any “systemic obstruction”.¹⁵²⁹⁵ Veljko Lubura, who was the Chief Engineer of the RS Electric Power Supply Company,¹⁵²⁹⁶ testified that if the Bosnian Serb authorities wanted to cut the electricity supply they would have had to ask him, and they never did.¹⁵²⁹⁷ In addition, he and his engineers never encountered problems while repairing transmission lines in Bosnian Serb territory.¹⁵²⁹⁸ In addition, according to Sergey Moroz, who served with UNPROFOR from October 1993 until October 1994 as a mission commander in the engineering section in Sector Sarajevo,¹⁵²⁹⁹ the reason for cuts to utilities was almost always damage on the transmission lines and he could not say whether that damage was deliberate.¹⁵³⁰⁰ While accepting Lubura’s and Moroz’s evidence, the Chamber considers that they ultimately do not contradict the evidence of Prosecution witnesses, such as that of Abdel-Razek, that SRK soldiers would deliberately obstruct utilities through shooting at UNPROFOR engineers and shelling utilities soon after they were repaired. Even Skoko accepted that this may have been the case, confining it to something individual SRK soldiers would do on their own. The Chamber is therefore convinced that the shortage of utilities in Sarajevo was caused not only by combat activities on confrontation lines and by ABiH activities, but also by deliberate obstruction of utilities by the SRK soldiers.¹⁵³⁰¹

4555. The Bosnian Muslim side also interfered with or shelled the supply of utilities in Sarajevo, often to portray themselves as victims.¹⁵³⁰² Harland personally witnessed their refusal to open gas

This was confirmed by Lubura who explained that the transmission lines supplying the city from SRK-held territory passed over the confrontation lines and thus were often damaged in combat operations during the conflict. See D2541 (Witness statement of Veljko Lubura 3 December 2012), paras. 6, 16; Veljko Lubura, T. 31052 (5 December 2012); D2542 (Map marked by Veljko Lubura). See also D3321 (Witness statement of Milorad Skoko dated 1 April 2013), para. 14; Milorad Skoko, T. 36757 (8 April 2013); Mihajlo Vujasin, T. 31809, 31828–31829 (20 December 2012); Milenko Indić, T. 32472 (22 January 2013); Stanislav Galić, T. 37874 (7 May 2013).

¹⁵³⁰¹ The Chamber notes here that it found the evidence of the SRK soldiers and officers who testified that their brigades or units never interfered with the supply of utilities to Sarajevo self-serving and insincere as it was contradicted by the evidence of credible Prosecution witnesses and UN documents and, most importantly, by some of the contemporaneous Bosnian Serb documents such as P630, P5058, and P6272. It is also inconsistent with the speech Mladić gave during the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 12 May 1992, where he outlined the strategy the Bosnian Serb side would use with respect to utilities.

valves; he also witnessed their sniping at electrical insulators on high-voltage lines thus deliberately interrupting the electricity supply.¹⁵³⁰³ Another example was the ABiH shelling of the Blažuj power station on 26 November 1992, which cut Sarajevo's electricity and water supply until late January 1993.¹⁵³⁰⁴ There were also instances in which the ABiH obstructed, harassed or otherwise interfered with utility missions.¹⁵³⁰⁵ Despite this, however, Harland was adamant that the Bosnian Serbs were responsible for the majority of deprivations in utilities in Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁰⁶

(B) Shortage of food and other supplies in Sarajevo

4556. Another reason why the witnesses considered Sarajevo to have been under siege was the lack of food, as well as medical and other supplies, that the city experienced, which they testified was caused by the SRK's obstruction of humanitarian aid designated for Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁰⁷ The Chamber has already recounted above, in Section IV.B.1.a, the ebb and flow of the humanitarian aid into the city during the Indictment period and the procedures used by the SRK to control the convoys going to the city.

4557. Prosecution witnesses testified that it was those procedures that made it difficult for UNPROFOR, UNHCR, and other humanitarian organisations to deliver humanitarian aid to Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁰⁸ Banbury testified that the Bosnian Serbs exercised “total control” over UN convoys, that convoy requests were rejected many times against UNPROFOR’s judgement, and that the Bosnian Serbs provided many different reasons to block convoys, none of which was acceptable to UNPROFOR.¹⁵³⁰⁹ Harland testified that the Bosnian Serbs “never wanted to put in place a clear simple system that allowed [the UN] to have freedom of movement”, but instead stole and shot at UN vehicles and abused UN personnel in the convoys.¹⁵³¹⁰ Okun also confirmed that food convoys under escort from UNPROFOR were “routinely stopped, robbed, [and] made to pay money to get through certain check-points” by Bosnian Serb forces.¹⁵³¹¹ KW570, who was called by the Accused, testified that Bosnian Serb forces would often stop convoys, only to let them through when UNPROFOR threatened to use force.¹⁵³¹² Bowen personally witnessed convoys being held up “many times” by the SRK, sometimes for days.¹⁵³¹³ While some of these witnesses acknowledged that the Bosnian Serbs were entitled to seek assurances from UNPROFOR and UNHCR about the contents of convoys, they claimed that the Bosnian Serbs implemented a very onerous control regime on UNPROFOR and UNHCR, which they used to restrict rather than to facilitate humanitarian aid.¹⁵³¹⁴

4558. The Bosnian Muslims also obstructed humanitarian convoys by opening fire on them and then blaming the Bosnian Serb side or by blocking their passage.¹⁵³¹⁵ However, Rose and Abdel-Razek emphasised that the majority of blocking came from the Bosnian Serbs, who controlled all the major roads into Sarajevo.¹⁵³¹⁶ Banbury also agreed that the Bosnian Muslim authorities “at times” obstructed the movement of convoys, but claimed that these obstructions were relatively few and easy to solve; they did not constitute a broad practice of stopping convoys.¹⁵³¹⁷ KDZ182 testified that while UNPROFOR's freedom of movement was "somewhat limited" by the ABiH within Sarajevo, the restrictions imposed on freedom of movement by the SRK around Sarajevo were far greater.¹⁵³¹⁸

4559. The Chamber also heard from Defence witnesses that SRK forces did not hinder but in fact facilitated the passage of humanitarian convoys.¹⁵³¹⁹ Dragomir Milošević explained that the position of the SRK Command was that "no obstacles should be placed in the way of convoys".¹⁵³²⁰ He testified that "very often" there would be a problem with the convoys, but that it was his impression that the flow of humanitarian aid was neither compromised nor obstructed.¹⁵³²¹ Krajišnik agreed that SRK forces obstructed convoys at times, but claimed that they did so because weapons and other prohibited items were being smuggled.¹⁵³²² Like Krajišnik, many Defence witnesses testified that humanitarian convoys were used to smuggle weapons, ammunition, and other military equipment to the ABiH in Sarajevo justifying the need to check them.¹⁵³²³ Contemporaneous documents produced by the Bosnian Serb side at the time also suggest that this was the case on certain occasions.¹⁵³²⁴ Additionally, Smith confirmed that there was a suspicion that other things were being transported in humanitarian convoys,¹⁵³²⁵ while Okun stated that convoys were abused by all sides and that smugglers were active throughout the conflict.¹⁵³²⁶ Furthermore, significant amounts of humanitarian aid were diverted to a black market in Sarajevo, instead of reaching the civilian population.¹⁵³²⁷

4560. While accepting that at times weapons or other military equipment may have been smuggled into the city in some of the convoys and that the Main Staff and the SRK had the right to check that convoys were not being so misused, the Chamber also considers that the checks imposed by the Main Staff were too onerous and restrictive, as testified to by a number of witnesses.¹⁵³²⁸ As such, they obstructed, rather than facilitated, the passage of humanitarian aid. In addition, in view of the other evidence outlined in this section as well as the evidence discussed in Section IV.B.1.a, the Chamber does not believe the SRK soldiers and officers who testified that their units never prevented or delayed humanitarian convoys from reaching Sarajevo.

(C) Findings on the siege

At the same time, however, international witnesses strongly denied that the UN itself was involved in the abuse of the convoys. ¹⁵³²⁸ Indeed, as shown in D3873, even the RS Minister of Health complained about one of the VRS decisions restricting the movement of humanitarian convoys, albeit on the grounds that it affected the supplies in the RS.

all consistent as to the description of the situation in Sarajevo and the life of the citizens there. They all described a city surrounded by the SRK, shelled continuously, and exposed to constant sniper fire, which in turn had the effect of imprisoning the Sarajevo citizens and led to shortage of food, water, and utilities in the city. The Chamber does not doubt that this was indeed the accurate reflection of the situation in the city.

4562. The fact that some humanitarian aid was coming into Sarajevo during the conflict and that the encirclement of Sarajevo was not complete does not change the reality of that situation. As explained earlier, while an exit out of the city did exist, those attempting to leave Sarajevo had to expose themselves to danger when crossing the airport strip or passing through the tunnel.¹⁵³²⁹ Furthermore, while humanitarian aid was indeed coming into Sarajevo throughout the conflict, the Bosnian Serbs controlled and restricted the flow of humanitarian convoys such that the city was rarely fully supplied, as described above in Section IV.B.1.a.¹⁵³³⁰ That being the case, the Chamber does not accept the evidence of SRK soldiers and officers who claimed that the situation was not one of siege because the tunnel could be used as an exit and because some humanitarian aid was coming in. Indeed, to imply, as these Defence witnesses did, that the underground tunnel which was created precisely because the city was surrounded by the SRK somehow made the situation less of a siege seriously affects their credibility as a whole. Similarly, the fact that humanitarian aid had to be sent to the city and that the UN required permission of Bosnian Serbs for this clearly indicates that it was an encircled city, a city under siege, and that the SRK controlled the situation. Had the SRK not surrounded the city and stopped supplies from coming in, neither the tunnel nor the humanitarian aid would have been necessary.¹⁵³³¹

4563. The documentary evidence presented in this case about the situation in the city further confirms the findings above. For example, on 12 May 1992, during the 16th Bosnian Serb Assembly session, Mladić said that “we have to put a ring around the dragon’s head of Sarajevo this very moment, and only those whom we let out should be allowed out”.¹⁵³³² In an intercepted conversation with an unknown male on 25 May 1992, Mladić stated that he had “blocked Sarajevo

¹⁵³³¹ As for the evidence of Defence witnesses that the SRK was disadvantaged because it was surrounded on the outside ring of Sarajevo by ABiH forces and because the 1st Corps of the ABiH held some elevations within the city, the Chamber considers that this claim, whether accurate or not, ultimately has no real bearing on the relevant issues in this case such as whether the SRK was acting in compliance with international law when conducting its operations in and around Sarajevo.

from four corners” and that the “city is trapped, there is no way out”.¹⁵³³³ On 1 April 1994, that is, after the tunnel was built and operational, Galić issued an order to the SRK units, instructing them to “fortify positions around Sarajevo by erecting wire and concrete barriers, which would in turn strengthen the belief that they really are blocked (‘in a camp’)”.¹⁵³³⁴ A number of VRS directives, as discussed earlier, also refer to the “blockade” of Sarajevo and the SRK’s efforts to prevent the lifting of that blockade, as do many SRK orders.¹⁵³³⁵ Finally, the Chamber received in evidence a number of contemporaneous military maps, made by both the VRS and the ABiH, showing the confrontation lines in the city at various times.¹⁵³³⁶ These maps clearly illustrate that the inner city of Sarajevo was almost completely encircled by the SRK and that the SRK was therefore able to control the fate of the Sarajevo citizens.

4564. In assessing the evidence before it, the Chamber has considered and accepted the Accused’s argument that the media was somewhat unfavourable to the Bosnian Serb side when reporting on the situation in Sarajevo. The Chamber also took into account the fact that at one point the UN decided not to refer to the situation in the city as a “siege”. Ultimately, however, the Chamber considers both to be of limited weight in light of all the evidence before it.

4565. Furthermore, while the Bosnian Muslim authorities at times prevented civilians from leaving the city or made it difficult for them to do so in order to ensure that the city remained in the news, the Chamber considers that the actions of the SRK forces positioned around the city left the civilian population with very little opportunity to leave Sarajevo safely.

4566. For all these reasons, the Chamber finds that the city of Sarajevo was essentially encircled and besieged by the SRK and, as such, under a blockade. The Chamber will therefore continue to refer alternatively to the terms “blockade”, “siege” or “encirclement” where relevant in this Judgement.

ii. Objectives of the siege

4567. There was also a marked contrast between the evidence of witnesses called by the Prosecution and those called by the Accused regarding the aims or objectives of the SRK forces around Sarajevo.

4568. According to Rose, the objective of the siege was to engineer an advantageous peace deal with the Bosnian Muslims and to demonstrate to the Bosnian Croats the strength of the Bosnian Serb position.¹⁵³³⁷ It was also used as a vehicle by Bosnian Serb leaders to exert pressure on the UN and the international community.¹⁵³³⁸ Since Bosnian Serbs had fewer infantry forces than the ABiH in Sarajevo and could not have taken the city without significant casualties, their objective, according to Fraser, was to “keep pressure” on the city through sniping, shelling, and controlling access to humanitarian aid.¹⁵³³⁹ Mole called this a “policy of containment”, and of maintaining the status quo, the object of which was to control Sarajevo, not to occupy it.¹⁵³⁴⁰ Thomas thought that there were four objectives to the siege: (i) to create a situation of “out-right terror”; (ii) to shutdown the source of manpower for the ABiH; (iii) to influence politicians who lived in Sarajevo; and (iv) to engage in “sheer retaliatory madness”.¹⁵³⁴¹ Banbury testified that the objectives of the siege were two-fold: first, to deny the BiH government a symbolically important capital city and make it more difficult for it to exercise sovereignty; and second, to punish the people in Sarajevo and cause them “as much pain as possible”.¹⁵³⁴² He thought that the Bosnian Serbs also wanted to exercise

On cross-examination, Fraser agreed that a “siege” can be a legitimate military tactic so long as it is not calculated to starve the civilian population. He further conceded that it was a legitimate military tactic for Bosnian Serb forces to encircle Sarajevo in order to prevent ABiH forces from leaving Sarajevo and from being deployed on other fronts in BiH. See David Fraser, T. 8062 (18 October 2010). See also KDZ088, T. 6425 (8 September 2010) (closed session).

“total political control” over areas where Serbs had traditionally lived, including in Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁴³ Bowen thought that the siege itself was “as much a weapon of war as the bullets and shells that were fired into Sarajevo”.¹⁵³⁴⁴ KDZ450 testified that the Bosnian Serbs wanted to remain present in Sarajevo because it was the “historic capital” of BiH and a city of “great symbolic importance”, as well as an area of “great interest for strategic and military reasons”.¹⁵³⁴⁵ Thus, their objective was to exert pressure on Bosnian Muslim leaders and force them to accept a division of Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁴⁶ He testified that a frequent method of applying pressure was blocking the flow of humanitarian aid.¹⁵³⁴⁷

4569. On the other hand, the majority of the witnesses called by the Accused denied the above were the SRK’s objectives and claimed that the SRK simply wanted to (i) contain the ABiH forces within the city in order to prevent them from linking up with ABiH forces outside of the city, as that would have led to attacks on Serb territories around Sarajevo and (ii) protect and defend those territories as they belonged to Bosnian Serbs.¹⁵³⁴⁸ Additionally, KW570 thought that the objective of the Bosnian Serb siege was to contain and neutralise the ABiH forces in Sarajevo, in order to force the Bosnian Muslim government to the negotiating table, where a long-term peace settlement for BiH could be worked out.¹⁵³⁴⁹ Milenko Indić testified that the SRK's basic task was to maintain "the established frontline" held by it.¹⁵³⁵⁰

4570. As noted earlier, the expert witness Radinović testified that the SRK wanted to keep ABiH forces under blockade and prevent them from breaking through to the Romanija plateau, from which they could access the Drina River valley, while the ABiH's 1st Corps had as its main objectives to keep Sarajevo "under its control" and to "deblockade the city" so that it could link up with ABiH forces in Igman and reach the Romanija plateau.¹⁵³⁵¹ Accordingly, Radinović opined, the SRK adopted a defensive strategy and the ABiH adopted an offensive strategy, both strategies being legal and legitimate.¹⁵³⁵² According to him, the VRS had an exclusively "defensive strategy" to defend the territory and the people of RS as it had "absolutely no resources to commit aggression".¹⁵³⁵³

4571. Dragomir Milošević testified that by the time he became the SRK Commander in August 1994, the situation on the battlefield crystallised and it was a matter of maintaining the status quo.¹⁵³⁵⁴ According to him, the task of the SRK was to defend its area of deployment while the ABiH conducted operations in an attempt to break through SRK lines; these operations included using artillery, conducting night-time and sabotage operations, planting explosives, and sniping, as well as conducting attacks on the SRK from the outside of Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁵⁵ He also denied that the SRK's aim was to divide Sarajevo, as indicated in the supplement to Directive 6,¹⁵³⁵⁶ saying that he ¹⁵³⁴⁹ KW570, T. 32226 (18 January 2013) (private session). KW570 testified that the Bosnian Serbs were willing to end the siege of Sarajevo because it was doing their cause "horrendous damage" and in addition the Bosnian Serbs in Vogošća and Ilidža were subjected to ABiH fire and living under threatening conditions. However, the Bosnian Muslim government resisted all attempts to end the siege. See KW570, T. 32261–32262 (18 January 2013) (private session).

¹⁵³⁵¹ Radovan Radinović, T. 41399, 41403–41404 (17 July 2013). Asim Džambasović testified that the "priority military objective" of the ABiH's 1st Corps was first to defend the city and only then to create conditions which would enable it to "break out of the siege", which was a "little bit unrealistic" because the ABiH needed seven times the amount of forces and equipment of the VRS to break the siege. See Asim Džambasović, T. 15270–15271 (23 June 2011); D1391 (Order of ABiH 1st Corps, 2 January 1993), p. 1.

¹⁵³⁵² Radovan Radinović, T. 41404–41405 (17 July 2013). Both Dragičević and Tomić testified that, in contrast to the SRK, the strategy of the ABiH was to "capture all of BiH" through "offensive operations". was never given such an order; however, he did acknowledge that by maintaining and improving its position, as ordered in the supplement, the SRK may have been able to affect international negotiations.¹⁵³⁵⁷

4572. Like Milošević, a large number of former SRK soldiers and officers claimed that the SRK carried out predominantly defensive operations in the city in order to prevent ABiH forces from breaking out, at the same time acknowledging that there were some exceptions, such as operation Lukavac 93 and other offensive actions.¹⁵³⁵⁸ Lučić, for example, acknowledged that the SRK undertook offensive operations “designed to recapture lost positions” and to “neutralise the weapons and manpower” of the ABiH in locations where the ABiH was engaging civilian and military targets.¹⁵³⁵⁹ defined as Serbian”.¹⁵³⁶⁰ Gengo also testified that his battalion made no plans to move its lines forward and that there were “never” plans to undertake offensive operations in the Sarajevo area.¹⁵³⁶¹ When presented with an order issued by Galić on 26 January 1994 to “continue with offensive activities and liberate the Serb part of the City of Sarajevo”, Gengo testified that his battalion never received such an order and that he neither planned nor was involved in offensive activities.¹⁵³⁶² He also explained that the references in the order to “fortifications” and “improving the tactical position” were all defensive in nature.¹⁵³⁶³ Milovanović testified that the VRS was “a defensive army with a defensive strategy, from a strategic point of view” and that, as such, it engaged in “active combat activities” only to improve its tactical positions.¹⁵³⁶⁴ Zurovac denied that simply by “encircling” the city, the SRK was engaged in “offensive” measures, explaining that the Serb units around Sarajevo were not the aggressor because it would not make sense to be an aggressor against one’s own country.¹⁵³⁶⁵ When shown an SRK order dated 16 December 1993 instructing the units to conduct an “active defence” to prevent ABiH forces from unblocking their part of the town and to establish conditions for the division of Sarajevo into two parts, Zurovac disagreed that “active defence” was another term for offence, but agreed that splitting Sarajevo into two parts would constitute an offensive act “to a certain extent.”¹⁵³⁶⁶

4574. The above can be contrasted with the evidence of KDZ182 who testified that one of the techniques used by Bosnian Serbs during the siege of Sarajevo was to move the confrontation line toward the city “inch by inch”.¹⁵³⁶⁷ Similarly, [REDACTED] explained that the encirclement of Sarajevo was only “partly” defensive because it was sometimes necessary to move units and engage in “subversive or sabotage operations” in order to achieve the goal of containing the ABiH forces within Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁶⁸

¹⁵³⁶⁰ D2331 (Witness statement of Blagoje Kovačević dated 14 October 2012), para. 8. When confronted with two post-war statements by Dragomir Milošević referring to SRK carrying out activities to extend its territory, Kovačević claimed that he had no knowledge as to Milošević’s position, but testified that one of the SRK objectives was to keep the road from Lukavica to Pale, which required the taking of “small features”. ¹⁵³⁶⁸ [REDACTED].

4575. Based on the evidence outlined above, the Chamber is satisfied that the siege or encirclement of Sarajevo by the SRK had a number of objectives, one of which was indeed the containment of the ABiH forces within the city in order to prevent them from linking up with ABiH forces outside of the city. However, the military directives issued by the VRS Main Staff and/or the Accused discussed in an earlier section of the Judgement¹⁵³⁶⁹ clearly indicate a number of additional Bosnian Serb goals and strategies in relation to Sarajevo, namely, (i) to keep it under firm blockade and gradually tighten the encirclement; (ii) to conduct, among other things, offensive operations and liberate remaining parts of “Serbian territory” that would in turn improve tactical positions and normal communication within the RS; (iii) to isolate parts of the city and surrounding settlements; and (iv) to ensure the most favourable position for dividing Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁷⁰ Additionally, in Directive 4, the VRS Main Staff noted that one of the tasks of the VRS as a whole was to “[c]reate conditions for the state leadership of [RS] to participate equally in resolving the crisis in the former [BiH] with other international factors”.¹⁵³⁷¹ This is in line with the evidence outlined above, namely that the siege was used as a means of putting pressure on Bosnian Muslim authorities and the UN in order to ensure the most favourable peace deal for the Bosnian Serb side during international negotiations.¹⁵³⁷² Similarly, the goals listed above are in line with the evidence of Prosecution witnesses that one objective of the siege was to control the city and its people, and to keep those parts of the city deemed to be ethnically Serb under the control of the Bosnian Serb authorities. While some of the Accused’s witnesses denied that the SRK’s aim was to divide Sarajevo, others, like Radojčić and Šehovac confirmed that the final objective was to keep Bosnian Serb parts of the city under the control of the Bosnian Serb authorities.¹⁵³⁷³ Indeed, this aim is clearly outlined in the above mentioned directives and the Chamber also recalls that, by 1993, the frontlines in Sarajevo were more or less set and that certain parts of the city, such as Grbavica and parts of Dobrinja, were under the control of the Bosnian Serb side throughout the war, thus essentially creating a division of the city in certain areas.

¹⁵³⁷³ See fn. 15357.

4576. Finally, although most defence witnesses testified that, with the exception of Lukavac 93, the SRK was engaging in defensive activities alone, some then proceeded to describe additional offensive actions their respective units undertook during their time in Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁷⁴ This again is in line with the language in the directives which clearly called for offensive actions by the SRK in order to strengthen and consolidate SRK positions and gain territories deemed ethnically Serb. It also confirms the evidence of KDZ182 who testified that the SRK strategy was to move the frontline inch by inch towards the city and with the evidence of [REDACTED] who characterised the encirclement of Sarajevo as only “partly” defensive. Milošević himself confirmed as much in statements he made following the conflict.¹⁵³⁷⁵ Ultimately, however, whether the VRS conducted offensive or defensive actions in and around the city is irrelevant for the purposes of this case. Instead, what matters—and what is thus addressed throughout this Judgement—is whether the VRS/SRK actions in and around Sarajevo were in compliance with international law.

g. Campaign of sniping and shelling causing terror

i. Arguments of the parties

4577. The Prosecution alleges that members of the Sarajevo Forces implemented a military strategy that used sniping and shelling to kill and wound the civilian population of Sarajevo, which in turn resulted in thousands of civilian casualties, including children and the elderly.¹⁵³⁷⁶ The Prosecution further alleges that the sniping and shelling comprised direct attacks on the civilian population or on individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities, and that these attacks included indiscriminate and disproportionate attacks.¹⁵³⁷⁷ According to the Prosecution, “the only reasonable conclusion that can be drawn from the protracted campaign of sniping and shelling” of Sarajevo civilians is that “its primary purpose was terror”.¹⁵³⁷⁸

4578. The Accused accepts that civilians in Sarajevo experienced terror but argues that civilians on both sides of the confrontation line were terrified as is “always the case in civil wars and street

Sarajevo Forces are defined in the Indictment as (i) members of JNA operating in and around Sarajevo until about 20 May 1992, (ii) members of the VRS, in particular the SRK, and (iii) members of other forces operating in or with responsibility over the Sarajevo area. fights”.¹⁵³⁷⁹ He claims that the SRK units did not intend to cause civilian casualties or to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁸⁰ According to him, any psychological pressure experienced by civilians in the city was caused by the Bosnian Muslim authorities who provoked Bosnian Serbs into responding to fire.¹⁵³⁸¹ In addition, the nature of the conflict in and around Sarajevo meant that the SRK was unable to designate any areas in the city as exclusively civilian since fire was coming from those zones.¹⁵³⁸² The Accused further submits that SRK units were never ordered, verbally or in writing, by SRK commands or civil authorities, to target civilians¹⁵³⁸³ and that there was no goal to deliberately make it impossible for the Bosnian Muslim government in Sarajevo to control the living conditions of civilians in the city.¹⁵³⁸⁴ The Accused’s final argument, namely that the Bosnian Muslim side targeted its own civilians in order to gain international sympathy has been dealt with in the earlier part of the Judgement.

ii. Terror in Sarajevo

4579. A large number of Prosecution witnesses testified that Bosnian Serb Forces sniped and shelled the civilians in Sarajevo in order to instil terror in the civilian population, exert political pressure on their leaders or force them into accepting the status quo, and undermine the morale of the ABiH troops whose families were in the city.¹⁵³⁸⁵ Indeed the Chamber heard that already by August 1992, the UN Special Rapporteur on Human Rights reported back to the UN that the city was being shelled on a regular basis and that snipers are killing innocent civilians in what “appears to be a deliberate attempt to spread terror among the civilian population.”¹⁵³⁸⁶ Similarly, towards the end of the conflict, in July 1995, the UN was reporting on a “general atmosphere of terror in the city” caused by the Bosnian Serb sniping and shelling.¹⁵³⁸⁷

4580. More specifically, Fraser testified that this feeling of terror in Sarajevo was caused by a number of factors, including the fact that the city was besieged and that the residents were shelled and sniped so that they “never quite knew what was going to happen to them when they walked out the door”.¹⁵³⁸⁸ KDZ304 testified that the SRK sniping and shelling aimed at “terrorising” and demoralising the civilian population¹⁵³⁸⁹ and that various measures were used by the Bosnian Serbs to make the people of Sarajevo “choke”; this included the increased targeting and killing of civilians, the disruption of Blue Routes for the supply of humanitarian aid, the disruption of public transport, and the cutting off of electricity and water supplies.¹⁵³⁹⁰ In Harland’s view, terror was caused through several levers of pressure that the Bosnian Serbs used in relation to Sarajevo, such as the shelling and sniping of the civilian population, which he thought was a form of “terrorism directed at the civilians”.¹⁵³⁹¹

4581. Harland further testified that the application of terror followed a discernible pattern so that when there was an explicit threat of intervention against the Bosnian Serbs, the pressure would be eased, but when the threat subsided, the pressure would be increased.¹⁵³⁹² He gave as an example the events following the SRK’s capture of Mt. Igman and the first Markale incident, where NATO action was threatened and resulted in a dramatic decline in the Serb sniping and shelling of the civilian population.¹⁵³⁹³ KDZ450 testified that there was also a correlation between the increase in

ABiH offensives and the attacks directed against civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁵³⁹⁴ Finally, a number of witnesses testified that events at the frontlines outside of Sarajevo also had an effect on the situation in the city.¹⁵³⁹⁵

4582. According to Fraser, the conditions in Sarajevo were “absolutely the worst conditions for anybody to live in”.¹⁵³⁹⁶ During his time in the city, Fraser asked people, including civilians working for him and locals in the shops, what it was like to live in the city and in response people expressed the terror of never knowing what was going to happen next.¹⁵³⁹⁷ Some residents said that life in Sarajevo was even worse than during the German occupation of BiH in the 1940s.¹⁵³⁹⁸ In order to avoid being targeted, civilians in the city would defer the basic life-saving chores, such as collecting wood, to times of reduced visibility, including foggy weather or night-time darkness.¹⁵³⁹⁹ In addition, schools were closed and temporary neighbourhood schools were established in cellars, in order to minimise children’s exposure to shelling and sniping.¹⁵⁴⁰⁰

4583. Fraser singled out two Bosnian Serb activities that had a devastating psychological impact on the citizens of Sarajevo; the first was the targeting of the trams because if they were not running due to sniper fire it meant that the situation was “grave”, which would send “shudders through the city”.¹⁵⁴⁰¹ The second was the use of modified air bombs by the Bosnian Serbs, as those were “psychologically very devastating” for the civilian population.¹⁵⁴⁰² KDZ304 also confirmed that modified air bombs were used as part of the psychological warfare and with the aim of terrorising both the civilian population and the ABiH soldiers whose families lived in the city and were subjected to modified air bomb attacks.¹⁵⁴⁰³

4584. Like Fraser, Mole testified that the psychological pressure in Sarajevo was intense because of “the constant danger of injury or death from all forms of weaponry and perceived military activity within the city”, no matter where one was.¹⁵⁴⁰⁴ In other words, wherever people of Sarajevo went they were subject to this “incessant fear and concern” that was both “immense and protracted”.¹⁵⁴⁰⁵ Tucker testified that life in Sarajevo was “horrible” for the civilian population as the Bosnian Serbs blockaded the city and “subjected the inhabitants to incessant shelling, sniping, starvation, cold, as well as psychological pressure”.¹⁵⁴⁰⁶ No ten minutes would go by without the sound of small arms fire, and no half hour would go by without the sound of shells or mortar bombs.¹⁵⁴⁰⁷ He called the activities of the SRK “terrorism by artillery” as its heavy weapons would fire all over the city in an arbitrary fashion and with no military purpose.¹⁵⁴⁰⁸ For KDZ185, the fact that the shelling was so random and hardly ever targeted military objects “kept the population in a state of terror”.¹⁵⁴⁰⁹

4585. According to Banbury, the siege of Sarajevo was “clearly a campaign of terror” and the people who lived through it “suffered immensely”.¹⁵⁴¹⁰ Nakaš, a doctor in the Sarajevo State Hospital, testified that many people in Sarajevo were in fact “visibly traumatised” and suffered from “post-traumatic stress disorder”.¹⁵⁴¹¹ Bell confirmed this by stating that he had “never seen such anxiety etched on everybody’s faces” and that “some [people] looked almost grey with fear”.¹⁵⁴¹² Mandilović, another doctor from the Sarajevo State Hospital, testified that Sarajevo’s civilian population eventually became “numb to everything going on around them” and that people were in a state of “permanent fear”.¹⁵⁴¹³ Hajir, a doctor working in Dobrinja Hospital, testified that the civilian population suffered deep psychological scars as a result of the siege; life in Sarajevo was hard for everyone and people experienced psychological problems and paranoia.¹⁵⁴¹⁴ In addition, they felt fear and anxiety for the safety of their loved ones.¹⁵⁴¹⁵ According to Van Baal, when he arrived to Sarajevo in February 1994, the situation was one of “desperation and horror”, where people were underweight and had “fear in their eyes”.¹⁵⁴¹⁶

4586. Bell testified that of all the conflicts he covered, the Sarajevo battlefield was the only one conducted continuously and intensively over a long period of time in a modern city and an urban environment.¹⁵⁴¹⁷ According to him, one of the features of this conflict was the least distinction between soldiers and civilian when it came to targeting as he personally observed civilians being deliberately targeted within the city.¹⁵⁴¹⁸ He also testified that there were essentially two conflicts in Sarajevo—one was the conflict between the two armies and the other was bombardment and sniping of civilians which happened constantly and on both sides.¹⁵⁴¹⁹ Bogdan Vidović, who was a criminal technician in Sarajevo CSB,¹⁵⁴²⁰ testified that in most cases he investigated during the conflict the casualties were civilians, and were not wearing any uniforms.¹⁵⁴²¹

4587. The Chamber also received in evidence a large number of contemporaneous video footage showing civilians in Sarajevo in their everyday lives, under constant shelling and sniping.¹⁵⁴²² This footage shows that the situation in the city was extremely dangerous and that its citizens were afraid. In addition, the citizens of Sarajevo who gave evidence before the Chamber were all consistent about the constant danger and fear they lived with in the city during the conflict.¹⁵⁴²³

iii. Civilian casualties in Sarajevo

4588. The Chamber also heard throughout the case that a large number of civilians were killed or wounded during the conflict in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴²⁴ Nakaš provided the statistical breakdown of patients treated in the State Hospital between 1992 and 1995, showing a total of 8,105 patients, 85% of whom were treated for war-related injuries.¹⁵⁴²⁵ According to Nakaš, 3,698 of those were civilians while the rest were military; however, the latter figure was overblown as it included individuals who had military health insurance, such as retired JNA officers and their dependents, as well as the members of police.¹⁵⁴²⁶ Mandilović estimated that the patients he treated were about 80% civilian and 20% soldiers, with 80% of the civilian casualties being shelling-related and 20% small-arms-related.¹⁵⁴²⁷ Between August 1994 and November 1995, the proportion of patients treated for injuries caused by shelling rose to approximately 90% while the rest were wounded by sniper fire.¹⁵⁴²⁸ In addition, between August 1994 and October 1995, the State Hospital treated 115 patients wounded by sniper fire, namely 8 children, 66 “adults”, and 41 members of the armed forces.¹⁵⁴²⁹ The State Hospital also treated many people who were suffering from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder due to the living conditions in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴³⁰

4589. Zaimović testified that 331 children were brought in and treated in the Children's Surgery ward in Koševo Hospital during the war,¹⁵⁴³¹ most of whom were injured by shrapnel or sniper fire.¹⁵⁴³² In 1992 alone, 163 children were brought to the ward, nine of whom died in the ward itself.¹⁵⁴³³ Zaimović also noted that 32 children who were severely injured and for whom the ward could not provide adequate care were taken for treatment outside of the country.¹⁵⁴³⁴ The worst period for her ward was when the Fatima Gunić School was shelled on 9 November 1993, followed by the shelling of Otoka on 10 November, resulting in a number of dead and wounded children.¹⁵⁴³⁵

4590. Hajir testified that throughout the entire war, Dobrinja Hospital received around 16,000 injured persons and that he performed thousands of major and minor surgeries on injuries related to the conflict.¹⁵⁴³⁶ On average 10 to 15 people would come to the hospital and approximately four minor surgeries were conducted each day.¹⁵⁴³⁷ According to Hajir, at the beginning of the war around 95% of the people treated in the Dobrinja Hospital were civilians.¹⁵⁴³⁸ Later on, that percentage decreased to about 85 %.¹⁵⁴³⁹ Hajir did concede, however, that the hospital never conducted any statistical evaluations and that the numbers were problematic.¹⁵⁴⁴⁰ At one point Hajir treated a seven or eight year old child who had been shot by a sniper through the heart; he also testified that many of his civilian patients were wounded while waiting for water and for humanitarian aid.¹⁵⁴⁴¹

4591. In addition to the evidence of the Sarajevo doctors, Tabeau's demographic evidence outlined earlier shows that, as an absolute minimum, over 10,000 civilians were either killed or wounded in the conflict in Sarajevo during the Indictment period.¹⁵⁴⁴²

iv. Evidence of SRK witnesses

4592. While the Accused conceded during the case that the civilians in Sarajevo felt terror, he denied that there was any intention to cause such terror on the part of the SRK and the Bosnian Serb side. He called a large number of former members of the SRK who testified that there was no intention, at any level of the SRK, to conduct a campaign of terror against civilians, and/or inflict psychological harm on them.¹⁵⁴⁴³ Galić denied that the SRK fired on Sarajevo without any military purpose and solely for the purpose of terrorising civilians, testifying that these kinds of attacks “did not happen” and “were never ordered” because “terror begets terror”.¹⁵⁴⁴⁴ Similarly, Dragomir Milošević testified that the SRK did not create an atmosphere in Sarajevo where “people were being driven crazy” and that the thesis that the Sarajevo civilians were subjected to a “campaign of terror” could not be sustained.¹⁵⁴⁴⁵ Ratomir Maksimović dismissed reports suggesting that civilians were targeted by the SRK as propaganda,¹⁵⁴⁴⁶ and Dragomir Milošević claimed that these reports reflected an exaggeration or dramatisation of the situation.¹⁵⁴⁴⁷ Indić gave evidence that there was no plan for “low intensity operations with the aim of terrorizing civilians in Sarajevo”,¹⁵⁴⁴⁸ while Milovanović denied that Bosnian Serbs intended or planned to terrorise the civilians in Sarajevo, whether through sniper or artillery fire.¹⁵⁴⁴⁹ As noted earlier, the SRK soldiers and officers called by the Accused testified that, instead of causing terror, the goal of the SRK was to stand its ground and oppose the ABiH’s 1st Corps and prevent their units from linking up with ABiH units outside of the city.¹⁵⁴⁵⁰ The Accused’s military expert, Radinović, also stated that he found no evidence that the purpose of the operations of the Serb forces was to terrorise civilians, relying on the fact that places of worship were not targeted and that there were periods of inactivity and cease-fires in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴⁵¹

4593. Similarly, many of those SRK soldiers and officers testified that they and their units were never ordered, nor did they ever order, that civilians in Sarajevo be targeted.¹⁵⁴⁵² Radojčić explained that it was “crystal clear” in SRK orders and reports that the use of phrases like “attack on the city” implied that only military targets were selected, that “reprisal” referred to an appropriate response to enemy fire, while “retaliation” referred to selective retaliation against military targets.¹⁵⁴⁵³ [REDACTED] testified that an order to clear the terrain of remaining individuals referred only to military individuals, not civilians, and that the reference to “mopping up the wider area of remaining groups and individuals” in Directive 1 referred to groups and

4594. According to those witnesses, the SRK troops were explicitly ordered not to target civilians.¹⁵⁴⁵⁶ They were issued orders to fire only at military targets, which they observed.¹⁵⁴⁵⁷

When shown an intercepted conversation in which Mladić ordered an attack on “only military targets”, Dragomir Milošević testified that this order reflected complete agreement between the SRK Command and the Main Staff that the SRK should only target military targets.¹⁵⁴⁵⁸ Guzina explained that infantry weapons could be fired without a command or special order only if an SRK facility was attacked and there was no other way to repel the attack.¹⁵⁴⁵⁹ Similarly, Lučić testified that his unit had good means of communication, and therefore it engaged the enemy only on orders, only if necessary, and only against identified actual military objectives.¹⁵⁴⁶⁰

4595. A number of SRK witnesses also blamed the ABiH for failing to protect civilians in the area under the ABiH control.¹⁵⁴⁶¹ According to them, military targets were located in civilian areas of ABiH controlled territory, and/or in the depth of ABiH controlled territory.¹⁵⁴⁶² When asked whether it was reasonable to expect civilian casualties when firing on targets in areas where civilians lived, Mijatović answered that it was reasonable to expect a warring party to avoid firing from civilian areas.¹⁵⁴⁶³ Gengo thought that any potential civilian casualties in Sarajevo “could be considered collateral damage” while civilian facilities “could have been endangered” by SRK fire only due to their proximity to military targets.¹⁵⁴⁶⁴ When asked about precautions he took to minimise civilian casualties, Gengo responded that the “enemy side should have done that” as he and his unit could not see what was going on in Sarajevo from their positions.¹⁵⁴⁶⁵ Veljović conceded that there might have been civilian casualties from SRK fire in densely populated parts of the city, but only when SRK units were threatened by strong artillery fire from such zones.¹⁵⁴⁶⁶ After agreeing that there was a “pretty high risk” of civilian casualties when firing in the depth of the city, Sladoje stated that it was not possible for the SRK to fire at military objectives only without jeopardising the civilian population which was living in the city.¹⁵⁴⁶⁷ According to him, it was “impossible to say practically for any area” that there were no civilians there.¹⁵⁴⁶⁸ This is contrary to the evidence of Dragomir Milošević who testified that he considered and treated Sarajevo as a civilian area.¹⁵⁴⁶⁹ Thus, if it was not possible to avoid danger to civilians, an assessment would have to be made as to whether collateral damage would outweigh the military advantage.¹⁵⁴⁷⁰ Radinović claimed that “it was impossible to distinguish between civilians and soldiers in the Sarajevo theatre of war” because many ABiH soldiers wore civilian clothing.¹⁵⁴⁷¹ However, Galić testified that SRK soldiers manning their positions were ordered to be “absolutely certain as to who was a civilian or who was a soldier”, despite this being “quite difficult”.¹⁵⁴⁷² Galić and several other SRK witnesses also testified that, if the SRK Command found out about possible civilian casualties during an attack, it would order that the attack be stopped.¹⁵⁴⁷³ He later explained that, ultimately, civilian casualties and collateral damage in the Sarajevo area could have been stopped only by stopping the war, and that collateral civilian damage was a factor to be considered when returning fire into a civilian zone.¹⁵⁴⁷⁴

v. Findings

4596. Given the testimony of the Prosecution witnesses who lived in the city at various times and noting the Accused’s acknowledgement to that effect, the Chamber has no doubt that the citizens of Sarajevo felt terrorised and experienced extreme fear and hardship during the conflict, due primarily to the sniping and shelling they were exposed to by the SRK forces everywhere in the city, including in their own homes. The evidence is clear that Sarajevo was under siege by the SRK forces¹⁵⁴⁷⁵ and that, with the exception of a few months following the establishment of the TEZ,¹⁵⁴⁷⁶ its citizens were exposed to continuous small arms and heavy weapon fire. They were in danger of death or serious injury no matter where they were in the city and, as such, spent a number of years under enormous psychological pressure. The high numbers of civilian casualties in the city during the conflict clearly illustrate the enormity of the danger they were exposed to.

4597. As also discussed in the preceding sections of the Judgement,¹⁵⁴⁷⁷ the fire SRK opened on Sarajevo was deliberate fire, often used to directly target civilians and civilian objects in the city, including hospitals and trams.¹⁵⁴⁷⁸ This is particularly the case with respect to the sniping incidents discussed earlier in the Judgement, which by their very nature could have been nothing but deliberate attacks on civilians.¹⁵⁴⁷⁹ In addition, the shelling by the SRK forces was in most cases either indiscriminate or disproportionate and sometimes both, resulting in a high casualty count among the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴⁸⁰

4598. The Chamber rejects the evidence of Defence witnesses, outlined in this section and in the preceding sections of this Judgement,¹⁵⁴⁸¹ that civilians in Sarajevo were neither deliberately targeted by the SRK forces nor victims of indiscriminate or disproportionate fire. As already indicated in some of the preceding sections of this Judgement, the Chamber found their evidence to be self-serving and far-fetched, designed to blindly absolve the SRK of any responsibility for most (or, in some cases, all) civilian casualties in the city. In the Chamber's view, the credibility of these witnesses, particularly the former SRK members and expert witnesses Subotić and Poparić, was seriously undermined by their descriptions of the SRK's campaign in Sarajevo. Their evidence is in stark contrast with the evidence of those living or working in Sarajevo during the siege, both local citizens and international observers, and with the evidence of high civilian casualty count in the city, particularly women, children, and the elderly. The falsity of their evidence is further illustrated by the specific sniping and shelling incidents discussed above in which the SRK was found to have been deliberately targeting the civilians or opening indiscriminate and/or disproportionate fire on the city.¹⁵⁴⁸² Further, the claims of SRK witnesses that they only fired at military targets and with principle of distinction firmly etched in their mind, have also been consistently denied by many Prosecution witnesses. One of the more striking of those was the evidence of Bell who stated that of all the conflicts he covered, the conflict in Sarajevo was one where least distinction was made between civilians and combatants.¹⁵⁴⁸³

4599. The Chamber accepts the Accused's claim that the civilians on the Bosnian Serb side of the confrontation line also felt terror and experienced hardship due to wartime circumstances. However, the Chamber does not accept the implication of this argument, namely that the terror felt in Sarajevo was a normal state experienced by everyone in times of war. While it is indeed to be expected for any civilian population to be scared during chaotic times of war, the situation of the civilians living in Sarajevo was unique due to the siege perpetrated by the SRK. It was also different to that of the civilians in Bosnian Serb-held areas. The Chamber recalls here and accepts as accurate the evidence of Bowen who testified that the people in the SRK-held areas at least "had access to decent food and a way out" and that their existence was not as fraught with danger as that of the people confined within the city.¹⁵⁴⁸⁴ Furthermore, as testified to by some SRK witnesses, the SRK often moved Bosnian Serb civilians away from the confrontation lines in order to avoid civilian casualties.¹⁵⁴⁸⁵ The civilians living in Sarajevo, however, did not have that luxury and had no choice but to stay within the confrontation lines in the city.

4600. Accordingly, on the basis of all the evidence in this case, the Chamber is convinced that the SRK conducted a campaign of shelling and sniping of the city, including of its civilian population, with the intention to, inter alia, terrorise the civilian population of Sarajevo. Furthermore, the SRK's use of modified air bombs towards the end of the conflict was clearly aimed at terrorising the citizens as part of the strategy to demoralise the ABiH soldiers and, as such, is one of the clearest examples of the intention to terrorise.¹⁵⁴⁸⁶ Similarly, every single sniping incident in which a civilian was targeted by SRK snipers, including the specific sniping incidents discussed earlier in the Judgement, is an example of deliberate intention on behalf of the SRK forces to terrorise the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴⁸⁷

4601. This intention to terrorise can also be inferred from the pattern in which the terror was applied to the city. For example, it is clear, as explained by Harland and illustrated in the chronology of the events in Sarajevo, that the sniping and the shelling of the civilians in the city would ease whenever there was an explicit threat of intervention by NATO but would then increase as soon as that threat subsided or in retaliation for ABiH offensives.¹⁵⁴⁸⁸ One of the most illustrative examples of this is the aftermath of the first Markale incident in February 1994. Similarly, the evidence shows that events elsewhere in BiH had an effect on the level of terror in the city, thus again showing intentional use of sniping and shelling to terrorise the civilian population. Given these patterns, the Chamber is convinced that terror was used intentionally by the SRK forces, both to demoralise the civilian population and to retaliate during times of ABiH offensives in the city and elsewhere. The SRK wanted to show to the Sarajevo residents that no one was safe and that they were helpless.¹⁵⁴⁸⁹

4602. The Chamber notes that throughout the case the Accused tendered into evidence a large body of SRK orders and combat reports in order to show that the situation in Sarajevo was one of war, waged equally by both sides. His aim was also to show that the ABiH forces constantly launched attacks on the SRK-held territory, thereby provoking a response which was always selective and proportionate. The Chamber has referred to many of these documents throughout the Judgement. It has also considered them all in coming to the conclusions outlined in this section. However, the Chamber found their value to be fairly limited in terms of the ultimate findings outlined in this section. While noting the location and the nature of the various attacks by the ABiH forces, including the number and types of mortar shells fired for example, these combat reports and orders provide very little information about the nature of the response the SRK units engaged in, which was one of the main issues in this case.¹⁵⁴⁹⁰ In other words, aside from stating that the SRK returned fire when attacked (or sometimes refrained from returning fire), these documents rarely provide any information on the specific weaponry used to return fire, or the quantity of fire used. They also rarely specify the exact locations targeted by the SRK in response to the ABiH fire and make no mention of most of the scheduled sniping or shelling incidents listed in the Indictment.¹⁵⁴⁹¹ All of this makes any analysis regarding proportionality and selective nature of the SRK response on the basis of these reports impossible. At the same time, given the level of detail as to the activities of the ABiH forces, down to the quantity and calibre of mortar shells the ABiH forces would fire, these documents illustrate that the ABiH engaged mainly in small scale attacks, often using sniper or firearms or limited small calibre mortar fire, and often along the limited number of confrontation lines.¹⁵⁴⁹² As such, and contrary to the Accused's aim, these SRK orders and combat reports do not counter the evidence of Prosecution witnesses who testified that the SRK responses to ABiH fire were disproportionate and indiscriminate and at times not connected to ABiH attacks at all. They do in turn seem to be consistent with the evidence of the Prosecution witnesses who testified about the limited nature of ABiH attacks due to the ABiH inferior position in terms of heavy weaponry.

4603. The Chamber recalls that the Defence witnesses also claimed that there were no purely civilian areas in the city and/or that the ABiH was at fault for civilian casualties within the city as it did not move the population away from the military targets. However, as found in relation to various scheduled incidents above, the Chamber considers that the presence of certain military facilities in the city did not immediately convert the whole city or its residential areas into military targets or justified indiscriminate attacks by the SRK. Furthermore, while ABiH command posts were indeed present in the city, the evidence shows that the SRK did not seriously target them and/or try to destroy them with sustained fire, despite being aware of their exact location.¹⁵⁴⁹³

4604. It is worth noting that the intermingling of ABiH forces and facilities with civilians and civilian objects in Sarajevo was mainly due to the nature of the siege and the confrontation lines around Sarajevo. The ABiH sometimes had no choice but to locate its command posts and some of its forces among the civilian population. The claim of the SRK soldiers and officers that ABiH forces should therefore be blamed for all the casualties caused by the SRK fire in the city is not only disingenuous but also illustrates the reckless attitude these soldiers and officers ultimately exhibited towards the fate of the civilian inhabitants of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴⁹⁴ Additionally, while possible that at times the SRK units found it difficult to distinguish between soldiers and civilians in the city, the Chamber notes that international humanitarian law dictates that in such cases they should have assumed that the individuals in question were civilians.¹⁵⁴⁹⁵

4605. Thus, for all the reasons outlined above, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK forces embarked on a campaign of shelling and sniping of civilians in Sarajevo in order to terrorise those civilians.¹⁵⁴⁹⁶

a. Chapeau requirements for Articles 3 and 5 of the Statute

4606. In the Sarajevo component of the case, the Accused is charged with three counts of violations of the laws or customs of war under Article 3 of the Statute, namely murder, terror, and unlawful attacks on civilians, as well as with one count of crimes against humanity under Article 5 of the Statute, namely murder.¹⁵⁴⁹⁷ The Prosecution alleges that there was a state of armed conflict at all times relevant to the Indictment.¹⁵⁴⁹⁸ It also claims that all acts and omissions charged as crimes against humanity that formed part of the sniping and shelling campaign were part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁴⁹⁹

i. Article 3

4607. The Chamber found that there was an armed conflict in BiH throughout the period relevant to the crimes alleged in the Indictment. In Sarajevo, at the latest by early April 1992, heavy firing had erupted in and around the city, and my mid-April shelling had begun.¹⁵⁵⁰⁰

4608. For each of the crimes charged under Article 3 of the Statute in relation to the Sarajevo component of the case, namely murder, terror, and unlawful attacks on civilians, the Chamber has examined whether they were closely related to the armed conflict.¹⁵⁵⁰¹

4609. In relation to the four so called “Tadić Conditions”,¹⁵⁵⁰² the Chamber refers to the applicable law sections of this Judgement, which expanded on the legal basis for each of the crimes

¹⁵⁴⁹⁵ See para. 457 (citing to Dragomir Milošević Appeal Judgement, para. 60).

¹⁵⁴⁹⁶ While the Prosecution alleged that Sarajevo Forces were responsible for the campaign of sniping and shelling, the Chamber is unable to conclude that forces other than the SRK were responsible for the sniping and the shelling of civilians in Sarajevo.

¹⁵⁴⁹⁷ See para. 5.

charged in the Indictment under Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁵⁵⁰³ In relation to murder, the prohibition stems from Common Article 3 which is deemed to be part of customary international law.¹⁵⁵⁰⁴ Further, the Appeals Chamber has confirmed that violations of the provisions of Common Article 3 entail individual criminal responsibility.¹⁵⁵⁰⁵ In relation to terror, as mentioned above, the Appeals Chamber has confirmed that the prohibition of terror is part of customary law.¹⁵⁵⁰⁶ The Appeals Chamber also held that this offence incurs individual criminal responsibility.¹⁵⁵⁰⁷ Finally the Appeals Chamber has recognised that the prohibition of unlawful attacks on civilians reflects customary international law.¹⁵⁵⁰⁸ It further held that individual criminal responsibility is incurred for unlawful attacks on civilians if the attacks have resulted in death or serious injury to body or health of the victims in question.¹⁵⁵⁰⁹ The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the four Tadić Conditions are met, and consequently that the chapeau requirements for Article 3 of the Statute are fulfilled, in relation to all of the relevant offences charged in the Indictment.

ii. Article 5

4610. As found above, there was an armed conflict in BiH throughout the period of the Indictment. The Chamber is also satisfied that the evidence demonstrates that there was a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population of Sarajevo. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the means and method used in the course of the attack, the status of the victims,¹⁵⁵¹⁰ and their number. The SRK carried out a series of acts of sniping and shelling between May 1992 and August 1995 that deliberately targeted civilians and civilian areas in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁵¹¹ Over a period of more than three years, in different locations throughout Sarajevo, there were many sniping and shelling acts conducted by members of the SRK and which resulted in the deaths and injury of a high number of civilians. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the attack on the civilian population of Sarajevo was both widespread and systematic.

¹⁵⁵⁰⁴ Čelebići Appeal Judgement, para. 143.

¹⁵⁵⁰⁵ Čelebići Appeal Judgement, paras. 167, 170, 173–174 (holding at para. 173: “It is universally acknowledged that the acts enumerated in common Article 3 are wrongful and shock the conscience of civilised people, and thus are, in the language of Article 15(2) of the ICCPR, ‘criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations’.”).

¹⁵⁵⁰⁸ See para. 458.

¹⁵⁵⁰⁹ Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 67. See also para. 455.

¹⁵⁵¹⁰ The Chamber recalls that a population may qualify as civilian as long as it is predominantly civilian and as such considers that the population of the urban areas inside the confrontation lines of Sarajevo between 1992 and 1995 had civilian status as a whole.

¹⁵⁵¹¹ See Sections IV.B.1.b: Sniping; IV.B.1.c: Shelling.

4611. The Chamber is therefore also satisfied that the chapeau requirements for murder charged under Article 5 of the Statute are met.

b. Crimes

i. Murder: Counts 5 and 6

(A) Sniping and shelling incidents

4612. The Chamber recalls its findings in Sections IV.B.1.b and IV.B.1.c above, namely that individuals were killed in Sarajevo by sniping or shelling by Serb Forces, specifically the SRK.¹⁵⁵¹²

4613. The Chamber recalls that it found that six children were killed as a result of an explosion caused by three shells on 22 January 1994 but that it could not conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the fire came from SRK positions and therefore that Serb Forces were responsible.¹⁵⁵¹³ The Chamber also recalls that it received evidence of one person dying in the shelling of 28 and 29 May 1992 but was unable to determine whether he was taking direct part in hostilities when killed.¹⁵⁵¹⁴

(B) Intent of perpetrators

4614. The Chamber recalls its findings that the death of the victims in the incidents recalled above was a result of the acts of Serb Forces, specifically the SRK.¹⁵⁵¹⁵ The Chamber finds that the perpetrators of each of these incidents acted with the intent to kill the victims or at least wilfully caused serious injury or grievous bodily harm, which they should reasonably have known might lead to death.

¹⁵⁵¹² The killing of Munira Zametica (Scheduled Incident F.3); the killing of Nermin Divović (Scheduled Incident F.12); the killing of a number of people between 5 and 8 June 1992 (Scheduled Incident G.2); the killing of at least 12 people, seven of whom were soldiers (Scheduled Incident G.4); the killing of 14 people (Scheduled Incident G.5); the killing of eight people (Scheduled Incident G.7); the killing of at least 67 people, by majority, Judge Baird dissenting (Scheduled Incident G.8); the killing of two people (Scheduled Incident G.9); the killing of Ziba Čustović (Scheduled Incident G.10); the killing of four people (Scheduled Incidents G.11 and G.12); the killing of 43 people, one of whom was a soldier (Scheduled Incident G.19). The Chamber notes that in the following Scheduled Incidents, the Prosecution alleged that individuals were injured but not killed as a result of the incidents: Scheduled Incidents F.1, F.2, F.4–F.11, F.14–F.17 and Scheduled Incidents G.13–G.15.

¹⁵⁵¹³ See Scheduled Incident G.6.

¹⁵⁵¹⁴ See Scheduled Incident G.1, fn. 13408. Similarly, the Chamber received evidence of a number of people dying in Scheduled Incident G.2 but was unable to determine whether some of them were taking part in hostilities when killed. See Scheduled Incident G.2, fn. 13481 (wherein the Chamber lists only those for whom it was sure that they were not participating in hostilities at the time and that they were civilians).

¹⁵⁵¹⁵ The Chamber notes that this excludes Scheduled Incident G.6 as the Chamber was unable to determine, on the basis of evidence before it, who the perpetrators were. The Chamber also recalls, with respect to Scheduled Shelling Incident G.8, that the finding that the SRK was responsible was reached by majority, Judge Baird dissenting.

4615. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the circumstances and the manner in which the victims were killed. With respect to the Scheduled Sniping Incidents, the Chamber found in all instances that the victims were deliberately targeted.¹⁵⁵¹⁶ More specifically in relation to Sniping Incident F.3, the Chamber recalls its findings that the perpetrator bracketed the distance immediately prior to the incident and that the perpetrator shot the victim and then repeatedly shot towards her. In relation to Sniping Incident F.12, the Chamber found that the victim and his mother were shot at a crossing where there were no soldiers and at a time when there was no combat in the area and a cease-fire was in place.

4616. With respect to the Scheduled Shelling Incidents, the Chamber also found that the victims were either deliberately targeted or were the victims of indiscriminate and/or disproportionate attacks by the SRK. The Chamber recalls, for example, its findings in relation to Shelling Incident G.5 that only one shell was fired and landed at a well-known emergency water point in the yard of a private house, that the area around the well was shelled again later during the conflict, and that the nearest military presence was too far away from the incident site to explain the firing of the particular shell. In relation to Shelling Incident G.7, the shells exploded in a residential neighbourhood where humanitarian aid was being distributed and a large number of people had gathered waiting for the aid; there was no combat or military presence at the time. In relation to Shelling Incident G.9, only two shells were fired and they exploded on a flea market in a residential area and there was no military target in or near the area at the time. In relation to Scheduled Shelling Incidents G.10, G.11, and G.12, the Chamber noted the indiscriminate nature of the weapon used by the SRK. In relation to Markale incidents, the Chamber found that the SRK fired only one shell in an area it knew housed no military targets and with reckless disregard as to potential civilian victims.¹⁵⁵¹⁷ Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that the only reasonable inference to be drawn from the circumstances and the manner in which the victims were killed is that the perpetrators had the intent to kill.

(C) Status of victims

4617. The Chamber recalls its findings that the large majority of the victims in these incidents were civilians who were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incidents; otherwise they were part of a civilian population at the time of the incident.¹⁵⁵¹⁸

¹⁵⁵¹⁶ See paras. 3809, 3728.

¹⁵⁵¹⁷ With respect to the Scheduled Shelling Incident G.8, however, this finding was that of a majority, as Judge Baird was not satisfied that the SRK fired the shell in question.

¹⁵⁵¹⁸ The Chamber recalls that those killed in Scheduled Incident G.4 included seven ABiH soldiers while one of those killed in the second Markale shelling was a soldier. In both cases they were located in residential areas,

(D) Conclusion

4618. In addition to the findings in this section, the Chamber refers to its finding that there was an armed conflict in BiH during the period relevant to the Indictment. The Chamber further finds that the killings referred to above are closely related to that armed conflict. The Chamber finds that the Scheduled Incidents referred to above,¹⁵⁵¹⁹ constitute murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war against civilians.¹⁵⁵²⁰

4619. The Chamber refers to its findings above that there was a widespread and systematic attack directed against the civilian population of Sarajevo. The Chamber finds that the killings referred to above were part of this widespread and systematic attack and thus constitute murder as a crime against humanity.¹⁵⁵²¹ In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considered the locations, time period, and the status of the victims of these killings, which correspond to the scope of the widespread and systematic attack. Further, given the length, the magnitude, and the intensity of the attack on the civilian populations of Sarajevo, the Chamber finds that the perpetrators knew of the attack and that the killings were part of it.

ii. Unlawful attack on civilians: Count 9

(A) Acts of violence causing death or serious injury to body or health

4620. The Chamber recalls its findings in Sections IV.B.1.b: Sniping and IV.B.1.c: Shelling above that individuals were injured and/or killed in Sarajevo by sniping or shelling by Serb Forces, specifically the SRK.¹⁵⁵²² The Chamber finds that these constitute acts of violence causing death or where a large number of civilians had gathered. The Chamber also recalls that it was unable to determine (i) the status of the person killed in Scheduled Incident G.1 and (ii) the status of some of the individuals killed in Scheduled Incident G.2.

¹⁵⁵¹⁹ See fn. 15512.

¹⁵⁵²⁰ The Chamber will not enter convictions under Count 6 for the seven soldiers killed in Scheduled Incident G.4 and one soldier who died in Scheduled Incident G.19 as they did not lay down their arms nor were they placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention, or any other cause. Similarly, it will not enter convictions under Count 6 in relation to (i) Scheduled Incident G.1 as it was not able to determine the status of the person killed during that shelling, and (ii) a number of people killed in Scheduled Incident G.2 as it was unable to determine their status.

¹⁵⁵²¹ The Chamber will not enter convictions under Count 5 in relation to soldiers who died in Shelling Incidents G.4 and G.19 as the Chamber is not satisfied that they had been placed hors de combat when they were killed. Similarly, it will not enter convictions under Count 5 in relation to (i) Scheduled Incident G.1 as it was not able to determine the status of the person killed during that shelling, and (ii) a number of people killed in Scheduled Incident G.2 as it was unable to determine their status.

¹⁵⁵²² The wounding of Anisa Pita (Scheduled Incident F.1); the wounding of a nine-year-old girl (Scheduled Incident F.2); the killing of Munira Zametica (Scheduled Incident F.3); the wounding of Nafa and Elma Tarić (Scheduled Incident F.4); the wounding of Sanija Dževlan (Scheduled Incident F.6); the wounding of Damir Kučinar, Mensur Jusić, and Belma Sukić née Likić (Scheduled Incident F.8); the wounding of Sanela Muratović (Scheduled Incident F.9); the wounding of Seid Solak (Scheduled Incident F.10); the wounding of Alma Ćutuna (Scheduled Incident F.11); the wounding of Dženana Sokolović and killing of Nermin Divović (Scheduled Incident F.12); the wounding of Afeza Karačić and Sabina Šabanić (Scheduled Incident F.14); the wounding of serious injury to body or health. For example, the Chamber recalls shelling incidents that took place in Markale market on 5 February 1994 and 28 August 1995 and during which horrific injuries were caused to a large number of people as illustrated by the video footage of those incidents.¹⁵⁵²³

4621. The Chamber notes that, with respect to Scheduled Incidents F.5, F.7, and G.6, it was not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that fire had come from SRK positions and therefore could not conclude that Serb Forces were responsible.

(B) Directed against a civilian population or individual civilians

4622. The Chamber recalls its findings that, with the exception of Scheduled Incidents F.5 and F.7, the victims of sniping were deliberately targeted by the SRK. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber considered, for example, that the distance between the incident site and the location from which the shot was fired would have required a skilful shot on the part of the shooter.¹⁵⁵²⁴ For some incidents, there were additional shots after the victims had been hit, such as for example when the victims were being driven to the hospital.¹⁵⁵²⁵ Similarly, in relation to Scheduled Incidents F.8, F.11, F.14, F.15, and F.16, respectively, the Chamber considered, inter alia, that the tram was struck by one bullet only; the tram concerned and the tram behind it were shot and struck in the same location and then fire was opened again in that same location at a number of people trying to leave the area; SRK snipers in the relevant area either had an unobstructed view of the incident site or there was sufficient visibility between the location from which the shot was fired and the incident site.

4623. The Chamber also found that, with the exception of Scheduled Incident G.6, the victims of shelling were deliberately targeted by the SRK or were victims of indiscriminate or Alma Mulaosmanović-Čehajić, Alija Holjan, and three others (Scheduled Incident F.15); the wounding of Azem Agović and Alen Gičević (Scheduled Incident F.16); the wounding of Tarik Žunić (Scheduled Incident F.17); the wounding of a number of people (Scheduled Incident G.1); the wounding and death of a number of people (Scheduled Incident G.2); the wounding of 122 people, at least 12 of whom died as a result of their injuries (Scheduled Incident G.4); the killing of 14 people and wounding of 13 people (Scheduled Incident G.5); the killing of eight people and wounding of 18 people (Scheduled Incident G.7); the killing of at least 67 people and the wounding of over 140 people, Judge Baird dissenting as to the identity of the perpetrators (Scheduled Incident G.8); the killing of two and wounding of seven people (Scheduled Incident G.9); the killing of Ziba Čustović and the wounding of three other people (Scheduled Incident G.10); the killing of four and wounding of 11 people (Scheduled Incidents G.11 and G.12); the wounding of 16 people, two seriously and 14 lightly (Scheduled Incident G.13); the wounding of 3 people (Scheduled Incident G.14); the wounding of seven people (Scheduled Incident G.15); the killing of 43 and the wounding of at least 70 people (Scheduled Incident G.19).

¹⁵⁵²³ As noted earlier, the findings in relation to Scheduled Incident G.8 were reached by majority, Judge Baird dissenting.

¹⁵⁵²⁴ See e.g. Scheduled Incidents F.1, F.2, F.17.

¹⁵⁵²⁵ See e.g. Scheduled Incident F.2 (the car taking the victim to the hospital was also shot at); Scheduled Incident F.4 (there were two shots after the bullet hit the victims); Scheduled Incident F.17 (a shot was fired at and hit the car carrying the victim as it pulled away from her house).

disproportionate attacks.¹⁵⁵²⁶ In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber considered, for example, in relation to Scheduled Incidents G.5 and G.9 that only one or two shells were fired and landed in a civilian area and there was no military target nearby. In relation to Scheduled Incident G.7, the shells exploded in a residential neighbourhood where humanitarian aid was being distributed and a large number of people had gathered waiting for the aid; there was no combat or military presence at the time. Similarly, in relation to Scheduled Incidents G.8 and G.19, a large number of civilians had gathered to buy goods and there were no military targets in the vicinity of the incident sites. For all the incidents that involved indiscriminate or disproportionate fire by the SRK, the Chamber is satisfied that the only reasonable inference that can be made is that the attacks were directed against civilians.¹⁵⁵²⁷

4624. The Chamber further found that the large majority of the victims of the Scheduled Incidents were civilians who were not taking direct part in hostilities at the time of the incidents. In relation to Scheduled Incident F.15, the Chamber did not consider the presence of one ABiH soldier on the tram to change the fact that on the day of the incident the tram was a civilian vehicle used to transport civilians. The Chamber recalls that the casualties of Scheduled Incident G.4 included ABiH soldiers but that they were off-duty and involved in or watching a football game together with a large number of civilians. Similarly, one casualty in Scheduled Incident G.19 was found to have been a soldier who was at the Markale market together with a large number of civilians. Accordingly, the presence of these soldiers did not change the character of the population at the game and in the market, respectively, and thus does not undermine the Chamber's conclusion that the attacks in those two incidents were directed against a civilian population.

4625. The Chamber also described the deaths and the wounding of a large number of civilian victims in relation to each incident and thus finds that the victims of those incidents either died or suffered serious injuries.

(C) Intent of perpetrators

4626. The Chamber found that the perpetrators of the Scheduled Incidents were aware or should have been aware of the civilian status of the persons attacked and/or the lack of military targets in the areas subjected to mortar and artillery fire. In reaching these conclusions in relation to ¹⁵⁵²⁶ The Chamber recalls that Judge Baird dissented in relation to Scheduled Incident G.8.

¹⁵⁵²⁷ For example, in relation to incidents involving modified air bombs, namely Scheduled Incidents G.10—G.15, the Chamber considers that the indiscriminate nature of the weapon which was used in residential areas qualifies those incidents as attacks directed against the civilian population of Sarajevo. With respect to Scheduled Incident G.4, the Chamber found that the firing of the two shells at an event at which a large number of civilians had gathered constituted indiscriminate fire. Accordingly it is satisfied that, in launching this type of attack, the SRK deliberately targeted civilians.

Scheduled Sniping Incidents, the Chamber considered, for example, that the victim's appearance, location, and/or activity—such as a child wearing civilian clothes standing in the doorway or front yard of her house,¹⁵⁵²⁸ an adult woman collecting water at a river,¹⁵⁵²⁹ a woman in civilian clothes cycling,¹⁵⁵³⁰ or a woman with two children crossing a street during a period of cease-fire¹⁵⁵³¹—and the sight and distances involved in the given Sniping Incident, would have made the victim or victims identifiable as civilians to the shooter. For the Sniping Incidents in which the target was a tram, the Chamber found that the shooter would have known that the tram was a civilian vehicle carrying civilians.¹⁵⁵³² With respect to the Scheduled Shelling Incidents, the Chamber considered that the nature of the area, with no military targets in the immediate vicinity of the incident sites such as in the case of Markale market for example, and the activities in which the victims were engaged therein would have identified them as civilian objects and/or individual civilians.¹⁵⁵³³ In addition, the Chamber is satisfied that in the case of indiscriminate and/or disproportionate attacks, such as those involving modified air bombs for example,¹⁵⁵³⁴ the perpetrators who opened fire should have known that that the attack would result in civilian casualties.

4627. The Chamber finds that the perpetrators in the Scheduled Incidents above wilfully carried out the acts of violence referred to above and made the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object thereof.

(D) Conclusion

4628. In addition to the findings in this section, the Chamber refers to its finding that there was an armed conflict in BiH during the period relevant to the Indictment. The Chamber further finds that the acts of violence referred to above are closely related to that armed conflict. As such, the Scheduled Incidents discussed above constitute unlawful attacks on civilians as a violation of the laws or customs of war.¹⁵⁵³⁵

¹⁵⁵³³ See Scheduled Incidents G.4, G.5, G.7, G.8, G.9, G.19. The Chamber recalls that Judge Baird dissents with respect to Scheduled Incident G.8.

¹⁵⁵³⁴ See Scheduled Incidents G.10 to G.15.

¹⁵⁵³⁵ This excludes Scheduled Incidents F.5, F.7, and G.6 for which the Chamber was unable to determine, on the basis of the evidence presented, the identity of the perpetrators. The Chamber also recalls here that Judge Baird issued a dissent in relation to Scheduled Incident G.8.

iii. Terror: Count 10

(A) Acts of violence directed against a civilian population or individual civilians

4629. The Chamber refers to its findings above that the cited Scheduled Incidents, with the exception of F.5, F.7, and G.6, constitute acts of violence directed against a civilian population or individual civilians causing serious injury to body or health and/or death.

4630. The Chamber also recalls its finding that the civilian population of Sarajevo and individual civilians therein experienced extreme fear, anxiety, and other serious psychological effects resulting from the campaign of sniping and shelling by the SRK.¹⁵⁵³⁶ Indeed, the Chamber found above that the citizens of Sarajevo in fact felt terrorised during the siege of their city.¹⁵⁵³⁷ The Chamber finds that this psychological harm formed part of the acts of violence directed against a civilian population or individual civilians in Sarajevo.

