I. INTRODUCTION

A. THE ACCUSED AND THE CHARGES AGAINST HIM

1. This case relates to events alleged to have occurred from October 1991 to November 1995 in various locations in BiH, including Sarajevo, Srebrenica, and 20 municipalities of the ARK, the Sarajevo region, and eastern BiH (“Municipalities”).

2. The Accused was born on 19 June 1945 in the municipality of Šavnik, Republic of Montenegro. He was a founding member of the SDS and served as its President from 12 July 1990 to 19 July 1996.¹ The Accused also acted as President of the National Security Council of SerBiH, which was created on 27 March 1992 and held sessions until around May 1992.² On 12 May 1992, the Accused was elected as the President of the three-member Presidency of SerBiH.³ At the beginning of June 1992, the Presidency increased to five members, and the Accused continued as President of that Presidency.⁴ From 17 December 1992, he was sole President of the RS and Supreme Commander of the RS armed forces.⁵

3. In the Indictment, the Accused is charged under Article 7(1) of the Statute for his alleged participation in four related JCEs in BiH. The Prosecution alleges the following:

- i) From at least October 1991 to 30 November 1995, the Accused participated in an “overarching” JCE, the objective of which was to permanently remove

Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from Bosnian Serb claimed territory in BiH through the crimes charged therein (“Overarching JCE”);⁶

- ii) Between April 1992 and November 1995, the Accused participated in a JCE to establish and carry out a campaign of sniping and shelling against the civilian population of Sarajevo, the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population (“Sarajevo JCE”);⁷
- iii) Between the days preceding 11 July 1995 and 1 November 1995, the Accused participated in a JCE to eliminate the Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica by killing the men and boys of Srebrenica and forcibly removing the women, young children and some elderly men from Srebrenica (“Srebrenica JCE”);⁸ and
- iv) Between approximately 26 May and 19 June 1995, the Accused participated in a JCE to take hostage over 200 UN peacekeepers and military observers in order to compel NATO to abstain from conducting air strikes against Bosnian Serb military targets (“Hostages JCE”).⁹

4. In addition, the Accused is charged for having planned, instigated, ordered, and/or aided and abetted the crimes in the Indictment.¹⁰ He is also charged as a superior pursuant to Article 7(3) of the Statute for these crimes.¹¹

5. The Indictment charges the Accused with 11 Counts as follows:

- i) Count 1: genocide (in relation to the Municipalities);
- ii) Count 2: genocide (in relation to Srebrenica);
- iii) Count 3: persecution, a crime against humanity (in relation to the Municipalities and Srebrenica);

⁶ Indictment, paras. 9–14, 30–31. The Prosecution charges the Accused with the first and the third form of JCE in relation to the Overarching JCE. See Indictment, paras. 9–10.

- iv) Count 4: extermination, a crime against humanity (in relation to the Municipalities and Srebrenica);
- v) Count 5: murder, a crime against humanity (in relation to the Municipalities, Sarajevo, and Srebrenica);
- vi) Count 6: murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war (in relation the Municipalities, Sarajevo, and Srebrenica);
- vii) Count 7: deportation, a crime against humanity (in relation to the Municipalities);¹²
- viii) Count 8: inhumane acts (forcible transfer), a crime against humanity (in relation to the Municipalities and Srebrenica);
- ix) Count 9: acts of violence the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among the civilian population, a violation of the laws or customs of war (in relation to Sarajevo);
- x) Count 10: unlawful attacks on civilians, a violation of the laws or customs of war (in relation to Sarajevo); and
- xi) Count 11: taking of hostages, a violation of the laws or customs of war.¹³

6. The prodigious amount of evidence in this case included the testimony of 434 witnesses who appeared before the Chamber, the evidence in writing of 152 other witnesses and a total of 11,469 exhibits representing 191,040 pages. A total of 48,121 transcript pages recorded the daily proceedings and 94,917 pages of filings were submitted to the Chamber. The scope of the Indictment and the high profile of the Accused conjointly contributed to the unprecedented nature of this case.

¹³ The Chamber notes that the Indictment used, in numerous instances, the open-ended term “including” in relation to the charges therein. As the Accused is entitled to be clearly informed of the charges against him, the Chamber has taken a restrictive approach of the term “including”. For instance, in paragraph 60(a) and 60(k) of the Indictment, the Chamber has confined its analysis, respectively, to the Scheduled Killing Incidents listed in the Indictment and to the five specific restrictive and discriminatory measures identified. The same is true for instance for the acts of murder charged in relation to Sarajevo in paragraph 65 of the Indictment and the Chamber limited its findings to the Scheduled Sniping and Shelling Incidents. See Hearing, T. 5480 (19 July 2010). The Chamber further notes the Prosecution’s statement that “it will not present evidence in order to secure a conviction in respect of any crime sties or incidents not listed in the Schedules to the Indictment”. Rule 73 bis Submission, para. 16(b).

7. This Judgement is divided into four volumes. This Judgement starts by the Chamber's approach to evidence and its findings on contextual aspects of the case, it then sets out the Chamber's analysis of the evidence in relation to the crimes charged in the Indictment, its factual and legal findings in relation thereto, and its assessment of the Accused's alleged responsibility. The Chamber has divided the presentation of this analysis according to the four components identified in the Indictment: (i) the Municipalities component; (ii) the Sarajevo component; (iii) the Srebrenica component; and (iv) the Hostages component. Finally, the Judgement addresses matters related to cumulative convictions and sentencing.

B. GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS ON THE EVIDENCE

1. General evidentiary principles

8. The Chamber assessed the evidence adduced at trial in light of the entire trial record and in accordance with the Statute and the Rules. As provided for in Rule 89(B), where no guidance was given by the Rules, the evidence was evaluated in a way that would best favour a fair determination of the case and that is consistent with the spirit of the Statute and the general principles of law, including the principle of in dubio pro reo.¹⁴

9. At the outset of the proceedings, for the benefit of the smooth conduct of the trial, the Chamber issued orders which provided the parties with guidelines on the conduct of trial and the rules that would govern the admission or exclusion of evidence.¹⁵ In accordance with the Rules, the Chamber adopted an approach that favoured the admissibility of evidence, provided it was relevant and had probative value,¹⁶ and assessed the weight to be ascribed to each piece of evidence in its overall consideration of the entire trial record.¹⁷

¹⁴ According to the principle of in dubio pro reo, any doubt as to the evidence must be resolved in favour of the accused. The Appeals Chamber stated in the Limaj case that the principle of in dubio pro reo "applies to findings required for conviction, such as those which make up the elements of the crime charged", but "is not applied to individual pieces of evidence and findings of fact on which the judgement does not rely". Limaj et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 21.

10. Article 21(3) of the Statute provides that the Accused shall be presumed innocent until proven guilty. The Prosecution bears the burden of establishing each element of the alleged crimes and of the mode of individual criminal responsibility with which the Accused is charged, as well as any fact which is indispensable for a conviction beyond reasonable doubt.¹⁸ The Chamber has therefore determined whether the ultimate weight of all of the evidence is sufficient to establish beyond reasonable doubt the elements of the crimes charged in the Indictment, and ultimately, the responsibility of the Accused. When the Prosecution relied upon proof of a certain fact such as, for example, the state of mind of an Accused by inference, the Chamber considered whether that inference was the only reasonable inference that could have been made based on that evidence.¹⁹ Where that inference was not the only reasonable inference, it found that the Prosecution had not proved its case. The Chamber further notes that while it has not always reiterated the phrase “beyond reasonable doubt” in all of its findings, this standard of proof was applied throughout the Judgement. The Chamber also notes that when it has made a negative finding in respect of the evidence of a witness it did not deem reliable, this does not entail that the Chamber made a positive finding to the contrary.

11. In its evaluation of witnesses testifying viva voce or pursuant to Rule 92 ter, the Chamber had regard to, inter alia, the demeanour of witnesses, as well as to the passage of time since the events charged in the Indictment and its possible impact on the reliability of the evidence. With regard to all witnesses, the Chamber also assessed the probability and the consistency of their evidence as well as the circumstances of the case and corroboration from other evidence.

12. The Appeals Chamber has held that the testimony of a single witness on a material fact does not, as a matter of law, require corroboration.²⁰ When such a situation occurred, the Chamber examined the evidence of the Prosecution witness with the utmost caution before accepting it as a sufficient basis for a finding of guilt. Insignificant discrepancies between the evidence of different

See also Ntagerura Appeal Judgement, para. 174, fn. 356 (holding that “[e]ven if some of the material facts pleaded in the indictment are not established beyond reasonable doubt, a Chamber might enter a conviction provided that having applied the law to those material facts it accepted beyond reasonable doubt, all the elements of the crime charged and of the mode of responsibility are established by those facts” and considering that “the ‘material facts’ which have to be pleaded in the indictment to provide the accused with the information necessary to prepare his defence have to be distinguished from the facts which have to be proved beyond reasonable doubt”).

witnesses, or between the evidence of a particular witness in court and his prior statements, in general have not been regarded as discrediting such evidence.²¹

13. Hearsay evidence is any statement other than one made by a witness while giving evidence in the proceedings and which is offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted in the statement.²² It is admissible under the case law of the Tribunal. The weight to be attributed to that evidence depends upon the specific circumstances and as such, the Chamber assessed hearsay evidence on a case-by-case basis.²³ The Appeals Chamber has held that

Trial Chambers have a broad discretion under Rule 89(C) to admit relevant hearsay evidence. Since such evidence is admitted to prove the truth of its contents, a Trial Chamber must be satisfied that it is reliable for that purpose, in the sense of being voluntary, truthful and trustworthy, as appropriate; and for this purpose may consider both the content of the hearsay statement and the circumstances under which the evidence arose; or, as Judge Stephen described it, the probative value of a hearsay statement will depend upon the context and character of the evidence in question. The absence of the opportunity to cross-examine the person who made the statements, and whether the hearsay is “first-hand” or more removed, are also relevant to the probative value of the evidence. The fact that the evidence is hearsay does not necessarily deprive it of probative value, but it is acknowledged that the weight or probative value to be afforded to that evidence will usually be less than that given to the testimony of a witness who has given it under a form of oath and who has been cross-examined, although even this will depend upon the infinitely variable circumstances which surround hearsay evidence.²⁴

14. Circumstantial evidence is evidence of a number of different circumstances surrounding an event from which a fact at issue may be reasonably inferred.²⁵ Where an inference is drawn from circumstantial evidence to establish a fact on which a conviction relies, that inference must be the only reasonable one that could be drawn from the evidence presented.²⁶

2. Specific evidentiary considerations

a. Certain categories of witnesses

i. Persons associated with the parties to the proceedings

15. The Chamber heard the evidence of a number of investigators associated with either the Prosecution or the Accused's defence team.²⁷ Their status as current or former investigators for one of the parties in this case does not in itself render their evidence unreliable. In determining the weight to be attributed to each witness of this category, the Chamber has taken into consideration, inter alia, their expertise and knowledge of the investigation that they were involved in, as well as other relevant evidence. It has, however, been mindful to exercise caution in evaluating their evidence in view of their association with a party to the proceedings.

ii. Individuals convicted of crimes arising from events charged in the Indictment

16. A large number of individuals who were convicted either by the Tribunal or by domestic courts for crimes arising from events which are alleged in the Indictment have testified as witnesses before the Chamber both for the Prosecution and the Defence.²⁸ In approaching the evidence of these witnesses, the Chamber considered the following guidance from the Appeals Chamber:

[I]t is well established in the jurisprudence of both ad hoc Tribunals that nothing prohibits a Trial Chamber from relying on evidence given by a convicted person, including evidence of a partner in crime of the person being tried before the Trial Chamber. Indeed, accomplice evidence, and, more broadly, evidence of witnesses who might have motives or incentives to implicate the accused is not per se unreliable, especially where such a witness may be thoroughly cross-examined; therefore, reliance upon this evidence does not, as such, constitute a legal error. However, "considering that accomplice witnesses may have motives or incentives to implicate the accused person before the Tribunal, a Chamber, when weighing the probative value of such evidence, is bound to carefully consider the totality of the circumstances in which it was tendered". As a corollary, a Trial Chamber should at least briefly explain why it accepted the evidence of witnesses who may have had motives or incentives to implicate the accused; in this way, a Trial Chamber shows its cautious assessment of this evidence.²⁹

²⁹ Krajišnik Appeal Judgement, para. 146 (quoting Niyitegeka Appeal Judgement, para. 98) (footnotes omitted).

17. With the exception of Milan Babić, Miroslav Krnojelac, and Radislav Krstić, whose testimonies in prior proceedings were admitted pursuant to Rule 92 bis or quater, all of the witnesses in this category testified before the Chamber either live or pursuant to Rule 92 ter. The Chamber was thus able to observe their demeanour on direct and cross-examination. As with all witnesses, the Chamber ultimately weighed their evidence against the totality of the evidence. In conducting this individual assessment, it kept in mind the possibility that they may have had motives to implicate the Accused and thus reviewed their evidence with close scrutiny. The credibility of witnesses in this category will be explained further below in this Judgement where relevant.

iii. Individuals whose trial is currently ongoing, at trial or on appeal

18. A number of individuals whose proceedings before the Tribunal were currently ongoing, either at trial or on appeal, testified before the Chamber, including some who were subpoenaed to testify.³⁰ The issue of “whether an accused or appellant compelled by subpoena to testify in another case before the Tribunal is in effect exposed, in relation to his own case, to the possibility of compelled self-incrimination”³¹ was highly litigated in this case.³² The Appeals Chamber held that “an accused or appellant may be compelled to testify in other cases before the Tribunal due to the fact that any self-incriminating information elicited in those proceedings cannot be directly or derivatively used against him in his own case”.³³ Since these witnesses testified before the Chamber, it was able to observe their demeanour while they were on the stand. In weighing their evidence against the totality of the evidence on the record, the Chamber reminded itself of the possibility that these witnesses may have had motives to distance themselves from the events in relation to which they were testifying.

iv. Expert witnesses

19. The Chamber heard the testimony of a large number of witnesses as experts called pursuant to Rule 94 bis both by the Prosecution and the Accused.³⁴ In weighing this evidence, the Chamber

³² See Appeal Decision on Tolimir Subpoena. See also para. 6164.

This Chamber later noted that it considered that “[t]he terminology used by the Appeals Chamber indicates that the applicability of the [Appeal Decision on Tolimir Subpoena] is broader than Tolimir himself”. Decision on Mladić Motion for Reconsideration, para. 15.

considered factors such as the professional competence of the expert, the methodologies used, and the reliability of the findings made in light of these factors and other evidence accepted by the Chamber.³⁵ The Chamber did not rely on the evidence given by witnesses called pursuant to Rule 94 bis which pertained to topics falling outside the realm of their expertise.

b. Certain categories of exhibits

i. Source documents

20. The Chamber did not admit the sources used by an expert in compiling his report as a matter of course.³⁶ It considered that the purpose of having an expert report is to assist the Chamber by providing an understandable compilation and analysis of technical material and, as such, should be complete and understandable in itself, such that there is no need to tender for admission the sources used by the expert. The Chamber allowed, however, the presenting party to request the admission of certain sources upon providing clear reasons as to why these sources should be admitted in addition to the expert report itself.³⁷ As the purpose of admitting source material was to enable the Chamber to verify, if necessary, the basis upon which the expert reached his conclusions as well as how the relevant analysis was conducted, source documents so accepted were thus not admitted for their substantive content.³⁸ However, if at a later date, a witness discussed the content of a document previously admitted as a source document in such a way that rendered that document admissible for its content, its status was changed to reflect its admission for all purposes.³⁹

ii. Third-party statements

21. Throughout these proceedings, the Chamber considered that third-party statements produced for the purpose of current criminal proceedings may only be admitted pursuant to the modalities of Rules 92 bis, ter, quater, and quinquies. It held that the strict requirements of these rules, which are lex specialis, may not be circumvented by tendering such material pursuant to the more general Rule 89.⁴⁰ In relation to any other third-party statement not prepared for the purposes of criminal proceedings, the Chamber followed the practice that they may only be admitted if they are commented upon, confirmed, or adopted by the witness on the stand.⁴¹ A number of such statements were admitted in this manner and, as any evidence on the record, were attributed the appropriate weight in light of the totality of the trial record at the end of the proceedings.⁴²

Derek Allsop, Kosta Cavoški, Zorica Subotić, Mile Poparić, Dragomir Kešerović, Radovan Radinović, and Dušan Dunjić. The Chamber refers in particular to the detailed section on the forensic, demographic, and DNA evidence in relation to the Srebrenica component of the case. See Section IV.C.1.h: Forensic, demographic, and DNA evidence.

iii. Media reports

22. The Chamber considered that written media reports, whether they be reports, articles or interviews, were not admissible from the bar table as they would not meet the reliability and probative value requirements; they were admitted only when a witness testified to the accuracy of the information contained therein and attested that they had not been manipulated in any way. A number of such media reports were admitted in this manner and, as any evidence on the record, were attributed the appropriate weight in light of the totality of the trial record.

iv. Intercepts

23. Throughout the case, the Chamber treated intercepts as a “special category of evidence” given that they bear no indicia of authenticity or reliability on their face and accordingly, they may only be admitted into evidence after the Chamber has heard from the relevant intercept operators or the participants in the intercepted conversation.⁴³ Towards the end of the Defence case, however, it found that, based on the agreement between the parties as to the authenticity of some intercepts, its past admission of a number of intercepts through intercept operators and numerous interlocutors, and the Prosecution’s possible authentication of those intercepts based upon its “evidence collection”, it had a basis to establish the authenticity of these intercepted conversations and proceeded to admit them.⁴⁴ Once admitted, however, the Chamber treated intercepts as any other evidence and assessed their respective weight in light of the entire trial record.

c. Evidence admitted in writing and the issue of corroboration.

24. On many occasions, the Chamber reminded the parties that it could not base a conviction on the uncorroborated evidence of a witness whose evidence was admitted pursuant to Rule 92 quater.⁴⁵ The Appeals Chamber in Popović et al. reaffirmed that “findings that are indispensable for a conviction must not rest solely or decisively on untested evidence” and that such findings must be sufficiently corroborated.⁴⁶

d. Judicial notice of adjudicated facts

25. In the present case, the Chamber took judicial notice pursuant to Rule 94(B) of 2,379 adjudicated facts proposed by the Prosecution.⁴⁷ The Appeals Chamber has held that “by taking judicial notice of an adjudicated fact, a Chamber establishes a well-founded presumption for the accuracy of this fact, which therefore does not have to be proven again at trial, but which, subject to that presumption, may be challenged at that trial”.⁴⁸

Martić*, Case No. IT-95-11-AR73.2, Decision on Appeal against the Trial Chamber’s Decision on the Evidence of Witness Milan Babić, 14 September 2006, para. 20; Prosecutor v. Galić, Decision on Interlocutory Appeal Concerning Rule 92*bis*(C), 7 June 2002, fn. 34. In Popović et al., two appellants challenged their convictions on the grounds that untested and uncorroborated evidence admitted pursuant to former Rule 92 bis(D) of the Rules was the only evidence in relation to a charge, i.e.: the Kravica Supermarket killings. Popović et al. Appeal Judgement, paras. 97–102. The Appeals Chamber examined whether the appellants’ convictions rested solely, or in a decisive manner, on the evidence at issue—the transcript of a witness’s testimony in the Krstić case—and found that no conviction for “opportunistic” killings was based on the Kravica Supermarket events alone. Popović et al. Appeal Judgement, paras. 101–103. Thus, the Appeals Chamber concluded, the allegations related to Kravica Supermarket were not indispensable for any of the appellants’ convictions and that these would stand even without the findings on the Kravica Supermarket killings. Popović et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 103. The Appeals Chamber also noted that “the Trial Chamber’s approach is consistent with the reasoning in Stakić, where the conviction on the charge of killing 77 Croats was upheld, despite highlighting that the only evidence supporting the relevant finding was admitted under Rule 92 bis of the Rules and was untested”. Popović et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 104. See also Stakić Appeal Judgement, para. 201(8). Addressing another challenge to findings in which the Trial Chamber relied upon a transcript of testimony admitted pursuant to Rule 92 quater, the Popović et al. Appeals Chamber found that these findings did not rest decisively on untested evidence, but rather, on “a body of mutually corroborating evidence”. Popović et al. Appeal Judgement, paras. 1218–1229.

⁴⁷ See Section VIII.A.3.d: Judicial Notice. The Chamber notes that it denied the Accused’s motion for judicial notice of 26 facts relating to Count 1. Decision on Accused’s Motion for Judicial Notice of Adjudicated Facts Related to Count One, 21 January 2014.

26. As the Appeals Chamber has stated, adjudicated facts are “facts that have been established in a proceeding between other parties on the basis of the evidence the parties to that proceeding chose to introduce, in the particular context of that proceeding”.⁴⁹ They are therefore not conclusive in other proceedings wherein judicial notice is taken of them, and parties have the opportunity to contest them.⁵⁰

27. The Chamber assessed the weight and relevance of the adjudicated facts, taking into consideration the totality of the trial record and, in particular, any evidence submitted by the Accused to rebut the adjudicated fact.⁵¹ Where an unchallenged adjudicated fact was the only evidence in support of a finding and there was no evidence contradicting it, the Chamber considered the judicially noticed fact sufficient to support the finding.

28. Where adjudicated facts and other evidence addressed the same subject matter, the Chamber assessed whether the other evidence was consistent with the adjudicated facts or rebutted them.⁵² Where the Chamber has accepted evidence that contradicts an adjudicated fact, it has considered the presumption of accuracy of the adjudicated fact to have been rebutted.⁵³ The Chamber applied this principle where the Accused challenged an adjudicated fact and presented credible evidence to rebut or bring into question the accuracy of the adjudicated fact and where the evidence presented by the Prosecution on the point addressed by the adjudicated fact was internally contradictory or inconsistent with the adjudicated fact.

29. In relation to the evidence adduced by the Prosecution, the Chamber recalls that in its decision of 31 March 2010, the Chamber did not find it to be in the interests of justice to preclude the Prosecution from bringing witnesses to give evidence that overlaps with the content of adjudicated facts that have been the subject of judicial notice in this case.⁵⁴ The Chamber reasoned that at that stage of the case it was open to the Accused to challenge any or all of the judicially-noticed facts in this case and that the Prosecution was at that time not in possession of specific information as to those aspects of its case or what particular evidence the Accused intended to rebut, including adjudicated facts admitted prior to the submission of the Defence Pre-Trial Brief, and therefore a considerable extension in the length of the case might result from the presentation of evidence in rebuttal following the hearing of the defence case.⁵⁵

30. The Chamber also recalls its previous statement in the aforementioned decision of 31 March 2010 that the Chamber may base its final conclusions as to the individual criminal responsibility of the Accused on the evidence presented to it along with any adjudicated facts from prior proceedings which have been the subject of judicial notice. This will not mean, however, that witness evidence led at trial is to be considered corroborated by adjudicated facts from prior proceedings which are based on evidence from the same witness.⁵⁶

Put another way, “adjudicated facts based on evidence from a witness may not be considered corroborative of that witness’s evidence”.⁵⁷ The Chamber reiterates its approach, outlined above and in accordance with other chambers’ approaches, to assess adjudicated facts in light of the totality of the evidence adduced at trial and more particularly to analyse whether other evidence in the record is consistent with or contradicts the adjudicated facts.⁵⁸ Other evidence in the record was assessed for inconsistency with the adjudicated facts, and where reliable evidence contradicted an adjudicated fact, be it presented by the Accused or the Prosecution, the adjudicated fact was not used as the basis of a finding in this case.

31. In a number of instances, the adjudicated fact in the source judgement cited the same witness who gave evidence in this case on the same point and this latter evidence was the only evidence in this case on the point, other than the adjudicated fact. In these situations, again, the Chamber did not consider the adjudicated fact to corroborate the witness's evidence in this case.⁵⁹

II. GENERAL OVERVIEW

A. HISTORICAL CONTEXT

32. BiH, which was known as the SRBiH prior to the conflict, was one of the six republics that once constituted the SFRY. Before the conflict, the situation of the SRBiH was unique in that, unlike the other republics, it possessed no single majority ethnic grouping and thus there was no recognition of a distinct "Bosnian nation".⁶⁰

33. Throughout the SFRY during the 1980s, opposition between the various national movements steadily grew, fuelled by a growing economic crisis and an increasingly dysfunctional political system in the wake of the death of Marshal Josip Broz Tito in 1980.⁶¹ The JNA was the only military formation with an integrated command structure and large numbers of heavy weapons and aircraft, and was constitutionally mandated to "defend the homeland" and preserve the SFRY.⁶² The JNA was an entirely federal force, with its headquarters in Belgrade,⁶³ and with the SFRY Presidency as its "supreme command and control organ".⁶⁴

34. On 23 January 1990, upon the departure of the Slovene delegation, the Congress of the League of Communists of Yugoslavia was postponed indefinitely, paving the way for the organisation of multi-party elections in each of the six republics.⁶⁵

1. The first multi-party elections

35. On 21 February 1990, the Assembly of the SRBiH adopted a law that permitted political parties to organise but forbade this organisation to be based on nationality or religion. Political parties nonetheless formed on such bases although they were careful not to openly contravene the law. On 11 June 1990, the Constitutional Court of SRBiH declared this prohibition unconstitutional,⁶⁶ and ethnic parties began to form.⁶⁷

36. The most prominent political parties in SRBiH were the SDA, the SDS,⁶⁸ and the HDZ.⁶⁹ They were formed in 1990 in the lead-up to the election and initially co-operated to defeat their common opponents, the former League of Communists of SRBiH, which had been newly renamed as the League of Communists-Social Democratic Party, and the Alliance of Reformist Forces of Yugoslavia.⁷⁰

37. On 31 July 1990, amendments to the 1974 Constitution were adopted to determine the structure of governing institutions for which elections would be held. The new legislation provided for a seven-member Presidency, composed of two Serbs, two Croats, two Muslims, and one representative of “others”.⁷¹ It also provided that the legislature would consist of a 130-member Chamber of Citizens and a Chamber of Municipalities⁷² with 110 deputies.⁷³ The legislation further provided for elections to assemblies in each of SRBiH’s 109 municipalities.⁷⁴

38. On 18 November 1990, the first free, multi-party elections were held for both municipal assemblies and for the legislative body at the republican level.⁷⁵ The SDA won 86 of the total 240 seats in both chambers, the SDS won 72 seats, and the HDZ won 44 seats. Eight different parties shared the remaining 38 seats.⁷⁶ In effect, the outcome of the elections generally reflected the ethnic census of the population with each ethnic group voting for its own national party.⁷⁷

39. After the elections in SRBiH, a coalition government was formed according to an inter-party agreement and headed by a seven member Presidency, with the leader of the SDA, Alija Izetbegović, as the first President.⁷⁸ The SDS selected Momčilo Krajišnik to be President of the Assembly and Jure Pelivan was named by the HDZ to be Prime Minister.⁷⁹ In each municipality, executive positions were apportioned according to the national composition of the municipality in question.⁸⁰

2. BiH regionalisation

40. The regionalisation process began with the establishment of communities of municipalities, which led to the creation of autonomous districts and regions.⁸¹ In 21 January 1991, SDS presidents of 21 municipal assemblies in the northwestern BiH region of Bosnian Krajina began preparations for the formation of the ZOBK.⁸² The SDS regional board formally approved the initiative to create the ZOBK on 7 April 1991.⁸³

41. Soon thereafter, the ZOBK initiative faced opposition and criticism. The SRBiH Assembly passed a resolution requesting that regionalisation be suspended until a political agreement could be reached.⁸⁴ On 21 April 1991, the SDA organised a rally in Banja Luka to protest the “national regionalisation” of BiH.⁸⁵ In the wake of these criticisms, the Accused, as President of the SDS, denounced the concentration of power in Sarajevo and called to defend regionalisation as the solution to the economic crisis.⁸⁶

42. By the time the founding assembly of the ZOBK was held on 25 April 1991, assemblies of 14 municipalities with large Serb majorities had voted to affiliate with the ZOBK, including Ključ.⁸⁷ Following the lead of the Bosnian Krajina, two other communities of municipalities were created in May 1991 in Romanija and in Eastern and Old Herzegovina.⁸⁸ Communities of municipalities were renamed SAOs in September, including the ZOBK which was renamed ARK on 16 September 1991.⁸⁹

43. In June 1991, a number of SDS members from Croatia and the Bosnian Krajina, led by Milan Babić, undertook plans to declare the unity of the Croatian and Bosnian Krajinas and signed an “Agreement on Co-operation”.⁹⁰ On 27 June 1991, delegates unanimously endorsed this agreement and passed a “Declaration of Unification”, the purpose of which was described as the “integration of Serbian people as a whole, all in the aim of creating a united state in which all Serbs in the Balkans will live”.⁹¹ Despite further efforts by Babić in October 1991, the Accused and other BiH SDS members remained opposed to the idea, which never materialised.⁹²

3. Towards disintegration of the SFRY

44. In the SRBiH Assembly, co-operation between the political parties proved increasingly difficult.⁹³ What was initially a coalition government broke down in October 1991.⁹⁴ The disintegration of multi-ethnic SFRY was swiftly followed by the disintegration of multi-ethnic BiH, and the prospect of war in BiH increased.⁹⁵

45. Due to the manpower shortages resulting from the defection of non-Serbs from the JNA during the conflict in Croatia, the JNA ordered reservists in SRBiH to active duty during the summer of 1991.⁹⁶ The Presidency of SRBiH then denounced the JNA's mobilisation order as illegal, asked for the withdrawal of the reservists who had entered the territory of SRBiH from Serbia, and exhorted citizens of SRBiH "to exercise patience, avoid all potential provocations and allow these units to return in peace".⁹⁷ Most Croat and Muslim reservists did not answer the mobilisation order while a majority of the Serb reservists responded and were mobilised to locations in SRBiH or Croatia.⁹⁸

46. At a meeting of the SRBiH Assembly held during the night of 14 to 15 October 1991, the Accused gave a speech, at the end of which he stated: "Don't think you won't take Bosnia and Herzegovina to hell and Muslim people in possible extinction. Because, Muslim people will not be able to defend itself if it comes to war here!"⁹⁹ After Krajišnik, as President of the SRBiH Assembly, had adjourned the SRBiH Assembly session for the day, HDZ and SDA delegates reconvened without Serb delegates and passed a declaration of sovereignty.¹⁰⁰ Shortly thereafter, the SDS leadership demanded that the declaration be repealed before 24 October 1991.¹⁰¹

47. On 24 October 1991, the Bosnian Serb deputies of the SRBiH Assembly met separately and decided to establish the Assembly of the Serbian People in BiH.¹⁰² Opening the session, Krajišnik explained that the main reason for doing so lay "in a serious attempt to compromise the national sovereignty of the Serbian people in BiH and their constitutional and legal position in Yugoslavia, which in turn compromises their survival in the territory of BiH, where they have lived from time immemorial”.¹⁰³ On 9 and 10 November 1991, a plebiscite was held to determine whether Serbs in BiH wished to remain in a joint state of Yugoslavia, together with Serbia, Montenegro, the SAOs of Krajina, Slavonia, Baranja and Western Srem, and “any others who decide in favour of such a survival”.¹⁰⁴ The overwhelming majority of Serbs voted in favour of remaining in Yugoslavia.¹⁰⁵ By that time, in the wake of Croatia’s declaration of independence,¹⁰⁶ JNA forces were withdrawing from Croatia into SRBiH.¹⁰⁷ On 11 December 1991, Krajišnik, on behalf of the Assembly of the Serbian People in BiH, formally requested the JNA “to protect, with all available means the territories of [BiH]”.¹⁰⁸

On 17 December 1991, foreign ministers in the EC created a commission composed of EC judges, known as the Badinter Commission, to assess applications for independence from the republics of the SFRY based on their adherence to certain guidelines. On 20 December 1991, the SRBiH Presidency, Nikola Koljević and Biljana Plavšić dissenting, voted to apply to the Badinter Commission for the recognition of SRBiH as an independent state.¹⁰⁹

49. 50. The members of the Assembly of the Serbian People in BiH met on 21 December 1991, expressed their strong opposition to the Badinter Commission process, and approved preparations for the formation of a Serb Republic.¹¹³ On 9 January 1992, the Assembly of the Serbian People in BiH proclaimed the SerBiH, which on 12 August 1992 was renamed RS.¹¹⁴

51. International efforts to achieve a comprehensive diplomatic solution to the situation in Yugoslavia were initially formalised throughout the second half of 1991 and continued in different forms and in various fora throughout the conflict. These efforts will be discussed in detail in another section of this Judgement.¹¹⁵

52. By early 1992, and partly due to the refusal of non-Serbs to mobilise for the war in Croatia as discussed above, the JNA units in BiH were progressively becoming “all-Serb units”, and the JNA openly favoured Serbs in its personnel policy.¹¹⁶ By early 1992, there were some 100,000 JNA troops in SRBiH with over 700 tanks, 1,000 armoured personnel carriers, heavy weaponry, 100 planes and 500 helicopters, all under the command of the General Staff of the JNA in Belgrade.¹¹⁷

53. On 15 January 1992, the Badinter Commission recommended that SRBiH be required to hold a referendum to determine the will of its people regarding independence. On 20 January, the SRBiH Assembly voted to hold such a referendum on 29 February and 1 March 1992.¹¹⁸ At its 26 January 1992 session, members of the SerBiH Assembly denounced the decision as illegal.¹¹⁹

On 28 February 1992, the SerBiH Assembly unanimously adopted the Constitution of the SerBiH.¹²⁰

54. The referendum on the question of independence was held on 29 February and 1 March 1992. It was largely boycotted by the Bosnian Serbs and yielded an overwhelming majority of votes in favour of independence.¹²¹

55. On 28 March 1992, the SDS sponsored a congress in Sarajevo on the “Yugoslav Crisis and the Serbian Question”.¹²² The congress was attended by 500 participants who were greeted by the Accused and focused on sacrifices and losses suffered by the Serbs during WWII.¹²³ In evoking fears of a “Serbian genocide”, Bosnian Serb leaders suggested that territorial claims beyond Serb-inhabited areas were justified.¹²⁴

These were: (i) the creation of a border separation with the other two national communities; (ii) the creation of a corridor between Semberija and Krajina; (iii) the creation of a corridor in the Drina Valley, namely elimination of the Drina as a border between Serbian states; (iv) the creation of a border on the Una and Neretva rivers; (v) division of the city of Sarajevo into Serbian and Muslim parts and implementation of an effective state government in each of these parts; (vi) and access of the SerBiH to the sea.¹²⁷ The Strategic Goals were adopted by the Bosnian Serb Assembly at the same session.¹²⁸

B. BOSNIAN SERB POLITICAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL STRUCTURES

1. Serbian Democratic Party (SDS)

a. Establishment

58. The SDS was established on 12 July 1990 at a founding assembly in Sarajevo.¹²⁹ It was founded in advance of the first multi-party elections in the SRBiH which were to be held in November 1990.¹³⁰ The assembly elected the Accused as president of the party,¹³¹ and he remained the president through 1995.¹³² The Accused gave a speech in which he stated the objectives of the party, which included “a federative Yugoslavia, and in it an equal federal Bosnia and Herzegovina”.¹³³ The Accused also stated that the party would be organised along republic, regional, subregional, municipal, and communal levels with regional and lower-level boards making “completely autonomous [...] local and political assessments and personnel decisions”.¹³⁴

59. In 1990 and 1991, the SDS was funded by voluntary contributions and enjoyed the support of the overwhelming majority of Bosnian Serbs.¹³⁵

b. Components and their functions

60. The main organs of the SDS included the party Assembly, formally the supreme body; the SDS Main Board, the highest party organ at times when the Assembly was not in session; the SDS Executive Board, the executive arm of the Main Board; the President of the party, who was also the President of the Main Board; and several advisory bodies, such as the SDS Political Council.¹³⁶

61. The party Assembly was responsible for adopting and amending the party programme and statutes and for electing, inter alios, the President of the party and the members of the Main Board.¹³⁷

62. The Main Board's responsibilities included the election of members of the Executive Board and the preparation of drafts of all acts and decisions adopted by the party Assembly.¹³⁸ The Main Board made SDS policy and important political decisions.¹³⁹ The Accused was ex officio president of the Main Board of the SDS.¹⁴⁰ Krajišnik became a member of the Main Board in July 1991.¹⁴¹ Under a new party statute provision approved on 12 July 1991, the party president could nominate and effectively select up to one-third of the members of the Main Board.¹⁴²

63. Duties of the Executive Board included preparing materials for the use of the Main Board and implementing its decisions.¹⁴³ On 31 July 1991, Rajko Dukić, who was nominated by the Accused, was unanimously elected President of the Executive Board.¹⁴⁴ As such, Dukić was to carry out the establishment and operation of the party staff apparatus.¹⁴⁵ Radomir Nešković was elected as the Deputy President of the Executive Board on the same day.¹⁴⁶ The Accused attended some meetings of the Executive Board.¹⁴⁷

64. The President of the SDS had statutory powers that included, by 1991, representing the SDS, convoking the SDS Assembly, Main Board, and Executive Board, and co-ordinating the work of organs and bodies of the SDS.¹⁴⁸ The President was the central, most important party organ.¹⁴⁹

65. Another body that stemmed from the SDS was the Serbian Deputies' Club, a parliamentary caucus of the SDS in the SRBiH Assembly.¹⁵⁰ The Deputies' Club was headed by Vojo Maksimović.¹⁵¹ The Accused, as the party leader, attended meetings of the Deputies' Club.¹⁵² Members of the Deputies' Club formed the Assembly of the Serbian People in Bosnia and Herzegovina on 24 October 1991.¹⁵³ Radomir Nešković described the Deputies' Club as "a constituent organ which passed all constituent acts and documents which lay the grounds for Republika Srpska".¹⁵⁴

c. Organisation and structure

66. In 1991 and into 1992, "expanded" meetings of the members of the formal and ad hoc bodies of the party played an important role in policy-setting, decision-making, and communications from the top to the grassroots level.¹⁵⁵ The SDS also utilised "expanded" meetings of different groups of middle-level government leaders and lower-level party officials to convey instructions or information to the grassroots level and to reach broader party consensus on policy or strategy.¹⁵⁶ These meetings often included SDS-nominated ministerial-level SRBiH government officials, and many of them would later become part of the Bosnian Serb Government.¹⁵⁷

67. Another key feature of SDS organisation in late 1991 into 1992 was collective leadership in the form of decision-making in small groups, most importantly, collaboration by four core leaders, the Accused, Krajišnik, Plavšić, and Koljević.¹⁵⁸

68. The party was a hierarchical structure, organised into municipal assemblies and boards resembling the republican organs.¹⁵⁹ Larger towns had both municipal boards and local boards corresponding to the local communes.¹⁶⁰ Local boards were the basic units of party organisation.¹⁶¹ Each member of the local board represented 15 to 20 households and informed the local board, which in turn informed the municipal board; the municipal board then informed the President of the party, the Main Board, or the Executive Board.¹⁶² Municipal boards comprised presidents of local boards.¹⁶³ Members of the Main and Executive Boards were to be involved in the work of the municipal boards in the area where they lived.¹⁶⁴

69. Decisions were implemented in accordance with the hierarchy by all bodies, including regional, municipal, and local boards,¹⁶⁵ and by lower-level officials.¹⁶⁶ Local boards received tasks from and answered to the municipal boards.¹⁶⁷ Municipal boards were obligated to implement the instructions issued by the Main Board or Executive Board.¹⁶⁸ The Main Board had the power to dismiss municipal bodies if it considered them to not be functioning well or not implementing the party's policies.¹⁶⁹ The municipal boards sent delegates to the RS Assembly.¹⁷⁰

70. From 1990 to 1995, the Accused was at the head of the hierarchical structure of the SDS.¹⁷¹

71. The party strove to develop and put into place an efficient system of communications to convey instructions from the top down and to receive reports from the bottom up.¹⁷² The evidence shows communication in both directions between the top and local levels. Members of the Main Board or Executive Board were designated by the Main Board, Executive Board, or the Accused to go to specific municipalities to communicate with lower-level bodies and address municipal-level problems and to report back.¹⁷³ Members of the Main Board were obligated to regularly attend sessions of the municipal board of their respective municipalities.¹⁷⁴ The Main Board informed municipal boards about its decisions and work.¹⁷⁵ SDS municipal leaders met and communicated with SDS leaders at the republic level, including the Accused and the Main Board.¹⁷⁶ The Accused stated at the SerBiH Assembly session on 15 February 1992 that he would establish teams composed of Main Board members and deputies from the respective region to attend meetings of Deputies' Clubs in municipalities.¹⁷⁷

d. Initial actions

72. During the first months of 1991 the SDS began to organise Serb-majority municipalities in BiH into communities of municipalities, in some cases severing ties with pre-existing communities of municipalities.¹⁷⁸ SDS party leaders justified the associations of municipalities in terms of economic necessity.¹⁷⁹

73. A confidential SDS document, dated 23 February 1991, considered specific actions to be taken should BiH move towards independence.¹⁸⁰ In such a case municipal authorities were to ensure that only Yugoslav (federal) law would apply, suspending the implementation of republican regulations.¹⁸¹ This policy was adopted by the SDS Deputies' Club and was made public in a document dated 10 June 1991.¹⁸²

74. In late 1991, the SDS started implementing a policy of "regionalisation".¹⁸³ This consisted in taking steps towards the creation of "regions" in which Serbs were the relative majority.¹⁸⁴ In the fall of 1991, the SDS also made preparations for the establishment of Serb municipalities and Serb municipal Crisis Staffs, at the municipal level.¹⁸⁵

75. On 16 September 1991 the SDS Executive Board approved the appointment of a Regionalisation Staff.¹⁸⁶ At least three communities of municipalities—Eastern and Old Herzegovina, ARK, and Romanija—became SAOs in September 1991.¹⁸⁷ More SAOs were formed between September and November 1991: Semberija-Majevisa, Northern Bosnia, and Birač.¹⁸⁸ On 24 February 1992, the SDS Executive Board assigned "coordinators" for the SAOs.¹⁸⁹

For instance, the SDS Executive Board appointed Radislav Vukić, a member of the SDS Executive Board, as co-ordinator for SAO Krajina.¹⁹⁰

2. Bosnian Serb Assembly

76. As described above,¹⁹¹ by October 1991 the three-party coalition of the SDA, HDZ, and SDS was falling apart over the question of an independent BiH. During the night of 14 and 15 October 1991, the President of the SRBiH Assembly adjourned the session but a vote proceeded in the absence of the Serb deputies and a declaration of sovereignty was adopted.¹⁹² On 15 October 1991, the SDS Political Council met to assess the situation.¹⁹³ During this and other meetings, the idea emerged that the SDS should form its own institutions, which would function in parallel to those of BiH.¹⁹⁴

77. The Bosnian Serb deputies of the SRBiH Assembly proclaimed a separate Assembly of the Serbian People on 24 October 1991¹⁹⁵ and elected Krajišnik as President of the Assembly.¹⁹⁶ The newly established Assembly was essentially a new form of the SDS Deputies' Club, with the minutes and transcript of the Assembly's first session indicating it as a session of the Deputies' Club.¹⁹⁷

78. In 1991 into 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly¹⁹⁸ was composed of 78 deputies and all but six were SDS members.¹⁹⁹ Twenty-three sessions of the Bosnian Serb Assembly were held proposing would always be the Government.²⁰⁶ In the event of war or immediate threat of war, deputies could, in accordance with the evaluation of the political and security situation, propose to the Assembly that a law be passed without the draft being discussed.²⁰⁷

81. The Bosnian Serb Assembly was to exercise control over matters within the competence of the Bosnian Serb Government.²⁰⁸ It elected the Prime Minister and voted to appoint the Government Ministers.²⁰⁹ In addition, the Assembly debated matters related to the work of the Supreme Court, the Public Prosecutor, and the constitutionality of the laws of the Republic upon advice given to it by the Constitutional Court.²¹⁰ It was also tasked with co-operating with the assemblies of other republics, autonomous provinces, and municipalities, through information exchange and visits by Assembly deputies.²¹¹

82. The President of the Assembly had the power to propose the agenda of Assembly sessions and to convene the Assembly at his initiative, or upon demand of the Bosnian Serb Government or one-third of the deputies of the Assembly.²¹²

83. Sessions of the Bosnian Serb Assembly were sometimes preceded by meetings of the SDS Deputies' Club, which proposed conclusions for adoption by the Assembly.²¹³

84. The Assembly was an important avenue for deputies to be informed of policies, plans, and instructions, including for purposes of dissemination to the field.²¹⁴ Municipal bodies were briefed on Assembly sessions and the decisions reached therein.²¹⁵ For instance, at the 7th Assembly session, the Accused requested that the Krajina deputies "work a lot with our people there, with party membership, to explain our strategic goals and to explain our tactics on a daily basis” and stated that “[a] deputy is a representative and is vested with the highest representative authority” and “[a]t the same time, he will report to the Assembly here”.²¹⁶

85. At Assembly sessions, deputies reported on events in the municipalities.²¹⁷ The Accused stated at the 12th Assembly session on 24 March 1992:

If the Assembly agrees, [...] it is my opinion and request that in this period when the State is being created and getting on its feet, deputies will have to be the pillars of our power in the areas where they are located. They must, therefore, remain in permanent contact with presidents of municipalities and work on the establishment of local government.²¹⁸

86. Statements by deputies indicate that they ascribed to the Assembly a degree of authority over municipal bodies. At the 8th Assembly session, amid remarks on the “discord” in Bosnian Krajina, Vojo Kuprešanin spoke of the Assembly as “our supreme authority because it can annul all our decisions”.²¹⁹ The Accused stated earlier in the same session: “This Assembly is the supreme power of the Serbian people in [BiH]. [...] This Assembly has the authority to cancel all decisions of any Serbian Assembly in [BiH], and of the Regional Assembly.”²²⁰

87. The Assembly established many of the Bosnian Serb state political organs, including the SNB, the three and five-member Presidency and sole President, the Council of Ministers, and the Government, as well as the judicial system.²²¹

3. National Security Council (SNB)

88. On 27 March 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly established the SNB.²²² It was to be an advisory organ to the Assembly, on political, legal, constitutional, and other issues relevant to the security of “the Serbian people in [BiH]”, and it was to be responsible to the Assembly.²²³ It was also envisioned as being able to issue binding decisions on executive organs, including the Ministries of Interior and of National Defence.²²⁴

89. The Accused was President of the SNB.²²⁵ Ex officio members of the SNB also included the President of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the SerBiH Prime Minister, and the Ministers of Defence and Interior.²²⁶

90. The SNB was one of the interim bodies that served as the de facto Presidency of the SerBiH in 1992.²²⁷ Plavšić and Koljević, who were members of the SRBiH Presidency, functioned as acting presidents of the SerBiH.²²⁸ The SNB, usually in joint sessions with the Government, made decisions relating to, inter alia, security, defence, the military, and political strategy,²²⁹ and charged various ministries with tasks²³⁰. Decisions of joint sessions were then formalised through Plavšić and Koljević, who were members of the SNB, or a decision of the relevant Government organ.²³¹

91. The SNB and Government made a number of decisions regarding the TO²³² in April 1992: On 15 April 1992, the SNB and Government decided that the Minister of Defence shall organise and supervise the TO until the appointment of the commander.²³³ On 22 April 1992, the SNB and Government decided that the President of the SNB should co-ordinate matters relating to the commanding of TO forces.²³⁴ They also adopted the conclusion that the SerBiH TO Staff appoint staff commanders in regions, municipalities, and towns.²³⁵ On 24 April 1992, the SNB decided to form a Town TO Staff composed of municipal TO commanders, with the Accused responsible for “its realisation”.²³⁶ On 27 April 1992, a joint session decided that salaries for members of the TO would be secured with the help of municipal assemblies.²³⁷

92. In April 1992, the SNB was issuing instructions to, and receiving reports from, municipal crisis staffs and TOs.²³⁸

93. On 24 April 1992, at a meeting with the SerBiH Government, the SNB decided that “the Ministry of Justice shall take over the exchange of prisoners once the organs of the interior have completed their work”.²³⁹ At the same meeting, the SNB decided to establish a state commission for war crimes and to compile instructions for the work of the commission.²⁴⁰ On 8 May 1992, a joint session of the SNB and SerBiH Government decided to set up a state commission for assistance to refugees.²⁴¹

94. With respect to communication structures, in April 1992 the SNB and Government ordered that the ministers of the MUP and Ministry of National Defence “submit daily reports on the situation in the field, on the establishment of possible accountability and the measures taken” and that the MUP minister “submit a daily report on the security situation in the territory of the [SerBiH]”.²⁴²

95. The SNB effectively ceased convening sessions or fulfilling a central role around May 1992, when the Presidency was established.²⁴³

a. Establishment

96. On 12 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly established a three-member Presidency and elected the Accused, Plavšić, and Koljević to the Presidency.²⁴⁴ The Presidency then elected the Accused as President of the Presidency.²⁴⁵ The President of the Presidency was to issue orders, adopt and present decisions, and command the VRS²⁴⁶ on behalf of the Presidency.²⁴⁷

97. On or around 2 June 1992, the Presidency was enlarged to five members to include the Prime Minister, Branko Đerić, and the President of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, Krajišnik.²⁴⁸ On 6 July 1992, the five-member Presidency allocated tasks among themselves: military issues to the Accused; international relations as well as information and propaganda-related questions to Koljević; contacts with UNPROFOR, except for military issues, and questions related to refugees and humanitarian aid, inter alia, to Plavšić; questions related to commissioners and the economy to Krajišnik; and questions related to supplies to Đerić.²⁴⁹ The Presidency that met from 2 June until 17 December 1992 is sometimes referred to as the “War Presidency”, because it was considered to be “held during an imminent threat of war”, as indicated in some of the meeting minutes from this period.²⁵⁰ On 17 December 1992 the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a “Declaration on the End of the War,” proclaiming the war in the former BiH over for the RS.²⁵¹

98. On 17 December 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly replaced the structures of the Presidency by establishing a single president and two vice-presidents of the Republic.²⁵² The Assembly elected the Accused to the position of President of the RS and elected Plavšić and Koljević as Vice-Presidents.²⁵³

b. Functions

99. Under the Bosnian Serb Constitution, the President's duties were to represent the Republic, propose to the National Assembly candidates for the posts of Prime Minister and the posts of president and judges of the Constitutional Court, pronounce laws by decree,²⁵⁴ give amnesty, award decorations and commendations determined by the law, and perform other duties in accordance with the Constitution.²⁵⁵

100. The President also possessed contingent powers such as the authority, when the Assembly was unable to meet due to a state of emergency, to pronounce such a state and "order measures for its elimination, in accordance to the Constitution and the law", "in co-ordination with the opinion of the Government".²⁵⁶ The President also had the power, during a state of war or imminent threat of war, on his own initiative or at the Government's suggestion, to establish enactments on issues within the authority of the Assembly and forward them to the Assembly for confirmation as soon as the Assembly could meet.²⁵⁷ In exercise of this contingent power, the Presidency passed the Law

This authority is distinct from the authority of the President, under paragraph 2 of article 81, during a state of war or imminent threat of war, to enact laws, which would later be confirmed by the Assembly. See para. 100.

101. The President of the Republic served as the Commander in Chief, or Supreme Commander, of the VRS.²⁶⁰

102. Under the Bosnian Serb Constitution, the President could ask the Government to give its position on issues important to the Republic.²⁶¹ The Presidency “regularly received reports through the Government, which was in regular contact with municipalities, Crisis Staffs and Serbian Autonomous Regions”.²⁶² The Presidency and President also received reports from the MUP²⁶³ and the Main Staff of the VRS.²⁶⁴

5. Council of Ministers

103. On 21 December 1991, the Bosnian Serb Assembly named a Council of Ministers.²⁶⁵ The Council of Ministers was composed of a president, 18 ministers, and the five presidents of the Governments of the SAOs, the latter designated as ex officio members.²⁶⁶ Many of the members named on 21 December 1991 held positions in ministries of the joint government of BiH.²⁶⁷ The Council of Ministers was to function as the executive organ of the Bosnian Serb Assembly.²⁶⁸

104. On 11 January 1992, the Council of Ministers held its first session, where it established interim commissions on economic and development policy, public services, domestic policy, justice, and administration.²⁶⁹ According to the minutes of the meeting, the Council of Ministers also discussed the “[e]xecution of tasks resulting from the Declaration of the Promulgation of the Republic of the Serbian People of Bosnia and Herzegovina” and identified priorities in relation to the Declaration as “the defining of ethnic territory, establishment of government organs in the territory and the economic disempowerment of the current authorities in the [SRBiH]”.²⁷⁰ The Accused as the President of the SDS, Krajišnik as the President of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Secretary of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the President of the SDS Executive Board, the President of the Chamber of Municipalities of the SRBiH Assembly, and Plavšić—a member of the SRBiH Presidency—attended the meeting.²⁷¹

105. At its second meeting, held on 17 January 1992, the Council of Ministers addressed the Draft Work Programme of the Council and discussed the need to adopt the Constitution of the Republic as soon as possible and to consolidate and organise the territory of the regions, including through the formation of new municipalities.²⁷²

106. The Council of Ministers, under the Constitutional Law passed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 28 February 1992,²⁷³ was to carry out the rights and duties of the Government until the Government was elected and operative and effectively served as a precursor to the Bosnian Serb Government.²⁷⁴

107. At its 13th session held on 24 March 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a decision relieving from duty the Council of Ministers of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and elected members of the first Bosnian Serb Government.²⁷⁵

6. Bosnian Serb Government

a. Establishment

108. While he was a member of the BiH Government, Đerić was nominated by Plavšić for the post of Prime Minister in the Bosnian Serb Government.²⁷⁶ Serbs who had been serving in ministerial posts in the Government of BiH were appointed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly as Ministers to equivalent positions in the Bosnian Serb Government.²⁷⁷ Where no Serb sat as Minister or deputy Minister in the BiH Government, the Prime Minister was to propose candidates for ministerial posts in the Bosnian Serb Government to the Bosnian Serb Assembly.²⁷⁸

109. On 24 March 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly elected Đerić as the Prime Minister, Aleksa Buha as Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mićo Stanišić as Minister of Internal Affairs in the SerBiH Government.²⁷⁹ At the same session, the Assembly instructed the Government to prepare and submit to the Assembly for adoption an operational plan “of assuming power and rendering operational the authorities in the territory of the Serbian Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina”.²⁸⁰

110. In the first days of April 1992, following international recognition of BiH as an independent state and the beginning of the conflict, the Bosnian Serb leadership relocated to Pale, about 20 kilometres from Sarajevo.²⁸¹ From 15 April 1992, the Government held regular meetings in

Pale in joint sessions with the new SNB.²⁸² The Kikinda Hotel functioned as the seat of the Bosnian Serb institutions, namely the Assembly, the Presidency, and the Government, until June 1992.²⁸³

111. The Government met in several joint sessions with the SNB in April and May 1992.²⁸⁴ From around 18 May 1992, the Government began convening by itself.²⁸⁵

b. Functions

112. The Bosnian Serb Constitution vested the Bosnian Serb Government with executive authority, under the formal control of the Assembly.²⁸⁶ Under the Bosnian Serb Constitution, the Government's functions were, inter alia, to propose and ensure the implementation of laws and regulations, to give its opinion regarding laws and regulations proposed to the National Assembly by other persons, to establish principles for the internal organisation of ministries and other bodies of the republic, and to coordinate and supervise the work of ministries and other bodies of the republic.²⁸⁷

113. The Government was headed by the Prime Minister, two deputy Prime Ministers, and 13 Ministers.²⁸⁸

114. Aleksandar Buha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was in charge of contacts with international representatives.²⁸⁹ The Ministry of Information, under Velibor Ostojić, dealt with general public information, and would distribute and report on the statements from Government sessions, press briefings, and news conferences.²⁹⁰ Dragan Kalinić, Minister of Health and Social Affairs, was in charge of co-operation with international humanitarian organisations.²⁹¹

115. In April 1992, Koljević proposed to JNA colonel Bogdan Subotić that he set up a Ministry of Defence.²⁹² Subotić accepted the assignment, moved to Pale, and with the assistance of the SFRY Ministry of Defence, started organising the Ministry and preparing drafts of the Law on Defence and Law on the Army.²⁹³ These drafts were eventually adopted by the Government and submitted to the Bosnian Serb Assembly.²⁹⁴

c. Structure and relationship to other entities

116. Under the Bosnian Serb Constitution, the Government was responsible to the Assembly.²⁹⁵ The Bosnian Serb Government was to report to the Assembly on its progress in policy implementation and law enforcement.²⁹⁶ Based on an evaluation of the Government's work, the Assembly could hold a vote of no-confidence.²⁹⁷ The Government could propose the convening of sessions of the Assembly.²⁹⁸

117. In a letter to the Government, the Chairman of the SDS Executive Board stated that the Government was to implement the policy of the party and that at all levels from the municipality to the Republic, appointments were not possible without the party's approval.²⁹⁹ While the Bosnian Serb Constitution provided that the prime minister propose candidates for ministerial positions to the Assembly,³⁰⁰ in fact it was the SDS and the SDS President that chose the nominees.³⁰¹ For

The Government was to take decisions by a simple majority vote, in sessions with a majority of the members attending.³⁰³ It was to co-operate with municipal executive organs by having their representatives participate in Government sessions, as well as by having Ministers participate in sessions of the municipal organs.³⁰⁴

119. A new “Law on the Government of the Republika Srpska” was passed by the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 15 September 1992.³⁰⁵ Under the new Law on the Government, the Bosnian Serb Government could propose to the President of the Republic the declaration of a state of emergency as well as adequate measures and decisions could be made by a majority of the Government members present at a Government session.³⁰⁶

120. The Government was in regular contact with municipalities and SAOs.³⁰⁷ The Government regularly received letters, reports, and requests from Government organs and requested or received reports from individual ministries;³⁰⁸ some reports were conveyed to the Presidency³⁰⁹ or submitted to the Assembly.³¹⁰ Minutes of Government sessions also indicate that ministries were assigned tasks with direction from the Presidency.³¹¹ The Ministry of Justice and municipalities or municipal-level bodies had communications about matters relating to detained persons.³¹²

d. Initial actions

121. In the course of 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government held around 90 sessions.³¹³ Legislative proposals were forwarded to the Assembly, while decisions within the competence of the Government were published in the Official Gazette.³¹⁴

122. The Government was also concerned with the issue of deserted houses and apartments in the municipalities, as well as the issue of Muslim-owned property in general.³¹⁵ It would send individual Ministers to visit municipal assemblies in order to be kept up to date on the situation.³¹⁶

123. By early May 1992, the Government had at its disposal in Pale a Republican Information Centre which connected with regional communication centres in the Bosnian-Serb territory.³¹⁷ It operated 24 hours per day and had five employees.³¹⁸ By June 1992, written reports, as well as dozens of telegrams, were received daily by the Centre and sent on to the intended recipients.³¹⁹

The latter work was done through the state-level Exchange Commission formed after the April meeting.³²¹

125. On 8 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government established a Central Commission for the Exchange of Prisoners of War and Arrested Persons.³²² The Commission's jurisdiction was to extend over the entire territory of the SerBiH and cover "all cases of negotiating and exchanging prisoners-of-war, arrested persons and the bodies of those killed".³²³ If the Commission was unable to do its work throughout the territory of the Republic, presidents of Serb districts, in co-operation with the commanders of TO staffs and chiefs of CSBs, were to form a commission for the area of the district.³²⁴ The commissions for districts were to "submit reports on measures taken to the Central Commission".³²⁵ The Commission worked through local commissions.³²⁶

126. On 10 May 1992, the SNB and the Government appointed the members of the Commission, who included representatives from the Bosnian Serb Ministry of Defence, the MUP, and the Ministry of Justice.³²⁷ The Commission was initially headed by Rajko Čolović,³²⁸ who was replaced as president of the Commission by Slobodan Avlijaš by a decision of the SerBiH Government,³²⁹ however, Avlijaš asked to be relieved of the position and Nenad Vanovac was appointed president of the Commission.³³⁰ Instructions on the Treatment of Captured Persons published in the Official Gazette on 13 June 1992 and signed by the Minister of Defence Bogdan Subotić stated that the Commission operates under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Justice.³³¹

127. The Commission's official role was to co-ordinate exchanges and to provide information on captured persons.³³² As part of that role the Commission was to differentiate between civilians and prisoners of war, with a view to releasing the former and preventing crisis staffs or paramilitary formations from committing crimes against the latter.³³³ The report on the activities of the Ministry of Justice and Administration in the period May-October 1992 indicates that the Ministry "urged the Presidency to establish a Central Commission for the exchange of prisoners of war, incarcerated and wounded persons, and dead bodies" to address "the increased influx of incarcerated persons".³³⁴ According to Mandić, the impetus for establishing the Commission was to provide "rule of law and legal security" for people detained, many of whom were civilians from conflict areas.³³⁵

128. On 6 June 1992, the Commission issued an order signed by the Commission President Čolović that stated that SJBs "engaged in safeguarding of facilities where prisoners of war, or detainees are located, shall keep evidence of all the persons who have been brought in" and "shall submit lists of detainees or persons deprived of liberty to municipal commissions for exchange of prisoners of war on regular basis".³³⁶ The order further stated that municipal commissions were to submit the lists to regional commissions or to the Central Commission.³³⁷ According to the order, detainees or persons deprived of liberty could not be released or exchanged without a prior order of the Commission.³³⁸

130. Around the fall of 1991, several areas declared themselves SAOs.³⁴³ These included the SAO Herzegovina (formerly, Community of Municipalities of Eastern and Old Herzegovina), Autonomous Region of Krajina (formerly, ZOBK), SAO Northeastern Bosnia, SAO Romanija, SAO Northern Bosnia, and SAO Birač.³⁴⁴ The Bosnian Serb Assembly approved on 21 December 1991 the appointment of Jovan Čizmović as the co-ordinator of activities of the executive bodies of the SAOs.³⁴⁵

131. On 11 December 1991, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a recommendation that SDS deputies in municipal assemblies in BiH in which the SDS did not have a majority establish “municipal assemblies of the Serbian people”.³⁴⁶ The recommendation was directed to groups of SDS deputies in municipal assemblies in BiH “on whom decisions contrary to the interests of the Serbian people are imposed”.³⁴⁷ The recommendation stated that the assemblies would be composed of SDS deputies and “other deputies of Serb nationality who make a statement on joining the Assembly”.³⁴⁸ Attached to the recommendation was a model decision on the establishment of an assembly of the Serbian people to be adopted by individual municipalities.³⁴⁹ These decisions were to be verified by the Bosnian Serb Assembly.³⁵⁰

132. Instructions dated 19 December 1991 were issued by the Main Board of the SDS regarding Serb-dominated municipalities, designated Variant A, and Serb-minority municipalities, designated Variant B.³⁵¹ The Variant A/B Instructions directed SDS municipal officials to form Serb municipal institutions in municipalities where Serbs were a minority.³⁵² The instructions were communicated from SDS leaders to municipal SDS leaders and boards.³⁵³ Copies of the document itself were distributed by the Accused for viewing only by high-ranking municipal officials, such as presidents of municipalities or other municipal authorities, at a meeting on or around 20 December 1991³⁵⁴ attended by all members of the Main Board and Executive Board, deputies, municipal representatives, and members of the government.³⁵⁵

133. The Variant A/B Instructions called for, in the first phase in Variant A and B municipalities, convening and proclaiming an assembly of the Serbian people and carrying out preparations for the establishment of municipal state or government organs.³⁵⁶ According to the instructions, the tasks laid out therein were to be implemented over the entire territory of the SRBiH or in every municipality where the Serbian people live, in their entirety in Variant A municipalities and partially in Variant B municipalities.³⁵⁷ The instructions addressed the formation of Crisis Staffs in Variant A and B municipalities as part of the first phase.³⁵⁸

However, other evidence indicates that the meeting likely took place the next day, on 20 December 1991. See D215 (Excerpts from Ljubo Grcković’s diary), p. 59; P2536 (Patrick Treanor’s expert report entitled “The Bosnian Serb Leadership 1990-1992”, 30 July 2002), para. 62; P2550 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and Momčilo Krajišnik, 21 December 1991), p. 3, Patrick Treanor, T. 14029–14030 (1 June 2011); P5792 (Intercept of conversation between Radovan Karadžić and Milan Novaković, 19 December 1991), pp. 1–2; Momčilo Krajišnik, T. 43856–43857 (20 November 2013). The Chamber does not consider the date discrepancy to affect the reliability of Nešković’s evidence on the substance of the meeting. Miroslav Toholj stated that the Variant A/B Instructions were not presented during this meeting. D3981 (Witness statement of Miroslav Toholj dated 31 October 2013), para. 92. Having considered the weight of evidence which demonstrates that the Variant A/B Instructions were presented at this meeting, the Chamber does not find Toholj’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber also had regard to the evasiveness, contradictions and indicators of partiality in his testimony.