(B) Intent of perpetrators

4631. The Chamber recalls that the crime of terror requires both general and specific intent. With respect to general intent, the Chamber refers to its findings above in relation to unlawful attacks that the perpetrators wilfully made the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of acts of violence in the form of the cited Scheduled Incidents.¹⁵⁵³⁸

4632. The Chamber also finds that the perpetrators intended to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo and that the infliction of terror was the primary purpose of the acts of violence directed against the civilian population upon which the Chamber has made findings above. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber had regard to the nature, manner, timing, location, and duration of the acts of violence, as well as its finding that the civilians in Sarajevo were in fact terrorised by the SRK. The Chamber considered that some sniping and shelling attacks were carried out during times of cease-fire or during quiet periods, when civilians thought it was safe to walk around and when trams were operating.¹⁵⁵³⁹ In some instances, individual civilians were targeted while at their homes and there was no fighting in the area at the time,¹⁵⁵⁴⁰ or while they walked or cycled about the streets with no fighting in the area at the time.¹⁵⁵⁴¹ The Chamber also considered that civilians were targeted at sites known to be areas where civilians went to or gathered for activities,¹⁵⁵⁴² such as collecting water,¹⁵⁵⁴³ receiving humanitarian aid,¹⁵⁵⁴⁴ commercial activity,¹⁵⁵⁴⁵ and, in the case of trams, taking public transportation.¹⁵⁵⁴⁶

¹⁵⁵³⁹ See Scheduled Incidents F.8, F.9, F.11, F.12, F.14, F.15, F.16. The Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber affirmed the Milošević Trial Chamber's consideration of attacks during cease-fires as an indicator of the intent to spread terror. See Dragomir Milošević Appeal Judgement, para. 37; Dragomir Milošević Trial Judgement, para. 881.

¹⁵⁵⁴⁰ See e.g. Scheduled Incidents F.1, F.2, F.17, G.2, G.10, G.11.

4633. In determining the existence of the intent to spread terror, the Chamber also considered the indiscriminate nature of some of the shelling attacks.¹⁵⁵⁴⁷ For example, the Chamber recalls its finding that the SRK launched highly destructive modified air bombs on the city, the indiscriminate nature of which was known to the SRK units, as described earlier.¹⁵⁵⁴⁸ These bombs were used in Scheduled Incidents G.10, G.11, G.12, G.13, G.14, and G.15. The Chamber also recalls that it found, in relation to Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2 that the SRK launched disproportionate and indiscriminate shelling attacks on the city resulting in a number of casualties. Further, the Chamber also found, in relation to Scheduled Incident G.5, that firing two shells, which are designed to suppress activity over a wide area, at a football match where a large number of civilians were gathered to watch, and at a time when there was no ongoing combat, constituted deliberate targeting of a civilian area or at the very least indiscriminate fire.

4634. The intent to spread terror was also demonstrated by the duration of the campaign of sniping and shelling, which started in late May 1992 and continued through much of 1995 and many other incidents of shelling and sniping recounted in Section IV.B.1.a. It was also demonstrated through the evidence of a multitude of witnesses on the general nature and pattern of the SRK's sniping and shelling practices in the city.

(C) Conclusion

4635. In addition to the findings in this section, the Chamber refers to its finding that there was an armed conflict in BiH during the period relevant to the Indictment. The Chamber further finds that ¹⁵⁵⁴¹ See Scheduled Incidents F.4, F.6, F.10.

¹⁵⁵⁴² The Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber affirmed the Milošević Trial Chamber's consideration of targeting and attacks of civilians "at sites, well-known to be frequented by them during their daily activities, such as market places, water distribution points, on public transport, and so on" as indicia of the intent to spread terror. See Dragomir Milošević Appeal Judgement, para. 37; Dragomir Milošević Trial Judgement, para. 881.

¹⁵⁵⁴³ See Scheduled Incidents F.3, G.5.

¹⁵⁵⁴⁵ See Scheduled Incidents G.8, G.9, G.19.

¹⁵⁵⁴⁶ See Scheduled Incidents F.8, F.11, F.14, F.15, F.16. The Chamber also found, in relation to these incidents, that no military vehicles were present in the close vicinity of the incident sites and no military activity was underway in the area.

¹⁵⁵⁴⁷ The Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber affirmed the Dragomir Milošević Trial Chamber's consideration of the indiscriminate nature of attack as a factor in determining specific intent for terror. See para. 454.

¹⁵⁵⁴⁸ See paras. 4363, 4379–4380.

the acts of violence referred to above were closely related to that armed conflict. The Chamber therefore finds that the Scheduled Incidents above constitute terror.¹⁵⁵⁴⁹

3. Sarajevo JCE and the Accused's responsibility

4636. The Accused is charged under Articles 7(1) and 7(3) of the Statute for his alleged role in the crimes committed in the city of Sarajevo between April 1992 and November 1995. Specifically, he is said to be responsible for murder, a crime against humanity and a violation of the laws or customs of war (Counts 5 and 6 respectively); acts of violence the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among civilian population ("terror"), a violation of the laws or customs of war (Count 9); and unlawful attacks on civilians, a violation of the laws or customs of war (Count 10).¹⁵⁵⁵⁰

4637. According to the Indictment, the Accused committed these crimes by virtue of his participation in a JCE to "establish and carry out a campaign of sniping and shelling against the civilian population of Sarajevo, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population" ("Sarajevo JCE").¹⁵⁵⁵¹ This objective is said to have involved the commission of the crimes of murder, terror, and unlawful attacks.¹⁵⁵⁵² The Indictment further avers that the Accused shared the intent for the commission of each of these crimes with others¹⁵⁵⁵³ who acted in concert with him in the Sarajevo JCE, including, among others, Momčilo Krajišnik, Ratko Mladić, Biljana Plavšić, Nikola Koljević, Stanislav Galić, Dragomir Milošević, and Vojislav Šešelj.¹⁵⁵⁵⁴ The said members allegedly implemented their objective by personally committing crimes and/or by using the Sarajevo Forces to carry out those crimes.¹⁵⁵⁵⁵

¹⁵⁵⁴⁹ As with unlawful attacks on civilians, the Chamber excludes here Scheduled Incidents F.5, F.7 and G.6 as it was unable to determine who was responsible for them. The Chamber also recalls that Judge Baird appended a dissent in relation to Scheduled Incident G.8.

¹⁵⁵⁵⁰ Indictment, paras. 65, 76–82.

¹⁵⁵⁵² Indictment, paras. 15, 77.

¹⁵⁵⁵³ Accordingly, the Sarajevo JCE falls into the first or basic category of joint criminal enterprise where all participants acting pursuant to a common purpose possess the same criminal intention to effectuate that purpose, which in turn involves the commission of murder, terror, and unlawful attacks on civilians. In other words, the Prosecution does not allege that it was foreseeable that some of the crimes charged with regards to Sarajevo might be perpetrated by one or more members of the Sarajevo JCE or by persons they used in order to carry out the actus reus of crimes forming the objective of Sarajevo JCE.

¹⁵⁵⁵⁴ Indictment, para. 16. Other alleged members of the Sarajevo JCE are listed in paragraph 17 of the Indictment and include, among others, commanders and senior officers of JNA, VRS, TO, and MUP units responsible for the Sarajevo area.

4638. The Prosecution claims that the Accused significantly contributed to achieving the objective of spreading terror through a campaign of sniping and shelling in a number of ways set out in paragraph 14 (a)–(f), (h)–(j) of the Indictment.¹⁵⁵⁵⁶

4639. The Prosecution also avers that, in addition to his liability through his participation in the Sarajevo JCE, the Accused is criminally responsible for planning, instigating, ordering, and/or aiding and abetting the said crimes.¹⁵⁵⁵⁷ Furthermore, he is alleged to be criminally responsible as a superior as he knew or had reason to know that crimes would be or had been committed but nevertheless failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent them and/or to punish the perpetrators thereof.¹⁵⁵⁵⁸

4640. The Chamber will now turn to its assessment of the individual criminal responsibility of the Accused in relation to the events in Sarajevo, in particular the commission through JCE and the issue of whether there was a common plan, design or purpose, as alleged in the Indictment.

4641. As outlined in the Applicable Law section of this Judgement, in order to find an accused criminally responsible on the basis of his participation in the first or basic category of JCE, the Chamber must be satisfied that there existed a common plan, design or purpose which amounts to or involves a commission of crimes, that there was a plurality of persons who acted pursuant to that common purpose, and that the Accused significantly contributed to that common purpose through either his acts or his omissions.¹⁵⁵⁵⁹ In addition, the Prosecution must prove that the Accused shared the intent to effect the common purpose of the JCE and had the relevant mens rea for the crime with which he is charged.¹⁵⁵⁶⁰

a. The existence of a common plan

4642. The existence of a common plan can be inferred from the fact that plurality of persons acted in unison; furthermore, the plan need not be previously arranged or formulated but may materialise extemporaneously.¹⁵⁵⁶¹ According to the Prosecution, the campaign of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo resulted from a common criminal plan emanating “from the top of the Bosnians Serb political and military hierarchy”.¹⁵⁵⁶² The Prosecution claims that this is evidenced by the (a)

nature and pattern of sniping and shelling attacks against civilians; (b) strict command and control of the SRK snipers, mortars, and other artillery; (c) longevity of the campaign; and (d) personal involvement of the Accused and Mladić in Sarajevo events.¹⁵⁵⁶³

4644. The Chamber has already made a number of findings in the preceding sections of the Judgement relating to the campaign of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo. The Chamber found that the SRK besieged the city and then engaged in a campaign of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo, which lasted roughly from late May 1992 until October 1995 when hostilities in Sarajevo ceased.¹⁵⁵⁶⁷ As also found above, during this campaign the SRK targeted civilians in Sarajevo either directly or through the launching of indiscriminate and disproportionate attacks all over the city, resulting in thousands of wounded and killed civilians.¹⁵⁵⁶⁸ In addition, the Chamber concluded that the SRK conducted the said campaign of sniping and shelling with the intention to terrorise the civilian population and that it conducted the siege of the city with a number of objectives in mind, all outlined in the directives issued by the Main Staff and/or the Accused, including the objective of keeping the city under firm blockade and creating conditions for the Bosnian Serb leadership to participate “equally” in negotiations with the other sides and international community.¹⁵⁵⁶⁹

4645. The question then is whether or not this campaign of sniping and shelling, the purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population, resulted—as alleged—from a common criminal plan emanating from the Bosnian Serb military and political leadership. The Prosecution has presented a large body of evidence to show the existence of this common plan. Much of that evidence has been analysed and discussed in the preceding sections. Accordingly, the findings that follow rely on and draw from those sections, as well as from the evidence explicitly referred to below.

i. Pattern and longevity of the campaign of sniping and shelling 4646. In the Chamber's view the two most persuasive factors in favour of the Prosecution's claim that there existed a common criminal plan to establish the campaign of sniping and shelling with the intention of spreading terror among the civilian population in Sarajevo are the pattern and the longevity of the sniping and shelling in the city.

4647. In terms of the pattern, the Chamber has already discussed the numerous specific incidents of shelling and sniping alleged in Schedules F and G of the Indictment, which spanned a number of years. Furthermore, the Chamber has referred to many other sniping and shelling events in the city in the period between late May 1992 and October 1995.¹⁵⁵⁷⁰ Based on all those events¹⁵⁵⁷¹ the Chamber is convinced that there was a well-established practice of sniping and shelling in the city conducted by the SRK whereby civilians were either specifically targeted, or were subjected to indiscriminate and/or disproportionate attacks. This practice was further confirmed by the more general evidence of various witnesses who lived in the city or were posted there with the UN and other international organisations, and whose evidence the Chamber recounted in the preceding sections.¹⁵⁵⁷² The willingness of the SRK units and their commanders to engage in the sniping of Sarajevo civilians on an almost daily basis and their deliberate act of launching an indiscriminate and destructive weapon such as modified air bombs on the city are prime examples of that practice. Thus, as concluded in Section IV.B.2, there is no doubt that until October 1995 murder, terror, and unlawful attacks on civilians were committed on numerous occasions by the SRK forces in Sarajevo.

4648. In the Chamber's view, the fact that this state of affairs continued for over three years means that it cannot have been an accident or the work of "rogue" SRK soldiers.¹⁵⁵⁷³ Rather, the fact that the shelling and the sniping of civilians continued, more or less unabated, for such a long time means that it was actively encouraged by some in the military and political hierarchy in the RS and at the very least tolerated by others in that group. The only reasonable inference that can be drawn therefore is that the shelling and the sniping of the civilians, as well as the indiscriminate and/or disproportionate attacks launched against the city, were part of a plan.

¹⁵⁵⁷⁰ See Section IV.B.1: Facts.

¹⁵⁵⁷¹ The Chamber excludes from this analysis Scheduled Incidents F.5, F.7, and G.6 as it was not satisfied that the evidence presented by the Prosecution was sufficient to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK was responsible for these incidents. In addition, for his part in this analysis, Judge Baird does not rely on Scheduled Incident G.8 due to his dissent in relation thereto.

¹⁵⁵⁷² See Sections IV.B.1.a: Chronology of events in Sarajevo; IV.B.1.b: Sniping; IV.B.1.c: Shelling.

4649. Further support for this conclusion can be found in the evidence outlined below regarding the knowledge that the Bosnian Serb military and political leadership had about the events in the city.¹⁵⁵⁷⁴ As that evidence shows, many of the Bosnian Serb military and political leaders were regularly put on notice that civilians were dying in Sarajevo due to direct targeting or due to indiscriminate and/or disproportionate fire by the SRK, but allowed this type of fire to continue for a protracted period of time.¹⁵⁵⁷⁵ Had it not been a part of their plan, this practice would not have persisted unabated for so long. Accordingly, the Chamber is convinced that the campaign of sniping and shelling, the primary purpose of which was to cause terror among the civilian population, was planned and that it emanated from the higher military and political structures in the RS. Relying on the preceding sections which describe the events in the city from the start of the conflict to the cessation of hostilities in October 1995, as well as the specific shelling and sniping incidents listed in Schedules F and G of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that this plan materialised in late May 1992, with the events described in relation to the Scheduled Incident G.1 and that it then continued to be implemented until October 1995.

4650. As discussed in previous sections, the Chamber does not doubt that the SRK also sniped and shelled ABiH military positions and military personnel during the conflict in Sarajevo or that the war was being waged by both sides in the city and its surrounding areas.¹⁵⁵⁷⁶ The witnesses and documentary evidence confirm that this was indeed the case. For example, Harland testified that some of the SRK fire was tactical and used in support of SRK combat units on the confrontation lines or on ABiH military targets.¹⁵⁵⁷⁷ Similarly, a number of SRK combat reports clearly show that ABiH would launch attacks on the SRK forces and SRK-held territory, including the civilians living there. However, as recounted on many occasions in the preceding sections, the evidence in this case is also replete with examples of SRK fire not being directed at military targets in the city and/or being opened in a random or disproportionate manner. As noted above, this practice was so widespread and so common during the conflict that the only reasonable conclusion one can draw is that it was planned and encouraged with the aim of terrorising the civilian population. In other words, the longevity of the sniping and shelling directed at the civilian population, including civilian objects such as trams and residential buildings, as well as the high number of civilian casualties cannot be explained by the fact that BiH was engulfed in an armed conflict and that the war in Sarajevo was being waged by both sides. Furthermore, even if the Bosnian Serbs were trying to protect their rights and/or were trying to defend themselves, as claimed by the Accused, the high number of civilian casualties cannot be explained, justified, or excused on that basis.¹⁵⁵⁷⁸ Instead, as already indicated earlier, the only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the events in the city is that the shelling and sniping of civilians, perpetrated with the intention to terrorise them, was planned.

¹⁵⁵⁷³ The Chamber also recalls here that it has rejected the Accused's claim that the major incidents in the city were caused by the ABiH or members of special police units in Sarajevo. See Section IV.B.1.d: Bosnian Muslim side targeting own civilians.

¹⁵⁵⁷⁴ In addition, the Chamber also relies on all the sections that deal with the Accused's contribution to the alleged JCE.

¹⁵⁵⁷⁵ See Section IV.B.3.b: Plurality of persons; IV.B.3.c.iii: Accused's knowledge of crimes and the measures he took to prevent them.

ii. Control over snipers and heavy weapons used by the SRK

4651. As discussed earlier, the Chamber is satisfied that individual snipers and/or sniper units within the SRK were under control of the SRK brigade commanders and ultimately the SRK Command itself.¹⁵⁵⁷⁹ The Chamber found that the SRK sniper units had well-established, long-standing, professionally equipped sniper nests, from which they sniped at civilians and civilian objects, such as trams, in the city.¹⁵⁵⁸⁰ This would not have been possible without the involvement of the senior military leaders, particularly the SRK Command and the Main Staff.

4652. Further, the Chamber found that the SRK's heavy weapons, such as mortars and artillery weapons, were also under control of the SRK commanders, such that their use often required authorisation by artillery officers in the SRK brigades or the SRK Command itself.¹⁵⁵⁸¹ The Chamber recalls here the evidence of many of the SRK soldiers and officers who were called by the Accused and who described in detail the procedures they followed before they could open mortar or artillery fire on the city.¹⁵⁵⁸² Furthermore, in the case of modified air bombs, the evidence clearly shows that their use was directly controlled by the Main Staff.¹⁵⁵⁸³ Indeed, in the order of 12 June ¹⁵⁵⁷⁸ The Chamber notes that the cause of the conflict in BiH, or parties' motives for going to war, do not affect the issue of the Accused's guilt one way or the other. What is determinative is the manner in which that conflict was waged in Sarajevo by the Bosnian Serb side, and by the Accused in particular.

1994 issued by the Main Staff, Milovanović explicitly stated that the Main Staff was to decide on the use of modified air bombs and “possibly a Corps if the [Main Staff] approve[d]”.¹⁵⁵⁸⁴ On 26 April 1995, Mladić, having heard that Dragomir Milošević was about to use two modified air bombs against “enemy targets and settlements in the area of Sarajevo”, issued a request for information, “for Commander’s eyes only”, stating as follows:

You are to inform me whether the abovementioned information is correct, who ordered and why, the planned use of heavy weapons and beginning of operations in the area of Sarajevo, if it is a question of retaliation and for what reason, or exploitation of operative effects. If the Supreme Command has issued an order to begin combat operations and use heavy weapons in the area of Sarajevo, it is your duty to inform me.¹⁵⁵⁸⁵

4653. Additionally, as will be discussed in more detail below, the chain of command within the SRK and up to the Main Staff functioned well. Both Galić and Dragomir Milošević, and Mladić as the Main Staff Commander, exerted strict control over the SRK units.¹⁵⁵⁸⁶ This again indicates to the Chamber that the crimes committed in the city by the SRK soldiers could not have been the work of ill-disciplined or rogue soldiers and were not one-off, unrelated, incidents. As also noted later, while the various SRK commanders and the Main Staff did face some problems relating to discipline of the SRK units, those were not significant enough to undermine the Chamber’s conclusion that the SRK was a professional military force with a well-functioning chain of command and efficient information flow.

4654. Accordingly, the only reasonable inference one can draw from this level of control over SRK soldiers and their infantry and artillery weapons is that the crimes perpetrated by the SRK units in relation to the civilian population in Sarajevo were part of the plan to snipe and shell that population in order to spread terror.

iii. Strategic importance of Sarajevo

4655. The Chamber has heard throughout the case that Sarajevo was considered extremely important to the Bosnian Serb side. In Galić’s own words, it was “the media centre of the world” and the “war [was] won or lost” there.¹⁵⁵⁸⁷ Speaking to the Srpski Borac newspaper on 2 August 1995, the Accused himself acknowledged this by saying:

Before the war we were aware that if it happens it will start in Sarajevo. We decided that if we want to win we have to stay in Sarajevo. The strategic idea was to prevent the independent Bosnian state from functioning whereas, on the other hand, our state would function. [...] Sarajevo is of special importance to us because of combat, strategic and tactical reasons. [...] Sarajevo is, as you know it, related to our survival, to the survival of our state and I suppose that, if the Muslim entity survives in Sarajevo, Sarajevo will be a melting point of cultures [...]. If the Muslims don't accept peaceful transformation of the city into two entities Sarajevo will suffer the fate of Beirut, where working hours are until noon and gunfire in the afternoon. [...] We need every inch in Serbian Sarajevo, we even claim rights on the centre of Sarajevo, say, the entire left bank of Miljacka river.¹⁵⁵⁸⁸

4656. KDZ182 confirmed that Sarajevo was well known around the world as a multiethnic city so that whatever happened there “echoed very strongly”; it was very important to Mladić who, in KDZ182’s view, elaborated the general strategy of terror against the Sarajevo population.¹⁵⁵⁸⁹ Mole explained that the encirclement of the city in and of itself proved to be a significant leverage, which the Bosnian Serb leadership successfully exploited throughout the duration of the conflict in order to obtain wide-ranging concessions.¹⁵⁵⁹⁰ This is indeed confirmed by the notes of a meeting the Accused, Krajišnik, Plavšić, Koljević, Mladić, Gvero, and Tolimir attended with Slobodan Milošević on 29 August 1995, during which the Accused opposed Milošević’s proposal to withdraw heavy artillery from Sarajevo because the Bosnian Muslims would have no incentive to negotiate once the blockade was lifted.¹⁵⁵⁹¹

4657. According to KDZ182, both sides used the symbolic nature of the city to demonstrate their purpose; the Bosnian Serb side used it to show that they could do what they wanted and that they “ruled the game”.¹⁵⁵⁹² One example of that is the 24 April 1995 statement by the Accused on Voice of America, wherein he said that the international community must accept Serb plans or the VRS would invade Sarajevo.¹⁵⁵⁹³ The Bosnian Muslim side, on the other hand, used it to keep the city and the rest of BiH in the focus of international attention, namely to carry out a media war in order to make up for their military inferiority and provoke an international reaction.¹⁵⁵⁹⁴

4658. The importance of Sarajevo was further illustrated by the fact that around the times of important negotiations and international conferences, as well as official visits, the city would experience an increase in activity, with disproportionate use of artillery on both sides.¹⁵⁵⁹⁵ Mole testified that it was an “accepted norm” that if the Serb side failed to achieve their objectives anywhere in BiH, Sarajevo would suffer and fire would be opened on the city in response.¹⁵⁵⁹⁶ In fact, on several occasions, Galić expressly indicated to Mole that any military setback for the Bosnian Serbs, or any rejection of their political demands, even those pertaining to issues in areas far away from Sarajevo, was sufficient reason for the SRK to subject the city to heavy artillery fire.¹⁵⁵⁹⁷ At one point Galić told Mole that if the ABiH’s firing from Mt. Igman did not cease, there would be reciprocal firing by his weapons onto the city.¹⁵⁵⁹⁸

Sarajevo is my state, my country, my city! [...] The entire ground where Sarajevo was built up was Serbian, is Serbian ownership! We are there 200,000 Serbs, 300,000 Muslims and 50 or 60,000 Croats. Sarajevo is my city. I have an apartment in the middle of it [...]. I used to have. Which is broken the second day of the war [sic]. Koljević, who was also present during this press conference, exclaimed “Sarajevo is a Serbian city, for God’s sake!”¹⁵⁶⁰¹

4660. Much earlier, during a session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 25 February 1992 and before the conflict started in Sarajevo, the Accused stated that he would never accept Sarajevo as the capital of a Muslim BiH given the number of Serbs in the city and given its enormous wealth.¹⁵⁶⁰² Thus, during the very early stages of the conflict, the Bosnian Serb political leadership, including the Accused, began entertaining the idea of dividing Sarajevo by assuming control over the south bank of Miljacka River and leaving the areas on the north bank to the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁵⁶⁰³ As a reason for division of Sarajevo into separate and ethnically pure halves, the members of the Bosnian Serb political leadership, in particular Krajišnik and the Accused, would explain at length that coexistence between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims had proven to be impossible.¹⁵⁶⁰⁴ On 16 April 1992, at a meeting attended by Vance, Okun, Koljević, and the Accused, Koljević announced that he and the Accused had agreed to divide Sarajevo; this division of Sarajevo was something that continued to be “repeated endlessly by the Bosnian Serb leadership” according to Okun.¹⁵⁶⁰⁵ Okun also testified that one of the objectives of the shelling of Sarajevo was to create a “wall of fire” between the Muslim and Serb parts of the city in order to physically divide the city, as it could only be divided by force.¹⁵⁶⁰⁶

The Accused had made statements suggesting to divide Sarajevo long before this. For example, on 21 December 1991, during the Bosnian Serb Assembly session, he suggested that Serbs, Croats, and Muslims could each organise their own administration within Sarajevo. See D86 (Shorthand Record of 4th session of SerBiH Assembly, 21 December 1991), pp. 41–42.

4661. The Chamber further recalls that Sarajevo also featured among the Bosnian Serb Strategic Goals indicating again the importance of the city to the Bosnian Serb side and the Accused in particular. The Chamber addressed the importance of the Strategic Goals to the Bosnian Serbs in preceding sections of the Judgement¹⁵⁶⁰⁷ and recalls here that the Accused presented them during the 16th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 12 May 1992 where they were adopted by the Assembly representatives. One of the six goals listed was the division of Sarajevo into Serbian and Muslim parts and the “creation of the efficient state authority in both parts”.¹⁵⁶⁰⁸ Speaking about this particular goal, the Accused stated during the Assembly session that the battle for Sarajevo would be of decisive importance, that “Alija does not have a state while we have a part of Sarajevo”, and that the fighting in the city prevented fighting in other areas where there could be conflicts with Bosnian Muslims.¹⁵⁶⁰⁹ Furthermore, since Sarajevo had been built on Serb land with Serb money, he exclaimed that they would not allow it to be excluded from the SerBiH.¹⁵⁶¹⁰ He also stated that the war in Sarajevo had been imposed on the Serbs but that their forces were doing well, holding their enemies in “complete encirclement”.¹⁵⁶¹¹ In the same session Mladić made statements, such as “we have to put a ring around the dragon’s head of Sarajevo this very moment and only those whom we let out should be allowed out”.¹⁵⁶¹² He further explained that Sarajevo could not be taken “by spitting at it from two mortars” and that in order to make the Bosnian Muslims surrender they would have to densely plant 300 guns around Sarajevo including rocket launchers.¹⁵⁶¹³

4662. The Chamber also heard that in September 1992 Van Lynden spent several evenings having informal conversations with the Accused during which he realised that taking Sarajevo was an obsession for the Accused.¹⁵⁶¹⁴ According to Van Lynden, the Accused made it clear that in his opinion Sarajevo belonged "solely to the Serbs", stating that "all the ground was actually Serb territory" and that the houses were Serb houses.¹⁵⁶¹⁵ During one of these discussions, the Accused also suggested that one of the potential solutions in Sarajevo was to have a version of the Berlin wall in the city since the Serbs could never live with the Muslims again.¹⁵⁶¹⁶ The idea of a division similar to the one in Berlin was supported by Mladić who, during a meeting with Morillon on 27 October 1992, offered two solutions to the situation in Sarajevo, one being to divide Sarajevo into two parts, mark the borders and have a split community like in Berlin and with the wall; or, if that was not accepted, for the Muslim side to surrender all weapons to UNPROFOR, at which point he would open the roads into the city.¹⁵⁶¹⁷

¹⁵⁶⁰⁷ The Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership, including Mladić, formulated and promoted the Strategic Goals, and took steps to ensure that they were implemented and that they continued to be the central element of the Bosnian Serb objectives for the duration of the conflict in BiH. See paras. 2895–2903.

4663. During the 34th Assembly session in August 1993, in the context of trying to persuade the Assembly to accept the Owen-Stoltenberg Plan, the Accused stated that the goal relating to Sarajevo, namely to create the "Serb Sarajevo" out of "Serb territory in the town of Sarajevo" had been achieved but that he was ready to compromise as it was in their interests to make "two towns".¹⁵⁶¹⁸ Later in the session, after stating that the Serbs could have taken more territory by force, the Accused stated "[w]e can even take Sarajevo" and, having referred to Grbavica, parts of Dobrinja, Vogošća, Ilijaš, and Nedžarići, indicated "[t]his is all ours" explaining that he would not have agreed to the Owen-Stoltenberg Plan if he was not sure that the Serbs would keep everything that was presently theirs in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶¹⁹ The Accused also stated that Sarajevo was not in the Muslim state but in the Serbian state because "everything around is Serbian"; that the Bosnian Serbs would not "cede a single footstep"; and that the most probable outcome was the division of

Later in the conflict, the Accused proposed a solution that he said would create peace within two weeks in Sarajevo, namely to place the city under the UNPROFOR control and to have a "green line" akin to that in Cyprus. See D172 (UNPROFOR report re meeting with Radovan Karadžić, 20 February 1993), p. 2; David Harland, T. 2288 (11 May 2010).

Sarajevo into two cities.¹⁵⁶²⁰ He stressed that “Serbian Sarajevo is of priceless importance” and that the Bosnian Serb side needed to prepare for war to gain Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶²¹

4664. Similarly, during the 36th Bosnian Assembly session in December 1993, the Accused stated that it was SDS policy that Sarajevo be preserved, through the fifth Strategic Goal and that the “Sarajevo battlefield has created the state” because, had it broken down, the Bosnian Muslims would have reached the Drina and cut across the corridor.¹⁵⁶²²

4665. On 13 and 14 December 1993, at a meeting in Belgrade with Slobodan Milošević, the Accused outlined the Strategic Goals, including the goal to have “our part of Sarajevo”; he then stated that Sarajevo was a priority and the “key to the war” and that he was afraid that “Islamic culture will try to spread its wings in Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁶²³ The Accused also advocated capturing more elevation points around Sarajevo, including Mojmiilo and Žuč.¹⁵⁶²⁴ To this Slobodan Milošević responded by issuing a reminder that “Sarajevo is primarily a political problem”.¹⁵⁶²⁵ Krajišnik backed the Accused and spoke about Sarajevo as a priority, explaining that they were drawing maps of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶²⁶ Dragomir Milošević, who was also at the meeting, spoke about the need for fresh forces which would “carry out the whole operation to its completion”.¹⁵⁶²⁷ The Accused then said that Sarajevo should be divided so that the Bosnian Serb part of the city can function while Krajišnik stated, “we have to finish Žuč before the conference”.¹⁵⁶²⁸

4666. On 6 April 1994, Akashi met with the Accused, Koljević, and Mladić in Pale.¹⁵⁶²⁹ The Accused indicated the Serbs were considering a new approach to the question of Sarajevo, which would entail two separate cities rather than splitting the present Sarajevo in two as previously demanded, wherein the Serb Sarajevo would be built from satellite Serb towns in the Sarajevo area.¹⁵⁶³⁰ Similarly, in a meeting with De Mello in the evening of 7 May 1994, the Accused presented his vision of Sarajevo, in which the inner city would remain Muslim, with Serb Sarajevo stretching from Ilidža to Lukavica, including the airport and Butmir.¹⁵⁶³¹ He described this as “[t]wo cities, side by side, communicating and cooperating”.¹⁵⁶³² Then, on 10 May 1994, during the 40th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly he said: “[W]e have to maintain the character of the Berlin kind of corridor in order to get Sarajevo definitely divided and the territories to become compact. Then we will give them square metre of the hill between Vogošća and Vis, and we will take away from them square kilometre on the Drina.”¹⁵⁶³³

4667. Even in the later stages of the conflict, as the ABiH forces in Sarajevo were getting stronger and better equipped, the Accused and Mladić were unwilling to give up on the idea of Serb Sarajevo. Thus, on 9 May 1995, Smith reported to Akashi that during a meeting held in Pale earlier in the day, the Accused had made it clear to him that the Bosnian Serbs were not going to let go of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶³⁴ In July 1995, when asked in an interview with El País what his view on the future of Sarajevo was, the Accused said that the city would be transformed into two neighbouring cities, if the Muslims wished; otherwise, it would be a Serb city, because the entire territory around Sarajevo and the ground on which it stood was Serb land.¹⁵⁶³⁵ He then stated: “We will either have half the city transformed into a Serbian city or we will have the whole thing”.¹⁵⁶³⁶ Similarly, as indicated earlier, on 2 August 1995, in an interview with the Srpski Borac newspaper, the Accused discussed the strategic importance of Sarajevo for the Bosnian Serbs and stated that if the Bosnian Muslims disturbed the Bosnian Serb part of Sarajevo, the Bosnian Serbs will “seize [the city] entirely”.¹⁵⁶³⁷ On 28 August 1995, during the 53rd session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused said that the Serbs “absolutely cannot leave Sarajevo because then the Muslims would really have a good state”.¹⁵⁶³⁸

4668. On 29 August 1995, one day after the Markale shelling, the political and military leaderships of the FRY and the RS met to discuss a peace initiative; the FRY delegation included Slobodan Milošević, whereas the RS was represented by the Accused, Krajišnik, Plavšić, Koljević, Buha, Mladić, Tolimir, and Gvero.¹⁵⁶³⁹ They discussed a number of issues and, at the end of the meeting, Milošević set forth the Bosnian Serb priorities he would present at the upcoming conference with the Contact Group, namely (i) the north corridor being as broad as possible, especially in Brčko; (ii) compactness of Bosnian Serb territory; (iii) the inclusion of as many towns as possible in territories formally assigned to Bosnian Serbs; and (vi) access to the sea.¹⁵⁶⁴⁰ At the insistence of the Accused, the list of priorities was amended in the last minute so as to include Bosnian Serb claims to three more areas, including “Serb Sarajevo”, once again showing the importance he placed on that issue.¹⁵⁶⁴¹

4669. On 28 November 1995, during an SDC meeting in Belgrade, Slobodan Milošević expressed concern about Mladić’s behaviour and reported the following to the others at the meeting:

Mladić states two days ago: “We’re not giving away what belongs to the Serbs, Sarajevo belongs to the Serbs.” Please, tell me, when was it in this century that the Serbs were the majority in Sarajevo? When? [...] They got a part of Sarajevo—the south-eastern part; they asked that the entire Sarajevo District be completely separate, and Sarajevo District includes the Municipality of Pale [...] we plucked Pale out, then Lukavica, Vrace, Vojkovići, then down there towards Trnovo, and the remaining part—where the Muslims constitute a vast majority.¹⁵⁶⁴²

4670. As already concluded in Section IV.A.3.a.i.E, the Strategic Goals, including the goal to divide Sarajevo, formed the basis for military operations by the VRS. Thus, Sarajevo was explicitly mentioned in all but one of the seven military directives issued by the Main Staff and/or the Accused.¹⁵⁶⁴³ As early as in Directive 1, which was issued by the Main Staff on 6 June 1992, Mladić stated that the VRS had “received the task to use offensive actions [...] in order to improve operationally-tactical position in the wide area of Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁶⁴⁴ He then tasked the SRK to “mop up parts of Sarajevo” and “cut it out” along the Nedžarići–Stup–Rajlovac axis; he also tasked them with mopping up Mojnilo, Dobrinja, Butmir, and Sokolović Kolonija, and with de-blocking of Sarajevo–Trnovo and Pale–Zlatište communication.¹⁵⁶⁴⁵ On the same day that Directive 1 was issued, the Accused had met with Mladić, Koljević, Krajišnik, Ostojić, and others in Jahorina and discussed the Strategic Goals, claiming “we have to protect our territories militarily” and that “the birth of a state and the creation of borders does not occur without war”.¹⁵⁶⁴⁶ Following these statements, Ostojić then presented the planned borders of a Bosnian Serb state on a map, including those around Sarajevo, saying that the plan regarding Sarajevo was to include as much industry as possible and most of the fertile land in the area.¹⁵⁶⁴⁷ The Accused again addressed the issue of Sarajevo and said “we could have gone for a compact and dispersed partition of Sarajevo if there had been the political means” and further “not all our wishes can be fulfilled, we have to be a mature people”.¹⁵⁶⁴⁸

4671. In Directive 3, issued on 3 August 1992, Mladić outlined the objective of keeping Sarajevo “firmly under blockade” and thus instructed the SRK to “gradually tighten the encirclement”.¹⁵⁶⁴⁹ In Directive 4, dated 19 November 1992, he instructed the SRK to keep Sarajevo and Igman under “full blockade” and “tighten the circle”.¹⁵⁶⁵⁰ As noted earlier,¹⁵⁶⁵¹ in that same directive, Mladić also explained that one of the tasks of the VRS was to create conditions for the Bosnian Serb

The Accused had also met Mladić, Koljević, Plavšić, and Krajišnik the day before, on 5 June, wherein he instructed those attending that “Sarajevo has to be resolved politically while acting quietly, inch by inch.” He also instructed them to “clean up” Butmir, Hrasnica, Dobrinja, Sokolović Kolonija, and Hrasno. See P1478 (Ratko Mladić’s notebook, 27 May–31 July 1992), p. 93 (emphasis added).

leadership to “participate equally” in resolving the crisis in BiH with “other international factors”.¹⁵⁶⁵² Sarajevo and its surroundings were also the focus of the Lukavac 93 operation outlined in Directive 5, in which Mladić tasked the SRK to “create conditions to assume control over [Sarajevo]”.¹⁵⁶⁵³ He explained in the directive that the VRS had been tasked with preventing the capture of special-purpose facilities and the lifting of the blockade of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶⁵⁴ Directive 6 was then issued by the Supreme Command and signed by the Accused in November 1993, wherein he ordered the VRS to create objective conditions for the achievement of “war goals”, including the “liberation of Sarajevo”, and tasked the SRK units with preventing the “deblockade of Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁶⁵⁵ This was followed by a supplement to the directive, issued by the Accused on 12 December of the same year. In that supplement he noted the impending resumption of talks in Geneva and ordered the VRS to seize Žuč and Mojmiilo in order to ensure “the most favourable position for dividing the town”.¹⁵⁶⁵⁶ As noted above, the need to capture these elevation points was then discussed by the Accused, Mladić, Dragomir Milošević, and Slobodan Milošević on 13 December in Belgrade.¹⁵⁶⁵⁷ While the focus of Accused’s Directive 7 was mainly on other areas of BiH,¹⁵⁶⁵⁸ it also included an order to the SRK, among other things, to prevent the lifting of the blockade of Sarajevo “from without” by using “decisive defence”.¹⁵⁶⁵⁹

4672. The evidence in this case is also replete with examples of the Accused and Mladić, as well as Koljević, Plavšić, and Krajišnik participating in various meetings with representatives of international community on Sarajevo-related matters, including military matters, the issue of sniping and shelling in the city, cease-fire agreements, the issue of humanitarian convoys and humanitarian airlift to the city, the issue of free movement of UNPROFOR in and around Sarajevo, and flow of utilities.¹⁵⁶⁶⁰ For example, Abdel-Razek testified that at all times during his meetings with the Bosnian Serbs regarding the situation in the city, a senior Bosnian Serb political figure would be present, either the Accused, Plavšić, or Koljević, despite the fact that these meetings were “military to military meetings”.¹⁵⁶⁶¹

4673. Furthermore, from the very early days of unrest in and around Sarajevo, the Accused actively participated in organising the Bosnian Serb population and the setting up of the barricades around the city.¹⁵⁶⁶² As the conflict intensified, he and the other members of the political leadership continued to be involved not only in political but also in military and security matters relating to Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶⁶³ Nedeljko Prstojević testified about frequent meetings with the Accused in Pale involving discussions about the military and political situation in Sarajevo, including logistics and co-operation between civilian authorities, the VRS, and the MUP.¹⁵⁶⁶⁴ For example, in a meeting in Pale on 14 January 1994, which was attended by the Accused, Krajišnik, Mladić, Galić, Dragomir Milošević, Mićo Stanišić, Prstojević, and other presidents of Sarajevo municipalities, as well as commanders of SRK brigades, the Accused stated that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss the military and political situation in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶⁶⁵ During the meeting, the Accused updated everyone on the political negotiations in Geneva and stated that he offered Owen the “Trieste model for Sarajevo”, that “the Muslims must not win a single victory in Sarajevo”, that the Serbs must secure the Ilidža-Lukavica road, and that they must defeat the Muslims in Sarajevo as the international community will accept the factual situation on the ground.¹⁵⁶⁶⁶ Following the presentation by the various SRK brigade commanders about the situation on the frontline, Mladić stated that Sarajevo is strategic goal number one, which can be resolved militarily not politically.¹⁵⁶⁶⁷ Krajišnik then spoke and insisted on Serbs keeping Sarajevo, stating that the whole of Sarajevo must be taken, as one cannot have two masters in such a small area and one cannot share with the Muslims.¹⁵⁶⁶⁸ Following all these presentations, the Accused agreed with Mladić that “Muslims will break down in Sarajevo”, instructed the participants to make sure that the Muslims keep suffering defeats and feel inferiority, and then stated that “retaliation should be 1:1”.¹⁵⁶⁶⁹

4674. Thus, it is clear on the basis of above, that, from the very beginning of the conflict in BiH, the political and military leadership of the Bosnian Serbs, particularly the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, Plavšić, and Mladić, recognised and championed the importance of Sarajevo to the conflict in BiH. The city was important not only because of its symbolism and the fact that without it the Bosnian Muslim side would not be able to have a functioning independent state but also because it carried special significance for the Accused who had lived there up until the start of the war and considered it his hometown. Because of this, the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, Plavšić, and Mladić all desired to gain control over Sarajevo, or parts thereof, a project in which they were invested throughout the conflict.¹⁵⁶⁷⁰ Furthermore, as will be explained in detail below, they were fully informed of the situation on the ground such that the Accused’s level of knowledge regarding Sarajevo was said to have been higher than his knowledge about the other parts of BiH.¹⁵⁶⁷¹ Ultimately, in the Chamber’s view, the Accused, Krajišnik, and Mladić were the “go-to-men” for all the Sarajevo-related issues.

4675. The Chamber is also convinced that this interest and involvement in the Sarajevo-related events by the Accused and the other political and military leaders demonstrates that the campaign of sniping and shelling in the city resulted from a plan which emanated from the top of the Bosnian Serb military and political leadership and was rooted in the idea of dividing Sarajevo. As noted by Okun, the city could have only been divided by a wall of fire.

iv. Conclusion

4676. Based on the findings made above as to the pattern and longevity of the campaign, the control that was exercised over the SRK units by the Main Staff and the SRK Command, and the importance of Sarajevo to the Bosnian Serb political and military leadership, and relying also on the relevant evidence in the sections below dealing with the activities of the Accused and other alleged Sarajevo JCE members throughout the conflict in BiH,¹⁵⁶⁷² the Chamber finds that there existed a common plan that emanated from the Bosnian Serb political and military leadership, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo through the campaign of sniping and shelling. Based on the evidence relating to scheduled sniping and shelling incidents, the Chamber is also satisfied that this plan involved the commission of murder, terror, and unlawful attacks against civilians.

b. Plurality of persons

4677. As stated above, in addition to the Accused, the Prosecution specifically names the following individuals as the members of the Sarajevo JCE: Momčilo Krajišnik, Ratko Mladić, Biljana Plavšić, Nikola Koljević, Stanislav Galić, Dragomir Milošević, and Vojislav Šešelj.¹⁵⁶⁷³ Further, it lists other un-named members of the Sarajevo JCE, including members of the Bosnian Serb leadership, commanders and senior officers in the VRS, JNA, TO and MUP units responsible for Sarajevo area, and leaders of Serbian and Bosnian Serb paramilitary forces.¹⁵⁶⁷⁴ In its Final Brief, however, the Prosecution does not list Šešelj as a member of the Sarajevo JCE but focuses instead on the Accused, Mladić, Galić, Dragomir Milošević, and the members of the RS Presidency.¹⁵⁶⁷⁵ The Prosecution also avers that, since these Sarajevo JCE members made contributions and worked together with the Accused to lead the campaign of sniping and shelling for the purpose of causing terror, “their shared intent for the underlying crimes similarly follows”.¹⁵⁶⁷⁶

4678. Based on the foregoing analysis of the evidence relating to Sarajevo, including (i) the chronology of events in the city between 1992 and 1995, (ii) the nature and the objectives of the siege in Sarajevo, (iii) the specific scheduled sniping and shelling incidents, (iv) the general evidence on the nature of the SRK’s shelling and sniping in the city, (v) the control the SRK Command and the VRS Main Staff had over the SRK units and their weaponry, and (vi) the importance of Sarajevo to the political and military leadership of the Bosnian Serbs, the Chamber is ¹⁵⁶⁷² In addition, the Chamber also relied on other sections of this Judgement, primarily those dealing with the Municipalities and Hostages components of the case, which outlined the actions of the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić throughout the conflict in BiH.

¹⁵⁶⁷³ Indictment, para. 16.

¹⁵⁶⁷⁴ Alternatively, according to the Prosecution, some of those were not members of the Sarajevo JCE but were used by members to carry out crimes committed in the furtherance of the objective. See Indictment, para. 17.

¹⁵⁶⁷⁵ See Prosecution Final Brief, para. 604.

¹⁵⁶⁷⁶ Prosecution Final Brief, para. 797.

satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the common plan outlined in the preceding section involved a plurality of persons. Further, in the Chamber's view, it is inconceivable that the SRK's campaign of sniping and shelling of civilians—which lasted more than three years, involved multiple brigades and units of the SRK, and required significant military resources, weaponry, and organisation—would not have involved a number of individuals operating at both the military and the political level. The Chamber is, therefore, satisfied that the common plan emanated from both the Bosnian Serb political and military leadership.

4679. Before turning to the main issue in this case, namely, whether the Accused was one of these individuals, the Chamber will consider the other named alleged Sarajevo JCE members.

i. Military leadership: Ratko Mladić, Stanislav Galić, and Dragomir Milošević

4680. Given the factors outlined in the preceding paragraphs, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević were members of the Sarajevo JCE and shared the intent to effect the common plan outlined above. The fact that, as stated in the preceding paragraph, the SRK's campaign of sniping and shelling lasted more than three years, involved multiple brigades and units of the SRK, and required significant military resources, weaponry, and organisation, when coupled with the control found to have been exercised by the Main Staff and the SRK Command over the units engaging in that campaign, already leads to the inevitable conclusion that, at the very minimum, Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević were part of that plurality of persons. The only reasonable inference that can be drawn from the evidence relating to the sniping and shelling of civilians in Sarajevo is that Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević were willing participants in the Sarajevo JCE and that they intended to shell and snipe the civilians in the city and thus intended the common plan outlined above.

4681. In addition, the Chamber has also received evidence going to the acts and conduct of those three men, as well as to their state of mind, including their knowledge of the attacks on civilians in the city. Some of this evidence has already been outlined in the preceding sections of the Judgement,¹⁵⁶⁷⁷ including for example (i) Mladić's speech on 12 May 1992 at the Bosnian Serb Assembly session where he openly spoke about his intentions for Sarajevo, such as the need to place the ring around the dragon's head and to surround the city with 300 mortars and artillery weapons;¹⁵⁶⁷⁸ (ii) his involvement in the sourcing and the use of modified air bombs;¹⁵⁶⁷⁹ (iii) his activities in relation to Scheduled Incident G.1, including his orders to shell Baščaršija, Pofalići, and Velešići, and to scatter the shells around Sarajevo, showing in turn his intent to shell the civilian population;¹⁵⁶⁸⁰ (iv) his directives which consistently ordered the tightening of the blockade of Sarajevo and the idea of “decisive” or “active” defence that in turn involved the shelling and the sniping of civilians and moving of the frontlines in Sarajevo, inch by inch;¹⁵⁶⁸¹ (v) Galić’s and Dragomir Milošević’s implementation of the said directives; and (vi) Dragomir Milošević’s orders regarding the use of modified air bombs.¹⁵⁶⁸² The Chamber will not repeat that evidence here. The following paragraphs therefore outline only the evidence that has not yet been analysed by the Chamber. This evidence relates mainly to their knowledge of the attacks on civilians in the city and their reactions thereto.

¹⁵⁶⁷⁸ See para. 4661.

¹⁵⁶⁷⁹ See para. 4562. See also fn. 14640 (listing a number of VRS orders relating to the use of modified air bombs).

4682. For example, the Chamber heard that, in the absence of the Accused,¹⁵⁶⁸³ the sniping and shelling of civilians was consistently raised with other members of the Bosnian Serb military and political leadership by the representatives of the international community and that UNPROFOR would go to the parties responsible anytime there was an incident, be it shelling or sniping.¹⁵⁶⁸⁴ Thus, in the event of major incidents, the Commander of UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo would sign the protests which were addressed directly to the SRK Commander.¹⁵⁶⁸⁵ When the shelling was particularly violent, the Commander of UNPROFOR BiH Command would make oral protests over the phone, followed by written protests, with Mladić or with the political leaders in Pale.¹⁵⁶⁸⁶

4683. As far as Mladić’s personal knowledge is concerned, the Chamber heard that, as early as 9 May 1992, General Kukanjac of the JNA informed Mladić that Sarajevo was a “ghost town” and the “Serbian leadership” had been shelling it for months with mortar and artillery.¹⁵⁶⁸⁷ Wilson testified that numerous incidents in which “a number of civilians were killed by artillery or mortars apparently fired from Serb positions” were raised with Mladić and that the latter would generally not deny that the Bosnian Serb side was responsible but would say that the shelling was done for the purpose of “defending the Serbs” or “responding to attacks”.¹⁵⁶⁸⁸ For example, on 30 May 1992, Wilson met with Mladić to convey the Secretary General’s appeal to cease or to moderate the shelling of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁶⁸⁹ Mladić responded that he shared the Secretary General’s concern for Sarajevo, but that the Maršal Tito Barracks were under continuous fire and that it was important to evacuate the JNA from there.¹⁵⁶⁹⁰ He also stated that these attacks on Sarajevo were defending the Bosnian Serbs from attack.¹⁵⁶⁹¹

4684. On 15 September 1992, Nambiar sent a letter to Mladić protesting the “indiscriminate shelling of civilian targets in Sarajevo” on the previous day, asking Mladić to “ensure that, under no circumstances, are non-military targets engaged”, and urging him to place “all heavy weapons under UNPROFOR control”.¹⁵⁶⁹²

4685. On 15 November 1992, members of the SRK command and unit commanders, the presidents of a number of municipal assemblies as well as Mladić and Tolimir held a consultation session in Lukavica Barracks.¹⁵⁶⁹³ During the session, Galić raised a number of issues, including poor discipline and performance by troops, wastefulness in the use of ammunition, and involvement in “[g]enocide on other nations”.¹⁵⁶⁹⁴ Marko Lugonja reiterated these concerns, stating that certain individuals and groups in the SRK held the conviction that they were the “masters of life and death” to members of other ethnic groups and that the Geneva Conventions and other relevant instruments were obsolete and unneeded.¹⁵⁶⁹⁵ In response, Mladić did not address the killing of civilians but urged a crackdown on insubordination and poor discipline and defined the task of the SRK as keeping Sarajevo under blockade and pulling as much of the population as possible out of the city.¹⁵⁶⁹⁶

4686. On 10 October 1994, Gobilliard issued a written protest to the Bosnian Serb side in response to the shelling of Sarajevo, which was a “reprisal” or reaction to a 5–6 October 1994 ABiH attack in the DMZ in the course of which 17 Serb soldiers were killed.¹⁵⁶⁹⁷ In retaliation to the shelling, ABiH gunners fired at Serb civilians in the village of Vogovišći, killing two people.¹⁵⁶⁹⁸ To avoid an escalation, Gobilliard and Rose issued a joint statement, protesting to both parties but to no effect.¹⁵⁶⁹⁹ On the same day, Rose, Gobilliard, and Harland met with Mladić and Tolimir at Jahorina.¹⁵⁷⁰⁰ At the meeting, Rose condemned the sniping incident of 8 October, involving Alma Ćutuna.¹⁵⁷⁰¹ Mladić denied Serb responsibility for this incident, claiming that the shots came from the Holiday Inn and that the incident was engineered by the ABiH.¹⁵⁷⁰² An UNPROFOR technical expert then provided a map and assured Mladić that the shooting did not come from the Holiday Inn side.¹⁵⁷⁰³

4687. On 5 March 1995, Smith met with Mladić and Tolimir while Koljević joined during the closing stages of the meeting.¹⁵⁷⁰⁴ In the meeting, Smith questioned Mladić about the upsurge in sniping attacks on civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷⁰⁵ During this meeting Mladić told Smith that the increase in sniping by the VRS in Sarajevo was in response to Serb casualties suffered in military offensives launched by the BiH government.¹⁵⁷⁰⁶ The UNPROFOR weekly report on this meeting noted that the “explicit recognition by Mladić of [VRS] responsibility for sniping is somewhat surprising”.¹⁵⁷⁰⁷

4688. On 26 June 1995, Smith wrote to Mladić and stated that, on an almost daily basis, he was receiving reports of shelling of the populated parts of safe areas, including Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷⁰⁸ He stated that “in Sarajevo alone nine civilians were killed yesterday due to sniping and shelling. Five of them were children.”¹⁵⁷⁰⁹ Smith also noted in the letter that despite Janvier raising this issue with Mladić in the past, there had been a noticeable increase in attacks on the civilian population.¹⁵⁷¹⁰ Smith did not recall receiving any indication from Mladić in response that there would be a reversal of what was happening and that the attacks on the civilian population would stop.¹⁵⁷¹¹

4689. On 1 July 1995, Nicolai sent a letter of protest to Mladić in response to the shelling of Sarajevo on 28 and 29 June 1995.¹⁵⁷¹² In the letter, Nicolai protested “most strongly about the recent and still continued indiscriminate and deliberate shelling of the residential places of the city of Sarajevo, which unfortunately results in casualties amongst innocent civilian population”.¹⁵⁷¹³ Nicolai then warned Mladić: “[i]n this fashion you breach all international agreements on protection of civilians at a war, including the Geneva Conventions, recognised by all professional armies in the world. These very serious and inexcusable violations and killing of civilians are liable to trials by an international court.”¹⁵⁷¹⁴ In the letter, Nicolai included a copy of Meille’s 30 June 1995 letter of protest to Dragomir Milošević, regarding the same events.¹⁵⁷¹⁵

4690. As recounted earlier, between 28 and 29 August 1995, Smith and Mladić had three telephone conversations, during which the former informed the latter about the 28 August 1995 shelling of Markale market and told him that the Bosnian Serb side was responsible for it, which

Mladić continued to deny.¹⁵⁷¹⁶ In addition, on 30 August 1995, at around 2 a.m., letters were sent to Mladić, the Accused, and Slobodan Milošević informing them that NATO air strikes had commenced as a result of the Markale attack.¹⁵⁷¹⁷ In the letter to Mladić, Janvier wrote that two separate UN teams had found that the shell that landed on Markale market on 28 August 1995 came from VRS positions south-southwest of Sarajevo, that this resulted in the initiation of air strikes, that the object of the air strikes was to prevent further shelling of Sarajevo, and that the attacks would cease once Janvier was convinced that the threat of further shelling by the SRK had been eliminated.¹⁵⁷¹⁸

4691. On 1 September 1995, the air strikes stopped and Janvier and Banbury met with Mladić, Perišić, Gvero, and Tolimir in Mali Zvornik, in order to discuss the current situation; upon being told again that the investigation results clearly identified the Bosnian Serbs as the perpetrators, Mladić responded that Markale was “a pretext to gain a corridor for the Muslims to Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁷¹⁹

4692. The Chamber also heard throughout the case that in addition to Mladić, the SRK Commanders themselves were on notice as to the shelling and sniping in the city. Galić was present on the battlefield of Sarajevo throughout the period 10 September 1992 to 10 August 1994, in close proximity to the confrontation lines, and thus actively monitored the situation in the city.¹⁵⁷²⁰ Not only was he informed personally about both sniping and shelling activity attributed to SRK forces against civilians in Sarajevo, but his subordinates were conversant with such activity.¹⁵⁷²¹ Similarly, Dragomir Milošević regularly toured the confrontation lines and visited different SRK units at their positions.¹⁵⁷²² He also knew about allegations that SRK forces had targeted civilians.¹⁵⁷²³

4693. More specifically, Fraser testified that UNPROFOR had “countless engagements” with Galić and Milošević to discuss sniping, and implored them to stop sniping civilians.¹⁵⁷²⁴ At these meetings UNPROFOR would use summaries of the number of Muslims and Serbs wounded and killed by sniper fire, in an attempt to focus the discussion through the use of empirical data and facts.¹⁵⁷²⁵ Fraser noted that when UNPROFOR protested sniping, shelling, or freedom of movement to Dragomir Milošević or Mladić, “it was not uncommon for both parties to say they didn’t do it [...] and then they would go away and things would get a little better in most cases”.¹⁵⁷²⁶

4694. Both Galić and Milošević would also imply that the shelling of Sarajevo was linked to other attacks by the ABiH throughout BiH.¹⁵⁷²⁷ The SRK Commanders and the Commander of the ABiH 1st Corps generally ignored UNPROFOR protests and did not take them seriously, while sometimes the parties would send a letter stating that they had nothing to do with it.¹⁵⁷²⁸ In general, Galić only reacted to letters of protest when he was able to provide proof that the firing did not come from his troops, which was “extremely rare”.¹⁵⁷²⁹

4695. Abdel-Razek met with Galić and Plavšić on multiple occasions from 21 August 1992 to 20 February 1993 in his capacity as Commander of UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo, and testified that the shelling of civilians was one of the major issues he raised with them.¹⁵⁷³⁰ However, there was no progress as they would deny that they were responsible or deny that the shelling and sniping incidents occurred; often they would gradually acknowledge responsibility but then claim that Bosnian Serb actions were justified retaliations against the ABiH.¹⁵⁷³¹ Galić would also give the impression that the Bosnian Muslim side was conducting the shelling on purpose to attract the sympathy of the world and distort the Serb image; however, he would then gradually acknowledge that the shelling was retaliation by the Bosnian Serb side.¹⁵⁷³² Galić would also threaten to continue shelling the city if the violations continued from the Bosnian Muslim side.¹⁵⁷³³ Abdel-Razek thought that both Galić and the “Serb civilian leadership” knew about the sniping and shelling of the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷³⁴

4696. Like Abdel-Razek, Mole testified that when he would meet with Galić during his time in Sarajevo, indiscriminate SRK fire was “a topic of discussion most days”, although Mole would focus only on the most serious incidents.¹⁵⁷³⁵ Galić’s response to protests tended to be tangential and he would constantly respond “that the Muslims [...] were attacking in a particular sector of the city”.¹⁵⁷³⁶ Galić also frequently threatened to shell Sarajevo “if a certain event did or did not materialise”.¹⁵⁷³⁷

4697. In terms of sniping, Van Baal testified that every incident that could be attributed to a Bosnian Serb sniper was the subject of an objection by the UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo to the SRK.¹⁵⁷³⁸ These objections were directed at the leadership of the VRS, including Galić, Indić, and Milovanović.¹⁵⁷³⁹ According to Van Baal, attempts to contact Galić were only occasionally successful and Indić and Milovanović would respond to protests by denying that the SRK had snipers under its control and by blaming the Bosnian Muslims for shooting and targeting their own population.¹⁵⁷⁴⁰

4698. KDZ182 testified that protests about shelling and sniping incidents were made to Milošević verbally by UNPROFOR liaison officers and in writing; several hours or days later, the written protests would often lead to meetings with Milošević.¹⁵⁷⁴¹ Generally speaking, in those meetings Milošević would claim that he was responding to ABiH fire.¹⁵⁷⁴² KDZ304 testified that letters of protest were not an effective method during the time he was in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷⁴³ [REDACTED] it was impossible to speak directly to Dragomir Milošević because “everything was screened at the level of Major Indić or his deputy”.¹⁵⁷⁴⁴

4699. In addition to the above evidence, the Chamber heard about many specific meetings during which Galić and Milošević were informed of the sniping and shelling on the city, including attacks on civilians. For example, on 7 October 1992 Morillon met with Galić and Koljević.¹⁵⁷⁴⁵ The parties discussed lifting the siege of Sarajevo, and Morillon expressed his “disappointment” about recent artillery attacks on Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷⁴⁶ On 10 February 1993, Valentin sent a letter of protest to Galić regarding the targeting of civilians with mortar fire while they were crossing the airfield at Sarajevo airport between 7 and 9 February 1993.¹⁵⁷⁴⁷ The letter stated that twenty civilians were injured, three of whom died, and that “[s]uch actions against civilian population run counter to all human norms of morals. We strongly protest against such irresponsible behaviour of your military and intend to inform international community of those facts.”¹⁵⁷⁴⁸ On this topic, Abdel-Razek testified that when he protested the sniping of civilians crossing the airport, Galić stated that “if the civilians continued to cross the airport, his side would continue shooting at them”.¹⁵⁷⁴⁹ Similarly, at a meeting with the Commander of FreBat, Galić said that he would continue shooting at civilians if they continued to move through the airport, blaming FreBat for allowing the civilians to do so.¹⁵⁷⁵⁰

4700. On 22 March 1993, Valentin met with Galić to request an explanation as to why Stari Grad was shelled the day before.¹⁵⁷⁵¹ Galić denied that the Serbs were responsible for the shelling, despite the UN observers being sure that the shells were fired from Bosnian Serb artillery positions.¹⁵⁷⁵² Similarly, in response to a rise in sniping incidents in April 1994, Soubirou met with

Galić on a number of occasions in May, June, and July 1994.¹⁵⁷⁵³ One of those meetings took place on 24 June 1994, whereby Soubirou and Fraser met with Galić at Lukavica barracks.¹⁵⁷⁵⁴ According to Fraser, this meeting was typical of all the meetings with Galić, as the latter would first give a lecture and deny that Bosnian Serbs were engaged in sniping on civilians, and then, over the course of the conversation would acknowledge that some of this was happening but would blame the other side for it.¹⁵⁷⁵⁵ Nevertheless, Fraser noted that generally there was a noticeable decrease in the level of sniping after talking to Galić.¹⁵⁷⁵⁶ Sometime between 8 and 12 July 1994, Soubirou met with Galić to improve relations between his office and the SRK.¹⁵⁷⁵⁷ During this meeting, Soubirou explained that he wanted to come to an agreement on anti-sniping and asked Galić to designate a Bosnian Serb to deal with this subject.¹⁵⁷⁵⁸ [REDACTED] Galić never acknowledged that there were Bosnian Serb snipers.¹⁵⁷⁵⁹

4701. The Chamber also received evidence about a number of specific written protests sent to Dragomir Milošević.¹⁵⁷⁶⁰ For example, on 2 December 1994, Gobilliard wrote to Milošević to “strongly protest” the shelling of Sarajevo that day.¹⁵⁷⁶¹ The letter addressed the launching of four AT3 missiles at the MUP building, a cinema, and the Presidency building from SRK positions.¹⁵⁷⁶² On 7 May 1995, Gobilliard wrote to Milošević again, protesting the “continuous shootings” against civilians around the city.¹⁵⁷⁶³ Gobilliard sent another letter on 8 June 1995.¹⁵⁷⁶⁴ This letter concerned violent artillery attacks along the southern side of the confrontation line.¹⁵⁷⁶⁵ Explaining the context of the letter, KDZ304 testified that the ABiH had launched an attack in the sector of the Jewish cemetery and in Debelo Brdo, and that the SRK retaliated with artillery fire and tanks and launched “several well-targeted counter-attacks”; however, the response was also disproportionate as it disregarded any possible collateral damage or civilians being affected.¹⁵⁷⁶⁶

4702. On 30 June 1995, Meille sent a letter of protest to Dragomir Milošević in which he complained of “attacks on civilian targets in the city of Sarajevo, using very powerful bombs” on 28 and 29 June 1995 by the SRK.¹⁵⁷⁶⁷ Meille strongly protested against these bombardments “carried out on [Milošević’s] orders”, and demanded that Milošević immediately halt all attacks directed at either the civilian population or UNPROFOR.¹⁵⁷⁶⁸ The letter provided details of four different events including the date and the time at which they took place, namely, the firing of (i) the “extremely powerful rocket bomb” at the TV building; (ii) four heavy mortar rounds at the Alipašino Polje residential area; (iii) another rocket bomb at the Alipašino Polje residential area; and (iv) three mortar rounds at residential buildings in the city centre.¹⁵⁷⁶⁹ The letter continued to state that “[t]his ill-considered and irresponsible escalation continued on the evening of 29 June when 3 high-power projectiles struck the PTT building, the HQ of Commander Sector Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁷⁷⁰ Meille also reminded Milošević of the moral and legal obligations to adhere to international humanitarian law.¹⁵⁷⁷¹ Despite all the details provided, Milošević did not react to this letter.¹⁵⁷⁷² As noted earlier, a copy of the letter was also sent to Mladić on 1 July 1995.¹⁵⁷⁷³

4703. Galić and Dragomir Milošević themselves confirmed that they received information about the sniping and shelling of civilians in Sarajevo. For example, Galić conceded that he received information that SRK shelling and sniping caused civilian casualties from his staff, through Indić, in meetings with UNPROFOR representatives, and through written protests.¹⁵⁷⁷⁴ Galić testified that he took the protests that were sent to him by UNPROFOR or UNMOs very seriously.¹⁵⁷⁷⁵ However, he did not remember a single protest being lodged about a sniping incident alone, and in relation to Abdel-Razek’s evidence regarding his protests about the SRK shelling of UNPROFOR and civilian structures, he testified that Abdel-Razek was not honest with him and misrepresented himself.¹⁵⁷⁷⁶ Similarly, Milošević conceded that he had received, from UNPROFOR and the media, allegations about Bosnian Serb soldiers sniping at civilians.¹⁵⁷⁷⁷ While Milošević considered media reports to be “a certain indicator” and he attempted to see what was true and correct in these reports, he claimed that the media exaggerated or dramatised the situation.¹⁵⁷⁷⁸ According to Milošević, he also tried to establish whether the information from UNPROFOR was true or not, and if it was true, he issued orders to stop the actions.¹⁵⁷⁷⁹

The Chamber rejects this evidence, as it contradicts not only Galić’s and Milošević’s evidence but also all the other evidence presented regarding protests.

ii. Political leadership: Momčilo Krajišnik, Nikola Koljević, and Biljana Plavšić

4704. As noted earlier, the Bosnian Serb political leadership, namely Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić, had strong views as to the importance of Sarajevo to the Bosnian Serb cause, as illustrated for example by Krajišnik’s insistence on taking the whole of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷⁸⁰ Further, the Chamber heard that they also had knowledge of the sniping and shelling of civilians in the city, as illustrated by many meetings they attended regarding the situation in Sarajevo, both in the presence and in the absence of the Accused.¹⁵⁷⁸¹ As noted above, Abdel-Razek met with Galić and Plavšić on many occasions during which he raised the issue of shelling of civilians.¹⁵⁷⁸² According to him, Plavšić “was unconcerned” about this and viewed the Serb shelling of civilian targets as justified retaliation.¹⁵⁷⁸³ During their meetings she expressed concern only for the suffering of the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁵⁷⁸⁴ Abdel-Razek specifically recounted a meeting on 10 October 1992 where he discussed the shelling of Sarajevo with Koljević and Plavšić.¹⁵⁷⁸⁵ Koljević stated that the Bosnian Serbs had decided to stop their shelling of Sarajevo two days before the meeting, but that the propaganda service of BiH radio was saying that the Bosnian Serbs were shelling “in a major way” in an

¹⁵⁷⁷⁷ Dragomir Milošević, T. 33276–33277 (6 February 2013). attempt to discredit Serbs.¹⁵⁷⁸⁶ In turn, Plavšić simply insisted that the UN arrange and facilitate the evacuation of 500 Bosnian Serbs from Sarajevo.¹⁵⁷⁸⁷

4705. In addition to the many meetings attended by Koljević and Krajišnik and discussed throughout this Judgement, the Chamber also received evidence of the two men regularly attending meetings about the sniping in the city. For example, in a meeting of 27 June 1994, between Andreev, Rose, Banbury, and Krajišnik in Pale, Rose “forcefully requested” that an anti-sniping agreement be signed.¹⁵⁷⁸⁸ Krajišnik responded that the situation in Sarajevo had become very precarious because of continued sniping by the ABiH, and because the quality of life was improving so much for the residents of the Bosnian Government controlled areas, which was angering many Serbs outside the city.¹⁵⁷⁸⁹ Krajišnik then denied that the Bosnian Serbs used snipers.¹⁵⁷⁹⁰ He also stated that an anti-sniping agreement was not possible,¹⁵⁷⁹¹ that an agreement would not solve the problem, but that the Bosnian Serbs were very interested in abolishing sniping, as sniping could lead to an escalation of the conflict.¹⁵⁷⁹² The negotiations continued and, on 1 August 1994, De Mello met with Krajišnik and Muratović at Sarajevo airport.¹⁵⁷⁹³ At the meeting, Muratović and Krajišnik agreed that the issue of sniping could be “de-linked” from the issues of detainees in Eastern Bosnia and the reopening of the airport routes.¹⁵⁷⁹⁴ On 12 August 1994, Rose met with Koljević, Gvero, and Tolimir at Pale.¹⁵⁷⁹⁵ The Bosnian Serbs accepted the wording of a proposed anti-sniping agreement during that meeting and the agreement was eventually signed at Sarajevo airport on 14 August 1994.¹⁵⁷⁹⁶ On 14 September 1994, Andreev met with Muratović and Koljević at Sarajevo airport.¹⁵⁷⁹⁷ On the subject of sniping, the parties noted with satisfaction the recent reduction in the incidence of sniping, and agreed to explore the possibility of an expanded agreement which would include all small calibre weapons.¹⁵⁷⁹⁸ Thus, following the signing of the Anti-Sniping Agreement on 14 August 1994, the number of sniping incidents fell significantly.¹⁵⁷⁹⁹ This indicated to Harland that the level of sniping in Sarajevo was being “controlled and modulated” by the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹⁵⁸⁰⁰

4706. The Chamber also found that Krajišnik was involved in the sourcing of modified air bombs from Serbia for delivery to the Pretis Factory; he did so on 17 June 1995, a day after Scheduled Incidents G.14 and G.15 (and several weeks after Scheduled Incidents G.11, G.12, and G.13) occurred, all of which involved modified air bombs.¹⁵⁸⁰¹ It is clear that it was his task, and the task of the special group including his brother, to ensure that VRS had sufficient numbers of this indiscriminate weapon in stock.

iii. Conclusion

4707. Based on all the evidence outlined in this section and in the sections that follow (insofar as they concern the alleged JCE members other than the Accused), the Chamber is convinced that Mladić, Galić, Dragomir Milošević, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić were all fully aware, throughout the conflict, that civilians in Sarajevo were being exposed to deliberate sniping and shelling by the SRK units and to indiscriminate and/or disproportionate attacks.¹⁵⁸⁰² However not one of them made an effort to stop or prevent this practice, other than when it was in their political interest to do so and/or when they were pressured by the international community. Instead, the evidence shows that they actively sought and encouraged the practice of sniping and shelling in order to achieve their military and political goals, retaliate against the Bosnian Muslim side, and use it as a bargaining chip in their dealings with the international community. Indeed, Mladić himself, at one point, acknowledged that sniping was part of the retaliation for the ABiH attacks.¹⁵⁸⁰³ Similarly, Krajišnik was personally involved in the sourcing of modified air bombs.¹⁵⁸⁰⁴ In addition, as is clear from their statements and actions, some of which were discussed above, they considered Sarajevo to be important to the achievement of the Bosnian Serb political goals and thus all worked together to effect the siege of the city and ensure that it was divided by the aforementioned wall of fire.¹⁵⁸⁰⁵ For these reasons, the Chamber considers that all of these individuals intended the execution of the common plan embodied in the Sarajevo JCE.

4708. The Chamber also considers that Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević were in fact essential to the common plan such that without them, the SRK's campaign of sniping and shelling could not have been conducted and no common plan could have been effectuated.¹⁵⁸⁰⁶ As testified to by KDZ182, Mladić in particular was instrumental in the implementation of the common plan, being the "strategist" in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁸⁰⁷ Based on all the evidence in this case, in particular the pattern and the longevity of the campaign of sniping and shelling, the fact that indiscriminate and disproportionate shelling of the city would necessarily bring about civilian casualties, and the above findings in relation to their knowledge and their conduct, the Chamber is satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that the members of the Sarajevo JCE, namely Mladić, Krajišnik, Koljević, Plavšić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević all shared the intent to commit murder, unlawful attacks, and terror in Sarajevo.

4709. While Šešelj is named in the Indictment as one of the members of the Sarajevo JCE, the Chamber has received very little evidence relating to his activities as far as the Sarajevo JCE is concerned.¹⁵⁸⁰⁸ Accordingly, the Chamber is not satisfied that Vojislav Sešelj was a member of the Sarajevo JCE as alleged by the Prosecution.