134. In the second phase in Variant A and B municipalities, the Variant A/B Instructions called for, inter alia, convening a session of the Serb municipal assembly, establishing a municipal executive board and municipal state or government organs, mobilising and resubordinating all Serb police forces in co-ordination with JNA command and staff, and ensuring the implementation of the order for mobilisation of JNA reserve and territorial defence units.³⁵⁹

135. On 14 February 1992, at an extended session of the SDS Main and Executive Boards, the Accused referred to the implementation of phase two of the Variant A/B Instructions.³⁶⁰ The presidents of SDS municipal boards, presidents and members of regional boards, presidents of assemblies, and executive boards of municipalities were invited to this meeting.³⁶¹ This discussion and a directive to implement phase two were conveyed to municipal boards.³⁶²

136. On 24 March 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly verified the decisions of numerous municipal assemblies on the proclamation of newly established Serbian municipalities, including Vogošća, Srebrenica, Bratunac, Prijedor, Višegrad, Foča, Brčko, and Zvornik.³⁶³ Earlier in the Assembly session, the Accused stated: “Newly established municipalities must establish their organs as soon as possible, have their stamps made and start to work. The police, that is, our organs must be positioned at the border.”³⁶⁴

a. Crisis Staffs

139. The Variant A/B Instructions ordered SDS municipal boards in Variant A and B municipalities in the first phase to “establish immediately Crisis Staffs of the Serbian People in the municipality”, comprising all members of the SDS municipal board secretariat, SDS candidates in certain municipal organs (Variant A) or SDS candidates in every municipal organ (Variant B), deputies of the Assembly of the Serbian People in BiH, and members of the SDS Main Board from the municipality.³⁷³ The Commander of the Crisis Staff was, in Variant A municipalities, the president of the municipal assembly or the chairman of the municipal executive board and, in Variant B municipalities, the president of the SDS municipal board.³⁷⁴ This composition and leadership of the Crisis Staffs provided for close links between the Crisis Staffs and the SDS and its leadership.³⁷⁵

140. On 27 March 1992, at a session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused reiterated the instructions to “urgently establish” Crisis Staffs in the municipalities and for the presidents of municipalities and executive boards to “hold the highest ranks in the crisis staffs”.³⁷⁶ The Accused stated: “I urge you to undertake, with the full authorisation of the Assembly, the task of introducing discipline and organising crisis staffs, headed by reserve and retired officers in order to organise the people for defensive purposes. Exclusively for defensive purposes”.³⁷⁷

142. On 26 April 1992, the Bosnian Serb Government under Prime Minister Đerić issued “Instructions for the Work of Crisis Staffs of the Serbian People in Municipalities”, which stated: “In wartime conditions, the Crisis Staff shall take over all the prerogatives and functions of municipal assemblies, when they are not in a position to meet.”³⁷⁹ The record of the session of the SNB and Government on 27 April 1992 states that “[i]t was concluded that comprehensive instructions for crisis staffs should be drafted in which the manner of political work on the ground and organisation of the functioning of the authorities will be presented”.³⁸⁰

143. The 26 April 1992 Instructions provided that the Crisis Staff “shall co-ordinate governmental functions for the purpose of the defence of territory, safety of the population and its property, establishment of authority and organisation of all other aspects of life and work”.³⁸¹ The instructions further stated that the Crisis Staff would, through these “co-ordination efforts”, “create the conditions for the municipal executive board to exercise legal executive power, manage the economy and other aspects of life”.³⁸² The instructions stated that “[t]he work of the Crisis Staff shall be based on the provisions of the Constitution and the law, and on the decisions of the Assembly, the Presidency and the Government of the [SerBiH]”.³⁸³

144. According to the 26 April 1992 Instructions, the Crisis Staffs were “obliged to gather information on the situation in the field and notify and consult the competent authorities in [SerBiH], i.e. commissioners of the Government appointed for the areas and regions especially threatened by war”.³⁸⁴ municipality.³⁸⁵ At a minimum, however, the relationship involved a co-ordinating and supporting role for the Crisis Staffs. In at least one municipality, Zvornik, the local JNA commander was listed as a member of the Crisis Staff.³⁸⁶ Crisis Staffs also provided various forms of general assistance to the TO, such as calling for mobilisation within their municipalities and providing financial assistance.³⁸⁷

146. As will be further discussed later in this judgement, Crisis Staffs were formed and in existence between 1991 and 1993 in municipalities relevant to the charges in the Indictment.³⁸⁸ There were also Crisis Staffs of SAOs, including for SAO Semberija and Majevica,³⁸⁹ ARK,³⁹⁰ and SAO Birač.³⁹¹ joint session of the SNB and Government, on 22 April 1992, concluded that the Government was to appoint a war presidency and war executive boards in all municipalities where executive boards “are not functioning”.³⁹⁴

148. On 31 May 1992, the Presidency issued, pursuant to Article 5 of the Constitutional Law on the Implementation of the Constitution of the SerBiH, a decision constituting War Presidencies “in the municipalities of the Serbian Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina where the assembly and the executive organ are unable to exercise authority”.³⁹⁵ The War Presidencies were to be composed of a republican commissioner and the president of the municipal assembly or his deputy, the chairman of the executive board or his deputy, or citizens who are deputies or assemblymen.³⁹⁶

149. The 31 May 1992 Decision stated that the War Presidency “shall organise, coordinate and adjust activities for the defence of the Serbian people and the establishment of legal organs of authority in the municipality”; “shall perform all the functions of the assembly and the executive organ until there is a possibility for these organs to convene and work”; and “shall create and secure conditions for the work of military organs and units on the defence of the Serbian people”, inter alia.³⁹⁷

150. The republican commissioner, who would be a member of the War Presidencies, was to be appointed by the SerBiH Presidency and have the “right and duty [...] to ensure permanent coordination and implementation of the policies and measures that are established and adopted by the republican state organs and the Main Staff of the [VRS]”.³⁹⁸

151. According to the 31 May 1992 decision, the Crisis Staffs in the municipalities were to cease operating on the date the War Presidencies were constituted.³⁹⁹ On 31 May 1992, the Secretary of the SDS Executive Board sent a notice to SAOs Herzegovina, Romanija–Birač, and Semberija stating that the Crisis Staffs whose structure and method of work were established by the 26 April 1992 Instructions have been abolished under the 31 May 1992 decision and that War Commissions/Presidencies instead were being established in the municipalities at a time of imminent threat of war or state of war.⁴⁰⁰ This communication stated that it was the duty of the recipients, hitherto presidents of regional Crisis Staffs and now war commissioners,⁴⁰¹ to ensure the implementation of the 31 May 1992 decision and instructed them to contact the Presidency directly with any remarks or suggestions related thereto.⁴⁰²

c. War Commissions

153. On 10 June 1992, the Presidency issued, pursuant to Article 5 of the Constitutional Law on the Implementation of the Constitution of the SerBiH, a decision establishing War Commissions in SerBiH municipalities “which are either affected by war or are facing imminent threat of war”.⁴⁰⁴ The War Commissions were to be composed of “a state commissioner and four members from the ranks of the most influential citizens within the crisis staff, the economy and the ruling party”.⁴⁰⁵ The decision stated that the SerBiH Presidency would “appoint state commissioners to provide expert and other assistance to the war presidencies”.⁴⁰⁶ The state commissioners could appoint and dissolve War Commissions in consultation with the War Presidency at the Republic level.⁴⁰⁷

154. The War Commissions were to “maintain the closest possible cooperation with the legal authorities”, “convey directives issued by the War Presidency of the Republic”, “convey information about the problems, needs and work of the municipal bodies via their commissioners”, and “cooperate with the authorities with a view to creating conditions for the work of military organs and units engaged in defending the Serbian people”.⁴⁰⁸

155. The War Commissions, once constituted, were to supersede the Crisis Staffs, and the decision itself was to supersede the 31 May 1992 decision establishing War Presidencies in municipalities in time of imminent threat of war or during a state of war.⁴⁰⁹

156. Records such as confirmations of appointments, orders, reports, or meeting minutes indicate the existence of War Commissions including in Foča, Pale, Zvornik, Vlasenica, Bratunac, Novo Sarajevo, Vogošća, and Ilidža.⁴¹⁰ For instance, a decision of the Vogošća war commission states that it worked with civilian and military, municipal and republic-level authorities and it was to ensure that municipal civilian and military organs carried out their duties in accordance with laws and regulations.⁴¹¹

157. State commissioners were appointed by the Presidency in June 1992, including Nikola Poplašen for Vogošća,⁴¹² Vojislav Maksimović for Foča,⁴¹³ and Dragan Đokanović for Zvornik,⁴¹⁴ Bratunac,⁴¹⁵ and Vlasenica.⁴¹⁶

C. BOSNIAN SERB MILITARY AND POLICE STRUCTURES

159. During the time period relevant to the Indictment, the armed forces in the RS consisted of the VRS and Bosnian Serb MUP personnel.⁴¹⁸ The Prosecution defines the “Serb Forces” as “members of the MUP, VRS, JNA, VJ, TO, the Serbian MUP, Serbian and Bosnian Serb paramilitary forces and volunteer units, and local Bosnian Serbs”.⁴¹⁹ The Prosecution further defines the “Bosnian Serb forces” as members of “the VRS, the TO, the MUP and Bosnian Serb paramilitary forces and volunteer units”.⁴²⁰ For ease of reference, the Chamber adopts these definitions. The structure of the respective components of these forces will be addressed in turn in this section.

a. Establishment and composition of the VRS

160. On 12 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly decided to establish the Army of SerBiH.⁴²¹ On 12 August 1992, when SerBiH was renamed RS, the denomination of the army also changed from Army of SerBiH to the VRS.⁴²² The Accused, in his capacity as President of the RS, was also the Supreme Commander of the VRS.⁴²³ Ratko Mladić was appointed the Commander of the Main Staff.⁴²⁴ Manojlo Milovanović was appointed as both the Chief of Staff and Deputy Commander of the Main Staff.⁴²⁵

161. The VRS was formed from parts of the JNA, TO, and volunteer units.⁴²⁶ Each of the former JNA corps in BiH retained most of its personnel and weaponry.⁴²⁷ The VRS inherited both officers and other ranks from the JNA, many of whom were of Bosnian Serb origin, as well as a substantial amount of weaponry and equipment.⁴²⁸ In places where there were no former JNA infantry units, the VRS created units.⁴²⁹ Weapons from the former JNA were distributed to the infantry units by officers and SDS members.⁴³⁰ The official withdrawal of the JNA was announced on 5 May 1992 and by 19 May 1992 it was said to be nearly completed.⁴³¹ On 21 May 1992, the Accused, in his capacity as President of the Presidency, issued an order on general mobilisation.⁴³²

162. According to the Defence Act, the Accused, as the President, had the power to organise and implement plans for defence, order mobilisation, command and control the army, and define the basis for the organisation and size of the police force.⁴³³ The Accused, as President, also had the power to issue orders for the deployment of the police during the war.⁴³⁴

163. On 15 June 1992, the Accused, in his capacity as President of the Presidency, established a system of command and control in the VRS.⁴³⁵ It consisted of a Main Staff and operative groups, including Corps of land forces consisting of brigades, regiments, and units.⁴³⁶ The Main Staff had command and control over the operative groups.⁴³⁷ The Main Staff was also directly subordinated to the President, as the Supreme Commander.⁴³⁸ The operative groups initially consisted of (i) the 1st Krajina Corps with headquarters in Banja Luka; (ii) the 2nd Krajina Corps with headquarters in Drvar; (iii) the Eastern Bosnia Corps with headquarters in Bijeljina; (iv) the SRK with headquarters in Pale; (v) the Herzegovina Corps with headquarters in Bileća; and (vi) the Air Force and Air Defence Corps with headquarters in Banja Luka.⁴³⁹ On 1 November 1992, the Drina Corps was formed.⁴⁴⁰

25296. On 27 April 1992, Izetbegović issued a decision ordering the withdrawal of the JNA from BiH. Members of the JNA were given the choice to join the “newly formed forces” of the TO of BiH or to leave the territory. D224 (Alija Izetbegović’s decision re JNA withdrawal from BiH, 27 April 1992).

b. Supreme Command

165. On 30 November 1992, the Accused, in his capacity as the President of the Presidency, established the Supreme Command for the purpose of co-ordinating and improving the efficiency of the command system of the VRS.⁴⁴³ The Supreme Command consisted of the Supreme Commander who was the President of the Presidency, the RS Assembly President, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Defence, and the Minister of the Interior.⁴⁴⁴ The Commander of the Main Staff of the VRS, his assistants and other members of the Main Staff, and Commanders of the Corps were also allowed to attend meetings of the Supreme Command by invitation.⁴⁴⁵

166. The Supreme Command held both regular and extraordinary sessions in which various strategic issues were discussed and conclusions and tasks were adopted.⁴⁴⁶ When military decisions had to be made, members of the Main Staff attended meetings of the Supreme Command as observers without voting rights.⁴⁴⁷ The Supreme Command's decisions were adopted by the Supreme Commander.⁴⁴⁸ The Supreme Commander also periodically issued directives, which assigned tasks to subordinate units in order to carry out the planning and execution of combat operations.⁴⁴⁹

c. Supreme Commander

167. According to the Law on the Army and the Amended RS Constitution, the President of the Republic was the Supreme Commander and thus the Commander-in-Chief of the VRS.⁴⁵⁰ Accordingly, the Accused, as Supreme Commander, held the highest authority in respect of the VRS.⁴⁵¹ The Accused remained the Supreme Commander until July 1996.⁴⁵² The powers of the

d. VRS Main Staff

169. Commanded by Mladić,⁴⁶¹ the Main Staff was the highest operative body of the VRS.⁴⁶² The Main Staff directed and planned the conduct of army operations.⁴⁶³ It was responsible for the mobilisation, training, and deployment of troops; co-ordination between the Corps;⁴⁶⁴ the drafting of military documents;⁴⁶⁵ the engagement of armed forces;⁴⁶⁶ the relationship with UNPROFOR regarding military activities and cease-fires;⁴⁶⁷ and the implementation of discipline and control over subordinate units.⁴⁶⁸ The headquarters of the Main Staff was located at Crna Rijeka and the logistics (rear) command post was at Han Pijesak.⁴⁶⁹ The code name for the Main Staff command post was “Panorama”.⁴⁷⁰

⁴⁶¹ See para. 160. On 15 December 1992, the Accused reaffirmed the appointment of Mladić as Commander of the Main Staff of the VRS. ii. Eastern Bosnia Corps

181. Headquartered in Bijeljina,⁵¹⁵ the Eastern Bosnia Corps' area of responsibility was in northeast BiH, with the Sava River to the north and Drina River to the east.⁵¹⁶ However, before the creation of the Drina Corps in November 1992, it also extended as far south as Zvornik and Vlasenica.⁵¹⁷ In May 1992, the Corps Commander was Colonel Nikola Denčić, who was replaced by Colonel Dragutin Ilić on 7 June 1992.⁵¹⁸ In July 1995, General Novica Simić was the Corps Commander.⁵¹⁹ The Chief of Security was Dušan Tanasković.⁵²⁰

182. The Eastern Bosnia Corps was a small corps in terms of troop numbers.⁵²¹ By 7 June 1992, it consisted of eight brigades, namely, the Posavina Brigade, the Brčko Brigade, the 1st Semberija Brigade, the 2nd Semberija Brigade, the 1st Majeвица Brigade, the 2nd Majeвица Brigade, the Zvornik Brigade, and the Birač Brigade.⁵²²

iii. SRK

183. The area of responsibility of the SRK was the greater Sarajevo area between Višegrad, Kladanj, and Igman, which was the former zone of responsibility of the 4th JNA Corps.⁵²³ The SRK's main forces were positioned around the inner ring of Sarajevo, in the areas of Ilidža, Neđarići, and Grbavica.⁵²⁴ The rear command post of the SRK was immediately northwest of Pale town while the main command post was at the Lukavica barracks.⁵²⁵

184. Colonel Tomislav Šipčić was the Commander of the SRK from 8 July to early August 1992.⁵²⁶ General Stanislav Galić was the Commander from 10 September 1992 until August 1994.⁵²⁷ Thereafter, Dragomir Milošević, the SRK Chief of Staff, assumed command.⁵²⁸ Dragomir Milošević remained Corps Commander until 1996.⁵²⁹ During the period covered by the ⁵²⁴ See Adjudicated Fact 21. From August 1994 to November 1995, the SRK's areas of responsibility included Ilidža, Osijek, Butila, Blažuj, Lukavica, Ilijaš, Vrace, Grbavica, Zlatište, parts of Dobrinja, the area up to Mount Trebević, the hills south and southwest of Sarajevo, Rajlovac, Špicasta Stijena, the northeast of Sarajevo, Nedžarići (north of the airport), and Vogošća. Most of Grbavica was controlled by the SRK but it was surrounded on three sides by the ABiH. On the eastern confrontation line in Grbavica, the area from the Vrbanja Bridge towards the Jewish cemetery up to Debelo Brdo was controlled by the SRK. There were two confrontations lines and control over areas of Dobrinja was divided between the SRK and ABiH. See Adjudicated Facts 2824, 2826, 2828, 2832, 2833, 2835, 2840, 2841. Indictment, the Chiefs of Staff were Dragan Marčetić,⁵³⁰ Dragomir Milošević,⁵³¹ and Čedo Sladoje,⁵³² successively.

185. There were four staff divisions and a liaison division within the Corps headquarters.⁵³³ The operational division was headed by the Assistant Corps Commander for Organisation and Mobilisation.⁵³⁴ Its main responsibility was ensuring the operations and training of the troops.⁵³⁵ The morale division was headed by the Assistant Corps Commander for Morale, Legal, and Religious Affairs and responsible for informing the Corps Commander about the status of morale within the corps.⁵³⁶ The security division was headed by the Assistant Corps Commander for Intelligence and Security and responsible for disseminating intelligence information.⁵³⁷ The logistics division was headed by the Assistant Commander for Logistics and Corps Rear Services.⁵³⁸ Finally, the liaison division was responsible for liaising with UNPROFOR.⁵³⁹

186. The SRK had approximately 18,000 troops.⁵⁴⁰ The number of operative units, in particular brigades and battalions, varied between 1992 and 1995.⁵⁴¹ The brigades included the 1st Romanija Infantry Brigade, the 2nd Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade, the 1st Sarajevo Mechanised (Motorised) Brigade, the Koševo Light Infantry Brigade, the 3rd Sarajevo Light Infantry Brigade,⁵⁴² the 4th

202. The so-called “Drina Wolves” was a special unit of the Zvornik Brigade housed in Kiseljak.⁵⁹⁷ It could be deployed when necessary in order to defend certain territories.⁵⁹⁸ The unit was commanded by Dragan Jolović, also referred to as “Legenda”.⁵⁹⁹ Members of the Drina Wolves were identified by a patch of a wolf head on the left shoulder of their uniforms.⁶⁰⁰

f. Command and control principles

203. The VRS system of command and control had three levels: strategic, operational, and tactical.⁶⁰¹ Applying the same definition and principles of command and control as the JNA,⁶⁰² the VRS organised unified and centralised command according to the following: (i) a “corps-brigade-battalion” model directly subordinated to a corps command;⁶⁰³ (ii) a subordinate-commander relationship in which every superior had the responsibility to monitor and assess the work of their subordinates and subordinates had to follow strict procedures of reporting and actions;⁶⁰⁴ and (iii) centralised decisions that followed a unified chain of command.⁶⁰⁵ For example, based on directives from the Main Staff, the SRK Commander would issue and/or approve orders to the subordinate commands.⁶⁰⁶ Subordinate commands would report back to the SRK command.⁶⁰⁷ On occasion, the SRK Commander would receive information and directives directly from the Supreme Command and the Accused.⁶⁰⁸

204. On 1 June 1992, the Law on the Army was issued by the SerBiH Presidency; it provided that the command in the VRS “shall be founded on principles of a unified command regarding the use of forces and means, single authority, obligations to enforce decisions, command and orders issued by superior commanders”.⁶⁰⁹ It vested the President, as Commander-in-Chief, with the authority to command the army, establish plans for its development and deployment, establish the system of command, and issue a variety of regulations.⁶¹⁰ The Main Staff Commander would command the VRS in compliance with the authority that the President delegated to him.⁶¹¹

205. There were two parallel chains of command in the VRS: the regular chain of command and the professional chain of command.⁶¹² With regard to the security and intelligence organs, for instance, their chain of command was largely based on the work of the organs, the majority of which included intelligence and counter-intelligence activities and a smaller portion of military police tasks and criminal investigative tasks.⁶¹³ Along the regular chain of command, the security and intelligence organs were directly subordinated to the commander of the VRS unit or institution of which they formed a part.⁶¹⁴ However, with regards to their professional activities, they were controlled by the security and intelligence organs of the superior command authorised to command

g. Communication and reporting in the VRS

206. The military reporting chain in the VRS followed a hierarchical structure with the information originating from the lower military units being reported up to the intermediate military units, then to the Main Staff, and finally to the Supreme Commander.⁶¹⁷ The VRS used the vojni post, military post. numbers to identify operative units and these numbers also indicated the command and control relationship between units.⁶¹⁸

209. In general, after the establishment of the Republican Communications Centre in Pale in April 1992, there was communication between the municipalities, the MUP, and the VRS.⁶²⁷ The three main types of communications existed: (i) the telephone system (“PTT”); (ii) radio and radio relay communications; and (iii) coded communications.⁶²⁸ The PTT was the civilian telephone system.⁶²⁹ The VRS could protect certain PTT lines for their own use.⁶³⁰ Radio was used for both encrypted and unprotected communication.⁶³¹ When the radio system was not working, the radio relay system was used.⁶³² Coded communication was used for confidential information sent over the radio on unprotected lines and it was a back-up system for communication for both the VRS and MUP.⁶³³ At the Republican Communications Centre, the Accused used a direct secure telephone line to communicate to the Main Staff Communications Centre at Crna Rijeka.⁶³⁴ Additionally, Mladić had permanent direct and encrypted communication with the Corps Commands, as well as relay communication with the IKMs.⁶³⁵ was comprised of units, institutions, staff, and other organisations of individuals “for a general popular armed resistance” that could be mobilised during times of war.⁶³⁷ The TO was organised with staff at both the republic level and the municipal level.⁶³⁸

211. On 27 March 1992, before the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused gave instructions to the newly-formed municipalities to “organise the people so that they can defend themselves” as a TO and place them under the command of the JNA present at that time.⁶³⁹

212. On 15 April 1992, an imminent threat of war was declared by the SerBiH Presidency and the following day, the mobilisation of the TO was ordered.⁶⁴⁰ The TO was declared to be part of the armed forces.⁶⁴¹ Accordingly, all military conscripts were to put themselves at the disposal of the municipal TO staffs in the territory of the RS, and the newly formed TO units were to “cooperate with the JNA units, and where possible, put them under single command”.⁶⁴² Colonel Vidoje Lukić was appointed as Chief of the SerBiH TO.⁶⁴³ In April 1992, it was decided that the Accused, as President of the SNB, was to co-ordinate command over the TO forces.⁶⁴⁴ The SerBiH TO was composed of reserve men who carried out their regular jobs and who, in case of war, were called up to defend a certain territory.⁶⁴⁵

a. Establishment and structure

215. On 28 February 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly passed the Law on Internal Affairs, which established the MUP, effective 31 March 1992.⁶⁵¹ On 24 March 1992, Mićo Stanišić was appointed Minister of the MUP and he was in this position until the end of 1992 and again from January 1994 until July 1994.⁶⁵² Momčilo Mandić was the Assistant Minister of the MUP from April until May 1992.⁶⁵³ Tomislav Kovač was the Assistant Minister of the MUP in August 1992

The SJBs were established within the territory of each municipality.⁶⁶⁵ The SJBs were tasked with dealing with all public security issues, including protecting citizens, preventing and detecting criminal acts, and maintaining law and order.⁶⁶⁶ Information gathered by the SJBs was reported to the Bosnian MUP officials.⁶⁶⁷

220. The National Security Service was organised into five Sectors which operated at each CSB, i.e., in Banja Luka, Bijeljina, Doboj, Sarajevo, and Trebinje.⁶⁶⁸ It dealt with all issues of state security, including intelligence, such as gathering information on individuals or groups who conspire to violate the constitutional order and state security.⁶⁶⁹

221. In 1994, due to re-structuring of the MUP, the Public Security Service (“RJB”) and the State Security Service (“RDB”) were separated.⁶⁷⁰ Milenko Karišik was the head of the RJB.⁶⁷¹ Dragan Kijac was the head of the RDB.⁶⁷²

222. The civilian police were organised into two sections: the regular police force and the Special Police Brigade (“SBP”).⁶⁷³ The SBP functioned as a combat unit and was divided into five detachments located in Banja Luka, Trebinje, Doboj, Sarajevo, and Bijeljina.⁶⁷⁴ Goran Sarić was

228. The system of reporting within the MUP consisted of daily reports and other reports about more significant security information.⁷⁰⁰ Information was collected from the municipal level by the SJB, then sent to the regional level to the CSB, and finally sent to the MUP.⁷⁰¹ The information was also sent from the MUP to the RS government, including to the Presidency.⁷⁰² From February 1994, Gordan Milinić was appointed as the security advisor to the Accused for state security matters.⁷⁰³ He collected, processed, and reported information on military intelligence and state security intelligence to the Accused.⁷⁰⁴

c. Re-subordination of MUP personnel to the VRS

229. On 22 April 1995, the Accused issued an order clarifying the MUP re-subordination to the VRS.⁷⁰⁵ He ordered that the Main Staff must precisely and concretely define their requests for engagement and employment of MUP units in combat.⁷⁰⁶ The order reiterated that police units shall participate in combat operations by order of the Supreme Commander and the MUP.⁷⁰⁷ While the police units are engaged in combat activities, they “shall be subordinated to the commander of the unit in whose area of responsibility they are conducting combat operations”.⁷⁰⁸

230. On 15 May 1992, Mićo Stanišić issued an order that the MUP personnel would be organised into “war units” for the purpose of defending the territory.⁷⁰⁹ It authorised all the chiefs of the CSBs to organise the MUP personnel in their territory accordingly.⁷¹⁰ This order formalised the co-operation of the MUP with the VRS.⁷¹¹ Stanišić further ordered that while participating in combat activities, the units of the MUP would be subordinated to the command of the VRS.⁷¹² However, these units would be directly commanded by MUP officials.⁷¹³ Reserve police officers were made available for transfer to the frontlines and assignment into the VRS.⁷¹⁴ In 1992, over 50% of policemen were engaged in combat activities through their re-subordination to the VRS.⁷¹⁵ Units of the MUP were engaged in specialist operative duties, such as “neutralising sabotage and terrorist groups, organised criminal activities of armed individuals” in co-operation with the VRS.⁷¹⁶

4. Paramilitaries

231. In December 1991, it was reported that Serbian paramilitary groups were operating in the RS.⁷¹⁷ According to a Main Staff report in July 1992, the paramilitaries lacked a cohesive unity, expressed hatred of non-Serbs, were motivated by war profiteering or looting, had links to corrupt political leaderships, and were not affiliated with the SDS but with opposition parties from Serbia (e.g., the Serbian Renewal Movement or Serbian Radical Party).⁷¹⁸ It further reported that the paramilitaries did not partake in directly fighting with the enemy, but instead operated behind the lines of the regular VRS units, engaging in the killing of civilians as well as in looting and burning property.⁷¹⁹

Panthers.⁷³² In June 1992, an order of the Commander of the Eastern Bosnia Corps was issued that Mauzer's Panthers were to be integrated into the Corps.⁷³³

234. Men affiliated with Vojislav Šešelj, president of the SRS, operated throughout BiH and most notably with regard to the Municipalities, in Bijeljina, Zvornik, Brčko, Ilidža, and Novo Sarajevo.⁷³⁴ In Ilidža, a group of Šešelj's men was commanded by Branislav Gavrilović, also called Brne.⁷³⁵ In Vogošća, there was a group of "Šešelj's men" commanded by Vaske Vidović and another group commanded by Jovo Ostojić called the "Šoša Detachment".⁷³⁶ In Novo Sarajevo, Gavrilović and his group were also present and Slavko Aleksić led another group of Šešelj's men.⁷³⁷

235. The White Eagles operated in Ključ, Zvornik, Foča, and Ilidža.⁷³⁸ They were a paramilitary formation from Serbia.⁷³⁹ They were commanded by Desimir Dida.⁷⁴⁰ The members of the White

The Accused submits that Mauzer's unit acted independent of government command. Defence Final Brief, para. 1381 (referring to Cvijetin Simić, T. 35698–35699 (20 March 2013)). The Chamber does not consider that the evidence cited nor the other evidence received in this case supports this proposition. Dragomir Ljubojević testified that Mauzer's Panthers was a unit of the VRS and "never a party army" and consisted of people from all areas including from Bijeljina itself and it was not formed by the SDS but by the staff of the TO of the municipality. Dragomir Ljubojević, T. 35902–35903 (22 March 2013). The Chamber notes his evidence but does not accept that Mauzer's unit was initially formed as a unit of the VRS.