4710. The Chamber will now turn to examine whether the Accused significantly contributed to the Sarajevo JCE.

c. Accused's contribution

4711. In its Final Brief, the Prosecution submits that the ways in which the Accused contributed to the Sarajevo JCE as alleged in the Indictment are all reflected in the following actions and/or omissions of the Accused: (a) he did not end the campaign of sniping and shelling even though he could have by virtue of his control over the VRS and other Bosnian Serb Forces engaged in the campaign but in fact oversaw the strategy and implementation of the campaign;¹⁵⁸⁰⁹ (b) he modulated the violence against civilians and the level of terror in accordance with the Bosnian Serb ¹⁵⁸⁰⁵ See paras. 4659, 4665, 4673.

¹⁵⁸⁰⁶ In this respect, see in particular Sections IV.B.3.c.i: Accused's support for Mladić and SRK; IV.B.3.c.ii: Accused's oversight of military activities in Sarajevo.

¹⁵⁸⁰⁷ See para. 4748.

¹⁵⁸⁰⁸ See e.g. P2445 (SRT news report re visit of Vojislav Šešelj to Grbavica).

¹⁵⁸⁰⁹ The Prosecution claims that by doing so the Accused contributed to the Sarajevo JCE as alleged in paragraph 14(a), 14(b), 14(d), 14(e), 14(f), and 14(h) of the Indictment. See Prosecution Final Brief, paras. 605, 612(1), 612(5).

leadership's political and strategic interests;¹⁵⁸¹⁰ (c) he recruited Mladić, supported Mladić's immediate intensification of the campaign, and also promoted and rewarded the key implementers of the campaign;¹⁵⁸¹¹ and (d) he allowed the campaign to continue for almost four years while denying or deflecting international protests and failing to take any genuine steps to punish the perpetrators.¹⁵⁸¹² The Chamber will consider each of these alleged contributions below.

4712. According to the Prosecution, as part of the Accused's efforts to modulate the campaign in Sarajevo, he directed and/or authorised the restriction of humanitarian aid to Sarajevo in an effort to create unbearable living conditions for these inhabitants in furtherance of the objectives of the Sarajevo JCE.¹⁵⁸¹³ The Prosecution then alleges in its Final Brief that the "impact of the sniping and shelling campaign was amplified by restrictions on humanitarian aid and utilities that forced residents to expose themselves to attacks" when searching for fuel or queuing for water or food.¹⁵⁸¹⁴ It also alleges that the Accused's "modulation of the campaign of terror" can be seen in the restrictions he imposed on the supply of humanitarian aid and utilities to the city.¹⁵⁸¹⁵

4713. However, the Chamber does not consider restrictions on humanitarian aid to be relevant to the Accused's contribution to the achievement of the objective of the Sarajevo JCE for two reasons.

4714. First, the objective as defined in the Indictment was not to spread terror as such but to "establish and carry out a campaign of sniping and shelling against the civilian population of Sarajevo, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror".¹⁵⁸¹⁶ Thus, it is the acts of sniping and shelling, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population, that are central to the alleged objective. That being the case, the Chamber does not consider that the ¹⁵⁸¹⁰ The Prosecution alleges that by doing so the Accused contributed to the Sarajevo JCE as alleged in paragraph 14(a), 14(d), 14(e), and 14(j) of the Indictment. See Prosecution Final Brief, paras. 605, 612(2).

¹⁵⁸¹¹ The Prosecution alleges that by doing so the Accused contributed to the Sarajevo JCE as alleged in paragraph 14(a), 14(b), 14(d), and 14(h) of the Indictment. See Prosecution Final Brief, paras. 605, 612(4), 612(6).

¹⁵⁸¹² The Prosecution alleges that by doing so the Accused contributed to the Sarajevo JCE as alleged in paragraph 14(a), 14(c), 14(d), 14(i), and 14(h) of the Indictment. See Prosecution Final Brief, paras. 605, 612(3), 612(5).

¹⁵⁸¹³ Indictment, paras. 14(j), 19.

¹⁵⁸¹⁴ Prosecution Final Brief, paras. 603, 777.

¹⁵⁸¹⁵ Prosecution Final Brief, para. 622. The Chamber notes that the cutting off of utilities is not mentioned as one of the Accused's alleged contributions in paragraph 14 of the Indictment. In fact, in relation to Sarajevo, utilities are mentioned in the Indictment only once, in paragraph 81, which provides: "The lack of gas, electricity or running water, forced people to leave their homes thereby increasing the risk of death." As such, neither this paragraph, nor the rest of the Indictment, assigns responsibility for the lack of utilities in the city or elaborates on how this practice contributed to the objective of the Sarajevo JCE, which is defined as a "campaign of sniping and shelling" the primary purpose of which is to spread terror. For that reason, the Chamber does not consider that the issue of utilities is relevant to the charges in the Indictment and/or the Accused's contribution to the Sarajevo JCE. Even if that were not the case, the evidence outlined by the Chamber earlier in the Judgement shows that utilities were often cut and obstructed by the Bosnian Muslim side as well as by the Bosnian Serb side. That being the case, it is impossible to determine how significant the contribution of the Accused and other alleged JCE members was to the cutting off of utilities in Sarajevo. See Sections IV.B.1.a: Chronology of events in Sarajevo; IV.B.1.f: Siege of Sarajevo.

obstruction of humanitarian aid can have any effect, whether positive or negative, on those acts. Accordingly, restrictions on humanitarian aid, even if perpetrated in an effort to create unbearable living conditions for the inhabitants of Sarajevo, could not have furthered in any way the objective of the Sarajevo JCE as defined in the Indictment.

4715. Second, the Indictment alleges that the objective involved the commission of the crimes of terror and unlawful attacks on civilians.¹⁵⁸¹⁷ As discussed earlier, the actus reus of these crimes consists of acts or threats of violence directed against the civilian population.¹⁵⁸¹⁸ In the Chamber's view, restrictions on humanitarian aid (and also utilities) bear no connection to the "acts or threats of violence". Evidence of such restrictions is therefore not relevant to proving the Accused's contribution to achieving the objective of the Sarajevo JCE.¹⁵⁸¹⁹ Accordingly, the Chamber will not consider the allegations in paragraph 14(j) of the Indictment as far as they relate to the Sarajevo component of the case.

i. Accused's support for Mladić and SRK

(A) Arguments of the parties

4716. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused recruited Mladić who then, with the approval of the Accused, marked his arrival in the Sarajevo theatre in May 1992 with an immediate intensification of the "terror campaign".¹⁵⁸²⁰ The Prosecution also alleges that the Accused promoted and rewarded the key implementers of the "campaign of terror" against Sarajevo, namely Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević, despite knowing that they were involved in the commission of crimes.¹⁵⁸²¹ According to the Prosecution, by rewarding and promoting such individuals, the Accused not only created and sustained "a culture of impunity" but also showed his approval of the campaign of sniping and shelling.¹⁵⁸²²

4717. The Accused submits that Mladić was appointed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly, thus indirectly refuting the Prosecution's allegation that he personally "recruited" Mladić.¹⁵⁸²³ Further, ¹⁵⁸¹⁶ Indictment, paras. 15–19, 77 (emphasis added).

¹⁵⁸¹⁷ Indictment, paras. 15, 77. Additionally, the objective of the Sarajevo JCE involved the commission of the crime of murder. As with terror and unlawful attacks on civilians, the Chamber considers that the Accused's alleged contribution to restrictions on humanitarian aid has no connection to the actus reus of that crime.

¹⁵⁸¹⁸ See paras. 450, 459.

¹⁵⁸¹⁹ However, the Chamber has referred to such evidence in earlier sections of the Judgement in order to describe the situation that prevailed in the city throughout the period of the Indictment. See Sections IV.B.1.a: Chronology of events in Sarajevo; IV.B.1.f: Siege of Sarajevo.

the Accused does not expressly respond to the allegation that he let Mladić intensify the campaign of sniping and shelling against the city of Sarajevo; instead, he denies that such a campaign ever existed.¹⁵⁸²⁴ The Accused further submits that there is no evidence that he promoted, rewarded, or otherwise decorated VRS officers while knowing that they were involved in criminal conduct.¹⁵⁸²⁵ Instead, he promoted them on the basis of the proposals from commanders of “lower units” in the field and because he had to respect the system of military subordination, which resulted in him rarely knowing whom he was actually promoting.¹⁵⁸²⁶

(B) Accused’s support for Mladić and SRK in relation to Sarajevo

4718. As discussed earlier, on 12 May 1992, at the 16th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, at which point Sarajevo was already encircled by various Bosnian Serb Forces,¹⁵⁸²⁷ the VRS was established and Mladić was appointed as its commander.¹⁵⁸²⁸ The Chamber also outlined how the Accused personally sought out Mladić, having noticed his “blunt statements in the newspapers”, discussed the relationship between the two men, and made findings thereon.¹⁵⁸²⁹

4719. In particular, during the 16th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, after the Accused had announced the Strategic Goals of the Bosnian Serbs and stated that the fighting around Sarajevo would decide the destiny of the BiH, Mladić pleaded with the Bosnian Serb political leadership to enunciate a set of realistic and clearly-defined strategic goals for the Bosnian Serb people.¹⁵⁸³⁰ He then informed those present that Bosnian Muslims in Sarajevo had nowhere to go because the city was facing a blockade, before exclaiming that “the head of the dragon of fundamentalism lies beneath our hammer.”¹⁵⁸³¹ He recounted how he had personally observed from a helicopter that Serb howitzers and tanks around Sarajevo were not adequately positioned and manned and warned the deputies that “[w]e should not spit at Sarajevo with two mortars.”¹⁵⁸³² According to Mladić, the surrender of Bosnian Muslims required that 300 guns, including howitzers, and multiple rocket launchers, be positioned around the city.¹⁵⁸³³ Other measures advocated by Mladić during this session were denying the population of Sarajevo access to the hospitals located in the city and inhibiting the flow of utilities into Sarajevo while assigning the blame for the resultant shortages to the Muslim side.¹⁵⁸³⁴ After referring to the fact that pursuant to his orders, vital JNA assets in Croatia had been either evacuated to Serb-held areas or rendered completely useless, Mladić assured the Assembly that the disciplined officers of the JNA's Knin Corps were going to change the picture around Sarajevo and that ultimately, the Bosnian Muslim side was not going to reap any benefit from the city unless it accepted peace.¹⁵⁸³⁵ It is following this speech that the Assembly, including the Accused, voted unanimously to appoint Mladić as the Commander of the VRS.¹⁵⁸³⁶

4720. Even before these formalities relating to the creation of the VRS and his own appointment were completed, Mladić was engaged in the Sarajevo battlefield, primarily in efforts to evacuate the JNA personnel trapped in the various barracks in the city.¹⁵⁸³⁷ In the process of negotiating those evacuations, Mladić made serious threats against the city and its citizens, revealing his hard-line approach towards the city. For example, on 11 May 1992, Mladić told a JNA General trapped in one of the barracks in Sarajevo that if the other side attacked that would be “the end of them”; he then advised the said General to use artillery fire against anything that posed an immediate threat to the barracks and not to spare either the Bosnian Muslim forces or the town.¹⁵⁸³⁸ On the same day, in a conversation with another trapped JNA officer, Mladić said that he would “tear down all of Sarajevo for you”.¹⁵⁸³⁹ Similarly, on 19 May in a conversation with yet another JNA officer, after being told that an ABiH General, Jovo Divjak, had threatened to attack the barracks, Mladić replied that if Divjak did that, he “would sentence first himself and then entire Sarajevo to death.”¹⁵⁸⁴⁰ The next day, Mladić warned two JNA officers about the potential cistern attack and told them that if this attack happened “the city would be burnt down.”¹⁵⁸⁴¹ He also specifically instructed one of the officers to ensure that any Bosnian Muslim attack against the barracks was responded to with force which was a hundred times greater.¹⁵⁸⁴² Further, on 24 May 1992, Mladić assured Tolimir that should the latter or any of his men be harmed in anyway, “Sarajevo will be gone!”¹⁵⁸⁴³ The following day, Mladić told an unidentified officer that if a single bullet was fired at Jusuf Džonlić barracks or Maršal Tito Barracks he would retaliate “against the town” such that “Sarajevo will shake, more shells will fall on [sic] per second than in the entire war so far.”¹⁵⁸⁴⁴ He then also stated that it was not his intention to “destroy the town and kill innocent people” and he preferred to fight the war in the mountains rather than in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁸⁴⁵ As discussed earlier, on the same day, during a meeting with Plavšić and John Wilson, Mladić threatened to “level the city” if JNA barracks were not evacuated and added that international military intervention would only result in the destruction of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁸⁴⁶

4721. While these conversations with JNA officers took place in the absence of the Accused, the Accused was, however, privy to a number of other discussions and meetings during which Mladić elaborated his plans in relation to the city and the evacuation of the JNA personnel.¹⁵⁸⁴⁷ As mentioned earlier, during one such meeting in May 1992, involving [REDACTED], Mladić, the Accused, Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević, Mladić outlined his plan to carry out a widespread artillery attack against the entire city of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁸⁴⁸ [REDACTED].¹⁵⁸⁴⁹ Throughout this meeting, the Accused and the others remained silent.¹⁵⁸⁵⁰ [REDACTED] if those present in the meeting, including the Accused, had been against it the shelling would never have happened.¹⁵⁸⁵¹

4722. Subsequently, Mladić issued direct orders to SRK brigade commands to carry out an indiscriminate and disproportionate artillery attack against Sarajevo on 28 and 29 May 1992, the nature of which has been described in more detail in an earlier section of the Judgement.¹⁵⁸⁵² For example, on 28 May 1992, Mladić personally ordered Mirko Vukašinović to direct artillery fire at Baščaršija and also against Velešići and Pofalići where “there [was] not much Serb

While Mladić did state during this conversation that it was not his intention to destroy the city and that he preferred to fight this war in the mountains rather than in Sarajevo, the Chamber considers that it is clear from this and all the other conversations he had in this period that, if he deemed it necessary, he was prepared to retaliate against the city as a whole, destroy it, and kill civilians.

population”.¹⁵⁸⁵³ Mladić also ordered Vukašinić to use artillery fire so as to ensure “that they cannot sleep, that we roll out their minds”.¹⁵⁸⁵⁴ The following day, Mladić told Potpara to be careful and not respond to provocations, and that he would not order the shelling of Sarajevo unless the Bosnian Muslims posed a threat to Potpara’s men.¹⁵⁸⁵⁵ Later that day, however, Mladić ordered Potpara to fire at the railway station in Sarajevo and told him to scatter the fire around.¹⁵⁸⁵⁶ It is clear from these orders that Mladić showed no concern for the civilian population of Sarajevo nor for any civilian casualties that would result from his orders to shell the city, including Baščaršija, Velešići, and Pofalići.

4723. As also discussed earlier, on 30 May 1992, while the bombardment continued, Morillon and Mackenzie met with the Accused and Koljević to discuss these events.¹⁵⁸⁵⁷ During the meeting, the Accused defended the actions of Mladić and the SRK, saying that due to their inexperience, the forces over-reacted to attacks by the Green Berets and that Mladić did not have all the forces under his command.¹⁵⁸⁵⁸ In doing so, the Accused showed awareness that the bombardment of the city had been extensive and had gone too far.

4724. Nevertheless, despite the Accused’s awareness, another massive attack on the city commenced on the night of 5 June and lasted until 8 June 1992.¹⁵⁸⁵⁹ It was preceded by a meeting on the same day involving Mladić, the Accused, Krajišnik, Plavšić, Koljević and Đerić, during which the Accused instructed those attending that Sarajevo had to be resolved politically while “acting quietly, inch by inch” and told them to clean up Butmir, Hrasnica, Sokolović Kolonija, and Hrasno.¹⁵⁸⁶⁰ The following day, while the bombing of the city was taking place, Mladić met the Accused, Koljević, Krajišnik, Ostojić, and others in Jahorina during which the Accused discussed the Strategic Goals, claiming “we have to protect our territories militarily” and that “the birth of a state and the creation of borders does not occur without war”.¹⁵⁸⁶¹ That same day Mladić issued Directive 1, in which he stated that the VRS had “received the task to use offensive actions [...] in order to improve operationally-tactical position in the wide area of Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁸⁶² He then tasked the SRK to “mop up parts of Sarajevo” and “cut it out” along the Nedžarići-Stup-Rajlovac axis; he also tasked them with mopping up Mojmiilo, Dobrinja, Butmir, and Sokolović Kolonija, and with de-blocking of Sarajevo–Trnovo and Pale–Zlatište communication.¹⁵⁸⁶³

4725. There is no doubt, therefore, that at the very beginning of the conflict in Sarajevo the Accused fully supported and actively encouraged the heavy-handed military approach taken by Mladić in Sarajevo, including the shellings that took place between 28 and 30 May and 5 and 8 June 1992. Indeed, [REDACTED], during the first months of the conflict, the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić, mainly due to their lack of knowledge of army matters, gave Mladić absolute power over such matters.¹⁵⁸⁶⁴ Starting in June 1992, however, they began to gradually limit Mladić and eventually the “political power was on top”.¹⁵⁸⁶⁵

4726. [REDACTED].¹⁵⁸⁶⁶ [REDACTED].¹⁵⁸⁶⁷

4727. Despite this [REDACTED], of which he was fully aware, the Accused nevertheless continued to support Mladić and his plans for the city. For example, in Directive 3, issued by the Main Staff on 3 August 1992, Mladić outlined the objective of keeping Sarajevo “firmly under blockade” and thus instructed the SRK to “gradually tighten the encirclement”.¹⁵⁸⁶⁸ The next day, on 4 August 1992, at a meeting between the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, and Koljević, the participants accepted this directive without objection, although Koljević requested a “sabotage operation in Sarajevo” and the “[t]aking of Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁸⁶⁹

Through incessant activities and combat actions with all available SRK forces, cause as many losses as possible to the enemy and develop feelings of dependency, fear and in security [sic].¹⁵⁸⁷¹

At the end of this meeting, the Accused stated that he supported everything that was said at the meeting, that “a wounded animal is the most dangerous one”, that nothing could be achieved through negotiations with Izetbegović, and that Izetbegović therefore must be defeated while at the same time the Bosnian Serbs needed to ensure “favourable international conditions”.¹⁵⁸⁷² Following these remarks, Mladić addressed the Accused, Krajišnik, and Lukić, stating that the Main Staff would take into account their remarks and produce appropriate orders.¹⁵⁸⁷³ Thus, on 25 June 1993, Directive 5 was issued, outlining the Lukavac '93 operation, in which Mladić tasked the SRK to “create conditions to assume control over [Sarajevo]”.¹⁵⁸⁷⁴ He explained in the directive that the VRS had been tasked with preventing the lifting of the blockade of Sarajevo and the capture of special-purpose facilities under SRK control.¹⁵⁸⁷⁵ As discussed earlier, this operation in turn led to the capture of Mt. Igman and the threats of NATO air strikes against the Bosnian Serb side.¹⁵⁸⁷⁶

4729. A year and a half later, on 14 January 1994, in a meeting between the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Milošević, Galić, SRK brigade commanders, and Sarajevo municipality presidents, the Accused discussed the military and political situation in Sarajevo as well as the negotiations in Geneva.¹⁵⁸⁷⁷ During the meeting, Mladić stated that Sarajevo was to be resolved “militarily, not politically”.¹⁵⁸⁷⁸ He called for improvement in the “operative positions” of the SRK.¹⁵⁸⁷⁹ He also recommended cutting off the tunnel used by the Bosnian Muslims and emphasised “responsibility and discipline in the army”.¹⁵⁸⁸⁰ Once again showing support for Mladić and his resolution to resolve the situation in Sarajevo militarily rather than politically, the Accused stated that Mladić was “100% right” and that the Bosnian Muslims “will break down in Sarajevo”.¹⁵⁸⁸¹ He then ordered the creation of a “stand-by army” and for all soldiers recruited since April 1992 to remain in the army until the end of the war.¹⁵⁸⁸² He also ordered that the SRK’s “[r]etaliations shall be 1:1”.¹⁵⁸⁸³ He ended the meeting by ordering the SRK commanders to “[q]uickly line up the brigades”.¹⁵⁸⁸⁴

4730. In addition to the Accused’s explicit exclamations of support of Mladić’s strategy in Sarajevo recounted above, the Chamber has also received a number of Mladić’s diaries in evidence which in turn reveal that a number of meetings took place throughout the conflict, which were attended by both the Accused and Mladić and during which the situation in Sarajevo was discussed and a course of action agreed upon. These also show that the two men continued to co-operate throughout the war and continued to agree on the course of action in relation to Sarajevo-related matters.¹⁵⁸⁸⁵

4731. As well as lending support to Mladić’s activities in the Sarajevo battlefield, the Accused, in accordance with his powers to promote VRS officers,¹⁵⁸⁸⁶ also granted Mladić an exceptional promotion on 28 June 1994 for his achievements as Commander of the VRS Main Staff, elevating his rank to Colonel General.¹⁵⁸⁸⁷ By that point, Sarajevo had been under siege for two years and the Accused had been told on a number of occasions about the indiscriminate and disproportionate shelling the city was exposed to by the SRK.¹⁵⁸⁸⁸

4732. Similarly, the Accused also issued decrees assigning senior officers to the SRK, promoted them after their assignments, and bestowed decorations on the members of the SRK war units. On 31 August 1992, the Accused appointed Stanislav Galić as Commander of the SRK.¹⁵⁸⁸⁹ On 16 December 1992, following a difficult period for the city of Sarajevo and particularly heavy indiscriminate shelling in September and October 1992 which resulted in the representatives of the international community protesting to Koljević, Plavšić, and the Accused,¹⁵⁸⁹⁰ the Accused used his powers of exceptional promotion to promote Galić to the rank of Major General.¹⁵⁸⁹¹ Then, on 7 August 1994, just over a month after promoting Mladić, the Accused again granted an early promotion to Galić, giving him a rank of Lieutenant General.¹⁵⁸⁹² On 12 August 1994, after Mladić initiated a procedure for termination of Galić's professional military service on the basis of Galić's completion of more than 30 years of pensionable service, Galić requested, amongst other things, that the Accused follow through on his promise and award him the highest RS decoration and allocate to him a furnished apartment in the Novi Sad Garrison or in the Banja Luka Garrison.¹⁵⁸⁹³

4733. The Accused was also imperative in the appointment and successive promotions of Dragomir Milošević. Thus, on 10 July 1993, the Accused assigned Milošević, who at the time was the Chief of Operations and Training in the Drina Corps Command, to the posts of Chief of Staff and Deputy Commander of the SRK.¹⁵⁸⁹⁴ Then, on 24 March 1994, only a month and a half after the shelling of Dobrinja and Markale on 4 and 5 February respectively, and despite receiving protests from the international community about these two incidents,¹⁵⁸⁹⁵ the Accused used his powers of exceptional promotion to raise Milošević's rank from that of Colonel to Major General, effective the following day.¹⁵⁸⁹⁶ Finally, on 8 August 1994, the Accused appointed Milošević as Commander of the SRK, effective as of 15 August 1994.¹⁵⁸⁹⁷ Within the VRS, Milošević was considered to have been the Accused's man.¹⁵⁸⁹⁸

4734. In addition to the above appointments and promotions, the Chamber heard that on 25 June 1995, some two months after Scheduled Incident G.10 for which Ilidža Brigade was responsible and of which the Accused was aware,¹⁵⁸⁹⁹ Mladić informed the SRK Command that on the occasion of St. Vitus Day, the Accused was going to award Petar Mrkonjić medals to the members of the Ilidža Brigade and the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade, among others.¹⁵⁹⁰⁰

(C) Conclusion

4735. Based on the foregoing, the Chamber finds that the Accused brought in and appointed Mladić to the post of VRS Main Staff Commander. According to the Accused's own words at the Bosnian Serb Assembly session in April 1995, he personally went into a lot of effort to bring in Mladić, having noticed Mladić's activities in Knin and having taken note of his "blunt statements". Then, during the 16th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and immediately prior to his appointment as VRS Commander, Mladić freely articulated his Sarajevo strategy in front of the Accused and other members of the Bosnian Serb political leadership, specifying in clear terms that in his view, besieging and targeting Sarajevo with large numbers of heavy weapons would compel Bosnian Muslims to accede to the demands made by the Bosnian Serbs. Despite this clear elucidation of what was to come for Sarajevo, the Accused and the other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership voted in favour of Mladić's appointment.

4736. The Chamber further finds that shortly after his appointment Mladić did indeed intensify the campaign against Sarajevo through his involvement in the widespread shelling of the city by the SRK as described above and in sections of the Judgement dealing with Scheduled Incidents G.1 and G.2. Despite this intensification, which various international observers brought to the Accused's attention and which he himself indirectly acknowledged in his meeting with Morillon and Mackenzie on 30 May 1992, the Accused nevertheless lent his unwavering support to Mladić, defending him before the international community and blaming the other side for the intensification of the campaign.¹⁵⁹⁰¹ Further, the Accused continued to actively participate in and approve of Mladić's acts and plans for the city, as illustrated by his acceptance of all the military directives signed by Mladić, as well as the 2 June meeting in Jahorina and a number of other meetings where the two men, along with others, discussed their plans for Sarajevo. Indeed, on 28 June 1994, by which stage the Accused was fully aware of the international community's objections to the SRK's and Mladić's activities in Sarajevo,¹⁵⁹⁰² the Accused decided to use his de jure powers to promote Mladić to the rank of Colonel General, thus in fact rewarding his activities on the Sarajevo battlefield. Accordingly, the Chamber has no doubt that the Accused supported Mladić in his efforts to intensify the shelling and the sniping in the city throughout the conflict in Sarajevo and throughout the Indictment period.

¹⁵⁹⁰² See Section IV.B.3.c.iii: Accused's knowledge.

4737. In reaching the above conclusions, the Chamber was cognisant of the tensions that existed at certain times between the Accused and Mladić¹⁵⁹⁰³ but finds that such tensions were not of such intensity and/or scope so as to diminish the level of support which the Accused provided to Mladić's policies vis-à-vis Sarajevo, as clearly shown by the evidence outlined above.

4738. The Chamber further finds that aside from Mladić, the Accused also promoted or otherwise decorated SRK officers and SRK units who were implicated by international observers in the commission of crimes against the population of Sarajevo, thus showing his support for them. As outlined above, the Accused promoted Galić and Dragomir Milošević, despite being constantly informed of problems with disproportionate firing into the city by the SRK units, as outlined later in this Judgement.¹⁵⁹⁰⁴ Indeed, his relationship with Milošević was particularly close and continued to be one of mutual support, despite the fact that Milošević was directly implicated, among other things, in the use of modified air bombs in the city.¹⁵⁹⁰⁵ Further, the Accused decorated the members of the Ilidža Brigade in July 1995, even though he was aware that Ilidža Brigade had fired a modified air bomb into the centre of Hrasnica, as found by the Chamber earlier in this Judgement.¹⁵⁹⁰⁶

4739. As for the Accused's claim that he hardly ever knew whom he was promoting because he would simply sign off on promotions on the basis of proposals from commanders of "lower units", the Chamber does not consider this to have been the case with regards to Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević. Indeed, given their high ranks and taking into account the Accused's particular interest and involvement in everything Sarajevo-related, the Chamber does not accept that he would have been unaware of their promotions and/or that he promoted them purely on the basis of the proposals from lower level commanders. Contrary to his submissions, the Chamber is convinced that when appointing and promoting these three men, the Accused was fully aware and supportive of their appointments and promotions, all the while having knowledge that they were implicated in indiscriminate and disproportionate shelling and in sniping attacks on the civilian population in the city. In doing so, he indicated that the criminal actions of Mladić, as well as the actions of the SRK Commanders and their units, were immune from investigation and punishment.

ii. Accused's oversight of military activities in Sarajevo

(A) Arguments of the parties

4740. The Prosecution argues that the Accused, as Supreme Commander of the VRS, oversaw the strategy and implementation of the plan through his command and control over the Bosnian Serb Forces in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁹⁰⁷ It argues that the Accused was at the “apex of control” of the Bosnian Serb Forces through his position as “President of the SDS, President of the Presidency, sole President and Supreme Commander” and that this power was acknowledged by the members of the VRS, including Mladić, Milovanović, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević.¹⁵⁹⁰⁸

4741. The Accused in turn argues that no substantial discussions took place during meetings of the RS political leadership and the SRK commanders as these meetings were of a formal nature.¹⁵⁹⁰⁹ He further claims that Galić and Dragomir Milošević did not receive orders or instructions from the Presidency that applied exclusively to the SRK, and that “any information arriving from the Presidency applied across the board to the VRS”.¹⁵⁹¹⁰ With respect to Galić, the Accused argues that communication between them was limited and “practically non-existent in terms of carrying out combat activities”.¹⁵⁹¹¹ As for Dragomir Milošević, he argues that neither the civilian authorities of the RS nor the political leaders of the SDS ever influenced Milošević’s command because they did not interfere in military matters.¹⁵⁹¹² He argues that communication on the ground between republican and military authorities was disrupted and that the system of command and control did not work well due to “obsolete technical equipment” of the SRK.¹⁵⁹¹³ The Accused also argues that due to the shortage of professional officers in the SRK, the VRS faced problems achieving effective control over its units.¹⁵⁹¹⁴ Finally, he argues that “in one period of the war” the relationship between the SRK and republican authorities was tense resulting in a refusal by the military to obey orders from the Supreme Command.¹⁵⁹¹⁵

(B) SRK as a professional army

4742. The Chamber recalls that the VRS, including the SRK, was established as a professional army pursuant to a decision by the Bosnian Serb Assembly and enactment of the Defence Act and the Law of the Army.¹⁵⁹¹⁶ The Chamber also recalls its earlier finding that the Accused was involved in the creation of the VRS.¹⁵⁹¹⁷

4743. Throughout the case, the Chamber received evidence that the SRK was a well-organised corps that functioned as a professional army within the structure of the VRS, with an effective command and control structure in place in its units at all levels.¹⁵⁹¹⁸ On 19 November 1992, in Directive 4, Mladić himself stated that the SRK “has fully stabilised command and control in the Corps and subordinate units”.¹⁵⁹¹⁹ A July 1994 analysis on the combat readiness of the SRK artillery rocket units prepared by the SRK Chief of Artillery, Tadija Manojlović, states that while the SRK was debilitated by the departure of officers for the FRY in the early stages of the war which in turn had a negative effect on command and control, it still managed to attain “evident results in [the] protection of the Serbian people and the territory” and that, notwithstanding a number of problems it had faced, such as the lack of trained soldiers and officers, the results attained were “excellent and outstanding”.¹⁵⁹²⁰ According to an April 1993 VRS report, during the previous year, the VRS had been under a “single control and command structure” whereby each corps was assigned specific missions, in their zones of responsibility, within a specific time period.¹⁵⁹²¹

4744. Thomas testified that from Mladić down to the brigade commanders, “there was a kind of command and control that I would expect to find in a NATO army”,¹⁵⁹²² while Van Baal testified that, by 1994, the VRS had a highly centralised command and control structure.¹⁵⁹²³ KDZ182 also thought that the chain of command of the VRS and the SRK was “working perfectly” and that “responsibility at each echelon was effectively implemented in the way the actions were actually ¹⁵⁹²¹ D325 (VRS Main Staff analysis of combat readiness and army activities in 1992, April 1993), pp. 7–8. According to Galić, when he took command of the SRK in September 1992, Šipčić had been gone for approximately one month and there was a lack of discipline on the frontlines in the northwest due to the fact that the JNA had left but the TO units had not yet been sufficiently incorporated into the VRS. See Stanislav Galić, T. 37619–37622 (23 April 2013); D3483 (SRK Order, 22 September 1992), pp. 1–3. However, the Chamber recalls its finding made earlier that the TOs were integrated into the VRS in mid-May 1992. See para. 3176. According to Prosecution expert Philipps, when Galić took command of the SRK, the training and organisation within the corps improved. ¹⁵⁹²² P1558 (Witness statement of Francis Roy Thomas dated 13 May 2009), para. 50 (adding that he could not recall a single instance where the Bosnian Serb brigade commanders did not follow a corps commander’s direction). Thomas also noted that the cease-fire in February 1994 did have a significant impact on the city of Sarajevo and demonstrated the high level of command and control in the VRS. See P1558 (Witness statement of Francis Roy Thomas dated 13 May 2009), para. 107.

carried out”.¹⁵⁹²⁴ [REDACTED] Mladić exercised absolute power and complete control over everything that concerned the VRS, such as “fighting, logistics, and a number of other elements” but was not involved in the political agenda of the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹⁵⁹²⁵

4745. KDZ450 also testified that the chain of subordination of the armed forces in Sarajevo was “very simple”, with Mladić being the “high command”, then the SRK Commander, and then the brigades.¹⁵⁹²⁶ Military structures worked in a “very typical manner” in that responsibility was very entrenched and the room for individual initiative was “very slim”.¹⁵⁹²⁷ On many occasions Mladić demonstrated effective control, for example, by arranging the opening of confrontation line crossing points, implementing temporary cease-fires, and directly commanding military operations.¹⁵⁹²⁸ Wilson testified that Mladić’s command was far-reaching and that during the meetings they had together, Mladić never denied that he was in control of the war-like activities conducted by the military forces in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁹²⁹ KDZ182 considered that Mladić was the one who had the real power such that all the incidents in Sarajevo were in fact orchestrated, guided, and designed by him.¹⁵⁹³⁰ In his opinion, Mladić instructed the SRK Commander to exert pressure and terrorise the population.¹⁵⁹³¹

groups” in the Sarajevo area were under his control.¹⁵⁹³⁴ Tucker testified that, when he met with Galić, it was clear that the relationship between Mladić and Galić “was that of a senior commander and a subordinate” whereby Mladić was the highest ranking Bosnian Serb military commander and only considered himself subordinate to the Bosnian Serb Assembly, while Galić was a disciplined and obedient subordinate.¹⁵⁹³⁵ According to Mole, Galić was “extremely emotional”, but carried out his military duties extremely well and “could achieve what he wanted” regarding Sarajevo.¹⁵⁹³⁶ Galić would visit the brigades, such as the 3rd Sarajevo Brigade and 1st Romanija Brigade for example, a few times per month, meet the commanders, gain knowledge of the situation on the frontlines, and then sometimes call everyone together for a briefing.¹⁵⁹³⁷ In essence, Galić actively monitored the situation in Sarajevo, was cognisant of the situation in the battlefield, was in a good position to instruct and order his troops, was in full control over the SRK artillery assets, and was aware of the quantity of ammunition being used.¹⁵⁹³⁸

4747. The SRK continued to operate as a professional military force after Dragomir Milošević took over from Galić as the SRK Commander;¹⁵⁹³⁹ he too was respected and highly esteemed by the SRK soldiers.¹⁵⁹⁴⁰ As was the case with Galić, Milošević regularly visited the troops and the frontlines.¹⁵⁹⁴¹ He would have a briefing with his Chief of Staff and Corps Staff every morning, during which he made decisions and issued orders, and in the evening would receive reports from the Corps Staff.¹⁵⁹⁴² Once a week or once a fortnight Dragomir Milošević had briefings with the brigade commanders.¹⁵⁹⁴³

On cross-examination, Mole testified that he did not think that the Accused or Mladić had direct involvement in the day-to-day events in Sarajevo as that was the task of Galić as the Commander; however, Galić would have responded to political pressure and military pressure from those above him. 4748. While subordinated to Mladić, Dragomir Milošević was in command in the SRK and, therefore, according to KDZ304, was responsible for SRK operations, including for any SRK attacks against civilians or indiscriminate or disproportionate attacks.¹⁵⁹⁴⁴ According to Fraser, while Mladić was in charge and directed operations in the whole of BiH, including Sarajevo, “within that little box called Sarajevo, Dragomir Milošević was the guy in command”.¹⁵⁹⁴⁵ KDZ182 considered that “Mladić was the strategist and Dragomir Milošević was the technician in Sarajevo”, that is, Mladić had “the power to design” and Dragomir Milošević had “the power to carry out” in that he “kept total mastery of the means needed to implement locally a certain number of actions”.¹⁵⁹⁴⁶

4749. Inđić was also important in the context of Sarajevo, being “Mladić’s eye”, a participant in all of the significant meetings held in Sarajevo, and always alongside Galić and Dragomir Milošević at those meetings; thus, while Inđić did not take decisions he had a lot of influence.¹⁵⁹⁴⁷ Indeed, Dragomir Milošević would not do anything without Inđić by his side and could not take any strategic initiatives.¹⁵⁹⁴⁸ In other words, Dragomir Milošević carried out orders but had very little freedom to act independently, as he only executed orders of his superiors.¹⁵⁹⁴⁹

4750. While the chain of command appeared to function well during the conflict, the Chamber received evidence, mainly from former SRK soldiers and officers, that the SRK had problems which had an impact on its functions as a professional army. For example, Dragan Maletić, Slavko Gengo, Blagoje Kovačević, and Stojan Džino testified that there was a lack of professionally trained soldiers and officers within their units, which in turn affected the command and control structure and combat effectiveness.¹⁵⁹⁵⁰ On the other hand, Vlade Lučić testified that the shortage of professional officers in his unit, the 2nd Mountain Battalion of the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade,

However, during a meeting with UNPROFOR on 21 March 1995, regarding aircraft arriving and departing from Sarajevo airport that were reportedly being fired upon by the SRK, Dragomir Milošević stated that he would ensure that the SRK refrain from firing at aircraft. It was noted that for the first time Dragomir Milošević appeared more dominant in the meeting with Inđić and Fraser, the drafter, records that this was uncharacteristic of the SRK Commander. See P2429 (UNPROFOR report, 21 March 1995); [REDACTED].

did not have a major impact on the quality of command because the battalion conducted additional command training and took a professional approach to commanding.¹⁵⁹⁵¹ Maletić also conceded that, over time, the level of training and combat proficiency improved because an effective command and control had been established.¹⁵⁹⁵² This is indeed confirmed by Tadija Manojlović's July 1994 analysis of combat readiness, referred to above.¹⁵⁹⁵³

4751. Based on all the evidence outlined above, and relying also on the evidence and findings made in the earlier sections of this Judgement,¹⁵⁹⁵⁴ the Chamber considers that, from its creation and throughout the conflict the SRK, just like the rest of the VRS, functioned as a professional military force. It was fully integrated into the VRS chain of command, it had an effective command and control structure in place with the SRK Command, and it was fully in charge of the SRK brigades and other subordinate units. While the Chamber accepts that some of those units lacked officers and professional soldiers in the beginning of the conflict, as outlined in the July 1994 analysis of the combat readiness of SRK artillery rocket units, the evidence shows that, overall, the SRK was a well-functioning professional corps of the VRS. Galić and Dragomir Milošević were clearly in command of the SRK units during their respective tenures and had effective control over those units. Mladić as the commander of the Main Staff was their superior and exercised effective control over them, through the regular chain of command.

(C) Accused's authority over the SRK

4752. As described previously in this Judgement, the Accused in his capacity as President was also the Supreme Commander of the VRS.¹⁵⁹⁵⁵ As such, he held the highest de jure authority in the VRS.¹⁵⁹⁵⁶ Further, the Chamber found that from May 1992 and throughout the conflict, the Accused, in fact, exercised this authority over the VRS.¹⁵⁹⁵⁷ Accordingly, he was involved in the VRS at the strategic level, and when he desired, the operational level as well.¹⁵⁹⁵⁸

4753. The Chamber found in Section IV.A.3.a.iii that the Accused maintained his role as Mladić's superior and retained his authority over him throughout the conflict.¹⁵⁹⁵⁹ Many of the witnesses who were in Sarajevo during the conflict and interacted with the Accused and Mladić testified that the Accused, together with and through Mladić, was fully in control over the SRK. For example, Banbury testified that the Accused and Mladić absolutely had the ability to “modulate the level of terror” in Sarajevo as they could stop the shelling and the sniping.¹⁵⁹⁶⁰ [REDACTED] had the impression that there was a “very tight subordination” that was displayed from the corps commander towards the military commanders higher up and then the political leaders.¹⁵⁹⁶¹ As noted earlier, during the first months of the conflict, the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić did not deal with issues that related to military affairs but this restraint on their part waned starting in June 1992 when they began to gradually limit Mladić.¹⁵⁹⁶² The Chamber also recalls that a number of witnesses who were in Sarajevo during the conflict testified about unity between Mladić and the Accused.¹⁵⁹⁶³ Indeed, during his time in Sarajevo, Bowen observed that Mladić usually accompanied the Accused.¹⁵⁹⁶⁴

4754. The Chamber received evidence about a number of specific meetings where the Accused exerted control or demonstrated his influence over the forces in Sarajevo. For example, on 30 May 1992, in a meeting with the Accused, Morillon referred to the Secretary General’s appeal to Mladić to “stop the bombardment” in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁹⁶⁵ While noting that the soldiers were inexperienced and self-organised and that Mladić did not have everyone under his command, the Accused nevertheless said he was in a position to stop the bombardment.¹⁵⁹⁶⁶ Eventually, the Accused informed UNPROFOR that Mladić had indicated by phone that the bombardment would cease.¹⁵⁹⁶⁷ On the same day, Wilson also met with Mladić to convey the Secretary General’s appeal to cease or lessen the shelling of Sarajevo.¹⁵⁹⁶⁸ When asked for confirmation of the Accused’s offer to withdraw all heavy weapons, Mladić said that he had no knowledge of such an offer but would nevertheless give his advice to his government and abide by any agreement made, essentially confirming that he was responsive to and subordinate to the political leadership.¹⁵⁹⁶⁹ From this, Wilson concluded that there seemed to be a very comfortable relationship between the Bosnian Serb civilian leadership and Mladić; indeed, Mladić would repeatedly say that he was a soldier with no political ambitions.¹⁵⁹⁷⁰ While Mladić had a strong personality, and was capable of acting independently, ultimately he did “what his political masters told him to do”.¹⁵⁹⁷¹

Wilson testified that while this lack of control may have existed at the very beginning of the conflict, it did not explain the overall strategy of the siege and bombardment of Sarajevo at the time; Wilson believed that Mladić had very firm control over heavy weapons and the firing in Sarajevo. See P1029 (Witness statement of John Wilson dated 4 November 2008), para. 82; John Wilson, T. 4079–4080 (22 June 2010).

4755. [REDACTED] a meeting on 16 February 1994 between UNPROFOR, Galić, and Indić at Lukavica, where WCP sites and number and location of the deployment of UNMO and UNPROFOR personnel in Sarajevo were agreed upon, but the agreement had to be sent to the political authorities for approval; this demonstrated that any discussions with Galić that resulted in proposals could only be considered non-binding, as Galić was not able to commit himself without asking his superiors, both military and political.¹⁵⁹⁷²

4756. Van Baal recalled an incident on 20 March 1994, in which soldiers from the Ilijaš Brigade surrounded a CanBat contingent which had taken custody of heavy weapons in the TEZ; this prompted Van Baal to telephone the Accused in protest.¹⁵⁹⁷³ The Accused stated that he would give the order not to shoot and some 15 to 20 minutes later the VRS soldiers withdrew.¹⁵⁹⁷⁴ On the same day, Van Baal became aware of the presence of mines under CanBat APCs and requested that the Accused order their removal.¹⁵⁹⁷⁵ The Accused assured Van Baal that he would do so and the mines were subsequently removed.¹⁵⁹⁷⁶ Later that evening, Van Baal discovered that mines were again placed underneath the CanBat APCs.¹⁵⁹⁷⁷ The next day he met with the Accused and Galić and told them that mines were there; the Accused then told Galić, “you promised me that this would be done last night” and ordered Galić to remove the mines.¹⁵⁹⁷⁸ Galić left the room and immediately carried out the orders of the Accused.¹⁵⁹⁷⁹ In the same meeting, the Accused also ordered Galić to remove heavy weapons from the TEZ; Galić implemented the order despite disagreeing with the Accused.¹⁵⁹⁸⁰ Van Baal deduced that the Accused was in a position to give orders to Galić, that Galić’s orders were executed through the command and control system, and that there was immediate feedback through the SRK communications system.¹⁵⁹⁸¹ Thus, the Accused was in control and capable of enforcing his political undertakings.¹⁵⁹⁸²

4757. Some of the witnesses noted, however, that the Accused was not always in control of the forces in Sarajevo and that Mladić would not always do as he was told in relation to Sarajevo. For example, Abdel-Razek explained that the Bosnian Serb political leadership was amenable during the meetings with him, but that there were problems with implementation on the ground resulting from the problems in the chain of command and the fact that the good intentions of the political leadership were not reaching the soldiers.¹⁵⁹⁸³ He later stated that it was a situation of civil war with “civilians who carried weapons and who were armed with strong passions” such that “there was a lack of control by the central command and that there was no full co-ordination between the leadership and the higher command and the subordinates on the ground”.¹⁵⁹⁸⁴ Similarly, Momir Bulatović recalled a meeting of the FRY Council of Co-ordination of State Policy in Belgrade on 18 August 1992 discussing the situation in Sarajevo.¹⁵⁹⁸⁵ Milan Panić, the FRY Prime Minister, stated “the problem is war, they are shooting. [The Accused] told us yesterday that he did not command the guns, they do it themselves”.¹⁵⁹⁸⁶ Also at this meeting, the Chief of the VJ General Staff stated, “when [the Accused] was at the talks the other day, you heard him say that he did not have control over the individuals who were doing that, but that he did know that they were doing it. They fire one shell at Sarajevo and it’s like they fired a thousand shells. Some people get drunk and say, ‘Let’s fire one.’ It’s very damaging for us”.¹⁵⁹⁸⁷ Bulatović also expressed an opinion that the Bosnian Serb leadership did not have “full control over the command” and that it was “somewhat detached from the staff that is working and operating [in Sarajevo]”.¹⁵⁹⁸⁸ Bulatović testified that the FRY political leadership advised the Accused numerous times about the detrimental impact that the shelling of Sarajevo had on the political position of the Bosnian Serbs, which the Accused had agreed with but had been unable to solve.¹⁵⁹⁸⁹ In Bulatović’s opinion, the Accused lacked control over the VRS.¹⁵⁹⁹⁰

4758. As for the Accused’s relationship with Mladić, Abdel-Razek thought that Mladić was “one of the few people who could stop Karadžić’s negations and influence” and that he was the only one who could “refuse or accept any of Karadžić’s proposals”.¹⁵⁹⁹¹ Tucker testified that he, Morillon, and the UNPROFOR staff formed an opinion that, in most cases, Mladić would do what the Accused and the Bosnian Serb Assembly directed him and the VRS to do.¹⁵⁹⁹² However, if Mladić believed that he was being ordered to do something that would “endanger” the Bosnian Serbs, he did not always do as ordered.¹⁵⁹⁹³ Tucker also stated that although the Accused would often make promises, he needed to speak to the military to actually get things done since the Accused did not know the details of what was going on in the military.¹⁵⁹⁹⁴ Based on the observations he made at the time, Tucker thought that Mladić “pretended he was subservient to Karadžić”, and that the Accused and Koljević had limited power to “actually influence and decide tactical military events”.¹⁵⁹⁹⁵ However, after being shown a number of VRS orders and documents showing the involvement of the Accused in military matters, Tucker stated that the Accused’s involvement with military planning and co-ordination was much greater than either he or Morillon believed at the time.¹⁵⁹⁹⁶ Tucker also explained that the Accused’s level of knowledge of military detail was greater for Sarajevo than other parts of BiH.¹⁵⁹⁹⁷

4759. Tucker gave two specific examples where Mladić seemed to be acting independently of the Accused. The first was the co-ordinated military attack on Sarajevo by the SRK,¹⁵⁹⁹⁸ which took place while the Accused was at peace talks in Geneva on 31 October 1992 and surprised the Bosnian Muslims side; Tucker thought that the attack appeared to be a military initiative on the part of Mladić and that it was no coincidence that it happened while the Accused was away.¹⁵⁹⁹⁹ It was Morillon’s view that the Accused was unlikely to have approved a military attack while in Geneva.¹⁶⁰⁰⁰ Tucker believed that the attack was a message from Mladić and possibly “hardliners in the civilian leadership (e.g. Krajišnik)” that the international community had no real power to influence events in BiH.¹⁶⁰⁰¹

4760. The second was a meeting on 15 November 1992, attended by Morillon and Mladić in Lukavica, during which Mladić spoke as if he, and he alone, had the ability to make decisions and implement them and “barely made any effort to conceal the fact that nothing could or would happen in Bosnian Serb held territory without his specific approval”; according to Tucker, it was “very apparent that he made all the practical military decisions that mattered”.¹⁶⁰⁰² Tucker also

However, Tucker testified that soon after, following a meeting on 20 November 1992 between Morillon and Accused, it became obvious that Mladić deferred to the Accused who had just come back from Geneva and that “in comparison with Mladić’s bombastic behaviour at the meeting on 15 November, at this meeting Mladić is ‘back in his box’.” See P4203 (Witness statement of Pyers Tucker dated 12 May 2010), paras. 64–69; P4216 (UNPROFOR report re meeting with Radovan Karadžić, 20 November 1992); Pyers Tucker, T. 23226–23235 (18 January 2012). Further, on 27 November, Morillon reported that the meeting he had with the Accused and Mladić on that day confirmed a moderately healthy military/political relationship between the two men. See D539 (UNPROFOR report re meeting with Radovan Karadžić and Ratko Mladić, 27 November 1992), para. 11(b); P4203 (Witness statement of Pyers Tucker dated 12 May 2010), para. 72.

noticed inconsistencies in Mladić's own position, recalling that in one meeting Mladić stated he would defer to the Bosnian Serb Assembly, but in another meeting he spoke as if he alone had the ability to implement decisions, and then at a follow-up meeting, he deferred to the Accused.¹⁶⁰⁰³

4761. On 8 December 1994, Andreev and Banbury met with Koljević in Pale.¹⁶⁰⁰⁴ During the meeting Koljević conceded that "matters had gone too far and that the behaviour of the [VRS] needed to be fixed".¹⁶⁰⁰⁵ The meeting involved a serious discussion about UNPROFOR withdrawing due to unacceptable curtailment of freedom of movement, theft of property, and restrictions on re-supply,¹⁶⁰⁰⁶ and Banbury testified that it was unclear whether Koljević's remarks were genuine or whether it was a means of "shifting the blame".¹⁶⁰⁰⁷ Following the meeting, Banbury drafted a report to Akashi, noting that there appeared to be a serious split between the political and military leadership of the Bosnian Serbs, with the former advocating a more co-operative approach in the face of resistance from the latter.¹⁶⁰⁰⁸ However, at a meeting of 12 December 1994, Krajišnik, Koljević, Gvero, and Tolimir protested against this report and denied the existence of any such a split.¹⁶⁰⁰⁹ Banbury thought that, if there was a split, it was a split on a policy level, which is usual in any institution, and there was nothing to suggest that there was a change or split in the chain of command.¹⁶⁰¹⁰

4762. Galić testified that there was a parallel or dual command structure, where it was possible to receive orders both from the Accused, as the Supreme Commander, and from Mladić as the commander of the Main Staff, which led to confusion as to who actually commanded the VRS.¹⁶⁰¹¹ However, Galić did not remember a single occasion when a direct order came to him from the Supreme Commander as it would usually go through the Main Staff.¹⁶⁰¹² Had he received conflicting orders from the Accused and from Mladić, he would have followed the order of his immediate superior, Mladić.¹⁶⁰¹³ Dragomir Milošević testified that the relationship between the Accused and Mladić was “detrimental” and he blamed Mladić for wanting to be dominant in all situations without respecting authority.¹⁶⁰¹⁴ However, like Galić, Milošević did not have specific personal knowledge of Mladić being defiant against the Accused; it was the general impression he had.¹⁶⁰¹⁵

4763. As discussed earlier in the Judgement, many Defence witnesses, including SRK soldiers and officers, testified that the relationship between the Accused and Mladić was strained.¹⁶⁰¹⁶ When Kovač met with Mladić in May 1992, they disagreed over the passage of convoys transporting civilians out of Sarajevo, with Kovač allowing the convoys and Mladić preventing them from departing.¹⁶⁰¹⁷ The Accused settled the dispute by allowing the convoys to leave Sarajevo.¹⁶⁰¹⁸ According to Kovač, as the war progressed, tensions between the civilian and military authorities increased and a particularly noticeable disagreement concerned the number of VRS soldiers deployed around Sarajevo as compared to Srebrenica and Žepa; Kovač thought the Main Staff was “depriving” units of the SRK, suspending delivery of ammunition, in an attempt to make Sarajevo fall.¹⁶⁰¹⁹ The Chamber has analysed these tensions earlier in the Judgement and made findings thereon.¹⁶⁰²⁰

(D) Accused’s orders relevant to Sarajevo

4764. The fact that the chain of command between the Accused and the SRK operated as intended and that the Accused was directly involved in Sarajevo-related military operations is confirmed by the evidence that the Accused issued orders directly relevant to the SRK and the Sarajevo battlefield.¹⁶⁰²¹ For example, as outlined above, the Accused issued Directives 6 and 7, as well as the supplement to Directive 6, all of which concerned Sarajevo.¹⁶⁰²²

4765. On 20 May 1992, the Accused issued an order to the Main Staff, MUP, and Ministry of Defence to establish a military police company within the SRK.¹⁶⁰²³ Similarly, on 2 June 1992, the Accused issued an order to send two platoons of special forces from Crepoljsko to Nedžarići to be placed under the command of the SRK where they were to report to Kovač.¹⁶⁰²⁴ He also ordered that the “Presidency as the Supreme Command” be informed of the execution of this task.¹⁶⁰²⁵ [REDACTED] the Accused had an interest in Nedžarići as it was an important part of the frontline.¹⁶⁰²⁶

4766. On 9 October 1992, the RS Presidency held a session in which it decided to halt the bombing of Sarajevo and do so through the Main Staff.¹⁶⁰²⁷ Thus, on 10 October 1992, Galić issued an urgent order to all SRK units to stop firing on Sarajevo as of 3 p.m. that day, instructing them to open fire only in case of “great necessity”, and not before given permission from him or his deputy.¹⁶⁰²⁸

4767. On 15 July 1993, pursuant to an order from the Accused, Milovanović ordered the SRK Command to immediately take all measures, through the subordinate units, to release water and gas to Sarajevo and enable repairs of the electrical system.¹⁶⁰²⁹ He also banned units from opening fire at the centre of the city, except “in defence of VRS positions”, because “unnecessary and uncontrolled opening of fire at Sarajevo greatly damages the RS”.¹⁶⁰³⁰ On the same day, Dragomir Milošević issued an order to all units of the SRK that they were “forbidden to fire on Sarajevo proper, unless defending VRS positions”.¹⁶⁰³¹ He also ordered that water, gas, and electricity be provided to Sarajevo and stated that the “unnecessary and uncontrolled firing on Sarajevo is causing great harm to the RS”.¹⁶⁰³² On 23 July 1993, Milošević urgently informed Galić that the Accused had ordered, through the Main Staff, that the SRK “immediately provide water, electricity and gas supplies” to Sarajevo.¹⁶⁰³³

4768. Following another round of peace talks in Geneva and a cessation of hostilities agreement signed at the Sarajevo airport between Mladić and Delić,¹⁶⁰³⁴ on 30 July 1993, pursuant to consultations with the Accused, Mladić gave an order to cease fire on all frontlines effective on the same day at 12 p.m.¹⁶⁰³⁵

4769. On 26 September 1993, pursuant to an order of the Accused, Milovanović issued an order to the SRK and Drina Corps commands stating that approval has been given for the transport of “Muslim deputies and other persons from Srebrenica, Žepa, and Goražde” organised by UNPROFOR.¹⁶⁰³⁶ The SRK and Drina Corps Commands would be notified by telephone as to the time of the opening and closing of the corridor.¹⁶⁰³⁷ Milovanović noted that the order “shall be taken very seriously due to the political consequences it might have for [RS]” and the SRK and Drina Corps Commanders were personally responsible to him for implementing the order.¹⁶⁰³⁸

4770. On 16 January 1994, the Accused issued an order to the VRS in which he strictly prohibited any combat operations in the direction of the Sarajevo airport and against any positions of UNPROFOR, UNHCR, and other international organisations; allowed full protection and freedom of movement for their vehicles and convoys with necessary checks; and instructed that all contentious issues in relation to UNPROFOR and military observers must be processed exclusively by the Corps Commands and Main Staff.¹⁶⁰³⁹ He stated that given the attitude of international factors towards the war existing at the time, particularly during the talks in Geneva, it was necessary to prevent unwanted incidents with the international organisations.¹⁶⁰⁴⁰

¹⁶⁰⁴⁰ D4443 (Radovan Karadžić’s Order, 16 January 1994).

4771. On 13 March 1994, the Accused issued an order to the Main Staff instructing that the VRS was to exercise “maximum restraint” during Bajram, not respond to ABiH provocation, and to ensure that convoys safely arrive at their destinations.¹⁶⁰⁴¹

4772. On 23 July 1994, pursuant to an oral order from the Accused, Milovanović issued an order to the SRK Commander to carry out all necessary preparations for the closure of the Blue Route across Sarajevo airport, “in order to prevent the transit of the Muslims- civilians and motor vehicles from Sarajevo and into Sarajevo” and to prevent the movement of UNPROFOR and humanitarian organisations towards Igman and Lukavica.¹⁶⁰⁴²

4773. On 19 August 1994, the Accused informed the Main Staff that two platoons of UNPROFOR soldiers and a medical unit would be travelling from Sarajevo through Pale and he approved this travel.¹⁶⁰⁴³ Accordingly, he ordered that these units be escorted from Pale to Kopaći and to treat them politely.¹⁶⁰⁴⁴ In another order relating to the treatment of UN representatives, on 25 August 1994, the Accused ordered the Main Staff to issue an order to the commander of the Ilidža Brigade to return radio communication equipment seized from a UNHCR radio technician.¹⁶⁰⁴⁵

4774. At one point during the conflict, the Accused ordered the Main Staff to secure the perimeter and building of the “Pretis-Holding, TAS, UTL, and Energetika” Factories in Vogošća, to ensure safe passage and constant control of the “Sumbulovac-Visojevica-Srednje-Vogošća” road, and to report to him on the results within 48 hours.¹⁶⁰⁴⁶

4775. The Accused also issued orders directly to the SRK. For example, on 1 November 1992, the SRK Command issued an order to its units, relaying an order from the Accused regulating the procedures for safe passage for ICRC delegates and vehicles authorised to visit prisons, military camps, and police stations.¹⁶⁰⁴⁷

4776. As mentioned earlier, on 7 February 1994, following the incident in Markale market on 5 February, the Accused issued an order to the Main Staff, SRK Commander, and commanders of the SRK brigades stating that there was evidence that the VRS was not responding in equal measure to the ABiH artillery but were responding, “sometimes twenty or thirty, or even seventy times more”.¹⁶⁰⁴⁸ He therefore ordered to:

- (1) Introduce the strictest possible control of retaliation to provocation, respond only when we are threatened and when there is full military justification, respond only against military targets and strictly at the commander’s commands and respond in equal measure to the provocation in the 1:1 (one to one) ratio.
- (2) Exclude any possibility of uncontrolled shelling. Keep the behaviour under control and sanction offences, urgently and in the strictest manner in keeping with the law.
- (3) The Corps Commanders shall answer directly to me for acts of the Corps, while brigade commanders shall answer for the acts of the brigades.
- (4) I am to be informed immediately about every incident.¹⁶⁰⁴⁹

Milovanović testified that he implemented this order.¹⁶⁰⁵⁰ He also testified that the Accused addressed the order to SRK Commander and SRK brigades because he wanted the order to reach them as soon as possible but also did not want to bypass the Main Staff order; to Milovanović this was an example of the Accused exercising his command and control as Supreme Commander and making the SRK Commander and brigade commanders directly answerable to the Accused.¹⁶⁰⁵¹ As discussed above, there was a period of relative calm in Sarajevo following this order.¹⁶⁰⁵² On 15 February 1994, at a meeting involving the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Milovanović, Milovanović reported that he had agreed to a cease-fire and the placing of artillery under UNPROFOR, but had not signed anything yet.¹⁶⁰⁵³ Krajišnik expressed concern that nothing had been signed and stated that the Supreme Command must respond to the NATO ultimatum.¹⁶⁰⁵⁴ The Accused instructed that “three to four artillery positions must be secured at brigade level” and that “[c]oncealment and relocation must be carried out”.¹⁶⁰⁵⁵ In relation to UNPROFOR, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs should not “say no”; instead, they should say “yes, but” as this is what good diplomats do.¹⁶⁰⁵⁶

4777. On 19 March 1994, the Accused informed the Main Staff (Mladić personally) and the SRK Command (Galić personally) that he had given permission for a football match to be played between an UNPROFOR team and a local Sarajevo team on 20 March 1994.¹⁶⁰⁵⁷ He stated: “it is necessary to prevent the Serbian side from provoking an incident at all costs, as this might bring condemnation from the whole world”.¹⁶⁰⁵⁸ He also stated that the “further normalisation of life in Sarajevo is in our interest, all the more so because it does not cost us anything in terms of territory”.¹⁶⁰⁵⁹ He instructed Mladić and Galić to inform all the brigades in the area that they must absolutely comply with this order.¹⁶⁰⁶⁰ Rose testified that this match did indeed go on without incident.¹⁶⁰⁶¹

4778. On 2 March 1995, a report from the SRK Colonel Luka Dragičević was sent to all SRK units, raising issues about the leadership of the VRS and Main Staff, and criticising the Accused.¹⁶⁰⁶² On 9 March 1995, the Accused ordered the SRK Command to urgently send him a copy of that report and information on who sent it to the SRK Command, the identity of its author, and its intended recipients.¹⁶⁰⁶³

4779. Finally, at some point during the war, the Accused issued a message to the SRK stating that the “shelling of civilian targets is a war crime, which is chastised with the toughest punishment, and the enemy wishes to brush those crimes off on you”.¹⁶⁰⁶⁴ He continued by stating that “we are a disciplined army” and it was not in their interest to provoke military intervention and risk losing their state.¹⁶⁰⁶⁵ He asked the SRK to keep vigil of the enemies and keep an eye out for “traitors”

¹⁶⁰⁶³ P2679 (Radovan Karadžić’s order to SRK, 9 March 1995). Dragomir Milošević submitted an urgent report to the Accused stating that Dragičević’s report was “made in a hurry” and that the core members of the SRK Command have not discussed it and he was not even aware of its contents. Milošević stated that it was agreed that the “Main Staff commander would get in touch with you and ask you not to subject the contents of the report to a separate discussion”. See P2680 (SRK report to Radovan Karadžić, 10 March 1995); P2681 (SRK report, 10 March 1995).