Eagles wore uniforms with white ribbons on their sleeves and on their heads.⁷⁴¹ The insignia of the White Eagles was a symbol of a skull and cross bones.⁷⁴²

236. The Red Berets were a paramilitary group which operated in Brčko and Zvornik.⁷⁴³ They were commanded by Dragan Vasiljković, a.k.a. Captain Dragan.⁷⁴⁴

237. The Yellow Wasps consisted of around 100 to 300 men.⁷⁴⁵ They were commanded by Vojin (Žučo) Vučković⁷⁴⁶ and operated in Zvornik from April to May 1992.⁷⁴⁷ They had close co-operation with the TO and were issued arms by the TO's logistics staff.⁷⁴⁸

238. In the spring of 1992, some paramilitary formations worked in co-ordination with the TO and municipal Crisis Staffs.⁷⁴⁹ The Bosnian Serb leadership and military commanders increasingly expressed opposition to having units that were outside of the command and control of the army.⁷⁵⁰ This led to various VRS and Bosnian Serb MUP leaders attempting to control paramilitary groups in the RS territory.⁷⁵¹ The Main Staff recommended that every armed Serb should be placed under

On 13 June 1992, the Accused banned the formation and operation of armed groups and individuals on the territory of the RS which were not under the control of the VRS.⁷⁵⁴ The Accused also stated that he disowned groups that continued independent operation and those groups would suffer the strictest sanctions for their operations.⁷⁵⁵ Following this order, Arkan’s men left BiH, Captain Dragan’s unit was driven out by the VRS, and Mauzer’s Panthers were to be integrated into the Eastern Bosnia Corps.⁷⁵⁶ A group of individuals, referred to as “Chetniks”, remained around Sarajevo and according to Milovanović sometimes co-operated with the VRS but may have been under the control of the MUP.⁷⁵⁷

240. On 28 July 1992, Mladić ordered the disarming of paramilitaries.⁷⁵⁸ He noted that paramilitaries engaged in looting were operating in all territories under Bosnian Serb control and ordered that all paramilitary formations with “honest” intentions be placed under the command of the VRS.⁷⁵⁹ No individual or group responsible for crimes was to be incorporated into the army, and any member of a paramilitary unit who refused to submit to the unified command of the VRS was to be disarmed and arrested.⁷⁶⁰

241. On 30 July 1992, the 1st Krajina Corps Commander Talić issued an instruction, ordering that all paramilitary formations be offered an opportunity to join the VRS except for individuals or groups involved in criminal activity.⁷⁶¹ Talić further ordered co-operation with the Bosnian MUP to disarm or arrest those individuals or groups who refuse to come under the unified command of the VRS.⁷⁶² By the end of August 1992, the 1st Krajina Corps reported that paramilitary formations were either disarming or placing themselves under the control of the Corps' units.⁷⁶³

242. In the other Corps there were serious attempts to control the paramilitary forces.⁷⁶⁴ For instance, Mauzer's Panthers were initially placed under Main Staff command and then subsequently integrated into the Eastern Bosnia Corps.⁷⁶⁵

244. The term “volunteers” was also used by individuals in paramilitary formations when referring to themselves.⁷⁶⁸ Nevertheless according to the Law on the Army, volunteers were individuals who placed themselves under the command of the army without a wartime assignment, while paramilitary formations were groups outside of anyone’s control at least in the early days of the war.⁷⁶⁹ VRS commanders used the concept of volunteers to integrate members of paramilitary formations into VRS operative units.⁷⁷⁰ that all coercive actions on behalf of the state authorities were conducted in accordance with the rule of law.⁷⁷⁴ No one could be deprived of his or her freedom without a valid court decision.⁷⁷⁵ Furthermore, the Constitution set forth the principle of fair trial in criminal proceedings.⁷⁷⁶ This included that accused persons had the right to be informed of the nature of the allegation against them in the shortest time provided by the law, and guilt could not be established except by pronouncement of a valid court verdict.⁷⁷⁷ An official could enter an apartment or other premises against the will of their owner and conduct a search only on the basis of a court order, unless such entry and search were necessary to capture a criminal or save the lives of people and property.⁷⁷⁸

247. The Bosnian Serb Constitution defined the Public Prosecutor's Office as an "independent state body that prosecutes perpetrators of criminal and other activities punishable by law and applies legal means for the protection of legality".⁷⁷⁹

248. The Supreme Court and other courts, as well as the public prosecutors, submitted reports to the Bosnian Serb Assembly.⁷⁸⁰

249. According to the Bosnian Serb Constitution, the Constitutional Court, comprising seven judges, was vested with the power to, inter alia, decide on the conformity of laws with the Constitution; resolve conflict of authority among the legislative, executive, and judicial bodies and among the republican, regional, and municipal bodies; and decide on the conformity of the program and statute of political organisations with the Constitution and the law.⁷⁸¹ Reports from the Constitutional Court about matters of constitutionality and legality were to be considered by the Constitutional Committee of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and then by the Bosnian Serb Assembly itself.⁷⁸²

b. Establishment

i. General judicial organs

251. Momčilo Mandić was appointed Minister of Justice and Administration at the meeting of the SNB and Government on 22 April 1992.⁷⁸⁴ He served as Minister of Justice until 23 November 1992.⁷⁸⁵ As Minister of Justice, Mandić carried out the organisation of the courts, prosecutor's offices, and correctional institutions of the civilian justice system.⁷⁸⁶ According to Mandić, the military justice system was completely separate and located within the Ministry of Defence, with the Main Staff organising it.⁷⁸⁷

252. On 27 April 1992, a session of the SNB and Government adopted a decision "to organise the prosecutor's office, judicial organs and prisons".⁷⁸⁸ On 10 May 1992, another SNB-Government session decided "to take the necessary measures to gather professionals and ensure conditions for the work of the state and judicial organs".⁷⁸⁹

253. A decision of the SerBiH Presidency dated 16 May 1992, signed by the Accused as the President of the Presidency, established a lower court in Vlasenica with jurisdiction over four Serbian municipalities, including Vlasenica, and a lower court in Sokolac for the areas of the Serbian municipalities of Pale, Rogatica, and Sokolac.⁷⁹⁰ A 20 May 1992 decision of the SerBiH Presidency stated that "[l]ower courts have subject-matter jurisdiction to conduct legal proceedings in the first instance for all criminal offences".⁷⁹¹ The decision further stated that "[h]igh courts are obliged to conclude criminal proceedings in cases where indictments were submitted prior to the date when this decision takes effect”.⁷⁹²

254. Mandić tried to create a single justice system during 1992 and asked in July and August 1992 that the Assembly amend the law to form a single justice system, but he was not successful.⁷⁹³ In a letter dated 10 July 1992 signed by Mandić, the Ministry of Justice informed the President of the Presidency that it had organised and set up regular courts, public prosecutor’s offices, and municipal misdemeanour courts in the territory of the SerBiH, “except for the Northern Bosnia District (Doboj Region) where the work could not be done due to war activities”, though preparations were under way.⁷⁹⁴ The letter also stated that a large number of the criminal offences came under the subject-matter jurisdiction of the military judiciary, which had not yet been established.⁷⁹⁵ The Ministry proposed that, until the military judicial bodies were established, regular judicial bodies temporarily take over the role of the former, stating, “[t]his would to a considerable degree help prevent the commission of these criminal offences and help establish legal order and legal security throughout the [SerBiH]”.⁷⁹⁶ The Ministry also proposed that “the Law on the Enforcement of Criminal and Misdemeanour Sanctions should be amended so as to include the possibility of staying the enforcement of prison sentences until the end of the war, by means of assigning convicts to military units”.⁷⁹⁷ The Ministry requested that the Presidency examine these proposals and “communicate its position to the Ministry which would move for the adoption of appropriate decisions”.⁷⁹⁸

255. In a 5 August 1992 letter to the SerBiH Presidency and the Accused in particular, signed by Mandić, the Ministry of Justice reiterated its proposal that regular courts and public prosecutor’s offices take over the competence of military courts and military prosecutor’s offices until the establishment of military legal organs, combining the military and civilian justice systems into one.⁷⁹⁹

256. Between August and November 1992, the Assembly discussed and voted on the appointment and dismissal of judges and prosecutors.⁸⁰⁰ The appointments included the republican Public Prosecutor; judges of the Supreme Court of the RS; judges of the Lower Court in Banja Luka, Prijedor, Vlasenica, Zvornik, Foča, Sokolac, Sarajevo, Brčko, and Bosanski Novi; judges of the High Court in Banja Luka and Bijeljina; public prosecutors in Zvornik, Sokolac, Vlasenica, Prijedor, Sarajevo, Bijeljina, Višegrad, and Bosanski Novi; deputy public prosecutors in Banja Luka, Zvornik, Foča, Sarajevo, Bosanski Novi, and Prijedor; and a senior public prosecutor and deputy senior public prosecutor in Sarajevo.⁸⁰¹

257. The appointment of judges and prosecutors proceeded by way of the Ministry of Justice asking SAOs to nominate candidates meeting the formal and legal requirements and inform the Ministry of the ethnic make-up of the municipality from which the candidates came.⁸⁰² The Ministry would then send the nominations to the Assembly, which would appoint the nominees; if the Assembly could not meet, nominations would be sent to the President, who would proceed with the appointments.⁸⁰³

ii. Organs specific to war crimes and genocide commission for war crimes and to compile instructions for the commission's work.⁸⁰⁵ On 3 June 1992, the Government concluded that "[a] procedure for determining war crimes should be initiated" and assigned the task to the MUP and the Commission for War Crimes formed by the Government.⁸⁰⁶

259. On 16 May 1992, Mićo Stanišić instructed the five CSBs to submit to the MUP daily fax reports containing, inter alia, information on measures and activities to document war crimes.⁸⁰⁷

260. On 17 June 1992, the SerBiH Presidency decided that the Government would draft a decision on the establishment of a State Documentation Centre "which will gather all genuine documents on crimes committed against the Serbian people during this war".⁸⁰⁸ On 17 June 1992, the Accused, as President of the Presidency, issued a decree forming the State Documentation Centre for Investigating War Crimes against Serb People.⁸⁰⁹ The State Documentation Centre was to, inter alia, "collect [...] and keep [...] evidence on preparation and encouragement of crimes against Serb people in the [SerBiH], committed shortly before, during, and after war clashes".⁸¹⁰ At its next session, on 21 June 1992, the SerBiH Presidency appointed Miroslav Toholj as the director of the State Documentation Centre of the SerBiH.⁸¹¹ According to Mandić, the documentation institute was not involved with investigations in the criminal or legal sense and its task was to document events in BiH at the time.⁸¹²

⁸¹² Momčilo Mandić, T. 4967–4968 (8 July 2010), T. 5015 (13 July 2010). The decree of 17 June 1992 suggests a possible consultative role in legal proceedings, however; the Documentation Centre's enumerated duties include "engag[ing] experts and propos[ing] to the state institutions of the [SerBiH] bringing criminal proceedings and other sanctions against individuals, who have encouraged or participated in war crimes and violence against the Serb people". D3990 (Decree of Radovan Karadžić, 17 June 1992), e-court p. 3. Toholj's statement suggests that the Documentation Centre gathered and filed information on crimes but that it was the MUP which had the authority to conduct investigations of crimes. 261. On 11 July 1992, the Presidency decided that the Commission for Investigating War Crimes Committed against the Serbian People in BiH should be established and appointed Mandić, Momir Tošić, and Jovan Šarac as deputy members of the Commission.⁸¹³

262. On 11 July 1992, senior MUP officials tasked the National Security Service and Crime Investigation Service with preventing and documenting war crimes and filing criminal reports.⁸¹⁴ The MUP report on the meeting to the President of the Presidency and Prime Minister several days later noted that “[d]ocuments are also provided for war crimes committed by Serbs”.⁸¹⁵

263. The Operative Programme of Measures to Prevent Social Disruption in Conditions of a State of War, issued by the Government on 17 July 1992, stated that the work of the State Commission for the Identification of Crimes and Genocide against the Civilian Population and of Victims of War was to be intensified, with the Ministry of Justice responsible for the action.⁸¹⁶ According to Mandić, the purpose of the state commission was to establish whether there were instances of such crime or genocide in the territory of the RS.⁸¹⁷

264. On 22 April 1993, the Government established a “Commission for War and Other Crimes related to war operations in the territory of [RS]” and appointed Dragan Dangubić as its president.⁸¹⁸ The Commission’s duties were the investigation of events that took place in the territory of the RS that could be classified as “war crimes and other war-related crimes” and the “collection of evidence on the aforementioned crimes, its analysis, legal qualification and safe-keeping”.⁸¹⁹

265. On 3 December 1993, the Government established a “Commission for Gathering Information on Crimes Committed against Humanity and International Law”, with the task of investigating and gathering documentation on events in the territory of the RS that could qualify as “war crimes related to war operations”.⁸²⁰

266. On 15 September 1994, the Bosnian Serb Government adopted a decision authorising the MUP and the Ministry of Justice “to collect information on crimes against humanity and international law that had been committed”.⁸²¹ According to Dušan Kozić, this decision related to victims of all nationalities and had the support of the Accused.⁸²²

c. Competence, structure, and procedures

267. When an incident involving a crime was reported, the police, usually civilian, would conduct an on-site investigation under the direction of the investigating judge.⁸²³ The police would determine if the incident fell under the jurisdiction of the military or the civilian justice system.⁸²⁴ Investigating judges would then send a report of all the evidence collected to the prosecutor, who would determine whether the elements of crime were sufficiently met to initiate criminal proceedings.⁸²⁵ At this stage, the prosecutor could submit to the investigating judge of the lower court a request to open an investigation.⁸²⁶

268. The Operative Programme issued by the Government on 17 July 1992 tasked the Ministry of Justice with issuing instructions “to the organs of justice to intensify and decide cases by summary procedure”.⁸²⁷ The Programme stated under this task: “Priority shall be given to decisions on misdemeanours and criminal offences that weaken the Republic's power of defence".⁸²⁸

269. The Accused, as President of the Presidency, issued orders to MUP that investigations be conducted and perpetrators brought to account for specific incidents.⁸²⁹

270. According to Krajišnik, the Bosnian Serb MUP, the Ministry of Justice, and the military were the three main institutions, aside from separate commissions, responsible for investigating matters related to alleged crime, establishing the truth, and punishing the perpetrators.⁸³⁰ He stated that the Presidency and the Assembly did not have any investigative instruments at their disposal and that no one outside of the three institutions could influence investigative and judicial work.⁸³¹ He also stated that ex officio nobody was supposed to inform the Assembly President or Republic President about crimes and that crimes were to be reported to the competent institutions.⁸³² He stated that only if the relevant institutions refused to take measures in response to the information, those reporting crimes would have the right to inform the prime minister, the government, and the president of the republic.⁸³³

271. There are instances in which lower courts issued decisions releasing for military service people who had been detained on suspicion of crime.⁸³⁴

272. Lower courts transferred cases to the military courts when the accused was a member of the military and the case therefore beyond their subject-matter jurisdiction.⁸³⁵

d. Policies and orders relating to the rule of law and crimes

273. In addition to evidence referred to in other sections of this Judgement in relation to specific municipalities, the Chamber makes the following findings below.

Conversely, military courts transferred cases to the civilian courts when the accused was not a member of the military at the time the charged crime was committed. See D1489 (Bijeljina Military Court decision, April 1993), pp. 1–2 (under seal); D1785 (Banja Luka Military Court's Decision, 13 December 1993) (under seal), pp. 1–2.

274. Mićo Stanišić issued an order on 15 April 1992 that “[i]ndividuals involved in seizure, robbery, [...] or in any other criminal activity aimed at acquiring property and proceeds by unlawful conduct, ought to be identified and most rigorously prosecuted, including arrest and detention”.⁸³⁶ On 26 May 1992, he instructed the five CSBs to send a report containing, inter alia, the total number of criminal offences against life and limb, crimes of degradation of personhood and property, and crimes against property, and the total number of such cases which were solved.⁸³⁷

275. On 5 June 1992, Assistant Minister for Crime Prevention and Detection Planojević, in a document to the five CSBs, noted that in the previous two months after the outbreak of war in BiH, a sharp increase had been observed in the rate of property crimes, war profiteering, and especially war crimes.⁸³⁸ Planojević requested that “vigorous measures be taken against the perpetrators of all types of crimes, and in more extreme cases, orders should be issued on their detention”.⁸³⁹ The document called for “establish[ing] maximum cooperation with judicial organs and the Military Police” and “[p]lay[ing] special attention to discovering the perpetrators of war crimes, documenting the criminal activities of individuals and groups, arresting them and bringing them to justice”.⁸⁴⁰ The document also stated that the CSBs would likely face obstacles to their work and directed them to make official notes of all information to allow criminal prosecution to be brought later.⁸⁴¹ Further, it told the CSBs that they were required to strictly observe the international laws of war in the treatment of civilians and prisoners of war.⁸⁴²

276. On 5 July 1992, Mićo Stanišić asked the Command of the Eastern Bosnia Corps to use the authority of its organs and help prevent and detect crimes and their perpetrators, especially members of the VRS, after noting “the increasingly frequent and serious crimes committed by individuals and groups, usually armed” and the inability of the crime investigation service and police to carry out the duties within the competence of the internal affairs organs.⁸⁴³

⁸³⁶ D404 (SerBiH MUP Order, 15 April 1992). On 17 April 1992, Mićo Stanišić sent to the CSBs and SJBs a related communication stating that cases of unlawful appropriation of property by members of MUP had been recorded in certain SJBs and that in the future “the most stringent measures”, including criminal prosecution, would be taken against such individuals. According to Mandić, the MUP and the corps on whose territory the paramilitaries were, as well as the military police of that corps, had the competence to investigate their acts. See Momčilo Mandić, T. 5102–5103 (14 July 2010). On 3 July 1992, the Presidency issued an order, signed by the Accused as President of the

277. On 19 July 1992, Mićo Stanišić ordered that CSBs submit information on, inter alia, “[p]roblems related to activities of some paramilitary units, especially in cases where crimes have been committed or the public peace and order violated to a large extent, [...] [p]roblems related to the prevention and detection of crimes and perpetrators, and [...] [p]rocedures and jurisdiction in the treatment and custody of prisoners, persons evacuated from the combat-operation zones, collection camps into which the Army brings Muslim residents”.⁸⁴⁴ On 27 July 1992, in an order addressed to, inter alia, CSBs, Stanišić instructed that individuals who had been held criminally responsible for officially prosecuted crimes and “individuals who committed crimes during the war in the former [BiH] but against whom, for known reasons, criminal proceedings [had] still not been initiated”, be removed from the MUP.⁸⁴⁵ He also ordered the removal of all groups and individuals not under VRS control from areas where they were active and the collection of information about anyone having committed a crime, as well as the handover of such individuals to the competent institutions and taking of measures in accordance with the Law on Criminal Procedure.⁸⁴⁶

278. In its session of 6 August 1992, the SerBiH Presidency noted, in the discussion of detainees in prisons in Serb territory, that the treatment of prisoners of war had to abide by international conventions and concluded that the MUP would be ordered to examine through its municipal branches the behaviour of all civilian authorities and individuals guarding prisoners of war.⁸⁴⁷ The information was to be passed to the MUP and then to the SerBiH Presidency.⁸⁴⁸

279. On 8 August 1992, Deputy MUP Minister for Police Affairs and Tasks, Tomislav Kovač, wrote to the Accused and Đerić that a major problem in the field was that people were not “properly categorised in the facilities or collection centres” as civilians or prisoners of war, and among the latter, prisoners of war who have committed criminal acts.⁸⁴⁹ He stated that prisoners of war suspected of having committed criminal acts and war crimes were to be treated as detainees,

280. In August 1992, Mićo Stanišić issued other orders regarding the application and conditions of detention and the treatment of prisoners of war and civilians.⁸⁵²

281. On 23 July 1992, the Accused issued an order which stated, inter alia: “The Serbian authorities must act in accordance with the law and the Geneva Convention towards the civilian population of any ethnicity who do not exert aggression and combat operations against our army and the civilian population.”⁸⁵³ At the end of July 1992, before the Bosnian Serb Assembly, he criticised crimes such as robbery and unlawful acquisition of property.⁸⁵⁴ At a session in September 1992, the Accused spoke of the need to abide by the Geneva Conventions with respect to captured persons.⁸⁵⁵ At the 34th Assembly session in August to October 1993, the Accused stated that the courts and the legality of their work were to be monitored constantly.⁸⁵⁶ He also stated that the work of the Bosnian Serb MUP was to be strengthened in all its departments and that all abuses of power and other criminal acts that were committed in the MUP were to be investigated and punished by law.⁸⁵⁷ He stated: “Legal state exists when you don’t have to intervene in order for someone to be prosecuted. Legal state exists when one is not allowed to intervene when a person is to be prosecuted.”⁸⁵⁸

282. On 8 May 1992, a session of the SNB and the Government decided to establish courts martial.⁸⁵⁹

283. On 12 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a decision promulgating an amendment to the SerBiH Constitution such that Article 112 read: “Military courts and military prosecutors are established by law. Military courts are independent courts and conduct trials on the basis of the law.”⁸⁶⁰

284. On 31 May 1992, a decision signed by the Accused as President of the Presidency established three military courts of first instance and a Supreme Court in Sarajevo at the appeal level.⁸⁶¹ The decision also established three regional military prosecutors’ offices,⁸⁶² one each for the 1st Krajina Corps Command seated in Banja Luka, the SRK Command seated in Sarajevo, and the Eastern Bosnia Corps Command seated in Bijeljina, as well as a Senior Military Prosecutor’s Office with the VRS⁸⁶³ Main Staff.⁸⁶⁴ The three military courts of first instance were to operate “[w]ithin the framework of their subject matter jurisdiction” in the territory of the Corps designated for the corresponding military prosecutor’s office: the Military Court in Banja Luka in the territory of the 1st and 2nd Krajina Corps, the Military Court in Sarajevo in the territory of the SRK and Herzegovina Corps, and the Military Court in Bijeljina in the territory of the Eastern Bosnia Corps.⁸⁶⁵ A Presidency decision added the Drina Corps to the territorial jurisdiction of the Military

Court in Sarajevo.⁸⁶⁶ On 5 August 1992, General Milan Gvero informed Prime Minister Đerić that the VRS had established these first-instance military courts and prosecutor's offices as well as the Supreme Military Court and Senior Military Prosecutor's Office with the VRS Main Staff.⁸⁶⁷

285. The 31 May 1992 decision provided that until the passing of the Criminal Code, Law on Criminal Procedure, Law on Military Courts, and Law on Military Prosecutors' Offices, inter alia, of the SerBiH, the Criminal Code, Law on Criminal Procedure, Law on Military Courts, and Law on Military Prosecutor's Offices, inter alia, of the FRY were to be applied in proceedings before military courts.⁸⁶⁸ On 30 December 1993, the Accused, as RS President, proclaimed the Law on Military Courts as approved by the RS Assembly.⁸⁶⁹

286. Reports discussed at the Government session of 8 July 1992 indicate that the military judicial organs had not begun operating as of that time, resulting in "one of the greatest obstacles in establishing order, legality and a state ruled by law in present conditions".⁸⁷⁰ The Government concluded that "it be proposed to the authorised organs to form and qualify the Public Prosecutor's Office and the courts for work as soon as possible" and that, for emergency reasons, the possibility of delegating authority from the military to regular judicial organs would be examined.⁸⁷¹ The Government assigned this task to the Ministry of Defence and the Ministry of Justice.⁸⁷² As previously mentioned, on 10 July 1992 and again on 5 August 1992, Mandić proposed that the civilian and military justice systems be combined but this was not carried out.⁸⁷³ At a meeting on

According to a 15 December 1994 order signed by the Accused as President of the Republic, the territorial jurisdiction of the military courts comprised: the Banja Luka Military Court responsible for the territory within the zone of responsibility of the First and Second Krajina Corps, the Bijeljina Military Court responsible for the same of the Eastern Bosnia and Drina Corps, the Sarajevo Military Court responsible for the same of the Sarajevo-Romanija Corps, and the Bileća Military Court responsible for the same of the Herzegovina Corps. 11 July 1992, senior MUP officials discussed the fact that the military courts and prosecutor's offices were not functioning.⁸⁷⁴

287. The Operative Programme issued by the Government on 17 July 1992 ordered the military judicial organs⁸⁷⁵ and military police organs to “intensify activities of discovering and arresting perpetrators of misdemeanours and criminal offences, and especially in controlling theft, war profiteering and other crimes”, in co-operation with the state justice organs.⁸⁷⁶ The Programme made the MUP, in co-operation with the Ministry of Justice and Ministry of Defence, responsible for this action.⁸⁷⁷

288. The Chamber received diverging evidence as to when the military courts were established and began operating. Savo Bojanović stated that military courts were established in June or July 1992 in the entire territory under Bosnian Serb control and that the Bijeljina Military Court was established in mid-July 1992 and began investigations in August 1992.⁸⁷⁸ There is also evidence that the Banja Luka Military Court was functioning from May to July 1992⁸⁷⁹ and that criminal proceedings took place from as early as September and October 1992.⁸⁸⁰ According to Novak Todorović, the president of the Supreme Military Court,⁸⁸¹ however, the establishment of the first military courts began in the autumn of 1992 and these courts were operating as of 1993.⁸⁸²

289. Records indicate that the Military Prosecutor's Office attached to the Command of the 1st Krajina Corps issued requests for investigation and indictments⁸⁸³ and that the Banja Luka Military

VRS Supreme Military Court, and the VRS Prosecutor's Office, stated: "Until the final adoption and passing of legislation on the organisation and work of military disciplinary courts, I am placing the Supreme Military Court and the Prosecutor's Office attached to the [VRS] Main Staff under my direct authority."⁸⁹² The order made the Commander of the Main Staff and the President of the Supreme Military Court responsible for the implementation of the task.⁸⁹³

292. The Chamber finds that the military courts were established between June and August 1992 and began functioning around August 1992.

b. Competence, structure, and procedures

293. The military courts had jurisdiction over any crime committed by a member of the military, namely, the VRS.⁸⁹⁴ The military courts also had jurisdiction over civilians accused of committing particular crimes, including acts against a military installation or a member of the military⁸⁹⁵ and the crime of armed rebellion.⁸⁹⁶

294. According to some witnesses, military courts did not have jurisdiction over cases of war crimes, which the State Commission of the Investigation of Crimes against Serbs had authority to investigate.⁸⁹⁷ However, in at least one case, a military prosecutor's office submitted a request to open an investigation against individuals for a suspected crime under Article 142 of the adopted Criminal Code of the SFRY,⁸⁹⁸ war crimes against the civilian population, and a military court ordered detention of the said individuals.⁸⁹⁹

Under the Law on Military Courts, military courts were to “determine the status of prisoners-of-war and try them for criminal acts committed against humanity and international law as described in Articles 141 through 155 of the Criminal Code of [RS] as well as for criminal acts committed by them while prisoners-of-war”.⁹⁰⁰ Military courts of first instance were to, inter alia, conduct investigations, hear indictment appeals, first-instance criminal cases and appeals against rulings by military court investigating judges, and handle certain matters concerning the execution of sentences.⁹⁰¹ The Supreme Military Court was to, inter alia, consider appeals against rulings by first-instance military courts in cases determined by law, rule against the enactments of military organs, resolve conflicts of jurisdiction among the first-instance military courts, and provide fundamental legal interpretations of issues significant to the uniform application of laws by the military courts.⁹⁰²

296. A first-instance military court was composed of three to five judges.⁹⁰³ The corresponding prosecutor’s office usually had one prosecutor and two deputy prosecutors.⁹⁰⁴ The Supreme Military Court had five judges by the end of the war.⁹⁰⁵

297. The Accused as President appointed all prosecutors and judges of the military courts.⁹⁰⁶ Under the Law on Military Courts, candidates for the posts of military court judges were to be proposed by the Ministry of Defence upon recommendations from the Supreme Military Court’s president and the military court to which they would be appointed.⁹⁰⁷ Military court judges were to be dismissed by the President of the Republic.⁹⁰⁸ Proposals to dismiss military court judges were to be submitted by the Defence Minister.⁹⁰⁹

298. The military prosecutor's offices attached to the four corps commands were required to submit monthly reports on crime trends for the preceding period to the Senior Military Prosecutor's Office with the VRS Main Staff.⁹¹⁰ The reports were to include, inter alia, the number of criminal reports received by the prosecutor's office and against whom as well as the number rejected and the reason for such rejection.⁹¹¹ The three highest priority crimes, in order, were crimes against the state order, crimes against the armed forces, and crimes against humanity and violations of international law.⁹¹²

299. The Banja Luka Military Court sent monthly reports to the 1st Krajina Corps Command and the appellate military court, namely the Supreme Military Court.⁹¹³ The Military Court and Military Prosecutor's Office for Banja Luka had meetings with the Command of the 1st Krajina Corps in which they discussed how cases were proceeding and how the Court and Prosecutor's Office functioned.⁹¹⁴ In these meetings, the Corps Command asked that the cases of those not responding to mobilisation calls and those avoiding military service be prioritised.⁹¹⁵ The Military Court for Banja Luka also had meetings with the Supreme Military Court as needed and some meetings were attended by the other military courts as well.⁹¹⁶ Bogdan Subotić, an advisor of the President, the Accused, in the beginning of 1992 and later the Minister of Defence, made visits to the Military Prosecutor for the 1st Krajina Corps, Srboljub Jovičinac, a number of times.⁹¹⁷ At the

300. The procedures for military courts were the same as those for civilian courts and the RS rules and regulations were taken from the Yugoslav rules and regulations.⁹¹⁹ According to the Law on Military Courts, provisions of the Law of Criminal Procedure were to apply to military courts' criminal procedure if not otherwise stipulated by the Law on Military Courts.⁹²⁰ Todorović instructed the judges of the Supreme Military Court to prepare guidelines for criminal prosecution and the criteria for criminal prosecution.⁹²¹

301. With respect to VRS military justice system procedures, first, the prosecutor's office received the criminal report by the police⁹²² and then the prosecutor determined whether there was sufficient evidence to initiate criminal proceedings.⁹²³ If so, the prosecutor would send a request for investigation to the investigating judge.⁹²⁴ If there was none, with the assistance of the police and other organs, the prosecutor collected all the information and forwarded it to the Court.⁹²⁵ Under the Law on Military Courts, the investigation was to be conducted by the military court investigating judge.⁹²⁶ After completing his investigation, the investigating judge sent the case back to the prosecutor, who could decide to discontinue the proceedings, bring an indictment, or request additional investigation.⁹²⁷

302. In accordance with his legal responsibility to institute process against every person who committed a crime, the prosecutor could also initiate criminal proceedings once he became aware of a crime.⁹²⁸ A soldier of any rank or a civilian victim could inform the Prosecutor of a crime, but the investigation had to be initiated by the prosecutor.⁹²⁹ For cases of failure to respond to a call to military service, the Ministry of Defence would file a criminal report against the individual.⁹³⁰ The military court could not act without first a request from the military prosecutor and an indictment issued by the prosecutor.⁹³¹

303. According to the Law on Military Courts, the military court's investigating judge or, under exceptional circumstances as prescribed by the Law of Criminal Procedure, authorised superior officers in the security organs of the VRS or those in the MP could require the detention of a member of the military, an employee of the VRS, or a civilian for a criminal offence falling under the jurisdiction of a military court.⁹³² In the latter case, the officers were to immediately inform a military prosecutor or the military court investigating judge of their detention decision.⁹³³

304. Under the Law on Criminal Proceedings, the duration of custody was to be "kept to the shortest necessary time" and throughout the proceedings custody was to be terminated as soon as the grounds on which it was ordered ceased to exist.⁹³⁴

305. When a person was arrested by the MP and a criminal report was given to the Prosecutor's Office, the person could be initially detained by the MP for three days.⁹³⁵ The military prosecutor

307. According to KDZ532, all military organs had an obligation to report every criminal act to the military prosecutor, and failure to report a crime for which more than five years' imprisonment was prescribed would itself constitute a criminal act.⁹⁴⁴ The Law on Military Courts stated:

Every superior officer is obligated to take steps to prevent the person who has committed an act which is subject to criminal prosecution from hiding or fleeing, to preserve the traces of the crime and items which may serve as evidence, and to collect all information which may prove useful for the proceedings. The superior officer is obliged to inform the military prosecutor, directly or through a higher-ranking officer, of the criminal offence.⁹⁴⁵

308. The 1992 Guidelines for the Establishment of Criteria for Criminal Prosecution of the Military Prosecutor's Office of the VRS Main Staff explained the specific provisions of the Criminal Code relevant to the category of crimes against humanity and violations of international law and specific acts which entailed criminal responsibility.⁹⁴⁶ The Guidelines spoke of the responsibility of VRS officers, as individuals in commanding positions and whose subordinates are capable of, or are, committing some of the crimes, to deal with and prevent such conduct.⁹⁴⁷ The Guidelines also discussed the corresponding duty of officers to write reports on all cases possibly qualifying as crimes against humanity and to submit them to the command.⁹⁴⁸ The commands would then be responsible for informing the military prosecutor's office, which would then "take the appropriate steps prescribed by law and the policy on prosecution".⁹⁴⁹ The Guidelines stated that all the commands must, inter alia, "work on uncovering all cases of war crimes against humanity and international law in the territories and zones of their responsibility", "inform the nearest military police, security and military judicial organs of the discovered crime", and secure the crime scene until the aforementioned organs arrived to conduct the on-site investigation.⁹⁵⁰

310. On 19 August 1992, the Accused issued an order addressed to the VRS Main Staff, MUP, and all CSBs, and with reference to the 13 June 1992 order, that all actors carry out their obligation to observe international humanitarian law, especially the Third and Fourth Geneva Conventions.⁹⁵⁶ The order issued the general instruction that “[i]n case of any suspicion or sign that international humanitarian rights have been violated, all organs of the Army and Police shall conduct energetic investigation in the zone of responsibility”.⁹⁵⁷

E. INTERNATIONAL PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

312. From 1991 until the end of 1995, there were numerous attempts made by the international community to broker a negotiated peace settlement in BiH. Over the course of four years, talks were held in various cities across Europe and a number of cease-fires were agreed upon. However, it was only with the Dayton Agreement signed on 14 December 1995 that peace was formally established in BiH.

1. European Community Peace Conference on Yugoslavia

313. The EC Peace Conference on Yugoslavia began its work in the summer of 1991 under the chairmanship of Lord Peter Carrington, the former Foreign Minister of the UK.⁹⁶⁰ The conference included representatives from the six former Yugoslav republics and the government of the SFRY.⁹⁶¹ The conference met intermittently in The Hague, Brussels, Lisbon, and London.⁹⁶² Its mission was to achieve a peaceful settlement of the conflict, including the peaceful separation of the republics of the SFRY.⁹⁶³

314. On 1 October 1991, as a result of the EC efforts, a multi-national monitoring mission in BiH, the ECMM, was established.⁹⁶⁴ The ECMM had the goal of securing a cease-fire between parties to the conflict by deploying teams of different nationalities to start a dialogue with the military commanders on both sides.⁹⁶⁵

315. In October 1991, Carrington proposed a plan, developed by the conference, which allowed for the peaceful separation of all the republics of the SFRY.⁹⁶⁶ Slovenia, Croatia, SRBiH, Macedonia, and Montenegro agreed, but Serbia rejected the plan.⁹⁶⁷ Cyrus Vance, Special Envoy

2. Vance Plan

316. In January 1992, a cease-fire with respect to the conflict in Croatia was signed by the parties under the authority of the UN.⁹⁶⁹ In accordance with the cease-fire, a plan was presented by Vance, which called for the creation of UN Protected Areas in Croatia and the establishment of UNPROFOR.⁹⁷⁰ The Vance Plan had three main points, namely (i) the establishment of UNPROFOR to facilitate the demobilisation and demilitarisation of the UN Protected Areas; (ii) the deployment of a local police force for the maintenance of law and order in areas that had been demilitarised under the supervision of UNPROFOR; and (iii) the creation of safe conditions for the voluntary return of all displaced persons.⁹⁷¹

a. UNPROFOR

317. On 21 February 1992, the Security Council passed Resolution 743 which established UNPROFOR.⁹⁷² Its mandate was to assist in the implementation of the Vance Plan.⁹⁷³ On 13 March 1992, UNPROFOR headquarters was established in Sarajevo because the city was perceived as a neutral location at that time.⁹⁷⁴ Teams of UNPROFOR personnel were tasked with monitoring the UN Protected Areas in Croatia, which were to be demilitarised in accordance with the Vance Plan.⁹⁷⁵ The duties of UNPROFOR also included protecting civilians residing in those areas and assisting humanitarian agencies in carrying out their functions.⁹⁷⁶ UNPROFOR members

318. Although UNPROFOR was initially established for Croatia, its mandate was expanded to include BiH in June 1992.⁹⁷⁸ UNPROFOR headquarters, initially established in Sarajevo, was moved to Zagreb, and in turn UNPROFOR BiH Command was established in Sarajevo.⁹⁷⁹ The Commanders of UNPROFOR BiH Command were Generals Philippe Morillon, Francis Briquemont, Michael Rose, and Rupert Smith, successively.⁹⁸⁰ BiH Command included Sector Sarajevo, Sector Northeast, and Sector Southwest.⁹⁸¹ There was a UN Civil Affairs component also posted with UNPROFOR BiH Command in Sarajevo.⁹⁸² In March 1995, the Security Council restructured UNPROFOR, placing its headquarters in Zagreb under the overall command and control of the Special Representative of the Secretary General, Yasushi Akashi.⁹⁸³ UNPROFOR

b. UNMO

320. The Vance Plan also established UNMOs for the purpose of monitoring the demilitarisation of the UN Protected Areas and reporting any cease-fire agreement violations.⁹⁹⁵ Generally, their tasks included patrolling areas, liaising with local authorities and parties to the conflict, as well as monitoring and reporting any disturbances.⁹⁹⁶ UNMOs were unarmed and mainly acted as mediators.⁹⁹⁷ They also provided support to humanitarian operations conducted by UNHCR and other humanitarian agencies.⁹⁹⁸ The UNMOs were deployed in BiH in early June 1992.⁹⁹⁹ In July 1992, the UNMO headquarters was moved to Zagreb.¹⁰⁰⁰

323. Following the established procedure described above, each UNMO team in Sector Sarajevo was required to submit a daily situation report to the “Papa” or “Lima” team leader.¹⁰¹⁴ This report was then consolidated into an “UNMO Sarajevo sitrep” sent at 6 p.m. to the UNMO chief military officer in Zagreb and copied to Sector Sarajevo.¹⁰¹⁵ In June 1994, the UNMOs in Sector Sarajevo were reorganised into 17 OPs and their areas of responsibility were divided into five districts, allowing each of the UNMO teams to work with both the Bosnian Muslims and the Bosnian Serbs within each district.¹⁰¹⁶

325. On 23 February 1992, the conference proposed a new plan, entitled the Statement of Principles for New Constitutional Arrangements for BiH, also known as the Lisbon Agreement or Cutileiro Plan.¹⁰¹⁹ The plan called for an independent and geographically continuous BiH, comprised of the three constituent units that represented the Bosnian Muslims, Bosnian Croats, and Bosnian Serbs.¹⁰²⁰ The plan set forth constitutional principles for BiH and proposed the structure of the Assembly and government of BiH.¹⁰²¹ The Cutileiro Plan did not grant territorial continuity to SerBiH nor did it establish a corridor linking Serbia to the Krajina region.¹⁰²² Furthermore, the Cutileiro Plan did not call for the physical division of Sarajevo into Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb parts of the city.¹⁰²³ On 25 February 1992, the Accused summarised the outcome of the talks at a session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly and stated that the Bosnian Serbs had agreed to the three main principles, namely that BiH would (i) be an independent state, (ii) maintain its present borders; and (iii) consist of three constituent parts.¹⁰²⁴

326. On 18 March 1992, a Statement of Principles, referred to as the Sarajevo Plan, was agreed upon by the three parties as the basis for further negotiations.¹⁰²⁵ The agreement was a refinement of the Cutileiro Plan.¹⁰²⁶ It stated that BiH would be one state, “composed of three constituent units, based on national principles and taking into account economic, geographic, and other criteria”, and included the respect for human rights, religious freedom, and protection of minorities.¹⁰²⁷ Further it stated that a working group would be established to define the territory of the constituent units.¹⁰²⁸ The map annexed to the Sarajevo Plan showed the division of BiH into the Bosnian Serb, Bosnian Muslim, and Bosnian Croat areas which represented the three constituent units.¹⁰²⁹

327. Following the agreement, the Bosnian Serb negotiators reported back to the Bosnian Serb Assembly.¹⁰³⁰ The new draft proposal, they explained to the deputies, aimed at a division of BiH into three constituent units based not only on nationality, but also on economic and geographic considerations.¹⁰³¹ The proposal was marked as “basis for further negotiations”.¹⁰³²

330. On 1 May 1992, Cutileiro suspended the scheduled peace talks until 13 May because of the parties’ failure to honour the cease-fire agreement.¹⁰⁴² On 11 May 1992, Cutileiro again suspended the talks due to the deteriorating situation in Sarajevo and the theft of 12 tons of ICRC supplies from the Sarajevo airport.¹⁰⁴³ On 15 May 1992, the Security Council passed Resolution 752 demanding that all parties to the conflict stop the fighting immediately, respect the cease-fire agreement signed on 12 April 1992, and co-operate fully with UNPROFOR and the ECMM.¹⁰⁴⁴ On 17 May 1992, the Accused wrote a letter to Cutileiro stating that the Bosnian Serb Assembly had declared a unilateral cease-fire, which expired the following day, and he blamed Izetbegović and the Bosnian Muslims for continuing the conflict.¹⁰⁴⁵

332. On 30 May 1992, the Security Council passed Resolution 757 which placed economic sanctions on the FRY and demanded that all parties create the conditions for the unimpeded delivery of humanitarian aid to Sarajevo and other destinations in BiH.¹⁰⁵⁰ This resolution also established a security zone which encompassed Sarajevo and its airport.¹⁰⁵¹ As a result, from 2 to 4 June 1992, UN representatives, including John Wilson and Hussein Abdel-Razek, held negotiations with the Accused, Plavšić, Mladić, and Krajišnik on the Bosnian Serb side, and Ejup Ganić and Izetbegović on the Bosnian Muslim side, on the opening of Sarajevo airport for humanitarian purposes.¹⁰⁵² According to Wilson, the Bosnian Serbs were reluctant to hand over the airport to the UN but agreed to do so as their military position would not be substantially affected and doing so would help repair their “poor international image”.¹⁰⁵³ Thus, on 5 June, the Agreement on the Re-Opening of Sarajevo Airport for Humanitarian Purposes (“Airport

333. Although the parties had agreed to the Statement of Principles, in June 1992, Izetbegović withdrew his agreement to the Cutileiro Plan.¹⁰⁵⁷ The Secretary General urged parties to reconvene talks and the Accused offered an unconditional cease-fire starting on 15 June 1992, freedom of access to UNMOs, and the re-opening of the Sarajevo airport.¹⁰⁵⁸ In the meantime, however, violence continued in Sarajevo and other parts of BiH.¹⁰⁵⁹ purposes.¹⁰⁶⁵ The cease-fire declared on 1 June 1992 in and around Sarajevo was reaffirmed by the parties and it was agreed that UNPROFOR would monitor its implementation.¹⁰⁶⁶ The agreement stipulated that anti-aircraft weapons, artillery, mortars, missile systems, and tanks would be moved to areas agreed by UNPROFOR and subject to observation by UNPROFOR.¹⁰⁶⁷ The parties agreed to allow free movement of UNPROFOR-supervised air traffic in and out of the airport for humanitarian aid and UNPROFOR-related missions.¹⁰⁶⁸ The UN would supervise the delivery of humanitarian aid, with the parties facilitating such delivery and ensuring safe movement.¹⁰⁶⁹

334. On 4 June 1992, the Accused, Plavsić, and Mladić met with Cedric Thornberry and Wilson on behalf of UNPROFOR in Sarajevo regarding the Sarajevo airport.¹⁰⁶⁰ The Accused’s explained that his position in Lisbon was that the UN supervision of Sarajevo involved the establishment of a “green line” between the Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim sides of the city, each side being secured with their own police.¹⁰⁶¹ Only then, would the Bosnian Serbs agree to the withdrawal of heavy weapons. The UNPROFOR representatives commented that there was a disparity between the Bosnian Serbs’ current position and what had been understood by Cutileiro and others in Lisbon.¹⁰⁶² Cutileiro’s understanding was that UNPROFOR would have full control over Sarajevo airport.¹⁰⁶³ The Bosnian Serbs submitted a list of their proposed conditions concerning the re-opening of the airport.¹⁰⁶⁴

336. On 8 June 1992, the Security Council passed Resolution 758 which noted the re-opening of the Sarajevo airport under the exclusive authority of the UN and the establishment of the security zone around Sarajevo and the airport.¹⁰⁷⁰ The Security Council enlarged the mandate of UNPROFOR troops in BiH, strengthened them, and also authorised the deployment of UNMOs to BiH.¹⁰⁷¹ This marked the beginning of UNPROFOR's formal mandate in BiH with its mission to keep the Sarajevo airport open for humanitarian purposes and to provide security for humanitarian convoys and UNHCR.¹⁰⁷²

337. On 12 June 1992, the Accused offered an unconditional cease-fire in BiH starting on 15 June 1992 and the re-opening of the Sarajevo airport.¹⁰⁷³

D234 (Letter from Radovan Karadžić to Ambassador Cutileiro, 5 June 1992). In response, Cutileiro stated that the EC had made no promises to the Bosnian Serbs and he intended to reconvene the talks as soon as "the questions of the airport, free passage of humanitarian relief, and Serbian artillery round Sarajevo are resolved through the mediation of UNPROFOR". 338. On 27 June 1992, another cease-fire went into effect in Sarajevo.¹⁰⁷⁴ On the same day, the Accused, in a letter to the EC, Cutileiro, and Carrington, informed them that the last phase of the opening of Sarajevo airport was underway and that the Bosnian Serbs were respecting the cease-fire.¹⁰⁷⁵ He further stated that the adherence to the cease-fire opened the possibility for the continuation of talks on the constitutional arrangements for BiH.¹⁰⁷⁶

339. On 29 June 1992, the Security Council passed Resolution 761 and the Bosnian Serbs handed the airport over to UNPROFOR.¹⁰⁷⁷ The airport was only to be used by the UN.¹⁰⁷⁸ The airport opened the following day, however, as a convoy of UN vehicles accompanied by Bosnian Serbs left the airport, the convoy was fired upon, injuring four UN personnel.¹⁰⁷⁹ As a result, the UN decided to temporarily cease its operations at the airport.¹⁰⁸⁰

340. On 3 July 1992, Carrington made a statement following his visit to Sarajevo.¹⁰⁸¹ According to Carrington, Izetbegović set two conditions for the resumption of peace talks, namely a one-week cease-fire throughout BiH and that all heavy weapons formerly belonging to the JNA be placed under UN control.¹⁰⁸² Izetbegović further stated that he could not agree to certain elements of the Statement of Principles but that he would propose alternatives.¹⁰⁸³ The Accused, while he agreed with the Statement of Principles as agreed upon in March, stated that the proposal of BiH being a unitary state was not satisfactory.¹⁰⁸⁴

341. On 5 July 1992, UNPROFOR reported that the cease-fire was not holding but that humanitarian aid flights had been arriving at Sarajevo airport and that UNHCR convoys were

The UNMOs reported that the firing on the UN vehicles was quite deliberate, the fact that the Bosnian Serb vehicle was targeted first may indicate that the origin of fire came from the Presidency, and the fire was directed from the northern part of Dobrinja. distributing aid in the city.¹⁰⁸⁵ However, according to Nambiar, the airport remained “very vulnerable”.¹⁰⁸⁶ UNPROFOR’s assessment was that both sides have “agendas which have little to do with humanitarian concerns” and that both sides seemed “locked in a fight to the death over the future shape, character and even existence of the new state of [BiH]”.¹⁰⁸⁷

342. On 13 July 1992, the Security Council passed Resolution 764 in response to continuing violations of the 5 June 1992 Sarajevo airport agreement.¹⁰⁸⁸ It authorised the UN Secretary-General to deploy additional UNPROFOR troops to ensure the security of the Sarajevo airport and delivery of humanitarian aid.¹⁰⁸⁹ On 14 July, UNPROFOR reported that aid continued to arrive in Sarajevo, but that the airport faced “an almost unacceptable degree of risk” and that the situation in Sarajevo continued to deteriorate.¹⁰⁹⁰

343. On 17 July 1992, in London, the parties agreed to a cease-fire throughout the entire territory of BiH, for a period of 14 days, effective beginning at 6 p.m. on 19 July 1992.¹⁰⁹¹ The next round of peace talks was scheduled to resume on 27 July 1992 in London.¹⁰⁹² However, on 23 July 1992, Carrington and Cutileiro noted that all parties to the conflict had violated the cease-fire agreement.¹⁰⁹³ Carrington called on the parties to respect and implement the cease-fire but noted that the violations cast a shadow over the resumption of talks scheduled in London for 27 July 1992.¹⁰⁹⁴ The talks did not resume again in July.¹⁰⁹⁵

344. On 25 July, the SRK reported that ABiH forces were focusing artillery fire on Dobrinja and the airport area with the “probable goal” of preventing the safe landing of planes.¹⁰⁹⁶ In response to the difficulties faced by UNPROFOR at the airport, the Security Council passed Resolution 770 on 13 August, in which it demanded that the parties take necessary measures to ensure the safety of UN and other personnel delivering humanitarian assistance.¹⁰⁹⁷ The Security Council demanded that the parties to the conflict cease fighting immediately, that the ICRC be allowed to access prisons and detention centres, and that necessary measures be taken to ensure the safety of UNPROFOR personnel.¹⁰⁹⁸

4. London Conference

346. The London Conference on the former SFRY was held on 26 and 27 August 1992.¹¹⁰⁰ On the eve of the conference, the Accused stated that on 19 August 1992, he had issued an order that the forced transfer of the civilian population must be prevented and any written statements by refugees that they would not return were considered legally invalid.¹¹⁰¹ He reiterated his hope that the conflict could end through negotiations.¹¹⁰²

347. On 26 August 1992, the Accused and Koljević met with Vance and Carrington.¹¹⁰³ The Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs were willing to negotiate and even return some territory as part of an overall agreement, as long as Serb property rights in predominantly Croat and Muslim areas were protected.¹¹⁰⁴ The Accused stated that Bosnian Serb territory could be geographically continuous but Vance asked how this would be possible without causing a movement of the population.¹¹⁰⁵ With respect to Sarajevo, the Accused stated that he would accept the presence of UN monitors at all Serb artillery positions in and around Sarajevo.¹¹⁰⁶ Also on this day, the President of the ICRC appealed to the conference participants to resolve the conflict and to restore respect for international humanitarian law.¹¹⁰⁷

348. On the same day, the London Conference adopted a Statement of Principles as the basis for a negotiated settlement to end the conflict.¹¹⁰⁸ The principles included, inter alia, agreeing to a cease-fire, engaging in negotiations, implementing respect for human rights and protection of minorities, condemning forcible expulsion, complying with international humanitarian law and all Security Council resolutions, providing protection for the delivery of humanitarian aid, and agreeing that the settlement to the conflict would be through negotiation and consensus.¹¹⁰⁹

349. On 27 August 1992, the London Conference adopted a “Statement on Bosnia” condemning the continuing armed conflict in BiH, the attempts to gain territory by force, and the expulsion of civilians.¹¹¹⁰ It stated that a political settlement in BiH must include, inter alia, a permanent cessation of hostilities, recognition of BiH by all former SFRY republics, respect for current boundaries, guarantees for national community and minority rights protected by democratic and legal structures, and the right to return and compensation for civilians who were forcibly expelled.¹¹¹¹ It urged all parties to continue negotiations and discuss issues such as the grouping of heavy weapons under international control, demilitarisation of major towns with international observers present, the provision of refugee relief and humanitarian aid, and the further deployment of UN peacekeeping forces to monitor BiH.¹¹¹²

350. The parties and UNHCR agreed to a “Programme of Action on Humanitarian Issues Agreed Between the Co-Chairmen to the Conference and the Parties to the Conflict”.¹¹¹³ Under this agreement, the Accused and Izetbegović undertook to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid by road throughout BiH, and to take specific steps to develop a system of land convoys to that effect.¹¹¹⁴ On 9 September 1992, Nambiar sent a protest letter to Izetbegović over the shelling of a UN humanitarian convoy by the ABiH at the entrance to Sarajevo airport, which caused the death of two French soldiers.¹¹¹⁵ As a result of this incident, humanitarian flights were suspended for one month.¹¹¹⁶ On 14 September 1992, UNPROFOR's mandate was broadened again by Security Council Resolution 776, to include protection of humanitarian aid convoys.¹¹¹⁷

351. The Accused and Koljević, representing the Bosnian Serbs, agreed to notify the UN, within 96 hours, of the grouping of all heavy weapons around Sarajevo, Bihać, Goražde, and Jajce.¹¹¹⁸ They agreed to complete this process within seven days and for the weapons to be placed under the supervision of UN observers.¹¹¹⁹ They also agreed to “withdraw from a substantial portion of the territory now under the control of their forces”, to secure the release of detained civilians, to repatriate them, and allow refugees and displaced persons to return to their place of origin.¹¹²⁰ Finally, they agreed to support the initiative that “all units of armed forces across the entire territory of [BiH]- regardless of their allegiance- come under the supervision of competent UN officers”.¹¹²¹

5. International Conference on the Former Yugoslavia

352. The London Conference proposed the creation of a new peace conference called the ICFY.¹¹²² Under the co-chairmanship of Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and UK Prime Minister John Major, in his capacity as President of the EC Council of Ministers, the ICFY began its work in September 1992.¹¹²³ The activities of the ICFY were supervised by a steering committee and co-chaired by representatives from the Secretary General's office and the EU

Presidency's office.¹¹²⁴ The ICFY had six working groups, including one on BiH.¹¹²⁵ The BiH working group had two objectives: establishing a cessation of hostilities and implementing a constitutional arrangement that would satisfy the three constituent units of BiH.¹¹²⁶

353. The ICFY recognised that there was no viable way to create three territorially distinct states based on ethnicity but that a centralised state was also not acceptable to the parties.¹¹²⁷ It concluded that the only viable solution was the establishment of a decentralised state.¹¹²⁸

354. The ICFY held meetings mainly in Geneva with representatives from the parties to the conflict and also with representatives from the international community and non-governmental organisations.¹¹²⁹ Included in those meetings were representatives from the ICRC, UNHCR, and UNPROFOR.¹¹³⁰

355. During the negotiation process, the Bosnian Serbs pushed for an agenda consistent with the Strategic Goals.¹¹³¹ In turn, the Bosnian Muslims maintained their request to create a unitary state of BiH with centralised powers in which they possessed a majority.¹¹³² The Bosnian Croats wished to take BiH out of the FRY, to declare independence, and to establish their own state called the Community of Herceg-Bosna.¹¹³³ This new state would have territorial contiguity with Croatia and have a special relationship with Croatia, with the possibility of uniting with Croatia in the future.¹¹³⁴

356. The ICFY continued to engage in meetings with all three parties in BiH.¹¹³⁵ The Bosnian Serb leadership identified the areas of BiH they wanted to be under Bosnian Serb control.¹¹³⁶ The Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs were firmly committed to the principles as agreed upon on 18 March 1992 and that a political settlement was absolutely essential.¹¹³⁷ As a result of negotiations, the Accused agreed that the Bosnian Serb heavy weapons in certain locations of BiH would be concentrated and monitored by UNMOs.¹¹³⁸

357. During a meeting on 17 September 1992, when Owen expressed his concern to the Accused about the siege of Sarajevo, the Accused denied that it was a siege, stating rather that the Bosnian Serbs were “protecting” their suburbs.¹¹³⁹ The Accused reiterated his position that the Bosnian Serbs, Bosnian Croats, and Bosnian Muslims could not live together in BiH and that Sarajevo should be divided into Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb entities.¹¹⁴⁰ During a meeting the following day, the Accused and Koljević stated again that the Bosnian Serbs and the Bosnian Croats would not accept a unitary BiH state; a state based on one-man, one-vote.¹¹⁴¹ Koljević also stated that the Bosnian Serbs would not accept the internal borders of BiH without some form of cantonisation.¹¹⁴²

358. On 30 September 1992, the Accused and Koljević met with Vance, Owen, Okun and others in Geneva to further discuss the situation in Sarajevo.¹¹⁴³ The Accused stated that it was not the Bosnian Serbs who were “besieging” Sarajevo and that they could not take unilateral steps but needed reciprocal actions by the Bosnian Muslims.¹¹⁴⁴ The Accused repeated that the Bosnian Serbs who wished to leave the city should be allowed to do so.¹¹⁴⁵ Okun noted that the Accused

a. Vance-Owen Plan

359. The culmination of the work of the ICFY resulted in the Vance-Owen Plan which was formally introduced on 2 January 1993.¹¹⁴⁸ The plan consisted of three main parts: first, the constitutional arrangements for BiH, second, the military arrangements, and third, a map of the provincial structure.¹¹⁴⁹ Each part of the plan had to be signed separately by all three parties.¹¹⁵⁰

360. The constitutional arrangements of the Vance-Owen Plan stipulated that the laws of BiH that related directly to the vital interests of each of the three constituent populations would be agreed upon by consensus.¹¹⁵¹ All other legislation would not be subject to a veto.¹¹⁵²

361. On 11 January 1993, there were bilateral discussions with the Bosnian Serbs and the ICFY.¹¹⁵³ The Accused asked the ICFY to look at the previous Bosnian Serb proposals.¹¹⁵⁴ Krajišnik stressed their desire for territorial continuity and named three conditions from the Bosnian Serb Assembly: (i) BiH must be a “composite state community”; (ii) the Bosnian Serbs must have relations with other “states”; and (iii) they must have territorial continuity.¹¹⁵⁵ Mladić told Okun and Owen that the Bosnian Serbs wanted “peace with justice” for all three peoples but that the Bosnian Muslims could not “beat”, “exterminate”, or “cause [the Serbs] to disappear”.¹¹⁵⁶ The following day, at a plenary meeting, the Accused expressed his reservations about the ICFY’s

¹¹⁵² Herbert Okun, P776 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 4238. Okun testified that one of the Bosnian Serb goals was to have veto power over anything that the central BiH government did and at a 6 January 1993 meeting with Slobodan Milošević in Belgrade, Milošević stated that he had spoken to the Accused and Krajišnik who wanted the consensus rule to apply to everything. Slobodan Milošević stated that he would do all he could to convince the Accused to accept the Vance-Owen Plan. Herbert Okun, P776 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 4238; P789 (Sixth notebook of Herbert Okun’s ICFY diary), e-court p. 26; P4221 (Excerpt from UNSC report, 16 November 1993). Momir Bulatović stated that beginning in 1993, a split began to develop between the Bosnian Serb leadership and the FRY resulting from a difference in opinion about the peace plans proposed. Bulatović stated that the FRY wanted the war to end at all costs and to accept the peace plans but the Bosnian Serb leadership opposed this. constitutional principles and stated he could not accept them but he would convey the ICFY's proposals to the Bosnian Serb Assembly.¹¹⁵⁷

362. On 15 January 1993, at a meeting with Okun and Vance, the representative for the Bosnian Serbs, Aleksa Buha, stated that the Bosnian Serbs needed the Posavina "corridor", which was a road that connected Belgrade to Banja Luka via Bijeljina and Brčko.¹¹⁵⁸ For territories still under dispute, Buha noted the Accused's request for a resolution by referendum.¹¹⁵⁹

363. On 23 January 1993, at a plenary summit meeting,¹¹⁶⁰ Izetbegović stated that he objected to the map on the basis that regions from which population had been removed could not come under the control of those who removed them, and that while the peace conference was ongoing, the "aggression" continued.¹¹⁶¹ The Accused stated that he finally agreed to accept the nine constitutional principles and in relation to the proposed map, he acknowledged that considerable success had been achieved but certain territories were still under dispute.¹¹⁶² Later in the day, during a discussion on the proposed map, the Accused asked for a larger Bosnian Serb territory and proposed his own boundaries.¹¹⁶³

The nine constitutional principles were proposed for the basis of the BiH Constitution. The principles included: (i) BiH would be a decentralised state with three constituent groups; (ii) the provinces would not have international legal personality; (iii) full freedom of movement would be allowed throughout BiH; (iv) matters of vital concern to any of the constituent units would be regulated in the Constitution, amended by consensus of the three constituent units, and there was no veto; (v) provinces and the central government would have democratically elected legislatures, the central Presidency would be composed of three elected representatives from each constituent group; (vi) a Constitutional Court would resolve disputes between the central government and provinces; (vii) BiH would be demilitarised under UN/EC supervision; (viii) the highest level of internationally-recognised human rights would be provided for in the Constitution; and (ix) international monitors would remain in BiH until the constituent groups agreed by consensus to dispense with them. 364. By 25 January 1993, after several additional meetings, Okun reported that Owen feared that the negotiations would break down.¹¹⁶⁴ The following day, at a bilateral meeting,¹¹⁶⁵ the Accused stated that he was prepared to make concessions and was willing to be more flexible.¹¹⁶⁶ On 27 January 1993, Owen outlined the new ICFY proposals that for an interim period there would be no change in the Sarajevo boundaries and there would be no constitutional changes, except by consensus.¹¹⁶⁷ Krajišnik maintained that the Bosnian Serb position was to divide Sarajevo.¹¹⁶⁸

365. By 30 January 1993, the Bosnian Croats had signed all three arrangements, namely the constitutional arrangements, military arrangements, and the map of the provincial structure.¹¹⁶⁹ The Bosnian Muslims had only accepted the military arrangements.¹¹⁷⁰ The Bosnian Serbs had rejected all three arrangements.¹¹⁷¹ Meetings with the Bosnian Serbs continued in February and March to discuss details of the proposed arrangements, in particular the map of BiH.¹¹⁷²

366. Also in January 1993, the ICFY proposed an “Agreement for Peace in [BiH]” in the hopes of establishing a cessation of hostilities.¹¹⁷³ The agreement called for a cessation of hostilities and a subsequent demilitarisation of Sarajevo; monitoring by UNPROFOR of the confrontation lines and the removal of heavy weapons; and restoration of civil infrastructures and humanitarian aid, including through the establishment and opening of Blue Routes for the freedom of movement of people and humanitarian assistance.¹¹⁷⁴ It called for the creation of a Joint Commission to execute and implement the details of the plan.¹¹⁷⁵ The areas in which all heavy weapons were to be withdrawn included Mojmiilo, Dobrinja, Lukavica, Gornji, Kotorac, Vojkovići, Hrasnica,

367. On 26 March 1993, Wahlgren, Morillon, and others met with Mladić in Belgrade.¹¹⁷⁹ Morillon criticised the recent attack on Srebrenica; Mladić stated that the ABiH began the offensive and the VRS had retaliated.¹¹⁸⁰ On 6 April 1993, Wahlgren and Morillon met with Milovanović, Gvero, and others at the Sarajevo airport to discuss the offensive in Srebrenica.¹¹⁸¹ Wahlgren informed the participants that the Bosnian Muslims had set two conditions for this meeting, namely that the Bosnian Serbs should stop their attack on Srebrenica and that UN observers and one company of CanBat should be allowed into Srebrenica.¹¹⁸² Milovanović responded that the Bosnian Serbs were not attacking Srebrenica but that once Bosnian Muslims agreed to a cease-fire throughout BiH, the Bosnian Serbs would stop their offensive.¹¹⁸³

368. On 12 April 1993, Wahlgren met with Mladić in Sarajevo to discuss the offensive in Srebrenica; José Mendiluce of UNHCR was also present at the meeting.¹¹⁸⁴ Mladić told Mendiluce that there was no problem with Mendiluce assisting in the evacuation of the Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica.¹¹⁸⁵ However, Mladić stated that the RS had no respect for the “no fly zone” set forth in Security Council Resolution 781 and requested that no NATO planes fly over the RS.¹¹⁸⁶ In addition, he refused requests that UNPROFOR deploy extra troops in Srebrenica and the eastern enclaves.¹¹⁸⁷ Wahlgren reported that when Mladić was asked directly whether he intended to take Srebrenica by force, he did not answer the question, rather he stated that he was ready to discuss a political solution to the Srebrenica problem.¹¹⁸⁸ Wahlgren reported that Srebrenica had become a key issue and a test case for the future survival of the Vance-Owen Plan.¹¹⁸⁹

369. On 16 April 1993, the Security Council passed Resolution 819 establishing Srebrenica as a safe area.¹¹⁹⁰ The resolution demanded the immediate cessation of armed attacks by “Bosnian Serb paramilitary units” against Srebrenica and their immediate withdrawal.¹¹⁹¹

370. On 18 April 1993, an Agreement for the Demilitarisation of Srebrenica was signed.¹¹⁹² It called for a total cease-fire in Srebrenica, the demilitarisation of Srebrenica within 72 hours, the deployment of an UNPROFOR company into Srebrenica, and the opening of a corridor between Tuzla and Srebrenica for the evacuation of the seriously wounded and ill.¹¹⁹³ All weapons were to be handed over to UNPROFOR.¹¹⁹⁴ CanBat was deployed to Srebrenica pursuant to this agreement.¹¹⁹⁵ The following day, a working group met to discuss how to implement the demilitarisation process.¹¹⁹⁶ The VRS and ABiH disagreed on the area to be demilitarised.¹¹⁹⁷ UNPROFOR reported that while the Bosnian Serbs seemed ready to adhere to the 18 April agreement, the Bosnian Muslims did not and were considering going to the Security Council.¹¹⁹⁸ The Bosnian Muslims expressed concern that the VRS would redeploy to Žepa and Goražde after withdrawing from Srebrenica.¹¹⁹⁹

371. On 24 April 1993, the Accused, Krajišnik, Mladić, Okun, Owen and others met in Belgrade to continue negotiations, in particular with respect to the proposed Vance-Owen Plan's map of BiH.¹²⁰⁰ The Accused was unhappy with the Vance-Owen Plan, particularly with the maps, and suggested that the Bosnian Serbs trade some land in BiH for land in Croatia, which Owen rejected.¹²⁰¹

372. On 2 May 1993, in Athens, the Accused signed the Vance-Owen Plan for the Bosnian Serbs but it was subject to ratification by the Bosnian Serb Assembly.¹²⁰² However, the Bosnian Serb Assembly rejected the plan.¹²⁰³ During this period there was never a complete cessation of hostilities and the armed conflict continued despite the peace efforts.¹²⁰⁴

373. On 6 May 1993, the Security Council passed Resolution 824 which established the safe areas of Sarajevo, Tuzla, Žepa, Goražde, and Bihać.¹²⁰⁵ The resolution declared that these safe areas should be free from armed attack or any other hostile acts by all parties.¹²⁰⁶ In addition, the resolution provided for an immediate cease-fire and the withdrawal of all Bosnian Serb military or paramilitary units from the areas.¹²⁰⁷ Further, it declared that all parties should respect the rights of

375. On 15 and 16 May 1993, a referendum held in the RS on whether to accept the Vance-Owen Plan resulted in a majority of votes against it.¹²¹¹