¹⁶⁰⁶⁴ D314 (Radovan Karadžić’s letter to SRK, undated). The document is undated and contains no stamp. While the Accused attempted, during Guzina’s testimony, to make a connection between D314 and the follow up order of the SRK Command of 15 May 1993 (D2561), Guzina was unclear as to the alleged connection and thus as to the date of D314. See Svetozar Guzina, T. 31195–31197 (11 December 2012); D2561 (SRK Order, 15 May 1993). As such, this order has little probative value.

who would fire mortars without command or permission; everyone was obliged to prevent “such a traitor from doing so, and to bring him to justice”.¹⁶⁰⁶⁶

4780. In addition to all of the above orders, the evidence also shows that the Accused issued oral orders and instructions in meetings and telephone conversations that were directly relevant to the military activities in Sarajevo. For example, on 31 May 1992, Mladić met with the Accused and other members of the Bosnian Serb political leadership.¹⁶⁰⁶⁷ In the meeting, the Accused gave a briefing on the negotiations in Lisbon and Belgrade and reported that Cutileiro had asked him to halt operations around Sarajevo and to leave the airport.¹⁶⁰⁶⁸ The Accused then stated, “[w]e have to issue decisions”, including decisions to “determine comprehensible borders” and make the police and army “capable for some tasks”.¹⁶⁰⁶⁹ The meeting concluded with the Accused stating that they needed to talk about Sarajevo and they must have a “part of Sarajevo”.¹⁶⁰⁷⁰

4781. On 5 June 1992, the Accused met with Mladić, Koljević, Plavšić, Krajišnik, and Đerić and instructed the attendees to “clean up” Butmir, Hrasnica, Dobrinja, Sokolović Kolonija, and Hrasno.¹⁶⁰⁷¹ As discussed earlier, the SRK forces launched an attack on Sarajevo later that evening, which was indiscriminate and disproportionate, lasting three days and causing a number of civilian casualties.¹⁶⁰⁷² On 15 June 1992, at a meeting between Mladić, the Accused, other members of the RS Presidency, and representatives from the Sarajevo municipalities, Koljević raised the problem of the Sarajevo airport which could not be solved “until the road to Ilidža and Nedžarići is sorted out” and urged the others to “treat Dobrinja as our territory into which [Bosnian Muslim] snipers and terrorists have infiltrated”.¹⁶⁰⁷³ To this the Accused responded that the issue of Dobrinja must be resolved through co-operation with the police.¹⁶⁰⁷⁴ Prstojević provided an update on the situation in Ilidža, stating that the ABiH had around 6,500 soldiers in the area and that if the Bosnian Serbs surrendered the airport, “Ilidža would be cut off”.¹⁶⁰⁷⁵ He thus requested the deployment of soldiers to Dobrinja to carry out an operation.¹⁶⁰⁷⁶ The meeting then concluded with the decision to “clear the Serbian territory”, giving priority to Mojmiilo and Dobrinja.¹⁶⁰⁷⁷

Following the protests by the Secretary General about the Bosnian Serb forces shelling civilian areas in Dobrinja and his calls for the shelling to cease immediately,¹⁶⁰⁷⁸ at a meeting on 27 June 1992 with Mladić, Koljević, and Plavšić, among others, Krajišnik stated that the Presidency was “walking on the edge of the abyss” and that operations against Dobrinja “must really stop”.¹⁶⁰⁷⁹ That day, the Accused issued an order to the Main Staff to cease all operations in Dobrinja immediately and warned that disregarding the order would have “political consequences”.¹⁶⁰⁸⁰

4782. On 21 July 1992, in a meeting between Mladić, the Accused, and other VRS officers, the Accused informed Mladić about the 14-day cease-fire agreement and said that all heavy weapons must be presented to UNPROFOR for inspection, that refugees be allowed to return to their homes, and that people moving from the “zones of operations” be allowed to go wherever they want.¹⁶⁰⁸¹ Then, on 29 August 1992, at a meeting with Mladić, the Accused ordered that within 96 hours, UNPROFOR must be given information about heavy weaponry in the territory of Sarajevo excluding warehoused items.¹⁶⁰⁸² He ordered that within seven days, heavy weapons around Sarajevo should be grouped.¹⁶⁰⁸³ He further ordered Mladić to “preserve the positions around Sarajevo” and to strengthen those positions by transferring 5,000 to 6,000 soldiers from the Bosnian Krajina.¹⁶⁰⁸⁴ Mladić warned the Accused about how to mobilise this many soldiers, to which the Accused responded: “With the police, forcibly”.¹⁶⁰⁸⁵

4783. On 19 October 1992, at a meeting with Mladić, Plavšić, Krajišnik, Đerić, Gvero, Dukić, and Tolimir, the Accused reported on the negotiations in Geneva; he stated that the question of Sarajevo “dominated the conference” and that the Bosnian Serbs should ensure that Sarajevo survives the winter because the Bosnian Muslims wanted to create an image of a “drastic and horrible” situation in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁰⁸⁶ Towards the end of the meeting, the Accused stated that he was “convinced 101% that [NATO] will bomb” and that accordingly it was crucial not to fire on Sarajevo.¹⁶⁰⁸⁷

4784. On 20 December 1992, at a meeting of the Supreme Command, attended by Mladić, Koljević, Krajišnik, Lukić, Bogdan Subotić, and Milovanović, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs were supposed to end the war in Sarajevo, but that the enemy was “on the rise” and was “conducting a big offensive”.¹⁶⁰⁸⁸ The tasks agreed upon at the conclusion of the meeting included reorganising the army and border units and coming up with a co-ordinated plan with the Ministry of Defence to fulfil the needs of the army.¹⁶⁰⁸⁹

4785. On 21 February 1993, in a telephone conversation, the Accused instructed two SRK soldiers to “see to it that Izetbegović’s declaration of a one-sided cease-fire be sent to us, Morillon and others have requested that [...] I am asking you that we don’t fire anywhere except [...]” and was interrupted by Matišić who informed the Accused that they had received, two hours earlier, an order from Milovanović to carry on doing what has been planned regardless of the cease-fire.¹⁶⁰⁹⁰ The Accused responded, “absolutely, that’s all right, but there is something that has to be done”.¹⁶⁰⁹¹ The Accused informed them that “we think that shells should not be falling here on the city for no reason” and ordered them to “strictly forbid shelling in the city, except where operations have been planned and where they are in progress”.¹⁶⁰⁹²

4786. On 2 May 1993, in a telephone conversation, the Accused ordered Gvero to “call UNPROFOR to all gas stations to check that the Serbs are keeping this open” and that “nowhere around Sarajevo, there must be nothing firing anywhere”.¹⁶⁰⁹³ The Accused said that no one from the VRS was allowed to give any more statements, and ordered the preparation of anti-aircraft defence in case of NATO intervention.¹⁶⁰⁹⁴ On the same day, the Accused ordered Milovanović to allow UNPROFOR to access Mt. Bjelašnica.¹⁶⁰⁹⁵

4787. On 2 June 1993, in another telephone conversation, the Accused ordered Gvero to contact those units responsible for targeting a pontoon bridge stating that they had damaged the good image of the VRS.¹⁶⁰⁹⁶ In relation to information that the “Zetra” area in Sarajevo had been hit by mortars, the Accused ordered Gvero to contact Briquemont and inform him that it was not the VRS.¹⁶⁰⁹⁷

4788. On 30 July 1993, in another telephone conversation between the Accused and Gvero, the Accused insisted on arresting and initiating criminal proceedings against the individuals who were responsible for firing on the UNPROFOR units in Sarajevo and also wanted to release a public statement to this effect.¹⁶⁰⁹⁸

4789. On 2 August 1993, also in a telephone conversation, the Accused ordered Gvero to “release immediately gas, electricity and water” to Sarajevo and “do everything that is in our power” as this was important for the Bosnian Serbs and the negotiations that day.¹⁶⁰⁹⁹

4790. On 3 August 1993, Milovanović called the Accused and reported that there was firing around Sarajevo and it came from the ABiH.¹⁶¹⁰⁰ The Accused ordered Milovanović to take UNPROFOR observers to the SRK positions in Sarajevo so that UNPROFOR “can confirm who is attacking”.¹⁶¹⁰¹ He also ordered Milovanović to inform Mladić to be cautious and not fall for the ABiH provocation because one wrong move and Mladić might “wreck the entire country, the entire nation” and that the “conference will fail, to our detriment”.¹⁶¹⁰² The following day, in another telephone conversation, the Accused told Milovanović that he was looking for Mladić and that Mladić needed to call him.¹⁶¹⁰³ The Accused was upset about the shelling of Mt. Igman and the “fallout” between UNPROFOR and Mladić.¹⁶¹⁰⁴ The Accused stated, “if I give him some orders, he has to carry it out. He has the right to say that it’s not useful and that it’s damaging, but if I later make a decision, has to carry that out to the end”.¹⁶¹⁰⁵ Also on this day, in relation to a concern that Mladić may not order the withdrawal of troops from Mt. Igman, the Accused told Milovanović: “I am the supreme commander and I am ordering; order them to withdraw and tell Mladić to report to me from the airport”.¹⁶¹⁰⁶

4791. As discussed earlier, on 5 August 1993 at a meeting with UNPROFOR representatives, the Accused agreed to withdraw the SRK forces from Mt. Igman and on 14 August 1993, despite Mladić's protests, an agreement establishing the Mt. Igman DMZ was signed.¹⁶¹⁰⁷ On 5 August 1993, at a meeting of the Supreme Command, including Mladić, the Accused reported that NATO had made a decision to conduct air strikes on Bosnian Serb positions.¹⁶¹⁰⁸ He stated that, to avoid air strikes, the Bosnian Serbs should withdraw from Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica, to supply utilities to Sarajevo, allow humanitarian convoys to pass through, supply fuel to Sarajevo (for bakeries), and not to fire any shells at Sarajevo.¹⁶¹⁰⁹ On the same day, Milovanović issued an order to the SRK Command, "on the basis of an oral command of the Supreme Commander" in an effort to respect the signed agreement about the cessation of combat actions.¹⁶¹¹⁰ This order outlined measures that should be taken by the SRK in terms of reporting on weapons, ammunition, and rockets in each brigade.¹⁶¹¹¹ It also ordered that as of 9 August 1993, within the regular combat reports, the SRK Command will report about the "number of fired bullets, grenades, mines and rockets in units that are in direct surroundings of Sarajevo, as well as reason for firing, the name of units where it happened and measures that are taken".¹⁶¹¹²

4792. On 10 August 1993, the Accused issued an order in a telephone conversation with a colonel from the Main Staff that no shell was to land on Sarajevo and that Sarajevo was to be given electricity, water, and gas.¹⁶¹¹³ On 11 August 1993, the Accused had a conversation with Prstojević and Gvero over the phone.¹⁶¹¹⁴ First, Prstojević confirmed that he was taking care of the weapons around Sarajevo.¹⁶¹¹⁵ The Accused then ordered him to issue a warning that no one should shoot at

Sarajevo, even if shot at.¹⁶¹¹⁶ Prstojević stated he understood and that his commander had issued an order to Galić.¹⁶¹¹⁷ Gvero then spoke and informed the Accused that the Military Agreement for Peace in BiH had been signed.¹⁶¹¹⁸ The Accused expressed concern about reports that the VRS was returning to Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica.¹⁶¹¹⁹ On the same day, in a conversation between the Accused and Tomanić, the Accused asked for Gvero because he wanted to know why Bosnian Serb soldiers had returned to Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica and stated that “all the agencies in the world” and UNPROFOR have reported this.¹⁶¹²⁰ The Accused then ordered Tomanić to call Galić and “to pass on to him urgently to withdraw the troops regardless of how many UNPROFOR forces went up there”.¹⁶¹²¹ The Accused also stated angrily that “someone is putting the state at risk [...] from Mladić to I-don’t-know-who, I will relieve him of his duty”.¹⁶¹²² He further added that “the army is lying to me. They have been lying to me the whole time. The reports I receive are never accurate.”¹⁶¹²³ He ended the conversation by asking Tomanić to tell Galić to urgently call him.¹⁶¹²⁴ Also on this day, the Accused ordered Miletić to call the director of the SRNA and to release a press statement stating that the information regarding the return of the forces to Igman and Bjelašnica is a lie and that the troops are progressively withdrawing from their positions.¹⁶¹²⁵ In the evening, the Accused spoke to Gvero to ensure that SRK had moved all soldiers from Mt. Igman.¹⁶¹²⁶ He also stated that the media from Sarajevo, including foreign media, should be allowed to go there and report that the roads to Sarajevo were open and that there was no siege to speak of.¹⁶¹²⁷

4793. In a telephone conversation of 12 August 1993, the Accused ordered Milovanović to withdraw forces from certain lines around Mt. Igman by a strict deadline in an effort to save the current negotiations.¹⁶¹²⁸ The Accused stated: “General, listen to me and follow the orders. I am telling you how it is. Our side accepted, after convincing and bargaining [...] you should be interested in my orders. Do you want to destroy the entire state?”¹⁶¹²⁹ Milovanović responded, “yes, sir” and the Accused stated they would talk tomorrow.¹⁶¹³⁰ The following day, the Accused spoke to Gvero over the phone as he was looking for Milovanović who could not be found.¹⁶¹³¹ Gvero responded that Milovanović had gone to meet Hayes.¹⁶¹³² The Accused then ordered Gvero to pass along his order to Galić to pull back the SRK troops on Mt. Igman “far enough to avoid us having any problems in relation to the international community.”¹⁶¹³³ The Accused also stated that the order must be complied with and that such information must reach Owen by 2 or 2:30 p.m.¹⁶¹³⁴ On the same day, Galić issued an order to SRK commands, in accordance with an order issued by the Accused and “in order to avoid unjust punishment by the [USA] and its allies”, to occupy new command positions by 8 p.m. on the same day.¹⁶¹³⁵ The order outlined where various brigades should position themselves, including an order to the Igman Brigade that “after the take-over of positions in the area of Trešnjevo brdo and Butila by UNPROFOR, shall withdraw to positions in the area of Bresovača”.¹⁶¹³⁶

4794. On 24 October 1993, at a meeting of the Supreme Command, attended by Mladić, the Accused, Bogdan Subotić, and Gvero, the possibility of shortening VRS frontlines was discussed.¹⁶¹³⁷ The Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs must choose “quality” territory and not be overly concerned about the “quantity” of territory.¹⁶¹³⁸ He stated that Sarajevo was “the most important territory” and that “1 km near Sarajevo is worth more than dozens near Teočak”.¹⁶¹³⁹ He instructed that priority must be given to the areas of Žuč, Orlić, and Mojmiło.¹⁶¹⁴⁰ ordered the creation of a “stand-by army” and that all soldiers recruited since April 1992 should remain in the army until the end of the war.¹⁶¹⁴¹ He ordered that the SRK’s “[r]etaliations shall be 1:1”.¹⁶¹⁴² He further ordered that SRK commanders “[i]mpress upon the army [...] a feeling of optimism and concord”.¹⁶¹⁴³ He ended the meeting by ordering the SRK commanders to “[q]uickly line up the brigades”.¹⁶¹⁴⁴

4796. On 29 January 1994, the Accused and Mladić met with subordinate officers of the VRS.¹⁶¹⁴⁵ At the meeting, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs must create a “single, mobile army” whose sole ideology is Serbian nationalism.¹⁶¹⁴⁶ He stated that the “most important point is Sarajevo” and that “[w]ith the blockade of Sarajevo we have created a state”, which had forced Izetbegović to negotiate.¹⁶¹⁴⁷ He stated that “[w]e must not give out a single war-mongering statement” but instead discuss peace in order to “save the Serbs from the blockade and pressure”.¹⁶¹⁴⁸ The Accused further ordered the army to “stay where it is” because “minor details may decide the division of BiH”.¹⁶¹⁴⁹ He finally ordered those present to “[e]nsure civilised conduct at the checkpoints” and to respect UNPROFOR personnel.¹⁶¹⁵⁰

4797. The Chamber also received evidence that even prior to the establishment of the SRK, the Accused was issuing orders to armed forces and influencing the military situation in Sarajevo.¹⁶¹⁵¹ On 13 April 1992, in a telephone conversation he ordered Danilo Veselinović to fire at the sports hall in Mojmiló after being informed it held the Green Berets’ weapons and general staff headquarters.¹⁶¹⁵² He also told Veselinović that it was important that no people were in the building and that no civilians should be killed.¹⁶¹⁵³ During the conversation, the Accused was informed about the situation around Dobrinja and the airport.¹⁶¹⁵⁴

4798. Similarly, in May 1992, the Accused spoke to “Rade” inquiring about the situation in Sarajevo and was informed there was shelling in Sarajevo and Mojmiilo; the Accused ordered the Bosnian Serbs not to fire back unless threatened.¹⁶¹⁵⁵ The Accused also ordered Rade to call Plavšić “or someone” before they started shooting and to call UNPROFOR “to tell them that they’re [ABiH] threatening you all the time and that you can’t hold out”.¹⁶¹⁵⁶

(E) Accused receiving information about the military situation in Sarajevo

4799. The Chamber heard that the Accused regularly received reports from the VRS and the SRK as follows: companies to battalions to brigades to the SRK Command to Main Staff, and then from Main Staff on to the Supreme Command.¹⁶¹⁵⁷ Accordingly, there was a system of communication which linked the companies, the battalions, the corps, including the SRK, the Main Staff, and the Supreme Command.¹⁶¹⁵⁸ While Galić testified that when he took command of the SRK communication was not functioning properly,¹⁶¹⁵⁹ Dragomir Milošević explained that although the communication system in the SRK was not working properly in the early period after its establishment, it was constantly worked on and improved upon and, by 1995, it was functioning meticulously.¹⁶¹⁶⁰ As early as September 1992, regulations regarding the system of reporting between the units of the SRK and SRK Command were enacted in order to ensure accuracy in the reporting system.¹⁶¹⁶¹ Reports to the SRK Command were to include, “(i) situation and activities of informed about various problems.¹⁶¹⁷⁰ Further, he recalled that in 1993 the Accused attended a meeting with the SRK Command where the problem of disproportionate use of artillery was discussed as well as the pressure from “the mass media of the world” for such use to be decreased.¹⁶¹⁷¹ Galić stated that the Accused wanted to reduce the amount of artillery to the minimum depending on military necessity and objectives.¹⁶¹⁷² Mladić’s diary confirms that on 2 June 1993, the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, and Lukić met with representatives of the RS authorities and SRK commanders, including Galić.¹⁶¹⁷³ According to the diary, at the end of the meeting the Accused stated that the “Sarajevo battlefield is the most important today” and that Izetbegović could not be negotiated with but had to be defeated.¹⁶¹⁷⁴ He also instructed that the Bosnian Serbs must “take Sarajevo” while ensuring “favourable international conditions”.¹⁶¹⁷⁵ [REDACTED].¹⁶¹⁷⁶ [REDACTED].¹⁶¹⁷⁷

4801. In addition to the official reporting procedure described above, the Accused would also receive information about the military situation in Sarajevo through meetings and telephone calls with various individuals on the ground, including VRS and SRK officers.¹⁶¹⁷⁸ For example, following the bombardment of Sarajevo on 28 and 29 May 1992 described earlier in the Judgement,¹⁶¹⁷⁹ on 31 May 1992, Mladić met with the Accused and other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership.¹⁶¹⁸⁰ In the meeting, the Accused stated that they had to talk about Sarajevo and must have a “part of Sarajevo”.¹⁶¹⁸¹ In a meeting a few days later, on 6 June 1992 during another massive bombardment described above,¹⁶¹⁸² Mladić met again with the Bosnian Serb political leadership, including the Accused, Krajišnik and Koljević, to discuss, inter alia, the borders of the RS.¹⁶¹⁸³ During this meeting, Krajišnik informed the attendees that Hadžići and Vogošća had been

“liberated” and that the goal was to form a Birač–Romanija area, which should also include Dobrinja.¹⁶¹⁸⁴

4802. On 10 July 1992, in a meeting between Mladić, the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, Plavšić, Derić, Buha, Gvero, and Tolimir, the attendees discussed the situation in Sarajevo at length. Koljević produced a map of Sarajevo showing routes for the passage of humanitarian aid and stated: “Let us take a stand regarding Sarajevo”.¹⁶¹⁸⁵ He also informed the others that Bosnian Serb fighters in Nedžarići were “embittered” with the RS political leadership because the fighters “[did] not know the status of Sarajevo”.¹⁶¹⁸⁶ Krajišnik stated that the issue of demilitarisation of Dobrinja was a “major problem” for the Bosnian Serbs and cautioned the Accused against offering the UN anything, stating that it was better to “let them ask for it”.¹⁶¹⁸⁷

4803. On 24 February 1995, the Accused and Krajišnik met with the commanders and Presidents of the Sarajevo Municipalities and discussed, among other things, the shortage of troops in Rajlovac.¹⁶¹⁸⁸ At the meeting, Krajišnik raised the issue of “[h]ow to hold on to Sarajevo”.¹⁶¹⁸⁹

4804. On 8 June 1995, at a meeting with Mladić, the Accused stated that the situation was “very serious” and that relationships between certain military officers and the civilian authorities had been “disrupted”, and that soldiers were “abandoning the lines”.¹⁶¹⁹⁰ He stated that the Bosnian Serbs “must keep Sarajevo until a political solution”.¹⁶¹⁹¹

(F) Conclusion

4805. Based on the foregoing evidence, the Chamber finds that the Accused exercised in fact his de jure authority over the SRK units in Sarajevo. As the evidence outlined above shows, the Accused had direct contact with Mladić throughout the conflict and was able to issue orders to him, such as in the aftermath of the bombardment in Sarajevo at the end of May 1992, which were then implemented on the ground. Even taking into account disagreements that arose between the Accused and Mladić during the conflict, which were to be expected given their respective positions, the Chamber finds that these disagreements did not undermine the Accused’s ultimate authority over the situation in Sarajevo, including over the SRK units. Indeed, neither Galić nor Milošević could recall a single occasion where they received two inconsistent orders from Mladić and the Accused regarding combat operations in Sarajevo.¹⁶¹⁹² Furthermore, despite the tension that arose in August 1993, when the Accused wanted forces to withdraw from Mt. Igman and expressed concern over Mladić's resistance to that decision, the forces eventually withdrew in accordance with his wishes. Additionally, while the Accused claimed in his conversation with Tomanić on 11 August 1993 that the army was lying to him, he was nevertheless able to obtain the information he sought and eventually removed the forces from the Mt. Igman area.

4806. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the Accused, as Supreme Commander, commanded the SRK mainly through the Main Staff and Mladić and sometimes directly through the SRK Commander. While Abdel-Razek and Bulatović thought that the Accused did not exercise effective control over the SRK, and his expert witness, Radinović, opined that the Accused failed to exert effective control over the Sarajevo situation because of unauthorised activities of the troops and the inability to control all the renegades on the ground,¹⁶¹⁹³ this is contrary to the majority of evidence received by the Chamber as recalled above, including the credible observations of Smith, Rose, Banbury, KDZ450, and Van Baal, among others. Furthermore, Radinović's evidence directly contradicts the evidence the Chamber has received in relation to: (i) a number of specific meetings where the Accused successfully exerted control or showed influence over forces in Sarajevo, including the meetings of 30 May 1992 (with Morillon) and 21 March 1994 (with Van Baal); and (ii) orders issued by the Accused relevant to Sarajevo, some of which went directly to the SRK and which were implemented on the ground, including the order that followed the incident in Markale market on 5 February.

4807. The evidence is also clear that the Accused used his authority over the VRS and the SRK to organise and direct operations in and around Sarajevo. He did so through the directives he issued and/or approved, which ensured that the city was kept under blockade and, in turn, allowed for the SRK's sniping and shelling of civilians to continue. He also did it through other types of orders he issued to the Main Staff, all of which were in turn transmitted to the SRK Command and implemented. In addition, at times, the Accused would issue orders directly to the SRK units and

¹⁶¹⁹³ See D3864 (Radovan Radinović's expert report entitled "The Control Authority of Dr. Radovan Karadžić in the Strategic Command System of the VRS", 2012), paras. 4, 24, 81, 86–87, 90, 114–115, 247–249.

SRK Commanders.¹⁶¹⁹⁴ Finally, as illustrated by the various intercepted phone conversations and meetings outlined above, the Accused was also able at all times during the conflict to issue oral orders to VRS and SRK officers since he was in regular contact with Mladić, Milovanović, Gvero, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević. When he did so, these oral orders were relayed to the SRK units around the city. Accordingly, there is no doubt that throughout the conflict, the Accused was closely involved in military matters in Sarajevo, including in SRK operations and other activities, particularly if they concerned agreements he had reached with the representatives of the international community. The most striking example of this was his involvement in the withdrawal of the VRS and SRK soldiers from Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica. The Chamber is also convinced that the Accused's involvement in the Sarajevo military matters went beyond planning and strategy as the evidence shows that he was involved at the operational level as well. His orders to (i) send two platoons of special forces to Nedžarići, (ii) secure Pretis and other factories in Vogošća, and (iii) conceal artillery around Sarajevo following the first Markale incident are prime examples of that.¹⁶¹⁹⁵

4808. The Chamber also finds that the chain of communication and reporting from the SRK to the Main Staff and to the Accused was functioning properly during the period relevant to the Indictment. The regulations governing the communication and reporting system were detailed and followed by the SRK, enabling the Main Staff and the Accused to receive daily information about the situation on the ground in Sarajevo. Thus, the Accused was constantly informed about SRK operations in Sarajevo through regular combat reports. In addition, he received information from other agencies such as the MUP, the intelligence services, and other sections in the VRS Command. Finally, the many private telephone conversations referred to above show that he was a well-informed, hands on, president who was able to and who often did receive information on military matters from various individuals on the ground.

4809. Based on the findings above, namely (i) that the SRK was a professional corps of the VRS with a fully functioning chain of command, (ii) that the Accused successfully exercised his authority over the SRK units as testified to by a number of witnesses and as amply illustrated by numerous written and oral orders he issued relating to Sarajevo, and (iii) that the Accused was ¹⁶¹⁹⁴ The Chamber notes that the Accused's orders outlined earlier clearly show that his submission that the SRK did not receive orders from the Presidency which applied exclusively to the SRK is incorrect. Indeed, there were several occasions where that did happen, the most striking being the order he issued in the aftermath of the first Markale shelling, which was implemented and led to a peaceful period in the city.

¹⁶¹⁹⁵ See paras. 4765, 4774, 4776. The Chamber does not accept the Accused's claim that the political authorities never interfered in military matters or that he had no effective control over the SRK units due to the shortage of professional staff. Indeed, the evidence outlined above shows the opposite to have been the case as there are numerous examples of the Accused getting involved in and exerting influence over military matters.

receiving regular reports from the SRK units and other sources about the situation in Sarajevo, the Chamber finds that the Accused was indeed at the apex of control of the forces in Sarajevo, in particular the SRK, despite the occasional tensions that arose between him and Mladić. As such the Accused oversaw the events in Sarajevo, both on a political and military level, and also had the power to stop and prevent the targeting of civilians and the indiscriminate or disproportionate firing on the city by the SRK.

iii. Accused's knowledge of crimes and the measures he took to prevent them

(A) Arguments of the parties

4810. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused knew about the nature and extent of the sniping and shelling campaign and its effects on the civilian population of Sarajevo, and allowed the campaign to continue for almost four years while denying or deflecting international criticism and failing to take any genuine steps to punish the perpetrators.¹⁶¹⁹⁶ It alleges that the Accused was informed of the campaign through repeated protests from international observers, Security Council resolutions, and media reports.¹⁶¹⁹⁷ In contrast, the Accused argues that he was not adequately informed of the crimes of terror and unlawful attacks.¹⁶¹⁹⁸ He argues that his receipt of information must be “considered in light of the chaos” as power cuts, interruptions of telephone lines, obsolete technical equipment, and poor roads created problems with the system of command and control throughout the war.¹⁶¹⁹⁹ He also submits that SRK combat reports made no mention of the scheduled incidents listed in the Indictment, and contends that communication between himself and Galić was limited to the TEZ, Markale I, and humanitarian issues, and was “practically non-existent in terms of carrying out combat activities”.¹⁶²⁰⁰

4811. The Prosecution further submits that, while the Accused would sometimes acknowledge responsibility for the sniping and shelling of civilians, generally he denied and deflected international criticism, including through false assurances, false denials or excuses, blaming others, cavalier brush-offs, using tu quoque, or threatening to do worse.¹⁶²⁰¹ The Prosecution argues that these denials and deflections were done for the purpose of advancing the campaign of sniping and shelling.¹⁶²⁰² While not making a general argument in relation to this claim, the Accused maintains that his denials that the Bosnian Serbs fired at the Markale market on 5 February 1994 were well-founded because the VRS had insisted that they had not fired the mortar.¹⁶²⁰³

4812. The Prosecution also submits that the Accused took no meaningful steps to prevent, investigate, and/or punish SRK unlawful attacks on civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁶²⁰⁴ It argues that, had the Accused wanted to order investigations of SRK crimes occurring in Sarajevo, he could have done so effectively.¹⁶²⁰⁵ Instead, he created and sustained a culture of impunity where those responsible for the campaign were promoted or awarded, and Mladić's plans for the campaign of terror were continually approved.¹⁶²⁰⁶ In contrast, the Accused submits that he took measures to ensure investigations were carried out and sanctions imposed in the event of any potential criminal activities, including ordering that members of the VRS act in accordance with the Geneva Conventions and the other provisions of the international laws of war.¹⁶²⁰⁷

(B) Accused's knowledge

(1) Accused directly informed of the campaign

4813. A large number of witnesses, mostly representatives of the international community called by the Prosecution, gave evidence that they or their colleagues protested and complained to the Accused about the sniping and shelling of the civilian population of Sarajevo. For example, Okun testified that, on more than one occasion, Lord Owen directly asked the Accused why the Bosnian Serbs continued to shell Sarajevo when it was giving them such bad public press but the Accused never answered him.¹⁶²⁰⁸ In his book "Balkan Odyssey", Owen wrote that when he asked the Accused why the Bosnian Serbs were shelling Sarajevo, the Accused replied: "We're not, it's the Muslims. We're not attacking, just protecting our homes in and around Sarajevo".¹⁶²⁰⁹ Okun and others "implored" the Accused to stop the Bosnian Serb shelling of Sarajevo, but the Accused did not order Mladić to stop the attacks.¹⁶²¹⁰ The Chamber heard that Morillon repeatedly told the Accused and Mladić that world history would judge them on the way they were using their artillery against cities, towns, and civilians, and that they had to stop.¹⁶²¹¹ [REDACTED] who attended meetings with the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Mladić on a number of occasions, testified that a primary issue raised in those meetings was the call to cease action against the civilian population.¹⁶²¹² [REDACTED] during the first months of the conflict, the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić were fully aware of the general situation in the SRK's zone of responsibility, including the large-scale commission of crimes.¹⁶²¹³ According to Tucker, the Accused's knowledge of military detail was greater for Sarajevo than other parts of BiH.¹⁶²¹⁴

4814. Rose frequently met with the Accused during his time as Commander of UNPROFOR BiH Command from 5 January 1994 to 23 January 1995, and testified that when a serious incident occurred, such as the 8 October 1994 sniping of a Sarajevo tram,¹⁶²¹⁵ it was always raised with the Bosnian Serb side; he personally raised the issue of the sniping and shelling of civilians with "the Bosnian Serb leadership" at every opportunity.¹⁶²¹⁶ According to Rose, the usual response of the Accused was to blame the Bosnian Muslims for the incident, particularly when accused of a "terrible atrocity", such as the shelling of Markale market; when accused of shelling generally, the "Bosnian Serb leadership" would state that they were responding to ABiH attacks and that this was their method of responding because the ABiH had superior levels of infantry.¹⁶²¹⁷

4815. Harland, who attended a number of meetings with the Accused, also testified that during those meetings he heard his superiors protesting about the sniping and shelling of civilians to the Accused or other members of the Bosnian Serb political or military leadership.¹⁶²¹⁸ The Accused would usually deny that there was a problem, or say that he would look into it or that he had already issued orders that firing should stop.¹⁶²¹⁹ According to Harland, the Accused and Mladić reacted to protests in entirely different ways: Mladić was more confrontational, while the Accused would “often link one problem to another, generally ensuring that the problem could never be resolved”.¹⁶²²⁰ Harland concluded that the protests from the international community, both oral and written, had “very little effect” except at times of explicit military threat from NATO forces against the Serbs, in which case they might be responded to quite positively and decisions might be implemented.¹⁶²²¹

4816. According to Tucker, the parties were “absolutely aware” of the existence of Security Council resolutions, and these resolutions were frequently discussed during negotiations.¹⁶²²² Indeed, on 10 June 1992, the Accused wrote a letter to Secretary General Boutros-Ghali in which he stated that he accepted Security Council Resolution 758 “with satisfaction and great hope”.¹⁶²²³ Similarly, on 5 October 1994, at a meeting between Akashi, the Accused, Mladić and others in Pale, the Accused discussed and expressed some satisfaction with Resolution 942.¹⁶²²⁴ While Security Council resolutions in evidence in this case do not explicitly refer to sniping and shelling of civilians in Sarajevo, they allude to the commission of these crimes by expressing deep disturbance at “the situation which now prevails in Sarajevo”, repeatedly calling on all parties to comply with the obligations under international humanitarian law and in particular the Geneva Conventions, and expressing alarm at serious violations of international humanitarian law.¹⁶²²⁵ In Resolution 824, in which the Security Council declared Sarajevo, Bihać, Srebrenica, Goražde, Tuzla, and Žepa to be safe areas, the Security Council considered that these areas should be “free from armed attacks and from any other hostile acts which endanger the well-being and the safety of their inhabitants” and declared that all Bosnian Serb artillery or paramilitary units should withdraw “to a distance wherefrom they cease to constitute a menace to their security and that of their inhabitants”.¹⁶²²⁶ One month later, on 4 June 1993, the Security Council reiterated its alarm at the grave and intolerable situation in BiH arising from serious violations of international humanitarian law, and its alarm at the plight of the civilian population, particularly in the safe areas.¹⁶²²⁷

4817. Several Defence witnesses also alluded to the Accused's knowledge of the sniping and shelling campaign. John Zametica, who advised the Accused on international relations from February 1994,¹⁶²²⁸ recalled that, despite rarely discussing military matters, the Accused told him that Bosnian Serb sniping was "stupid" and did not get the Serbs any military advantage; there were also times when the Accused disapproved of irresponsible shelling or thought that it was senseless or unnecessary.¹⁶²²⁹ Momir Bulatović, at the time the President of Montenegro,¹⁶²³⁰ testified that he had many conversations with the Accused on the shelling of Sarajevo, during which the Accused recognised that the shelling was a political liability for the Bosnian Serbs and that it damaged their cause in the opinion of the international community.¹⁶²³¹ Bulatović and the Accused also discussed the allegations made by international negotiators that the shelling was not limited to military attacks but was also aimed at civilian areas, to which the Accused stated that he had banned shelling of civilian areas on a number of occasions and had done everything he could to prevent the unnecessary and disproportionate shelling of Sarajevo.¹⁶²³² Vladislav Jovanović, the Foreign Minister of Serbia at the time,¹⁶²³³ questioned the Accused a few times about why Sarajevo was kept under siege for so long and why it was subjected to "all those snipers and misfortunes", and informed the Accused that this was causing a great deal of damage to the Bosnian Serbs and to the Serbians.¹⁶²³⁴ He testified that the Accused denied that the Bosnian Serbs had a policy of shelling Sarajevo; rather, he would say either that these incidents were sporadic and caused by "a few frustrated individuals" who had lost family members and who were doing it on their own initiative, or that the Bosnian Muslims were responsible because they wanted to draw international attention to the Bosnian Serbs, infuriate the international community, and generate NATO action.¹⁶²³⁵

4818. In addition, the Chamber heard about a number of specific instances on which the Accused knew or was informed of various incidents of sniping and shelling, including those scheduled in the Indictment. For example, as discussed earlier in this Judgement, in the late May 1992 meeting between, inter alios, the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Plavšić, Koljević, [REDACTED].¹⁶²³⁶ [REDACTED] the members of the Bosnian Serb leadership present at the meeting, including the Accused, did not oppose Mladić's proposal.¹⁶²³⁷ On 30 May 1992, while this bombardment was taking place, Morillon and Mackenzie met with the Accused and Koljević to discuss these events.¹⁶²³⁸ During the meeting, the Accused indicated that Bosnian Serb forces were inexperienced and self-organised and thus over-reacted to attacks by the Green Berets; in addition, he said that Mladić did not have all the forces under his command.¹⁶²³⁹ The Accused also indicated that the Bosnian Serbs were sometimes blamed for attacks for which they were not responsible, and that they were in a no-win situation where they would either be blamed or defeated.¹⁶²⁴⁰ In response, Mackenzie indicated to the Accused and Koljević that an obstacle to progress in negotiations had been the linkage of one problem area to another and that this should be avoided.¹⁶²⁴¹ When asked during the meeting whether he was in a position to stop the bombardment, the Accused "replied in the affirmative"; this response was qualified by Koljević, who stated that they thought they could persuade the people on the ground to stop the shelling.¹⁶²⁴² The Accused then agreed that he would travel to Sarajevo to contact Mladić in order to stop the bombardment.¹⁶²⁴³ The Accused eventually reached Mladić by phone and the latter agreed to stop the bombardment.¹⁶²⁴⁴ On the same day, the Accused spoke to a certain Čedo and instructed him to try not to use artillery that night but to use infantry weapons and “let them go to hell [...] [i]f they want to die”.¹⁶²⁴⁵

4819. The Chamber also heard that, between 3 and 5 June 1992 Thornberry, Wilson, and Abdel-Razek conducted three days of negotiations with the Bosnian Serbs and the BiH Presidency for the opening of the Sarajevo airport.¹⁶²⁴⁶ Wilson testified that during these negotiations he told the Accused, Plavšić, and Mladić that the Bosnian Serbs hit most of the major buildings in the city, that there did not appear to be any restraint applied to the selection of targets, and that from Bosnian Serb positions looking down on the city, they knew what they were engaging.¹⁶²⁴⁷ According to Wilson, the Accused, Plavšić, and Mladić responded that this type of fire was legitimate and that they were defending Serbs.¹⁶²⁴⁸

4820. As discussed earlier in the Judgement, the Accused was also aware of the heavy bombardment of the city between the night of 5 June and 8 June 1992, which the Presidency ordered to be halted on 9 June 1992.¹⁶²⁴⁹

4821. Nenad Kecmanović, a Serb politician who was the President of the Alliance of Reform Forces of Yugoslavia political party and a member of the BiH Presidency from 1 June 1992 until July 1992,¹⁶²⁵⁰ testified that in the summer of 1992 in meetings with leading representatives of the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused, he raised the shelling of Sarajevo “several times”.¹⁶²⁵¹ The response he received was that the ABiH was opening fire against Bosnian Serb positions around the city, that the ABiH artillery was located in the most densely populated parts of the city, and that the Bosnian Serb artillery was therefore forced to respond by firing upon these locations.¹⁶²⁵²

4822. On 26 August 1992, Vance, Carrington, and Doyle met with the Accused and Koljević at the London Conference.¹⁶²⁵³ Carrington raised Bosnian Serb attacks on Sarajevo, stating that “world opinion was firmly against the Serbs, particularly after the recent escalation of fighting around Sarajevo”.¹⁶²⁵⁴ The Accused responded by stating that the Bosnian Muslims were responsible for the escalation as they regularly shelled their own people and only they could have been responsible for the heavy shelling of Sarajevo in the preceding days.¹⁶²⁵⁵ Doyle told the Accused that the UNPROFOR office in Sarajevo had confirmed that Serbian gunners were to blame.¹⁶²⁵⁶ To this the Accused said that he was willing to accept UN monitors at all Serbian artillery positions in and around Sarajevo.¹⁶²⁵⁷

4823. On 8 September 1992, at a meeting between, inter alios, the Accused, Mladić and General Simonović, Simonović stated that the blockade of Sarajevo was justified but mass-scale use of artillery against cities was damaging, and recommended that the Bosnian Serbs should prevent the bombardment of cities.¹⁶²⁵⁸

4824. On 8 December 1992, the Accused sent a letter to an international organisation in which he claimed that the citizens of Sarajevo had been prevented from leaving the city by the BiH government.¹⁶²⁵⁹ Ten days later he received a response from the representative of that organisation, stating that it was unacceptable for him to hold the international community responsible for the situation in Sarajevo, while the responsible party are those who are “shelling and keeping Sarajevo under siege on an indiscriminate basis”.¹⁶²⁶⁰

4825. On 9 December 1992, members of the SDC, including, inter alios, Slobodan Milošević, Bulatović, and Dobrica Ćosić, met to discuss the war in BiH.¹⁶²⁶¹ At the meeting, Ćosić noted that the Serbian leadership had advised the Accused on numerous occasions that the shelling of

Sarajevo was detrimental to the political position of the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁶²⁶² Bulatović testified that, although the Accused had fully agreed on every occasion, he was unable to solve the problem.¹⁶²⁶³

4826. As discussed earlier in the Judgement,¹⁶²⁶⁴ on 18 or 19 December 1992, Owen, Morillon, and Abdel-Razek met with the Accused, Mladić, and Koljević in Pale.¹⁶²⁶⁵ The meeting was called due to the intensification of shelling in Sarajevo, including the shelling of the Koševo Hospital.¹⁶²⁶⁶ At the meeting, Owen protested the shelling of the hospital.¹⁶²⁶⁷ Tucker, who was also present, testified that Owen and Mladić had a heated argument during which Owen stated that the shelling of Sarajevo was a disgrace and had to stop.¹⁶²⁶⁸

4827. Galić testified that sometime during 1993 the Accused met with the SRK command and expressed concern about the disproportionate use of artillery.¹⁶²⁶⁹ According to Galić, at these top-level meetings where the Accused was present, the topic of proportionality was always discussed.¹⁶²⁷⁰ Galić noted that the Accused did not have to inform him that the disproportionate use of artillery by the SRK had caused civilian casualties, because “everybody saw that, there was a war going on and that fire came from both sides”.¹⁶²⁷¹ Galić recalled that the Accused asked to reduce disproportionate fire “to a minimum related to military necessity and military objectives”.¹⁶²⁷²

4828. On 28 January 1993, a representative of an international organisation met with the Accused in Geneva and asked him why he did not cease shelling Sarajevo at once.¹⁶²⁷³ The Accused responded that the Bosnian Muslims were attacking Ilidža, that the Bosnian Serbs were merely defending themselves, and that the Bosnian Muslims had produced and provoked “fireworks” when the representative of that organisation was visiting the city.¹⁶²⁷⁴

However, the diary does not record the issue of proportionality being discussed. See P1483 (Ratko Mladić’s notebook, 2 April–24 October 1993), pp. 182–194.

4829. As discussed earlier, on 31 January 1993, Morillon sent a letter to the Accused protesting the shelling of the Koševo Hospital “by Serb artillery or mortars”.¹⁶²⁷⁵ In the letter, Morillon stated that there can be no excuse for shelling a hospital, and demanded that the Accused take immediate and effective action to ensure that Bosnian Serb gunners respect the Geneva Conventions.¹⁶²⁷⁶

4830. Just after midnight on 2 June 1993, Morillon faxed the Accused to inform him that the shelling of the football game in Dobrinja which took place that morning and which was discussed by the Chamber earlier in the Judgement¹⁶²⁷⁷ caused the deaths of a number of innocent women and children.¹⁶²⁷⁸

4831. On 12 October 1993, Andreev, Briquemont, De Mello, and Harland met with the Accused and Krajišnik in Pale.¹⁶²⁷⁹ In the meeting, Briquemont told the Accused that Bosnian Serb shelling of civilian areas in Sarajevo was increasing and that it had no military value but rather caused political damage to the Serbs.¹⁶²⁸⁰ The Accused responded that this was the action of “rogue individuals” and that he would take further action to curb it if the Bosnian Muslim side did the same.¹⁶²⁸¹ Harland testified that the Accused’s comment concerning “rogue individuals” was ¹⁶²⁷⁵ P1275 (UNPROFOR protest letter to Radovan Karadžić, 31 January 1993). Morillon also wrote to Izetbegović 12 days earlier to protest against the firing of an 82 mm mobile mortar from a derelict house on the western side of the Koševo Hospital. The Chamber does not accept the Accused’s argument that P1275 was an attempt by Morillon to “strike a balance” with respect to the earlier incident; instead the Chamber is satisfied that this is a genuine protest in relation to an incident that occurred on 31 January 1993. See D2034 (UNPROFOR report, 21 January 1993), e-court p. 6; D351 (UNPROFOR report re protest letter to Alija Izetbegović, 21 January 1993); Hussein Abdel-Razek, T. 5552–5553 (20 July 2010). A number of international witnesses confirmed that the ABiH would fire at the SRK from around the Koševo Hospital in order to provoke retaliatory fire. See para. 4035.

The SRK Liaison Officer to UNPROFOR, Milenko Indić, testified that he did not receive any protests in relation to this incident. See D2774 (Witness statement of Milenko Indić dated 19 January 2013), para. 130.

While Harland stated that this meeting happened on 15 October 1993 in paragraph 60 of his statement, P845, which is a report on this meeting and is dated 15 October, clearly indicates that the meeting happened on 12 October. The Chamber considers that Harland was mistaken in his testimony and influenced by the date of the report, rather than its content.

disingenuous since often the impugned act was the firing of a heavy weapon such as a howitzer, which required crews of several men to operate.¹⁶²⁸² At the meeting, the Accused also stated that he had given orders for the shelling and sniping to stop while Krajišnik said that he would like to see sniping stop.¹⁶²⁸³ The Accused then claimed that Bosnian Muslim shelling and sniping was a major problem and that he might be forced to take the Muslim part of Sarajevo if the sniping did not stop.¹⁶²⁸⁴

4832. On 4 January 1994, De Mello and Russell met with the Accused in Pale.¹⁶²⁸⁵ De Mello raised the disproportionate retaliation of the SRK to small levels of firing from the ABiH, which served no military purpose, caused tragic civilian casualties, and was highly detrimental to the Serb image and cause.¹⁶²⁸⁶ The Accused agreed that Bosnian Serb retaliation was inappropriate and counter-productive and said that he would discuss the matter with Galić, but stated also that the ABiH was launching fierce ground attacks from inside Sarajevo.¹⁶²⁸⁷

4833. On 10 January 1994, Akashi met with the Accused and Koljević in Pale.¹⁶²⁸⁸ It was the first meeting between Akashi and the Accused.¹⁶²⁸⁹ Akashi emphasised that the recent excessive retaliations against the ABiH infantry attack were counter-productive, as they killed innocent people and created an unfavourable climate for the negotiations in Geneva.¹⁶²⁹⁰ Akashi recorded that the Accused “took the point”, but expressed his impatience with the Bosnian Government’s attitude in the Geneva negotiations and later threatened that if a peace agreement could not be reached soon the RS would have to “declare war”.¹⁶²⁹¹

4834. On 30 January 1994, Rose told the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Zametica that he was encouraged by the reduction in the shelling of Sarajevo in recent weeks and that he hoped this would prove to be a durable pattern.¹⁶²⁹² He also stated that he believed that demilitarisation was a means to solve the general issue of shelling in Sarajevo.¹⁶²⁹³ The Accused said that the continued shelling of Sarajevo was “senseless”, that it should stop, and that there should be a global cease-fire starting with the demilitarisation of Sarajevo.¹⁶²⁹⁴

Harland observed that the positions adopted by the Accused at this meeting, two weeks after the Bosnian Muslims had rejected the Owen-Stoltenberg agreement, were consistent with the assessment that the Accused sought to increase the pressure on the Bosnians when he wanted to punish the Bosnian government for not having accepted political arrangements acceptable to the Serbs. See P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), paras. 61–63.

4835. On 4 February 1994, in protest to the SRK’s 4 February 1994 mortar attack in Dobrinja discussed earlier in this Judgement,¹⁶²⁹⁵ Rose telephoned “the [VRS]” and wrote letters of protest to the Accused and Mladić.¹⁶²⁹⁶ However, he received no response to these protests.¹⁶²⁹⁷

4836. The Chamber also heard that one day after the first Markale incident on 5 February 1994, Akashi and Rose met with the Accused and Gvero at Lukavica Barracks.¹⁶²⁹⁸ During this meeting, the Accused told Akashi that it was the Bosnian Muslims who were responsible for the shelling and not the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁶²⁹⁹ This was followed up by another meeting on or about 7 February 1994, between Akashi, Rose, and the Accused, this time in Belgrade.¹⁶³⁰⁰ During the meeting, the Accused repeatedly denied Bosnian Serb responsibility for the first Markale incident.¹⁶³⁰¹ On the same day, the Accused issued an order to the VRS Main Staff and the SRK, stating first that “there is evidence that Serbs are not responding in equal measure to Muslim artillery provocations – sometimes twenty to thirty, or even seventy times more” and ordering as a result that the VRS

4837. On 15 March 1994, at a meeting between, inter alios, the Accused, Mladić, and Slobodan Milošević in Belgrade, the Accused complained that “[o]ur idiots are firing on Sarajevo” and described the army as acting like a “pampered prima donna”.¹⁶³⁰³ In his diary, Mladić stated that the Accused made these statements for the purpose of attacking the VRS.¹⁶³⁰⁴

4838. On 19 March 1994, Rose sent a letter to the Accused protesting, inter alia, the increased level of sniping in Sarajevo, and requesting that the Accused take measures to ensure that the sniping stopped immediately.¹⁶³⁰⁵ On 21 March 1994, the Accused wrote to Akashi in response to Rose’s letter, suggesting that it was “extraordinary” that Rose was surprised at the level of sniping in Sarajevo when the UN was not controlling Bosnian Muslim infantry, and stating that Bosnian Serbs were “constantly” the victims of such sniping.¹⁶³⁰⁶

4839. On 20 September 1994, Rose and Andreev met with the Accused, Koljević, Krajišnik, Milovanović, and Tolimir.¹⁶³⁰⁷ During this meeting Rose reiterated his strong denunciation of VRS involvement in attacks on Sarajevo on 18 September 1994.¹⁶³⁰⁸ The Accused gave an “angry diatribe” about ABiH attacks, and stated that “[i]f the international community treats us like a beast, then we will behave like a beast”.¹⁶³⁰⁹

4840. On 10 October 1994 Rose sent a letter of protest to the Accused in relation to Scheduled Incident F.11, informing the Accused of the incident and requesting that he “take all appropriate measures to identify and prosecute the perpetrators of this crime”.¹⁶³¹⁰

4841. In early November 1994, during the 46th Bosnian Serb Assembly session, the Accused himself recounted the “hard time” he had when “that pointless shelling of Sarajevo was going on” and explained that people told him that sometimes soldiers get drunk and fire a number of shells into Sarajevo “without aim and purpose”.¹⁶³¹¹ The Accused continued by saying:

[T]hen I call General Galić and ask him whether the members of the Corps are shooting at Sarajevo. He tells me that they are not. I ask him how does he know that and he answers that he did not issue the order. I ask him if it could be done without the order and he says it should not be like that. I tell him to check it out. It happened that he did not issue the order but some idiot gave himself a right to waste the shells, which cost 500 German marks each. These acts do not make us look like a military or even like the people. This does not mean that I am attacking the soldiers but this is a request to improve the situation. Believe me, the line between the total triumph and the total disaster is very delicate.¹⁶³¹²

4842. The Chamber recalls that, following Scheduled Incident G.10, on 7 April 1995, the SRK Command reported to the VRS Main Staff that in the morning the ABiH opened “fierce fire” on Famos with, inter alia, infantry weapons and an 82 mm mortar, in response to which the Ilidža Brigade fired one air bomb weighing 250 kilograms “at the centre of Hrasnica”.¹⁶³¹³ The VRS Main Staff then sent a combat report to the Accused, informing him of these events, including the attack on Famos, as well as the fact that “the enemy was adequately responded to whereby an A/B /air bomb/ (250kg) was launched on the centre of Hrasnica.”¹⁶³¹⁴

4843. On 30 April 1995, Akashi, Janvier, Smith, and Banbury met with, among others, the Accused, Koljević, Krajišnik, Zametica, and Bogdan Subotić in Pale.¹⁶³¹⁵ After suggesting that the Bosnian Muslims should be told that there will be no more humanitarian aid because they are killing Serb people, the Accused said during this meeting that “retaliation is productive”.¹⁶³¹⁶ Janvier responded by telling the Accused that the Serbs were targeting civilians, to which the Accused replied that they only targeted military targets.¹⁶³¹⁷ When Janvier disagreed with this, citing Tuzla as an example, the Accused laughed and, according to Banbury, stated that “[m]aybe some of our gunners have bad eyes”.¹⁶³¹⁸

4844. On 9 May 1995, Smith met with the Accused and Zametica at a hotel near Pale.¹⁶³¹⁹ Smith informed the Accused that he had recommended NATO air strikes in response to a concentrated heavy-weapons attack on Sarajevo and the civilian population on 7 and 8 May 1995.¹⁶³²⁰ According to Smith, the Accused did not deny that the Bosnian Serbs had shelled civilian areas, but expressed disillusionment and dissatisfaction with the UN, stated that he had intelligence that the ABiH had begun an offensive to lift the siege of Sarajevo, and threatened that he “could not allow the UN to help them beat us”.¹⁶³²¹ The Accused also made clear that in the event of a NATO attack the UN would be treated as enemies.¹⁶³²² The Accused expressed his discontent with the international community and emphasised that he would not respect any international bodies or resolutions unless they were in the interest of the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁶³²³ He then stated that the Serbs would make counter-oves against their enemies, particularly in Sarajevo.¹⁶³²⁴

4845. In an interview on 13 July 1995 in El País, when asked why he approved the shelling of the civilian population of Sarajevo, the Accused responded that the Bosnian Serbs never shelled the civilian population but were targeting the ABiH.¹⁶³²⁵ He blamed the ABiH for firing their own artillery from or close to civilian areas, to which the VRS would respond.¹⁶³²⁶ The Accused stated that the ABiH were killing the Bosnian Serbs and that the VRS had to “eliminate” them.¹⁶³²⁷

4846. As discussed in the Judgement,¹⁶³²⁸ in the afternoon of 29 August 1995, one day after the second shelling incident at Markale market, the Accused, Mladić, Plavšić, Krajišnik, Tolimir, and Gvero, among others, met with Slobodan Milošević, Bulatović, and Perišić, to discuss the upcoming peace conference.¹⁶³²⁹ During this meeting, Milošević encouraged the Bosnian Serb leadership to criticise the shelling and the killing of innocent civilians in Sarajevo “in a more severe way”, to which Tolimir reacted saying that by 11 a.m. on that day, no one had precise information as to where the shell had come from.¹⁶³³⁰ Milošević retorted, however, that Akashi had informed him that the shell that struck Markale came from the Bosnian Serb side, to which Mladić stated that the shells could have come only from the Muslim mobile launching pads.¹⁶³³¹ Mladić also voiced his doubt about the number of victims, given the size of the crater which he deemed “not bigger than an ashtray”.¹⁶³³²

4847. As also discussed earlier, on 30 August 1995, at around 2 a.m., letters were sent to Mladić, the Accused, and Slobodan Milošević informing them that NATO air strikes had commenced.¹⁶³³³ Both Milošević and the Accused were informed of the UN’s conclusions with respect to the second Markale incident and about the initiation of the air strikes; in the letter to the Accused, Akashi also wrote that the “key to stopping the air action” was in the Accused’s and Mladić’s hands and strongly urged him to ensure that the attacks on Sarajevo stopped.¹⁶³³⁴

(2) Accused informed of the campaign through media reports

4848. The Chamber also heard evidence that the sniping and shelling of civilians was widely covered in the press, and that the Accused closely followed this coverage. Events in Sarajevo were particularly well covered by the media, reporters from the international press corps were common in Sarajevo, and the media was critical of violations of international humanitarian law in the city.¹⁶³³⁵ Sniping incidents in particular received widespread coverage in the press.¹⁶³³⁶

Furthermore, UNPROFOR protests would be publicised through journalists and a statement would be made at the daily press point, which sometimes elicited a written response from the Bosnian Serbs or the Bosnian Muslims denying what was said.¹⁶³³⁷ [REDACTED] the Accused, Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević had information from television and newspapers at their disposal, and were very well-informed about what the international media was saying about events in BiH.¹⁶³³⁸

4849. Martin Bell also thought that the Accused was well-aware of his reports on the situation in Sarajevo, including the sniping and shelling of civilians, and testified that on one occasion the Accused took issue with a specific BBC report and phoned BBC News to complain.¹⁶³³⁹ Similarly, Van Lynden testified that both the Accused and Mladić told him that they watched Sky News and other international broadcasts.¹⁶³⁴⁰ According to Van Lynden, the Accused was eager to speak to Sky News because he considered it important to be able to put his point of view on one of the more important news organisations.¹⁶³⁴¹ Van Lynden also concluded from meetings with Mladić that Mladić followed the news and was fully aware of what was happening.¹⁶³⁴² In September 1992, Van Lynden referred to Mladić as the “scourge of Sarajevo” in a Sky News report of an interview conducted with Mladić.¹⁶³⁴³ Van Lynden testified that when he saw him next, Mladić “seemed very happy with the title” and “rather proud of it”.¹⁶³⁴⁴

4850. According to [REDACTED], the three parties to the conflict were all “very, very concerned about the international coverage of the events” in BiH and “very, very well informed by different means about what was being said about their activities or actions in the conflict”.¹⁶³⁴⁵ On the basis of the Bosnian Serbs’ comments on news stories by organisations such as BBC or CNN, and on the basis of his visits to Pale, [REDACTED] thought that the Bosnian Serbs received information through Belgrade, from all the foreign embassies of Yugoslavia, and were also well-informed in terms of press clippings and international television coverage.¹⁶³⁴⁶ [REDACTED] testified that the Accused “normally had with him all these clippings and reports on the international media”.¹⁶³⁴⁷ According to [REDACTED], the Accused would blame the international media for being part of a “complex plot against the Bosnian Serbs”.¹⁶³⁴⁸

(C) Accused’s deflection of criticism and/or denial of crimes

4851. In discussing various meetings and Accused’s statements in the preceding section, the Chamber has outlined some of the ways in which the Accused reacted to specific protests and complaints.¹⁶³⁴⁹ In addition, KW570 testified that the Accused often tried to satisfy the demands of the international community and was a “moderating influence” on other members of the Bosnian Serb leadership and the VRS.¹⁶³⁵⁰ Similarly, Vere Hayes, who travelled with Briquemont to Pale to meet with the Accused, Mladić, Plavšić, and others, found the Accused to be “perfectly civil and reasonable”.¹⁶³⁵¹

4852. However, many representatives of the international community gave evidence that the Accused attempted to manipulate and deceive them. For example, Banbury’s impression was that the Bosnian Serb leadership “constantly played us”.¹⁶³⁵² In his opinion, when the Accused made a commitment that was not implemented, this was not because the Accused could not ensure that it was implemented but rather because he, or the Bosnian Serb leaders generally, chose not to do so.¹⁶³⁵³ In his book entitled “In the Valley between War and Peace”, Akashi suggested that the Accused had a tendency to “twist the truth rather nonchalantly” in negotiations.¹⁶³⁵⁴ According to

Tucker, all three warring parties lied,¹⁶³⁵⁵ while [REDACTED] UNPROFOR received written protests from the commanders of the parties and from the Accused and Mladić, but that these were characterised by “a lot of lies, of fiction” and were in fact attempts at manipulation.¹⁶³⁵⁶

4853. Okun gave an example where the Accused repeatedly claimed that Sarajevo was a concentration camp for Serbs, whereas Okun considered that to be “just talk” indicating “that the position taken by [the Accused] and the entire Bosnian Serb leadership was not, to put it charitably, was not based on a fair appreciation of how to solve the problem”.¹⁶³⁵⁷ When the Accused put to Okun that “none of them said that I was a liar”, Okun responded that this was not true since people, such as Carrington, would in fact say that the Accused did not tell the truth and Okun himself had direct experience of that.¹⁶³⁵⁸ When shown passages from Owen’s book which referenced the Accused’s “bare faced dishonour” and his ability “to deflect and defuse a hostile question with an innocent facial expression and apparent concern in his voice”, Okun agreed that Owen was one of those involved in the negotiations who told him that the Accused did not tell the truth.¹⁶³⁵⁹

4854. On 10 September 1992, Vance, Owen, and Okun met with the Accused.¹⁶³⁶⁰ In response to the Accused’s question as to why sanctions were being tightened when the Serbs were doing everything to help, Okun told the Accused that it was the Bosnian Serbs who shelled Sarajevo first.¹⁶³⁶¹ The Accused responded by stating that it was the Bosnian Muslims who started the war by expelling him from his apartment in Sarajevo.¹⁶³⁶² Okun was surprised that, in light of those already killed or displaced by the conflict and the heavy shelling occurring during this meeting, the Accused considered this to be a convincing argument.¹⁶³⁶³ as a result, Akashi became much more cautious in relation to the weight given to the Accused’s undertakings, representations or agreements).

4855. Abdel-Razek testified that the Accused “showed respect to me and to the United Nations”, but that there were problems with the implementation on the ground of the points of agreement in meetings, and while the meetings took place in a “positive atmosphere”, the practices on the ground were “not at all acceptable” and contrary to what was agreed.¹⁶³⁶⁴ When asked whether this was a result of the nature of the civil war in which it was difficult to control everything in the field, Abdel-Razek responded that he did not think he was being deceived at these meetings, but that “the problem was in the chain of command”, and that the good intentions of the leadership was not reaching the soldiers.¹⁶³⁶⁵ He later clarified that “the discipline and rules of engagement that should be observed” by subordinate soldiers, and their obeying of orders “was loose on the ground” because there was a situation of civil war with “civilians who carried weapons and who were armed with strong passions”.¹⁶³⁶⁶

(D) Accused’s measures to deal with crimes in Sarajevo

4856. The Accused issued a number of orders to the VRS, which were also applicable to the SRK, to comply with the laws of war and to initiate proceedings against those who broke those rules. For example, on 13 June 1992, the Accused issued an order on the application of the “rules of international law of war” in the VRS, which stated that the VRS and MUP were to apply and respect the rules of the international law of war and that commanders were responsible for the application of those rules.¹⁶³⁶⁷ The order also stated that it was the duty of superior officers to initiate proceedings for legal sanctions against individuals who “violate the rules of the international law of war”.¹⁶³⁶⁸ Pursuant to this order, on 19 August 1992, the Accused issued ¹⁶³⁶⁶ Hussein Abdel-Razek, T. 5676–5677 (21 July 2010) (concluding that “there was a lack of control by the central command and that there was no full co-ordination between the leadership and the higher command and the subordinates on the ground”). The Chamber considers that this part of Abdel-Razek’s evidence should be viewed alongside his other testimony, in particular his testimony that Galić and Plavšić falsely denied Bosnian Serb responsibility for sniping and shelling incidents; that neither side gave any importance to the role of the UN; that, on both sides, “leaders manifested cooperation; however, in reality, they acted differently and undertook different actions that were not cooperative”; and that he sent a letter to the Accused instructing him to stop the shelling, but that Koljević sent a message saying that the letter could not be formally received unless Abdel-Razek properly titled the letter to the Accused as President of the RS. P1258 (Witness statement of Hussein Ali Abdel-Razek dated 16 July 2002), e-court pp. 7, 18, 22 (describing meetings with the Bosnian Serb leaders as “difficult meetings” with difficult discussions “with regard to getting the Serbs to agree to ceasing their activities of shelling, sniping and blocking the UN efforts in the Sarajevo Sector”). See also para. 4695.

another order to the Main Staff and MUP instructing, inter alia, that “all protagonists” fulfil their obligations to observe “international humanitarian law, especially the Third and Fourth Geneva Conventions”.¹⁶³⁶⁹ The Chamber recalls here that the Bosnian Serb military courts began to function in August 1992 and that the Accused, as Supreme Commander of the VRS, had influence and authority over the courts.¹⁶³⁷⁰ On 11 May 1993, the Accused issued a directive to the VRS to, inter alia, abide by the “Geneva Conventions for the protection of victims of war and their protocols 1 and 2, as well as the Hague Convention on Laws and Customs of Ground War from 1907, and other provisions of International Law of war”.¹⁶³⁷¹ In addition, the Chamber received a number of other examples of the Accused instructing the VRS and the SRK to avoid firing on Sarajevo and to avoid responding disproportionately to ABiH fire.¹⁶³⁷²

4857. The Chamber also received evidence of the Accused’s ability to order prompt investigations into SRK activities, such as in relation to an SRK memo that criticised him.¹⁶³⁷³ Some Defence witnesses gave evidence of the Accused ordering investigations into alleged crimes against the civilian population of Sarajevo. In relation to the shelling of Markale market on 5 February 1994, Gordan Milinić, the Accused’s Security Adviser at the time, testified that when the Accused heard about the incident on the day, he expressed astonishment and said that it was “yet another Muslim hoax”; he then “immediately called the military experts” who explained to him that the shell could not have been fired from the SRK positions and that this was a hoax by the Muslim side.¹⁶³⁷⁴ Similarly, Krajišnik testified that when the Accused received a protest about the shelling of Vase Miskina street on 27 May 1992, he contacted the VRS, and the VRS responded that the shell was

¹⁶³⁷² See Section IV.B.3.ii.D: Accused’s orders relevant to Sarajevo.

¹⁶³⁷³ See para. 4778. Another example of the Accused’s ability to order prompt investigations took place on 15 May 1995 when he ordered an investigation into the causes and consequences of the “unusual incident with tragic consequences” that happened in the Independent Prača Battalion on 10 May 1995. The following day, on 16 May 1995, Mladić implemented the Accused’s order by instructing the SRK Command to, inter alia, designate two officers to a joint commission tasked with analysing the facts of the incident and drawing up a report to be submitted to the Accused. See P2682 (VRS Main Staff Order, 16 May 1995).

¹⁶³⁷⁴ D3682 (Witness statement of Gordan Milinić dated 8 June 2013), paras. 9, 15. See also D3051 (Witness statement of Momir Bulatović dated 25 February 2013), paras. 32–35 (testifying that the SDC was informed by Perišić that the incident was caused by the Muslim side). On 10 February 1994, the Accused held a press conference in Geneva calling for a joint commission to investigate the incident, reminding the public that the Muslim side had previously staged shelling incidents and stating that the Serbs had no reason to continue with peace negotiations until a joint commission was established and findings made. See P5974 (Video footage of Radovan Karadžić press conference in Geneva, 10 February 1994); Slavko Gengo, T. 29823–29824 (6 November 2012) (maintaining that every incident caused UNPROFOR and representatives of his brigade to attend the scene and that “controls were stepped-up as soon as something happened”). See para. 4208.

not launched by them.¹⁶³⁷⁵ According to Krajišnik, the Accused immediately demanded that an inquiry be conducted.¹⁶³⁷⁶ Krajišnik testified that this same procedure was followed after the Markale incidents and after several shellings in Dobrinja.¹⁶³⁷⁷ Indeed, at around 1 p.m. on 28 August 1995, the day of the second Markale incident, Sladoje issued an order on behalf of the SRK Command banning fire on the city without approval, and asking all SRK brigades to inform the Command, by 2 p.m., as to whether they opened fire on Sarajevo between 10 a.m. and 12 p.m. that day.¹⁶³⁷⁸ Later that same day the VRS Main Staff reported to the Accused that the SRK brigades did not open fire on Sarajevo between 10 a.m. and 12 p.m..¹⁶³⁷⁹

4858. The VRS Main Staff was also able to order investigations into the actions of SRK soldiers. For example, following an order of the VRS Main Staff on 19 August 1993, on 20 August 1993 Galić sent an order to the Ilidža Brigade Command informing it that UNPROFOR had reported mortar fire from Nedžarići over Dobrinja and that there were 14 victims; the order also requested the Ilidža Brigade Command to form a commission to investigate this incident.¹⁶³⁸⁰ The following day, Dragomir Milošević sent a report to the Main Staff stating that no 82 mm mortars were fired from Nedžarići, but that the ABiH had fired 12 “mines” of 82 mm calibre over the High School in Ilidža to endanger the lives of the students, and stating that the ABiH’s provocation was responded to with infantry arms meaning that 14 victims was not possible.¹⁶³⁸¹

4859. In addition to the above evidence of the Accused’s reactions to specific incidents, the Chamber also received evidence of measures taken by him to collect information about crimes in BiH in general and has already outlined those in the preceding section of this Judgement.¹⁶³⁸² The Chamber recalls in particular his attitude that it was important to prevent disagreement among the Serbs, even at the expense of not punishing crimes.¹⁶³⁸³ As has also been noted in an earlier section of the Judgement,¹⁶³⁸⁴ in a session on 15 September 1994, the RS Government, with the support of the Accused, authorised the MUP and the Ministry of Justice and Administration to collect information on crimes against humanity and other crimes violating international law, irrespective of the ethnicity of the victims of those crimes.¹⁶³⁸⁵ On 4 January 1995, the Accused promulgated the Law on the Mandatory Submission of Information on Crimes against Humanity and International Law.¹⁶³⁸⁶ This law required that anyone in possession of information that could serve as evidence of “crimes against humanity and international law committed during the internal armed conflicts and civil war in [RS] and other parts of the former [BiH] which began in 1992” make the information available for inspection and, if necessary, submit them to the body in charge of gathering information on such crimes, and stated that anyone who refused to do so or thwarted the delivery or availability for inspection of such information would be punished with either a fine or maximum one year’s imprisonment.¹⁶³⁸⁷ However, on 17 May 1995, Marko Lugonja on behalf of the Intelligence and Security Department of the SRK Command sent out a request to the Commands of all SRK units to “gather all the data and evidence in the zones of your units on war crimes against humanity and international law committed by the enemy against the Serbs and Serbian people”.¹⁶³⁸⁸ In the request, Lugonja stated that the evidence will be delivered to the Military Prosecutor’s Offices, which will prepare criminal reports in co-operation with the Ministry of Justice depending on jurisdiction.¹⁶³⁸⁹

4860. The Chamber also recalls its finding that the VRS had a system for investigating and punishing crimes committed by VRS soldiers.¹⁶³⁹⁰ Thus, the SRK had its own military police company, military court, and military prosecutor’s office.¹⁶³⁹¹ Galić testified that, when he received protests of shelling or sniping of civilians, he would check with his subordinate units and would always conclude that “[t]here was nothing to investigate”.¹⁶³⁹² From 8 June 1992 to 31 December 1992, the SRK Military Prosecutor requested the VRS Military Prosecutor’s Offices to initiate 610 investigations, one of which was a request to investigate an officer for crimes against humanity and international laws of war.¹⁶³⁹³ Dragomir Milošević estimated that, during his time as the SRK Commander, he submitted about 70 criminal reports to the prosecutor for further action.¹⁶³⁹⁴ Milošević did not know, however, whether any of the reports he submitted related to the shelling or sniping of civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁶³⁹⁵ Luka Dragičević confirmed that during his time as Assistant Commander for Moral Guidance, Religious and Legal Affairs in the SRK, from the beginning of December 1994 until the end of the war, he received monthly reports from the military prosecutor's office but never learned of any instances where an SRK commander reported a criminal violation of the international laws of war to the military prosecutor in relation to the firing on Sarajevo.¹⁶³⁹⁶ This was confirmed by SRK soldiers and officers who testified in this case.¹⁶³⁹⁷ Indeed, the Chamber received evidence of numerous reports regarding investigations into and punishments of crimes, none of which relates to the sniping or shelling of civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁶³⁹⁸

(E) Conclusion

4861. In light of the evidence of numerous representatives of the international community, and even some Defence witnesses, about the regular protests that the Accused received throughout the conflict, the Chamber is convinced that the Accused knew that the SRK was sniping and shelling the civilian population of Sarajevo or launching indiscriminate and/or disproportionate attacks on the city throughout the conflict. This is further confirmed by the fact that he was aware of Security Council resolutions which were discussed at the meetings he attended and thus was fully aware of the international community's statements about the situation in Sarajevo, the plight of civilians, and violations of international humanitarian law. The evidence also shows that the Accused was cognisant of numerous media reports regarding the situation in the city and had interactions with journalists who repeatedly brought to his attention instances of shelling and sniping of civilians, as illustrated in his El País interview. Indeed, the fact that the Accused himself at times raised concerns and attempted to limit disproportionate attacks on the city, according to Galić and some of the orders he issued to the SRK, confirms the Chamber's conclusion that he was fully cognisant of the SRK's firing practices in Sarajevo.

4862. In relation to the Accused's submission that there were problems with the system of command and control during the war and that his receipt of information must be considered in this light, the Chamber already found that the command and control system, as well as the communication channels, within the SRK and the Main Staff through to the Accused, functioned well.¹⁶³⁹⁹ Furthermore, the Chamber recalls that the section discussing the Accused's authority over the SRK and his involvement in Sarajevo-related matters contains a number of examples of him receiving information about the military situation in Sarajevo during meetings with various VRS and SRK commanders and during the meetings of the Supreme Command. Additionally, the Accused was based in Pale, not far from Sarajevo, and had direct access to the SRK Commander and SRK troops. Accordingly, the Chamber does not accept that any problems that might have existed with respect to the system of command and control had a significant effect on the information the Accused was receiving and/or was able to seek out from the VRS and the SRK with respect to Sarajevo.

4863. That notwithstanding, the Chamber accepts the Accused's submission that SRK combat reports did not contain information about many of the specific sniping and shelling incidents for which he is now charged. The Chamber has already found this to be the case, with the exception of a few reports which did in fact refer to some of the scheduled incidents.¹⁶⁴⁰⁰ The Chamber recalls here its finding that SRK combat reports generally stated that the SRK returned fire when attacked, but provided very little information about the nature of the SRK response to ABiH fire; they also rarely detailed the specific weaponry used, the quantity of fire used, the exact locations targeted by the SRK, and made no mention of most of the scheduled sniping or shelling incidents listed in the Indictment.¹⁶⁴⁰¹ Nevertheless, as outlined above, the Accused was informed of the occurrence of Scheduled Incidents F.11, G.1, G.2, G.4, G.7, G.8, G.10, and G.19.¹⁶⁴⁰² Further, it is clear that he was also informed, by the representatives of the international community, that the SRK was the responsible party. For example, with respect to Scheduled Incident G.1, when made aware that the SRK was responsible for the heavy bombardment he retorted that the fire was legitimate and that the SRK was defending Serbs. Further, as indicated by the intercepted conversation of 30 May with Čedo, while instructing that the use of artillery in the city should be halted, he also ordered that infantry fire should continue and to “let them all die”. Similarly, with respect to Scheduled Incident G.2, the fact that the RS Presidency was involved in stopping the bombardment of the city and was successful in doing so clearly indicates that the Accused was aware that the SRK was responsible. As for Scheduled Incident G.4, Morillon sent a fax to the Accused, which placed the blame on the SRK, and also stated that the world would not tolerate the irresponsible behaviour of the Accused’s troops. Similarly, with respect to Scheduled Incident G.7, Rose wrote a letter of protest to the Accused but received no response. With respect to Scheduled Incident F.11, the Accused was informed by Rose that the SRK was responsible for the sniping of Alma Ćutuna and that he should investigate and prosecute those responsible, but he failed to respond. As for Scheduled Incident G.19, the Accused was informed not only by the representatives of the international community but also by Slobodan Milošević, that the information was that the SRK was responsible for the incident and yet continued to deny it. In addition to the Accused’s knowledge about some of the specific incidents charged, the Chamber also recalls that the representatives of the international community persistently informed the Accused of the SRK’s general sniping and shelling of civilians for the duration of the campaign. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that the Accused knew that the SRK was committing crimes, including in relation to the incidents listed in Schedules F and G of the Indictment, or alternatively that he had reason to know but did not make a genuine effort to ascertain whether the SRK was responsible for these crimes. Accordingly, the lack of specific information in the SRK reports as to the scheduled shelling and sniping incidents does not undermine the Chamber's conclusion in the preceding paragraph.

4864. The Chamber also notes that the witnesses who gave evidence of protests and complaints directed at the Accused consistently described a pattern of responses characterised by him (i) denying Bosnian Serb responsibility, (ii) blaming the ABiH for perpetrating or orchestrating the incidents, (iii) justifying the actions on the basis of defending Serbs, or (iv) deflecting the criticism by making promises or raising other issues. The evidence shows that the same approach was used by Mladić, Galić, Dragomir Milošević, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić. There were repeated attempts by the Accused and the Bosnian Serb political and military leadership to justify the existence of the campaign of sniping and shelling and promises made to international representatives to improve the situation. However, the Chamber finds, in light of its factual findings as to the situation in Sarajevo during the siege, that these assurances were completely at odds with the reality on the ground. While Abdel-Razek and KW570 testified that the Accused was genuinely co-operative in his interactions with the international community and that the implementation problem lay in the chain of command, this is contrary to the majority of the evidence received by the Chamber, including Abdel-Razek's own witness statement and the credible observations of many witnesses, such as Akashi, that the Accused dealt with representatives of the international community in a dishonest, disingenuous, and evasive manner.¹⁶⁴⁰³ It is also contrary to the findings above that the chain of command within the SRK and the VRS was functioning well.¹⁶⁴⁰⁴

4865. The Chamber does accept KW570's evidence that the Accused was more moderate than some of those around him; however, it is also clear on the basis of the evidence before it that the Accused was moderate only as long as the Bosnian Serb objectives in relation to Sarajevo were not being jeopardised.¹⁶⁴⁰⁵ Further, the Accused was duplicitous in his dealings with the international community, as illustrated by the aftermath of the shelling of Sarajevo in late May 1992 whereby, having been pressured to do so by the international community, he stopped the shelling, but then ordered a certain Čedo to continue using infantry fire. Accordingly, the Chamber is convinced that while on notice of crimes that formed part of the campaign of sniping and shelling of the civilian ¹⁶⁴⁰³ The Chamber notes that KW570's and Hayes' evidence that the Accused was polite and civil is not inconsistent with the Chamber's conclusion. Further, the Chamber notes that KW570 was in Sarajevo for a short period of time, while Hayes based his evidence on one encounter with the Accused.

¹⁶⁴⁰⁴ See para. 4751.

¹⁶⁴⁰⁵ See e.g. para. 4663. The Chamber also notes here its finding in fn. 11086 that while he did speak in terms which portrayed him publicly as the peaceful negotiator, the Accused always insisted that this peace was conditional on following the objectives of the Bosnian Serbs.

population being committed in Sarajevo by the SRK units, the Accused nevertheless deflected criticism and denied those crimes or provided misleading information about them.

4866. As regards the Accused's alleged failure to prevent or punish the perpetrators of crimes forming part of the campaign of sniping and shelling, the evidence before the Chamber does show that at times he attempted to address the issue of the disproportionate fire on the city and issued a number of orders throughout the conflict to the VRS and/or the SRK to respect the laws of war and stop shelling indiscriminately. However, in the Chamber's view these were few and far between, given that the campaign of sniping and shelling of civilians lasted for over three years. Furthermore, the evidence also shows that despite the existence of a functioning system for investigating and punishing soldiers for criminal actions, there were simply no examples of SRK soldiers being punished for the sniping or shelling of civilians. Multiple Defence witnesses suggested that, as Galić testified, "[t]here was nothing to investigate".¹⁶⁴⁰⁶ When investigations were conducted, whether pursuant to an order of the Accused or otherwise, the findings invariably stated that the SRK could not have been responsible for the attacks on civilians. However, this is contrary to the Chamber's findings on scheduled shelling and sniping incidents and on the SRK's general conduct which was brought to the Accused's attention continuously and consistently during the conflict.¹⁶⁴⁰⁷ In light of the Chamber's findings as to the existence of the campaign of sniping and shelling of civilians and the knowledge of the crimes on the part of the Accused and others, this pattern of impunity demonstrates that the orders issued by the Accused, as well as the few investigations and inquiries that were embarked upon by him, were not sincere. Instead, the Chamber is convinced that the Accused made no meaningful attempts to establish the accuracy of allegations made against the SRK. When a serious incident was brought to his attention, he would contact the VRS and then simply accept assurances that the SRK units were not responsible; he would also demand a joint investigation which he knew would never be accepted by the international community or by the Bosnian Muslim side.¹⁶⁴⁰⁸ This is in stark contrast to his reaction to Dragičević's report of 2 March 1995, following which he immediately ordered that an urgent report be sent to him. In contrast, when informed of the first Markale shelling and before even inquiring with the VRS officials about it, he immediately labelled it "another Muslim hoax".¹⁶⁴⁰⁹ This approach to the accusations made against his troops signifies a failure on the part ¹⁶⁴⁰⁶ See para. 4860.

¹⁶⁴⁰⁷ The Chamber excludes from this analysis Scheduled Incidents F.5, F.7, and G.6 as it was not satisfied that the evidence presented by the Prosecution was sufficient to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK was responsible for these incidents. In addition, for his part in this analysis, Judge Baird does not rely on Scheduled Incident G.8 due to his dissent in relation thereto.

¹⁶⁴⁰⁸ See paras. 4208, 4857.