376. On 4 June 1993, the Security Council passed Resolution 836 reaffirming the establishment of the safe areas and condemning military attacks.¹²¹² While commending the Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats for signing the Vance-Owen Plan, it was gravely concerned that the Bosnian Serbs had not signed it.¹²¹³ This resolution extended the mandate of UNPROFOR to include participating in the delivery of humanitarian aid.¹²¹⁴ It authorised UNPROFOR to act in self-defence and take “necessary measures”, including the use of force in response to bombardments or incursions into the safe areas and obstruction in and around those areas to the freedom of movement of UNPROFOR or humanitarian convoys.¹²¹⁵ It also decided that national or regional organisations, under the authority of the Security Council and subject to close co-ordination with the Secretary General and UNPROFOR, may take all necessary measures, through the use of air power, in and around the safe areas, to support UNPROFOR in the performance of its mandate.¹²¹⁶

b. Owen- Stoltenberg Plan

377. Following the failure of the Vance-Owen Plan, the ICFY continued working through September 1993, under the co-chairmanship of Owen for the EC and Thorvald Stoltenberg, who replaced Vance, for the UN.¹²¹⁷

378. A new round of talks was initiated by Owen and Stoltenberg.¹²¹⁸ On 23 June 1993, the Co-Chairmen met with representatives from the parties.¹²¹⁹ Nine “constitutional principles” were proposed by the close of this meeting.¹²²⁰ The Accused promised to do everything in his power to ensure the delivery of food, water, electricity, and gas to Sarajevo.¹²²¹ As for the eastern enclaves, the Accused stated that the Bosnian Serbs were prepared to “desist from all attacks [...] provided that “the armed forces within them are disarmed”.”¹²²² Another round of talks took place in Geneva on 27 July 1993, with representatives from all sides, including the Accused, Izetbegović, Tuđman, and Slobodan Milošević.¹²²³ On 30 July 1993, the parties agreed to the creation of three republics, representing the three constituencies in BiH, under a centralised and joint government authority.¹²²⁴ On the same day, a cessation of hostilities agreement was signed at the Sarajevo airport between Mladić and Delić.¹²²⁵

379. The Bosnian Serbs agreed in principle to a proposal to open the Sarajevo airport by 4 August 1993.¹²²⁶ The Accused informed the Co-Chairmen that Mladić was prepared to withdraw the VRS and allow the UN to take control of the area.¹²²⁷ On 7 August 1993, the Accused wrote a

These nine constitutional principles were very similar to those proposed under the Vance-Owen Plan. Some changes included: binding arbitration for disputes between the republics, the re-organisation of BiH along confederal lines (three internal republics: Serbian, Croatian, and Muslim) instead of ten provinces, and the fact that Sarajevo would be an UN-administered city. Igman to UNPROFOR.¹²²⁸ On 11 August 1993, the respective military commanders signed the Military Agreement for Peace in BiH.¹²²⁹ A few days later, the three parties met again and agreed to allow UNMOs to have freedom of movement throughout BiH and that the administration of Sarajevo, with the exclusion of Pale, would be organised by the UN.¹²³⁰ On 14 August 1993, a DMZ around Mt. Igman and the Sarajevo airport was established.¹²³¹

380. At the 34th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused voiced his support for the constitutional arrangements proposed earlier in the negotiations, noting that they recognised the sovereignty of the RS within the BiH confederation.¹²³² The plan was adopted by the Bosnian Serb Assembly with the constitutional agreement as a condition for peace.¹²³³

381. The ICFY continued to work on other arrangements for peace.¹²³⁴ The parties agreed to a “Joint Declaration on Peace” which included a cessation of hostilities effective 18 September 1993 and proposed the resumption of talks on 21 September at the Sarajevo airport.¹²³⁵ On 20 September 1993, the ICFY met with the parties on a British Royal Navy aircraft carrier in the Adriatic Sea, presented proposals on the VRS withdrawal from Mt. Igman, the establishment of safe routes in and out of Sarajevo, and the restoration of utilities. and the plan that emerged was referred to as the “Invincible Plan”.¹²³⁶ The plan allocated 49% of the territory of BiH to the Bosnian Serbs, 33% to the Bosnian Muslims, and 17.5% to the Bosnian Croats.¹²³⁷ Sarajevo would remain undivided and administered by the UN for two years.¹²³⁸

382. The Bosnian Muslims rejected the Owen-Stoltenberg Plan at the end of September 1993.¹²³⁹ UNPROFOR reported that the Bosnian Serbs had invested heavily in the Owen-Stoltenberg Plan and since its failure, had become “more politically frustrated and increasingly volatile”.¹²⁴⁰

383. At the 35th Session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused proposed the adoption of a declaration on the continuation of the peace process, expressing his commitment to negotiations despite the Bosnian Muslims’ rejection of the peace plan.¹²⁴¹ However, the Accused stipulated that the RS was forced to withdraw all of its prior concessions.¹²⁴²

384. On 18 November 1993, the ICFY issued a Joint Declaration on the provision of humanitarian relief in BiH signed by the Accused, Silajdžić, Boban, and Ogata in Geneva.¹²⁴³ The parties agreed to (i) ensure complete and secure freedom of movement for the personnel of the UN and humanitarian organisations; (ii) allow the UNHCR and ICRC to determine without any

386. Following the shelling of the Markale market in Sarajevo on 5 February 1994, Owen and Stoltenberg met with the Accused in Pale and agreed upon the UN administration of Sarajevo.¹²⁴⁶ On 6 February 1994, Akashi, Rose, and others visited the Markale market in Sarajevo, one day after it was shelled.¹²⁴⁷ Following this visit, Akashi's group met first with Izetbegović and then with the Accused in an attempt to secure an immediate cease-fire in Sarajevo.¹²⁴⁸ The Bosnian Muslims stated they were willing to sign a cease-fire agreement on the condition that the Bosnian Serbs moved their artillery and heavy weapons out of the range of Sarajevo and place them under UNPROFOR control.¹²⁴⁹ The Bosnian Serbs would not accept the weapons withdrawal but would accept "on-site monitoring".¹²⁵⁰ A draft joint declaration was drawn up as a basis for further negotiations.¹²⁵¹

387. On 8 February 1994, Rose met with Milovanović at the Lukavica Barracks.¹²⁵² Milovanović stated that he had been given full authority from the Accused and Mladić to agree to the principles for the cease-fire, withdrawal of heavy weapons, and demilitarisation of Sarajevo.¹²⁵³

An immediate cease-fire would be agreed upon the following day between the parties and a Joint Commission would be set up at the Sarajevo airport to work out the details of the agreement.¹²⁵⁴

388. A cessation of hostilities agreement was arrived at on 9 February 1994, effective 12 p.m. on the following day.¹²⁵⁵ As part of the agreement, a TEZ in Sarajevo was established which consisted of a 20 kilometre radius from the centre of the city in which all weapons of a 12.7 mm calibre or higher were to be removed or turned over to UNPROFOR at a designated WCP.¹²⁵⁶ In addition, a Joint Commission was created under the chairmanship of the UNPROFOR Sector Sarajevo Commander in order to determine a timetable for the withdrawal of the heavy weapons.¹²⁵⁷ WCPs were also established.¹²⁵⁸ WCPs were locations where all the weapons systems for each party to the conflict were being held.¹²⁵⁹ In a subsequent agreement, the Accused and Akashi agreed upon the locations of the WCPs and that UNPROFOR would have unrestricted access throughout the TEZ.¹²⁶⁰

389. On 24 February 1994, the creation of Blue Routes within Sarajevo to ensure freedom of movement and delivery of humanitarian aid was agreed to in principle.¹²⁶¹ The routes included a Dobrinja-Butmir route for Bosnian Muslim civilians, a Lukavica-Ilidža route for Bosnian Serbs civilians, and a pedestrian crossing in downtown Sarajevo at the Bratstvo Jedinstvo Bridge.¹²⁶² However, on 27 February 1994, Milovanović stated in a meeting with Rose and Delić that the VRS would block UN convoys moving over Bosnian Serb territory regardless of the joint declaration signed on 18 November 1993, and would not allow the UN or anyone else to use the Bratstvo Jedinstvo Bridge.¹²⁶³

391. At the end of March and into the beginning of April 1994, attacks were launched on the safe area of Goražde.¹²⁶⁹ On 9 April 1994, a cease-fire agreement was discussed.¹²⁷⁰ It proposed a complete cease-fire in BiH for 14 days and the Bosnian Serbs' withdrawal from Goražde.¹²⁷¹ Mladić stated that he was "uninterested in signing anything other than a total agreement for the cessation of hostilities".¹²⁷² The Bosnian Muslims stated that they would agree to a cessation of hostilities for a period of four months, on the condition that the Bosnian Serb withdraw from Goražde.¹²⁷³

392. On 10 and 11 April 1994, the Bosnian Serbs shelled the town of Goražde.¹²⁷⁴ NATO responded with air strikes targeting a VRS artillery command post.¹²⁷⁵ In response, Bosnian Serbs detained UN personnel.¹²⁷⁶ In addition, the city of Sarajevo and the Tuzla airport were shelled.¹²⁷⁷ The Sarajevo airport remained closed.¹²⁷⁸

393. On 17 April 1994, UNPROFOR representatives went to Pale to speak to the Accused, who declared that the “right bank of the Drina will be ours” and no agreement could be reached on a proposed three-kilometre TEZ around Goražde.¹²⁷⁹ The negotiations only yielded the release of a few of the UN personnel who had been detained by the Bosnian Serb forces.¹²⁸⁰ UNPROFOR representatives reported that “no agreement was reached on the boundaries of the safe areas, the deployment of UNPROFOR and UNMO troops, or anything at all specific. [Nor] is there reason to believe that even the promises made will be kept. In the words of Russian envoy [Vitaly] Churkin, ‘I have heard more lies here in 24 hours than I’ve heard in my entire life’”.¹²⁸¹

394. On 22 April 1994, the Security Council passed Resolution 913 condemning the Bosnian Serbs for the attacks on Goražde.¹²⁸² The following day, an agreement was reached between Akashi and the Bosnian Serbs for an immediate and total cease-fire around Goražde starting at 12 p.m.¹²⁸³ It established that UNPROFOR would monitor the three kilometre radius from the centre of Goražde and heavy weapons would be withdrawn from a 20 kilometre radius.¹²⁸⁴

395. On 21 May 1994, an agreement between the parties to demilitarise the Goražde TEZ was concluded.¹²⁸⁵ It included a cessation of all hostilities in and around Goražde effective

6. Contact Group

396. The Contact Group was comprised of representatives from France, Germany, the UK, the Russian Federation, and the USA.¹²⁸⁸ Talks were held in Geneva between 1 to 8 June 1994 in order to come to a political settlement of the conflict, the main issue being the concept of a unified state.¹²⁸⁹ The situation in Goražde remained a problem as the Bosnian Muslims stipulated that the presence of armed VRS soldiers inside the Goražde TEZ violated one of their preconditions for the resumption of the cessation of hostilities talks.¹²⁹⁰ UNPROFOR dispatched additional soldiers to Goražde to patrol the TEZ.¹²⁹¹ According to UNPROFOR, the Accused made a commitment to Akashi that all armed VRS soldiers would leave the TEZ in Goražde by 6 p.m. on 2 June 1994.¹²⁹² However, UNPROFOR observed that VRS soldiers in the TEZ simply changed their uniforms into civilian attire and kept their weapons with them.¹²⁹³

397. On 8 June 1994, the parties signed an Agreement on the Cessation of Offensive Actions which would last for one month.¹²⁹⁴ They further agreed to release all prisoners of war and detainees and exchange information on missing persons.¹²⁹⁵ The ABiH launched an offensive in

Rose stated that a discussion for an agreement was brokered on 23 April 1994 in Belgrade between Akashi, the Accused, and Mladić, among others. The agreement included, inter alia, a cease-fire in and around Goražde and the creation of a three kilometre exclusion zone around Goražde. the Ozren mountain range in mid-June.¹²⁹⁶ However, by the end of June, the parties agreed to extend the 8 June agreement by one month.¹²⁹⁷

398. The Contact Group unveiled a revised peace plan on 7 July 1994 which contained a new set of territorial arrangements.¹²⁹⁸ The Contact Group plan proposed that 51% of BiH would be administered by a newly formed Bosnian-Croat Federation and that 49% be administered by the Bosnian Serbs.¹²⁹⁹ On 18 July 1994, the Bosnian Muslims accepted the plan.¹³⁰⁰

399. On 19 July 1994, at the Bosnian Serb Assembly, the Accused spoke about the Contact Group's proposed plan stating that the acceptance of the plan would not be a guarantee for peace.¹³⁰¹ On 21 July 1994, the Bosnian Serbs officially rejected the plan stating that the plan was unfair and their demands were not met.¹³⁰² The Contact Group met again in Geneva on 30 July 1994 to negotiate a new plan.¹³⁰³ A few days earlier, the Bosnian Serbs effectively closed access to the Sarajevo airport and the tunnel under it through Mt. Igman, which had been used for humanitarian aid.¹³⁰⁴ The Accused claimed this was done because of the smuggling of weapons into the city.¹³⁰⁵ Rose, due to security reasons, closed the Sarajevo airport to civilian traffic and the UN reported that without the airport, the situation in Sarajevo would be dire.¹³⁰⁶ Rose reported: "[F]or the first time in many months, we are moving backwards".¹³⁰⁷

400. An anti-sniping agreement for Sarajevo was signed by the parties on 14 August 1994.¹³⁰⁸ It stipulated that each side would issue orders explicitly forbidding sniping activities against military,

401. On 27 August 1994, in a referendum held in Bosnian Serb-held territory, 96% of the voters rejected the Contact Group plan.¹³¹² Despite this, the Contact Group continued its work throughout the remainder of year and into the following year.¹³¹³

402. On 20 September 1994, Rose, Andreev, and Harland met with the Accused, Koljević, Krajišnik, and Milovanović in Pale.¹³¹⁴ The Accused was angry about a Bosnian Muslim attack in Sarajevo a few days prior and stated there could be no talks on demilitarisation after such an attack.¹³¹⁵ In reference to the possibility that the Security Council would tighten sanctions on Pale, the Accused responded, “if the international community treats us like a beast, then we will behave like a beast”.¹³¹⁶ Krajišnik demanded, inter alia, that UNPROFOR formally recognise the Bosnian Serb ownership of the Sarajevo airport and that UNPROFOR pay rent for the use of the airport.¹³¹⁷ Krajišnik stated that “it would be difficult to stop Serb soldiers from shooting at airplanes” if these demands were not met.¹³¹⁸ Milovanović agreed to move all of the heavy weapons out of the Sarajevo TEZ by midnight the following night.¹³¹⁹

403. On 23 September 1994, the Security Council passed Resolution 941 in which it noted that UNHCR and the ICRC had reported grave violations of international humanitarian law in Banja Luka, Bijeljina, and other areas of BiH under Bosnian Serb control which it described as ethnic cleansing.¹³²⁰ It condemned these practices and demanded that the Bosnian Serb authorities immediately cease their “campaign of ethnic cleansing” and give immediate access to the Special Representative of the Secretary General, UNPROFOR, UNHCR, and ICRC to Banja Luka, Bijeljina, and other areas.¹³²¹ On 5 October 1994, Akashi and UNPROFOR met with the Accused and others in Pale to continue negotiations.¹³²² Topics for discussion included, inter alia, the reopening of the Sarajevo airport, re-opening of land routes into Sarajevo, demilitarisation of Sarajevo, and freedom of movement for UNPROFOR, UNHCR, and civilians.¹³²³

404. On 10 October 1994, Rose, Gobilliard, and Harland met in Pale with Mladić and Tolimir to discuss a sniping incident on a tramway in Sarajevo and the freedom of movement of fuel convoys.¹³²⁴ On 19 October 1994, Rose reported to Akashi that Mladić was not allowing fuel convoys across Bosnian Serb-held territory until UNPROFOR guaranteed that ABiH forces were out of the DMZ around Mt. Igman or unless UNPROFOR hand over 50% of the convoys to the Bosnian Serbs.¹³²⁵ Accordingly, Rose recommended that a letter be written to the Accused informing him of this situation.¹³²⁶

405. On 22 October 1994, Akashi and Rose met with the Accused, Koljević, Buha, Zametica, and Tolimir in Pale.¹³²⁷ The Bosnian Serbs stated that they had opened the Sarajevo airport and restored utilities to the city.¹³²⁸ Rose reported that this was untrue.¹³²⁹

406. On 19 November 1994, Gobilliard and Andreev met with the Accused and Tolimir in Pale to discuss the deteriorating situation in BiH, including the attacks around Sarajevo and Bihać in violation of Security Council Resolution 836.¹³³⁰ According to UNPROFOR, the Accused made it clear that the Bosnian Serbs would not respect any agreements until the Bosnian Muslims completely withdrew from the DMZ.¹³³¹ Akashi reported that he spoke to the Accused and urged him to accept the Contact Group plan but “to no avail”.¹³³²

407. On 1 December 1994, Rose went to Pale to speak to the Accused about the deteriorating relationship between the Bosnian Serbs and UNPROFOR.¹³³³ The Accused was upset about NATO activity and Rose explained to him that NATO air support could be used (i) in support of UNPROFOR troops who are in danger, (ii) in support of the TEZ, and (iii) to deter attacks on the safe areas.¹³³⁴ Rose also told the Accused that approximately 500 UNPROFOR personnel were being detained in eastern BiH and the Accused promised that he would look into it but assured him that the detainees were being treated well.¹³³⁵ Rose told the Accused that unless minimum conditions were met, UNPROFOR would begin withdrawing from BiH as its mission had become almost impossible.¹³³⁶ Gvero told Rose that the Sarajevo airport could not be re-opened until the Bosnian Serbs received written guarantees from the UN that NATO would not attack Bosnian Serb targets and that the safe areas would be respected when they were demilitarised.¹³³⁷ However, within a few days, Koljević made assurances that UNPROFOR personnel would be released and by week's end, all UNPROFOR detainees were released and some convoys were moving through BiH again.¹³³⁸ Buha issued a public statement that the Bosnian Serb Assembly should accept the Contact Group plan on the understanding that the acceptance of the plan would be immediately followed by "talks on territorial swaps".¹³³⁹

408. On 7 December 1994, the Accused made public statements on Serb television that he was willing to negotiate on the basis of the Contact Group plan but that the map was still unacceptable.¹³⁴⁰ Subsequent meetings took place in Pale over the issue of the restrictions on UNPROFOR's freedom of movement, the demilitarisation of Bihać, and the Mt. Igman DMZ.¹³⁴¹

409. On 14 December 1994, Akashi and Rose met with the Accused and others in Pale.¹³⁴² Akashi proposed a plan to implement further negotiations on the basis of the Contact Group plan and suggested, inter alia, a cease-fire and demilitarised zone for Bihać, a cease-fire for all of BiH, and a cessation of hostilities.¹³⁴³ The Accused expressed his opinion that the Bosnian Serbs had been treated unequally and that there would be no cease-fire until an actual peace plan to end the conflict was proposed and that he would only consider the Bihać proposal once agreements on Srebrenica, Žepa, Goražde, and the Mt. Igman DMZ were fulfilled.¹³⁴⁴

410. On 31 December 1994, the parties signed an Agreement on Complete Cessation of Hostilities ("COHA") following the cease-fire agreement signed on 23 December 1994.¹³⁴⁵ The complete cessation of hostilities was to go into effect from 12 p.m. on 1 January 1995 along all the confrontation lines.¹³⁴⁶ The COHA was signed by the Accused, Izetbegović, Rasim Delić, Mladić, Krešimir Zubak, Vladimir Soljić, and witnessed by Akashi and Rose.¹³⁴⁷ The COHA stipulated that the agreement would be in effect for an initial period of four months, subject to renewal by agreement of the parties.¹³⁴⁸ The COHA would be monitored by UNPROFOR through the establishment of a Central Joint Commission (“CJC”), which would have an initial meeting at the Sarajevo airport and a Regional Joint Commission would also be established in permanent session, “as needed and as determined” by the CJC.¹³⁴⁹ The COHA provided for (i) the separation of forces to mutually agreed upon positions and the positioning of UNPROFOR forces for observation and monitoring; (ii) the parties refraining from use of all explosive munitions, and (iii) the organisation of talks for the withdrawal of heavy weapons of calibre 12.7 mm and above and their monitoring by UNPROFOR.¹³⁵⁰ The parties agreed to full freedom of movement for UNPROFOR and other international agencies, in particular UNHCR, and to monitor human rights and the delivery of humanitarian aid.¹³⁵¹

411. On 1 January 1995, the first meeting of CJC was convened at the Sarajevo airport.¹³⁵² Points of discussion included (i) the exchange of liaison officers; (ii) the implementation of the 5 June 1992 Sarajevo airport agreement; (iii) the 8 May 1993 Srebrenica and Žepa agreements; (iv) the 14 August 1994 anti-sniping agreement; (v) the 14 August 1993 Mt. Igman DMZ agreement; (vi) the confrontation lines and WCPs; (vii) the Blue Routes; and (viii) the withdrawal of foreign troops.¹³⁵³ Despite holding one or two additional meetings, the CJC did not function in an effective way.¹³⁵⁴

412. On 11 January 1995, an agreement on the military implementation of the COHA was signed by Mladić, Delić, and Blaškić, and witnessed by Rose.¹³⁵⁵

413. On 31 January 1995, an agreement for the reopening of the Airport Routes for official international humanitarian organisations within the protocol of the COHA was signed by Krajišnik,

414. Despite the COHA, by March 1995 UNPROFOR reported that the situation in Sarajevo had deteriorated.¹³⁵⁸ The situation in BiH, generally, saw an upsurge in military activity with the shelling of Tuzla and Goražde.¹³⁵⁹ In addition, Mladić told Smith in early March 1995 that he anticipated that the ABiH would attack the eastern enclaves in a “Tuzla to Srebrenica and Žepa and Tronovo to Goražde” axis and that in response the Bosnian Serbs would attack into the enclaves.¹³⁶⁰ Smith responded that such an action would be interpreted as an attack on the safe areas.¹³⁶¹ UNPROFOR reported that the prospects for a political solution to the conflict remained “remote” as Slobodan Milošević rejected proposals by the Contact Group and the Bosnian Serbs were firmly maintaining their refusal to negotiate on the basis of the Contact Group plan.¹³⁶² Further, both the Bosnian Serbs and the Bosnian Muslims complained about the other side’s non-compliance with the COHA.¹³⁶³ On 31 March 1995, the Security Council extended UNPROFOR’s mandate in BiH for an additional eight months, ending on 30 November 1995.¹³⁶⁴

415. On 7 April 1995, UNPROFOR reported that the Bosnian Serbs refused to allow the UN passage through the Blue Routes around the Sarajevo airport and that the Bosnian Muslims had refused to attend the CJC.¹³⁶⁵ The following day, the Bosnian Serbs closed the Sarajevo airport, including for humanitarian relief, alleging that UNPROFOR was violating the 5 June 1992 Sarajevo airport agreement.¹³⁶⁶ On 20 April 1995, Akashi and Smith met with the Accused, Koljević, Krajišnik, and Gvero in Pale.¹³⁶⁷ The Accused stated that the COHA had been “breached so massively by the Muslims that it does not exist”.¹³⁶⁸ He also stated that the Bosnian Serbs would not accept any form of a cease-fire but only accept a complete cessation of hostilities.¹³⁶⁹ A visit of the Contact Group’s representatives from the USA and Germany to Sarajevo on 21 April 1995 was blocked by the Bosnian Serbs.¹³⁷⁰ On 22 April 1995, the Accused held a press conference and stated that if peace was not possible through political means, the Bosnian Serbs would put an end to the war by military means.¹³⁷¹

416. The situation in Sarajevo and BiH deteriorated further in May 1995.¹³⁷² On 1 May 1995, the parties were unable to agree to a renewal of the COHA, thus resulting in its expiration.¹³⁷³ The Security Council expressed its deep concern about the failure of the parties to extend the COHA.¹³⁷⁴ The Contact Group restated its two main objectives, namely the extension of the COHA and the mutual recognition of Serbia, Croatia, and BiH.¹³⁷⁵ UNPROFOR reported that “unless the Contact Group somehow finds a way to initiate a viable negotiation process the parties will continue on a path of mutual destruction”.¹³⁷⁶ UNPROFOR also reported that on 7 May 1995, the VRS had shelled Butmir and the Igman road.¹³⁷⁷ The Sarajevo airport had remained closed to humanitarian flights since 8 April 1995.¹³⁷⁸

417. On 21 May 1995, Smith and the Accused met in Pale to discuss the future mandate of UNPROFOR, the eastern enclaves, Sarajevo, and the Contact Group peace process.¹³⁷⁹ The Accused complained to Smith about the “partial nature of UN Mandates” with respect to UNPROFOR but that the Bosnian Serbs wished for a negotiated settlement and that the UN should remain in BiH for a future political settlement.¹³⁸⁰ With respect to the eastern enclaves, the Accused stated that he could not respect the safe areas mandates because in his opinion, the safe areas were safe havens for the ABiH.¹³⁸¹ The Accused maintained his position that he would not accept the Contact Group plan but he would accept negotiations on the basis of the Contact Group plan.¹³⁸²

418. On 22 May 1995, the VRS removed two heavy weapons from the WCPs near Sarajevo.¹³⁸³ The ABiH removed their heavy weapons and the fighting escalated.¹³⁸⁴ The VRS removed more heavy weapons in response.¹³⁸⁵ On 24 May 1995, Smith issued an ultimatum to both parties that NATO air strikes would be called in unless all heavy weapons ceased firing by 12 p.m. the following day.¹³⁸⁶ A second deadline, 24 hours later, was established for the parties to either remove their heavy weapons from the exclusion zone or to place them in the collection points.¹³⁸⁷ The Bosnian Serbs failed to comply with the deadlines and Akashi authorised NATO to conduct air strikes.¹³⁸⁸

419. Following NATO air strikes on Bosnian Serb military targets on 25 and 26 May 1995, the Bosnian Serb forces detained UN personnel in BiH.¹³⁸⁹ The VRS shelled Sarajevo and the safe areas, including Tuzla.¹³⁹⁰ On 27 May 1995, in an order to all SRK units, Dragomir Milošević stated that the Bosnian Serbs would have full control of Sarajevo airport and “stand ready to take it over with complete UNPROFOR combat equipment”.¹³⁹¹ The Accused declared that all Security Council resolutions and NATO ultimatums were null and void.¹³⁹² The UN also reported that the food situation in Sarajevo was rapidly deteriorating due to the continued closure of the airport and of land routes.¹³⁹³ In addition the gas and electricity in Sarajevo had been cut off.¹³⁹⁴

420. In early June 1995, heavy fighting around Sarajevo broke out.¹³⁹⁵ The Accused and Koljević agreed to re-open the land routes to Sarajevo for UNHCR convoys.¹³⁹⁶ By 3 June 1995, 120 UN personnel were released by the Bosnian Serbs but the UN estimated that 200 more were still in detention.¹³⁹⁷ On 9 June 1995, the Security Council approved the deployment of British and French rapid reaction forces equipped with heavy artillery to UNPROFOR in BiH.¹³⁹⁸ Also on this day, UNHCR, UNPROFOR, and the Bosnian Serbs came to an agreement to start the delivery of humanitarian aid by land routes to Sarajevo.¹³⁹⁹

421. On 16 June 1995, the Security Council passed Resolution 998 demanding the immediate and unconditional release of the remaining UN personnel.¹⁴⁰⁰ It further demanded the unimpeded access for humanitarian aid, access to Sarajevo, and respecting the safe areas.¹⁴⁰¹ It also authorised the increase in UNPROFOR personnel by up to 12,500 additional troops.¹⁴⁰² Harland reported that there were what he believed to be targeted shelling against UNPROFOR by the SRK in Sarajevo.¹⁴⁰³ Smith wrote to Mladić expressing his concerns about the reports about the shelling of Bihac, Srebrenica, Goražde, and Sarajevo.¹⁴⁰⁴ Smith reminded Mladić that the safe areas regime according to Security Council Resolution 836 was still in place but that there were increasing attacks on the civilian population.¹⁴⁰⁵ On 30 June 1995, Colonel Robert Meille, the Acting Sector Sarajevo UNPROFOR Commander, wrote a letter to Dragomir Milošević condemning the attacks

7. Initiative by the USA

422. On 21 August 1995, the Accused, Krajišnik, and Buha met with UNPROFOR's Chief of Mission to discuss the current peace initiative.¹⁴⁰⁷ The Accused agreed that it was a good time to find a political solution to the conflict; however, he rejected any notion of a united BiH and maintained that each constituent republic should have sovereignty.¹⁴⁰⁸

423. On 28 August 1995, the Markale market in Sarajevo was shelled.¹⁴⁰⁹ On the same day, the Bosnian Serb Assembly adopted a resolution welcoming the initiative by the USA for a political resolution to the conflict and affirming the readiness of the Bosnian Serbs to negotiate a lasting peace.¹⁴¹⁰

424. On 29 August 1995, a meeting of the Serbian and Bosnian Serb leaderships took place in Dobanovci, near Belgrade.¹⁴¹¹ The purpose of this meeting was to discuss the contents of the Contact Group plan along with a possible NATO response to the recent shelling of the Markale market in Sarajevo.¹⁴¹² At the meeting, Slobodan Milošević urged the parties to endorse a collective negotiation team to represent the interests of both the RS and FRY in future peace talks.¹⁴¹³ Milošević proposed that he be the head of that team.¹⁴¹⁴ The Bosnian Serb leaders conceded, signing an agreement which stipulated that the Accused, Mladić, and Krajišnik would be part of a six-member delegation led by Slobodan Milošević.¹⁴¹⁵ This delegation would conduct negotiations for peace in BiH.¹⁴¹⁶ The Accused and Mladić were replaced by Koljević and Buha.¹⁴¹⁷

425. Towards the end of August 1995, UNPROFOR reported the situation in Sarajevo and Goražde to be on “alert state orange” and very tense due to shelling.¹⁴¹⁸ Smith asked Harland to inform the Accused that large-scale air strikes would begin on VRS positions.¹⁴¹⁹ Harland attempted to call the Accused in Pale at 1 a.m. on 30 August 1995.¹⁴²⁰ Harland stated that the Pale switchboard could not be contacted at this time.¹⁴²¹ In addition to NATO air strikes, Smith ordered that VRS positions around Sarajevo be shelled by UNPROFOR’s rapid reaction force on Mt. Igman in an effort to suppress the SRK’s artillery fire.¹⁴²² On 30 August 1995, Akashi sent a letter to the Accused stating that NATO air strikes had started in BiH that day in response to the shelling of the Markale market in Sarajevo two days earlier.¹⁴²³

426. On 1 September 1995, there was a formal pause in the air strikes to allow for a meeting between Smith and Mladić.¹⁴²⁴ UNPROFOR opened the Sarajevo airport under the Blue Routes regime despite a threat from Krajišnik that the VRS would shoot any vehicles attempting to cross the airport without their approval.¹⁴²⁵ Harland reported that this was the first time that traffic flowed freely in and out of Sarajevo since the siege had started in 1992.¹⁴²⁶

427. On 2 September 1995, Mladić made a number of concessions to Smith and UNPROFOR, including that the VRS would not conduct any combat operations or attacks in Sarajevo, Bihać, Tuzla, or Goražde; heavy weapons would be withdrawn; and a meeting of the Commanders would be organised.¹⁴²⁷ However, a few days later, Janvier at UNPROFOR headquarters in Zagreb reported that despite the assurances from the Bosnian Serbs, there was no evidence of heavy weapon withdrawal from the Sarajevo area.¹⁴²⁸

428. On 20 September 1995, Smith met with Miletić and Dragomir Milošević to discuss the progress of the removal of weapons from the TEZ and UNPROFOR's freedom of movement.¹⁴²⁹ Smith told them that progress on talks about a cease-fire in Sarajevo was contingent on the full restoration of utilities to the city.¹⁴³⁰

429. Between 6 and 8 October 1995, meetings were held between UNPROFOR and the Bosnian Serbs at Hotel Serbia in Ilidža, in order to negotiate a cease-fire arrangement between the Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims.¹⁴³¹

430. On 11 October 1995, the UN received letters from both Muratović and Buha stating that they agreed to the cease-fire agreement of 5 October 1995, which would enter into force at 12:01 a.m. on 12 October 1995.¹⁴³² On the same day, President Bill Clinton announced that the "Proximity Peace Talks" were forthcoming in Dayton, Ohio, USA.¹⁴³³

8. Dayton Agreement

431. On 29 October 1995, consistent with the meeting on 29 August 1995, the Accused authorised the Bosnian Serb delegation to negotiate, together with the delegation of the FRY, at the upcoming peace talks in Dayton.¹⁴³⁴

432. The Bosnia Proximity Peace Talks began at the Wright-Patterson Airforce Base in Dayton on 1 November 1995.¹⁴³⁵ In attendance were delegates from the EU, USA, Russian Federation, UK, France, Germany, FRY, Bosnian Serbs, Croatia, and the Muslim-Croat Alliance.¹⁴³⁶ Despite the removal of the Accused from the RS negotiating team he played a central consultative role in regards to RS negotiations at Dayton.¹⁴³⁷

433. On 21 November 1995, the Bosnian Proximity Peace Talks concluded, producing the “General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina”, otherwise known as the Dayton Agreement.¹⁴³⁸ The agreement consisted of 17 separate agreements drawn up during negotiations, organised into 11 separate annexes.¹⁴³⁹ The first of these agreements—the Agreement on the Military Aspects of the Peace Settlement—invited the Security Council to authorise NATO and non-NATO nations to establish a multinational Military Implementation Force (“IFOR”) under NATO command in order to assist in implementing the Dayton Agreement.¹⁴⁴⁰ The agreement provided for the cessation of hostilities in BiH, the withdrawal of all foreign forces—including

UNPROFOR—from BiH territory, the creation of a corridor of free movement between Goražde and Sarajevo, and the exchange of prisoners between parties to the conflict.¹⁴⁴¹

434. While the Dayton Agreement nominally maintained a single Bosnian state, the envisioned geographical division saw the creation of two sub-national entities: the Federation of BiH and the RS.¹⁴⁴² The Dayton Agreement allotted 49% of the disputed territory to the newly created RS, while 51% of the disputed territory remained under the control of the Federation of BiH.¹⁴⁴³ The Dayton Agreement mandated that a four kilometre zone of separation would be created along the border between these two entities, from which all parties would withdraw all forces, explosives, or other lethal assets.¹⁴⁴⁴ The RS consisted of every town along the Sava and Drina River, with the exception of Goražde.¹⁴⁴⁵ They were connected by the Posavina corridor near Brčko.¹⁴⁴⁶ Meanwhile Goražde and much of Sarajevo were allotted to the Federation of BiH.¹⁴⁴⁷ To the dismay of Bosnian Serb leaders, 61% of Sarajevo's pre-war territory was given to the Federation, including several neighbourhoods which had been under Bosnian Serb control since 1992.¹⁴⁴⁸ Finally, the parties agreed to demilitarise Sarajevo, and specified that Sarajevo would remain BiH's capital city.¹⁴⁴⁹

435. The RS delegation was unsatisfied with the course of negotiations at Dayton, as well as their treatment as part of the FRY negotiation team.¹⁴⁵⁰ The RS delegation was particularly unhappy about the division of Sarajevo, the Posavina, Brčko and Goražde corridors, and the RS's lack of access to the sea.¹⁴⁵¹ They were also unsatisfied with the Agreement on the Military Aspects of the Peace Settlement.¹⁴⁵² As a result, the members of the RS delegation refused to attend the final plenary session of the peace talks as well as the ceremonial initialling of the peace agreement.¹⁴⁵³

436. Despite the absence of the RS representatives, on 21 November 1995, the peace negotiations officially concluded, and the Dayton Agreement was initialled by Tuđman, Slobodan Milošević, and Izetbegović.¹⁴⁵⁴ On 22 November 1995, the Security Council passed Resolution 1022 suspending sanctions against the FRY.¹⁴⁵⁵ Members of the delegation, as well as the Accused, signed a statement declaring that the leadership of RS had accepted the Dayton Agreement, and that RS would fully implement the Accord and all obligations deriving from it.¹⁴⁵⁶ However, in the following weeks, members of the RS delegation met with officials from the UN and the USA in an attempt to make adjustments to the Dayton Agreement, especially in regards to Sarajevo.¹⁴⁵⁷ Despite their efforts at the follow-up conference held in London on 8 and 9 December 1995, neither Koljević nor Buha were able to obtain any significant changes to the Dayton Agreement.¹⁴⁵⁸

437. On 14 December 1995 in Paris, the Dayton Agreement was signed by those who had initialled the plan on 21 November, formally establishing peace in BiH.¹⁴⁵⁹ On 21 December 1995, UNPROFOR was replaced by IFOR.¹⁴⁶⁰

¹⁴⁵¹ The RS delegation wanted the city of Sarajevo to remain undivided and to be run by a joint government composed of both Serbian and Muslim members. Further, the RS delegation proposed freedom of movement between Goražde and Sarajevo rather than a formal corridor, and wanted the Posavina corridor to be expanded to 20 kilometres. III. APPLICABLE LAW

A. REQUIREMENTS AND ELEMENTS OF THE CRIMES CHARGED

1. Article 3 of the Statute of the Tribunal

438. The Accused is charged with four counts of violations of the laws or customs of war pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute. Under Counts 6 and 11, the Accused is charged, respectively, with murder and the taking of hostages, both recognised by Common Article 3 of the 1949 Geneva Conventions (“Common Article 3”). Count 9 charges the Accused with acts of violence, the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among the civilian population. Finally, Count 10 charges the Accused with unlawful attacks on civilians.

439. The Chamber will first assess the general requirements for offences charged under Article 3 of the Statute before proceeding with its analysis of the elements in relation to each of these offences.

a. General requirements for violations of the laws or customs of war

440. Article 3 of the Statute provides that the Tribunal “shall have the power to prosecute persons violating the laws or customs of war”, and its sub-paragraphs identify a non-exhaustive list of offences that qualify as such violations. Accordingly, Article 3 is a general clause which confers jurisdiction over any serious violation of international humanitarian law not covered by Articles 2, 4, or 5 of the Statute, in addition to those expressly listed under Article 3.¹⁴⁶¹

441. For Article 3 to apply, two preliminary requirements need to be fulfilled, namely there must be an armed conflict and the crime must be closely related to that armed conflict (“nexus requirement”).¹⁴⁶² In relation to the requirement that there exist an armed conflict, the Appeals Chamber in the Tadić case articulated the test as follows: “[A]n armed conflict exists whenever there is a resort to armed force between States or protracted armed violence between governmental authorities and organized groups or between such groups within a State”.¹⁴⁶³ To determine the existence of an armed conflict, both the intensity of the conflict and the organisation of the parties to the conflict must be considered on a case-by-case basis.¹⁴⁶⁴ It is immaterial whether the armed conflict was international in nature or not.¹⁴⁶⁵

¹⁴⁶³ Tadić Jurisdiction Decision on Interlocutory Appeal, para. 70.

442. In relation to the nexus requirement, while there must be a connection between the alleged offences and the armed conflict, the Prosecution need not establish that the armed conflict was causal to the commission of the crime.¹⁴⁶⁶ However, it needs to be shown that the conflict played a substantial part in the perpetrator's ability to commit the crime, his decision to commit it, the manner in which it was committed, or the purpose for which it was committed.¹⁴⁶⁷ To find a nexus, it is sufficient that the alleged crimes be closely related to hostilities occurring in other parts of the territories controlled by the parties to the conflict.¹⁴⁶⁸

443. In addition to these two preliminary requirements, the Tribunal's jurisprudence has established the following general requirements for the application of Article 3 of the Statute, also known as the "Tadić Conditions":

- (a) the violation must constitute an infringement of a rule of international humanitarian law;
- (b) the rule must be customary in nature or, if conventional, the treaty must be unquestionably binding on the parties at the time of the alleged offence and not in conflict with or derogating from peremptory norms of international law;
- (c) the violation must be serious, namely it must constitute a breach of a rule protecting important values and the breach must involved grave consequences for the victim; and
- (d) the violation of the rule must entail, under customary or conventional law, the individual criminal responsibility of the person breaching the rule.¹⁴⁶⁹

444. Where a crime punishable under Article 3 of the Statute derives from protections found in Common Article 3, the victims of the alleged violation must have taken no active part in the hostilities at the time the crime was committed.¹⁴⁷⁰ Such victims include members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention, or any other cause.¹⁴⁷¹ In addition, the Chamber must be satisfied that “the perpetrator of a Common Article 3 crime knew or should have been aware that the victim was taking no active part in the hostilities when the crime was committed”.¹⁴⁷²

b. Murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war

445. Under Count 6 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war, punishable under Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁴⁷³ Murder is not explicitly listed in Article 3 but stems from the prohibition in Common Article 3(1)(a) of the Geneva Conventions, which provides that:

In the case of armed conflict not of an international character occurring in the territory of one of the High Contracting Parties, each Party to the conflict shall be bound to apply, as a minimum, the following provisions:

1. Persons taking no active part in the hostilities, including members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed ‘hors de combat’ by sickness, wounds, detention, or any other cause, shall in all circumstances be treated humanely [...]

To this end, the following acts are and shall remain prohibited at any time and in any place whatsoever with respect to the above-mentioned persons:

(a) violence to life and person, in particular murder of all kinds [...].¹⁴⁷⁴

i. Actus reus

446. The actus reus of murder is an act or omission resulting in the death of an individual.¹⁴⁷⁵ It is not necessary that proof of a dead body be produced if the victim’s death can be inferred circumstantially from other evidence which has been presented to the Chamber.¹⁴⁷⁶ With regard to the requisite causal nexus, the requirement that death must have occurred “as a result of” the ¹⁴⁷⁶ Kvočka et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 260. Relevant factors to be considered when assessing whether a victim died include but are not limited to proof of incidents of mistreatment directed against the victim; patterns of mistreatment and disappearances of other victims; the coincident or near-coincident time of death of other victims; the fact that the victims were present in an area where an armed attack was carried out; the time, location, and circumstances in which the victim was last seen; the behaviour of soldiers in the vicinity, as well as towards other civilians, at the relevant time; and the lack of contact by the victim with others whom he/she would have been expected to contact, such as his/her family. See Lukić and Lukić Trial Judgement, para. 904; Martić Trial Judgement, para. 59, fn. 112; Halilović Trial Judgement, para. 37; Krnojelac Trial Judgement, para. 327.

perpetrator's act or omission does not require this to be the sole cause for the victim's death; it is sufficient that the "perpetrator's conduct contributed substantially to the death of the person".¹⁴⁷⁷

ii. Mens rea

447. In order to satisfy the mens rea of murder, the Prosecution must prove that the act was committed, or the omission was made, with an intention to kill (animus necandi) or to wilfully cause serious injury or grievous bodily harm which the perpetrator should reasonably have known might lead to death.¹⁴⁷⁸

448. Thus, the mens rea of murder includes both direct intent (dolus directus), which is a state of mind in which the perpetrator desired the death of the individual to be the result of his act or omission, and indirect intent (dolus eventualis), which is knowledge on the part of the perpetrator that the death of a victim was a probable consequence of his act or omission.¹⁴⁷⁹

c. Unlawful attacks on civilians as a violation of the laws or customs of war

449. In Count 10 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with criminal responsibility for unlawful attacks on civilians as a violation of the laws or customs of war, punishable under Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁴⁸⁰ While Article 3 does not explicitly prohibit "unlawful attacks on civilians" as such, the Appeals Chamber has held that attacks on the civilian population or individual civilians meet the threshold requirements for war crimes and are therefore covered by Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁴⁸¹ In so ruling, Chambers of the Tribunal have relied on Article 51(2) of Additional Protocol I and Article 13(2) of Additional Protocol II, both of which read in relevant parts that the civilian population and individual civilians shall not be the object of attack.¹⁴⁸² Thus, the targeting of civilians has been deemed by this Tribunal to be absolutely prohibited at all times and, as such, cannot be justified by military necessity or by the actions of the opposing side.¹⁴⁸³

450. As for the elements of the offence of unlawful attacks on civilians, they consist of (i) acts of violence directed against the civilian population or individual civilians not taking a direct part in hostilities causing death or serious injury to body or health within the civilian population (actus reus) and (ii) the offender wilfully making the civilian population or individual civilians not taking a direct part in hostilities the object of those acts of violence (mens rea).¹⁴⁸⁴

451. Article 49 of Additional Protocol I defines “attacks” as “acts of violence against the adversary, whether in offence or defence”.¹⁴⁸⁵ Accordingly, the issue of who made use of force first is irrelevant.¹⁴⁸⁶

452. The meaning of civilian for the purposes of unlawful attacks on civilians stems from Article 50(1) of Additional Protocol I¹⁴⁸⁷ which provides that a “civilian is any person who does not belong to one of the categories of persons referred to in Article 4(A)(1), (2), (3) and (6) of the Third [Geneva] Convention¹⁴⁸⁸ and in Article 43 of [Additional] Protocol [I]”¹⁴⁸⁹.” This is a negative paras. 268, 270; Strugar Appeal Judgement, para. 275. The Tribunal’s jurisprudence here is consistent with that of the International Court of Justice which, at paragraph 78 of the ICJ Advisory Opinion on Nuclear Weapons, held that civilians must never be made the object of an attack.

¹⁴⁸⁴ Galić Trial Judgement, para. 56; Dragomir Milošević Trial Judgement, paras. 942, 951. See also Kordić and Čerkez Trial Judgement, para. 328; Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, paras. 47–68. This is consistent with the three fundamental principles of international humanitarian law, namely the principles of distinction, precaution, and protection. Under Article 48 of Additional Protocol I, the principle of distinction obliges the warring parties to distinguish at all times between the civilian population and combatants, and between civilian objects and military objectives. Article 57(2)(a)(ii) of Additional Protocol I requires that those planning an attack take all reasonable precautions in the choice of the means and methods of attack in order to avoid or minimise the incidental loss of civilian life, injury to civilians, and damage to civilian property. Finally, the principle of protection, as referred to in Article 51(1) of Additional Protocol I and Article 13(1) of Additional Protocol II, ensures that the civilian population and individual civilians enjoy general protections against dangers arising from military operations. See also Dragomir Milošević Trial Judgement, para. 941.

¹⁴⁸⁵ Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 47.

¹⁴⁸⁶ Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 47.

¹⁴⁸⁸ Article 4 of Geneva Convention III states, inter alia:

“A. Prisoners of war, in the sense of the present Convention, are persons belonging to one of the following categories, who have fallen into the power of the enemy: (1) Members of the armed forces of a Party to the conflict, as well as members of militias or volunteer corps forming part of such armed forces. (2) Members of other militias and members of other volunteer corps, including those of organized resistance movements, belonging to a Party to the conflict and operating in or outside their own territory, even if this territory is occupied, provided that such militias or volunteer corps, including such organized resistance movements, fulfil the following conditions: (a) that of being commanded by a person responsible for his subordinates; (b) that of having a fixed distinctive sign recognizable at a distance; (c) that of carrying arms openly; (d) that of conducting their operations in accordance with the laws and customs of war. (3) Members of regular armed forces who profess allegiance to a government or an authority not recognized by the Detaining Power. [...] (6) Inhabitants of a non-occupied territory, who on the approach of the definition of “civilian” as it includes anyone who is not a member of the armed forces or an organised military group belonging to a party to the conflict.¹⁴⁹⁰ Article 50(1) of Additional Protocol I also provides that in case of doubt whether a person is a civilian, that person shall be considered to be a civilian.¹⁴⁹¹ The protection from attack afforded to individual civilians by Article 51 of Additional Protocol I continues until such time as they take direct part in hostilities, that is until they engage in acts of war which, by their very nature and purpose, are likely to cause actual harm to the personnel or materiel of the enemy forces.¹⁴⁹² Thus, in order to establish that unlawful attacks against civilians have been committed, the Chamber has to find that the victims of these attacks were civilians and that they were not participating in the hostilities.¹⁴⁹³

453. The jurisprudence is also clear that the presence of individual combatants within the civilian population attacked does not necessarily change the fact that the ultimate character of the population remains a civilian one.¹⁴⁹⁴ In determining whether the presence of soldiers within a civilian population deprives the population of its civilian character, the number of soldiers, as well as whether they are on leave, must be examined.¹⁴⁹⁵

454. As stated above,¹⁴⁹⁶ for the attack to constitute an unlawful attack on civilians, the Prosecution has to show that it was directed against individual civilians or the civilian population. Whether this is the case can be determined from a number of factors, including the means and methods used in the course of the attack, the status and the number of victims, the distance between the victims and the source of fire, the ongoing combat activity at the time and location of the incident, the presence of military activities or facilities in the vicinity of the incident, the nature of the acts of violence committed, the indiscriminate nature of the weapons used, and the extent to enemy spontaneously take up arms to resist the invading forces, without having had time to form themselves into regular armed units, provided they carry arms openly and respect the laws and customs of war.”

¹⁴⁸⁹ Article 43 of Additional Protocol I provides as follows:

“1. The armed forces of a Party to a conflict consist of all organized armed forces, groups and units which are under a command responsible to that Party for the conduct of its subordinates, even if that Party is represented by a government or an authority not recognized by an adverse Party. Such armed forces shall be subject to an internal disciplinary system which, ‘inter alia’, shall enforce compliance with the rules of international law applicable in armed conflict. 2. Members of the armed forces of a Party to a conflict (other than medical personnel and chaplains covered by Article 33 of the Third Convention) are combatants, that is to say, they have the right to participate directly in hostilities. 3. Whenever a Party to a conflict incorporates a paramilitary or armed law enforcement agency into its armed forces it shall so notify the other Parties to the conflict.”

which the attacking force has complied or attempted to comply with the precautionary requirements of the law of war.¹⁴⁹⁷ In this respect, the jurisprudence is also clear that both indiscriminate attacks and disproportionate attacks may qualify as attacks directed against civilians or give rise to an inference that an attack was directed against civilians.¹⁴⁹⁸ This is to be determined on a case by case basis, in light of the available evidence.¹⁴⁹⁹

455. Finally, before criminal responsibility can be incurred for the unlawful attacks on the civilian population or individual civilians, the Chamber has to find that they have resulted in the death or serious injury to body or health of the victims in question.¹⁵⁰⁰

456. For unlawful attacks on civilians to be established, the Prosecution must show that the perpetrator wilfully made the civilian population or individual civilians the object of the acts of violence.¹⁵⁰¹ In other words, the perpetrator has to act consciously and with intent, willing the act and its consequences. This encompasses the concept of recklessness but not negligence.¹⁵⁰²

457. For the mens rea to be established, the Prosecution must also show that the perpetrator was aware, or should have been aware, of the civilian status of the persons attacked. In cases of doubt as to the status of those persons, the Prosecution must show that a reasonable person could not have believed that the individuals attacked were combatants.¹⁵⁰³ In addition, it is not required to establish the intent to attack particular civilians; rather, it is prohibited to make the civilian population as such, as well as individual civilians, the object of an attack.¹⁵⁰⁴

d. Terror as a violation of the laws or customs of war

458. In Count 9 of the Indictment, the Accused is alleged to be criminally responsible for acts of violence the primary purpose of which was to spread terror among the civilian population of Sarajevo as a violation of the laws or customs of war, punishable under Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁵⁰⁵ While Article 3 does not explicitly refer to the offence of terror as such, the Appeals Chamber has held that this offence meets the threshold requirements for war crimes and is therefore covered by Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁵⁰⁶ The prohibition of terror stems from Article 51(2) of Additional Protocol I and Article 13(2) of Additional Protocol II, both of which prohibit “acts or threats of violence the primary purpose of which is to spread terror among the civilian population” and both of which have been deemed by the Appeals Chamber to be part of customary international law.¹⁵⁰⁷

459. The following elements need to be established before the Chamber can enter a conviction for terror:

- (a) acts or threats of violence directed against the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities;
- (b) the perpetrator wilfully made the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities the object of those acts of violence;
- (c) the above was committed with the primary purpose of spreading terror among the civilian population.¹⁵⁰⁸

i. Actus reus

460. The actus reus of terror¹⁵⁰⁹ consists of acts or threats of violence directed against the civilian population or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities.¹⁵¹⁰ As such, it is similar to the actus reus of unlawful attacks on civilians.¹⁵¹¹ Accordingly, as is the case with unlawful attacks on civilians, the acts or threats of violence constituting terror need not be limited

¹⁵⁰⁹ The Galić Trial Chamber defined terror as “extreme fear”. The Galić Appeals Chamber later stated that terror “could” be defined in that way. See Galić Trial Judgement, para. 137; Galić Appeal Judgement, footnote 320.

¹⁵¹⁰ The Chamber notes that, with respect to Count 9 of the Indictment, the Prosecution alleges that the Accused is responsible only for acts of violence designed to spread terror and makes no mention of threats of violence. See Indictment, para. 82.

¹⁵¹¹ See para. 451. The Chamber also reiterates that Article 49(1) of Additional Protocol I defines “attacks” as “acts of violence” which in turn means that terror can encompass attacks or threats of attacks on civilian population. See also Galić Appeal Judgement, para. 102.

to direct attacks on civilians or threats thereof, but may include indiscriminate or disproportionate attacks.¹⁵¹² In addition, they do not include legitimate attacks against combatants.¹⁵¹³

461. The nature of the acts or threats of violence directed against the civilian population or individual civilians can vary.¹⁵¹⁴ The Appeals Chamber has held that causing death or serious injury to body or health represents only one of the possible modes of commission of terror and thus is not an element of the offence per se. What is required—for this offence to fall under the jurisdiction of the Tribunal—is that the victims suffer grave consequences resulting from the acts or threats of violence, which may include but are not limited to death and/or serious injury to body or health.¹⁵¹⁵ However, while “extensive trauma and psychological damage form part of the acts or threats of violence”, the actual infliction of terror on the civilian population is not a legal requirement of this offence.¹⁵¹⁶

462. The definition of civilians and civilian population has already been discussed by the Chamber in the preceding section and, therefore, shall not be repeated here.¹⁵¹⁷

ii. Mens rea

463. The mens rea of terror consists of both general intent and specific intent.¹⁵¹⁸ As in the case of unlawful attacks on civilians, to have the general intent the perpetrator must wilfully make the civilian population or individual civilians the object of acts or threats of violence.¹⁵¹⁹ The Chamber has already discussed the definition of “wilfully” in the context of unlawful attacks on civilians above, and shall therefore not repeat it here.¹⁵²⁰

464. The specific intent for this offence is the intent to spread terror among the civilian population.¹⁵²¹ The prohibition on terror also excludes terror which is not intended by the perpetrator but is merely an incidental effect of acts of warfare which have another primary object and are in all other aspects lawful.¹⁵²² Accordingly, the particular circumstances must be taken into account in determining whether the perpetrator intended to spread terror among the civilian population or individual civilians.¹⁵²³

465. The fact that the spreading of terror is referred to as the “primary purpose” does not mean that the infliction of terror is the only objective of the acts or threats of violence. Accordingly, the co-existence of other purposes behind the acts or threats of violence would not disprove the charge of terror, so long as the intent to spread terror was the “principal among the aims”.¹⁵²⁴

466. The intent to spread terror can be inferred from the circumstances surrounding the acts or threats of violence, including their nature, manner, timing, and duration.¹⁵²⁵ While, as stated above,¹⁵²⁶ the actual infliction of terror on the civilian population is not a legal requirement of this offence, the evidence of actual terrorisation may contribute to establishing other elements of the offence, including the specific intent to terrorise.¹⁵²⁷ The Appeals Chamber has also affirmed that the indiscriminate nature of an attack can be a factor in determining specific intent for terror.¹⁵²⁸

e. Taking of hostages as a violation of the laws or customs of war

467. Count 11 charges the Accused with the taking of hostages as a “violation of the laws or customs of war, as recognised by Common Article 3(1)(b), and punishable under Article 3 of the Statute”.¹⁵²⁹ The crime of hostage-taking is not explicitly mentioned as one of the offences listed under Article 3 but stems from the provision in Common Article 3(1)(b),¹⁵³⁰ which protects “persons taking no active part in the hostilities, including members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention, or any other cause” from a list of prohibited acts, including hostage-taking.¹⁵³¹ The plain text of Common Article 3 indicates that the prohibition on hostage-taking is both absolute and without exception.¹⁵³²

While Article 2(h) of the Statute prohibits taking civilians as hostages as a grave breach of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, Article 3 of the Statute prohibits hostage-taking of all persons not taking direct part in the hostilities pursuant to Common Article 3.

¹⁵³² Appeal Decision on Hostage-Taking, para. 16.

468. In addition to fulfilling the chapeau requirements for Article 3, the offence of hostage-taking requires the following elements. The actus reus of this offence is the detention of persons and the use of a threat concerning the detained persons, including a threat to kill, injure or continue to detain, in order to obtain a concession or gain an advantage.¹⁵³³ The Appeals Chamber has held that the prohibition on the taking of hostages pursuant to Common Article 3 applies to “all detained individuals, irrespective of whether their detention is explicitly sought in order to use them as hostages and irrespective of their prior status as combatants”.¹⁵³⁴ The mens rea required for hostage-taking is the intention to compel a third party to act or refrain from acting as a condition for the release of the detained persons.¹⁵³⁵ Because the essential feature of the offence of hostage-taking is the use of a threat to detainees to obtain a concession or gain an advantage,¹⁵³⁶ which may happen at any time during the detention, the requisite intent may be formed at the time of the detention or it may be formed at some later time, after the person has been detained.¹⁵³⁷ The erroneous belief that detained combatants are not entitled to Common Article 3 protections is not a defence should the elements of hostage-taking be met.¹⁵³⁸

2. Article 5 of the Statute of the Tribunal

469. The Accused is charged with five counts of crimes against humanity under Article 5 of the Statute. Count 3 charges him with persecution on political, racial, and religious grounds punishable under Article 5(h) of the Statute.¹⁵³⁹ In Counts 4 and 5, the Accused is charged, respectively, with extermination under Article 5(b) of the Statute and murder under Article 5(a).¹⁵⁴⁰ Finally, Counts 7

¹⁵³³ Blaškić Appeal Judgement, para. 639, in which the Appeals Chamber cites to Article 1 of the International Convention Against the Taking of Hostages, adopted by the UN General Assembly on 17 December 1979, which states:

“Any person who seizes or detains and threatens to kill, to injure or to continue to detain another person (hereinafter referred to as the “hostage”) in order to compel a third party, namely, a State, an international intergovernmental organization, a natural or juridical person, or group of persons, to do or abstain from doing any act as an explicit or implicit condition for the release of the hostage commits the offence of taking hostages (“hostage-taking”) within the meaning of this Convention.”

¹⁵³⁴ Appeal Decision on Hostage-Taking, para. 21. The Accused argues that unlawful detention is an element of the crime of hostage taking and that this element has not been proven because the “Bosnian Serbs were lawfully entitled to detain UN personnel as prisoners of war after they had become combatants by virtue of the NATO air strikes”. Defence Final Brief, para. 2738. The Chamber notes that the Appeals Chamber also recalled that under Common Article 3, the detention of a combatant during an armed conflict automatically renders him hors de combat and that such detention triggers the protections of Common Article 3. and 8 charge him with deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) punishable, respectively, under Articles 5(d) and 5(i) of the Statute.¹⁵⁴¹

470. As it did for Article 3 above, the Chamber will first assess the general requirements for offences charged under Article 5 of the Statute before proceeding with its analysis of the elements in relation to each of these offences.

a. General requirements for crimes against humanity

471. Article 5 of the Statute gives the Tribunal jurisdiction over various offences “when committed in armed conflict, whether international or internal in character, and directed against any civilian population”. Unlike the exigency in Article 3 that the offences be closely related to the armed conflict, the requirement under Article 5 that the offence be committed in armed conflict is a purely jurisdictional prerequisite which is satisfied by proof that there was an armed conflict at the time and place relevant to the indictment but does not mandate any material nexus between the acts of the accused and the armed conflict.¹⁵⁴²

472. Tribunal jurisprudence has identified the following five general requirements for crimes against humanity under Article 5 of the Statute:

- (i) There must be an attack;
- (ii) the attack must be directed against any civilian population;
- (iii) the attack must be widespread or systematic;
- (iv) the acts of the perpetrator must be part of the attack; and
- (v) the perpetrator¹⁵⁴³ must know that there is a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population and know that his acts constitute part of this attack.¹⁵⁴⁴

i. There must be an attack

473. The concepts of “attack” and “armed conflict” are not identical.¹⁵⁴⁵ An attack could precede, outlast, or continue during the armed conflict but need not be part of it.¹⁵⁴⁶ Furthermore, in the context of a crime against humanity, an attack is not limited to the use of armed force but encompasses any mistreatment of the civilian population.¹⁵⁴⁷

¹⁵⁴³ The use of the term “perpetrator” by the Chamber in this context includes the direct perpetrator as well as any indirect perpetrator or individual at whose behest the perpetrator is operating.

¹⁵⁴⁴ Kunarac et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 85.

ii. The attack must be directed against any civilian population

474. A population is considered to be a civilian population under Article 5 of the Statute if it is predominantly civilian in nature.¹⁵⁴⁸ The presence within a population of persons who do not come within the definition of civilians¹⁵⁴⁹ does not necessarily deprive the population of its civilian character.¹⁵⁵⁰ The Appeals Chamber has held that a determination as to whether the presence of soldiers within a civilian population deprives the population of its civilian character will depend on the number of soldiers, as well as whether they are on leave.¹⁵⁵¹

475. For the purpose of Article 5 of the Statute, an attack can be considered to have been directed against a civilian population if the civilian population was the “primary rather than an incidental target of the attack”.¹⁵⁵² In order to determine whether the attack was so directed, the Appeals Chamber has identified a non-exhaustive list of relevant factors, such as the means and method used during the course of the attack, the status of the victims, their number, the discriminatory nature of the attack, the nature of the crimes committed in the course of the attack, the resistance to the assailants at the time of the attack, and the extent to which the attacking force may be said to have complied or attempted to comply with the precautionary requirements of the laws of war.¹⁵⁵³ The term “population” does not mean that the entire population of the geographical entity in which the attack is occurring was subjected to the attack.¹⁵⁵⁴ However, the attack must have targeted more than “a limited and randomly selected number of individuals” within the population.¹⁵⁵⁵

¹⁵⁴⁵ Kunarac et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 86.

¹⁵⁴⁶ Kunarac et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 86. See also Šešelj Appeal Jurisdiction Decision, para. 13 (stating that “there is no requirement that an attack directed against a civilian population be related to the armed conflict”).

¹⁵⁴⁷ Kunarac et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 86.

¹⁵⁴⁸ Tadić Trial Judgement, para. 638 (cited in numerous trial judgements, including Blagojević and Jokić Trial Judgement, para. 544; Milutinović et al. Trial Judgement, Vol. I, para. 146).

¹⁵⁴⁹ Article 50(1) of Additional Protocol I provides that a civilian is any person who does not belong to one of the categories of persons referred to in Article 4(A)(1), (2), (3) and (6) of Geneva Convention III and in Article 43 of Additional Protocol I. For Article 4(A) of Geneva Convention III and Article 43 of Additional Protocol I, see fn. 1488, 1489.

¹⁵⁵⁵ Kunarac et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 90 (as recalled in Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 95).