¹⁶⁴⁰⁹ See para. 4857.

of the Accused, as Supreme Commander of the VRS, and also on the part of Mladić, Galić and Milošević, to take meaningful steps to investigate and punish the attacks on civilians of which they were well-informed.¹⁶⁴¹⁰

4867. The conclusion above is supported by evidence of a collective attitude of impunity for actions of the SRK taken in furtherance of the campaign as illustrated by Lugonja's call for evidence on crimes "committed by the enemy against the Serbs and Serbian people", which explicitly excluded crimes committed by Serbs.¹⁶⁴¹¹ In effect, the Accused encouraged this impunity by his consistent denials and deflections of international criticism and through his failure to insist on investigations and/or punishment of SRK units responsible for attacks on civilians in the city.¹⁶⁴¹²

iv. Accused's modulation of sniping and shelling

(A) Arguments of the parties

4868. The Prosecution alleges that the Accused modulated the campaign of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo in accordance with the Bosnian Serb leadership's political and strategic interests.¹⁶⁴¹³ It alleges that the Accused increased the level of sniping and shelling, and hence the level of terror, to pressure the BiH government into accepting peace on his terms, to influence negotiations, and to retaliate against the civilian population of Sarajevo for ABiH offensives.¹⁶⁴¹⁴ It also alleges that he "ratcheted down" the campaign of sniping and shelling in response to international pressure, international agreements, and the threat of NATO military intervention.¹⁶⁴¹⁵ The Accused does not respond to the allegation that he modulated the campaign of sniping and shelling; instead, he argues that no such campaign existed.¹⁶⁴¹⁶

¹⁶⁴¹⁰ The Chamber recalls that for an Accused to contribute to a JCE by omission, he must have had a legal duty to act, and that failure to act pursuant to that legal duty significantly contributed to the JCE. See para. 566. In that respect, the Chamber recalls that the Accused was the highest authority in the VRS chain of command during the entire campaign of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo and that he was able to exercise authority over the SRK forces. As such, he had a legal duty to prevent and punish crimes committed by those forces.

(B) Accused's modulation of the campaign

4869. As discussed above, Sarajevo and its surroundings were strategically important to the Bosnian Serb leadership, who believed that the war would be won or lost in the city.¹⁶⁴¹⁷ Harland testified that the overall strategy of the Accused in Sarajevo was to modulate the level of sniping and shelling, and hence the “level of pressure or terror”, in order to achieve his political objectives.¹⁶⁴¹⁸ According to him, the Accused would increase the level of sniping and shelling to force the Bosnian Muslims to accept peace on terms favourable to the Bosnian Serbs and to punish the Bosnian Muslims for their offensives.¹⁶⁴¹⁹ He would also reduce it when necessary, usually in response to the threat of NATO military interventions.¹⁶⁴²⁰ Similarly, Banbury testified that the Accused modulated the level of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo in order to place pressure on the civilian population of Sarajevo, UNPROFOR, and the broader international community.¹⁶⁴²¹ He testified that the Accused would “squeeze” Sarajevo where the UN was most vulnerable in order to remain “strategically on top”.¹⁶⁴²² Bell noted during his evidence that the Accused always struck a balance between military actions in Sarajevo and “peace offensive[s]”, and that he applied pressure to the city through the siege in order to force the Bosnian Muslims to accept peace on his terms.¹⁶⁴²³ According to KDZ450, the level of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo was closely related to political, diplomatic, and military events elsewhere in BiH, which indicated that it was the Accused who modulated the pressure on Sarajevo in order to achieve his objectives.¹⁶⁴²⁴ KDZ450 further testified that the Accused could order attacks on Sarajevo “just to prove a point” or to “draw media attention to the region”.¹⁶⁴²⁵ Similarly, Mole testified that it was an “accepted norm” that if the Bosnian Serb side failed to achieve their political or military objectives in BiH, Sarajevo would be subjected to heavy indiscriminate shelling.¹⁶⁴²⁶ Indeed, the Accused himself acknowledged this, speaking at the Bosnian Serb Assembly session in mid-June 1995, when he said: “[T]he Supreme

Command and I as the Commander and with the Main Staff, we agreed that the worst for us is a war of low intensity, long duration etc., and that we have to heat up the situation, take whatever we can, create a fiery atmosphere and dramatize, threaten an escalation etc. because we noticed that whenever we advance on Goražde, on Bihać or elsewhere or *if the situation escalates around Sarajevo, then the internationals come and diplomatic activity speeds up.*¹⁶⁴²⁷

4871. As discussed earlier, in May and June 1992 Sarajevo was subjected to heavy shelling by the SRK.¹⁶⁴²⁸ The aftermath of that shelling and various meetings and measures undertaken by the members of international community to stop it were also discussed earlier and show that the Accused was able to stop the shelling of the city when pressed to do so by representatives of the international community.¹⁶⁴²⁹ As also mentioned earlier, on 15 June 1992, at a meeting between Mladić, the Accused, other members of the RS Presidency, and representatives from the Sarajevo municipalities, the issue of Dobrinja was discussed whereby Koljević urged the others to “treat Dobrinja as our territory into which [Bosnian Muslim] snipers and terrorists have infiltrated”.¹⁶⁴³⁰ Following the Accused’s instruction that the issue of Dobrinja must be resolved through co-operation with the police and Prstojević’s request for deployment of soldiers to Dobrinja to carry out an operation,¹⁶⁴³¹ the meeting concluded with the decision to “clear the Serbian territory”, giving priority to Mojmiro and Dobrinja.¹⁶⁴³² This resulted in the shelling of civilian areas in Dobrinja, as recounted by the 26 June 1992 letter of the Secretary General informing the Security Council that Bosnian Serb forces were shelling civilian areas in Dobrinja and calling for the shelling to cease immediately.¹⁶⁴³³ Thus, at a meeting on 27 June with Mladić, Koljević, and Plavšić, among others, Krajišnik stated that the Presidency was “walking on the edge of the abyss” and that operations against Dobrinja “must urgently stop”.¹⁶⁴³⁴ That day, the Accused issued an order to the Main Staff to cease all operations in Dobrinja immediately and warned that disregarding the order would have “political consequences”.¹⁶⁴³⁵ Also that day, the Accused sent a letter to Cutileiro and Carrington informing them of the decision to cease operations in Dobrinja and expressing hope that it would “open possibilities” for the continuation of international negotiations.¹⁶⁴³⁶

4872. As discussed earlier, in September and October 1992 Sarajevo was again subjected to heavy indiscriminate shelling, resulting in representatives of the international community protesting to Koljević, Plavšić, and the Accused.¹⁶⁴³⁷ On 9 October 1992, at a meeting of the RS Presidency in the Accused’s absence, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Đerić decided to order the Main Staff to halt the artillery bombardment of Sarajevo because UNPROFOR was “exerting control”.¹⁶⁴³⁸ As a result, on 10 October 1992, pursuant to an order from the Main Staff, Galić prohibited the SRK from using all weapons and artillery with a calibre greater than 7.9 mm until further notice.¹⁶⁴³⁹ On 19 October 1992, at a meeting with Mladić, Plavšić, and Krajišnik, among others, the Accused stated that he was “convinced 101% that [NATO] will bomb” and that accordingly it was “crucial” not to fire on Sarajevo.¹⁶⁴⁴⁰

4873. Following the collapse of the Vance-Owen Peace Plan,¹⁶⁴⁴¹ the SRK launched an offensive on Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica in late June 1993 and, while this operation was underway, shelled a water queue in Dobrinja on 12 July 1993, causing a large number of civilian casualties.¹⁶⁴⁴² Harland testified that, at this time, the Accused was using the Igman offensive to secure as much territory as possible and “ratchet [...] up the pressure” on the Bosnian Muslims in advance of peace talks scheduled for late July in Geneva.¹⁶⁴⁴³ Indeed, on 16 July 1993, UNPROFOR reported that at a meeting with Briquemont and Andreev, the Accused stated that his “first priority” was to get the

BiH government back to the negotiating table.¹⁶⁴⁴⁴ On the same day, Dragomir Milošević ordered the SRK to cease firing at central Sarajevo, except in self-defence, because the Accused had “reached an agreement” with UNPROFOR and the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁶⁴⁴⁵ However, because of the SRK’s offensive, Izetbegović requested that the peace talks be postponed and NATO threatened to conduct air strikes.¹⁶⁴⁴⁶ Harland recalled that these developments “alarmed” the Accused and that consequently he took steps to “rapidly ratchet down” the pressure on the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁶⁴⁴⁷ On 4 August, the Accused told Milovanović that NATO was planning air strikes and that SRK forces had to withdraw from Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica as an expression of “good will”.¹⁶⁴⁴⁸ Then, on 5 August, he told Mladić that, to avoid air strikes, SRK forces should withdraw from Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica and “[n]ot a single shell must fall on Sarajevo”.¹⁶⁴⁴⁹ Also on 5 August, the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Lukić met with Briquemont, Hayes, and Andreev of UNPROFOR, and the Accused proposed, among other measures, withdrawing SRK forces from Mt. Igman and Mt. Bjelašnica to avoid air strikes.¹⁶⁴⁵⁰ The Accused then issued a series of orders to effect the withdrawal of SRK forces.¹⁶⁴⁵¹ Harland recalled that at around this time there was a “dramatic decline” in SRK sniping and shelling of the civilian population of Sarajevo.¹⁶⁴⁵²

4874. On 10 August 1993, on the eve of signing the Military Agreement on Peace in BiH,¹⁶⁴⁵³ the Accused told Milić from the Main Staff that “no shell” was to land on Sarajevo.¹⁶⁴⁵⁴ On 11 August 1993, in a conversation with Prstojević and Gvero, the Accused ordered “in the strongest terms” that no one was to fire grenades or shoot at Sarajevo.¹⁶⁴⁵⁵ That same day, Galić ordered the SRK “not to open fire over Sarajevo, at any price”, in order to establish “favourable conditions” for the upcoming peace negotiations in Geneva and to avoid NATO air strikes.¹⁶⁴⁵⁶ Harland testified that this order from Galić aimed to reduce the level of pressure on Sarajevo and was a clear example of the way the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership modulated the level of terror in the city in accordance with their “political interests and conveniences”.¹⁶⁴⁵⁷

4875. Following the rejection of the Owen-Stoltenberg Plan by the Bosnian Muslims in late September 1993,¹⁶⁴⁵⁸ the shelling of civilian areas in Sarajevo intensified.¹⁶⁴⁵⁹ According to Harland, the Accused increased the level of sniping and shelling at this time in order to punish the Bosnian Muslims for not accepting the plan.¹⁶⁴⁶⁰ On 12 October 1993, Andreev, Briquemont, De Mello, and Harland met with the Accused and Krajišnik, and Briquemont raised this increase in shelling with the Accused.¹⁶⁴⁶¹ The Accused responded that the Bosnian Serbs would reduce the level of shelling only if the Bosnian Muslims did the same.¹⁶⁴⁶²

4876. In January 1994, Sarajevo experienced heavy indiscriminate shelling resulting in a large number of civilian casualties.¹⁶⁴⁶³ In a meeting with the Accused on 10 January, Akashi emphasised that the recent “excessive retaliations” against the ABiH were counter-productive as they killed innocent people and created an unfavourable climate for the negotiations in Geneva.¹⁶⁴⁶⁴ Akashi reported that the Accused “took the point”, but expressed impatience with the BiH government’s attitude toward the Geneva negotiations, threatening to “declare war” if a peace agreement was not reached soon.¹⁶⁴⁶⁵ Then, at a meeting on 14 January between the Accused, Mladić, Krajišnik, Milošević, Galić, SRK unit commanders, and Sarajevo municipality presidents, the Accused discussed the negotiations in Geneva, the problem of “[m]edia pressure in the US”, and the threat that “NATO will kill Serbs”.¹⁶⁴⁶⁶ The Accused stated in the meeting that the Bosnian Serbs “must reach a victorious peace” and that the SRK’s “retaliation” against the ABiH should be in a “1:1” ratio.¹⁶⁴⁶⁷ On 30 January, at a meeting between Rose and the Accused, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Zametica, the Accused stated that the shelling of Sarajevo was “senseless” and should stop.¹⁶⁴⁶⁸ He further stated that there should be a global cease-fire starting with the demilitarisation of Sarajevo.¹⁶⁴⁶⁹ Rose testified that, at this time, a global cease-fire was in the Accused’s interests because the Bosnian Serbs held 70% of the territory of BiH, and therefore a cease-fire represented an opportunity for them to consolidate their territorial gains.¹⁶⁴⁷⁰

4877. On 7 February 1994, faced with the possibility of NATO air strikes following the first Markale incident of 5 February,¹⁶⁴⁷¹ the Accused informed the Main Staff, SRK Commander, and SRK brigade commanders that the “international community” had objected to the SRK’s “scale of retaliation”.¹⁶⁴⁷² He ordered the SRK to introduce the “strictest possible control of retaliation” and to “[e]xclude any possibility of uncontrolled shelling”.¹⁶⁴⁷³ The Accused also gave Milovanović the authority to negotiate a cease-fire agreement and, on 9 February, at a meeting with Rose, Milovanović agreed to an immediate cease-fire and the withdrawal of all heavy weapons from a 20 kilometre circle around Sarajevo, among other measures, which resulted in a significant reduction in sniping and shelling.¹⁶⁴⁷⁴ According to Harland, these were “dramatic concessions” consistent with the Accused’s political strategy of reducing the “pressure” on Sarajevo in the face of Western threats.¹⁶⁴⁷⁵ Indeed, on 17 February, UNPROFOR reported that Krajišnik stated that the Bosnian Serbs would “do everything to avoid air strikes, except capitulate”.¹⁶⁴⁷⁶

4878. On 22 September 1994, following the resumption of intense fighting in Sarajevo and the sniping of a civilian and a UN soldier,¹⁶⁴⁷⁷ the Accused informed the Main Staff that relations with the UNPROFOR were deteriorating and the Bosnian Serbs were “provoking” NATO air strikes.¹⁶⁴⁷⁸ The Accused ordered that “there be no incidents since our relationships with England and France are improving”.¹⁶⁴⁷⁹ He further stated that “every attack by NATO is a humiliation” and is “getting the world used to the idea that the Serbs are to be bombarded”.¹⁶⁴⁸⁰

4879. On 19 November 1994, as the military situation in Sarajevo was deteriorating,¹⁶⁴⁸¹ the Accused, Krajišnik, Tolimir, Buha, and Zametica met with Andreev, Gobilliard, Brinkman, Banbury, and Fraser.¹⁶⁴⁸² In the meeting, the Accused stated that if ABiH forces continued to fire on Bosnian Serb forces from within the TEZ, Bosnian Serb forces would retaliate.¹⁶⁴⁸³ He further stated: “The Muslims want a big war in Sarajevo. There is going to be a big war in Sarajevo”.¹⁶⁴⁸⁴ Four days later, the SRK sniped at a tram travelling along Zmaja od Bosne street, injuring two women,¹⁶⁴⁸⁵ and at the beginning of December 1994, the SRK shelled Sarajevo's downtown area with wire-guided missiles.¹⁶⁴⁸⁶

¹⁶⁴⁷⁵ P820 (Witness statement of David Harland dated 4 September 2009), paras. 79, 86; David Harland, T. 2020 (6 May 2010) (testifying that there was a “sharp dip in the pressure, the terror” applied to the civilian population of Sarajevo after the first Markale incident). The Accused argued that his order of 14 January 1994, three weeks before the first Markale incident, wherein he instructed the SRK to control its retaliation by applying a “1:1” ratio, meant that his response to the Markale incident cannot be considered modulation. See Closing Arguments, T. 47998 (2 October 2014). However, it was only after the Markale incident that the Accused agreed to establish WCPs and withdraw heavy weapons from around Sarajevo. Accordingly, the Chamber agrees with Harland’s testimony that the Accused made “dramatic concessions” after the first Markale incident in response to the threat of NATO military intervention.

4880. On 5 March 1995, the Accused wrote to Akashi and stated that the Bosnian Muslims were "completely ignoring" the COHA and that, if the situation did not change in the next 7 to 10 days, "our patience will have run out".¹⁶⁴⁸⁷ He further warned Akashi that there would be "calamity" if the Bosnian Muslims did "not abandon their obstructionist policy".¹⁶⁴⁸⁸ At the same time, in a meeting with Smith on the same day, Mladić explained that the increase in Bosnian Serb sniping in Sarajevo in late February and early March was a response to military offensives launched by the BiH government.¹⁶⁴⁸⁹ Banbury recalled being "struck" and "surprised" by this comment because it was an overt admission that the Bosnian Serbs were sniping civilians in order to punish the BiH government for its offensives.¹⁶⁴⁹⁰ He further testified that, like the Accused, Mladić had the ability to modulate the level of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo, which he used to influence negotiations.¹⁶⁴⁹¹ Indeed, in a meeting with Akashi on 12 March, the Accused and Mladić indicated their intention to pursue their objectives through "military means" if they were unable to achieve them at the negotiating table.¹⁶⁴⁹²

4881. On 5 April 1995, in a meeting with Smith, the Accused stated that if the ABiH conducted an offensive to open a land corridor into Sarajevo, his forces would "take Sarajevo".¹⁶⁴⁹³ The Accused further stated that he was prepared to take NATO on and would employ weapons that Bosnian Serb

4882. On 20 April 1995, as sniping and shelling in Sarajevo intensified, the Accused, Koljević, and Krajišnik met with Akashi, Smith, and Banbury; during the meeting, the Accused stated that if Bosnian Muslim sniping continued he would be forced to retaliate, leading to “renewed war” in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁴⁹⁶ On 30 April 1995, Akashi, Janvier, and Smith met with the Accused, Koljević, and Krajišnik, among others.¹⁶⁴⁹⁷ At the meeting, the Accused stated: “retaliation is productive. When [the ABiH] shell[s] Doboj and we retaliate, it’s effective”.¹⁶⁴⁹⁸ KDZ450 recalled that following offensives by the ABiH in Doboj, Maglaj, and the Brčko corridor, the Accused ordered attacks on Sarajevo in order to deter future offensives.¹⁶⁴⁹⁹

4883. On 1 May 1995, in a meeting with Akashi, Smith, Krajišnik, Zametica, and Bogdan Subotić, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs were ready to accept a cessation of hostilities provided that they were treated equally to the Bosnian Muslims and sanctions against them were lifted.¹⁶⁵⁰⁰ He stated, however, that if the international community treated the Bosnian Serbs like “beasts in a cage”, then they would behave that way.¹⁶⁵⁰¹ A week later, on 7 and 8 May, the SRK carried out mortar and artillery attacks on civilian areas in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵⁰² When Smith explained to the Accused that he had requested NATO air strikes in response to these attacks, the Accused did not deny that attacks against civilians had occurred.¹⁶⁵⁰³ Instead, he explained that he had intelligence that the ABiH had begun an offensive to break the siege of Sarajevo and that he would “not allow the UN to help them beat us”.¹⁶⁵⁰⁴

4884. As discussed earlier, following the second Markale incident on 28 August 1995,¹⁶⁵⁰⁵ NATO commenced air strikes on Bosnian Serb positions.¹⁶⁵⁰⁶ In response, the Accused agreed in a meeting with Holbrooke on 14 September 1995 to, inter alia, cease all operations within and around the TEZ in Sarajevo and remove all heavy weapons from around the TEZ, which led to an improvement in the situation in the city and the ultimate cessation of hostilities by 14 October 1995.¹⁶⁵⁰⁷

(C) Conclusion

4885. In light of the above evidence, as well as the evidence outlined in Section IV.B.1.a, the Chamber is satisfied that the sniping and shelling of Sarajevo was not random but followed a discernible pattern, indicating in turn that it was used by the Bosnian Serb political and military leadership, including the Accused, to achieve their political and military goals. Some of the more striking examples of this, as established by the evidence of international witnesses and contemporaneous UN and other documents, included the events surrounding the SRK’s capture of Mt. Igman, the shelling of the city following the rejection of the Owen-Stoltenberg Plan by the Bosnian Muslims, the launch of the modified air bomb on Hrasnica in April 1995, and the aftermath of the Markale shellings. With respect to the first Markale shelling, as outlined above, the Chamber rejects the Accused’s claim that he did not reduce the level of sniping and shelling specifically in response to this incident.¹⁶⁵⁰⁸ Indeed, the evidence outlined above clearly indicates that the Accused used his authority over the SRK to reduce the level of sniping and shelling when it furthered his political objectives, for example in the lead up to important peace negotiations, after the signing of significant agreements, and after NATO threatened to conduct air strikes. Similarly, as discussed above, on several occasions the Accused’s threats in meetings with the UN materialised in the form of an increase in the level of sniping and shelling in the city, for example when a modified air bomb fell on Hrasnica on 7 April 1995 just two days after the Accused told the UN that the Bosnian Serbs would employ weapons they had not yet used, and when the city was heavily shelled on 7 and 8 May 1995 just a week after the Accused told Smith that if the international community treated the Bosnian Serbs like “beasts in a cage”, then the Bosnian Serbs would behave that way.

4886. This evidence indicates that the Accused had the authority to increase the level of sniping and shelling and in fact did so on a number of occasions in order to influence negotiations with the UN and the Bosnian Muslims and to pressure them into accepting his demands. At other times, the Accused simply allowed the campaign of sniping and shelling to continue and, indeed, to intensify, particularly after ABiH offensives and the rejection by the BiH government of peace plans favoured by the Bosnian Serb leadership. He did so despite having de jure authority over the VRS and SRK units, which he was able to exercise in fact.¹⁶⁵⁰⁹ Indeed, the aftermath of the heavy bombardments of the city in late May and early June 1992, the aftermath of the two Markale shelling incidents, and the Accused’s order enabling a football match between UNPROFOR and a Sarajevo team to proceed without incident,¹⁶⁵¹⁰ are all testaments to the control and influence he was able to exert to stop the shelling and sniping in the city. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that the Accused modulated the level of sniping and shelling in Sarajevo in order to further his political and strategic objectives.

4887. The Chamber notes that in reaching this conclusion, it relied to a significant extent on the evidence of David Harland, Anthony Banbury, and a number of other international witnesses. The Chamber recalls that the Accused argued that Harland’s evidence was unreliable because he was a political advisor who was neither qualified nor competent to speak on military matters, he merely took notes at meetings and never exchanged a word with the Accused, he did not attend any of the peace conferences and therefore lacked knowledge of the Accused’s political views, his weekly UN reports relied on information from UNMOs which in turn was unreliable, and he made sweeping statements about Sarajevo which were not based on investigations and “not even on superficial knowledge” of the military situation.¹⁶⁵¹¹ The Accused further argued that Harland “manifestly showed himself to be partial” in his UN reports, and that he admitted as much during his testimony when he said that UNPROFOR was more supportive of the BiH government than the Bosnian Serbs.¹⁶⁵¹² Similarly, the Accused argued that Banbury’s evidence was unreliable because Banbury thought that the BiH government was “always right” while the Bosnian Serbs were “aggressors” and, like Harland, gave evidence on matters “which [he] did not know anything about nor could have known anything about”.¹⁶⁵¹³

4888. Addressing first the challenges to Harland, the Chamber notes that Harland served for several years with the UN in Sarajevo, including as a Civil Affairs Officer from May 1993 to January 1995, as Head of Civil Affairs from January to August 1995, and then as a Political Advisor to the UNPROFOR Commander until the end of the conflict. During this time, he was charged with the responsibility of observing and making contemporaneous notes at multiple high-level meetings with the Bosnian Serb leadership, which included the Accused, where the most important political and military matters in Sarajevo were discussed. Accordingly, rather than being a mere note-taker as implied by the Accused, Harland was an important witness to the events in question and as such is more than qualified to provide evidence on what the Accused and other alleged members of the JCE said and how they behaved at the said meetings. Having spent so much time in Sarajevo, he was also able to provide evidence as to how the discussions at these meetings corresponded with the general situation in Sarajevo as he observed it. While the Chamber acknowledges that UNPROFOR’s mandate was structured at times to support the BiH government, and that consequently some UN personnel may have sympathised with the Bosnian Muslim side, the Chamber recalls that on numerous occasions during cross-examination, Harland agreed with propositions put by the Accused which reflected poorly on the BiH government and the ABiH.¹⁶⁵¹⁴ He was a frank witness and the Chamber was left with the overall impression that he was credible. Furthermore, his evidence on the issue of modulation but also on a number of other issues was generally consistent with the accepted evidence of other credible witnesses.

4889. Like Harland, Banbury, as a Civil Affairs Officer in UNPROFOR and later an assistant to Akashi, participated in many high level meetings with the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused. Thus, Banbury was also able to provide detailed evidence on a number of meetings and discussions involving the Accused and other alleged members of the Sarajevo JCE. Also like Harland, Banbury made significant efforts to remain impartial during his testimony; for example, he modified the evidence he gave in his examination-in-chief when shown evidence to the contrary on cross-examination, while standing firm on other issues.¹⁶⁵¹⁵ This demonstrated his sincerity. As a result, the Chamber was left with the overall impression that he was a credible witness.

4890. Accordingly, the Chamber rejects the challenges the Accused has made to these two witnesses and is satisfied that the evidence they gave and which was recounted in this section can be relied upon without reservation.

v. Conclusion on the Accused's contribution

4891. Relying on the evidence and conclusions outlined above in relation to the actions and omission of the Accused, namely (i) his continuous support of Mladić, who was central in the implementation of the Sarajevo JCE; (ii) his direct involvement in the military matters in and around Sarajevo at the planning and operational levels; (iii) his knowledge of the attacks on civilians in Sarajevo and of indiscriminate or disproportionate SRK fire, together with his persistent denials and deflections of any SRK responsibility; (iv) his failure to prevent the shelling and the sniping of civilians and to punish those responsible, despite being at the apex of control over the VRS and SRK; (v) his support for and promotion of the SRK commanders and units while aware of their involvement in the campaign of sniping and shelling of civilians; and (vi) his modulation of that campaign in accordance with his political goals, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused shared the common purpose of the Sarajevo JCE and had the intent to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo through the campaign of sniping and shelling. Further, relying on the same evidence, the Chamber finds that the Accused provided a significant contribution to the Sarajevo JCE.¹⁶⁵¹⁶ As was the case with Mladić, the Chamber finds that the Accused's contribution was so instrumental that, without his support, the SRK's attacks on civilians could not have in fact occurred.

4892. The Chamber is therefore convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused worked together with Mladić, Galić, Dragomir Milošević, Krajišnik, Koljević, and Plavšić to establish and then to maintain the campaign of sniping and shelling against the civilian population in Sarajevo, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among that population. In other words, they worked together in furthering the objective of the Sarajevo JCE. Their enterprise started in late May 1992 and continued until October 1995 when the hostilities in Sarajevo ceased.

d. Accused's intent for murder, unlawful attacks on civilians, and terror

4893. The Prosecution claims that the Accused's intent for the crimes underlying the common criminal plan, namely murder, terror, and unlawful attacks, "flows inevitably from [his]

¹⁶⁵¹⁶ The Chamber is satisfied that, in contributing in these ways the Accused contributed to the Sarajevo JCE as alleged in paragraph 14(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (h), and (i). As noted earlier, the Chamber does not consider that the contribution alleged in paragraph 14(j) was in fact relevant to the Sarajevo JCE. See paras. 4713–4715. With contributions” to the Sarajevo JCE.¹⁶⁵¹⁷ The Accused denies that he is guilty of murder, terror, and unlawful attacks on civilians, and argues in support that he disapproved of the sniping and shelling in the city and repeatedly issued orders insisting that the soldiers adhere to international laws of war.¹⁶⁵¹⁸

4894. The Chamber has already outlined above some of the Accused’s statements relating to his objective for the Bosnian Serbs to have either the whole city of Sarajevo or parts thereof under their control.¹⁶⁵¹⁹ These statements clearly show that, as the conflict escalated, the Accused intended either to capture the city entirely or to divide it and assume control over part thereof, thereby gaining as much of the territory in the area as possible. The evidence outlined in preceding sections also shows that, in the pursuit of this objective, he had support from Krajišnik, Mladić, Koljević, and Plavšić. As also referred to earlier and testified to by Okun, given the multi-ethnic nature of the city, the only way to achieve this goal was through the “wall of fire”.¹⁶⁵²⁰ In that respect, the Chamber has received evidence recounting some of the Accused’s statements concerning the nature of the fighting in Sarajevo, the siege itself, and the use of violence against the civilian population in the city.

4895. For example, in 1991, the Accused was already aware that the encirclement of the city by the Bosnian Serbs was an option when, on 9 September 1991—following the arrest of Milan Martić in the Muslim-inhabited village of Otoka—Malko Koroman, the Chief of the Pale SJB, asked the Accused to tell the Bosnian Muslim side that if Martić was not released promptly, Serbs from the Romanija region would surround Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵²¹ The Accused promised he would convey that message and, after intimating that he had been in contact with Slobodan Milošević and the JNA General Staff in connection with Martić’s arrest, he instructed Koroman to “have the people prepared if [the Bosnian Muslims] fuck around” and later instructed him again as follows: “you have the people prepared [...] we will send them all to fucking hell because of this”.¹⁶⁵²² He also respect to paragraph 14(f) of the Indictment, the Chamber recalls its finding that the Sarajevo JCE started in late May 1992 and that the campaign of sniping and shelling was perpetrated by the SRK units surrounding the city.

instructed a number of other Bosnian Serb interlocutors to prepare the population, while at the same time urging them not to make any hasty moves and stay calm until he ensured Martić's release.¹⁶⁵²³ He spoke to Momčilo Mandić as well, and told him that the handover of Martić to Croatia would immediately lead to war as Bosnian Serbs were already gathering in Romanija in order to encircle Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵²⁴ He contacted Vitomir Žepinić, the Deputy MUP Minister at the time, and warned him that Serbs from Romanija and Ilijaš were ready to set up barricades and block Sarajevo such that nobody would be able to leave the city.¹⁶⁵²⁵ Expressing fears that the Bosnian Serbs would rise up because of Martić's arrest, the Accused told Žepinić that if this happened they "will get going, they'll block Sarajevo and then they'll see how it is when Serbs block Sarajevo."¹⁶⁵²⁶ Martić was eventually released, without violent clashes, on 9 September, due to the Accused's efforts.¹⁶⁵²⁷

4896. The Accused showed his awareness of what encirclement of the city would bring yet again during his telephone conversation of 12 October 1991 with Gojko Đogo in which, angered by the fact that SDA and HDZ delegates in the SRBiH Assembly had proposed a draft declaration of independence, the Accused said: "[T]hey have to know that there are 20,000 armed Serbs around Sarajevo, that's insane, they will, they will disappear, Sarajevo will be a karakazan [black cauldron] where 300,000 Muslims will die, they're not right in the head".¹⁶⁵²⁸

4897. Similarly, in another intercepted telephone conversation, on 14 November 1991, the Accused told Božidar Vučurović:

Our /position/ is clear. If you want to change the Constitution, the procedure must be followed. We know that they have prepared something for war, we know where they keep it and what they have, but we must say that the war will not last long and that it will be terrible and that it really will, first of all Sarajevo and several of these Bosnian cities will be destroyed, so to speak. I think that all of that would be destroyed in three to five days. They can't play around.¹⁶⁵²⁹

4898. A month and a half later, on 1 January 1992, the Accused complained to Krajišnik that in a recent interview, Izetbegović had spoken openly about a sovereign and independent BiH and then asked: “Does he want someone to destroy Sarajevo?”¹⁶⁵³⁰ Indicating that he was growing more and more willing to take a hard-line approach, the Accused also added: “[F]uck him [...] We will release our tigers and let them do their job. [...] [W]e’ve been calming the Serb people for a year because of [Izetbegović’s] foolishness. What can I do? I will not be calming anyone anymore, nor can I. [...] We need to release those people, we shouldn’t hold them back”.¹⁶⁵³¹ To this, Krajišnik said “we have to use the first opportunity to tell [Izetbegović] that he’s playing with fire”; the Accused agreed, stating that they should tell him so in public.¹⁶⁵³²

4899. Indeed, on 2 March 1992, the Accused spoke to Izetbegović on the phone, complaining about Bosnian Muslims attacking Serb settlements, at which point he said:

What are they doing in Serb settlements? [...] Believe me Sarajevo can burn, and burn out god forbid, there could be hundreds of thousands of dead people. [...] Look, we are, we are, we are making a big effort to hold Serbs from around Sarajevo not to scorch Sarajevo [...] please propose anything, but this has to stop absolutely [...].¹⁶⁵³³

4900. Similarly, in late April 1992, during his interview with Le Figaro, the Accused publicly issued a veiled threat to the Bosnian Muslim side. He first openly stated during this interview that his plan for Sarajevo was to establish a “clear separation” between the Serb and Muslim parts of the city, claiming that without this separation there will be “horror and terrorism”.¹⁶⁵³⁴ When the interviewer asked him what he intended to do given Izetbegović’s opposition to the partition of Sarajevo, the Accused stated: “We will not bombard everybody. But if the peace terms are not accepted, the chaos will continue. And that means war”.¹⁶⁵³⁵

4901. Thus, as these conversations and statements reveal, by the end of April 1992, the Accused was not only aware of the chaos that would ensue in Sarajevo if the tensions escalated but appeared to take a more militant approach to the situation and in turn encourage the option of resorting to violence, which he knew would result in severe consequences for the city. The evidence above also shows that he tried to use the threats of impending violence to advance his political goals and to scare the other side into abandoning their plans for an independent BiH.

¹⁶⁵³⁵ D1591 (Radovan Karadžić’s interview from Le Figaro, 23 April 1992), p. 2 (emphasis added).

4902. Indeed, by 12 May 1992, with Sarajevo already under siege and the shelling and sniping activities by both sides having increased in and around the city, the Accused indicated his support for this state of affairs by telling the Bosnian Serb Assembly at the 16th Assembly session that the Bosnian Serb forces were doing “quite well” as they were holding the enemy in “complete encirclement” in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵³⁶ As discussed earlier, it was at this session, having heard the Accused enunciate the Strategic Goals, that Mladić then outlined his plan for the city and the fact that Sarajevo could not be taken “by spitting at it from two mortars” but that instead 300 guns should be placed around Sarajevo, including rocket launchers.¹⁶⁵³⁷ The Chamber recalls that the SRK had between 200 and 300 heavy weapons in locations encircling the city and used them not only to fight the ABiH on the confrontation lines but also to target the civilian population in the city.¹⁶⁵³⁸

4903. On 23 May 1992, in an interview with Duga Magazine, the Accused acknowledged the uncompromising nature of the SRK’s fire on the city and argued that the suffering of the civilian population living there was inevitable, saying: “As for the [Sarajevo] ruins, my heart aches about them, but five to six hundred Moslem snipers, who kill non-selectively, cannot expect the Serbian defence to make no response, which is, of course, more than fiery. It must be clear to all of us that Sarajevo must suffer from both sides”.¹⁶⁵³⁹

4904. In another, undated, interview, the Accused stated that the journalists in Sarajevo were “misinformed” and that it was the Bosnian Muslims who were bombarding Sarajevo and killing their own people in order to “accuse Serbs”.¹⁶⁵⁴⁰ When asked about the comment of Colonel Gray from the UN that the Serbs had enough artillery to “demolish Sarajevo 10 times”, the Accused stated:

But we do not want to conquer Sarajevo, we do not want to tear down Sarajevo. Sarajevo is our city too. But, please, when somebody puts a mortal artillery weapon on some skyscraper, and is hitting us, hitting us, and kills 25 of our men in one day, so to say, we must hit this, to neutralize it [...]. So, housing objects, religious objects in Sarajevo are turned into military objects and forces us, when we became threatened, our lives, then we have to answer to neutralize that.¹⁶⁵⁴¹

4905. The Chamber has already described at various points in the Judgement how the Accused, following the intense negotiations at the end of May 1992, used his influence over Mladić to put a halt to the SRK's heavy bombing of Sarajevo while at the same time justifying his actions, as well as those of the SRK forces.¹⁶⁵⁴² However, the Chamber also heard that the Accused did not in fact intend for the shooting to stop completely. Instead, in the evening of 30 May 1992, he spoke to a certain Čedo who first reported to the Accused on the military situation in Rajlovac and Vraca and then received the following instructions from the Accused:

Karadžić Radovan: Alright. There is no artillery usage tonight, is there?
Čedo: No, no, no artillery on either side.
[...]
Karadžić Radovan: Try not to use artillery. Has Mladić called?
Čedo: Yes, yes, we've arranged that.
Karadžić Radovan: But, you should use infantry weapons. Let them go to hell.
Čedo: Exactly.
Karadžić Radovan: If they want to die, let ...
Čedo: They'll get what they're asking for.¹⁶⁵⁴³

Thus, even though he bemoaned to Morillon the inexperience of the forces in Sarajevo and the inability of Mladić to control them, the Accused himself then proceeded to issue instructions to forces on the ground encouraging them to use infantry fire. This in turn shows not only that he did in fact order the use of fire on Sarajevo but also that he was duplicitous in his dealings with the international community.¹⁶⁵⁴⁴

4906. This duplicity was openly verbalised in a meeting that took place at 4 p.m., on 5 June 1992, attended by Mladić, Koljević, Plavšić, Krajišnik, and Đerić, where the Accused first reported on the meeting the political leadership had had with Thornberry that day and then instructed them that "Sarajevo has to be resolved politically while acting quietly, inch by inch."¹⁶⁵⁴⁵ He also instructed the attendees to "clean up" Butmir, Hrasnica, Dobrinja, Sokolović Kolonija, and Hrasno.¹⁶⁵⁴⁶ The SRK forces launched an attack on Sarajevo later that evening, that was indiscriminate and ¹⁶⁵⁴⁴ The Accused showed his duplicity again in May 1995 following the SRK's withdrawal of weapons from WCPs described earlier. During a 25 May 1995 telephone conversation with Milovanović, he first urged the latter to return the weapons but when told that the weapons were unaccounted for, he told Milovanović to "give them back something that's old". disproportionate, lasting three days and causing a number of civilian casualties.¹⁶⁵⁴⁷ The next day, while the bombardment of Sarajevo was continuing, the Accused attended a meeting in Jahorina with other political and military leaders, including Krajišnik, Koljević, and Mladić, during which he discussed the Strategic Goals, claiming “we have to protect our territories militarily” and that “the birth of a state and the creation of borders does not occur without war”.¹⁶⁵⁴⁸ The bombing stopped only when the members of the RS Presidency and Mladić decided to put a halt to it.¹⁶⁵⁴⁹

4907. As outlined earlier, on 15 June 1992, the Accused met with Mladić, other members of the RS Presidency, and representatives from the Sarajevo municipalities, during which Koljević urged the others to “treat Dobrinja as our territory into which [Bosnian Muslim] snipers and terrorists have infiltrated”.¹⁶⁵⁵⁰ To this, the Accused responded that the issue of Dobrinja must be resolved through co-operation with the police.¹⁶⁵⁵¹ Prstojević then requested the deployment of soldiers to Dobrinja to carry out an operation and the meeting concluded with the decision to “clear the Serbian territory”, giving priority to Mojmiro and Dobrinja.¹⁶⁵⁵² As described earlier in the Judgement, Dobrinja was heavily shelled throughout the war by the SRK, such that it was utterly destroyed by February 1994.¹⁶⁵⁵³

4908. The Chamber also recalls a meeting on 10 September 1992, when Vance, Owen, and Okun met with the Accused and during which the Accused, having been told that his forces shelled Sarajevo first, responded that it was the Bosnian Muslims who started the war by expelling him from his apartment in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵⁵⁴ Okun testified that the Accused was portraying an “anomalous picture” as Sarajevo was at that point being mercilessly shelled by the Accused’s forces and yet he was complaining about the other side receiving weapons and about being expelled from his own apartment.¹⁶⁵⁵⁵

side would stop shelling those buildings.¹⁶⁵⁵⁶ Similarly, in a meeting of 29 January 1993, attended by VRS officers, including Galić and Mladić, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serb objective was to be in conflict with Bosnian Muslims and Croats everywhere and then emphasised importance of Sarajevo after which he stated “the Muslims should be hit hard enough for the world to realise it’s not worth going to war with Serbs”.¹⁶⁵⁵⁷

4910. As noted earlier, at a meeting in Jahorina on 2 June 1993 with the SRK commanders, the Accused proclaimed that nothing could be achieved by negotiating with Izetbegović and that Izetbegović had to be defeated militarily, stating “if war is what he wants, we have to defeat him”.¹⁶⁵⁵⁸ As also discussed earlier, it is during this meeting that Mladić advocated for “keeping constant the negative effect on the moral [sic] of Muslim forces and population, keep them in fear and constant wondering as to the activities of our forces” and argued for “incessant activities and combat actions with all available SRK forces” in order to “cause as many losses as possible to the enemy and develop feelings of dependency, fear and insecurity”.¹⁶⁵⁵⁹ The Accused then proclaimed that he supported everything that was said at the meeting.¹⁶⁵⁶⁰ Ultimately, this resulted in the issuance of Directive 5 and the Lukavac ’93 operation.¹⁶⁵⁶¹ As noted earlier, the directives issued and/or approved by the Accused ensured that the city remained blocked and under siege, which in turn allowed for the sniping and shelling to continue unabated.

4911. In the same vein, during the 34th Bosnian Serb Assembly session in August 1993, the Accused stressed that “Serbian Sarajevo is of priceless importance” and then, in the context of the separation between Muslims and Serbs, stated as follows:

[T]hey write about the large barbed-wire fences that will be set between us. Furthermore, this implies for both across Bosnia, and in Sarajevo. Sarajevo is the most serious problem, as there must be water, electricity and gas, and no shooting. According to the international war laws we are not allowed to use weapons to move Sarajevo from the front-line television news, and then, for us everything is accomplished with less difficulty. I am convinced that we will not see this for another two years, as there will be a lot of blood-shed, and as Njegoš said “sorrow for the one whose forehead breaks”. *We have to prepare for two important wars: one to gain Sarajevo, and another to gain Krajina.*¹⁶⁵⁶²

4912. In a meeting in Pale on 14 January 1994, which was attended by the Accused, Krajišnik, Mladić, Galić, Dragomir Milošević, Mićo Stanišić, Nedeljko Prstojević, and other presidents of Sarajevo municipalities as well as commanders of SRK brigades, the Accused stated that “the Muslims must not win a single victory in Sarajevo”, that the Serbs must secure the Ilidža–Lukavica road, and that they must defeat the Muslims in Sarajevo so the international community will accept the factual situation on the ground.¹⁶⁵⁶³ Following the presentation by the various SRK brigade commanders about the situation on the frontline, Mladić stated that Sarajevo is “strategic goal number one”, to be resolved militarily not politically.¹⁶⁵⁶⁴ Krajišnik then spoke and insisted on Serbs keeping Sarajevo, stating that the whole of Sarajevo must be taken, as one cannot have two masters in such a small area and one cannot share with the Muslims.¹⁶⁵⁶⁵ Following all these presentations, the Accused agreed with Mladić that “Muslims will break down in Sarajevo”, instructed the participants to make sure that the Muslims keep suffering defeats and feel inferior, and then stated that “retaliation should be 1:1”.¹⁶⁵⁶⁶

4913. As recounted earlier, following the incidents in Dobrinja and Markale market on 4 and 5 February 1994, the city went through a period of relative peace and improvements in living conditions, which slowly deteriorated in the second half of 1994.¹⁶⁵⁶⁷ On 19 November 1994, following the ABiH take-over of Mt. Igman, and a number of ABiH offensives,¹⁶⁵⁶⁸ the Accused and Krajišnik, among others, met with Gobilliard; during the meeting, the Accused expressed his belief that the ABiH was trying to de-block the city and threatened to take the city if the ABiH tried to do so.¹⁶⁵⁶⁹ The situation in Sarajevo deteriorated again, until 31 December when the COHA was signed.¹⁶⁵⁷⁰

4914. As also noted earlier, on 19 November 1994, in a meeting with Krajišnik, Andreev, Gobilliard, Banbury, and Fraser, among others, the Accused stated that if ABiH forces continued to fire on Bosnian Serb forces from within the TEZ, Bosnian Serb forces would retaliate.¹⁶⁵⁷¹ He further stated: “The Muslims want a big war in Sarajevo. [...] There is going to be a big war in Sarajevo”.¹⁶⁵⁷² Four days later, the SRK sniped at a tram travelling along Zmaja od Bosne street, injuring two women, and at the beginning of December 1994, the SRK shelled Sarajevo’s downtown area with wire-guided missiles.¹⁶⁵⁷³

4915. The Chamber also heard that in 1995 the Accused was ready to intensify the fighting in BiH, including in Sarajevo. On 5 March 1995, the Accused wrote to Akashi and stated that the Bosnian Muslims were “completely ignoring” the COHA and that, if the situation did not change in the next 7 to 10 days, “our patience will have run out”.¹⁶⁵⁷⁴ He further warned Akashi that there would be “calamity” if the Bosnian Muslims did “not abandon their obstructionist policy”.¹⁶⁵⁷⁵ On the same day, Mladić met with Smith and told him that the SRK’s increased in sniping in Sarajevo was in response to Serb casualties suffered in the military offensives launched by the ABiH, which to Smith was an explicit recognition that sniping was used by the SRK as a punitive measure rather than for any military gain.¹⁶⁵⁷⁶

4916. In April 1995, UNPROFOR reported that, in response to VRS defeats in BiH, the Accused announced on 26 March 1995 a general mobilisation of the “entire human and material potential, with the goal of defense of the country”.¹⁶⁵⁷⁷ The Accused was further reported as saying that if the “Muslims continue to pursue the war option, a major conflict will erupt” and that the Bosnian Serbs would be willing to fight “for decades”.¹⁶⁵⁷⁸ The UNPROFOR report also recounts that, on 28 March 1995, the Accused stated on Bosnian Serb TV that unless the war was resolved “soon” by peaceful means, his soldiers “will determine the face of the map of former BiH”.¹⁶⁵⁷⁹ He further stated that if the UN called air strikes he would break off all relations with the UN and “consider them hostile troops”.¹⁶⁵⁸⁰ This was followed up by a meeting between the Accused and Smith, on 5 April, during which the Accused indicated that the Bosnian Serbs would employ weapons they had not used yet.¹⁶⁵⁸¹ His threat eventuated when, on 7 April, a modified air bomb was launched on Hrasnica inflicting civilian casualties.¹⁶⁵⁸² In addition, in April 1995, the situation in Sarajevo escalated with an average of close to 1,000 firing incidents daily.¹⁶⁵⁸³

4917. Then, on 20 April 1995, the Accused met with Akashi and Smith, together with Gvero, Koljević, and Buha, and told Akashi that the constant sniping by the Bosnian Muslim side “could lead to a renewal of the war” and could force the Bosnian Serbs to retaliate, which would mean a “total war”.¹⁶⁵⁸⁴ On 22 April, the Accused held a press conference, referring to ABiH offensives and stating, “we shall be forced to engage ourselves into a drastic counter-offensive i.e. to put an end to the war by military means.”¹⁶⁵⁸⁵ He also added that it was detrimental to the region to maintain the low intensity war and that the Bosnian Serbs were ready to achieve peace through victory.¹⁶⁵⁸⁶

4918. On 9 May 1995, Smith reported that during a meeting held in Pale earlier in the day, the Accused had made it clear to him that the Bosnian Serbs were not going to let go of Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵⁸⁷ Smith explained to the Accused that he had recommended NATO air strikes against VRS positions because of the concentrated artillery attack against Sarajevo and its civilian population.¹⁶⁵⁸⁸ When Smith questioned the Accused on the military options that the Bosnian Serbs thought were available to them, the Accused stated “we will watch what our enemies do, intend to do or we believe are capable of doing and make counter moves against them particularly in Sarajevo.”¹⁶⁵⁸⁹ On the basis of this meeting, Smith concluded that the Bosnian Serb political and military leadership were confident that they could contain and defeat the ABiH offensives in Sarajevo through vigorous defence and that a further increase in military activities in and around Sarajevo was to be expected.¹⁶⁵⁹⁰ Smith also mentioned that during the meeting, the Accused was calm, rational, and less prone to his usual overstatements and wild assertions.¹⁶⁵⁹¹

4919. The Accused himself confirmed that at this time his goal was to escalate the violence in Sarajevo. Speaking at the Bosnian Serb Assembly in mid-June 1995, just a day before a number of modified air bombs were launched on the city,¹⁶⁵⁹² he said:

I must say that we decided to opt for an aggravation of the situation, and the Supreme Command and I as the Commander and with the Main Staff, we agreed that the worst for us is a war of low intensity, long duration etc., and that we have to heat up the situation, take whatever we can, create a fiery atmosphere and dramatise, threaten an escalation etc. because we noticed that whenever we advance on Goražde, on Bihać or elsewhere or if the situation escalates around Sarajevo, then the internationals come and diplomatic activity speeds up. We did that around Sarajevo, we took these artillery pieces, there are four artillery pieces, maybe they weren't crucial, but they resulted in the well-known bombing that unfortunately caused us material damage because we didn't disperse these weapons, although that would have been possible and dreadful had the depots been full, there would have been great, massive damage, which was significant anyway.¹⁶⁵⁹³

4920. Similarly, in an interview he gave in early June 1995, complaining about the international community's failure to understand that Bosnian Serbs had been in BiH for centuries and therefore had a right to their own state, the Accused stated:

[W]e are not going to indifferently watch each of our breathing pores being closed; we are going to close the Muslims theirs. That is our legitimate right. No one can demand from us that we act in a tolerant and correct manner, and that we are, at the same time, treated as wild beasts in a cage. *If we are treated that way, we are going to treat other people in that manner as well.*¹⁶⁵⁹⁴

4921. As recounted earlier, on 2 August 1995, several weeks before the second Markale incident, the Accused gave an interview to Srpski Borac newspaper where he threatened that if the Muslims did not accept "peaceful transformation of the city into two entities Sarajevo will suffer the fate of Beirut, where working hours are until noon and gunfire in the afternoon."¹⁶⁵⁹⁵ meetings with Mladić and the other members of the Sarajevo JCE. This in turn resulted in the perpetuation of, and at times escalation in, the sniping and shelling directed at the city and its civilians throughout the period of the siege. As such it inevitably resulted in the killing and wounding of many Sarajevo civilians.

4923. That is not to say, however, that the Accused never made any attempts to calm the fighting in Sarajevo and it is clear that at times he did do so, such as in the aftermath of the first Markale incident. The Chamber also received evidence suggesting that the Accused did not always approve of the SRK's shelling and sniping of civilians in the city. For example, as already mentioned earlier, Galić stated that the Accused wanted to reduce the use of force to a "minimum related to military necessity and military objectives".¹⁶⁵⁹⁶ He also testified that sometime during 1993 the Accused met with the SRK command and expressed concern about the disproportionate use of artillery.¹⁶⁵⁹⁷ According to Galić, at these top-level meetings where the Accused was present, the topic of proportionality was always discussed.¹⁶⁵⁹⁸ Similarly, Dragomir Milošević testified that the Accused and others in the Main Staff were constantly reminding him never to take any military action that would threaten the civilian population in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁵⁹⁹ As an example, Dragomir Milošević testified that Mladić told him to only destroy military targets.¹⁶⁶⁰⁰ Vladimir Radojčić, Commander of the Ilidža Brigade from 1993,¹⁶⁶⁰¹ also testified that the Accused would repeatedly point out during meetings that any actions against civilians would violate international humanitarian law and the laws of war.¹⁶⁶⁰² Milorad Šehovac, Commander of the 2nd Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade,¹⁶⁶⁰³ testified that at the meetings he attended with the Accused, the latter always insisted that the forces act in accordance with the Geneva Conventions and the provisions of international humanitarian law.¹⁶⁶⁰⁴

4924. The Accused's adviser, Zametica, recalled that the Accused stated once that the sniping by the Bosnian Serb side was "stupid", that it did not get the Serb side a military advantage, and that he was against it.¹⁶⁶⁰⁵ Similarly, with respect to shelling in Sarajevo, Zametica testified that the Accused disapproved of "irresponsible" or "senseless" shelling.¹⁶⁶⁰⁶ Bogdan Subotić testified that the Accused never issued an order to shell Sarajevo and that, if there had been such an order, he would have known about it.¹⁶⁶⁰⁷ He also testified that the Accused wanted a peaceful solution for Sarajevo from the very beginning of the conflict.¹⁶⁶⁰⁸ According to Krajišnik, there was no one in the civilian authorities that supported the shelling of Sarajevo.¹⁶⁶⁰⁹ In relation to shelling incidents, Krajišnik testified that the Accused would insist on having an immediate investigation conducted and Mladić, or someone else from the Main Staff, would deny that the shell originated from Bosnian Serb-controlled areas.¹⁶⁶¹⁰ The Accused would also issue warnings that the VRS should not attack Sarajevo because that would be a "pretext" to attack the VRS with air strikes.¹⁶⁶¹¹

4925. Vladislav Jovanović, the Foreign Minister of Serbia, testified that on the occasions when they met, the Accused told him that he did not have a policy of shelling and targeting Sarajevo and that this was not part of the Bosnian Serbs' military aim.¹⁶⁶¹² If such incidents did occur, the Accused told Jovanović, they were sporadic and caused by "soldiers, a few frustrated individuals" who had lost family members and he did his best to prevent them.¹⁶⁶¹³ Jovanović was also told by the Bosnian Serb leadership, including the Accused, that the Bosnian Muslims were responsible for a number of incidents, and that it was a method by which they used to infuriate the international community against the Bosnian Serbs and provoke a NATO reaction.¹⁶⁶¹⁴

The VRS responded that the shell was not launched by them. The Accused immediately demanded that an inquiry be conducted. According to Krajišnik, the same procedure was followed after the two Markale shellings and the shelling in Dobrinja. See Momčilo Krajišnik, T. 43333–43334 (12 November 2013).

¹⁶⁶¹⁴ Vladislav Jovanović, T. 34253–34254, 34325–34326 (26 February 2013) (also adding that he personally had doubts about the responsibility of the Bosnian Serbs for the incidents such as those that took place in Markale market).

4926. Momir Bulatović testified that he had many conversations with the Accused on the topic of shelling in Sarajevo during which the latter recognised that the shelling was a political liability for the Bosnian Serbs and that it damaged their cause.¹⁶⁶¹⁵ The Accused also told him that he had inquired with Mladić about whether the shelling could be stopped but was told that it was necessary in order to avoid VRS positions being overrun by the ABiH forces.¹⁶⁶¹⁶ When Bulatović raised with the Accused the allegations that the shelling was not limited to military attacks, but aimed at civilian areas, the Accused stated that he had banned shelling of civilian areas on a number of occasions and had done everything he could to prevent the unnecessary and disproportionate shelling of Sarajevo.¹⁶⁶¹⁷ In Bulatović's opinion, the shelling of civilian areas in Sarajevo was not the result of a policy of the Accused but was perpetrated by local soldiers who were untrained and were protecting their own homes and families.¹⁶⁶¹⁸

4927. It is indeed true that the Accused issued several orders, either written or oral, instructing the forces in Sarajevo not to target civilians and/or to respect the laws of war. The Chamber has outlined these orders in more detail in Sections IV.B.3.c.ii.D and IV.B.3.c.iv. The Chamber notes, however, that almost all¹⁶⁶¹⁹ of these orders were issued either while the Accused was engaged in the process of negotiating with foreign diplomats and/or had agreed to cease-fires¹⁶⁶²⁰ or during times when he was being pressured by the international community and/or threatened with air strikes, such as in the aftermath of the SRK's capture of Mt. Igman in 1993 and in the aftermath of the first Markale incident in February 1994.¹⁶⁶²¹ As such, the Chamber does not consider that these orders necessarily indicate that the Accused disapproved of the shelling and the sniping directed at the city, but rather that the shelling and sniping conducted by the SRK were at times inconvenient to him.

¹⁶⁶¹⁹ The Chamber notes that the Accused's message to the SRK units outlined in D314 is one such order but that it does not contain a date or a stamp making it difficult for the Chamber to place it in context. As also indicated earlier, Guzina's evidence on the issue of the date was unclear. See fn. 16064. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that the probative value of this order is low.

4928. Having therefore analysed all of the Accused's statements, orders, conversations, and activities mentioned above and bearing in mind all the preceding findings made by the Chamber in relation to the existence of the common plan, as well as the Accused's various contributions to that plan, the Chamber is convinced beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused had the intent to (i) commit unlawful attacks on civilians in Sarajevo, (ii) perpetrate acts of violence designed to cause terror among Sarajevo's civilian population, and (iii) murder civilians in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁶²² His hard-line approach and tendency to, at times, threaten and/or encourage the use of violence against the city for his own political purposes necessarily means that he also intended the consequences of that violence, including the killing, the wounding, and the terrorisation of the civilian population. Accordingly, given the pattern and the longevity of the campaign of sniping and shelling, the fact that indiscriminate and disproportionate shelling of the city would necessarily bring about civilian casualties, and the above findings in relation to his knowledge and conduct, the Chamber is satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that the Accused, together with the other Sarajevo JCE members, had the intent to commit unlawful attacks against civilians, terror, and murder.

4929. This is confirmed by a number of other factors. Starting first with the Accused's plans for the city, namely a division into two ethnically separate parts (as per the fifth Strategic Goal), the Chamber recalls that it could have been achieved only through what Okun labelled the "wall of fire", that is, through the sniping and shelling of the non-Serb parts of the city. While in the very early stages of the war the Accused may have had some concern for the fate of the civilians in the ¹⁶⁶²¹ See P1483 (Ratko Mladić's notebook, 2 April–24 October 1993), p. 263; P5054 (VRS Main Staff Order, 5 August 1993); P4802 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and unidentified member of VRS Main Staff, 10 August 1993); P4804 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić, Colonel Prstojević, and General Gvero, 11 August 1993); P846 (Radovan Karadžić's Order to VRS, 7 February 1994). Other orders provoked by threats from the international community were: P1504 (Minutes of 12th session of SerBiH Presidency, 27 June 1992), para. 3 (order to stop attacks on Dobrinja); P1481 (Ratko Mladić's notebook, 5 October–27 December 1992), p. 59 (wherein the Accused argued it was crucial to stop firing on Sarajevo due to the danger of a NATO attack); D4510 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and Matišić, 21 February 1993) (wherein the Accused refers to Morillon's request to cease fire); D3521 (Letter from Radovan Karadžić to VRS Main Staff, 22 September 1994), p. 3 (wherein the Accused stated that every attack by NATO was a humiliation).

city,¹⁶⁶²³ this subsided once he realised that the wall of fire was the only way in which he could achieve the fifth Strategic Goal. Furthermore, the siege of Sarajevo, as well as the shelling and the sniping directed at the city and its civilians, also had an effect which was highly desired by the Accused: undermining the Bosnian Muslim authorities in Sarajevo and their desire to have Sarajevo be the capital of the independent BiH.

4930. The Accused's statements in 1991 and early 1992, that is, prior to the Sarajevo JCE coming into existence, show that he recognised the possibility of the Bosnian Serbs encircling the city, the chaos that such encirclement would cause, and then used it to threaten the Bosnian Muslim side. By the time the Sarajevo JCE did come into being in late May 1992, the Accused embraced the siege and the very violence he predicted, all in order to retain the Serb-held territory around Sarajevo and undermine the Bosnian Muslim authorities in the city. This is yet another reason why his intent to commit the crimes outlined above is the only reasonable inference to be drawn from the evidence before the Chamber.

civilians in the city from the very beginning of the conflict, his persistent failure to punish the perpetrators and/or stop that targeting, his continued support for various individuals implicated in crimes, such as Mladić, Galić, and Dragomir Milošević, and the control that the VRS and the SRK officers had over the heavy weapons and sniper units encircling the city. The Chamber also recalls the Accused's own admission in mid-June 1995 that creating a "fiery atmosphere" in the city and escalating the conflict inevitably leads to diplomatic activity speeding up and his subsequent efforts to intensify the terror in the city in mid-1995 through, among other things, supporting the use of a new weapon on the city. As found earlier, a number of modified bombs were launched on the city following this threat to use a new weapon. All these facts indicate that there was a clear intent on part of the Accused to support the SRK's shelling and the sniping of the civilians in the city.

4933. Many of the Accused's statements outlined above also show that, from the beginning of the conflict, the approach he adopted with international negotiators and in the public domain was that the Bosnian Serb side was not to blame for anything but was instead to be defended at all costs. Thus, the Accused made numerous claims throughout the conflict that the Bosnian Muslims were at fault for all the major incidents in the city, either because they were launching attacks on the Bosnian Serb-held territory or because they were sniping and shelling their own civilians. In the early stages of the conflict, as illustrated by statements outlined above, he also claimed that the Bosnian Muslims, due to their failure to abandon their political aims, would be and were to blame for the Bosnian Serb violence. This tendency of the Accused to automatically shift the blame to the other side for the civilian casualties in Sarajevo remained his approach throughout the conflict and he rarely acknowledged the SRK's responsibility for anything, even in private conversations with his peers.¹⁶⁶²⁵ However, given that he was physically close to the city and to the SRK forces surrounding it, given the extensive information he would receive in relation to the Sarajevo battlefield from various sources, and recalling the great interest he took in the events there, the Chamber considers that the Accused adopted this approach of shifting blame not because he actually believed that the SRK was not responsible but because he wanted to deflect that responsibility and continue the pursuit of his political goals.

4934. This being his approach, the Accused made no genuine attempts to ensure that the civilian population in Sarajevo was protected from attacks by his own forces, even though he was obliged to do so given his position as the Supreme Commander. While he did occasionally issue orders for the Bosnian Serb Forces to stop the shelling and sniping attacks on the city and to respect the laws of war, as explained above, this only happened when he was pressured by the international community, under the threat of NATO air strikes, or when it was in his interest to do so in order to achieve his political goals. In other words, he never made any genuine attempts to stop the firing on the city outside of those situations. Furthermore, given the length of the siege of Sarajevo and of the SRK's campaign of sniping and shelling, the Accused's orders to stop the fire, particularly the indiscriminate and disproportionate fire, were few and far between. More importantly, they were never followed up by proper investigation and/or punishment for those who failed to obey his orders and therefore had no practical effect on the situation on the ground.¹⁶⁶²⁶ The fact that the Accused did not exercise his extensive influence more regularly and rigorously, which would have in turn prevented severe physical damage to the city, the terrorisation of civilians, and a large number of civilian casualties, indicates to the Chamber that the cessation of attacks on civilians in the city was not in the Accused's interests. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider that these orders undermine its ultimate finding that the Accused had the intent to commit the crimes outlined above.

4935. The Chamber was not persuaded by the evidence of various Defence witnesses who testified to the Accused's state of mind. For example, Bogdan Subotić's evidence that the Accused always wanted a peaceful solution to the situation in Sarajevo is clearly incorrect given the various statements the Accused made and the activities he engaged in, such as giving the order to Bosnian Serb Forces to use infantry fire on 30 May 1992, threatening the destruction of Sarajevo, and signalling the use of modified air bombs. Further, while the Accused may have told Jovanović and Momir Bulatović that the shelling and the sniping in Sarajevo was the work of rogue soldiers and elements outside of his control, this clearly was not the case, as outlined earlier in the Judgement.¹⁶⁶²⁷ The Chamber considers that when making these claims the Accused was simply trying to avoid any personal responsibility in front of the various FRY officials.

4936. The Chamber also does not accept Krajišnik's evidence, and the evidence of the various SRK soldiers and officers, that no one in the civilian authorities supported the shelling of Sarajevo.

¹⁶⁶²⁵ An example of this approach is the aftermath of the first Markale incident when, according to Milinić, before even speaking to anyone in the VRS, the Accused concluded that the incident was yet another Bosnian Muslim hoax. See para. 4208.

¹⁶⁶²⁶ The one occasion when the Accused can be said to have made genuine attempts to prevent the shelling and the sniping of the civilian population in Sarajevo was in the immediate aftermath of the first Markale incident when he issued an order directly to the SRK commanders and units threatening to hold them personally responsible for any attacks on the civilians. This in turn resulted in a period of relative peace for the city. However, as the political pressure on him decreased and the ABiH forces grew more confident, the Accused allowed the shelling and the sniping to commence again.

The evidence before the Chamber clearly shows otherwise.¹⁶⁶²⁸ Indeed, Krajišnik himself advocated taking the whole of Sarajevo, something that could not have been achieved without an all-out shelling of the entire city, including of its civilian population.¹⁶⁶²⁹ As noted earlier, he also supported the use of modified air bombs in Sarajevo.¹⁶⁶³⁰ Given the continuous shelling and sniping in the city between late May 1992 and October 1995, the Chamber also does not believe Galić, Dragomir Milošević, and the other SRK witnesses who testified that the Accused always emphasised the protection of civilians in Sarajevo and was genuine in his concern for the civilians. In any event, given the lack of any effect of those instructions on the ground, they must have been understood among all those present that the Accused was, on most occasions,¹⁶⁶³¹ simply paying lip service to the protection of Sarajevo's civilians. As indicated earlier, his failure to launch investigations and prosecutions against those in the SRK who were sniping and shelling civilians,¹⁶⁶³² coupled with his habit to blame the Bosnian Muslim side for the incidents in the city and for provoking SRK fire, was a clear sign to everyone in the VRS and the SRK that they could continue sniping and shelling at the Sarajevo's civilian population as they wished. Accordingly, none of the Accused's witnesses undermine in any way the Chamber's conclusion that the Accused had the intent to commit murder, unlawful attacks on civilians, and terror in the city of Sarajevo.

e. Conclusion: Accused's individual criminal responsibility

4937. The Chamber found above that the Sarajevo JCE came into existence in late May 1992 and continued until October 1995; that it involved a plurality of persons, including the Accused; that the Accused significantly contributed to, and worked in furtherance of, the common plan embodied in Sarajevo JCE; and that he shared the intent with respect to the common plan and the Sarajevo JCE crimes. The Chamber also found that the crimes of murder, unlawful attack on civilians, and terror were carried out by the members of the SRK units.¹⁶⁶³³

¹⁶⁶²⁸ See e.g. P5599 (Intercept of conversation between Momčilo Mandić and Tomislav Kovač, 24 April 1992) (wherein Mandić told Kovač that Sokolović Kolonija should be razed to the ground despite the presence of moderate Muslims there); P5638 (Intercept of conversation between Nedeljko Prstojević and Radomir Ristić, 16 June 1995) (wherein Prstojević told Ristić that his side pounded the "Turks" and sent a "krmača" [modified air bomb] or two to them, to which Ristić responded: "we need to shake them up a bit by all means").

¹⁶⁶³⁰ See para. 4388.

¹⁶⁶³¹ The Chamber considers that the aftermath of the first Markale incident is one example where the Accused made genuine attempts to stop the firing on the city and its civilian population. As noted earlier, it was prompted by the pressure exerted on him by the international community.

¹⁶⁶³² As discussed in relation to the two Markale incidents, the Accused would instead insist on establishing a joint commission comprised of both sides to the conflict, to which he knew the Bosnian Muslims would never agree. See paras. 4208, 4857.

¹⁶⁶³³ The Chamber excludes from this analysis Scheduled Incidents F.5, F.7, and G.6 as it was not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the SRK was responsible. In addition, for his part in this analysis, Judge Baird does not rely on Scheduled Incident G.8, due to his dissent in relation thereto.

4938. The Chamber recalls that in order to hold the Accused criminally responsible for crimes committed by non-members of the Sarajevo JCE, in this case the SRK units, there must be a link between the Accused or another JCE member and the criminal conduct, which is established if the Accused or another JCE member used the non-member in accordance with the common objective of the JCE to carry out the actus reus of the crimes included therein.¹⁶⁶³⁴ This may be inferred from the close co-operation of the Accused—or any other Sarajevo JCE member—with the non-member in order to further the common criminal plan.¹⁶⁶³⁵ In that respect, the Chamber recalls that it found that the Accused, Mladić, Galić, and Milošević all exercised in fact their de jure authority over the SRK forces. Similarly, all of the Sarajevo JCE members used their authority and influence over the SRK units in order to carry out the crimes envisaged by the common plan of the Sarajevo JCE. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that there is a link between the Accused and other Sarajevo JCE members on one hand, and the criminal conduct of the SRK units in Sarajevo on the other. As a result, the acts of murder and terror, as well as the unlawful attacks on civilians committed in Sarajevo can be imputed to the Accused and the other Sarajevo JCE members.

4939. The Chamber therefore finds that the Accused bears individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 7(1) of the Statute for murder, a crime against humanity (Count 5); murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war (Count 6); terror, a violation of the laws or customs of war (Count 9); and unlawful attacks on civilians, a violation of the laws or customs of war (Count 10).

4940. As noted earlier, in addition to the Accused's liability through his participation in the Sarajevo JCE, the Prosecution also alleges that the Accused is individually criminally responsible for planning, instigating, ordering, and/or aiding and abetting murder, unlawful attacks on civilians, and terror.¹⁶⁶³⁶ It also charges the Accused with individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 7(3) of the Statute.¹⁶⁶³⁷ However, having considered all of the evidence and in light of the findings made above, the Chamber finds that commission through JCE pursuant to Article 7(1) most accurately and appropriately reflects the Accused's responsibility for murder, unlawful attacks on civilians, and terror as charged in the Indictment. The Chamber will therefore not analyse the Accused's responsibility under the other modes alleged by the Prosecution in the Indictment.

C. SREBRENICA COMPONENT

4941. Under Count 8, the Prosecution alleges that beginning in March 1995, the Accused, in concert with other members of the Overarching JCE, implemented and/or used others to implement a plan to take over the Srebrenica enclave and forcibly transfer its Bosnian Muslim population as part of that JCE.¹⁶⁶³⁸ According to the Prosecution, prior to the take-over of Srebrenica in July 1995, humanitarian aid to the enclave was restricted, and civilian targets were shelled and sniped in an effort to make life impossible for the inhabitants of the enclave and to remove its population.¹⁶⁶³⁹

4942. The Prosecution contends that Bosnian Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs attacked and/or took control of the Srebrenica enclave in July 1995 in pursuit of the objective of permanently removing the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb-claimed territory.¹⁶⁶⁴⁰ The Prosecution further alleges that commencing in the days immediately preceding 11 July 1995, the Accused and others formed the shared objective to eliminate the Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica by killing the men and boys of Srebrenica and forcibly removing the women, young children, and some elderly men from Srebrenica.¹⁶⁶⁴¹ According to the Prosecution, commencing in the days immediately preceding 11 July 1995 and continuing until 1 November 1995, the Accused participated in a JCE to accomplish this objective through these means,¹⁶⁶⁴² which was then implemented as of 11 July 1995.¹⁶⁶⁴³

4943. The Prosecution characterises the killing of Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica during July and August 1995 as an underlying act of genocide under Count 2; persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.¹⁶⁶⁴⁴ The Prosecution contends that the separation of men and boys from their families and the forcible removal of the women, young children, and some elderly men caused serious bodily or ¹⁶⁶³⁸ Indictment, paras. 44, 57, 74. During closing arguments, the Prosecution specified that it does not seek a finding that the Accused is responsible for deportation, under Count 7, in relation to Srebrenica. See Prosecution Closing Argument, T. 48034 (7 October 2014). As outlined earlier in this Judgement, under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, including forcible displacement, was carried out in, inter alia, Bratunac and Vlasenica municipalities as part of the objective of permanently removing the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb-claimed territory, and that Bosnian Muslims who were forcibly displaced from their homes in Eastern BiH both during and after 1992 fled to the enclave of Srebrenica. mental harm to thousands of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica and thus constituted an underlying act of genocide under Count 2.¹⁶⁶⁴⁵

4944. With regard to the forcible displacement of Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica, the Prosecution alleges that it constitutes persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), a crime against humanity, under Count 8.¹⁶⁶⁴⁶ Finally, also under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that the terrorising and abuse of the Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari and the beating of men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution constitutes cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution.¹⁶⁶⁴⁷

1. Facts

a. Events in eastern BiH between May 1992 and December 1994

4945. As discussed above, as early as mid-May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had adopted the goal of eliminating the Drina River as a border separating eastern BiH from Serbia by establishing a foothold in the Drina River valley.¹⁶⁶⁴⁸ By November 1992, the VRS had established territorial continuity between its holdings in eastern BiH and the Krajina, and began to focus on capturing the region bordering the Drina River.¹⁶⁶⁴⁹

4946. Although the Serb Forces were successful in taking over and holding town centres in Zvornik, Bratunac, and Vlasenica municipalities during the first half of 1992,¹⁶⁶⁵⁰ pockets in the surrounding countryside, which had had a Bosnian Muslim majority population, remained under the control of Bosnian Muslim forces.¹⁶⁶⁵¹ By the end of October 1992, the Bosnian Muslim forces had captured a number of Bosnian Serb villages, reducing the area of Bratunac municipality controlled by the VRS to Bratunac town and the predominantly Serb village of Kravica.¹⁶⁶⁵² In November 1992, Bosnian Muslim forces based in Srebrenica began a two-stage offensive aimed at: (i) linking up with Bosnian Muslim forces based in Cerska,¹⁶⁶⁵³ which would isolate the Serb Forces holding the towns of Bratunac and Skelani, and (ii) capturing the town of Bratunac.¹⁶⁶⁵⁴ As major combat operations engulfed the broader Kamenica region in Zvornik municipality,¹⁶⁶⁵⁵ Bosnian Muslims fled towards Srebrenica town, which had a Bosnian Muslim majority,¹⁶⁶⁵⁶ and was itself under VRS attack.¹⁶⁶⁵⁷

i. Issuance of Directive 4 and the VRS Spring 1993 Offensive

4947. In response to this Bosnian Muslim offensive, the VRS devised a plan to secure the Podrinje region, which was articulated in Operational Directive 4 (“Directive 4”), issued on 19 November 1992.¹⁶⁶⁵⁸ Directive 4 provided that the Drina Corps was to [...] defend with utmost persistence Višegrad (the dam), Zvornik and the corridor, while the rest of its forces in the wider Podrinje region are to exhaust the enemy, inflict the heaviest possible losses on them and force them to leave the Birač, Žepa, and Goražde areas with the Muslim population. First offer the able-bodied and armed men to surrender, and if they refuse, destroy them.¹⁶⁶⁵⁹

4948. On 23 November 1992, the Accused chaired a meeting held in Zvornik which was attended by the Drina Corps command, as well as the commanders of subordinate brigades and members of the VRS Main Staff, where the combat activities in their respective areas of responsibility were discussed.¹⁶⁶⁶⁰ The next day, in accordance with Directive 4, the then-Drina Corps Commander, Milenko Živanović, issued an order to the Zvornik Brigade to “launch an attack [...] to inflict on the enemy the highest possible losses, exhaust them, break them up or force them to surrender, and force the Muslim local population to abandon the area of Cerska, Žepa, Srebrenica, and Goražde”.¹⁶⁶⁶¹ That day, the VRS launched Operation Proboj—meaning “breakthrough”—pursuant to Directive 4.¹⁶⁶⁶² In early December, as the VRS faced stiff resistance from the ABiH in the Podrinje region, the Accused issued two orders to the Main Staff instructing them to disarm “opponents” in the Cerska and Konjević Polje areas.¹⁶⁶⁶³

4949. Meanwhile, Srebrenica town had been devastated by shelling.¹⁶⁶⁶⁴ The town was crowded with large numbers of Bosnian Muslim refugees from other parts of eastern BiH, and severe hardship, including a serious food shortage, was visible on the streets.¹⁶⁶⁶⁵ The town’s only medical clinic lacked medicine and anaesthetics.¹⁶⁶⁶⁶ The sole UNHCR convoy which had obtained clearance from the VRS to proceed to Srebrenica was halted in Bratunac, where it remained for three or four days before finally being allowed to proceed to Srebrenica.¹⁶⁶⁶⁷

The Chamber observes that although the language of Directive 4 differs slightly from the language contained in P2085, Živanović himself testified that he understood the task of forcing the Bosnian Muslim population to leave the area to be assigned to him under Directive 4. 4950. Thereafter, Mladić told Morillon that he would not consider approving any aid convoy to Srebrenica until aid had reached some of the many Bosnian Serb refugees in eastern BiH.¹⁶⁶⁶⁸ As a result, UNHCR suspended all deliveries of humanitarian aid to the region,¹⁶⁶⁶⁹ but continued to hold talks with Bosnian Serb officials, including the Accused, regarding the issue of access to the areas.¹⁶⁶⁷⁰ Ultimately, the Accused approved a convoy for Srebrenica on the condition that it would leave part of its cargo in Bratunac.¹⁶⁶⁷¹ However, the humanitarian convoy that was scheduled to proceed to Srebrenica on 17 December 1992 was in fact postponed following heavy fighting in the area.¹⁶⁶⁷²

4951. By December and January, famine prevailed.¹⁶⁶⁷³ Men often walked tens of kilometres in search of food, but returned empty-handed.¹⁶⁶⁷⁴ During this time, Bosnian Muslim forces infiltrated Bosnian Serb lines, attempting to retrieve food and weapons from Bosnian-Muslim held

On 9 December 1992, the Accused personally visited Bratunac and addressed the local population, telling them that the humanitarian aid convoys should be allowed through to the population of Srebrenica, and stating, “we are creating our state and with our behaviour, we have to show the world that we deserve it, and we will be most successful in this if we show our enemies that we are not building it with hatred towards them, because this is not in the spirit of the Serbian people”. territory.¹⁶⁶⁷⁵ Bosnian Muslim forces also launched raids from inside the Bosnian Muslim-held territories in eastern BiH in order to secure weapons, ammunition, and food.¹⁶⁶⁷⁶

4952. By January 1993, the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica¹⁶⁶⁷⁷ had gained control of 92 or 93% of the territory in Bratunac municipality and were poised to take the town of Bratunac itself; this successfully separated the Bratunac area from the rest of the Drina Corps' area of responsibility.¹⁶⁶⁷⁸ On about 8 January 1993, these forces attacked the village of Kravica, which fell the following day.¹⁶⁶⁷⁹

4953. In response, the VRS conducted a series of attacks, the first of which was aimed at separating Srebrenica from Cerska, which was then controlled by the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica.¹⁶⁶⁸⁰ During the first weeks, the Bratunac Brigade lost many men, assets, and territory to the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica,¹⁶⁶⁸¹ and units from outside the Drina Corps' area of ¹⁶⁶⁷⁷ The Bosnian Muslim armed forces operating in the Srebrenica area were originally named the Defence Staff of Eastern Bosnia, but were reorganised numerous times and renamed the “8th Operative Group of Srebrenica” by the Supreme Command of the ABiH on 1 January 1994. The Chamber notes that the name of the ABiH forces operating in and around Srebrenica differed depending on the period in question: before late 1994, the group was referred to as the “Armed Forces of Srebrenica”; between late 1994 and May 1995, the unit was referred to as the 8th Operative Group; and from May 1995 onwards, it was referred to as the 28th Division. The Chamber is satisfied that these terms refer to the same group, but for ease of reference will use the term “Muslim Forces in Srebrenica” to refer to the group throughout.

responsibility were deployed to assist.¹⁶⁶⁸² At the beginning of February 1993, the VRS initiated another counter-offensive aimed at capturing the “Bosnian Muslim strongholds” of Cerska and Srebrenica.¹⁶⁶⁸³ Within two weeks, the VRS controlled the area of Kamenica and had encircled Cerska, Konjević Polje, and Srebrenica,¹⁶⁶⁸⁴ but still anticipated that the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica might attack Bratunac.¹⁶⁶⁸⁵ In late February, units of the Drina Corps remained actively engaged in the area around Cerska.¹⁶⁶⁸⁶

4954. As the VRS approached and began to shell Cerska, residents fled toward Konjević Polje, leaving behind a small number of armed individuals.¹⁶⁶⁸⁷ VRS attacks generally followed a pattern of “lob[bing] a few shells an hour into a small number of villages” for two or three days, which would generally cause most of the population to flee, before approximately 50 infantrymen, a couple of tanks, and a couple of APCs would suddenly attack and capture the “largely deserted” villages.¹⁶⁶⁸⁸ Through this pattern, the villagers came to recognise the initial shelling as an indication that their village was about to be attacked and fled prior to the ground assault.¹⁶⁶⁸⁹ Thus, the vast majority of the Bosnian Muslim civilians from the villages withdrew before Bosnian Serb units entered.¹⁶⁶⁹⁰

4955. The VRS also burned Bosnian Muslim villages as they moved through the area.¹⁶⁶⁹¹ The Chamber notes that multiple witnesses who were members of the commands at various levels of the VRS at the time—including Živanović—suggested that certain villages were burned because they were fortified and used as strongholds by the ABiH.¹⁶⁶⁹² In considering these witnesses’ testimony, the Chamber noted that as members of the commands at various levels of the VRS, each were—to some extent—connected to this campaign and would therefore have had an incentive to portray as legitimate the means employed therein.¹⁶⁶⁹³ The Chamber thus treated their testimony with caution. Moreover, the Chamber received evidence demonstrating that torching houses was a default tactic of the Bosnian Serb units, and that Živanović himself urged the burning of “as many [houses] as possible” at the time.¹⁶⁶⁹⁴ Furthermore, a contemporaneous report indicates that in at least one instance, the ABiH had already fled the village, leaving behind abandoned weapons.¹⁶⁶⁹⁵ The Chamber therefore does not accept the assertion that Bosnian Muslim villages were burned solely because they were fortified and being used by the ABiH as strongholds.

At the same time of the events in question, Andrić was the Commander of the Birač Brigade. D3886 (Witness statement of Svetozar Andrić dated 16 July 2013), para. 1.

¹⁶⁶⁹⁴ See P4253 (Amendment to Zvornik Brigade Report, 10 March 1993) (Pandurević proposing that “houses should not be torched when taking control of Konjević Polje but that they be inhabited by people from Tuzla and other areas”); Manojlo Milovanović, T. 25783 (5 March 2012); P5261 (Intercept of conversation between Col. Milenko Živanović and Lt. Gaborović, 8 February 1993). When presented with this intercept, Živanović reiterated that civilians had already departed from the villages in question and the villages had been turned into ABiH strongholds. Milenko Živanović, T. 42604–42606 (30 October 2013). Živanović further asserted that Pandurević’s suggestion not to burn Konjević Polje so that Serbs could move in was plausible only because the village was not being defended by any ABiH forces, and he maintained that houses were never burned unless the ABiH was using them for a military purpose. Milenko Živanović, T. 42607 (30 October 2013). The Chamber is of the view that had Živanović intended only to neutralise a military threat, he would not have urged that “as many [houses] as possible” be burned. The Chamber thus considers that Živanović’s testimony is directly contradicted by the intercept in question and, accordingly, will not rely on the former in this regard. See also P6460 (Excerpt from report of Commission on Human Rights, 5 May 1993), para. 15.

thousands made their way southeast to Srebrenica or west towards Tuzla.¹⁶⁶⁹⁷ In some instances, the VRS targeted mixed columns of civilians and soldiers,¹⁶⁶⁹⁸ forcing them to flee.¹⁶⁶⁹⁹

4957. During the spring of 1993, the humanitarian situation in eastern BiH grew disastrous. As mentioned above, until February, the Bosnian Serbs had allowed only one convoy to Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷⁰⁰ They had not allowed any relief convoys to reach Cerska, and had let “a handful” through to Goražde and Žepa following lengthy negotiation and delays.¹⁶⁷⁰¹ Bosnian Serb leaders continued to offer a number of justifications for the convoys not reaching the enclaves, such as roads and bridges being damaged or mined, snow blocking the roads, or the existence of local fighting.¹⁶⁷⁰² Alternatively, they asserted that the Bosnian Serb population along the proposed convoy route was agitated and would not let convoys pass, or the leaders would invoke a Bosnian Muslim or UN action as justification for not letting convoys through.¹⁶⁷⁰³ As mentioned above, Bosnian Serb leaders also often placed conditions on the passage of convoys, such as food having to be delivered to Bosnian Serb refugees first, convoys having to be unloaded and inspected for

For example, when Morillon attempted to accompany a relief convoy to Goražde in mid-February, Radomir Furtula and Rajko Kušić stopped the convoy at Rogatica, telling the group that they had received orders from Mladić to block the convoy and to check it for contraband, which they did, but found nothing. P4203 (Witness statement of Pyers Tucker dated 12 May 2010), paras. 131, 136–138. Eventually, the convoy was allowed to proceed, only to be stopped and held at subsequent roadblocks while each local commander sought direction from his superior. P4203 (Witness statement of Pyers Tucker dated 12 May 2010), para. 138. Ultimately, the convoy encountered a huge crater in the road and had to return to Sarajevo as no alternate routes were available; on the return journey, the convoy was “virtually waved through” all check-points and reached Sarajevo in a fraction of the time. weapons smuggling, or large sums of money having to be paid to the RS for road maintenance.¹⁶⁷⁰⁴ If, however, the Bosnian Serb high command wanted to allow a particular convoy through, it passed with minimal obstruction.¹⁶⁷⁰⁵

4958. After receiving clearance to lead an aid convoy to Srebrenica, following several days of delays and detours, Morillon finally arrived in Srebrenica in the middle of the night on 12 March.¹⁶⁷⁰⁶ The town bore signs of having been subjected to continuous shelling.¹⁶⁷⁰⁷ It was saturated with refugees; people camped in the stairwells and corridors of apartment buildings, in cars, and in public buildings such as the school and sports centre, while others had no shelter and “simply huddled around what fires they could make” when the temperatures dropped to -25°C at night.¹⁶⁷⁰⁸

4959. Most who had fled to Srebrenica had not had any real food since leaving their villages, and the only water source, the river, was heavily polluted with offal, excrement, and oil.¹⁶⁷⁰⁹ There

For example, after learning about 75 Bosnian Muslim military and civilian wounded who had been found in houses in and around Konjević Polje, Morillon obtained agreement from Gvero and “Dr. Lukić” for a military convoy to evacuate the wounded from Konjević Polje during a cease-fire, and for a humanitarian aid convoy to go to Srebrenica on 11 March 1993. P4203 (Witness statement of Pyers Tucker dated 12 May 2010), paras. 163, 165. However, permission for the convoy to pass was conditioned on the ABiH stopping offensive actions in other areas. The convoys set out around 10 March, reaching Zvornik by the following day, where Morillon and a small party met with Branko Grujić, the mayor of Zvornik, and Pandurević, who, after speaking with the Accused twice by phone, finally agreed to the medical evacuation from Konjević Polje as well as to Morillon and a small group going to Srebrenica. were not enough beds in the clinic for the approximately 200 badly injured persons in the town.¹⁶⁷¹⁰
Between 15 and 20 people died each night, and hygiene was deplorable throughout the town.¹⁶⁷¹¹

4960. The following morning, when Morillon's meeting ended and the convoy tried to leave, the crowd, which had grown and had become increasingly hostile overnight, swarmed around the vehicles and prevented them from moving.¹⁶⁷¹² In the afternoon, Morillon declared that Srebrenica was under the protection of the UN and specified conditions that would need to be satisfied before he would leave Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷¹³ Morillon ordered his headquarters in Kiseljak to negotiate a helicopter air corridor to evacuate the seriously wounded and requested reinforcement from UNMOs, as well as free passage into Srebrenica for aid convoys and out of Srebrenica for all refugees who wanted to leave.¹⁶⁷¹⁴

4961. Over the following two weeks, Morillon engaged in negotiations with various members of the VRS, including Milovanović, who insisted that Morillon would have to leave the enclave before aid convoys would be allowed in—a condition which Morillon refused.¹⁶⁷¹⁵ On 19 March, Morillon left the town to meet the convoy and to help it through Bosnian Serbs roadblocks; while he was gone, the town was hit by a multiple rocket launcher, causing two civilian deaths and wounding three children.¹⁶⁷¹⁶ That day, the first UN aid convoy to reach Srebrenica since the beginning of the year finally arrived.¹⁶⁷¹⁷ Morillon reiterated that he would only leave the enclave permanently once UNMOs were deployed and convoys were allowed unimpeded access to the enclave.¹⁶⁷¹⁸

4962. Meanwhile, the VRS attack on the Srebrenica area continued unabated as the VRS took over four to five villages each day.¹⁶⁷¹⁹ By approximately 20 March, all refugees from Kamenica, Cerska, and Konjević Polje had found their way to Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷²⁰

4963. On 20 March, Morillon left Srebrenica with a convoy of 673 persons consisting of women, children, and approximately 100 wounded.¹⁶⁷²¹ Over the following two days, he held a series of meetings with various Bosnian Serb military and political leaders, including Gvero and Plavšić, with the aim of obtaining their agreement to his previously stated conditions before returning to Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷²² Sometime between 22 and 24 March, the Accused approved an air corridor from Tuzla to Srebrenica that was scheduled to last for five days beginning on 24 March.¹⁶⁷²³

4964. That day, the football field where the helicopters were to land was shelled numerous times; a Bosnian Muslim policeman was killed.¹⁶⁷²⁴ Protests were lodged with the Bosnian Serb authorities throughout the day.¹⁶⁷²⁵ Ultimately, five helicopters were able to evacuate 24 civilians, but a total of three people were killed and six wounded during the process.¹⁶⁷²⁶

According to an UNPROFOR situation report, the VRS received support from across the border in Serbia in the form of artillery fire, aircraft-bombers, and ammunition resupply convoys, and were allowed by the Serbians to stage attacks on the southern and eastern parts of the Srebrenica enclave from within Serbian borders. P4203 (Witness statement of Piers Tucker dated 12 May 2010), para. 256. 4965. By 25 March 1993, the population of Srebrenica town had swollen to 30,000.¹⁶⁷²⁷ Shelling continued sporadically throughout the day, the town was completely filled with people who were forced to live on the streets, and food stocks were predicted to last only ten more days.¹⁶⁷²⁸

4966. Pursuant to an agreement reached in Belgrade on 25 March,¹⁶⁷²⁹ an aid convoy of approximately 18 trucks accompanied by two teams of four UNMOs each made its way toward Srebrenica on 27 March.¹⁶⁷³⁰ As previously agreed, the convoy was to deliver aid and then to evacuate the wounded, women, and children on the return journey.¹⁶⁷³¹ A total of approximately 5,560 women, children, and elderly, as well as several hundred wounded persons, were evacuated to Tuzla on the trucks' return journeys.¹⁶⁷³²

4967. Morillon left Srebrenica for Sarajevo on the morning of 28 March.¹⁶⁷³³ While in Sarajevo, he met with RS Prime Minister Vladimir Lukić, who agreed to consider a plan to deploy UNPROFOR observers throughout BiH, including in Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷³⁴

4968. By early April, the VRS had re-gained much of the territory it had previously lost, and was within two kilometres of Srebrenica town.¹⁶⁷³⁵ As the VRS tightened its grip around the town,¹⁶⁷³⁶

many fled from villages within the municipality into the town itself.¹⁶⁷³⁷ Calls were made to increase the international presence in Srebrenica, including that of UNPROFOR, in order to turn the enclave into a UN protected area and to provide more humanitarian assistance.¹⁶⁷³⁸

ii. Proclamation of Srebrenica as a “safe area”

4969. At the end of March and over the first two weeks of April, Morillon and Wahlgren met repeatedly with members of the VRS, including Mladić, Milovanović, and Gvero, with a view to halting the Bosnian Serb attack on Srebrenica and obtaining access to the enclave for UN observers, UNPROFOR, and humanitarian aid convoys.¹⁶⁷³⁹ In the meantime, however, the attack on Srebrenica continued.¹⁶⁷⁴⁰ On the morning of 16 April 1993, Mladić issued an order to the Drina Corps to initiate attacks aimed at seizing the town that day or the next.¹⁶⁷⁴¹

4970. However, that day, the Security Council passed Resolution 819, which proclaimed Srebrenica a “safe area which should be free from any armed attack or any other hostile act” and demanded the immediate cessation of armed attacks against Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷⁴² Resolution 819 further asked the Secretary General to “take immediate steps” to increase UNPROFOR’s presence in Srebrenica and the surrounding areas and demanded that both warring parties co-operate fully towards that end.¹⁶⁷⁴³

4971. That evening, the VRS forces at Pribićevec received an oral order from the Accused and Mladić to stay at their positions and not to enter Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷⁴⁴ The following day, Mladić and Halilović agreed to a cease-fire in the Srebrenica area which would enter into force at 4:59 a.m. on 18 April 1993.¹⁶⁷⁴⁵ According to this agreement, all weapons, ammunition, mines, explosives, and combat supplies were to be handed over to UNPROFOR within 72 hours of the arrival of an UNPROFOR convoy scheduled to depart from Tuzla at 11 a.m. that day.¹⁶⁷⁴⁶ Neither party was permitted to “hinder the freedom of civilians”,¹⁶⁷⁴⁷ and disarmed Bosnian Muslim combatants were to be treated as civilians.¹⁶⁷⁴⁸ Additionally, a working group was established to discuss how to implement the demilitarisation process, as the VRS and ABiH disagreed on the geographical boundaries of the area to be demilitarised.¹⁶⁷⁴⁹

iii. Deployment of UNPROFOR and demilitarisation efforts

4972. Following the deployment of CanBat to the enclave on 18 April,¹⁶⁷⁵⁰ as well as several days of further negotiations regarding the boundaries of the safe area, the Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims agreed that despite their different positions on the delineation of the safe area, “the city” itself would be a part of such an area and would be demilitarised.¹⁶⁷⁵¹ Thereafter, the demilitarised

At 6 p.m. that day, the Accused issued a written order to the VRS Main Staff ordering the cessation of operations against Srebrenica and the surrounding area, as well as the facilitation of the passage of humanitarian convoys into and out of Srebrenica. D43 (Radovan Karadžić’s Order to VRS Main Staff, 16 April 1993), paras. 1, 3. The Accused’s order further stated that the VRS was to “ensure pacification of the town in such a way that Muslim forces surrender weapons to UNPROFOR”, who would store them, and that after surrendering the weapons, Muslim soldiers would be “treated like all other civilians”, who would be protected and given the liberty to choose between leaving and staying. D43 (Radovan Karadžić’s Order to VRS Main Staff, 16 April 1993), paras. 4–5. Finally, the Accused ordered the Main Staff to carry out his order immediately and fully and to inform him thereof. area was defined as the urban area of Srebrenica as well as the hills immediately overlooking the area from which a direct line of sight into the town existed.¹⁶⁷⁵² Upon its arrival, CanBat established a small command centre (the “Bravo Company Compound”) in Srebrenica itself, and a larger main compound about five kilometres north of the town in Potočari (“UN Compound”).¹⁶⁷⁵³ From these bases, the battalion oversaw the demilitarisation of the town.¹⁶⁷⁵⁴ The UNPROFOR troops were lightly armed and at any one time numbered no more than 600 men.¹⁶⁷⁵⁵

4973. On 8 May 1993, following the passage of Security Council Resolution 824 two days earlier,¹⁶⁷⁵⁶ Mladić and Halilović signed a further agreement, which also included provisions on the demilitarisation of Žepa.¹⁶⁷⁵⁷ Pursuant to this agreement, no one inside either enclave was allowed to have arms, and heavy weapons were taken to a collection point at the Bravo Company compound.¹⁶⁷⁵⁸ However, Halilović ordered members of the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica not to hand over serviceable weapons or ammunition to UNPROFOR and to pull all armed personnel and military equipment out of the newly-established demilitarised zone.¹⁶⁷⁵⁹ Subsequently, the Muslim

Forces in Srebrenica only turned old and dysfunctional weapons over to UNPROFOR.¹⁶⁷⁶⁰ Members of the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica were forbidden to carry their weapons openly.¹⁶⁷⁶¹ UNPROFOR did not conduct house searches, only confiscating weapons if they encountered armed people while on patrol; this resulted in the demilitarisation process not being wholly successful.¹⁶⁷⁶²

4974. Thus, even after the “main demilitarisation” was completed immediately after the 1993 cease-fire,¹⁶⁷⁶³ the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica still had access to light arms, heavy machine guns, anti-tank weapons, and mortars.¹⁶⁷⁶⁴ The group was progressively organised into brigades under the command of Naser Orić, with Ramiz Bećirović as Chief of Staff.¹⁶⁷⁶⁵ However, the Muslim

¹⁶⁷⁶⁷ Robert Franken, T. 23130, 23145 (17 January 2012). The fact that the majority of members of the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica were municipal residents made it impossible to preclude humanitarian aid from reaching them, as they obtained such aid through their family members. b. Lead-up to the attack on Srebrenica: January–June 1995

4977. After the arrival of the initial group of UNPROFOR forces in April 1993, fresh troops rotated into the enclave approximately every six months.¹⁶⁷⁷³ In January 1995, DutchBat arrived.¹⁶⁷⁷⁴ Initially, DutchBat had eight OPs around the perimeter of the enclave; four additional OPs, including OP Papa, were added between February and July 1995.¹⁶⁷⁷⁵

4978. Part of DutchBat's regular activities involved carrying out patrols within the enclave.¹⁶⁷⁷⁶ This gave DutchBat personnel the opportunity to observe the comparative positions of the VRS and the ABiH, although DutchBat's movement was restricted outside the enclave's borders.¹⁶⁷⁷⁷ Within the enclave, DutchBat enjoyed free movement except within the Bandera Triangle, an area on the west side of the enclave opposite the positions of the Milići Brigade.¹⁶⁷⁷⁸ When ordered to restore

i. Issuance of Directives 7 and 7/1

4979. On 8 March 1995, the Accused issued the strictly confidential “Directive for Further Operations No. 7” (“Directive 7”) analysing the military and political situation following the COHA.¹⁶⁷⁸² According to the Accused, the COHA had “created conditions for the military strengthening and arming of Muslims and Croats [and] the survival of the Muslim enclaves”, including Srebrenica.¹⁶⁷⁸³ The directive allocated tasks to the various corps of the VRS after describing the anticipated objectives of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat forces.¹⁶⁷⁸⁴

4980. Specifically, the Drina Corps was tasked with “complet[ing] physical separation of Srebrenica from Žepa [...] as soon as possible, preventing even communication between individuals in the two enclaves”.¹⁶⁷⁸⁵ Directive 7 further ordered the Drina Corps to “[b]y planned and well-thought-out combat operations create an unbearable situation of total insecurity with no hope of further survival or life for the inhabitants of Srebrenica and Žepa”.¹⁶⁷⁸⁶ To accomplish these goals, among others, the “relevant State and military organs responsible for work with UNPROFOR and humanitarian organisations” were ordered to,

Kingori testified that no reasons were given for this prohibition. P4140 (Witness statement of Joseph Kingori dated 8 January 2012), para. 46. through the planned and unobtrusively restrictive issuing of permits, reduce and limit the logistics support of UNPROFOR to the enclaves and the supply of material resources to the Muslim population, making them dependent on our good will while at the same time avoiding condemnation by the international community and international public opinion.¹⁶⁷⁸⁷

Additionally, Directive 7 stated that should the UNPROFOR forces leave Srebrenica and Žepa, the Drina Corps command should plan an operation “Jadar” to “brea[k] up and destro[y] the Muslims forces in these enclaves and definitively liberat[e] the Drina valley region”.¹⁶⁷⁸⁸

4981. Directive 7 was disseminated to the various VRS corps on or around 18 March 1995.¹⁶⁷⁸⁹ Two days later, Živanović issued the strictly confidential “Order for Defence and Active Combat Operations, Operative No. 7”.¹⁶⁷⁹⁰ Živanović’s order effectively relayed the contents of Directive 7 to the brigade commanders of the Drina Corps by repeating the tasks outlined in Directive 7, namely that the Drina Corps was tasked with carrying out the “complete physical separation of Srebrenica from Žepa [...] as soon as possible, preventing even communication between the two enclaves. By planned and well-thought-out combat operations create an unbearable situation of total insecurity with no hope of further survival or life for the inhabitants of Srebrenica and Žepa”.¹⁶⁷⁹¹

4982. The Chamber notes that both Živanović and Krstić asserted that this language was never “implemented in practice”.¹⁶⁷⁹² Similarly, Trivić minimised the operational significance of the directive, suggesting that it merely “provide[d] guidelines” to subordinate units.¹⁶⁷⁹³ Having considered these witnesses’ evidence regarding the implementation of Directive 7 by the Drina Corps, the Chamber observes that it was marked by contradictions and a lack of candour.¹⁶⁷⁹⁴ The

¹⁶⁷⁹⁴ As will be described in further detail below, Krstić’s testimony was given during the course of his defence in his own trial, where he was evasive and displayed a lack of candour regarding his role as the Deputy Commander—and later Commander—of the Drina Corps during the Srebrenica campaign and the events leading up to it. See fn. 16891. The Chamber also recalls contradictions between Živanović’s witness statement and his in-court testimony on these points, and observes that Živanović became combative under cross-examination. See e.g. Milenko Živanović, T. 42641–42642, 42647–42648 (31 October 2013). Similarly, Trivić initially suggested that Directive 7 was merely a written document, and that “none of [his] superiors had ever informed [him] verbally to act in that way”, but when presented with P3040 (Order of Drina Corps, 20 March 1995), admitted that his unit had received that order, although he maintained that he did not remember seeing those words in the order.

Chamber has also considered their positions at the time and observes that they would have reasons to minimise any implementation of an order targeting civilians.¹⁶⁷⁹⁵ Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider their testimony reliable on this point. Finally, the Chamber notes that such testimony is contradicted by other evidence showing that Directive 7 was implemented on the ground, as discussed below.¹⁶⁷⁹⁶

4983. On 31 March 1995, one day after the Main Staff had met to discuss the “operation pursuant to Directive 7”,¹⁶⁷⁹⁷ Mladić issued the “Directive for Further Operations, Operative No. 7/1” (“Directive 7/1”), which was transmitted to the commands of the Krajina Corps, the Eastern Bosnia Corps, and the Drina Corps, as well as the air force and anti-aircraft defence.¹⁶⁷⁹⁸

4984. Directive 7/1 “further elaborated” upon Directive 7.¹⁶⁷⁹⁹ Noting that during the second half of March, the ABiH had “started wantonly violating” the COHA, Directive 7/1 stated that “on the basis of Directive No. 7”, the addressees were to immediately begin planning and making preparations for the realisation of the strategic operation Sadjestvo 95, the basic objective of which was to “inflict the heaviest possible losses on the enemy, restoring the reputation of the VRS among the people and in the world, and forcing the enemy to negotiate and end the war at the achieved lines through successful actions by VRS forces along chosen axes”.¹⁶⁸⁰⁰ Directive 7/1 further stated that VRS forces, “in accordance with Directive No. 7”, would carry out active combat operations around the Srebrenica, Žepa, and Goražde pockets.¹⁶⁸⁰¹ Directive 7/1 did not contain the reference in Directive 7 to “creat[ing] an unbearable situation of total insecurity with no hope of further survival or life for the inhabitants” of the two enclaves.¹⁶⁸⁰²

ii. Restrictions on humanitarian convoys and the humanitarian situation in Srebrenica

4985. The Bosnian Serbs subjected all convoys, particularly UNPROFOR re-supply convoys that carried equipment and weaponry, to strict regulation entailing prior notification of convoy movements to the VRS.¹⁶⁸⁰³ They justified such regulation by citing several instances in which weapons were found in aid convoys, and by asserting that UNPROFOR and UNHCR were involved in organising the delivery of weapons to Bosnian Muslims.¹⁶⁸⁰⁴ Clearance for the movement of goods and people into and out of the enclaves had to be obtained from the highest levels of the Bosnian Serb military or government and permission was to be relayed to the subordinate units who actually allowed the convoys to pass.¹⁶⁸⁰⁵ In accordance with an order of the

Popović et al.*), T. 29258, 29304, 29312. UNPROFOR escorted the convoys from the border of the enclave to the warehouse in Srebrenica town, where UNHCR and the municipal employees handled the distribution of the goods. Pursuant to an agreement with UNPROFOR, UNPROFOR was to provide a request to the Main Staff 24 hours in advance stating what was to be delivered, to whom, how many vehicles were involved, and the name of the person in charge of the convoy; the Main Staff—usually Mladić, Milovanović, or, exceptionally, Tolimir—then approved the route of the convoy and ensured its freedom of movement through RS territory by notifying the approval to the corps through whose territory the convoy was scheduled to pass. The Chamber notes that in response to the Accused’s suggestion that individual DutchBat members had smuggled fuel and ammunition into the enclave in convoys, Franken acknowledged that he had heard of such occurrences, but asserted that that had not happened in the case of his battalion, as demonstrated by the fuel shortages that DutchBat endured during his tenure. 4986. DutchBat depended on re-supply convoys for fuel, ammunition, spare vehicle parts, and communications radios.¹⁶⁸⁰⁷ During the fall of 1994, the VRS imposed a fuel blockade, diminishing reserves in Srebrenica.¹⁶⁸⁰⁸ Fuel stocks had dwindled even further by the time DutchBat received its last fuel convoy in February 1995.¹⁶⁸⁰⁹ Thereafter, DutchBat was forced to patrol on foot.¹⁶⁸¹⁰ The lack of fuel also led DutchBat to discontinue providing support via their mobile medical stations and compromised their ability to operate the OPs.¹⁶⁸¹¹ Restrictions in resupply convoys further resulted in DutchBat's ammunition falling below adequate levels.¹⁶⁸¹²

4987. After initially receiving a “relatively sufficient” amount of food from the early convoys,¹⁶⁸¹³ by early 1994, amounts had decreased and every piece of tillable ground in Srebrenica had been sown with seeds as the residents attempted to grow vegetables to supplement the reduced aid convoys.¹⁶⁸¹⁴ At the time, the average delivery rate for humanitarian convoys across the RS had fallen below 50%, as the VRS had denied access to a number of areas.¹⁶⁸¹⁵ In early 1995, the restrictions on humanitarian convoys intensified, and drivers frequently encountered obstructions en route to Srebrenica.¹⁶⁸¹⁶ Food supplies diminished and convoys arrived infrequently, bringing less food each time.¹⁶⁸¹⁷ At the time, approximately 40,000 people were living in the enclave.¹⁶⁸¹⁸

4988. By March 1995, DutchBat no longer had any fresh food and subsisted on combat rations still in stock at the UN Compound.¹⁶⁸¹⁹ Food in the enclave was still in short supply, resulting in the emergence of a black market for smuggled goods.¹⁶⁸²⁰ The population within the enclave survived on what they could harvest, supplemented by what they could obtain from UNHCR, which supplied most of the food in the enclave.¹⁶⁸²¹ Some residents of the enclave followed the garbage truck carrying DutchBat's trash to the garbage dump and tried to salvage food and clothes.¹⁶⁸²² It was estimated that without new supplies almost half of the population of Srebrenica would be without food by mid-June.¹⁶⁸²³ Due to the dwindling resources available to the civilian population, as well as UNPROFOR's extremely low supplies, plans were drawn up to re-supply the enclaves by force.¹⁶⁸²⁴

4989. Following the issuance of Directive 7 and 7/1 in March 1995, the humanitarian situation grew even worse.¹⁶⁸²⁵ The supply of fuel was limited, and electricity for the population was virtually non-existent.¹⁶⁸²⁶ The water supply was generally bad for both the population living in the enclave and for members of DutchBat.¹⁶⁸²⁷ The sanitation situation was dire as waste processing was difficult and medical care was insufficient.¹⁶⁸²⁸

4990. In mid-April 1995, DutchBat personnel rotations came to a halt as the VRS refused to allow soldiers to re-enter the enclave after taking leave, ultimately reducing DutchBat's personnel to 50%.¹⁶⁸²⁹ Accordingly, DutchBat's combat readiness and ability to implement tasks was reduced to a minimum.¹⁶⁸³⁰

4991. Conditions deteriorated considerably between May and the beginning of July 1995.¹⁶⁸³¹ In early June, the only food present in the enclaves was what the residents were able to raise for themselves,¹⁶⁸³² as humanitarian aid deliveries to the enclaves fell to 29.7% of targeted levels in Srebrenica.¹⁶⁸³³ The Chamber notes the Accused's contention that there was no appreciable difference between the amounts of humanitarian aid delivered before and after the issuance of Directive 7.¹⁶⁸³⁴ The Chamber recalls that Ljubomir Obradović, a member of the VRS Main Staff,¹⁶⁸³⁵ agreed with this argument when presented with a series of Main Staff convoy notifications dated before and after the issuance of Directive 7.¹⁶⁸³⁶ However, Momir Nikolić testified that he received frequent requests that the amount of goods in UNHCR convoys “be halved”.¹⁶⁸³⁷ Having examined the documents cited above and analysed the testimonies of Obradović and Momir Nikolić on this point, and having compared them with the testimonies of numerous witnesses who testified to the deprivation visible in the enclave at the time, the Chamber observes that even if such convoys were ostensibly authorised on paper, this would not mean that such convoys ultimately arrived.¹⁶⁸³⁸ The Chamber recalls that the language of Directive 7 specifically called on the Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs and Bosnian Serb Forces to “unobtrusively [...] reduce and limit the supply of material resources to the Muslim population”;¹⁶⁸³⁹ the Chamber finds that this directive was indeed implemented.

4992. Later that month, the combat ration stocks were also diminished and members of DutchBat subsisted on rice and peanut butter until a re-supply convoy arrived with food approximately ten days later.¹⁶⁸⁴⁰ By month’s end, some residents had died of starvation.¹⁶⁸⁴¹ At the time, the situation in Srebrenica was relatively calm from a military standpoint, though it was reported that the town “had the feel of an open air prison”.¹⁶⁸⁴²

The Chamber also notes that Živanović, whose units controlled access to the area at the time, asserted that neither he nor the Drina Corps units had obstructed humanitarian aid convoys bound for Srebrenica. D3932 (Witness statement of Milenko Živanović dated 27 October 2013), para. 26; Milenko Živanović, T. 42613–42614, 42616 (30 October 2013), T. 42687–42688 (31 October 2013); P6481 (Report of Drina Corps, 1 February 1993). See also D3947 (Summary of Humanitarian Aid Delivered to Srebrenica, 1994); D3957 (Report of Drina Corps, 3 May 1995). along the borders of the enclave from mid-1993 until its fall in 1995.¹⁶⁸⁴⁴ The Muslim Forces in Srebrenica carried out continuous reconnaissance and sabotage activities against VRS positions around the enclaves of Srebrenica and Žepa.¹⁶⁸⁴⁵ In October 1994, the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica carried out sabotage attacks in VRS territory along the Srebrenica–Konjević Polje, Cerska and Modrica axes.¹⁶⁸⁴⁶ Late in the fall of 1994, they began planning and carrying out actions aimed at linking up with the ABiH in Tuzla.¹⁶⁸⁴⁷ Despite the demilitarisation agreement, the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica continued to obtain arms and open fire on VRS lines.¹⁶⁸⁴⁸ Further, ABiH helicopters flew in violation of the no-fly zone.¹⁶⁸⁴⁹

4994. During the first few months of 1995, the VRS and ABiH regularly exchanged fire.¹⁶⁸⁵⁰ In March and April 1995, there was a build-up of Bosnian Serb forces near OP Romeo and OP Quebec, where soldiers were seen arriving with new rifles and complete uniforms.¹⁶⁸⁵¹ During this time, several skirmishes broke out between members of the VRS and the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica.¹⁶⁸⁵²

DutchBat would defend its OPs while the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica would defend the areas between the OPs.¹⁶⁸⁵⁴

4996. In May 1995, the VRS obtained information that the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica were in the final stages of preparing for an attack against the Drina Corps.¹⁶⁸⁵⁵ In late May 1995, tensions between the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica and the VRS increased in and around the enclave.¹⁶⁸⁵⁶

4997. From May to July 1995, the threat to the enclave increased, with more shootings occurring from the VRS side, limiting DutchBat's movements.¹⁶⁸⁵⁷ In late May and early June 1995, DutchBat faced direct fire when leaving the compound in Potočari.¹⁶⁸⁵⁸

4998. On the afternoon of 25 May 1995—in response to NATO air-strikes on Bosnian Serb military targets in Pale¹⁶⁸⁵⁹—Živanović ordered all Drina Corps units' anti-aircraft defence forces to full combat readiness.¹⁶⁸⁶⁰ Živanović further ordered that if the conflict escalated, the units should turn the basic firing positions into decoys by moving artillery to reserve firing positions.¹⁶⁸⁶¹

¹⁶⁸⁵⁴ P4175 (Witness statement of Robert Franken dated 15 January 2012), para. 36. According to the agreement, the weapons from the Bravo Company's collection point would also be made available to the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica in the event of an attack on the enclave, although the group declined to exercise this option when the attack eventually came in July 1995. P4175 (Witness statement of Robert Franken dated 15 January 2012), para. 36. Franken viewed this co-ordination as necessary because of the vulnerable positions of the OPs, which were painted white and illuminated at night; if the ABiH left without telling Franken, the OPs would be surrounded and indefensible in the middle of Bosnian Serb territory. The Muslim Forces in Srebrenica made efforts to conceal their preparation and supply routes, as evidenced through their objection to DutchBat building a new OP near Ložina as it would negatively affect “unhindered passage” through the Žepa–Srebrenica corridor. At approximately 7 p.m. that evening, pursuant to an oral order conveyed by Milenko Lazić, the Chief of Operations and Training for the Drina Corps,¹⁶⁸⁶² the Bratunac Brigade fired four 105mm howitzer shells towards Srebrenica.¹⁶⁸⁶³ Civilians were killed and wounded as a result.¹⁶⁸⁶⁴ DutchBat personnel based at Potočari continued to observe houses being shelled from VRS positions in Bratunac during June and July.¹⁶⁸⁶⁵

4999. During the following week, the VRS repeatedly requested that DutchBat surrender OP Echo, which had strategic significance due to its position near the road running toward Zeleni Jadar.¹⁶⁸⁶⁶ The VRS threatened that the OP would otherwise be taken by force.¹⁶⁸⁶⁷ DutchBat refused and warned that close air support would be requested if the VRS attacked.¹⁶⁸⁶⁸ On 3 June 1995, pursuant to a Drina Corps order issued the previous day, the VRS attacked OP Echo.¹⁶⁸⁶⁹ After the OP's tower sustained a direct hit, DutchBat withdrew from the post.¹⁶⁸⁷⁰ Thereafter, OP

Sierra was established on the approach to the Swedish Shelter Project and OP Uniform on the approach to the town of Srebrenica itself.¹⁶⁸⁷¹

5000. That month, the ABiH 2nd Corps ordered the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica to conduct raids out of the Srebrenica enclave for the primary purpose of engaging VRS forces in the area, in order to prevent them from being transferred to Sarajevo.¹⁶⁸⁷² During this period, members of the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica were seen openly carrying weapons and seemed less concerned about their weapons being confiscated by DutchBat.¹⁶⁸⁷³

5001. Following the take-over of OP Echo, VRS units were ordered to carry out ambushes between the Srebrenica and Žepa enclaves.¹⁶⁸⁷⁴ In the early morning hours of 24 June, under the direction of Svetozar Kosorić, the Chief of the Drina Corps Intelligence Department,¹⁶⁸⁷⁵ approximately 30 members from both platoons of the 10th Sabotage Detachment and members of the Bratunac Brigade entered Srebrenica town through an old mining tunnel, and used infantry weapons to fire into the town.¹⁶⁸⁷⁶ After about 15 minutes, the soldiers returned to VRS-held territory through the same tunnel.¹⁶⁸⁷⁷ The attack resulted in three casualties, including one death, in the town.¹⁶⁸⁷⁸

5002. Meanwhile, units of the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica were carrying out co-ordinated sabotage actions deep within the Drina Corps territory.¹⁶⁸⁷⁹ On 26 June 1995, the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica attacked the Main Staff Headquarters at Crna Rijeka, carried out a further operation seven kilometres away against the 65th Protection Regiment's tank company, and attacked the Serb village of Višnjica, located five kilometres west of the Srebrenica enclave.¹⁶⁸⁸⁰ The Drina Corps—along with reinforcements from other corps—halted the offensive on the same day.¹⁶⁸⁸¹

5003. During this period, DutchBat was aware of frequent shooting from both sides that occurred at the borders of the enclave, though the situation inside the enclave remained relatively calm.¹⁶⁸⁸² Although DutchBat's local negotiation team received information from Momir Nikolić that the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica were conducting raids outside of the enclave, they were unable to independently verify this information as DutchBat lacked freedom of movement outside the enclave, especially during the latter part of June when tensions mounted and their freedom of movement became even more restricted.¹⁶⁸⁸³ However, throughout the month of June and into July,¹⁶⁸⁸⁴ the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica continued launching actions against VRS defensive lines from Srebrenica.¹⁶⁸⁸⁵

c. Attack on Srebrenica

i. Issuance of the Krivaja 95 orders

5004. In late June 1995, the Accused and Krajišnik came to the Drina Corps Command in Vlasenica and met with Krstić; Živanović was absent.¹⁶⁸⁸⁶ During this meeting, Krstić received a combat assignment.¹⁶⁸⁸⁷ That evening, Krstić summoned the command of the Drina Corps to the operations room and explained that the Drina Corps had been assigned to prepare for a military operation.¹⁶⁸⁸⁸ Following that meeting, the brigade commanders were ordered to report to the Drina Corps Command at 8 a.m. on the following day.¹⁶⁸⁸⁹ When the brigade commanders arrived, they received an oral briefing on the task.¹⁶⁸⁹⁰ Krstić and the Drina Corps command then began to draft a combat plan which would become known as Krivaja 95.¹⁶⁸⁹¹

¹⁶⁸⁸⁶ D3993 (Witness statement of Vujadin Popović dated 2 November 2013), para. 7. See also Petar Salapura, T. 40243 (24 June 2013). Popović testified that before leaving, the Accused and Krajišnik also met with the officers of the Drina Corps Command; according to Popović, the Accused and Krajišnik did not mention Srebrenica at all, but merely informed the officers about political negotiations. D3993 (Witness statement of Vujadin Popović dated 2 November 2013), para. 8.

¹⁶⁸⁸⁷ Milenko Lazić, P4072 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 21728, 21746. In reaching the conclusion that Krstić received a combat assignment during the meeting with the Accused and Krajišnik, the Chamber noted that Lazić testified that in late June 1995, Krstić relayed to the Drina Corps Command a combat assignment which had been given to the corps outside the normal chain of command. Milenko Lazić, P4072 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 21727, 21728, 21746. Taking Lazić's evidence together with the evidence establishing that the Accused and Krajišnik came to Vlasenica and met with Krstić in late June 1995, the Chamber considers that the only reasonable inference from such testimony is that a combat assignment was given during the meeting of Krstić, Krajišnik, and the Accused.

¹⁶⁸⁸⁹ Milenko Lazić, P4072 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 21728.

¹⁶⁸⁹¹ Milenko Lazić, P4072 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 21731. The Chamber notes that in his testimony, which was given while testifying in his own trial and admitted pursuant to Rule 92 quater in this case, Krstić denied that he had taken part in planning the Srebrenica operation, asserting that he had only learned about the Krivaja 95 operation when Živanović returned from the Main Staff and conveyed the assignment to his assistants on 2 July. Radislav Krstić, D4136 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 6125. Further, Krstić initially testified that Živanović did not really need to consult with his assistants or Krstić when planning the operation because of his familiarity with the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica, but later acknowledged that he had taken part in the assessment of which forces should take part in the Krivaja 95 task. Radislav Krstić, D4136 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 6128–6129. Krstić also later acknowledged that he took part in the elaboration and recording of the plans outlining the Krivaja 95 operation, but asserted that he “took very little part” and did not provide any specific advice to Živanović in formulating the proposal for the engagement of forces. Radislav Krstić, D4136 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 6370–6371, 6374, 6376–6377. The Chamber notes that because the extent to which Krstić was involved in the planning of the Krivaja 95 operation bore directly upon his responsibility for the crimes with which he was charged, Krstić had an incentive to minimise his role, and considers that his testimony regarding the extent of his own involvement is thus of dubious reliability. Accordingly, the Chamber will not attribute any weight to this part of Krstić's evidence.

5005. On 2 July 1995, two orders, both of which drew reference from Directives 7 and 7/1, were issued in the name of Drina Corps Commander Živanović.¹⁶⁸⁹² First, a preparatory order sent to all subordinate units referred to the VRS's anticipation of an ABiH attack aimed at dividing the Drina Corps' area of responsibility and connecting the Srebrenica and Žepa enclaves with Bosnian Muslim-held territory.¹⁶⁸⁹³ The subordinate units were ordered to prepare for active combat operations by "switching from defence to attack with all the forces in their areas of responsibility".¹⁶⁸⁹⁴

5006. The second order, which was an order for active combat operations implementing the basic concept outlined in the preparatory order, was issued later that day and addressed to the commands of the Zvornik, Birač, Romanija, Bratunac, and Milići Brigades, as well as the 5th Mixed Artillery Regiment.¹⁶⁸⁹⁵ It was also delivered to the Main Staff and to the Drina Corps IKM at Pribićevac.¹⁶⁸⁹⁶

5007. The active combat order referred to the Drina Corps' task of "carrying out offensive activities [...] as soon as possible, in order to split apart the enclaves of Žepa and Srebrenica, and to reduce them to their urban areas".¹⁶⁸⁹⁷ It then assigned specific tasks to be undertaken by the subordinate units, whose objective was "by surprise attack, to separate and reduce in size the Srebrenica and Žepa enclaves, to improve the tactical position of the forces in the depth of the area, and to create conditions for the elimination of the enclaves".¹⁶⁸⁹⁸ The tasks allocated did not include taking over Srebrenica town.¹⁶⁸⁹⁹ The active combat order further instructed the units to, “in dealing with prisoners of war and the civilian population behave in every way in accordance with the Geneva Conventions”, and designated the security organs and MP to indicate areas for gathering prisoners of war.¹⁶⁹⁰⁰ Combat readiness was ordered for 4 a.m. on 6 July 1995.¹⁶⁹⁰¹ Late in the evening of 2 July, the Main Staff reported to the Accused that “the [Drina] Corps units [we]re in full combat readiness and [...] unengaged forces [we]re being prepared for forthcoming active combat operations”.¹⁶⁹⁰²

5008. Final preparations were made over the following few days. Upon receiving the active combat order on 2 July, the brigade commanders conveyed the order for active combat operations to their subordinate units.¹⁶⁹⁰³ Krstić was placed in charge of reconnaissance activities, and prepared a surveillance plan.¹⁶⁹⁰⁴ On 5 July, Živanović again assessed the overall situation in the Drina Corps’ area of responsibility and decided that the units were ready to implement the task.¹⁶⁹⁰⁵ Krstić departed that afternoon for the Pribićevec IKM, where he met with Blagojević, whose IKM was located nearby.¹⁶⁹⁰⁶

5009. Around the same time, Bosnian Serb Forces appeared to establish a headquarters in a large house located between the Yellow Bridge and OP Papa.¹⁶⁹⁰⁷ DutchBat member Roger Patelski observed two tanks moving close to the house, members of Bosnian Serb Forces digging trenches and setting up rocket launchers in the hills above Potočari, as well as artillery and mortars firing in the direction of the enclave.¹⁶⁹⁰⁸ Snipers posted on the surrounding hills targeted Bosnian Muslim civilians, including women and children, who were living in the houses in the vicinity of OP

ii. Commencement of VRS combat operations and shelling of Srebrenica and Potočari

5010. By 6 July, the Drina Corps units had been prepared and grouped for active combat operations towards Srebrenica and Žepa.¹⁶⁹¹¹ Combat activities towards Srebrenica began early that morning.¹⁶⁹¹² At approximately 3 a.m., Srebrenica town came under heavy and continuous fire.¹⁶⁹¹³ Shells fell in a scattered manner throughout the town and the enclave.¹⁶⁹¹⁴ Within half an hour, several rockets landed near the DutchBat compound in Potočari.¹⁶⁹¹⁵ At about 1 p.m., a tank round hit the defence wall of OP Foxtrot,¹⁶⁹¹⁶ which thereafter came under direct fire from tanks, mortars, and small-calibre machine guns.¹⁶⁹¹⁷ The shelling of the area continued throughout the day,¹⁶⁹¹⁸ initially concentrating at the southeastern part of the enclave.¹⁶⁹¹⁹ Bosnian Serb Forces encountered heavy resistance from the ABiH along the southern approach to the town.¹⁶⁹²⁰ Krstić ordered those who had not reached the lines they had been ordered to reach on 6 July to press ahead on the following day.¹⁶⁹²¹

5012. Shelling resumed at 8 a.m. on 8 July, and was most concentrated in Potočari and Srebrenica town.¹⁶⁹²⁷ By 1 p.m., the UNMOs located in the PTT building had counted 34 explosions in Srebrenica town.¹⁶⁹²⁸ Having withstood increasingly more accurate fire since 6 July, OP Foxtrot finally fell on 8 July.¹⁶⁹²⁹ Later that day, OP Sierra and OP Uniform also came under fire from the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁶⁹³⁰ UNPROFOR protested to the Main Staff that the OPs were being

iii. Expansion of the Krivaja 95 Orders and continued shelling of Srebrenica

5014. After several days of resistance from the ABiH,¹⁶⁹³⁸ the Bosnian Serb Forces pressed forward on 9 July.¹⁶⁹³⁹ Heavy shelling of Srebrenica town continued at 8 a.m. and lasted throughout the day.¹⁶⁹⁴⁰ Small arms fire was audible from the centre of town, signalling the proximity of Bosnian Serb infantry.¹⁶⁹⁴¹ When the UNMOs stationed in town spotted a tank capable of delivering a direct hit later that day, they decided to leave the PTT building for Potočari.¹⁶⁹⁴² This contributed to a growing feeling of insecurity and panic amongst the population,¹⁶⁹⁴³ whose numbers were constantly increasing due to the arrival of refugees from the outskirts of town.¹⁶⁹⁴⁴

5015. On multiple occasions throughout the day, the Bosnian Muslim municipal authorities attempted to contact the government in Sarajevo to obtain assistance for the population.¹⁶⁹⁴⁵ In the meantime, the shelling continued.¹⁶⁹⁴⁶ By 5:50 p.m., the Bosnian Serb Forces had advanced four kilometres into the enclave and stood only one kilometre away from Srebrenica town.¹⁶⁹⁴⁷

5016. Cornelis Nicolai, Rupert Smith's Chief of Staff,¹⁶⁹⁴⁸ spoke to Tolimir several times throughout the day.¹⁶⁹⁴⁹ Nicolai first expressed concern about the Bosnian Serb incursion into the enclave and stated that UNPROFOR considered it an attack on the safe area, which would force UNPROFOR to defend the area with all available means.¹⁶⁹⁵⁰ Nicolai also requested the immediate withdrawal of the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁶⁹⁵¹ Tolimir first replied that he would check the information with his subordinates on the ground,¹⁶⁹⁵² but later stated that he had been informed that the Bosnian Serb Forces "had no particular problems with UNPROFOR or the civil population in Srebrenica", adding that the ABiH was using heavy weaponry, thereby necessitating Bosnian Serb action.¹⁶⁹⁵³ Nicolai pointed out that the ABiH's heavy weapons were still at the UNPROFOR collection point.¹⁶⁹⁵⁴ Nicolai reiterated that the Bosnian Serb Forces were directly attacking the safe area and again requested that the Bosnian Serbs withdraw.¹⁶⁹⁵⁵

Živanović monitored the units' progress.¹⁶⁹⁵⁸ Around 7:30 p.m., in between Tolimir's conversations with Nicolai, Krstić sent an interim combat report to the Main Staff stating that during the day, units of the Bosnian Serb Forces had "carried out the immediate task and created conditions for the extending the attack towards Srebrenica".¹⁶⁹⁵⁹ In the same report, Krstić reported that, "taking advantage of the success achieved", he would make a decision for further operations to "regroup the forces and carry out a vigorous and decisive attack towards Srebrenica".¹⁶⁹⁶⁰

5018. Tolimir reported the above information he had received from Krstić to the Accused, and the Accused approved the expansion of the Krivaja 95 plan and ordered the Bosnian Serb Forces to take over the town.¹⁶⁹⁶¹ The Accused told Tolimir that "if they could take Srebrenica, they should".¹⁶⁹⁶² Tolimir then drafted an order to that effect and sent it to Gvero and Krstić personally, as well as to the Drina Corps IKM.¹⁶⁹⁶³ In that order, Tolimir wrote: "The President of the Republic is satisfied with the results of combat operations around Srebrenica and has agreed with the continuation of operations for the takeover of Srebrenica, disarming of Muslim terrorist gangs and complete demilitarisation of the Srebrenica enclave".¹⁶⁹⁶⁴ Relaying the Accused's agreement with the expanded objective, Tolimir also conveyed the Accused's order that "full protection [should] be ensured to UNPROFOR members and the [Bosnian] Muslim civilian population", as well as his instruction to Krstić to issue an order to that effect.¹⁶⁹⁶⁵ Krstić testified that, thereafter, Mladić called each subordinate commander by encrypted RUP 12 radio and orally ordered them to continue the attack and to enter Srebrenica.¹⁶⁹⁶⁶

The Chamber notes that during his testimony in his own defence case, Krstić denied that there were changes in the plan of attack on 9 July because the Drina Corps units were still far from completing the assignments given to them in the Krivaja 95 plan, and that they only did so by noon on 10 July. Radislav Krstić, D4136 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 6424–6426, 6437, 7360–7361. 5019. In the meantime, UNPROFOR conveyed an ultimatum to the VRS that air strikes would occur if the VRS continued to attack the DutchBat blocking positions.¹⁶⁹⁶⁷ When Tolimir spoke to Janvier at 11:10 p.m., however, he assured Janvier that the VRS “w[ould] do everything [they] c[ould] to calm down the situation and to find a reasonable solution”.¹⁶⁹⁶⁸

5020. DutchBat was given an order to defend the town of Srebrenica with all military means.¹⁶⁹⁶⁹ Franken then ordered the Bravo Company Commander to establish blocking positions closer to the southern edge of town,¹⁶⁹⁷⁰ a task which was accomplished by at 6:30 a.m. on 10 July.¹⁶⁹⁷¹

5021. That morning, the situation in Srebrenica was tense as mortar and artillery rounds landed throughout the town beginning at 8 a.m.¹⁶⁹⁷² Mladić and Janvier spoke at 10:25 a.m.; Janvier demanded that Mladić completely stop the Bosnian Serb offensive, and Mladić replied that the attack was a response to the Bosnian Muslim incursions outside the enclave.¹⁶⁹⁷³ By 1 p.m., Mladić had ordered the Bosnian Serb Forces to press further forward.¹⁶⁹⁷⁴ The Main Staff redeployed units assigned elsewhere to the Srebrenica front.¹⁶⁹⁷⁵ Additionally, a part of RS MUP forces deployed on the Sarajevo front, including the 2nd Šekovići Detachment and a company of the Jahorina Recruits, was detached and sent as an independent unit to the Srebrenica sector under the command of Ljubiša Borovčanin, the Deputy Commander of the SBP.¹⁶⁹⁷⁶

5022. In the interim, the population of “the upper part” of Srebrenica had withdrawn to the area near the clinic,¹⁶⁹⁷⁷ which sustained two direct hits from 155 mm artillery shells around 1 p.m.¹⁶⁹⁷⁸ Approximately 50 shells landed during the following hour, and the UNMOs observed rockets flying over Potočari toward Srebrenica town.¹⁶⁹⁷⁹ Around 4 p.m., the town came under even heavier shelling, resulting in nine people being seriously injured.¹⁶⁹⁸⁰ That evening, a crowd of several thousand frightened people gathered outside the clinic and “voice[d] their desire to leave the town”.¹⁶⁹⁸¹ Residents of nearby villages continued to pour into town, reporting that their villages were being burned by the advancing Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁶⁹⁸²

5023. During the course of the day, DutchBat received an ultimatum from the Bosnian Serb Forces which stated that since DutchBat had not been disarming the Bosnian Muslims, the VRS would do it, and DutchBat would be permitted to leave the enclave through OP Papa, along with the civilian population, if they left their equipment and weapons behind.¹⁶⁹⁸³ Franken transmitted the text of the ultimatum to the Bravo Company commander, along with the UN’s response: an 5024. On the evening of 10 July, the VRS attempted to enter Srebrenica town but was repelled by ABiH as well as DutchBat fire from the blocking positions.¹⁶⁹⁸⁵ DutchBat’s blocking positions remained under fire and the “massive shelling” of Srebrenica town—including the Bravo Company compound—continued.¹⁶⁹⁸⁶ Members of international humanitarian organisations stationed in Srebrenica appealed to their colleagues in their offices in Belgrade, Zagreb, and Sarajevo for help.¹⁶⁹⁸⁷ Some civilians began to move towards Potočari, but were stopped by members of the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica, who asked them to return to the town.¹⁶⁹⁸⁸

5025. At 8:15 p.m., Janvier attempted to contact Mladić but was only able to reach Tolimir.¹⁶⁹⁸⁹ When Janvier asserted that the Bosnian Serb Forces were attacking DutchBat’s positions, Tolimir replied that he would check the information on the ground and asked Janvier to call back 20 or 30 minutes later.¹⁶⁹⁹⁰ In a subsequent conversation, Tolimir told Janvier that DutchBat had opened fire on Bosnian Serb Forces, who could not withdraw before combat activities ended.¹⁶⁹⁹¹ Janvier replied that DutchBat had been ordered to hold their positions and to defend themselves if anyone tried to take their weapons.¹⁶⁹⁹² Tolimir then stated that he would check the information with the battalion commander and that he and Janvier should talk again.¹⁶⁹⁹³ In a third conversation at 10:30 p.m., Tolimir reported that combat operations had stopped, and agreed to speak to Gobilliard in Sarajevo on the following day.¹⁶⁹⁹⁴

5026. That night, the DutchBat Commander, Thomas Karremans, and DutchBat soldiers Pieter Boering and Albert Rave held a meeting with the Bosnian Muslim military and civilian authorities, many of whom were armed, at the PTT building in Srebrenica.¹⁶⁹⁹⁵ There, Karremans informed the Bosnian Muslim authorities about UNPROFOR's ultimatum to the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁶⁹⁹⁶ Karremans also conveyed an ultimatum from the Bosnian Serb Forces "that they would like the Muslims to leave the enclave" within 48 hours in exchange for being given safe passage out.¹⁶⁹⁹⁷ After the meeting, many of the armed men remained outside in the vicinity of the PTT building and left the town in a northwestern direction.¹⁶⁹⁹⁸ By the following morning, the Muslim Forces in Srebrenica had disappeared from the town.¹⁶⁹⁹⁹

5027. During the night of 10 to 11 July, the town, as well as OP Hotel, were shelled frequently.¹⁷⁰⁰⁰ At 1 a.m., one of the DutchBat soldiers who had been at a blocking position reported that he had seen the VRS entering the houses, shooting, and then burning them.¹⁷⁰⁰¹

several requests for close-air support but nothing happened.¹⁷⁰⁰³ By that time, thousands of Bosnian Muslims had gathered in front of the Bravo Company compound, asking to be let in because they thought the compound would be safe.¹⁷⁰⁰⁴ Eventually, around 11 a.m., the group broke through the Bravo Company's defences and entered the compound.¹⁷⁰⁰⁵ Around noon, a mortar shell landed between two APCs in the compound, wounding several people.¹⁷⁰⁰⁶

5030. By 1 or 2 p.m., Bosnian Serb units were on the eastern heights overlooking the enclave.¹⁷⁰¹⁰ In an apparent attempt to frighten the fleeing Bosnian Muslims and steer them towards Potočari,¹⁷⁰¹¹ Bosnian Serb Forces shot at and shelled the group of Bosnian Muslims moving northward.¹⁷⁰¹² Just then, NATO air strikes on Bosnian Serb positions began, and lasted approximately 30 minutes.¹⁷⁰¹³ Franken soon received a message from the Bosnian Serb Forces that the UN Compound, including an area where refugees had gathered, would be shelled and the DutchBat soldiers being held by the Bosnian Serb Forces killed if the air strikes did not cease immediately.¹⁷⁰¹⁴ The shelling soon resumed and the area around the bus station in Srebrenica town came under mortar fire.¹⁷⁰¹⁵ Franken instructed Bravo Company to withdraw from Srebrenica town and to move towards Potočari at the tail end of the group of Bosnian Muslims, staying between them and the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷⁰¹⁶

5031. During the course of the day, the remaining OPs—with the exception of OP Papa—either withdrew or were overrun by the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷⁰¹⁷ VRS units involved in the approach to

Srebrenica included members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment, the Drina Wolves, and parts of the Bratunac and Milići Brigades.¹⁷⁰¹⁸

5032. Generally, the Bosnian Serb units encountered little resistance as they approached and then entered Srebrenica town.¹⁷⁰¹⁹ Upon their arrival, members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment called on the few people who remained in the town to leave their houses.¹⁷⁰²⁰ As the units neared the centre of town, an able-bodied man appeared, and although he declared that he was not a member of the ABiH and had no problems with Bosnian Serbs, 10th Sabotage Detachment Commander Milorad Pelemiš ordered another Bosnian Serb soldier to slit the man's throat, which the soldier did.¹⁷⁰²¹

5033. By 5 p.m., the Bosnian Serb Forces had stopped shelling the town.¹⁷⁰²² Around that time, Pandurević reported to Mladić, who had remained with Živanović and Krstić at the Pribićevec IKM throughout the day, that part of his tactical group had entered the town.¹⁷⁰²³ Mladić then ordered Krstić and Živanović to accompany him, and immediately set out for Srebrenica.¹⁷⁰²⁴ As they walked through town, the group encountered Pandurević, Trivić, as well as other VRS officers.¹⁷⁰²⁵

In the centre of Srebrenica, Mladić stated into a television camera:

Here we are, on 11 July 1995, in Serb Srebrenica. On the eve of yet another great Serb holiday, we give this town to the Serb people as a gift. Finally, after the Rebellion against the Dahis the time has come to take revenge on the Turks in this region.¹⁷⁰²⁶

He then ordered the members of the Bosnian Serb Forces to proceed to Potočari.¹⁷⁰²⁷

5034. Gvero spoke to Nicolai and to Gobilliard in the late afternoon and early evening.¹⁷⁰²⁸ When speaking to Nicolai, Gvero denied that the Bosnian Serb Forces were attacking UN positions or targeting the civilian population.¹⁷⁰²⁹ When speaking to Gobilliard, Gvero repeated what he had said to Nicolai and suggested that DutchBat had been shot at by Bosnian Muslims.¹⁷⁰³⁰ Gobilliard informed Gvero that DutchBat had been ordered to meet the local Bosnian Serb commander in order to obtain a cease-fire, and reminded Gvero that aircraft still remained available to UNPROFOR to defend DutchBat and the civilian population.¹⁷⁰³¹

5035. After most of the population of Srebrenica had moved north to Potočari, however, some Bosnian Muslims who lived in the vicinity of OP Papa remained in their homes, but they were eventually cleared by members of Borovčanin's units.¹⁷⁰³² The soldiers threw grenades into the houses and entered, accompanied by dogs; after this, shootings and screams were heard and the 5037. During the night between 11 and 12 July, the group which had assembled in Šušnjari began to depart in a northwesterly direction towards Tuzla.¹⁷⁰³⁷ At the entrance of Buljimi forest, the group, which was comprised of 10,000 to 15,000 people, most of whom were men and boys between the ages of 16 and 65, formed a column.¹⁷⁰³⁸ The last of the group departed Šušnjari on the afternoon of 12 July.¹⁷⁰³⁹

i. Hotel Fontana Meetings

(A) First meeting

5039. On 11 July 1995, upon receiving information about the upcoming meeting between Mladić and DutchBat officers, Momir Nikolić went to Hotel Fontana with Mirko Janković to provide security.¹⁷⁰⁴⁴ 10 to 15 members of the Bratunac Brigade MP were also sent in for this mission.¹⁷⁰⁴⁵

5040. At about 8 p.m., Karremans, Boering, and Rave arrived at the hotel. On entering the premises, they saw several DutchBat soldiers who had been taken prisoner from their OPs on 8 and 9 July 1995.¹⁷⁰⁴⁶ Shortly after, a meeting commenced between the VRS and the DutchBat officers. On the VRS side, Mladić, Živanović, Colonel Radoslav Janković of the Main Staff, and Svetozar Kosorić, the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence of the Drina Corps,¹⁷⁰⁴⁷ attended the meeting.¹⁷⁰⁴⁸ Also present was Petar Ušćumlić, acting as an interpreter for DutchBat.¹⁷⁰⁴⁹ A large camera crew videotaped part of the meeting.¹⁷⁰⁵⁰

5041. Mladić dictated the terms of the meeting.¹⁷⁰⁵¹ The first ten minutes were very tense and the DutchBat representatives felt threatened.¹⁷⁰⁵² Mladić angrily blamed Karremans for having armed Bosnian Muslims and for the NATO air strikes against VRS positions.¹⁷⁰⁵³ Mladić also accused DutchBat of having fired at VRS soldiers in Srebrenica.¹⁷⁰⁵⁴ Then Mladić asked Karremans what he wanted since he had asked for a meeting.¹⁷⁰⁵⁵ Karremans told Mladić that the UNPROFOR BiH Command had ordered Karremans to “negotiate or ask for” the transportation of the Bosnian Muslim population—about 10,000 women and children who were in the UN Compound—and that of DutchBat soldiers.¹⁷⁰⁵⁶ According to Karremans, these women and children were sick, tired, and very scared.¹⁷⁰⁵⁷ Karremans also asked for humanitarian assistance, such as food and medicine.¹⁷⁰⁵⁸

5042. At one point during the meeting, Mladić offered cigarettes to Karremans and the other DutchBat officers, saying “this is not your last cigarette in life”.¹⁷⁰⁵⁹ When Karremans thanked

Mladić for having treated the detained DutchBat soldiers properly, Mladić stated that DutchBat soldiers were in the hotel but they would not be hosted for a long time “[i]f you keep bombing. [...] We know how to bomb too”.¹⁷⁰⁶⁰ Mladić also said that neither the DutchBat soldiers nor the Bosnian Muslim population were the objective of VRS operations.¹⁷⁰⁶¹ He then told Karremans to bring the “representatives of the civilian population”.¹⁷⁰⁶² Mladić added that Karremans could also bring an ABiH representative should the ABiH wish to talk.¹⁷⁰⁶³ According to Rave, Mladić told the DutchBat officers to get in contact with the ABiH as ABiH soldiers needed to surrender their weapons and that, if they complied with this demand, they would be taken as POWs and detained.¹⁷⁰⁶⁴

5043. Mladić told Karremans to return at 11 p.m.¹⁷⁰⁶⁵ and asked him to request some buses, to which Karremans responded that he believed it could be arranged.¹⁷⁰⁶⁶ Mladić offered drinks to all the participants and gave a toast.¹⁷⁰⁶⁷ After the meeting, which lasted between 30 minutes and one hour,¹⁷⁰⁶⁸ the DutchBat officers were escorted back to the Yellow Bridge by Momir Nikolić; they then tried to find a representative of the Bosnian Muslim population or the ABiH.¹⁷⁰⁶⁹ Nesib Mandžić, a former school teacher, agreed to act as spokesperson for the population.¹⁷⁰⁷⁰

(B) Second meeting

5044. At around 10:30 p.m., Karremans, Boering, and Rave again left Potočari for Hotel Fontana, together with Mandžić, and arrived there at 11 p.m.¹⁷⁰⁷¹ Thereafter, a second meeting commenced.¹⁷⁰⁷² Mladić, Radoslav Janković, Kosorić, and Krstić were present, together with Ušćumlić and the video crew.¹⁷⁰⁷³ Deronjić and Ljubisav Simić, the president of the Bratunac Municipal Assembly, were also present.¹⁷⁰⁷⁴ Karremans introduced Mandžić as a representative of the Bosnian Muslim population.¹⁷⁰⁷⁵

5045. Reiterating the desperate situation in Potočari, Karremans stated that there were now 15,000 to 20,000 people—amongst whom 88 were wounded—at the UN Compound and the factories around it, and more people—about 95% women, children, and elderly—were arriving.¹⁷⁰⁷⁶ While Karremans was making these remarks, the screaming of a pig being killed was heard.¹⁷⁰⁷⁷ Karremans further stated that DutchBat was asking the Bosnian Muslims in Potočari where they wished to be transported, and that an evacuation could be planned depending on their age and health condition.¹⁷⁰⁷⁸ According to Karremans, the UNHCR in Belgrade had 30 vehicles available which could be brought in if agreed.¹⁷⁰⁷⁹ Mladić then ordered a broken sign from the Srebrenica town hall to be brought in,¹⁷⁰⁸⁰ and explained that he took it from “there” and passed through the town on foot;¹⁷⁰⁸¹ for the DutchBat members in attendance, this was a message that the VRS was now in charge.¹⁷⁰⁸²

5046. Mladić then asked Mandžić what he wanted, to which Mandžić responded that he was not an official representative of the “refugees” and he was “completely unprepared”.¹⁷⁰⁸³ Mladić then told Mandžić as follows:

Please write down the following: Number one, you need to lay down your weapons and I guarantee that all those who lay down their weapons will live. I give you my word, as a man and a General that I will use my influence to help the innocent Muslim population which is not the target of the combat operations carried out by the VRS. Nor are international humanitarian organisations and UNPROFOR forces the targets of our operations. Although NATO forces, as well as UNPROFOR forces, fired today at UNPROFOR’s request not only at the positions of the VRS, but also at the civilian population. In order to make a decision as a man and a Commander, I need to have a clear position of the representatives of your people on whether you want to survive [...] stay or vanish. I am prepared to receive here tomorrow at 10 am a delegation of officials from the Muslim side with whom I can discuss the salvation of your people from the enclave, the former enclave of Srebrenica. I shall order a cessation of operations until 10 am tomorrow. If your fighters [...] lay down their arms we shall treat [them] in accordance with international conventions and we guarantee that everybody will live, even those who committed crimes against our people. Have I made myself clear? Nesib, the future of your people is in your hands, not only in this territory.¹⁷⁰⁸⁴

Mandžić again said that he had been chosen as a representative “by chance”, but Mladić instructed him to bring “the people who can secure the surrender of weapons and save your people from destruction”.¹⁷⁰⁸⁵ According to Rave, Mladić also told Mandžić that the civilian population was free to go, adding that he could arrange buses to transport people wherever they wanted to go.¹⁷⁰⁸⁶

5047. After this meeting, the DutchBat officers and Mandžić returned to the UN Compound, escorted again by Momir Nikolić.¹⁷⁰⁸⁷ Mandžić appeared frightened, anxious, and “almost panicking”.¹⁷⁰⁸⁸ He then went to look for additional representatives and eventually found two other civilians, Čamila Purković and Ibro Nuhanović, who were willing to support Mandžić.¹⁷⁰⁸⁹

(C) Conversation between Momir Nikolić, Popović, and Kosorić prior to third meeting

5048. On the morning of 12 July, as instructed by Mladić at the Bratunac Brigade Command,¹⁷⁰⁹⁰ Popović and Kosorić went to Hotel Fontana.¹⁷⁰⁹¹ Just before the start of the third meeting, Popović and Kosorić met Momir Nikolić and Uščumlić outside the premises.¹⁷⁰⁹² When Nikolić asked Popović what would happen next, Popović replied that Bosnian Muslim women and children would be transferred to Bosnian Muslim-held territory and that military-aged men would be separated.¹⁷⁰⁹³

(1) Summary of Momir Nikolić’s evidence

5049. Nikolić testified that he further asked Popović what would happen to those men, to which Popović responded that “all the balijas should be killed”.¹⁷⁰⁹⁴ When Nikolić heard this statement, he thought that, as many officers would say similar things, it was “yet another statement by Popović who had the habit of saying things like that” and that Popović did not mean it.¹⁷⁰⁹⁵ Nikolić also stated that, having heard this statement, he thought that legitimate military procedures would be followed, which would entail the identification of suspected war criminals and their subsequent prosecution.¹⁷⁰⁹⁶ Nikolić further testified that it was only in Potočari that it became clear to him that something calamitous was in store for “these people who had been singled out”.¹⁷⁰⁹⁷

5050. After having heard the statement that all the balijas should be killed, Nikolić told Popović that if the Bosnian Muslim men were to be separated, they would have to be detained somewhere and that some empty buildings, such as the Vuk Karadžić School in Bratunac, could be used for this purpose.¹⁷⁰⁹⁸ Then, they had a discussion about potential locations where “these people” should be killed, during which the Ciglana brick factory and the Sase mine were mentioned.¹⁷⁰⁹⁹ Popović told Nikolić that it was Nikolić’s responsibility to “help coordinate and organise this operation”.¹⁷¹⁰⁰ According to Nikolić, the whole conversation lasted no longer than ten minutes¹⁷¹⁰¹ and after Popović left, he, Kosorić, and Ušćumlić had another conversation about the same topic.¹⁷¹⁰²

(2) Evidence of Defence witnesses

5051. The Chamber notes that the Accused called Popović, Kosorić, and Ušćumlić to refute the evidence brought by the Prosecution on this conversation. These three witnesses all challenged Nikolić’s evidence.¹⁷¹⁰³ Popović, who did not contest that he and Kosorić encountered Nikolić and Ušćumlić prior to the third meeting,¹⁷¹⁰⁴ claimed that Nikolić’s statements that Popović had said

Popović et al.*), T. 9371–9372. The Sase mine was located in Srebrenica municipality. Mevludin Orić, P350 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 917. Momir Nikolić testified that he later heard that a group of officers had gone to the brick factory to investigate whether it would be a suitable execution site, but that ultimately, no killings occurred there. Momir Nikolić, T. 24622–24623 (13 February 2012), 24876–24877 (16 February 2012) (further stating that he heard that this visit occurred before 13 July and denying having taken part himself). Nedo Nikolić confirmed that a group of VRS officers, including Momir Nikolić and Beara, as well as police officer Brano Tešić, indeed came to his office at the Ciglana brick factory, but insisted that this did not occur until the morning of 14 July. D3690 (Witness Statement of Nedo Nikolić dated 8 June 2013), paras. 15, 18A–18B; Nedo Nikolić, T. 39823 (12 June 2013). Nedo Nikolić also testified that the officers had not indicated that the site was being considered as a possible site for execution, and had enquired about the availability of drinking water. D3690 (Witness Statement of Nedo Nikolić dated 8 June 2013), paras. 17, 18C. In light of the overwhelming evidence before the Chamber indicating that the Bosnian Muslim males were transferred to Zvornik on the morning of 14 July, the Chamber considers that the events referred to by Nedo Nikolić must have in fact occurred one or two days prior. In view of the totality of evidence, the Chamber considers that the testimony of Nedo Nikolić does not raise any doubt in relation to the veracity of Momir Nikolić’s testimony. that “men from Srebrenica would be separated and killed” and that they had talked about buildings in which they would be kept until their execution were particularly untrue.¹⁷¹⁰⁵ Popović testified that he never discussed this and that he did not even know that men from Srebrenica would be separated until the third meeting, when Mladić mentioned it.¹⁷¹⁰⁶ Popović claimed that the only thing that was mentioned in his presence was that the men would be questioned about war crimes against Serbs, not that the men being separated would be executed.¹⁷¹⁰⁷

5052. Kosorić testified that Popović did not say anything of the sort claimed by Nikolić.¹⁷¹⁰⁸ Kosorić stood by his prior testimony in the Popović et al. case, in which he denied even the fact that the conversation between Popović, Nikolić, and himself took place outside the hotel, and added that such “a decision must be taken at a higher level, at a meeting, this is not the sort of decision that is taken outside some hotel”.¹⁷¹⁰⁹ He also stated that he had no information that Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica were going to be killed.¹⁷¹¹⁰ Lastly, Ušćumlić stated that he never heard anyone say that the prisoners from Srebrenica should or would be killed, and he had no knowledge that the prisoners would be killed.¹⁷¹¹¹

5053. In its final brief, the Prosecution submits that Nikolić’s evidence relating to the conversation is reliable and corroborated by other reliable evidence.¹⁷¹¹² First, video evidence shows that Nikolić was talking outside Hotel Fontana with Janković, Popović, and one of Mladić’s bodyguards prior to the meeting, and that Kosorić and Popović were present at the meeting.¹⁷¹¹³ Second, Ušćumlić’s evidence corroborates Nikolić’s testimony that the conversation among Nikolić, Popović, and Kosorić took place and does not contradict the content of Nikolić’s testimony.¹⁷¹¹⁴ Third, Boering saw Kosorić and Nikolić again in Bratunac after the third meeting.¹⁷¹¹⁵ Fourth, the Prosecution submits that the following events which unfolded after the conversation support

Nikolić's version of what was discussed at the third meeting: (i) at that meeting, Mladić stated for the first time that the separation and "screening" of men would be carried out in Potočari;¹⁷¹¹⁶ (ii) the Vuk Karadžić School and the hangar that Nikolić had suggested as detentions sites during the conversation were indeed used for detention;¹⁷¹¹⁷ (iii) Beara and Deronjić visited the Ciglana brick factory which, according to Nikolić, was a potential execution site mentioned during the conversation;¹⁷¹¹⁸ and (iv) Nikolić's account of what he was told would happen to the Bosnian Muslim men in Potočari "corresponds exactly to the tragic events which then followed".¹⁷¹¹⁹

(4) Accused's submissions

5054. In his final brief, the Accused submits that Nikolić's testimony about his conversation with Popović and Kosorić is "untrue, unreliable and illogical".¹⁷¹²⁰ The Accused argues that while, as seen in the video evidence, Nikolić and Popović were both outside Hotel Fontana on 12 July, Nikolić's testimony about what was said between them is uncorroborated and was refuted by Popović, Kosorić, and Uščumlić.¹⁷¹²¹ Pointing to Nikolić's testimony that he did not believe that Popović meant what he said when he allegedly said that the men should be killed, the Accused submits that had Popović truly made the statement and discussed the execution sites, "there would have been no reason for Nikolić to expect legitimate military screening in Potočari".¹⁷¹²²

(5) Chamber's assessment

5055. The Chamber notes that, in this context, the Accused contends that contrary to Nikolić's testimony indicating that there was a plan to kill the Bosnian Muslim prisoners of Srebrenica from 12 July 1995, such a plan did not exist "prior to the Kravica Warehouse mutiny" that took place around 5:30 p.m. on 13 July 1995, further referring to other pieces of evidence.¹⁷¹²³ The Chamber is of the view that this specific argument relates more to his challenge to the JCE to eliminate the Bosnian Muslim population in Srebrenica,¹⁷¹²⁴ and that it will therefore be discussed separately in

¹⁷¹²⁴ The Accused also argues that the issue of when the plan to kill the Bosnian Muslim men of Srebrenica was formed is not critical to his criminal responsibility, but "the fact that the plan to execute the prisoners arose only the relevant section of this Judgement.¹⁷¹²⁵ In the present section, the Chamber will focus on the issue of Nikolić's testimony as to the content of his conversation with Popović and Kosorić, and determine whether the evidence is reliable in this regard.

(a) Momir Nikolić as a convicted person

5056. The Chamber first recalls its general assessment of the credibility of Nikolić as an individual convicted of crimes arising from events charged in the Indictment,¹⁷¹²⁶ and notes that it approached his evidence, in particular salient and highly contested evidence, with the utmost caution.

(b) Momir Nikolić's avowed lie

5057. The Chamber first considered the avowed lie Nikolić told the Prosecution in one of his interviews.¹⁷¹²⁷ He admitted that when he told the Prosecution that he had been at Kravica and had given orders, he did not speak the truth.¹⁷¹²⁸

5058. The Chamber examined his explanation for this untruth, wherein he stated inter alia, in relation to his plea agreement¹⁷¹²⁹ that "[...] we'd been working on [it] for a long time and I did not want it to fall through. I wanted this agreement to be reached".¹⁷¹³⁰ In this situation, Nikolić was prepared to sacrifice himself and assume responsibility for something he had not in fact done. The Chamber reviewed his evidence and is satisfied that, unfortunate as it might have been, Nikolić's inconsistency was not the result of any oblique motive to lead the Chamber into error. It was extremely important to him that the agreement did not turn out to be an abysmal failure and he was willing to compromise the veracity of his statement in order to ensure that outcome. The Chamber was also mindful of the fact that Nikolić voluntarily corrected his inconsistency at the first available opportunity.¹⁷¹³¹ after the incident at the Kravica Warehouse is relevant to the Chamber's determination of whether the killings were done with the intent to destroy the group". Defence Final Brief, para. 2451.

¹⁷¹²⁹ The Chamber notes that this agreement was admitted into evidence as P4386 (Plea Agreement signed by Momir Nikolić, 7 May 2003).

¹⁷¹³⁰ Momir Nikolić, T. 24880 (16 February 2012).

¹⁷¹³¹ P4385 (Tab B to Plea Agreement, 6 May 2003); Momir Nikolić, T. 24560 (13 February 2012).

5059. The Chamber also notes the false identification Nikolić made of himself in a photograph that had been shown to him and the explanation he advanced for that falsity.¹⁷¹³² He testified that he thought the individual in the photograph looked like him. He did not want to tell the Prosecution that he was not the person in the photograph; he stated, “[p]erhaps I had forgotten something. So I didn’t want to exclude the possibility.”¹⁷¹³³ Nikolić then felt himself impaled on the horns of a dilemma when he was told that the photograph had been taken in Sandići because he knew that he was never in Sandići. As it turned out, the photograph was of another man.

5060. The Chamber holds the view that in his desperation to ensure that he did nothing to jeopardise his agreement with the Prosecution, Nikolić found himself in an intractable situation of his own creation. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that his inconsistency was not inspired by any insidious desire to mislead the Chamber. In its final analysis, the Chamber is convinced that the aforementioned inconsistencies in no way affect Nikolić’s overall credibility, nor do they justify a rejection of his evidence. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber also paid particular attention to the fact that the consistency of the witness remained undiminished throughout his various statements and testimonies in respect of other matters.

(c) Contradiction between the alleged plan to kill all balijs and Nikolić’s understanding of the “military screening”

5061. The Chamber also considered what might appear at first sight to be an inconsistency in the testimony of Nikolić. From his evidence, the Chamber is of the view that on hearing Popović’s declaration that all the men should be killed, Nikolić considered that Popović’s statement was couched in extravagant language and he contemplated that this statement would have pertained only to the alleged war criminals among the men of military age¹⁷¹³⁴ who would have been ¹⁷¹³² P4385 (Tab B to Plea Agreement, 6 May 2003); Momir Nikolić, T. 24560–24561 (13 February 2012); T. 24881–24882 (16 February 2012).

¹⁷¹³³ Momir Nikolić, T. 24882 (16 February 2012).

¹⁷¹³⁴ At times Nikolić referred to those he understood to be separated as “military-aged men”, or “able-bodied men”. Momir Nikolić, T. 24621, 24628 (13 February 2012), T. 24646–24647 (14 February 2012). However, he further testified, “[w]e would carry out a military task, that we would stick to military procedure, that we would single out those people from whom we had indicia or evidence or documents or witnesses to the effect that they had committed crimes [...]”. Momir Nikolić, T. 24621 (13 February 2012), and “they worked on singling out these military-aged men, or, rather, those for whom they had had information to the effect that they had committed crimes during the previous operations”. Momir Nikolić, T. 24628 (13 February 2012). He also testified that “[m]ilitary selection involves [...] identifying those who have committed a crime or those whom you suspect of having committed a crime, a war crime, or any other kind of crime, crime against the civilian population or against prisoners, soldiers, and so on and so forth”. Momir Nikolić, T. 24644 (14 February 2012). He further stated, “When I heard what Mr. Popovic said, it was my understanding that by going to Potocari a military screening process was to take place, which is a legitimate military procedure entailing identification -- the identification of those who need to be separated, and checks are carried out because there is a possibility of those who committed war crimes and crimes against humanity being present.” Momir Nikolić, T. 24645 (14 February 2012). In light of the above testimony, the Chamber finds that, by “military-aged men” or “able-separated, hence his participation in the discussion concerning possible locations for their execution. The Chamber considers this interpretation in itself indefensible. Nikolić sought to paint a picture of legality when he spoke of his assumption that they would have done “what was prescribed under the rules”,¹⁷¹³⁵ but the Chamber sees this as a device utilised by the witness to mask his real thoughts.

5062. The Chamber is satisfied that it was only when events began to unfold in Potočari that he realised that not only alleged war criminals but all men who tried to board the buses, irrespective of their age or physical constitution, were separated.¹⁷¹³⁶ Indeed, evidence before the Chamber indicates that being a Bosnian Muslim man was the exclusive criterion for separation,¹⁷¹³⁷ and that they were all earmarked for execution.¹⁷¹³⁸

5063. The Chamber further considers that, by giving evidence about Popović informing him of plans to separate Bosnian Muslim men and to subsequently kill them, Nikolić directly incriminated himself in these matters. More importantly, ever since Nikolić entered a plea agreement with the Prosecution in 2003, his evidence on this point has remained constant.¹⁷¹³⁹

5064. Accordingly, the Chamber is unable to discern any inconsistency in this area of Nikolić’s evidence.

(d) Credibility of Defence witnesses

5065. Last but not least, the Chamber is of the view that the reliability of Nikolić’s account is undiminished by Defence evidence. As previously discussed, when Popović gave evidence in this case as a Defence witness, his case was still on appeal and thus the Chamber approached his evidence with great caution.¹⁷¹⁴⁰ With regard to Kosorić, the Chamber considers that he was generally evasive, insisting that he neither saw nor knew anything. Although he adhered to his prior evidence that there was no such conversation as claimed by Nikolić, he confirmed that he, Nikolić, and Popović were all present at Hotel Fontana on the morning of 12 July.¹⁷¹⁴¹ Taken together with the testimony of Ušćumlić, who testified that he was at the third meeting but denied bodied men” in the above context, Nikolić meant those among the military-aged or able-bodied men who allegedly committed war crimes.

the content of the conversation as related by Nikolić, the Chamber finds the evidence of these three witnesses unconvincing and insufficient to jeopardise the Chamber's view of the reliability of Nikolić's evidence on this point.

(e) Conclusion

5066. Accordingly, the Chamber finds Nikolić's testimony reliable. The Chamber therefore accepts his account of the conversation in which Popović told him that all the men in Potočari should be killed.

(D) Third meeting

5067. On the morning of 12 July, Karremans and Boering went back to Hotel Fontana with the three Bosnian Muslims—Mandžić, Purković, and Nuhanović—escorted by Kosorić.¹⁷¹⁴² This third meeting started at around 10 a.m.¹⁷¹⁴³ Mladić, Krstić, Radoslav Janković, Kosorić, and Popović were present, together with Dragomir Vasić, the Chief of the Zvornik CJB, Deronjić, Srblislav Davidović, President of the Bratunac Executive Board, and Ljubisav Simić.¹⁷¹⁴⁴ The Bosnian Muslim civilian population in Potočari was represented by Mandžić, Purković, and Nuhanović.¹⁷¹⁴⁵

5068. Mladić told the Bosnian Muslim representatives that he wanted to help them and that they could request what they wished, but that he wanted “absolute co-operation”.¹⁷¹⁴⁶ Mladić then added that “you can either survive or disappear” and demanded that ABiH soldiers surrender their weapons.¹⁷¹⁴⁷ He stated that upon compliance with this demand, the Bosnian Muslim civilian population “may choose to stay in the territory or, if so you wish, go wherever you want”.¹⁷¹⁴⁸ Furthermore, Mladić noted that he would provide vehicles, but that fuel should be procured by Bosnian Muslims or by UNPROFOR.¹⁷¹⁴⁹

5069. The Bosnian Muslim representatives requested “free passage for able-bodied men because, allegedly they are unarmed and they are not in contact with their army in the woods”.¹⁷¹⁵⁰ A procedure for transferring the Bosnian Muslim population was also discussed.¹⁷¹⁵¹ In addition, Boering testified that Mladić mentioned “screening” of the Bosnian Muslim men in Srebrenica based on their ages between about 15 and 70, but the specifics of this screening were not made clear.¹⁷¹⁵² Davidović was assigned to select potential war criminals among the civilian population.¹⁷¹⁵³

5070. At the end of the meeting, Mladić said that the Bosnian Serb civilian authorities should assist the Bosnian Muslim population in Potočari in terms of logistics, water, food, and health care.¹⁷¹⁵⁴ After 11 a.m., the meeting ended hastily as the participants were told that the Bosnian Muslims in Potočari were getting restless, and it was feared that they would set out to Bratunac on foot.¹⁷¹⁵⁵ The Bosnian Muslim representatives were asked to return to Potočari to tell the population that transportation would be provided.¹⁷¹⁵⁶ Vasić reported to the RS MUP that “boarding of vehicles will commence at 1400 hours”.¹⁷¹⁵⁷

5071. Radoslav Janković came out of the hotel and told Momir Nikolić that everything had been agreed upon regarding the transfer of Bosnian Muslims to Kladanj, and that Nikolić should assist in the transfer and the separation of Bosnian Muslim men.¹⁷¹⁵⁸ Janković further stated that the commanders of the units in charge of the operation had already received orders and specific tasks, and were already in Potočari.¹⁷¹⁵⁹ Janković told Nikolić to talk to Duško Jević—the director of the Jahorina Training Centre and a member of the Special Brigade of the MUP who was present in Potočari—and to assist him.¹⁷¹⁶⁰

5072. Kosorić brought the DutchBat officers and the Bosnian Muslim representatives back to the UN Compound.¹⁷¹⁶¹ Since Karremans and Boering were not clear about the agreements reached, the procedure for the transportation, and DutchBat’s role therein, Karremans instructed Boering and Rave to return to Bratunac to verify what the actual agreements were.¹⁷¹⁶² Around noon, Boering and Rave arrived in Bratunac and managed to meet Momir Nikolić, who was with Kosorić.¹⁷¹⁶³

ii. Humanitarian situation and atmosphere in Potočari

5073. As previously stated, by the morning of 11 July, several thousand Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica town were making their way towards Potočari.¹⁷¹⁶⁵ The majority, consisting mostly of women, children, and elderly individuals, arrived in Potočari on foot—while others were brought by UN vehicles—and were taken to several facilities in the vicinity of the UN Compound.¹⁷¹⁶⁶ By the evening of 11 July, the UN Compound and the area of the surrounding buildings, including the lead factory and the Zinc factory, were full of Bosnian Muslims.¹⁷¹⁶⁷ Many stayed outside without accommodation.¹⁷¹⁶⁸ DutchBat tried to provide security, placing a red and white tape around the

The Chamber notes that Nikolić testified that when he, Kosorić, and Ušćumlić were still talking in front of Hotel Fontana prior to the third meeting, two DutchBat officers came up to them and asked when the buses would arrive and when the transportation would begin. After having taken them to Colonel Lazar Aćamović, Assistant Commander for Rear Services of the Drina Corps, who was standing in front of Hotel Fontana, Nikolić told them that they should go back to Potočari, that “everything had been agreed upon, [...] and that the evacuation would start”. Momir Nikolić, T. 24623 (13 February 2012). In Nikolić’s recollection, the DutchBat officers were Rave and his “associate”. Momir Nikolić, T. 24623–24624 (13 February 2012). However, Rave did not go to Hotel Fontana with Karremans and Boering as he had other obligations. P3995 (Witness statement of Albert Rave dated 10 November 2011), para. 93. The Chamber is of the view that while Nikolić’s account of this encounter coincides in large measure with the account described in paragraph 5067 certain areas were inconsistent with other evidence adduced in this case. The Chamber gave this full consideration and is firmly of the opinion that this inconsistency does not in any way compromise the reliability of Nikolić’s evidence in general, and in particular the reliability of the conversation that took place before the third meeting.

5074. Potočari and the facilities there were overcrowded with Bosnian Muslims carrying their possessions; they were all fearful.¹⁷¹⁷⁰ There was constant shelling,¹⁷¹⁷¹ which injured a number of Bosnian Muslims and caused fear amongst them.¹⁷¹⁷² Panic was rampant.¹⁷¹⁷³ Shelling continued throughout the night of 11 to 12 July around the UN Compound.¹⁷¹⁷⁴

5075. On the morning of 12 July, panic increased even more when the Bosnian Muslims saw members of the Bosnian Serb Forces coming in from all directions.¹⁷¹⁷⁵ During the course of the day, some houses surrounding Potočari and haystacks were set on fire by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷¹⁷⁶

5076. By that time, between 25,000 and 30,000 Bosnian Muslims were in Potočari, of whom 5 to 10% were able-bodied men.¹⁷¹⁷⁷ The humanitarian situation was catastrophic; there was not enough water, food, or medicine for the Bosnian Muslims, and there were insufficient toilet facilities.¹⁷¹⁷⁸ The heat was stifling.¹⁷¹⁷⁹ Some women gave birth.¹⁷¹⁸⁰ Some people died, while others committed suicide or attempted to do so.¹⁷¹⁸¹

5077. Muslims.¹⁷¹⁹⁸ Some Bosnian Serb soldiers were cursing the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁷¹⁹⁹ By 1 p.m. that day, the Bosnian Serb Forces had taken control of Potočari.¹⁷²⁰⁰

5080. Around the time vehicles for the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims arrived in Potočari, the DutchBat soldiers who were stationed near the bus premises were threatened with weapons by members of the Jahorina Recruits led by Đurić, and had to surrender their weapons, vests, armoury, and communication sets.¹⁷²⁰¹ 11 DutchBat soldiers and a DutchBat doctor were detained for a few hours at a place next to the bus premises.¹⁷²⁰² Following repeated protests to Đurić, they were finally released and sent back to the UN Compound.¹⁷²⁰³

5081. On the morning of 13 July, Rave saw Mladić in Potočari and told him that members of the Bosnian Serb Forces had stolen DutchBat's weapons and material.¹⁷²⁰⁴ Mladić assured Rave that he would instruct his soldiers not to steal anything from DutchBat soldiers.¹⁷²⁰⁵

(A) Provision of vehicles and fuel

5082. On the evening of 11 July, Mladić ordered Petar Škrbić to requisition buses for “an evacuation”.¹⁷²⁰⁶ Before 10 a.m. on the morning of 12 July, he placed an urgent call to the RS Ministry of Defence, requesting an order to its Sarajevo and Zvornik secretariats to mobilise at least 50 buses to be sent to the stadium in Bratunac town (“Bratunac stadium”) by 2:30 p.m. that Mendeljev Đurić, T. 42080–42081 (29 July 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber considered that Đurić had an interest in removing himself from the events in Potočari and his evidence in this regard was marked by insincerity and evasiveness.

Popović et al.*), T. 15472–15473, 15476 (stating that he first received information about the need for buses by telephone on the night of 11 July). Although Škrbić initially could not remember from whom he had received the order, he then adopted his prior statement in which he had said that the mobilisation request came from Mladić but was conveyed “indirectly through somebody”. day.¹⁷²⁰⁷ Pursuant to this request, the RS Ministry of Defence ordered these secretariats to immediately procure buses and send them to the designated location by the designated time.¹⁷²⁰⁸ Following these orders, the RS Ministry of Defence further issued an order to all Ministry of Defence departments in Zvornik, Milići, Vlasenica, Šekovići, and Bratunac, to cancel all regular bus services until further notice, if necessary, so that buses and drivers could immediately report to the “Sports Centre” in Bratunac.¹⁷²⁰⁹ In compliance with the Ministry of Defence orders, vehicles were indeed mobilised that day, which paralysed regular passenger transport.¹⁷²¹⁰

5083. Meanwhile, the Drina Corps also responded to Mladić’s order. At 7:35 a.m. on 12 July, Krstić, in his capacity of Chief of Staff of the corps,¹⁷²¹¹ instructed Lieutenant Colonel Rajko Krsmanović, the Drina Corps Chief of Transportation,¹⁷²¹² to mobilise 50 buses in total from Pale, Višegrad, Rogatica, Sokolac, Han Pijesak, Vlasenica, Milići, Bratunac, and Zvornik, and send them to the Bratunac stadium by 5 p.m. that day.¹⁷²¹³

5084. Also on the same morning, Živanović issued an order to his subordinate brigades that all available buses and minibuses belonging to VRS units were to be secured for the use of the Drina Corps and sent to the Bratunac stadium.¹⁷²¹⁴ He also gave instructions about locations for fuel distribution, and stated that the Drina Corps command had sent a message to the RS Ministry of Defence asking for private buses to be mobilised.¹⁷²¹⁵ The subordinate brigades complied with this order and sent the vehicles as requested.¹⁷²¹⁶

5085. Pursuant to Mladić's order, at 10 a.m. that morning, the Drina Corps command informed the Main Staff that buses it had requested from the Drina Corps units had been secured, noting that the command did not know the final destination of the transportation at that time.¹⁷²¹⁷ On the same morning, Vasić reported to the RS MUP that 100 trucks had been provided for transport.¹⁷²¹⁸

5086. Earlier that morning, at around 8 a.m., a meeting had been held at the Bratunac Brigade Command, where Mladić, Krstić, Deronjić, and Vasić, among others, were present, and "tasks were assigned to all participants".¹⁷²¹⁹ Mladić asked Davidović, Simić, and Aleksandar Tešić—the Secretary of the Secretariat of National Defence in Bratunac—, all of whom were also present at this meeting, what to do with the Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica.¹⁷²²⁰ Mladić stated that "there were many of [Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica and] we need quite a few vehicles".¹⁷²²¹ Mladić went on to instruct Tešić that buses and trucks be mobilised immediately to transport about "20,000 residents, today or tomorrow."¹⁷²²²

5087. Meanwhile, the VRS was encountering problems with acquiring enough fuel.¹⁷²²³ For instance, the Drina Corps command requested additional fuel: 10,000 litres of diesel and 2,000 litres of petrol.¹⁷²²⁴ Furthermore, the Bratunac Brigade was monitoring fuel disbursements to buses and trucks on 12 and 13 July.¹⁷²²⁵

5088. In line with the order to provide vehicles for transportation from the Srebrenica enclave, on the same day, the Drina Corps command issued an urgent order to the Zvornik and Bratunac Brigades, instructing that traffic at the Konjević Polje intersection and on the Konjević Polje–

Bratunac Road be regulated, and that priority should be given to the “buses for evacuation”.¹⁷²²⁶ As instructed, the Zvornik Brigade implemented the order, sending its MP detachment to Konjević Polje.¹⁷²²⁷

5089. At some point on 12 July, UNMO Joseph Kingori¹⁷²²⁸ saw Mladić in Potočari and told him about the UN’s intention to remove the population from Srebrenica on buses.¹⁷²²⁹ Mladić responded that he already had his own buses and that he would transport the people to Tuzla to “join their brothers there”.¹⁷²³⁰ Soon after, the buses started arriving.¹⁷²³¹

5090. Around 2 or 3 p.m. in the afternoon, Colonel Lazar Aćamović, the Drina Corps Assistant Commander for Rear Services,¹⁷²³² came to see Franken, said that he was responsible for the transportation of the civilians, and asked for transportation and fuel; however, DutchBat did not have any fuel.¹⁷²³³

5091. On 13 July, the RS Ministry of Defence sent similar orders to the Sarajevo and Zvornik secretariats, as well as to the Bijeljina secretariat this time requesting the immediate mobilisation of transportation vehicles and drivers from designated municipalities, either to be sent to the Bratunac stadium or to be on call.¹⁷²³⁴ The problem with fuel persisted; Vasić noted that they needed ten tons.¹⁷²³⁵

5092. At about 10 to 11 a.m. on 13 July, Aćamović arrived at the UN Compound and spoke to DutchBat officers about the DutchBat convoy coming from Belgrade bringing diesel, rations, and water for DutchBat.¹⁷²³⁶ Aćamović wanted the diesel to be shared with the VRS and for buses to be group were threatened with weapons and physically forced to board the vehicles.¹⁷²⁵⁸ They were also kicked and hit.¹⁷²⁵⁹ Many fainted because of the heat and the crowd.¹⁷²⁶⁰

5096. At one point, outside the UN Compound, Karremans saw Mladić, who told him that Aćamović would be responsible for the transportation of the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁷²⁶¹ Karremans instructed his soldiers to co-ordinate among themselves to provide support to the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷²⁶²

5097. In accordance with Mladić's instructions at the end of the third meeting at the Hotel Fontana,¹⁷²⁶³ at some point on 12 July Davidović and Simić travelled to Potočari with the first batch of bread, water, and medication.¹⁷²⁶⁴ After the same meeting, Popović was also instructed by Mladić to go to Potočari and to distribute bread and water to the Bosnian Muslims.¹⁷²⁶⁵ While members of the Bosnian Serb Forces were distributing these items, Mladić arrived and addressed

The Chamber notes that in his Final Brief, citing the testimony of Srbslav Davidović and Ljubisav Simić, the Accused asserts that no Bosnian Muslims were forced onto buses. Defence Final Brief, para. 2432. The Chamber recalls that Davidović testified that the boarding process “seemed voluntary” and that no coercion was used. Srbslav Davidović, P4100 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 9326. Similarly, Simić stated that “as far as [he] was able to see”, no one was forced to board the buses. Ljubisav Simić, T. 37265–37266 (16 April 2013). However, the Chamber notes that Simić became evasive when pressed as to whether Bosnian Muslims would have been free to return to the enclave. Ljubisav Simić, T. 37266 (16 April 2013). Additionally, Davidović stated that he was only in Potočari for two hours on 12 July. Srbslav Davidović, P4100 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 9209. The Chamber thus does not consider that such evidence directly contradicts the evidence of those who personally observed Bosnian Muslims being physically forced onto buses. Moreover, the Chamber considers that the mere absence of physical force, even if established, would not necessarily negate the forcible nature of the transfer.

In relation to the distribution of supplies, some witnesses stated that the supplies were only distributed while cameras were filming and they were even taken back when the cameras stopped rolling. P3948 (Witness statement of Johannes Rutten dated 8 November 2011), para. 40; Pieter Boering, P3969 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2009. Groenewegen also stated that while he could not recall whether the distribution of bread stopped when filming stopped, he was certain that the distribution was done for purposes of the filming. P4167 (Witness statement of Paul Groenewegen dated 11 November 2011), para. 31. See also P3948 (Witness statement of Johannes Rutten dated 8 November 2011), paras. 41–42. On the other hand, Davidović, Popović, and Borovčanin, who participated in the distribution, refuted these claims. On the basis of this evidence, the Chamber is satisfied that there were instances where the supplies were taken back from the Bosnian Muslims when the filming stopped. The Chamber is also satisfied that, whether food was distributed for the purposes of the cameras which were present or not, the quantities distributed were not such that they could have provided any kind of meaningful relief to the large majority of the population in Potočari.

5100. Mladić was present in Potočari on 12 and 13 July, constantly moving around with his staff.¹⁷²⁷⁵ At around 12:50 p.m. on 12 July, Mladić inquired whether buses and trucks had left.¹⁷²⁷⁶ When told that they had left ten minutes earlier, Mladić was pleased, instructing to continue to monitor the situation and adding: “they’ve all capitulated and surrendered and we’ll evacuate them all—those who want to and those who don’t want to”.¹⁷²⁷⁷ Mladić further stated that a corridor towards Kladanj would be open.¹⁷²⁷⁸

(C) Transportation of women, children, and elderly men to Bosnian Muslim-held territory

5101. Following the boarding process on 12 July, the buses and trucks carrying the Bosnian Muslims from Potočari passed through the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road, stopping at Tišća, where Bosnian Muslim males who appeared to be older than 14 and younger than 60 or 70 were separated.¹⁷²⁷⁹ The rest of the Bosnian Muslims, accompanied by DutchBat, continued on foot to

Kladanj, and onwards to Bosnian Muslim-held territory.¹⁷²⁸⁰ The transportation was suspended in the evening.¹⁷²⁸¹

5102. The transportation resumed at 7 or 8 a.m. on 13 July and by approximately 9 a.m., up to 10,000 Bosnian Muslims—most of whom were women, children, and elderly men—had been transported out of Potočari.¹⁷²⁸² Buses continued to depart throughout the day.¹⁷²⁸³ As had been done the previous day, Bosnian Muslim women, children, and the elderly were transported to Kladanj, and then to ABiH held-territory in Tuzla,¹⁷²⁸⁴ while the men who had managed to get onboard were again separated and taken off at Tišća.¹⁷²⁸⁵

The vehicles carrying Bosnian Muslims to Tuzla were again stopped by soldiers; they took money and valuables from the Bosnian

5103. On both of these days, stones were thrown at the buses and trucks while en route.¹⁷²⁸⁶ They were stopped several times; Bosnian Serb soldiers entered the bus, threatened the passengers with knives and asked for foreign currency.¹⁷²⁸⁷ From the bus, one witness saw a long column of men walking through the woods, with their hands tied behind the nape of their neck.¹⁷²⁸⁸

5104. The vehicles were escorted by Bratunac Brigade MP members and/or members of the SJB.¹⁷²⁸⁹ Members of the Bratunac Brigade regulated traffic as the buses passed through Bratunac on their way to Konjević Polje.¹⁷²⁹⁰ Kosorić also escorted the vehicles.¹⁷²⁹¹ On 13 July, the transportation of the remaining Bosnian Muslims was mainly organised by the MUP as the VRS was continuing operations towards Žepa.¹⁷²⁹²

5105. In an attempt to have some control over the transportation, DutchBat organised for the convoy to be escorted.¹⁷²⁹³ At one point, DutchBat cars were stopped and Bosnian Serb Forces threatened them with weapons.¹⁷²⁹⁴ Approximately 16 jeeps, as well as the weapons, flak jackets, helmets, ammunition, and equipment in the vehicles were stolen from DutchBat on the road from Bratunac to Konjević Polje and Kladanj.¹⁷²⁹⁵

5106. On both 12 and 13 July, while travelling from Konjević Polje to Milići en route to Kladanj, Egbers saw a few hundred men near the road to Nova Kasaba who were being escorted by members Muslims; they also took two Bosnian Muslim girls who were not seen again. P401 (Statement of Šehra Ibišević to Sarajevo Cantonal Court, 21 June 2000), e-court p. 8.

5107. By 8 p.m. on 13 July, the transportation was completed.¹⁷²⁹⁸ Personal belongings of the Bosnian Muslims who had left were strewn everywhere in Potočari.¹⁷²⁹⁹ A UNHCR convoy, which was supposed to arrive earlier, came in when the last Bosnian Muslims had left Potočari.¹⁷³⁰⁰

¹⁷³⁰² See paras. 5095, 5098. Defence witnesses, such as Popović, suggested that the men were not separated in Potočari. D3993 (Witness statement of Vujadin Popović dated 2 November 2013), para. 24. Borovčanin stated that during his brief stay in Potočari, he did not see any separation of men. D3659 (Witness statement of Ljubomir Borovčanin dated 30 May 2013), para. 19. Đurić also claimed that when he was in Potočari on 12 and 13 July, he did not know of or see the separation of men from their families. D3903 (Witness Statement of Đurić dated 26 July 2013), para. 13; Mendeljev Đurić, T. 42086–42097 (29 July 2013). See also Srblisav Davidović, P4100 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 9324. In light of the Chamber's view that these witnesses' testimony on this point was marked by insincerity and evasiveness, as well as overwhelming contradictory evidence, the Chamber does not consider their evidence reliable and will not place weight on it. Furthermore, Popović's testimony is directly contradicted by the contemporaneous report he sent to the VRS Main Staff, in which he stated: "[W]e were separating men from 17–60 years of age and we were not transporting them". P4388 (Drina Corps report to VRS Main Staff, 12 July 1995), p. 2. With regard to P4388, which bears Popović's typed-signed signature, the Chamber notes that Popović claimed that the report had been drafted by Momir Nikolić from the Bratunac Brigade Command, and that he had only read it at the Drina Corps Command the next day. D3993 (Witness statement of Vujadin Popović dated 2 November 2013), para. 27; Vujadin Popović, T. 43028–43032, 43037–43038 (5 November 2013) (asserting that the number appearing in the heading of the report was not his own but Nikolić's and that 'there is no point' for Popović to send such a document to his department in the Drina Corps). Popović further testified that he was working on urgent matters—reviewing documents seized from the MUP building in Srebrenica—at the Bratunac Brigade Command at the time the document was sent, claiming that he was at the command without Momir Nikolić's knowledge. Vujadin Popović, T. 43032–43034 (5 November 2013). The Chamber considers that Popović's evidence on this point is evasive and unreliable. The Chamber is satisfied that Popović drafted and sent P4388.

separated.¹⁷³⁰³ The separations continued throughout 12 and 13 July.¹⁷³⁰⁴ According to Momir Nikolić, approximately 300 to 500 men and boys were separated, amounting to between 600 and 700 in two days.¹⁷³⁰⁵ There was a lot of fear among the males and the family they were leaving behind.¹⁷³⁰⁶ As Bosnian Muslim men protested against their separation from their families,¹⁷³⁰⁷ Janković told them they had no reason to be concerned and that “everything would be all right”. He also said that the men would join their families later.¹⁷³⁰⁸

5110. Armed VRS soldiers of the 10th Sabotage Detachment and the 65th Protection Regiment forced the males to leave their personal belongings, which were piled about 30 to 40 metres from

At the very moment the transportation of women, children, and the elderly started, Mladić told Franken that he wanted to interrogate the men aged between about 16 and up to 60, as they were potential soldiers, and to check "whether there were war criminals".¹⁷³¹¹ Rave asked Mladić about the separation of Bosnian Muslim men, to which Mladić responded that the VRS was trying to find out if there were soldiers among the men; if so they would be separated, be made POWs, brought to a prison camp in the vicinity of Bijeljina, and exchanged for Bosnian Serb POWs.¹⁷³¹²

5112. On both 12 and 13 July, Momir Nikolić came to the UN Compound to verify the list of the people in the UN Compound against the one he had in order to check whether there were any Bosnian Muslim soldiers inside.¹⁷³¹³ No effort was made thereafter to distinguish the soldiers from the civilians.¹⁷³¹⁴ Momir Nikolić himself testified that there was no process to identify and separate the men who were suspected of having committed war crimes, stating that "most of [the men] shouldn't have been separated out for any military reason".¹⁷³¹⁵ in the White House was getting worse.¹⁷³³⁰ Franken made a list of men who were still present in the UN Compound.¹⁷³³¹ In total, 251 men were registered.¹⁷³³² Franken sent the list up the chain of command in an effort to safeguard their lives; he also told Janković that the Bosnian Muslim men were registered and that the names were known within the UN and the Dutch government.¹⁷³³³

5116. On 13 July, Rutten and his colleague were able to enter the house, and saw what looked like an “interrogation room”, although they could not enter the room as members of the Bosnian Serb Forces threatened them with weapons.¹⁷³³⁴ The rooms upstairs were filled with around 50 Bosnian Muslim men aged between 45 and 55, and some boys around 12 to 14 years-old.¹⁷³³⁵ Later on, Rutten went to the White House again while he was waiting for the last buses carrying the Bosnian Muslim civilians to leave; the house itself and the balcony were completely filled with Bosnian Muslim males;¹⁷³³⁶ they were about 300.¹⁷³³⁷ There was total fear on their faces.¹⁷³³⁸

5117. Starting in the afternoon of 12 July and continuing throughout 13 July, while the transportation of women, children, and the elderly on buses was in progress, the men detained at the White House were taken out, boarded onto buses, and transported to Bratunac.¹⁷³³⁹ The Bratunac

Brigade MP members assisted the transportation.¹⁷³⁴⁰ DutchBat tried to escort the buses but they were prevented from doing so.¹⁷³⁴¹ On 12 July alone, between 10 and 15 buses with about 70 men onboard each left Potočari for Bratunac.¹⁷³⁴² Mladić was seen standing with two other soldiers next to one of the buses on which men were forced to board.¹⁷³⁴³

5118. When the men came out of the White House, they were frightened, tried to escape, started screaming, and did not want to go into the buses and trucks.¹⁷³⁴⁴ The men were hit and kicked, and were forced to keep their heads down.¹⁷³⁴⁵ They were then crammed into the vehicles,¹⁷³⁴⁶ and were not allowed to take their belongings.¹⁷³⁴⁷

5119. From the evening of 13 to 14 July 1995, all the personal belongings and IDs of the Bosnian Muslim males held at the White House were set on fire by Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷³⁴⁸

(E) Presence and involvement of the Bosnian Serb Forces

5120. During 12 and 13 July, the following members of the Bosnian Serb Forces were on the ground in Potočari, and oversaw and/or assisted the boarding and transportation of women, children, and the elderly, as well as the separation of men, their detention, and the subsequent transportation to Bratunac: (i) from the VRS, Mladić; Janković; members of the 65th Protection Regiment; members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment; Drina Corps officers, including Živanović, D3903 (Witness Statement of Mendeljev Đurić dated 26 July 2013), para. 13. In this regard, the Chamber recalls Janjić's testimony that members of the MUP “Special Police” were dividing the Bosnian Muslims into groups, and that he saw Mane Đurić near that location. With regard to the state security's involvement in the separation of men, Momir Nikolić confirmed that state security operatives gained information about the column that is reflected in the Sarajevo State Security Service Report of 13 July from interrogating the separated Bosnian Muslim men. Momir Nikolić, T. 24649–24650 (14 February 2012); P4389 (Report of Sarajevo RDB, 13 July 1995), p. 1. See also Momir Nikolić, T. 24628–24629 (13 February 2012); P4388 (Drina Corps report to VRS Main Staff, 12 July 1995), p. 2. Milinić disputed the veracity of Popović's report, claiming that the state security and VRS security organs never worked together, as stated in P4388. Gordan Milinić, T. 39779–39780 (12 June 2013). Similarly, Dragan Kijac testified that to the best of his knowledge the state security operatives did not participate in any interviews in Potočari, but he conceded that interviews took place at the Bratunac SJB. Dragan Kijac, T. 44331–44336 (3 December 2013). Having assessed the totality of the evidence before it, the Chamber rejects the testimony of Milinić and Kijac and is satisfied that state security operatives were indeed involved in the separation of men.

(F) Evacuation of the wounded and the sick

5121. While the Bosnian Muslims were moving from Srebrenica to Potočari, DutchBat and MSF staff evacuated some of the patients in the Srebrenica Hospital to Potočari.¹⁷³⁵³ All the international and most local MSF staff also moved to Potočari.¹⁷³⁵⁴

5122. In the early afternoon of 12 July, Nicolai updated Gvero, informing him about the “matter of the evacuation of the refugees from Srebrenica to another area”.¹⁷³⁵⁵ Nicolai told Gvero that he was arranging an air evacuation of the wounded, that a formal request for helicopters would be made to the VRS, and requested Gvero to instruct VRS soldiers to co-operate.¹⁷³⁵⁶ Gvero objected, noting that using helicopters was impermissible due to security reasons and that the VRS had already offered their hospitals for treating the wounded.¹⁷³⁵⁷

5123. At one point on 12 July in Potočari, Franken met Radoslav Janković, who was tasked with organising and co-ordinating DutchBat’s withdrawal from the Srebrenica enclave.¹⁷³⁵⁸ That day, MSF staff were informed about Mladić’s intention to start the “evacuation” of the wounded and sick.¹⁷³⁵⁹ DutchBat conducted the first medical evacuation around 6 p.m. that evening.¹⁷³⁶⁰ Some patients and local MSF staff who accompanied them were allowed to travel to Kladanj, while others were forced to return to Bratunac.¹⁷³⁶¹ The next day, the convoy was allowed through to Kladanj, from where its members proceeded to Bosnian Muslim-held territory on foot.¹⁷³⁶²

5124. On the morning of 13 July, Aćamović came to the UN Compound and asked for a list of all individuals who would be evacuated with DutchBat, including its local staff, staff from MSF and

UNHCR, and interpreters.¹⁷³⁶³ Later that afternoon, when wounded people and UNHCR employees, as well as the local and international staffs of MSF and DutchBat, remained inside the UN Compound,¹⁷³⁶⁴ Aćamović collected the list of wounded provided by DutchBat, told DutchBat that there would be a medical evacuation from Bratunac,¹⁷³⁶⁵ and that after all the Bosnian Muslims were gone, DutchBat should assemble its personnel and stay inside the UN Compound.¹⁷³⁶⁶

5125. Meanwhile, in an attempt to collect patients who had been left behind, MSF staff member Schmitz and Kingori went to the clinic and social centre in Srebrenica with a Bosnian Serb escort, collected a total of six patients, and returned to Potočari.¹⁷³⁶⁷ There, Schmitz was told that the VRS had entered the UN Compound to inspect the patients but had quickly left due to the conditions and smell of the premises.¹⁷³⁶⁸ By 8 p.m., only the wounded remained in Potočari.¹⁷³⁶⁹ The UNMOs and MSF prepared a list of the wounded and sick in the UN Compound.¹⁷³⁷⁰

5126. On 15 July, DutchBat, the UNMOs, and MSF met with members of the VRS including Momir Nikolić, and gave them the lists of the 55 patients and several escorts in Potočari, as well as the 45 patients in Bratunac.¹⁷³⁷¹ The next day, representatives of the Main Staff, the ICRC, and the UNHCR agreed that DutchBat would transport the Bosnian Muslim patients from Potočari to the Bratunac Health Centre the next morning, the ICRC would carry out the medical evacuation of the

(G) Meeting of VRS, Bosnian Serb civilian officers, and ICRC

5127. On 17 July, a VRS delegation and Bosnian Serb civilian officers came to the UN Compound and met with the ICRC concerning details about the evacuation of the wounded out of Potočari and Bratunac.¹⁷³⁷³ The VRS delegation was headed by Janković, who was accompanied by Momir Nikolić, Deronjić,¹⁷³⁷⁴ and a VRS lawyer.¹⁷³⁷⁵ Franken, Rave, and an UNMO named De Haan were present, as was Nesib Mandžić.¹⁷³⁷⁶ Upon Nikolić's insistence that the wounded be inspected to see whether there were still soldiers or "criminals" among them, and regardless of Franken's objection, an inspection was conducted and seven men were identified as soldiers.¹⁷³⁷⁷ He agreed with the ICRC that these men would be treated as wounded POWs and be handed over to the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷³⁷⁸

5128. At this meeting, the Bosnian Serb representatives brought a declaration outlining the agreement reached at the third Hotel Fontana meeting ("17 July 1995 Statement").¹⁷³⁷⁹ Janković asked Mandžić to sign the statement and requested that Franken attest to the fact that Mandžić was not forced to sign it.¹⁷³⁸⁰ The 17 July 1995 Statement summarised the agreement reached at the third meeting, and read in part:

- that our civilian population could stay in the enclave or move out, depending on the wish of each individual;

- should we wish to move out from the enclave, it was agreed that we could choose where we wanted to go; we decided that the entire population move out of the enclave and be evacuated to the territory of Kladanj municipality;

- it was arranged that the evacuation would be carried out by the Army and Police of the Republic of Srpska and that UNPROFOR would supervise and provide an escort for the evacuation.¹⁷³⁸¹

5129. It also stated that the “evacuation” had been conducted smoothly in accordance with the Geneva Conventions and International Humanitarian Law.¹⁷³⁸² Franken signed the document in order “to ensure that the refugees and wounded [...] and the locals working for the aid organizations could be transported”.¹⁷³⁸³ Mandžić and Deronjić also signed both the English and the BCS versions of the declaration.¹⁷³⁸⁴ At around 6:30 p.m. that evening, the Accused received the 17 July 1995 Statement.¹⁷³⁸⁵

Before signing this declaration, Franken added by hand “as far as convoys actually escorted by UN forces are concerned” to the sentence which reads: “No incidents were provoked by any side during the evacuation and the Serbian side observed all the regulations of the Geneva Conventions and the International Law of War”, in order to “neutralise the whole statement” by indicating that DutchBat had only had control over the first and second convoys, and that Bosnian Muslim men had been separated. P4175 (Witness Statement of Robert Franken dated 15 January 2012), para. 106. At one point Deronjić told Katanić that he was pleased with the outcome of the meetings as the UNPROFOR representatives and the Bosnian Muslim representative signed a document “stating that Deronjić was not responsible for any possible civilian casualties and that he had done his part of work well.” P4374 (Witness statement of Milenko Katanić dated 11 October 2011), para. 67.

5130. Also during this meeting, the VRS delegation announced that MSF and DutchBat local staff could leave the enclave with DutchBat.¹⁷³⁸⁶ There were eight MSF local employees, seven able-bodied men, and one female.¹⁷³⁸⁷

5131. Later that same day, approved by “the state and military leadership of RS”,¹⁷³⁸⁸ and under the supervision of ICRC delegates, all the remaining wounded in the UN Compound were transported in DutchBat trucks to the Bratunac Health Centre, and together with some of the wounded there, they were all transported to Tuzla.¹⁷³⁸⁹ Among the wounded and sick at the Bratunac Health Centre, a number of men were selected as “fit for military service” as POWs, and were not allowed to leave.¹⁷³⁹⁰ They were subsequently taken by the Eastern Bosnia Corps MP to Batković Camp on 18 July, and were among the POWs exchanged at the end of 1995 in the presence of the ICRC.¹⁷³⁹¹

(H) Withdrawal

5132. On 18 July, a report written by Janković was sent from the Bratunac Brigade to the Main Staff Sector for Intelligence and Security Affairs and the Drina Corps’ corresponding departments, in which Janković and Momir Nikolić stated that the State Security Department informed them of

“the view that President Karadžić apparently pardoned all the local staff who worked for UNPROFOR”.¹⁷³⁹²

5133. On 19 July, Janković and Đurić discussed the transportation of MSF staff.¹⁷³⁹³ In response to Janković’s remark that MSF local staff was allowed by the “Koljević government” to leave Potočari, Đurić said that they should be checked to determine whether they were able-bodied men.¹⁷³⁹⁴ On 20 July, MSF staff learned that they would be allowed to leave the enclave with DutchBat.¹⁷³⁹⁵

5134. As instructed by the VRS command, at around 9:45 a.m. on 21 July, Karremans and Rave went to Hotel Fontana to finalise the arrangements for DutchBat’s withdrawal with Mladić and Janković.¹⁷³⁹⁶ Mladić refused Karremans’ request for the return of DutchBat’s apprehended military equipment and material.¹⁷³⁹⁷ When Nicolai objected, Mladić threatened that “the entire battalion would walk [out] of the enclave only with their uniforms on”.¹⁷³⁹⁸

5135. As ultimately agreed that morning,¹⁷³⁹⁹ Mladić arrived at the UN Compound at noon.¹⁷⁴⁰⁰ He drove ahead of the DutchBat convoy, which also included MSF local and international staff as well as UNMOs,¹⁷⁴⁰¹ and stopped briefly at the Iron Bridge before crossing the border into Serbia.¹⁷⁴⁰² Nicolai, Karremans, Mladić, and some other officers were present in the vicinity of the bridge, saluting as the vehicles passed.¹⁷⁴⁰³

v. Killings

(A) Near the UN Compound

5136. The Indictment refers to the killing on or about 12 July 1995 of nine Bosnian Muslim men near the UN Compound in Potočari on the Budak side of the main road.¹⁷⁴⁰⁴

5137. On 13 July 1995, DutchBat officers Rutten, Koster, and Van Schaik were patrolling near a blockade created out of four DutchBat APCs in Potočari.¹⁷⁴⁰⁵ There, the three officers heard from their Bosnian Muslim interpreter of rumours concerning men having been killed “near a well, near the road, on the Budak side” of Potočari.¹⁷⁴⁰⁶

5138. Directed by a local woman, the three officers walked up a dirt road towards a small stream until they reached a meadow located behind a house, approximately 80 or 100 metres southwest of the White House.¹⁷⁴⁰⁷ As they entered the meadow, they saw nine men, all about 45 to 55 years old, in civilian clothes, lying on the ground.¹⁷⁴⁰⁸ They had all been shot, with bullet holes from small calibre weapons in their backs at heart level.¹⁷⁴⁰⁹ Rutten could see that the men had been shot recently, as their bodies were still warm, without flies, and with blood still flowing from their wounds.¹⁷⁴¹⁰ According to Rutten, the bodies did not appear to have been moved.¹⁷⁴¹¹ The DutchBat officers concluded that the men were executed.¹⁷⁴¹²

5139. Rutten took a photo of the bodies and told Van Schaik to collect the IDs lying on the grass in front of the bodies.¹⁷⁴¹³ At that moment shots were fired, and Rutten ordered Van Schaik to drop the IDs.¹⁷⁴¹⁴ The three officers then left the area.¹⁷⁴¹⁵

5140. After returning to the UN Compound, Rutten reported the incident to Karremans, who told Rutten that he would report the events up the chain of command.¹⁷⁴¹⁶

5141. The Chamber notes the lack of direct evidence indicating that these victims were Bosnian Muslims, or that they were killed by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces. However, the Chamber finds the circumstances in Potočari in July 1995 convincing in this respect. The Chamber notes the proximity of the killing site to Potočari, the presence of Bosnian Serb Forces there on the day in question, and the conclusion by Rutten that the men had been killed recently and that their bodies had not been moved. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that nine Bosnian Muslim men were killed on 13 July 1995 by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces in a meadow southwest of the White House in Potočari.

(B) The White House

5142. The Indictment refers to the killing on or about 13 July 1995 of one Bosnian Muslim man behind a building near the White House in Potočari.¹⁷⁴¹⁷

¹⁷⁴¹⁷ Indictment, Scheduled Killing Incident E.14.2.

5143. Paul Groenewegen, a DutchBat soldier, testified that on 13 July 1995, while patrolling near the White House, he was drawn to a situation in which four Bosnian Serb soldiers had surrounded an unarmed Bosnian Muslim man and taken him out of the crowd of refugees.¹⁷⁴¹⁸

5144. The soldiers then took the man behind the White House, made him stand facing a wall, and shot him in the head from a distance of about three metres.¹⁷⁴¹⁹ Immediately after being hit by the bullet, the man collapsed.¹⁷⁴²⁰ The soldiers then ran away.¹⁷⁴²¹ Other Bosnian Serb soldiers who were walking around the area saw the incident but continued their activities.¹⁷⁴²² Groenewegen reported the incident the next morning to his senior officer, Lieutenant Schotman.¹⁷⁴²³

5145. The Chamber finds that a Bosnian Muslim man was killed on 13 July 1995 by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces behind the White House in Potočari.

(C) Killings at Luke School near Tišća

5146. The Indictment refers to the killing on or about 13 or 14 July 1995 of 25 Bosnian Muslim men who were detained at the Luke School near Tišća and summarily executed in an isolated nearby pasture.¹⁷⁴²⁴

5147. On 13 July 1995, a convoy of buses filled with Bosnian Muslim women and children, as well as several men, including KDZ070, departed from Potočari.¹⁷⁴²⁵ As convoys had the day before,¹⁷⁴²⁶ this convoy headed towards Bratunac, and then proceeded through Glogova, Kravica, ¹⁷⁴²⁶ On 12 July 1995, Boering, escorted by Kosorić, followed a convoy of buses carrying Bosnian Muslims from Potočari, which ultimately stopped at Luke. Pieter Boering, P3969 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2020–2022; D3562 (Witness statement of Svetozar Kosorić dated 27 February 2013), para. 10; Svetozar Kosorić, T. 38699–38700 (23 May 2013). The Chamber notes that although he acknowledged being present in Potočari and escorting Pieter Boering to Luke, Kosorić claimed that he had nothing to do with the bussing operation. Svetozar Kosorić, T. 38697–38698, 38700 (23 May 2013). The Chamber considers that in light of

Konjević Polje, Nova Kasaba, Milići, Vlasenica, and Tišća.¹⁷⁴²⁷ At Tišća, the Bosnian Muslims were instructed to disembark from the buses and proceed on foot.¹⁷⁴²⁸ Approximately 10 to 15 Bosnian Muslim men aboard the buses, including KDZ070, were separated by VRS soldiers and taken away in the direction of the Luke School,¹⁷⁴²⁹ which was located approximately one kilometre from Tišća near Vlasenica.¹⁷⁴³⁰

5148. In front of the Luke School, the Bosnian Muslim men were ordered to sit down on the grass; most had their hands tied behind their back.¹⁷⁴³¹ Buses came and went, bringing more Bosnian Muslim men.¹⁷⁴³² At the end of the day, a total of 22 men were assembled on the grass.¹⁷⁴³³ According to KDZ070, one detainee was named “Abdulkadir”.¹⁷⁴³⁴ KDZ070 recognised three Bosnian Serb soldiers there: Savo Ristanović, a soldier named Željko,¹⁷⁴³⁵ and a soldier named Stanimir.¹⁷⁴³⁶ Later in the evening, after the men were taken into a classroom in the Luke School,¹⁷⁴³⁷ KDZ070 saw another Bosnian Serb soldier named Spomenko Garić inside the school.¹⁷⁴³⁸

Kosorić’s incentive to minimise any involvement he might have had in the bussing operation, Kosorić’s testimony in this regard does not cast doubt on its finding that Kosorić accompanied the convoy as well as Boering on 12 July. See para. 5104, fn. 17426.

After the soldiers left, at around midnight on 13 July, five or six Bosnian Serb soldiers who had been outside during the day entered the classroom.¹⁷⁴⁴⁴ They asked the detainees to exit the classroom one by one, and board a truck.¹⁷⁴⁴⁵ In total, there were 22 Bosnian Muslim men and seven Bosnian Serb soldiers in the truck.¹⁷⁴⁴⁶

Bosnian Serb soldier who immediately opened fire at him.¹⁷⁴⁵³ However, KDZ070 managed to reach a forest approximately 50 metres away, and eventually came to a brook, where he stayed and hid for the night.¹⁷⁴⁵⁴ KDZ070 wandered around the forest until 27 July 1995, when he met other Bosnian Muslim men, and eventually managed to reach Bosnian Muslim-held territory.¹⁷⁴⁵⁵

KDZ070 identified some of the Bosnian Muslims who were on the truck in Rašića Gaj and then killed: Azem Bečić from the village of Kotjevac; “Rizo”, who worked as an electrician with DutchBat; “Abdulkadir”; and “Hasan”.¹⁷⁴⁵⁶ Between 25 and 29 May 2009, the BiHCMP exhumed a grave in the village of Mršići near Vlasenica, and close to Rašića Gaj.¹⁷⁴⁵⁷ Based upon DNA analysis, 15 individuals were positively identified as persons listed as missing following the take-over of Srebrenica.¹⁷⁴⁵⁸ Nine ligatures were found in the grave.¹⁷⁴⁵⁹

5154. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that approximately 21 Bosnian Muslim men were killed by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces near Tišća on 14 July 1995.

this section, the term “Bratunac area” encompasses the territory delimited by the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road to the north, the Konjević Polje–Milići Road to the west, and the Bratunac–Srebrenica Road to the east.

5156. Bratunac town is located about five kilometres from Potočari and ten kilometres from Srebrenica in a northerly direction.¹⁷⁴⁶¹ As stated above, the Bratunac Brigade was headquartered in Bratunac town in July 1995.¹⁷⁴⁶²

i. Deployment of Bosnian Serb Forces in the Bratunac area

5157. The Chamber recalls that, during the night between 11 and 12 July 1995, the column of Bosnian Muslim men started moving in a northwesterly direction towards Tuzla, trying to cross the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road.¹⁷⁴⁶³

5158. On 11 July, upon receiving information as to the movement of the column, VRS forces, which mostly consisted of Drina Corps units, were ordered to “block the return and withdrawal of Muslim forces to and from Srebrenica and their communicating along the enclave–Kladanj and Olovo axis and back”, by “erecting additional obstructions, carrying out ambush activities and introducing patrols, ensur[ing] control over the territory along the frontline and deep in[to] the defence zones and areas”.¹⁷⁴⁶⁴ That night, Kovač issued an order to urgently dispatch all available guides with police dogs to the Srebrenica sector in order to undertake the task of “mopping up the terrain”.¹⁷⁴⁶⁵

5159. On 12 July, the MUP had information that the ABiH was attempting a breakthrough from Srebrenica in the direction of Tuzla.¹⁷⁴⁶⁶ Similarly, the VRS continued tracking the movement of the column and, by the afternoon, the Drina Corps command and subordinate units knew the 5160. Based on the intelligence received, some of the MUP forces under the command of Borovčanin—including the three platoons of the 2nd Šekovići Detachment, the 1st Company of the Zvornik PJP, the 5th Company of the Zvornik CJB, and the 1st Company of the Jahorina Recruits—were deployed along the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road on 12 July to prevent the column from advancing towards Tuzla.¹⁷⁴⁶⁹ There was also a heavy VRS presence on the road that day.¹⁷⁴⁷⁰ By the evening, two tanks and a Praga—an anti-aircraft gun mounted on an armoured vehicle—as well as a BOV—an all-wheel drive combat armoured vehicle—had also been deployed along the road, in the same area as the 1st Company of the Zvornik PJP.¹⁷⁴⁷¹

5161. Members of the Bosnian Serb Forces remained overnight along the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road.¹⁷⁴⁷² On 13 July, Krstić issued an order tasking Blagojević with supervising, and coordinating with, the units of the Bosnian Serb Forces involved in the search and with submitting a

The Chamber notes that while testifying in his own defence, Krstić asserted that Blagojević lacked the authority to specify tasks of the MUP, but does not consider his testimony to be reliable on this point given that Krstić was Blagojević’s superior. Rather, the Chamber considers that the text of Krstić’s order is clear that Blagojević was responsible for coordinating the tasks of all units mentioned, and recalls that, as described above, MUP units engaged in combat activities were re-subordinated to the commander of the unit in whose area of combat operations they were conducting operations. See para. 229.

Muslim deaths.¹⁷⁴⁸⁰ The attacks against the column continued throughout the night, and into the morning of 13 July.¹⁷⁴⁸¹ Bosnian Serb Forces encircled a large group of men from the column in the area of Konjević Polje–Nova Kasaba–Pobude.¹⁷⁴⁸² At different times, members of the column divided into separate smaller groups after being cut off from the main part of the column.¹⁷⁴⁸³ The Bosnian Serb Forces fired shells against the column and threw hand-grenades into the woods.¹⁷⁴⁸⁴ Hundreds of Bosnian Muslims were killed; the mutilated bodies of those killed lay on the ground.¹⁷⁴⁸⁵ Men cried and screamed, asking for help.¹⁷⁴⁸⁶ The situation was so unbearable that some Bosnian Muslim men committed suicide with guns or hand-grenades.¹⁷⁴⁸⁷

5163. On the morning of 13 July, the Bosnian Serb Forces began calling into the woods with a loudspeaker for the members of the column to surrender, telling them that they would be safe, and promising to comply with the Geneva Conventions.¹⁷⁴⁸⁸ However, if they did not surrender, they 5165. Despite the capture of thousands of Bosnian Muslims from the column on 13 July, it was reported that approximately 3,000 to 4,000 men succeeded in crossing the Bratunac–Konjević Polje and Konjević Polje–Milići Roads, advancing towards Cerska.¹⁷⁴⁹⁶

iii. Detention of Bosnian Muslim men from the column

5166. On the morning of 13 July, Bosnian Serb Forces obtained information that large numbers of Bosnian Muslim men were either being captured or were surrendering along the road.¹⁷⁴⁹⁷ An intercepted conversation from 13 July at 5:30 p.m. refers to about 6,000 Bosnian Muslims being detained at three locations, with roughly 1,500 to 2,000 men at each of them.¹⁷⁴⁹⁸ According to this intercepted conversation, one of the locations was “the one up there where the checkpoint at the intersection is”, which the Chamber finds to be the Konjević Polje intersection; another one was “the one halfway between the checkpoint and the loading place”, which the Chamber concludes to be the Sandići Meadow, and the third one was expressly referred to as the Kasaba stadium, which the Chamber finds to be the Nova Kasaba football field.¹⁷⁴⁹⁹

5167. The 6th Company of the Zvornik PJP was stationed at the check-point in Konjević Polje from 4 to 16 July 1995.¹⁷⁵⁰⁰ It was tasked with providing assistance to the Bratunac SJB, which had control over the check-point, as well as with securing the Nova Kasaba–Konjević Polje Road

5168. On the morning of 13 July, approximately 30 Bosnian Muslim men from the column—including four or five wounded—surrendered to members of the Bosnian Serb Forces who were dressed in dark blue camouflage uniforms, near Konjević Polje.¹⁷⁵⁰⁴ Upon reaching the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road, this group came across a group of 300 other Bosnian Muslims—including approximately 20 wounded—who had previously surrendered.¹⁷⁵⁰⁵ The men were ordered to place the wounded at the intersection, and to hand over all their belongings, including their ID papers.¹⁷⁵⁰⁶ They were then taken to a warehouse at the Konjević Polje intersection, where they were given water, although it was insufficient.¹⁷⁵⁰⁷ After approximately 20 minutes, the men were placed in three or four trucks covered in canvas, which left in the direction of Nova Kasaba.¹⁷⁵⁰⁸

5170. Momir Nikolić arrived at the Konjević Polje intersection after noon on 13 July and saw men detained at various locations in the vicinity.¹⁷⁵¹² Approximately 45 minutes later, Mladić arrived with his security detail and addressed some of the detainees briefly, reassuring them that everything would be fine and that they would be transferred to where they wanted to go.¹⁷⁵¹³ Nikolić then asked Mladić what was going to happen to the detainees; Mladić did not answer but made a gesture by sweeping at his waist with his right hand from left to right.¹⁷⁵¹⁴ Mladić then smiled, got in his car, and left.¹⁷⁵¹⁵

5171. After Mladić left, Momir Nikolić drove to Bratunac to fetch Rešid Sinanović—the former chief of the SUP in Bratunac—for interrogation.¹⁷⁵¹⁶ Sinanović had been detained at the communications house of the 6th Company of the Zvornik PJP together with KDZ065.¹⁷⁵¹⁷ Later, Nikolić, Mirko Janković, and Mile Petrović left Bratunac towards Konjević Polje in a white APC captured from DutchBat.¹⁷⁵¹⁸ They drove along the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road and Petrović sat on top of the APC with a megaphone calling for Bosnian Muslims to surrender.¹⁷⁵¹⁹ After passing Sandići Meadow, six Bosnian Muslims surrendered to them; those six men were taken to Konjević Polje on the APC.¹⁷⁵²⁰ After arriving at Konjević Polje, Nikolić asked Petrović to take the six

Bosnian Muslim men to join the group of between 250 and 300 detainees already held at the intersection.¹⁷⁵²¹ Nikolić then went to a burned house about 50 metres away from the intersection, and heard two bursts of gunshots coming from a very short distance.¹⁷⁵²² A few minutes later, Petrović appeared at the house and told Nikolić: “Boss, today I just took revenge for my brother [...] I’ve killed them”.¹⁷⁵²³ Petrović told Nikolić that he had executed the six Bosnian Muslim men down a riverbank behind a yellow building.¹⁷⁵²⁴ Nikolić left the Konjević Polje intersection for Bratunac in the APC together with Janković, approximately 20 minutes later.¹⁷⁵²⁵

(B) Sandići Meadow

5173. The Sandići Meadow, a large open plot of land on the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road, was approximately one kilometre from the Kravica Warehouse in the direction of Konjević Polje; it was situated opposite from a burnt-out house.¹⁷⁵²⁹

5174. Throughout the day on 13 July 1995, Bosnian Muslim men from the column who had either surrendered or been captured after emerging from the woods, were assembled near the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road.¹⁷⁵³⁰ There, members of the Bosnian Serb Forces forced the detainees to drop their belongings into large piles and to hand over their valuables.¹⁷⁵³¹ The men were then forced to cross the road and walk towards the Sandići Meadow, where they were guarded by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷⁵³²

5175. Several units of the Bosnian Serb Forces who were under the command of Borovčanin, including the 2nd Šekovići Detachment, and more specifically, the 3rd Skelani Platoon; the 1st Company of the Zvornik PJP, and the Jahorina Recruits, were present in and around the Sandići Meadow on 13 July.¹⁷⁵³³ Bosnian Serb armoured vehicles, including at least one tank, a Praga, and a BOV, as well as a UN APC, were also seen in and around the meadow.¹⁷⁵³⁴ The barrel of a tank

5177. Some of the detainees at the meadow were either singled out, taken away, and did not return, or were mistreated by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷⁵⁴² No medical treatment was provided for those who had been previously wounded or injured.¹⁷⁵⁴³ Further, during the course of the day, the wounded and injured were taken to a house close to the meadow and later executed.¹⁷⁵⁴⁴ After a change of guards, the detainees were forced to lie down on their stomachs and put their hands above their necks for long periods of time, and to applaud and say, in unison: “Long live the king, long live Serbia”.¹⁷⁵⁴⁵

5178. Later in the afternoon, the women and children, and about a dozen young boys who appeared to be under age, were allowed to leave onboard buses already full of women and children which had stopped at the Sandići Meadow on their way from Potočari to Bosnian Muslim-held territory.¹⁷⁵⁴⁶ Members of the Bosnian Serb Forces stopped those who looked old enough to be capable of carrying a weapon from boarding the buses.¹⁷⁵⁴⁷

Nova Kasaba football field, there could not have been more than 700 Bosnian Muslim men detained there on 13 July.¹⁷⁵⁵⁸ Based upon all the evidence before it, the Chamber rejects the Accused's calculation, and is satisfied that between 1,500 and 3,000 Bosnian Muslim men and boys were detained at the football field that day.¹⁷⁵⁵⁹

Between 15 to 20 members of the Bosnian Serb Forces awaited the detainees at the football field.¹⁷⁵⁶⁰ They forced the detainees to forfeit their valuables and belongings at the entrance.¹⁷⁵⁶¹ The detainees were guarded by members of the 65th Protection Regiment's MP Battalion, dressed in camouflage uniforms, who were present across the entire field.¹⁷⁵⁶² As the numbers of detainees at the football field grew, the Bosnian Serb Forces guarding them required reinforcements.¹⁷⁵⁶³ The soldiers pointed their weapons and swore at the detainees, who were sitting in rows.¹⁷⁵⁶⁴ The detainees were not given food or water.¹⁷⁵⁶⁵

¹⁷⁵⁶⁵ KDZ045, P5910 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 2955. Savčić testified that Malinić called the Milići hospital so that a medical team was sent to the field to provide first aid to those detainees who had been

5184. At 3:10 p.m., a document entitled “Procedure for [the] treatment of war prisoners” was sent under the name of Milomir Savčić, the commander of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment, to the commander of the regiment’s MP Battalion, which was then engaged in the guarding of Bosnian Muslim men detained at Nova Kasaba.¹⁷⁵⁶⁶ The document conveyed Tolimir’s proposals: (i) to prohibit access to the detainees by all “unauthorised” individuals, as well as filming and photographing of such detainees, (ii) to prohibit traffic for all UN vehicles between Zvornik and Vlasenica until further notice, and (iii) for the commander of the MP Battalion to take measures to remove the detainees from the main road and place them “somewhere indoors or in the area protected from sighting from the ground or air”.¹⁷⁵⁶⁷ That evening, Mladić issued an order adopting Tolimir’s proposals to restrict access to the area.¹⁷⁵⁶⁸

5185. Salapura and Popović were present at the Nova Kasaba football field in the afternoon on 13 July.¹⁷⁵⁶⁹ Zvonko Bajagić testified that when he drove by the football field that day one of the two men accompanying him took photos of those present; Popović, who was standing in front of the field, told the men they should not take photos and that the camera should be taken or the film exposed to light so that the photos would be lost.¹⁷⁵⁷⁰ wounded, and that, when the medical team arrived, the detainees were given first aid, food, and water. D3918 (Witness statement of Milomir Savčić, dated 21 July 2013), para. 54. However, in light of other credible evidence before it, the Chamber does not accept Savčić’s testimony on this point.

¹⁷⁵⁶⁶ P168 (Order of Motorised Protection Regiment, 13 July 1995). The Chamber notes that Savčić testified that he did not recall having forwarded the document containing Tolimir’s proposals, but allowed for the possibility that he sent it yet did not recall doing so. D3918 (Witness statement of Milomir Savčić, dated 21 July 2013), paras. 60, 67; Milomir Savčić, T. 42289–42290 (31 July 2013). Savčić also asserted that there were certain irregularities in the form of the document, namely that it was addressed from an IKM of the 65th Motorised Protection Regiment in Borike, which was not a “formal forward command post” of that unit, that the document was not signed, and that Malinić had later told him that he had not received the document. D3918 (Witness statement of Milomir Savčić, dated 21 July 2013), paras. 56–57, 66; Milomir Savčić, T. 42342 (31 July 2013). The Chamber recalls, however, that Danko Gojković, a teleprinter operator from the Rogatica Brigade, testified that when the document was brought to him, he transmitted the document via teleprinter. Danko Gojković, P346 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 10716–10717. Gojković explained that the IKM at Borike lacked a teleprinter and thus could not send such a document directly; instead, documents that needed to be sent by telegram were routed through the teleprinter office at the Rogatica Brigade Command, which was located approximately 18 kilometres away from Borike; confirmation of the sending was then transmitted to the IKM by phone. P248 (Danko Gojković’s interview with OTP), pp. 24–25; Danko Gojković, P346 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 10718–10719. The Chamber therefore does not consider Savčić’s testimony to raise any doubt regarding the authenticity of P168. See also Milomir Savčić, T. 42291 (31 July 2013) (accepting Gojković’s testimony about having sent the document via teleprinter); P4671 (Intercept of conversation between two unidentified persons at 2:05 p.m., 13 July 1995) (referring to a telegram that was to be sent to someone at the football pitch).

5186. Also in the afternoon, Mladić arrived at the football field in an olive green APC.¹⁷⁵⁷¹ He insulted and cursed the detainees, and told them that there were special units with dogs covering every inch of the forest to ensure that nobody would be able to cross the Nova Kasaba–Konjević Polje Road.¹⁷⁵⁷² Mladić also told the detainees that they would be given food and water after which “we’ll see whether we send you to Krajina, to Fikret Abdić, or [...] to the Batkovići camp.”¹⁷⁵⁷³ At that point, a detainee stood up; soldiers first kicked and hit him with rifle butts before shooting and killing him with a pistol.¹⁷⁵⁷⁴ Mladić witnessed this incident but did not respond in any way.¹⁷⁵⁷⁵ Soon after, Mladić left the football field in the direction of Konjević Polje.¹⁷⁵⁷⁶

5187. After Mladić’s departure, the detainees were ordered into trucks and buses, and were transported to either Bratunac town or Kravica in the early evening, under the escort of members of the MP Battalion.¹⁷⁵⁷⁷ When the detainees tried to pick up their bags from the entrance of the field, they were told that they would not need them any longer.¹⁷⁵⁷⁸

5188. A group of about 13 DutchBat officers travelling back from Kladanj after having escorted a convoy of buses from Potočari was blocked at the Nova Kasaba football field on 13 July by members of the 65th Protection Regiment’s MP Battalion.¹⁷⁵⁷⁹ The officers’ cars and equipment

D2197 (Intercept of report sent by Ljubo Beara, 13 July 1995). However, the Chamber received evidence that this selection did not occur. See Richard Butler, T. 27733 (20 April 2012).

iv. Killings

(A) Jadar River

5189. The Indictment refers to the killing on 13 July 1995 of about 15 Bosnian Muslim men in an isolated area on the bank of the Jadar River.¹⁷⁵⁸⁵

5190. The Chamber notes that it took notice of Adjudicated Facts 1689 to 1691 in relation to the killings at the Jadar River, which read as follows:

¹⁷⁵⁸⁰ Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2757–2760.

¹⁷⁵⁸¹ Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2757–2760, 2784–2789, 2799–2800, 2824.

¹⁷⁵⁸² Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2766–2767. Egbers testified that while at Nova Kasaba, he saw between 20 and 30 Bosnian Muslim men and boys—a couple of whom were injured—being detained in a small building located on the school grounds, in front of the headquarters. Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2774–2775. Throughout the evening of 13 July, Egbers heard shots in the environs of the headquarters; however, the next morning, he saw that the detainees were still alive. Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2775. Two of the detainees were subsequently taken outside of the building to be used as human shields against Bosnian Muslims firing at the headquarters. Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2775.

¹⁷⁵⁸³ Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2776, 2778–2779, 2824. The Chamber notes that Beara denied being present in Bratunac and Zvornik on 13 and 14 July 1995, and, as he did during the Popović et al. case, maintained that he was in Belgrade during those days. See Ljubiša Beara, T. 45803 (22 January 2014). However, in light of the overwhelming evidence before the Chamber establishing Beara's ubiquitous presence in the Zvornik area as set out further below, as well as the fact that such presence bore directly upon Beara's criminal responsibility for the events discussed below as established in the Popović et al. case, which was still pending before the Appeals Chamber at the time that Beara testified, the Chamber does not find Beara's testimony regarding his whereabouts on 13 and 14 July credible. Egbers described the man he identified as Beara "as a tall man with grey hair but with an atmosphere of a colonel. He was in a camouflage suit wearing a colonel's ranking". Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2776. The Chamber notes that Egbers's identification of Beara was extensively challenged during cross-examination in the Popović et al. case. See Vincentius Egbers, P331 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 2819–2831. In light of the evidence before the Chamber about the presence of Beara in Bratunac in the morning of 14 July 1995, the Chamber is satisfied that the individual referred to by Egbers was indeed Beara. See Srblislav Davidović, T. 24364 (9 February 2012); Srblislav Davidović, P4100 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Popović et al.), T. 9230–9231; D3993 (Witness statement of Vujadin Popović dated 2 November 2013), paras. 42, 44.

¹⁷⁵⁸⁵ Indictment, Scheduled Killing Incident E.1.1. In its Final Brief, the Prosecution argues that the killings at the Jadar River represent the "first known organised and systematic execution of Muslim men from Srebrenica". Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix D, para. 49.

On the morning of 13 July, 16 Bosnian Muslim men who had been captured from the column were transported by bus from the warehouse in Konjević Polje to the Jadar River bank. Amongst them was a 15 year old boy.¹⁷⁵⁸⁶

After the men got off the bus they were lined up alongside the river. Four Serb soldiers who had escorted them in the bus opened fire with their automatic rifles.¹⁷⁵⁸⁷

One of the Bosnian Muslim men survived as he threw himself into the river after he was hit by a bullet.¹⁷⁵⁸⁸

5191. The Chamber admitted the transcript of KDZ065's testimony in the Krstić and Popović et al. cases pursuant to Rule 92 bis. KDZ065 testified that he had been moving with the column of men fleeing Srebrenica and, at approximately 3 a.m. on 13 July 1995, surrendered to policemen wearing "slightly multicoloured" dark blue uniforms in the area of Konjević Polje.¹⁷⁵⁸⁹ After being deprived of his possessions, KDZ065 was taken to a small shed located in an area in front of the elementary school by KW558.¹⁷⁵⁹⁰ A "couple" of soldiers wearing camouflage uniforms were at the shed guarding two other Bosnian Muslim men whom KDZ065 knew and who had "traces of blows on them".¹⁷⁵⁹¹ At around 7 or 9 a.m., KW558 led the three men to be questioned to another house across a meadow.¹⁷⁵⁹² At the house, four men wearing military camouflage uniforms were sitting around a table, drinking alcohol.¹⁷⁵⁹³ Two of them questioned KDZ065 and the other detainees.¹⁷⁵⁹⁴

5192. After a “short while”, the detainees were taken by KW558 to the communications house of the 6th Company of the Zvornik PJP and put in a room.¹⁷⁵⁹⁵ A 14–15 year old boy was also brought to the room, questioned, and given some food.¹⁷⁵⁹⁶ After “a certain amount of time had passed”, Rešid Sinanović, Hasan Salihović—a policeman in Srebrenica—, and a third man, were also brought to the room.¹⁷⁵⁹⁷ A Bosnian Serb man wearing civilian clothes named Mirko¹⁷⁵⁹⁸ then arrived and said that four of the detainees—including KDZ065 and the boy—should be taken away, while Sinanović and Salihović should stay.¹⁷⁵⁹⁹

5193. After leaving the communications house, Mirko took the three Bosnian Muslim men and the boy to a warehouse situated on the banks of the Jadar River, at the cross-roads of Konjević Polje and the bridge leading to Nova Kasaba, which had been an “agricultural chemist” before the war.¹⁷⁶⁰⁰ Upon arriving at the warehouse, KDZ065 saw yet another Bosnian Serb policeman he knew, Nenad Deronjić, who was with four “colleagues” wearing “military camouflage” uniforms.¹⁷⁶⁰¹ The three men and the boy were taken to a room where 12 other Bosnian Muslim men were being kept in their underpants.¹⁷⁶⁰² The “soldiers”, who were carrying automatic weapons, started shouting at the three men and the boy to take their clothes off, which they did; thereafter the men and the boy were lined up against a wall and beaten with “all kinds of things”.¹⁷⁶⁰³ A man aged approximately 18 to 20 wearing short blue pants with a belt and a leather holster containing a pistol arrived and asked Nenad Deronjić why he had made the men remove their clothes since they were to be exchanged.¹⁷⁶⁰⁴ Deronjić rejected the prospect of an exchange, saying that he would “kill them all”; the man in short pants said that if anyone was going to kill them, it would be him.¹⁷⁶⁰⁵ Later, a thin man with a moustache named “Brko” arrived and told the three men and the boy to put their clothes back on; they were then beaten again.¹⁷⁶⁰⁶

5194. Some time before noon,¹⁷⁶⁰⁷ KDZ065 and the 15 other detainees—including the boy—were put on a bus, and ordered not to sit down.¹⁷⁶⁰⁸ Four of the uniformed men who had beaten the detainees in the warehouse, including Nenad Deronjić and Brko, were on the bus and carried automatic weapons.¹⁷⁶⁰⁹ The bus then drove towards Zvornik and travelled for about two kilometres before stopping again at the side of the road.¹⁷⁶¹⁰

River.¹⁷⁶¹¹ Brko then ordered the men to get into the river bed.¹⁷⁶¹² KDZ065 was positioned third from the left; he recalled waiting for his life to end in silence for approximately 30 seconds while images of his children appeared in his mind.¹⁷⁶¹³ When the man next to KDZ065 was shot, KDZ065 saw the bullet come through the man's shirt and hit KDZ065 on his left hip.¹⁷⁶¹⁴ He threw himself facedown into the river and held his breath for as long as he could.¹⁷⁶¹⁵ When KDZ065 raised his head to take a breath, one of the members of the Bosnian Serb Forces noticed and began firing at him; KDZ065 felt the bullets whizzing around his head.¹⁷⁶¹⁶ KDZ065 ducked under the water again and pulled himself to the centre of the river but the leather jacket he was wearing puffed up.¹⁷⁶¹⁷ The current began to carry him down the river, and when he hit his head on a rock, he turned onto his back.¹⁷⁶¹⁸ The members of the Bosnian Serb Forces fired again at KDZ065 who spread out his arms and let the current carry him, until structures began to shelter him from the soldiers' fire.¹⁷⁶¹⁹

5196. Later, KDZ065 took hold of a rock, got out of the river, and dressed the wound on his left side with torn-up bits of his shirt.¹⁷⁶²⁰ He was bleeding heavily, but was able to walk, so he continued through meadows, woods, and villages.¹⁷⁶²¹ KDZ065 came across ten men coming from Srebrenica and continued with them; at some point, they joined the column of Bosnian Muslim men proceeding in the direction of Nezuk.¹⁷⁶²²

5198. The Prosecution asserts that “[a] significant body of reliable evidence corroborates KDZ065’s evidence”.¹⁷⁶²³ On the other hand, the Accused argues that the evidence on the Jadar River killings comes from only one witness, namely KDZ065, whose testimony was admitted pursuant to Rule 92 bis, and alleges that untested evidence, in and of itself, cannot lead to a conviction.¹⁷⁶²⁴ Additionally, the Accused claims that KDZ065’s evidence is unsupported by any physical or forensic evidence and is contradicted by the testimony of the three persons who KDZ065 named as being involved in those events.¹⁷⁶²⁵

5199. As regards the events at the communications house, the Chamber notes first that, contrary to KDZ065’s evidence, KW558 testified that he was at the communications house on 13 July when Mirko Perić and Duško Nesković—a police officer from Bratunac—arrived with Sinanović and Salihović;¹⁷⁶²⁶ Sinanović and Salihović stayed at the house for about an hour, until taken away by Momir Nikolić and “another man”—both of whom were wearing dark green military uniforms—in the direction of Bratunac.¹⁷⁶²⁷ KW558 could not remember whether any other Bosnian Muslim men were brought to, or kept in, the communications house on that day.¹⁷⁶²⁸ Nenad Deronjić testified that he heard from KW558 that KW558 was in Konjević Polje with Salihović, and that he gave Salihović some food and cigarettes until someone came and took Salihović away.¹⁷⁶²⁹ Perić testified that, after capturing Sinanović near the Konjević Polje check-point, he brought him to the communications house where he met KW558,¹⁷⁶³⁰ who instructed Perić to leave Sinanović in a ¹⁷⁶³⁰ D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), paras. 19–20. Perić testified that he did not escort any other detainees that day other than Sinanović and confirmed that he alone had transported Sinanović to the communications house; he further denied knowing who Duško Nesković was. D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 28; Mirko Perić, T. 40789–40790, 40797 (3 July 2013).

room, where he saw two other individuals being held.¹⁷⁶³¹ According to Perić, he then returned to the check-point where he later met with Momir Nikolić and told him where he had earlier taken Sinanović.¹⁷⁶³² KW582 also stated that, while in Konjević Polje on 13 July, Momir Nikolić told him that he had taken “someone who had worked in the MUP earlier on” from Konjević Polje to Bratunac; KW582 understood this person to be Sinanović though he never saw Nikolić with Sinanović.¹⁷⁶³³ Momir Nikolić confirmed that while at Konjević Polje on 13 July, he was informed by members of the police that Sinanović had been captured, so he brought Sinanović to Bratunac to be interrogated by Zlatan Čelanović.¹⁷⁶³⁴ Čelanović—who worked as a “desk officer” in the Bratunac Brigade in July 1995—confirmed that Momir Nikolić brought Sinanović to his office on 13 July to be interrogated; Sinanović was questioned for about an hour and was then transferred to the Vuk Karadžić School in Bratunac, together with other Bosnian Muslim detainees.¹⁷⁶³⁵ Srbislav Davidović testified that after being informed on 13 July that Sinanović was in custody at Čelanović’s office, as a suspected war criminal, he requested to see Sinanović with whom he met for about an hour.¹⁷⁶³⁶ After the meeting took place, Čelanović informed Davidović that Sinanović would be transferred to the Vuk Karadžić School in the afternoon.¹⁷⁶³⁷

5200. The Chamber finds that Deronjić, Perić, and KW558 were contradicted with respect to various portions of their evidence which was also marked by evasiveness and a lack of forthrightness. The Chamber further notes that KW558 and Perić contradicted each other as to the events which took place in the communications house. Consequently, the Chamber finds that the evidence of these three witnesses is not reliable, and does not undermine the evidence of KDZ065. Thus, while the evidence provided by the various witnesses who were present at the communications house is not fully consistent, the Chamber is satisfied with KDZ065’s recollection ¹⁷⁶³¹ Perić clarified that when taking Sinanović to the room inside the communications house he saw two other individuals; however, since he did not enter the room, he did not know their identity; D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), paras. 19–20; Mirko Perić, T. 40790 (private session), 40792–40793 (3 July 2013).

of the events that took place there, particularly in light of his evidence concerning the presence of Sinanović and Salihović, which was corroborated by the other witnesses whose evidence was discussed in the previous paragraph.¹⁷⁶³⁸

5201. Next, as regards KDZ065's identification of Nenad Deronjić as one of the perpetrators of the killings at the Jadar River, Deronjić testified that despite being deployed with colleagues from the Bratunac SJB at the check-point in Konjević Polje on 11 July 1995, he left the check-point on 12 July for Srebrenica as part of the 2nd Company of the Zvornik PJP, where he stayed for seven or eight days.¹⁷⁶³⁹ The Chamber received evidence as to the whereabouts of Deronjić in July 1995, aimed at proving that he was only deployed to Srebrenica on 21 July and that until then he was deployed with the 2nd Company of the Zvornik PJP, which was engaged in combat activities in the area of Konjević Polje from 12 to 20 July.¹⁷⁶⁴⁰ However, Deronjić reiterated that he never moved

¹⁷⁶³⁸ See paras. 5192, 5199. In relation to Sinanović's whereabouts after 13 July 1995, the Chamber received evidence that, in the morning of 14 July, Sinanović was transferred from the Vuk Karadžić School to Zvornik, as part of the convoy of detainees who had been held in various locations within Bratunac the night before. Momir Nikolić, T. 24659–24660 (14 February 2012). See paras. 5313, 5316. On 15 July, Sinanović was found wounded, and taken to the sanatorium in Banja Koviljača and, subsequently, to the Loznica Hospital, after having survived—and escaped from—a mass execution near Kozluk. P4393 (Witness statement of Robert Block dated 14 February 2012), paras. 37–41; P4402 (15th Border Battalion report, 16 July 1995); P4403 (VJ General Staff report, 16 July 1995), p. 2; P246 (Letter including medical register from Banja Koviljača, 5 March 2003); P4401 (Article from The Independent entitled “River Killings’ Shed Light on Scale of Horror after the Fall of Srebrenica”, 25 July 1995). See also Richard Butler, T. 27876 (23 April 2012); Robert Block, T. 24920, 24934–24936 (21 February 2012). According to Momir Nikolić, a doctor from the Loznica Hospital recognised Sinanović and informed the Bratunac SJB of his whereabouts, which in turn informed the police in Zvornik; members of the civilian police in Zvornik then took Sinanović from the hospital. Momir Nikolić, T. 24660 (14 February 2012). The Chamber also received evidence that on 15 July, the Zvornik Brigade was informed of Sinanović's whereabouts. P4585 (Zvornik Brigade Duty Officers logbook, 29 May–27 July 1995), e-court p. 72. While the Chamber received no evidence as to what happened to Sinanović after he was removed from the Loznica Hospital, his remains were identified from remains found in the Čančari Road 4 gravesite, which was linked to the Branjevo Military Farm primary gravesite. from the centre of Srebrenica during the nine days he was deployed there.¹⁷⁶⁴¹ KW558 corroborated Deronjić's testimony by stating that, while Deronjić was "occasionally" in Konjević Polje in early July 1995, he had left for Srebrenica by 13 July.¹⁷⁶⁴² Perić also testified that he never saw Deronjić at the check-point in Konjević Polje during the three or four days he was deployed there around 13 July.¹⁷⁶⁴³ Similarly, KW582 testified that he did not remember seeing Deronjić on 13 July while at the Konjević Polje intersection.¹⁷⁶⁴⁴ Contrary to the evidence described in this paragraph, Momir Nikolić testified to having seen both Nenad Deronjić and Mirko Perić at the intersection on 13 July 1995.¹⁷⁶⁴⁵

5202. The Accused claims that the evidence of KDZ065 and Momir Nikolić to having seen Nenad Deronjić in Konjević Polje on 13 July has been contradicted by the evidence of Deronjić himself, plus that of Perić, KW558, and KW582, as well as by D3761.¹⁷⁶⁴⁶ On the other hand, the Prosecution claims that Deronjić is not a credible witness and has been contradicted by a number of documents, including D3761, which show that members of Deronjić's unit were on combat duty on 13 July in Konjević Polje, and that Deronjić himself was on duty that day.¹⁷⁶⁴⁷ Furthermore, according to the Prosecution, none of the evidence presented by KW558, KW582 or Perić contradicts or undermines KDZ065's identification of Deronjić first, because they simply did not see Deronjić on 13 July, and second, because none of them testified to being present at the locations where KDZ065 saw Deronjić.¹⁷⁶⁴⁸

5203. The Chamber has already found that the evidence of Deronjić, Perić, and KW558 regarding the events at the communications house cannot be relied upon. The Chamber considers that the

The Chamber notes the Accused's claim that this corroboration by Momir Nikolić is yet another instance of Nikolić's intentional effort to corroborate the Prosecution's case as a whole, regardless of its accuracy. same logic also applies to their evidence on the presence of Deronjić at Konjević Polje on 13 July and as such, their evidence has not undermined or successfully challenged that of KDZ065. While the Chamber found that KW582's testimony was sufficiently reliable and probative for the purpose of admission under Rule 92 quater,¹⁷⁶⁴⁹ it also finds that the portions thereof which are relevant to this particular issue have not successfully challenged the evidence of KDZ065.

5204. In considering the evidence of KDZ065 on its own, the Chamber notes that KDZ065 first identified Deronjić as one of the perpetrators of the killings at the Jadar River in his 1999 statement, although he had not done so in his earlier statements.¹⁷⁶⁵⁰ While the Chamber does not find KDZ065's explanations regarding this omission wholly satisfactory, it considers that it neither affects his credibility, nor renders his testimony unreliable as a whole. More specifically, the Chamber accepts KDZ065's identification of Deronjić as one of the perpetrators of the killings. As stated above, KDZ065's evidence that he saw Sinanović and Salihović at the communications house was confirmed by various other witnesses.¹⁷⁶⁵¹ Furthermore, the Chamber has heard evidence as to the presence of Bosnian Serb Forces at the Konjević Polje intersection on 13 July, which is consistent with KDZ065's story.¹⁷⁶⁵² The Chamber has also found no indicia within KDZ065's evidence that would indicate that he falsely identified and incriminated Deronjić. Thus, despite the contradictory evidence received by the Chamber discussed in paragraph 5200 above, and in particular in light of Momir Nikolić's corroboration of KDZ065's identification of Deronjić, the Chamber finds that Nenad Deronjić was present at the Konjević Polje intersection on 13 July 1995, and participated in the killings at the Jadar River.

5205. For the reasons set out above, the Chamber finds that on 13 July 1995, members of the Bosnian Serb Forces—including at least one member of the Bratunac SJB, Nenad Deronjić—executed 15 Bosnian Muslim men in an isolated area on the bank of the Jadar River. The Chamber further finds that a 14 or 15-year old boy was among the 15 Bosnian Muslim males killed.

from Konjević Polje.¹⁷⁶⁵³ In its pre-trial brief, the Prosecution clarified its position that this execution did not take place on 13 July but at some point between 13 and 17 July 1995.¹⁷⁶⁵⁴ In its final brief, however, the Prosecution asserts that the execution took place on or around 17 July.¹⁷⁶⁵⁵

(2) KDZ066

5207. The Chamber admitted the transcript of KDZ066's testimony in the Krstić case pursuant to Rule 92 bis. KDZ066 testified that on 13 July 1995, he and eight others fleeing from Srebrenica were on a hill between the villages of Krke and Jelah, around 500 metres from the Konjević Polje–Nova Kasaba Road.¹⁷⁶⁵⁶ Around 2 p.m., while looking towards the Cerska Valley,¹⁷⁶⁵⁷ KDZ066 saw buses—which he and the others assumed were carrying women and children—going from Konjević Polje in the direction of Nova Kasaba.¹⁷⁶⁵⁸ KDZ066 then saw another three buses¹⁷⁶⁵⁹—which he again assumed were full of people¹⁷⁶⁶⁰—leaving Konjević Polje, which turned right off the asphalt road towards Kamenica, crossed a bridge across the Jadar River, and moved uphill in the direction of Cerska.¹⁷⁶⁶¹ The buses were followed by an APC “and two other trek vehicles”.¹⁷⁶⁶² One of the vehicles was green and was carrying soldiers in camouflage uniforms.¹⁷⁶⁶³ At some point, all the vehicles turned around a curve into the woods and KDZ066 lost sight of them.¹⁷⁶⁶⁴

5208. According to KDZ066, 5 to 15 minutes later, a yellow excavator, with a bucket or a shovel, drove in the same direction.¹⁷⁶⁶⁵ At the same time, shooting began first with small arms fire, but the intensity then increased as machine gun fire echoed along the valley.¹⁷⁶⁶⁶ KDZ066 described the scene as: “very loud [...] there was a lot of noise, very heavy shell fire could be heard”.¹⁷⁶⁶⁷ The shooting lasted 15 to 30 minutes.¹⁷⁶⁶⁸ When it stopped, the buses—which according to KDZ066 were now empty—drove back followed by the APC, and took the same road in the direction of Konjević Polje.¹⁷⁶⁶⁹ The excavator drove back along the same road roughly 30 minutes later.¹⁷⁶⁷⁰

5209. KDZ066 testified that he remained in the area in and around Cerska until September 1995.¹⁷⁶⁷¹ Some time in September, KDZ066 and some individuals he had encountered decided to try to find the site of the shooting on 13 July, by following the road that goes from Cerska to the Konjević Polje intersection.¹⁷⁶⁷² The group eventually found the gravesite on the left side of the road, “with freshly dug earth over it”.¹⁷⁶⁷³ Its crater was approximately 25 steps long and 10 steps wide.¹⁷⁶⁷⁴ KDZ066 could tell it was the grave by the stench.¹⁷⁶⁷⁵ Across the road from the gravesite, on the right side of the road, KDZ066 saw the place where the excavator had dug up the earth, as well as traces of the excavator’s wheels,¹⁷⁶⁷⁶ but did not see any bones or bodies.¹⁷⁶⁷⁷

5210. The Chamber also heard from Jean-René Ruez that the Cerska gravesite was discovered in 1996 using, among others, on information provided by KDZ066.¹⁷⁶⁷⁸ Having found the area, Ruez ¹⁷⁶⁷¹ The Chamber notes that the timeline at this point in KDZ066’s evidence is not very clear, but it appears that KDZ066 spent more than four months in the area in and around Cerska, moving through various locations and villages, before crossing into Bosnian Muslim-held territory around mid-November. See KDZ066, P337 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 2743, 2748–2750, 2759, 2774–2777, 2788.

¹⁷⁶⁷⁸ Ruez explained that while visiting the area with his team in 1996 and driving along the valley—and filming the entire journey—based on the information provided by KDZ066, they could not find the gravesite; upon his return, Ruez showed the video to a second eye-witness who was then able to point Ruez and his team to a specific area; it was only during a second trip that Ruez and his team followed the exact location provided by the second eye-witness, probed it, and found the gravesite. Jean-René Ruez, T. 23743–23744, 23746–23749 (27 January 2012). Ruez explained that the second witness told him that when he was crossing barefoot the area during the night on 13 July, he walked on “sticky material that he identified as being a pool of blood” and continued his way towards the top of the valley. 5211. For reasons explained in detail in the following paragraphs, the Chamber finds KDZ066's account of events problematic, casting serious doubts as to his credibility, and is thus not satisfied with the reliability of large portions of his evidence.

5212. First, during his testimony in the Krstić case, KDZ066 testified that the killings in the Cerska Valley took place on 13 July 1995.¹⁷⁶⁸⁰ KDZ066 was unequivocal in this assertion despite the fact that prior to that testimony, he had given two statements where he first claimed that the killings at the Cerska Valley took place on 22 July, and then contended that they occurred on 14 July.¹⁷⁶⁸¹ As stated above, KDZ066 testified that, while on a hill, he saw buses which he and the others "assumed" were carrying women and children going from Konjević Polje in the direction of Nova Kasaba and towards the "free territory".¹⁷⁶⁸² Considering that women and children were indeed being bussed from Potočari on that date,¹⁷⁶⁸³ KDZ066's assumption would lend support to his claim that the events he described took place on 13 July 1995.

5213. Throughout the proceedings, however, the Accused challenged the date provided by KDZ066 as being the date of the killings at the Cerska Valley.¹⁷⁶⁸⁴ While Ruez corroborated KDZ066's evidence regarding the date, the Chamber notes that his assertion was solely based upon KDZ066's account of events.¹⁷⁶⁸⁵ However, both Dušan Janc and Richard Butler conceded that ¹⁷⁶⁸¹ The Chamber notes that KDZ066 gave a first statement to the BiH Ministry of the Interior on 22 November 1995—only a few days after he claimed to have reached Bosnian Muslim-held territory—and that he also gave a second one to a Prosecution investigator a few months later, namely on 17 January 1996. KDZ066, P337 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 2772–2774. The Chamber further notes that KDZ066 failed to explain to the Krstić Trial Chamber why he had provided inconsistent dates on these three occasions. See KDZ066, P337 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 2772–2774, 2787–2788.

¹⁷⁶⁸⁵ See Jean-René Ruez, at T. 23996 (1 February 2012) where he was asked by the Accused whether it was possible that the killings at Cerska occurred on 14 July, to which Ruez replied: "No. From the interview of the witness who was above the hill [...] when he saw the three buses escorted by one APCs in front of and one at the back of this little convoy, and then later saw the excavator entering the valley. This was on 13. [...] So this execution took place on 13 July". See also Jean-René Ruez, T. 23741 (27 January 2012).

establishing the exact date of the Cerska Valley killings was problematic.¹⁷⁶⁸⁶ Further, Richard Haglund also noted that two of the victims buried in the Cerska gravesite were last seen alive after July.¹⁷⁶⁸⁷ As stated above, even the Prosecution has now acknowledged that the killings at the Cerska Valley did not take place on 13 July but on or around 17 July.¹⁷⁶⁸⁸ More importantly, and as discussed in detail below, the Chamber has received additional evidence which shows that a number of victims found in the Cerska gravesite were last seen alive on various dates on or after 13 July, including as late as August 1995.¹⁷⁶⁸⁹ Thus, while the Chamber takes no issue with a witness making a mistake as to the specific date of an event, KDZ066's description of witnessing the transportation of the population out of Potočari—which was no longer possible on or after 17 July—give the Chamber serious reservations as to his credibility.

5214. In addition to the discrepancies as to the date of the events at the Cerska Valley discussed in the previous paragraph, the Chamber finds that other portions of KDZ066's evidence also contain contradictions or inconsistencies. For example, KDZ066 testified that he saw three buses—which he assumed were full of people—leaving Konjević Polje, turning right off the asphalt road towards Kamenica, and moving uphill in the direction of Cerska;¹⁷⁶⁹⁰ they were followed by at least two other vehicles, one of which was carrying soldiers in camouflage uniforms.¹⁷⁶⁹¹ However, KDZ066 failed to explain how, on one hand, he admitted having been so far away from the buses to be able to tell what company the buses belonged to and whether they were full of people or not and, on the other hand, he did not hesitate to say that one of the vehicles following the buses was carrying soldiers in camouflage uniforms.¹⁷⁶⁹²

5215. The Chamber acknowledges that minor inconsistencies in a particular testimony do not necessarily render it unreliable. However, in the present case, having considered KDZ066's

I was on the hill, I was far away from the buses"), T. 2774, 2780 (testifying that he could not see whether the buses were full of people, but "assumed" they were). Similarly, the Chamber found discrepancies in KDZ066's evidence as to the number and type of vehicles he claims to have seen following the three buses. See KDZ066, P337 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 2737 (stating: "There was an APC following [the buses] and two other trek vehicles."), T. 2738 (stating: "I can describe the APC. evidence on the transportation of the population on 13 July, and the other contradictions and inconsistencies identified in KDZ066's account of events, the Chamber finds that it cannot be satisfied that KDZ066 is credible or that his testimony is reliable. Therefore, the Chamber does not rely on KDZ066's account of events.

(3) Forensic evidence

5216. In addition to KDZ066's evidence, the Chamber received forensic evidence that, between 7 and 18 July 1996, Prosecution investigators and experts from Physicians for Human Rights exhumed a gravesite at the Cerska Valley.¹⁷⁶⁹³ William Haglund, the senior forensic adviser to the Prosecution in 1996,¹⁷⁶⁹⁴ prepared a report in 1998, based on the evidence collected during the examination and excavation of the gravesite conducted in 1996.¹⁷⁶⁹⁵

5217. Haglund testified that the gravesite at Cerska was a primary and undisturbed grave¹⁷⁶⁹⁶ located on the north side of an embankment along a dirt road; it was 30-metre long and six metre down an incline.¹⁷⁶⁹⁷ In his report, Haglund explained that the ages of the 150 male victims ranged between 11 and their 50's.¹⁷⁶⁹⁸ Of the 150 bodies exhumed, 147 were wearing civilian clothes.¹⁷⁶⁹⁹ Furthermore, a total of 48 ligatures were found in the gravesite,¹⁷⁷⁰⁰ of which 24 were found binding the wrists or arms of individuals behind their backs; additionally, one individual was bound by the ankles.¹⁷⁷⁰¹

5218. Regarding the cause and manner of death, Haglund concluded that, of the 150 individuals, 149 died of gunshot wounds, the majority of whom died from multiple gunshot wounds.¹⁷⁷⁰² With regard to the circumstances of death and burial, Haglund explained that cartridge casings were strewn along the entire length of the far side of the road where the bodies had been deposited.¹⁷⁷⁰³ The cartridges found in the grave itself matched with those found along the road at the gravesite, indicating that the victims in the grave were shot at the gravesite.¹⁷⁷⁰⁴ Based on this evidence, Haglund concluded that the victims were lined up on the southern side of the road while those who shot them stood across the road, shooting the victims with automatic weapons, in a spraying-type fashion.¹⁷⁷⁰⁵ As the victims were shot they either fell over the side of the embankment or rolled down, and were superficially covered with soil which had been removed from the roadside opposite

However, the Chamber is not satisfied with Dunjić's explanation as to his failure to include a reference in his report to the final conclusions of the Committee, finding that there were no indications of any actual wrong-doing on the part of Haglund nor anything regarding the exhumations that jeopardised their scientific validity. 5219. Based upon DNA analysis, experts were able to positively identify 144 of the exhumed bodies as persons listed as missing following the take-over of Srebrenica.¹⁷⁷⁰⁸

5220. As stated above, the Chamber has received additional evidence which shows that victims found in the Cerska gravesite were last seen alive on various dates on or after 13 July.¹⁷⁷⁰⁹ This evidence comes primarily from P6705, which, as will be explained in detail below,¹⁷⁷¹⁰ contains records of individuals reported to have been missing since the fall of Srebrenica.¹⁷⁷¹¹ According to P6705, approximately one third of the 150 victims exhumed from the Cerska gravesite went missing on or after 18 July 1995, and in various locations within Bratunac municipality, as well as in Baljkovica and Žepa.¹⁷⁷¹² While the Chamber acknowledges that the compilation of information in P6705 may have suffered from defects and may not be 100% accurate for all individuals,¹⁷⁷¹³ it considers the information reflected therein reliable for at least a number of those individuals.

Haglund added that the soil used was made of small pebbles and was not much piled up on top of the bodies so, when the gravesite was found, a lot of the bodies were partially skeletalised. The Chamber notes that Adjudicated Fact 1702, which is based upon Manning’s report as admitted in the Krstić case, refers to the identification of nine individuals. See Adjudicated Fact 1702; P4504 (Dean Manning’s Report, entitled “Summary of Forensic Evidence - Execution Points and Mass Graves”, 16 May 2000), e-court pp. 38, 96, 98. The apparent discrepancy between this fact and the evidence admitted in the present case referring to the identification of 144 individuals can be explained by the fact that in 2001—the year in which the Krstić Trial Judgement was issued—the identification process of victims was ongoing.

5221. The Chamber notes that, save for the general challenges by Dunjić as described above,¹⁷⁷¹⁴ the Accused did not challenge the forensic evidence the Chamber received in relation to the Cerska gravesite. In that regard, the Chamber has no reason to doubt the forensic evidence received as to the cause and manner of death of the victims exhumed therein and is satisfied that at least some—but most likely a lot—of them were victims of execution. However, the Chamber has doubts as to the circumstances of death. As stated above, approximately one third of the victims exhumed from the gravesite may have been last seen alive after 17 July 1995 in various locations. The Chamber notes specifically with respect to the 24 individuals whose bodies were found bound by ligatures, that most of them are listed as having disappeared in various locations on different dates, and at least eight of them after 18 July 1995.¹⁷⁷¹⁵ This evidence makes it highly unlikely that all of the 150 victims were the subject of a single execution at the Cerska Valley, as described in Haglund’s report, or as alleged in the Indictment. The Chamber recalls the evidence that a gravesite had been dug at the Cerska Valley by 27 July 1995;¹⁷⁷¹⁶ however, this evidence alone does not assist the Chamber in determining when exactly the killings took place, and whether more bodies were buried in this grave afterwards. Thus, while the Chamber is satisfied that at least some of the bodies exhumed from the Cerska gravesite were victims of execution, the Chamber is unable to make a finding as to how many or when they were killed. The discrepancies in the evidence as to the number of victims and their dates and place of disappearance are substantial and affect almost one third of the 150 victims exhumed from the Cerska gravesite. It is therefore the incident as a whole, as alleged in the Indictment, that is affected.

(4) Conclusion

5222. Consequently, in light of the totality of the evidence as discussed above, the Chamber is not satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the incident at the Cerska Valley took place, as alleged in the Indictment.

(C) Kravica Warehouse

(1) Introduction

5223. The Indictment refers to the killing on 13 July 1995 of over 1,000 Bosnian Muslim men in a large warehouse in the village of Kravica. The Indictment alleges that the bodies of the victims were transported to two large mass graves located in the nearby villages of Glogova and Ravnice on 14 July 1995.¹⁷⁷¹⁷

5224. The Kravica Warehouse is a one-storey building within the Kravica agricultural cooperative on the Bratunac–Konjević Polje Road.¹⁷⁷¹⁸ It is located on the right hand side in the direction from Konjević Polje towards Bratunac, approximately 700 metres from the Yellow Bridge to the east, and one kilometre from the Sandići Meadow to the west.¹⁷⁷¹⁹ The Kravica Warehouse consisted of a bigger room located to the west (“West Room”) and a smaller room located to the east (“East Room”).¹⁷⁷²⁰

(2) The killings

5225. In the afternoon of 13 July 1995, KDZ063 was ordered to board one of two buses transporting detainees from the Sandići Meadow to the Kravica Warehouse.¹⁷⁷²¹ Upon arriving, members of the Bosnian Serb Forces ordered the detainees to run out of the buses as quickly as possible and enter the warehouse; KDZ063 entered the East Room.¹⁷⁷²²

5226. The rest of the Bosnian Muslim men at the Sandići Meadow, including KDZ071, were ordered to line up in a column of four and proceed on foot towards the Kravica Warehouse.¹⁷⁷²³ Members of the 3rd Skelani Platoon were ordered to escort the group of detainees to the warehouse, and were assisted by “several lads from Šekovići”.¹⁷⁷²⁴ The detainees were surrounded by the uniformed men armed with automatic rifles, who were placed every five metres along the road.¹⁷⁷²⁵ As the detainees reached the Kravica Warehouse, they were ordered to walk past a bus parked in front and to enter the building.¹⁷⁷²⁶ KDZ071 was taken to the West Room.¹⁷⁷²⁷

5227. Groups of detainees continued to be brought to the warehouse for about two hours, approximately between 3 and 5 p.m.¹⁷⁷²⁸ The detainees were guarded by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces—including members of the 3rd Skelani Platoon and members of the Bratunac Brigade¹⁷⁷²⁹—wearing green-multi-coloured uniforms.¹⁷⁷³⁰ The members of the 3rd Skelani Platoon formed a semi-circle around the warehouse positioning themselves to the side and behind the building itself.¹⁷⁷³¹ Other members of the Bosnian Serb Forces walked among the detainees, questioning some of them.¹⁷⁷³² The men were ordered to surrender all valuables and were given water.¹⁷⁷³³ Some men were also given cigarettes.¹⁷⁷³⁴ Around 5 p.m. the warehouse became so tightly packed that the detainees almost suffocated.¹⁷⁷³⁵

5228. Some time after 4:30 p.m., one of the Bosnian Muslim detainees brought to the warehouse took away the rifle of Krsto Dragišević—a member of the 3rd Skelani Platoon—and shot him dead.¹⁷⁷³⁶ Rade Čuturić, a.k.a. “Oficir”, the commander of the 2nd Šekovići Detachment,¹⁷⁷³⁷ burned his hand when getting hold of the barrel of Dragišević’s rifle and was taken to the Bratunac Health Centre for treatment.¹⁷⁷³⁸ Members of the 3rd Skelani Platoon started shooting at the detainees in response to the killing of Dragišević.¹⁷⁷³⁹

While the “1900 hrs.” time included in Dragišević’s entry refers to “date [time] of wounding”, the Chamber finds that 7 p.m. is the time when Dragišević was brought to the Bratunac Health Centre, which is consistent with KW679’s evidence that Dragišević’s body was picked up from the Kravica Warehouse by a medical vehicle from Bratunac at approximately 6:30 p.m. D4113 (Witness statement of KW679 dated 23 November 2013), para. 21 (under seal). 5230. According to KDZ063, some time after arriving at the Kravica Warehouse, the Bosnian Serb soldiers guarding the detainees became agitated and angry.¹⁷⁷⁴⁶ Shortly after, intense shooting began outside the warehouse, lasting approximately half an hour.¹⁷⁷⁴⁷ While the shooting was ongoing, the soldiers came in and out of the warehouse and seemed to be in a panic, yelling at the detainees that the Muslims were attacking the soldiers.¹⁷⁷⁴⁸ The detainees panicked and became frightened as they did not know what was happening outside.¹⁷⁷⁴⁹ After the first period of shooting ended, two uniformed men entered the East Room and started shooting at the detainees; five to ten soldiers followed and joined in.¹⁷⁷⁵⁰

5231. While testifying about the way in which the shooting into the warehouse started, KDZ071 explained that, as the last of the Bosnian Muslim detainees entered the West Room, one man protested to a guard that he had nowhere to sit after which the guard opened fire on him.¹⁷⁷⁵¹ Immediately after that, guards started firing on the other detainees.¹⁷⁷⁵² The Chamber notes that this account differs from KDZ063's account, but finds that this may be due to a number of reasons such as the fact that KDZ071 and KDZ063 were detained in different rooms, the location of each of these witnesses within each room, and the trauma they were undergoing at the time.

5232. As members of the Bosnian Serb Forces entered the warehouse and shot at the detainees with M-84 machine guns and automatic rifles,¹⁷⁷⁵³ gunshots were also fired at the doors and windows from outside.¹⁷⁷⁵⁴ In addition to the shooting, a number of hand-grenades were thrown in the warehouse through the windows.¹⁷⁷⁵⁵

5233. Franc Kos—the commander of the 10th Sabotage Detachment’s 1st Platoon¹⁷⁷⁵⁶—testified that while at the Drina Corps Command in Vlasenica around 6 p.m. on 13 July, his commander, Pelemiš, looked agitated after having talked with Krstić.¹⁷⁷⁵⁷ Pelemiš then ordered Kos to go to Kravica, together with other members of the 10th Sabotage Detachment.¹⁷⁷⁵⁸ Upon arriving at the Kravica Warehouse, Pelemiš got out of the car and spoke to five VRS officers.¹⁷⁷⁵⁹ Kos overheard one of these officers tell Pelemiš: “they made a big mess. We have to bury all this and hide it”.¹⁷⁷⁶⁰ Kos looked both inside the West Room and the East Room, and saw that the floors on both rooms were covered with bodies.¹⁷⁷⁶¹ Marko Boškić, one of his colleagues from the detachment, headed towards the warehouse, took two hand-grenades, and threw them inside the East Room where detainees could still be heard murmuring.¹⁷⁷⁶²

5234. The shooting quieted down as the night fell,¹⁷⁷⁶³ but continued with breaks throughout the night.¹⁷⁷⁶⁴ By this time, the warehouse was filled with dead bodies.¹⁷⁷⁶⁵ Moans and shouts from people could be heard during the breaks in the shooting.¹⁷⁷⁶⁶ Those who tried to escape through the main door or windows were also killed by members of the Bosnian Serb Forces.¹⁷⁷⁶⁷

5235. In the morning of 14 July, members of the Bosnian Serb Forces called out for the wounded inside the warehouse to come out, assuring them that they would be picked up by the ICRC and taken to the hospital for treatment.¹⁷⁷⁶⁸ The wounded came out and were ordered to sing Serb nationalistic songs together for about half an hour, until bursts of fire were heard; no voice was heard thereafter.¹⁷⁷⁶⁹ The members of the Bosnian Serb Forces continued firing single shots to kill further survivors.¹⁷⁷⁷⁰ While shooting at the only survivors, the soldiers continued to make derogatory remarks about their “Turkish mother[s]” and their “Islam tribe”.¹⁷⁷⁷¹

5236. The Chamber heard evidence from both KDZ063 and KDZ071 that they survived by lying on the floor during the shooting on 13 July.¹⁷⁷⁷²

5237. KDZ063 was hit on his right leg, close to his knee.¹⁷⁷⁷³ His back was also scraped by a small piece of shrapnel from a grenade that fell three to four metres away from him.¹⁷⁷⁷⁴ After the night fell, during one of the breaks in shooting, KDZ063 crawled between dead bodies, climbed onto a container inside the East Room, and jumped out through a very narrow window.¹⁷⁷⁷⁵ As soon as he jumped out he was spotted by Bosnian Serb soldiers who were standing in the cornfield outside the warehouse.¹⁷⁷⁷⁶ KDZ063 immediately lay down on his stomach—with his head towards the wall—between two of the warehouse’s windows.¹⁷⁷⁷⁷ A member of the Bosnian Serb Forces walked towards KDZ063, pointed a torch light at him, and shot him from a distance of two

The Chamber also heard from KW012 that he survived when a Bosnian Serb soldier who recognised him took him to an adjacent room prior to the start of the shooting; according to KW012, he jumped out of the window when the shooting started and escaped into the woods, where he lived for ten months. KW012, T. 44781–44782, 44787 (9 December 2013). In light of the various contradictions which arose during his viva voce testimony, the Chamber does not find KW012’s evidence reliable. In addition the Chamber finds that KW012’s evidence was marked by insincerity and evasiveness. For these reasons, the Chamber rejects KW012’s story as to the events at the Kravica Warehouse.

to three metres, wounding him in the right shoulder.¹⁷⁷⁷⁸ KDZ063 lay on the ground for several hours until the morning, pretending to be dead.¹⁷⁷⁷⁹

5238. At some point on 14 July, while still lying on the ground outside the warehouse, KDZ063 crawled towards and through the cornfield; he passed by the bodies of men who had tried to escape before him.¹⁷⁷⁸⁰ KDZ063 was helped by other Bosnian Muslims he encountered who treated his wounds and, after seven or eight days, made his way to Žepa.¹⁷⁷⁸¹

5239. Similarly, KDZ071 spent the whole day of 14 July lying inside the West Room.¹⁷⁷⁸² In the evening, however, he decided to sit up and discovered two people doing the same.¹⁷⁷⁸³ After midnight, KDZ071 managed to escape from the West Room with one of the men, through the same door he had originally come in.¹⁷⁷⁸⁴ While escaping, he heard gunfire coming from the direction of the warehouse.¹⁷⁷⁸⁵ The two men spent a couple of days walking in the area, until they decided to go in the direction of Žepa, where KDZ071 arrived on 29 July.¹⁷⁷⁸⁶

5241. Earlier that afternoon, members of the Drina Corps had begun looking for available bulldozers and loading equipment, but were unsuccessful in securing any.¹⁷⁷⁸⁹ Sometime after 9 p.m., KDZ107 received a phone call asking him to meet Beara at the SDS Office in Bratunac.¹⁷⁷⁹⁰ KDZ107 met Beara in Deronjić's office with two officers he did not know; Deronjić himself was not present.¹⁷⁷⁹¹ Beara asked what kind of machinery and manpower was available, and said it needed to go to Milići, adding that “[d]ead people have to be buried, there will be a lot of dead and they need to be buried”.¹⁷⁷⁹²

5242. At approximately the same time, KDZ480 was called into a small meeting room in the Bratunac SDS Office to meet with Deronjić and two officers he did not know, who were wearing camouflage uniforms.¹⁷⁷⁹³ Deronjić told KDZ480 that there had been an incident at the Kravica Warehouse in which many detainees had been killed, and that they had to be transported to a bauxite mine in Milići, to be buried.¹⁷⁷⁹⁴ It was ultimately agreed that the two officers would procure vehicles for the transportation of the bodies, and that members of the sanitation unit of the Bratunac Civilian Protection would be sent to the Kravica Warehouse the next morning to load the bodies onto the vehicles.¹⁷⁷⁹⁵

5243. Some time between 1 and 2 a.m. on 14 July 1995, KDZ107 received a second phone call asking him to return to the SDS Office to receive further instructions.¹⁷⁷⁹⁶ There, Beara ordered KDZ107 to accompany an MP member who would show him the location where a grave was to be dug the next morning to bury the dead.¹⁷⁷⁹⁷ The two men drove between five and ten minutes until arriving at Glogova, where the MP member showed KDZ107 the exact place where a pit was to be dug.¹⁷⁷⁹⁸

5244. At around the same time, KDZ480 was called again to report to the SDS Office to meet with Deronjić, Momir Nikolić, and the two officers he had earlier met.¹⁷⁷⁹⁹ KDZ480 was informed that the director of the bauxite mine in Milići had forbidden the burial of bodies at that location.¹⁷⁸⁰⁰ Deronjić then instructed that some of the members of the sanitation unit of the Bratunac Civilian Protection should be sent to Glogova in the morning to help in the digging of a large gravesite, while other members should be sent to the Kravica Warehouse, together with the unit's skip excavator, loader, and tractor.¹⁷⁸⁰¹ The two officers agreed to provide additional machinery for the digging up of the grave.¹⁷⁸⁰²

5245. Around 9:30 a.m., Srbislav Davidović received a call to report to the SDS Office, where Beara and two uniformed officers were present.¹⁷⁸⁰³ The two officers asked Davidović whether

Beara remained in the first office but directed Davidović to the second office; Davidović did not talk to Beara about what had been discussed with the two officers. Davidović also testified that he did not know who the two officers were, but was sure that they were not members of the Bratunac Brigade; he recalled that one of them was a colonel and the other one was a lieutenant-colonel. there was any construction equipment for digging and loading in Bratunac municipality.¹⁷⁸⁰⁴ It was agreed that the ULT loader from the local brick company would be placed at their disposal.¹⁷⁸⁰⁵ Davidović then called Nedo Nikolić—the director of the brick factory—to tell him that “the army” would come and ask for an excavator.¹⁷⁸⁰⁶

5246. An excavator was used to remove the bodies from the Kravica Warehouse; in order to facilitate its entry into the warehouse, a section of the wall above the door had to be broken.¹⁷⁸⁰⁷ Soldiers used a water tank in the front of the warehouse to wash the blood off the asphalt.¹⁷⁸⁰⁸ Additionally, dead bodies were covered with hay.¹⁷⁸⁰⁹

Between 11 a.m. and noon on 14 July, an alcoholic drink was brought to the two drivers from the Bratunac Brigade who were in charge of taking the bodies out of the building and who were operating the large ULT loader.¹⁷⁸¹⁰ Also present at the warehouse were a small skip loader owned by the Rad Utilities Company and two orange trucks owned by the Sase construction company.¹⁷⁸¹¹ Momir Nikolić was at Kravica at the time, and appeared to be supervising how the work was coming along.¹⁷⁸¹² The work at the Kravica Warehouse continued until 16 July.¹⁷⁸¹³ KDZ107 testified that he went to the Kravica Warehouse three to five days after the killings took place when he was in charge of the people who came with two cisterns to wash the enclosed area where people had been killed.¹⁷⁸¹⁴

(4) Burials at Glogova

5248. People from the Rad Utilities Company and staff of the sanitation unit of the Bratunac Civilian Protection arrived at Glogova to dig a grave in the morning of 14 July 1995.¹⁷⁸¹⁵ Upon being informed that the ULT loader originally brought to Glogova from the brick factory was unable to dig three or four graves, Beara requested that a backhoe excavator which belonged to the Zvornik Brigade be sent to Glogova.¹⁷⁸¹⁶ This backhoe excavator was ultimately used to complete the task.¹⁷⁸¹⁷

5249. Towards the evening of 14 July, a few trucks with bodies arrived at Glogova, but it was only in the following days that trucks with bodies started arriving in large numbers.¹⁷⁸¹⁸ The staff from the Rad Utilities Company and the Bratunac Civilian Protection dug four pits at Glogova, and transported and buried between 400 and 500 bodies in three days.¹⁷⁸¹⁹ The Chamber heard that other bodies were subsequently buried at Glogova.¹⁷⁸²⁰ The Chamber received evidence that members of both the Bratunac and the Zvornik Brigades participated in the burials at Glogova.¹⁷⁸²¹

(5) Reburials in secondary gravesites

Muslim men buried at various primary gravesites in July 1995.¹⁷⁸²² Specifically, over the course of several nights in September or October 1995, the bodies which had initially been buried in the Glogova gravesites were transported and reburied in secondary mass graves at Zeleni Jadar, Budak, Blječeva, and Zalažje.¹⁷⁸²³

(6) Forensic evidence

(a) Kravica Warehouse

5251. Forensic examination of the Kravica Warehouse conducted in September 1996 revealed evidence of human blood, bones, and tissue adhering to the walls, floor and ceiling, as well as damage caused by arms, grenades and explosives.¹⁷⁸²⁴ Similarly, shell casings, dentures, and human bone fragments were found mingled with rubbish just in front of the warehouse.¹⁷⁸²⁵ Hand-grenade handles were also found around the warehouse.¹⁷⁸²⁶

(b) Glogova and secondary gravesites

(i) Glogova

5252. Aerial images reveal that the Glogova gravesites were first dug between 17 and 27 July 1995, and that the gravesites were disturbed on or before 30 October 1995, as indicated by disturbed earth and the presence of a front loader.¹⁷⁸²⁷ Between 1999 and 2001, two primary disturbed gravesites were found on either side of a dirt road off the Konjević Polje–Bratunac Road, near the village of Glogova, approximately eight kilometres from the Kravica Warehouse.¹⁷⁸²⁸ The

The Chamber notes that Dušan Dunjić challenged the methodology followed by Clark in his report for the Glogova gravesite, including how he reached his conclusions as to the cause of death of victims, without carrying out further analysis on the “mechanism of injury”, and basing such conclusions on a number of assumptions. D3893 (Dušan Dunjić’s expert report entitled “Forensic Analysis of Reports on the Locations of Mass Graves in the Area of Eastern Bosnia and Documentation Relating to Exhumations in the Srebrenica Area”, 27 August 2009), p. 48; D3894 (Dušan Dunjić’s expert report entitled “Forensic Analysis of Documents Pertaining to Exhumations, Autopsies and Identification of Bodies in the Srebrenica Area”, 26 August 2012), pp. 5–8. The Chamber notes that Dušan Dunjić challenged the reliability of the findings made by Wright in his report for the Glogova gravesite. D3894 (Dušan Dunjić’s expert report entitled “Forensic Analysis of Documents Pertaining to Exhumations, Autopsies and Identification of Bodies in the Srebrenica Area”, 26 August 2012), p. 16. Wright was also challenged with the hypothesis that bodies found at Glogova 1 had a different degree of decomposition found amongst the bodies at Glogova 1 and Glogova 2 thus showing a direct physical link between the gravesites and the warehouse.¹⁷⁸³⁴ Furthermore, an analysis of three watches found on victims wrists at Glogova 2, led the expert to assume that the bodies were disposed of “about or after” 13 July.¹⁷⁸³⁵

5255. The forensic evidence reviewed by the Chamber shows that all of the victims exhumed at the Glogova gravesites were males,¹⁷⁸³⁶ with established ages ranging from as young as 12 to 75,¹⁷⁸³⁷ and most of the bodies exhumed from the Glogova gravesites presented gunshot injuries.¹⁷⁸³⁸ Shrapnel injuries were also present in 21% of the bodies, and pieces of grenade and shrapnel were retrieved from the gravesite.¹⁷⁸³⁹ 12 victims exhumed from one of the sub-graves at Glogova 1 were bound with ligatures, and each of those was killed by a gunshot to the head.¹⁷⁸⁴⁰

5256. Almost all sub-graves at Glogova showed evidence of “robbing”, or that bodies were removed by machinery, thus leaving a few dismembered parts of the bodies behind.¹⁷⁸⁴¹

5257. The Accused argues in his final brief that the Glogova gravesite was a “mixed grave” which contained not only victims from the Kravica Warehouse incident but from other killing incidents related to the fall of Srebrenica, as well as victims who had died years earlier.¹⁷⁸⁴² The Prosecution acknowledges that a number of bodies found in the Glogova gravesites were brought from places other than the Kravica Warehouse.¹⁷⁸⁴³ The Prosecution explains that this number includes at least 80 victims executed in Bratunac, including at the Vuk Karadžić School,¹⁷⁸⁴⁴ plus approximately 100 individuals who cannot be determined beyond reasonable doubt to have been executed.¹⁷⁸⁴⁵

5258. As of 13 January 2012, DNA analysis led to the identification of 226 bodies from Glogova 1 and 171 from Glogova 2, as persons listed as missing following the take-over of Srebrenica.¹⁷⁸⁴⁶ However, Dušan Janc clarified that not all of these 397 individuals can be linked to the killings at the Kravica Warehouse, since bodies which cannot be linked to this execution site were brought to Glogova, namely at least 80 victims executed in Bratunac, plus approximately 100 bodies brought Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix D, paras. 64, 171. This number also includes the bodies of 12 individuals who are recorded as having been returned from Serbia and whose remains were also found at Glogova; although executed, their deaths were not charged in this case. from other locations.¹⁷⁸⁴⁷ This is consistent with other evidence received by the Chamber that bodies collected from various places, including the Konjević Polje intersection, the Konjević Polje–Bratunac Road, Potočari, the areas of Rađno Buljek, Kamenica, and Pobude, and around the Vuk Karadžić School in Bratunac, were brought to Glogova to be buried.¹⁷⁸⁴⁸

5259. Further, after reviewing P6705, the Chamber has found that victims whose bodies were found in the Glogova gravesites were last seen alive on and after 14 July 1995.¹⁷⁸⁴⁹ According to this document, roughly one in five bodies found in Glogova 1 and Glogova 2 were reported as having been last seen alive after 13 July,¹⁷⁸⁵⁰ the date of the Kravica Warehouse incident. Because the bodies in Glogova 1 and 2 were later reburied in various secondary gravesites,¹⁷⁸⁵¹ the Chamber will discuss the minimum and maximum possible number of Kravica-related victims in all of these sites at the end of this section.¹⁷⁸⁵²

(ii) Secondary gravesites

5260. The Zeleni Jadar gravesites, which consisted of seven secondary mass gravesites along the Zeleni Jadar Road,¹⁷⁸⁵³ were discovered in 1998.¹⁷⁸⁵⁴ Aerial images indicate that earth was disturbed at six locations along the Zeleni Jadar Road between 24 August and 23 October 1995, and that the reburials at these secondary graves were completed in late October 1995.¹⁷⁸⁵⁵ The gravesites were numbered Zeleni Jadar 1 through 6, with an additional gravesite, labelled 1A, examined at a later stage due to its location within a heavily mined area.¹⁷⁸⁵⁶ While the examination and probing at Zeleni Jadar 1 through 4 was conducted by a Tribunal team of experts, the responsibility for exhuming the gravesites was handed over to the BiH government in 2001.¹⁷⁸⁵⁷ Teams of Tribunal experts conducted the examination and exhumation of both Zeleni Jadar 5 and Zeleni Jadar 6.¹⁷⁸⁵⁸

5261. The Chamber notes that out of all the secondary gravesites associated with the Glogova gravesites, it only received forensic evidence in relation to Zeleni Jadar 5 and 6. The exhumation of Zeleni Jadar 5 was conducted between 1 and 21 October 1998 by a team under the direction of Richard Wright.¹⁷⁸⁵⁹ The exhumation of Zeleni Jadar 6 was conducted between 25 July and 13 August 2001 by a team under the direction of Jose Pablo Baraybar.¹⁷⁸⁶⁰ The remains found at

Zeleni Jadar 5 were then examined by a team of pathologists under the direction of Christopher Lawrence, while the remains at Zeleni Jadar 6 were examined by a team of pathologists under the direction of John Clark.¹⁷⁸⁶¹

5262. The forensic evidence reviewed by the Chamber in relation to both Zeleni Jadar 5 and Zeleni Jadar 6 shows that all of the bodies where sex could be determined were male.¹⁷⁸⁶² Approximately 25% of those were 25 years old or younger.¹⁷⁸⁶³ Most of the bodies exhumed presented gunshot injuries.¹⁷⁸⁶⁴ No bodies had been blindfolded, but two had ligatures.¹⁷⁸⁶⁵

5263. Various artefacts from the Kravica Warehouse, such as barbed wire, motorcar parts, bricks, tiles, china, and bunches of hay were collected from the Zeleni Jadar gravesites.¹⁷⁸⁶⁶ Specifically, motorcar parts and barbed wire found at Zeleni Jadar 5 mixed up with bodies were determined to be similar objects to those found at Glogova 1, which in turn were similar to those found at the Kravica Warehouse.¹⁷⁸⁶⁷ Bullets and cartridge casings were also found in Zeleni Jadar 5.¹⁷⁸⁶⁸ Furthermore, pollen and soil profiles taken from Glogova 2 sub-gravesites were identical to those of Zeleni Jadar 5.¹⁷⁸⁶⁹ Blast damage and pieces of shrapnel similar to those found at Glogova were found in bodies at the Zeleni Jadar gravesites.¹⁷⁸⁷⁰

5264. Furthermore, some DNA profiles were isolated from remains found in both Glogova and the Zeleni Jadar gravesites; each of these connections demonstrates that the remains of the same individual were found in more than one gravesite. The remains of 20 individuals were found in both Glogova 1 and one of the Zeleni Jadar gravesites 1A, 1B, 2, 3, or 4; 14 individuals with remains in Glogova 1 and Zeleni Jadar 5; three individuals' remains were found in Glogova 1 and Zeleni Jadar 6; and one individual's remains were found in Glogova 2 and Zeleni Jadar 5.¹⁷⁸⁷¹ Similarly, DNA from a broken tooth found at the entrance of the Kravica Warehouse was matched to remains found at Zeleni Jadar 2.¹⁷⁸⁷² Consequently, the Chamber finds that bodies were taken from the Glogova 1 and Glogova 2 gravesites to the secondary gravesites of Zeleni Jadar.

5265. As of 13 January 2012, DNA analysis led to the identification of 445 victims from the Zeleni Jadar gravesites as persons listed as missing following the take-over of Srebrenica: 22 from Zeleni Jadar 1A; 22 from Zeleni Jadar 1B; 19 from Zeleni Jadar 2; 30 from Zeleni Jadar 3; 64 from Zeleni Jadar 4; 166 from Zeleni Jadar 5; and 122 from Zeleni Jadar 6.¹⁷⁸⁷³ However, according to P6705, just over one fifth of the bodies found in all the Zeleni Jadar gravesites were reported as

The Chamber notes that Lawrence was extensively questioned about his findings on shrapnel injuries found at bodies at Zeleni Jadar 5, in order to make him accept that those victims had indeed died in combat operations, and not in a mass execution. See Christopher Lawrence, T. 22505–22508 (8 December 2011); Christopher Lawrence, P4051 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krstić), T. 4024–4025. Given the evidence by survivors of the killings at the Kravica Warehouse that grenades were thrown inside the warehouse, the Chamber finds this evidence on shrapnel injuries to be consistent with the evidence as described above.

having been last seen alive after 13 July 1995.¹⁷⁸⁷⁴ As stated above, the minimum and maximum possible number of Kravica-related victims in all of these sites will be discussed at the end of this section.¹⁷⁸⁷⁵

5266. The secondary gravesites of Budak 1, Budak 2, Blječeva 1, Blječeva 2, Blječeva 3, and Zalažje were discovered and exhumed from 2004 to 2009 by the BiHCMP.¹⁷⁸⁷⁶

5267. The Chamber received evidence of DNA-based connections between these secondary gravesites and the two Glogova gravesites, as well as between the various secondary gravesites.¹⁷⁸⁷⁷ Specifically, 12 DNA connections were found between Glogova 2 and Blječeva 1; 26 between Glogova 2 and Blječeva 2; 14 between Glogova 1 and Blječeva 3; three between Glogova 1 and Budak 1; 12 between Glogova 1 and Budak 2, and eight between Glogova 1 and Zalažje 1.¹⁷⁸⁷⁸ Consequently, the Chamber finds that bodies were taken from the Glogova 1 and Glogova 2 gravesites to the secondary gravesites of Budak, Blječeva, and Zalažje.

5268. As of 13 January 2012, DNA analysis led to the identification of 326 victims from the Budak, Blječeva, and Zalažje gravesites as persons listed as missing following the take-over of Srebrenica: 54 from Budak 1; 49 from Budak 2; 47 from Blječeva 1;¹⁷⁸⁷⁹ 81 from Blječeva 2; ¹⁷⁸⁷⁴ Specifically, approximately 25% of the bodies identified from Zeleni Jadar 1A and 1B, 21% from Zeleni Jadar 2, 23% from Zeleni Jadar 3, 27% from Zeleni Jadar 4, 17% from Zeleni Jadar 5, and 20% from Zeleni Jadar 6 were listed as having been seen after 13 July 1995. See e.g. P4771 (Dušan Janc's report entitled "Update to the summary of Forensic Evidence – Exhumation of the Graves and Surface Remains Recoveries related to Srebrenica – January 2012", 13 January 2012), Annex D, e-court pp. 353–380 (under seal) (listing the names of bodies identified in Zeleni Jadar 1A through 6); P6705 (Ewa Tabeau's expert report entitled "Srebrenica Missing: Persons Reported Missing and Dead after the Take-Over of the Srebrenica Enclave by the Bosnian Serb Army on 11 July 1995", 9 April 2009), e-court pp. 27, 30, 34, 40, 54, 61, 74, 96, 106–107, 118, 125, 155, 170–171, 192, 199, 213, 216.

The Chamber notes Dunjić's challenge that not all of the individual bodies found in Glogova 1 and 2 could be linked to the secondary gravesites by DNA connections. D3893 (Dušan Dunjić's expert report entitled "Forensic Analysis of Reports on the Locations of Mass Graves in the Area of Eastern Bosnia and Documentation Relating to Exhumations in the Srebrenica Area", 27 August 2009), pp. 13, 23. However, Dunjić admitted that this assertion was not supported by ballistic, soil, or material evidence on his part. Dušan Dunjić, T. 41883–41890 (24 July 2013). As explained in detail in Section IV.C.1.h: Forensic, demographic, and DNA evidence, and having assessed the totality of the evidence on this issue, the Chamber is satisfied that the reports generated by Janc and by the ICMP on the basis of the DNA analysis can be relied upon for the purposes of the present Judgement.

¹⁷⁸⁷⁹ The Chamber finds that the Blječeva 1 gravesite was a mixed grave and contained remains which were unconnected with the fall of Srebrenica. P4772 (Dušan Janc's report entitled "Update to the summary of Forensic Evidence - Exhumation of the Graves and Surface Remains Recoveries related to Srebrenica - January 2012", 13 January 2012), e-court pp. 30–32; Dušan Janc, T. 27016–27017 (27 March 2012); D3893 (Dušan Dunjić's expert report entitled "Forensic Analysis of Reports on the Locations of Mass Graves in the Area of

65 from Blječeva 3; and 30 from Zalažje.¹⁷⁸⁸⁰ However, according to P6705, just over one fifth of the bodies identified from Budak, just over one tenth of the bodies identified from Blječeva, and one fifth of the bodies identified in Zalažje were reported as having been seen alive after 13 July 1995.¹⁷⁸⁸¹ As stated above, the minimum and maximum possible number of Kravica-related victims in all of these sites will be discussed at the end of this section.¹⁷⁸⁸²

(iii) Ravnice

5269. The gravesite of Ravnice—which encompasses the sub-gravesites of Ravnice 1 and Ravnice 2—is located along a dirt roadway leading to the village of Adžici from the Konjević Polje–Bratunac Road, and is close to Glogova.¹⁷⁸⁸³ There is no evidence that this gravesite was disturbed.¹⁷⁸⁸⁴ Ravnice 1 was partially exhumed in August 2000 by a Tribunal exhumations team

According to Janc, Blječeva 1 contained remains of victims from an incident in Bratunac in 1992; however, in reaching the total number of Srebrenica victims identified from remains found in that gravesite, Janc did not count those victims who had died in 1992. P4772 (Dušan Janc’s report entitled “Update to the summary of Forensic Evidence - Exhumation of the Graves and Surface Remains Recoveries related to Srebrenica - January 2012”, 13 January 2012), e-court p. 30; Dušan Janc, T. 27016–27017 (27 March 2012). See also Accused Closing Argument, T. 48024 (2 October 2014). The Chamber compared Janc’s list of Blječeva 1 victims to the data on P6705 and is satisfied that the 47 individuals identified by Janc from remains at Blječeva 1 are indeed victims from the fall of Srebrenica. See P4771 (Dušan Janc’s report entitled “Update to the summary of Forensic Evidence – Exhumation of the Graves and Surface Remains Recoveries related to Srebrenica – January 2012”, 13 January 2012), Annex D, e-court pp. 381–383 (under seal); P6705 (Ewa Tabeau’s expert report entitled “Srebrenica Missing: Persons Reported Missing and Dead after the Take-Over of the Srebrenica Enclave by the Bosnian Serb Army on 11 July 1995”, 9 April 2009). However, as explained in detail below, the Chamber acknowledges that not all of these 47 victims were killed at the Kravica Warehouse. See paras. 5280–5283.