476. Finally, as discussed above, while the civilian status of the victims, the number of civilians, and the proportion of civilians within a civilian population are factors relevant to the determination as to whether an attack is directed against a “civilian population”, there is no requirement that individual victims of crimes against humanity be civilians.¹⁵⁵⁶ It is therefore possible for a person hors de combat to be a victim of an act amounting to a crime against humanity.¹⁵⁵⁷

iii. The attack must be widespread or systematic

477. The attack must be widespread or, in the alternative, systematic.¹⁵⁵⁸ While the term “widespread” refers to the large-scale character of the attack and the number of persons targeted, the term “systematic” refers to the organised nature of the acts of violence and the improbability of their random occurrence.¹⁵⁵⁹ The assessment of what constitutes “widespread” or “systematic” is to be conducted on a case by case basis and may take into account the consequences of the attack upon the targeted population, the number of victims, the nature of the acts, the possible participation of officials or authorities, and any identifiable patterns of crimes.¹⁵⁶⁰ While the existence of a plan or policy may be used to demonstrate the existence of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population, it is not a legal element under Article 5 of the Statute.¹⁵⁶¹

iv. The acts of the perpetrators must be part of the attack

478. The acts of the perpetrator must be part of the attack on the civilian population, although they need not be committed in the midst of that attack.¹⁵⁶² An offence which is committed before or after the attack against the civilian population or away from it could still, if sufficiently connected, be part of that attack.¹⁵⁶³ Whether a given offence is sufficiently connected to the attack will depend on the factual circumstances of the case but, in any event, it should not be so far removed from the attack so as to constitute an isolated act void of any nexus to the attack.¹⁵⁶⁴

v. The perpetrator must know that there is a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population and know that his acts constitute part of this attack

479. The perpetrator must know that there is a widespread or systematic attack on the civilian population and know that his acts comprise part of that attack.¹⁵⁶⁵ For the purpose of Article 5, the perpetrator need not have the knowledge of the details of the attack.¹⁵⁶⁶ Furthermore, his motives are irrelevant.¹⁵⁶⁷ It is the attack, not his acts, which must be directed against the targeted population and the perpetrator need only know that his acts are a part of that attack.¹⁵⁶⁸

b. Murder as a crime against humanity

480. Under Count 5 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with murder, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 5(a) of the Statute.¹⁵⁶⁹

481. The elements of murder under Article 5 of the Statute are the same as those articulated for murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war under Article 3.¹⁵⁷⁰ The Chamber therefore refers here to its earlier discussion as to the elements of murder pursuant to Article 3 of the Statute.

c. Extermination as a crime against humanity

482. Under Count 4 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with extermination, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 5(b) of the Statute.¹⁵⁷¹

¹⁵⁷¹ Indictment, paras. 61–67.

i. Actus reus

483. The actus reus of extermination consists of “the act of killing on a large scale”.¹⁵⁷² This involves “any act, omission or combination thereof which contributes directly or indirectly to the killing of a large number of individuals”.¹⁵⁷³ In determining what is sufficient for a finding that a large number of individuals were killed, the Tribunal’s jurisprudence has consistently held that there is no minimum numerical threshold of victims that must be reached.¹⁵⁷⁴ Furthermore, it is not necessary that the victims of extermination be precisely identified by name, and it suffices to establish that killings occurred on a mass scale.¹⁵⁷⁵ An assessment of whether the element of “massiveness” has been met must be made on a case by case basis, taking into account all the relevant factors.¹⁵⁷⁶ Relevant factors include, for example, the time and place of the killings, the selection of the victims and the manner in which they were targeted, and whether the killings were aimed at the collective group rather than victims in their individual capacity.¹⁵⁷⁷ There is no requirement to establish that there was a “vast scheme of collective murder”.¹⁵⁷⁸

484. Trial Chambers have previously found that it was possible to establish extermination “on an accumulation of separate and unrelated incidents, meaning on an aggregated basis”.¹⁵⁷⁹ The Appeals Chamber recently stated in Tolimir that the actus reus of extermination “may be established through an aggregation of separate incidents”.¹⁵⁸⁰ The Chamber notes that, in this formulation, the possibility of accumulating “unrelated” incidents was removed. The Tolimir Appeals Chamber went on to state that for the purpose of aggregating separate incidents, it is not

The Appeals Chamber in Brđanin noted that the approach of the Trial Chamber to “consider all of the killings in the territory of the ARK as a whole rather than to distinguish them by location and incident” was not challenged in that case. The Appeals Chamber thus decided that it need not consider the issue but found that, with respect to specific killing incidents, the actus reus for extermination had been established and upheld the Trial Chamber’s assessment that the scale of killings met the threshold of massiveness for the purposes of extermination. Brđanin Appeal Judgement, paras. 471–472.

¹⁵⁸⁰ Tolimir Appeal Judgement, para. 147 (referring to Karemera Appeal Judgement, paras. 661–662).

required that the killing be on a vast scale in a concentrated location over a short period of time. However, even with respect to separate incidents, the Appeals Chamber made it clear that killing incidents which did not form part of the same murder operation could not be accumulated for the purposes of extermination.¹⁵⁸¹ In assessing whether specific killing incidents formed part of the same murder operation, the Tolimir Appeals Chamber also recalled that the ICTR Appeals Chamber stated that “as a general matter, the element of killing on a large scale cannot be satisfied by a collective consideration of distinct events committed in different prefectures, in different circumstances, by different perpetrators, and over an extended period of time”.¹⁵⁸²

ii. Mens rea

485. The mens rea of extermination requires the intention that a large number of individuals be killed.¹⁵⁸³

486. In line with jurisprudence on the actus reus, the mens rea of extermination similarly does not require the intent to kill a certain threshold number of victims.¹⁵⁸⁴ Additionally, there is no

¹⁵⁸¹ Tolimir Appeal Judgement, para. 147. The Tolimir Appeals Chamber found that the killing of three Bosnian Muslim leaders from Žepa in late August and September 1995 was not part of the same murder operation as the mass killings of the Bosnian Muslim men and boys of Srebrenica which began on 13 July 1995, such that these incidents could not be accumulated for the purposes of extermination. Tolimir Appeal Judgement, 135, 145–150. The Appeals Chamber noted the Trial Chamber’s findings of five shared factors between the killings, including the fact that the victims were all Bosnian Muslims, “the general identity of the perpetrators of the killings as members of the Bosnian Serb Forces”, and “the link to the overall goal of the Bosnian Serb Forces of ‘ridding the enclaves of its Bosnian Muslim population’”. Tolimir Appeal Judgement, para. 148. The Appeals Chamber noted, however, that the three leaders were killed “after the main attack against the civilian population” of the enclaves of Srebrenica and Žepa and that the incidents in question were charged under two different JCEs. Tolimir Appeal Judgement, para. 149. The Appeals Chamber concluded that the killings of the three leaders were killed in a “different context and [...] circumstances” from the Bosnian Muslim males of Srebrenica. Tolimir Appeal Judgement, paras. 149–150.

¹⁵⁸² Tolimir Appeal Judgement, para. 147; Karemera Appeal Judgement, para. 661 (citing Bagosora Appeal Judgement, para. 396). The Chamber notes that in Karemera, the Appeals Chamber found that it had not been demonstrated in the context of that case that it was impermissible to aggregate killings to establish the large-scale requirement for extermination. Karemera Appeal Judgement, paras. 661–662. For some of the killings, the Appeals Chamber considered that “the [...] facts as found by the Trial Chamber reflect that these incidents individually satisfy the element of killings on a large scale”. Karemera Appeal Judgement, para. 661. Karemera Appeal Judgement, para. 661, fns. 1796–1797; Karemera Trial Judgement, paras. 1199, 1294, 1450, 1612, 1649–1653, 1662. The Appeals Chamber noted that “[w]ith respect to the remaining massive killings throughout Rwanda by mid-July 1994, [...] the Trial Chamber connected sets of massive killings to specific acts of a member of the joint criminal enterprise or a particular group of assailants”. Karemera Appeal Judgement, para. 662 (citing Karemera Trial Judgement, paras. 1619–1648). In Bagosora, the Appeals Chamber found that the incidents in question “presented distinct features” and “could not be considered to constitute one and the same crime sharing the same actus reus”. Bagosora Appeal Judgement, para. 396. See also Bagosora Appeal Judgement, paras. 111, 125, 140, 155, 174, 236, 304, 332, 349, 396, fn. 922; Bagosora Trial Judgement, paras. 1064, 2140–2157.

requirement that the act of extermination be carried out with the intent to destroy the group or part of the group to which the victims belong,¹⁵⁸⁵ or pursuant to a pre-existing plan or policy.¹⁵⁸⁶

d. Deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) as crimes against humanity

487. Under Counts 7 and 8 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer) as crimes against humanity pursuant to Articles 5(d) and 5(i) of the Statute, respectively.¹⁵⁸⁷ The Accused is also charged with persecution, pursuant to Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of forcible transfer or deportation.¹⁵⁸⁸

i. Actus reus

488. The elements of deportation and forcible transfer are substantially similar.¹⁵⁸⁹ Deportation and forcible transfer are defined as: (i) the forced displacement of one or more persons by expulsion or other forms of coercion, (ii) from an area in which they are lawfully present, (iii) without grounds permitted under international law.¹⁵⁹⁰ There is an important distinction between the two crimes; for deportation, the displacement of persons must be across a de jure border between two states or, in certain circumstances, a de facto border,¹⁵⁹¹ and for forcible transfer, the removal may take place within national boundaries.¹⁵⁹²

489. To establish deportation and forcible transfer, there must be a forced displacement of persons carried out by expulsion or other forms of coercion.¹⁵⁹³ The term “forced” may include physical force, as well as the threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression, or abuse of power, or the act of taking advantage of a coercive environment.¹⁵⁹⁴ The forced character of the displacement is determined by the absence of genuine choice by the victim in his or her displacement.¹⁵⁹⁵ As such, while persons may consent to, or even request, their removal, any consent or request to be displaced must be given voluntarily and as a result of the individual's free will, assessed in light of the surrounding circumstances of the particular case.¹⁵⁹⁶

490. Furthermore, the involvement of a non-governmental organisation in facilitating displacements does not in and of itself render lawful an otherwise unlawful transfer.¹⁵⁹⁷ An agreement among military commanders, political leaders, or other representatives of the parties in a conflict cannot make a displacement lawful either; it is the consent of the individual that determines whether a displacement is voluntary.¹⁵⁹⁸

491. As stated above, an element of deportation and forcible transfer is that the victim must be "lawfully present" in the area from which the forced displacement takes place.¹⁵⁹⁹ In analysing this element of deportation and forcible transfer, the terms "lawfully present" should be given their common meaning and should not be equated to the legal concept of lawful residence.¹⁶⁰⁰

492. International law recognises certain grounds permitting forced removals, such as the evacuation of: (i) a civilian population for its security or for imperative military reasons; and (ii) prisoners of war out of combat zones and into internment facilities, subject to the conditions set out therein.¹⁶⁰¹ If an act of forced removal is carried out on such bases, that act cannot constitute the actus reus of deportation or forcible transfer.¹⁶⁰² Evacuation is an exceptional measure which is permitted to protect the civilian population. However, it is unlawful to use evacuation measures based on imperative military reasons as a pretext to remove the civilian population and seize control over a desired territory.¹⁶⁰³ Although forced removal for humanitarian reasons is justifiable in certain situations, it is not justified where the humanitarian crisis that caused the displacement is itself the result of the perpetrator's own unlawful activity.¹⁶⁰⁴

493. The mens rea required for deportation is the intent to forcibly displace the population across a de jure or de facto border.¹⁶⁰⁵ The mens rea for the crime of forcible transfer is the intent to forcibly displace the population within a national border.¹⁶⁰⁶ Deportation and forcible transfer do not require intent that the victims be displaced permanently, only that they be intentionally displaced.¹⁶⁰⁷

iii. Forcible transfer as "other inhumane acts" pursuant to Article 5(i)

494. The category of "other inhumane acts" contained in Article 5(i) of the Statute is a residual category of crimes against humanity which includes serious criminal acts that are not exhaustively enumerated in Article 5.¹⁶⁰⁸ The following elements are required for an act or omission to constitute an inhumane act under Article 5(i): (i) there was an act or omission of similar seriousness to the other enumerated acts under Article 5; (ii) the act or omission caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury or constituted a serious attack on human dignity; and (iii) the act or omission was committed with the intent to inflict serious physical or mental suffering or to commit a serious attack on the human dignity of the victim(s), or with the knowledge that this act or omission was likely to cause such suffering or a serious attack upon human dignity.¹⁶⁰⁹

495. The Appeals Chamber has confirmed that "specific "acts of forcible transfer may be sufficiently serious as to amount to other inhumane acts".¹⁶¹⁰ A Trial Chamber must therefore assess on a case-by-case basis if the specific instances of forcible transfer are sufficiently serious to amount to “other inhumane acts” pursuant to Article 5(i) of the Statute.¹⁶¹¹

e. Persecution as a crime against humanity

496. Under Count 3 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with persecution pursuant to the following underlying acts: (a) killings; (b) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse; (c) rape and other acts of sexual violence; (d) establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions; (e) terrorising and abuse;¹⁶¹² (f) forcible transfer or deportation; (g) unlawful detention; (h) forced labour at front lines and the use of human shields; (i) appropriation or plunder of property; (j) wanton destruction of private property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites; and (k) imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.¹⁶¹³ The Prosecution charges the acts listed in (b), (c), (d), and (e) above as forms of “cruel and/or inhumane treatment”.

i. General elements

497. Persecution is defined in the jurisprudence of the Tribunal as an act or omission (i) which discriminates in fact and denies or infringes upon a fundamental right laid down in international customary law or treaty law (actus reus); and (ii) is carried out deliberately with the intention to discriminate on political, social or religious grounds (mens rea).¹⁶¹⁴ Although the Statute refers to the listed grounds in the conjunctive, the presence of discriminatory intent on any one of these listed grounds is sufficient to fulfill the mens rea requirement for persecution.¹⁶¹⁵

498. Persecution may take different forms.¹⁶¹⁶ It may be committed through acts or omissions, some of which are listed in the Statute.¹⁶¹⁷ For persecution to be established, the act or omission must discriminate in fact.¹⁶¹⁸ An act, or omission, is discriminatory if the victim is targeted due to his membership in one of the protected groups.¹⁶¹⁹

499. For the alleged underlying acts or omissions to be considered serious enough to amount to persecution, they must be of equal gravity to the other crimes listed in Article 5 of the Statute, whether considered in isolation or in conjunction with other underlying acts.¹⁶²⁰ The Appeals Chamber held that in considering which underlying acts could amount to persecution, it must be demonstrated that “these acts must constitute a denial of or infringement upon a fundamental right laid down in international customary law”.¹⁶²¹

500. Persecution requires the specific intent to discriminate on political, racial or religious grounds and it is this discriminatory intent which distinguishes this offence from other offences listed in Article 5 of the Statute.¹⁶²² This discriminatory intent requires that the perpetrator acted with the intent to harm the victim because he belongs to a particular community or group.¹⁶²³ While the discriminatory intent may not be inferred solely from the “general discriminatory nature of an attack characterised as a crime against humanity”,¹⁶²⁴ it may be inferred from the context as long as the circumstances surrounding the commission of the alleged acts substantiate the existence

The Appeals Chamber has recently stated that it is not required that each underlying act be a violation of international law and that a “trial chamber does not need to establish the elements of the underlying acts, including the mens rea, even when the underlying act also constitutes a crime under international law”. Popović et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 738. However, the Chamber is of the view that while it may not be necessary to look to the strict elements of the underlying acts to establish whether persecution has been committed, when those elements have been satisfied, this assessment is instructive in determining whether the underlying acts also amount to other crimes under Article 5 of the Statute or are of equal gravity to the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute. For this purpose, the Chamber will set out how the underlying acts of persecution as charged in the Indictment have been defined.

¹⁶²¹ Blaškić Appeal Judgement, para. 139. Some Trial Chambers have stated that this gravity test is met when the act or omission amounts to a gross or blatant denial of fundamental human rights. Brđanin Trial Judgement, para. 995; Krnojelac Trial Judgement, para. 434; Kupreškić et al. Trial Judgement, paras. 620–621. of the discriminatory intent.¹⁶²⁵ The Appeals Chamber has held that circumstances which may be taken into account include the systematic nature of the crimes committed against a certain group and the general attitude of the alleged perpetrator as demonstrated by his behaviour.¹⁶²⁶ However, the existence of a discriminatory policy is not a requirement for proving persecution, although persecutory acts may form a part of a discriminatory policy or practice.¹⁶²⁷

ii. Underlying acts

(A) Killings

501. Under Count 3, the Accused is charged with persecution, pursuant to Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of killings.¹⁶²⁸

502. Murder is set out as a crime against humanity under Article 5(a). Accordingly killings can constitute persecution, provided the general elements for persecution are met.¹⁶²⁹ The Chamber has already found that the elements of murder under Article 5 of the Statute are the same as those articulated for murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war under Article 3 of the Statute.¹⁶³⁰ The Chamber thus refers to this earlier discussion.¹⁶³¹

(B) Cruel and/or inhumane treatment

503. The Accused is charged under Count 3 with persecution, pursuant to Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of “cruel and/or inhumane treatment”. The Prosecution charges the following forms of cruel and/or inhumane treatment in the Indictment: (i) “torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse during and after the takeovers in the Municipalities and in detention facilities in the Municipalities”; (ii) “rape and other acts of sexual violence during and after takeovers in the Municipalities and in detention facilities in the Municipalities”; (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities in the

Municipalities; and (iv) “terrorising and abuse of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica in Potočari and the beating of men and boys of Srebrenica prior to their execution”.¹⁶³²

504. The Appeals Chamber has held that the right to be free from “cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment” is recognised under customary international law and enshrined in international human rights instruments.¹⁶³³ Cruel and/or inhumane treatment is defined as an act or omission which causes serious mental or physical suffering or injury, or which constitutes a serious attack on human dignity.¹⁶³⁴ The act or omission must be committed with the intent to cause serious mental or physical suffering or injury or a serious attack on human dignity, or with the knowledge that serious mental or physical suffering or injury or the serious attack on human dignity was a probable consequence of the act or omission.¹⁶³⁵ The Chamber will now examine, in turn, the various forms of cruel or inhumane treatment listed by the Prosecution as underlying acts of persecution under Count 3 of the Indictment.

(1) Torture

505. Torture is expressly prohibited in Article 5(f) of the Statute and may constitute persecution if the general requirements of persecution are met.¹⁶³⁶ The Appeals Chamber has held that the definition of torture, as set out in the Convention Against Torture may be considered to reflect customary international law.¹⁶³⁷ Torture constitutes one of the most serious attacks upon a person’s mental or physical integrity.¹⁶³⁸ The seriousness of torture lies in the infliction of severe mental or Furthermore, it is settled that these offences and other inhumane acts under Article 5(i) of the Statute are also the same. See, e.g., Simić et al. Trial Judgement, para. 74. While in this present case cruel and/or inhumane treatment is charged as an underlying act of the offence of persecution, the Tribunal’s jurisprudence has established that the definition of this underlying act is same as cruel treatment and inhuman treatment. See, e.g., Gotovina et al. Trial Judgement, Vol. II, para. 1791; Tolimir Trial Judgement, para. 853; Popović et al. Trial Judgement, para. 975.

“[A]ny act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, is intentionally inflicted on a person for such purposes as obtaining from him or a third person information or a confession, punishing him for an act he or a third person has committed or is suspected of having committed, or intimidating or coercing him or a third person, or for any reason based on discrimination of any kind, when such pain or suffering is inflicted by or at the instigation of or with the consent or acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity. It does not include pain or suffering arising only from, inherent in or incidental to lawful sanctions”.

physical pain in order to attain a certain result or purpose.¹⁶³⁹ Accordingly, the level of harm an act or omission must cause in order to constitute torture must be “severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental”.¹⁶⁴⁰

506. Torture has been defined as follows:

i) The infliction, by act or omission, of severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental;

ii) the act or omission must be intentional; and

iii) the act or omission must be aimed at obtaining information or a confession, or at punishing, intimidating or coercing the victim or a third person, or at discriminating, on any ground, against the victim or third person.¹⁶⁴¹

507. There is no exhaustive enumeration of all the acts or omissions which may constitute torture.¹⁶⁴² The allegations of torture must be considered on a case by case basis, so as to determine whether, in light of the acts committed and their context, severe physical or mental pain or suffering was inflicted.¹⁶⁴³ Acts inflicting physical pain may amount to torture even when they do not cause pain of the type accompanying serious injury, as long as severe pain or suffering is inflicted.¹⁶⁴⁴

508. The perpetrator must intentionally act in such a way which, in the normal course of events, would cause severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, to the victim(s), in pursuance of one of the purposes prohibited by the definition of the crime of torture as stated above.¹⁶⁴⁵ This purpose need not be the “predominant or sole purpose” behind inflicting the severe pain or suffering.¹⁶⁴⁶ There is no requirement that the perpetrator acted in an official capacity as a state official or other person in authority.¹⁶⁴⁷

(2) Beatings and physical and psychological abuse

509. Beatings and physical abuse, although not expressly prohibited under Article 5 of the Statute, may constitute cruel and/or inhumane treatment as persecution if they reach the same level of gravity as the other acts prohibited in Article 5.¹⁶⁴⁸ Beatings constitute cruel or inhumane treatment if (i) the beatings caused serious mental or physical suffering or injury or constituted a serious attack on human dignity, and (ii) the beatings were performed deliberately.¹⁶⁴⁹ The Chamber considers that the same elements apply to physical abuse.

510. Psychological abuse, including harassment and humiliation, is also not explicitly listed under Article 5 of the Statute, but may constitute persecution if the abuse reaches the same level of gravity as the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute and the general requirements of persecution are met.¹⁶⁵⁰ For example subjecting victims to constant humiliation and degradation may amount to psychological abuse as an underlying act of persecution.¹⁶⁵¹

(3) Rape and other acts of sexual violence

511. Rape is listed as a crime against humanity under Article 5(g) of the Statute and may constitute an underlying act of persecution if the general requirements of persecution are met.¹⁶⁵² Rape involves sexual penetration, however slight: (a) of the vagina or anus of the victim by the penis of the perpetrator or any other object used by the perpetrator or (b) of the mouth of the victim by the penis of the perpetrator, where such sexual penetration occurs without the consent of the victim.¹⁶⁵³ Consent for this purpose must be given voluntarily, as a result of the victim's free will, and is assessed in the context of the surrounding circumstances.¹⁶⁵⁴ The perpetrator must intend to effect this penetration and have the knowledge that it occurs without the consent of the victim.¹⁶⁵⁵

512. Other acts of sexual violence encompass acts which may fall short of rape, including crimes such as sexual slavery or molestation, but are of equal gravity to other crimes under Article 5 of the Statute.¹⁶⁵⁶ These acts are often characterised as “sexual assault”.¹⁶⁵⁷ Serious abuses of a sexual nature inflicted upon the integrity of a person by means of coercion, threat of force, or intimidation in a way that is humiliating and degrading to the victim’s dignity may constitute other acts of sexual violence.¹⁶⁵⁸ These acts are not limited to the physical invasion of the human body and may include acts which do not involve penetration or even physical contact.¹⁶⁵⁹

513. Sexual violence is found when (i) the perpetrator commits an act of a sexual nature on another or requires the victim to perform such an act, (ii) that act infringes on the victim’s physical integrity or amounts to an outrage to the victim’s personal dignity, and (iii) the victim does not consent to the act.¹⁶⁶⁰ The perpetrator must intentionally commit the act, and be aware that the victim did not consent to the act.¹⁶⁶¹

(4) Establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions

514. While there is no offence of “inhumane living conditions” recognised as such in international humanitarian law, inhumane living conditions is a factual description of the environment in which detainees are held and the treatment they receive.¹⁶⁶² The establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions has been considered a sub-category of cruel and/or inhumane treatment, which may constitute persecution if the acts reach the same level of gravity as the other crimes listed under Article 5 of the Statute and if the general requirements for persecution are also met.¹⁶⁶³

(C) Forcible transfer and deportation

515. In Count 3 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with persecution, punishable under Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of forcible transfer or deportation.¹⁶⁶⁴

516. Deportation is set out as a crime against humanity under Article 5(d) of the Statute and it has been settled that acts of forcible transfer may be sufficiently serious as to amount to “other inhumane acts” set out in Article 5(i) of the Statute.¹⁶⁶⁵ Accordingly, they can both constitute persecution provided the general elements for persecution are met.¹⁶⁶⁶ The Chamber thus refers to its discussion on the elements of deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer).¹⁶⁶⁷

(D) Unlawful detention in detention facilities

517. The Accused is charged under Count 3 with persecution, pursuant to Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of “unlawful detention in detention facilities in the Municipalities”.¹⁶⁶⁸

518. The Chamber interprets the charge of unlawful detention in paragraph 60(g) of the Indictment as relating to the crime of imprisonment, which is a crime under Article 5(e) of the Statute.¹⁶⁶⁹

519. The term “imprisonment” pursuant to Article 5(e) of the Statute is understood as arbitrary imprisonment; that is the deprivation of liberty of an individual without the due process of law.¹⁶⁷⁰ The crime of imprisonment consists of the following elements: (i) an individual is deprived of his or her liberty; (ii) the deprivation of liberty is carried out arbitrarily, i.e., there is no legal basis for it; and (iii) the accused or perpetrator acted with the intent to deprive the individual arbitrarily of his or her liberty.¹⁶⁷¹

¹⁶⁶⁸ Indictment, paras. 60(g).

¹⁶⁷⁰ Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 116; Krajišnik Trial Judgement, para. 752.

¹⁶⁷¹ Krnjelac Trial Judgement, para. 115; Krajišnik Trial Judgement, para. 752.

520. If there is a legal basis for the deprivation of liberty, it must apply throughout the period of imprisonment, for the deprivation of liberty will become arbitrary as soon as the legal basis ceases to exist.¹⁶⁷²

521. Unlawful detention, carried out on discriminatory grounds, and for which the general elements of persecution are fulfilled, may constitute persecution.¹⁶⁷³

(E) Forced labour and the use of human shields

522. In Count 3 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with persecution, pursuant to Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of forced labour at frontlines and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields.¹⁶⁷⁴

523. While not all forms of forced labour are per se unlawful,¹⁶⁷⁵ acts of forced labour have, in certain circumstances, and when performed with discriminatory intent, been considered to constitute persecution as a crime against humanity.¹⁶⁷⁶ Furthermore, the use of prisoners of war and civilian detainees as human shields is prohibited under international law,¹⁶⁷⁷ and has been held to constitute inhuman or cruel treatment under Articles 2 and 3 of the Statute, respectively,¹⁶⁷⁸ and persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 5 of the Statute.¹⁶⁷⁹

524. The Prosecution needs to demonstrate that an individual was forced to perform labour and that the labour in question was prohibited under international law. The assessment as to whether the labour was performed involuntarily is done on a case-by-case basis and requires a consideration of both objective and subjective criteria.¹⁶⁸⁰ The following criteria may be examined in determining whether an individual was not in a position to make a real choice to undertake labour: (i) the substantially uncompensated aspect of the labour performed; (ii) the vulnerable position in which the detainees found themselves; (iii) the allegations that detainees who were unable or unwilling to work were either forced to do so or put in solitary confinement; (iv) claims of longer term consequences of the labour on the detainees, including on their health; and (v) the fact and the conditions of the detention.¹⁶⁸¹

See also Article 83 of Geneva Convention IV, which provides that the "Detaining Power shall not set up places of internment in areas particularly exposed to the dangers of war." Finally, Article 51(7) of Additional Protocol I provides: "The presence or movements of the civilian population or individual civilians shall not be used to render certain points or areas immune from military operations, in particular in attempts to shield military objectives from attacks or to shield, favour or impede military operations. The Parties to the conflict shall not direct the movement of the civilian population or individual civilians in order to attempt to shield military objectives from attacks or to shield military operations."

525. In relation to the second prong and whether the performed labour was prohibited under international law, the Chamber notes that not all forms of forced labour are per se unlawful during armed conflict.¹⁶⁸² In that regard, the Appeals Chamber has held that “[t]here is a principle which states that the work required of a person in the ordinary course of lawful detention is not regarded as forced or compulsory labour.”¹⁶⁸³ Furthermore, individuals deprived of liberty, if made to work, shall have the benefit of working conditions and safeguards similar to those enjoyed by the local civilian population.¹⁶⁸⁴ For instance, compelling individuals to dig trenches or to prepare other forms of military installations has been found to constitute cruel treatment and persecution punishable under Articles 3 and 5 of the Statute, respectively.¹⁶⁸⁵ The use of human shields, namely the placement or detention of persons in areas where they may be exposed to combat operations, for the purpose of rendering certain areas or activities immune from military operations or armed attack, is prohibited under international law.¹⁶⁸⁶ The prohibition of the use of human shields is not dependent on actual harm or attack.¹⁶⁸⁷

526. In relation to forced labour, the perpetrator must have intended the victim to perform prohibited work involuntarily.¹⁶⁸⁸ In the absence of direct evidence, intent can be inferred from the circumstances in which the labour was performed.¹⁶⁸⁹ In relation to the use of human shields, the perpetrator must intend to shield a military objective from attack or shield, favour, or impede military operations.¹⁶⁹⁰

(F) Plunder of property

527. In Count 3 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with persecution, a crime against humanity punishable under Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of appropriation or plunder of property.¹⁶⁹¹ The Chamber considers that the formulation in the Indictment of the charge as “appropriation or plunder of property” is properly construed as “plunder of property”, since the term “appropriation” has been used by the Appeals Chamber to define plunder.¹⁶⁹²

528. Acts of plunder, which have been deemed by the Tribunal to include pillage, infringe various norms of international humanitarian law.¹⁶⁹³ The prohibition against plunder is general in scope and extends both to acts of looting committed by individual soldiers for their private gain and to the organised seizure of property undertaken within the framework of a systematic economic exploitation of occupied territory.¹⁶⁹⁴

529. Plunder involves the intentional and unlawful appropriation of private or public property.¹⁶⁹⁵ Furthermore, pursuant to Articles 1 and 5 of the Statute, the offence must involve grave consequences for the victim.¹⁶⁹⁶ The assessment as to when a piece of property reaches the threshold level of a certain value so as to create grave consequences for the victim can only be made on a case by case basis in conjunction with the particular circumstances of the case.¹⁶⁹⁷ The threshold of seriousness can be met in circumstances where appropriation is vis-à-vis a large number of individuals even though there are no grave consequences for each individual as the overall effect on the civilian population and the multitude of offences committed would render the violation serious.¹⁶⁹⁸

(G) Wanton destruction of private and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites

530. In Count 3 of the Indictment, the Accused is charged with persecution, a crime against humanity punishable under Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of wanton destruction of private property, including homes and businesses, and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites.¹⁶⁹⁹

531. The destruction of various types of property is prohibited by a number of international instruments.¹⁷⁰⁰ In this context, the term of property is understood to cover both private and public property, including cultural and religious property.¹⁷⁰¹ While the destruction of property is listed as an offence under Articles 2 and 3 of the Statute in various forms,¹⁷⁰² Article 5 makes no mention of it. However, the Appeals Chamber has held that, depending on the nature and the extent of the destruction and if committed with discriminatory intent, the destruction of property can be of equal gravity to other crimes listed under Article 5 and as such may constitute persecution as a crime against humanity.¹⁷⁰³

532. For wanton destruction of property to be established, the Prosecution must prove the following elements: (i) the property was destroyed or damaged extensively; (ii) the destruction was not justified by military necessity; and (iii) the destruction was committed with the intent to destroy.¹⁷⁰⁴

¹⁶⁹⁸ Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 83.

¹⁶⁹⁹ Indictment, para. 60(j). See also Schedule D.

¹⁷⁰⁰ See Article 23(g) of the Hague Regulations (prohibiting “to destroy [...] the enemy’s property, unless such destruction [...] [is] imperatively demanded by the necessities of war”); Article 53 of Geneva Convention IV (providing: “Any destruction by the Occupying Power of real or personal property belonging individually or collectively to private persons, or to the State, or to other public authorities, or to social or cooperative organizations, is prohibited, except where such destruction is rendered absolutely necessary by military operations”); Article 147 of Geneva Convention IV (prohibiting the “extensive destruction [...], not justified by military necessity and carried out unlawfully and wantonly”); Article 52 of Additional Protocol I (protecting civilian objects); Article 53 of Additional Protocol I (protecting “historic monuments, works of art or places of worship which constitute the cultural or spiritual heritage of peoples”). See also the Nuremberg Principles, Principle 6 (referring to the “wanton destruction of cities, towns, or villages, or devastation not justified by military necessity” as a crime punishable under international law).

¹⁷⁰¹ See Blaškić Appeal Judgement, para. 145.

¹⁷⁰³ Blaškić Appeal Judgement, para. 146. See also Kordić and Čerkez Appeal Judgement, para. 108.

533. The property must not have been used for a military purpose at the time it suffered the destruction or extensive damage. It is for the Prosecution to establish that the destruction or extensive damage was not justified by military necessity.¹⁷⁰⁵ The Appeals Chamber has held that determining whether destruction occurred pursuant to military necessity involves a determination of what constitutes a military objective with reference to the definition in Article 52(2) of Additional Protocol I, according to which military objectives are “those objects which by their nature, location, purpose or use make an effective contribution to military action and whose total or partial destruction, capture or neutralisation, in the circumstances ruling at the time, offers a definite military advantage”.¹⁷⁰⁶

534. The act resulting in the destruction of property must have been committed with the intent, albeit direct or indirect, to destroy or damage extensively the property in question.¹⁷⁰⁷

(H) Imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures

535. Finally, in Count 3 of the Indictment, the Accused is also charged with persecution, a crime against humanity punishable under Article 5(h) of the Statute, through the underlying act of imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.¹⁷⁰⁸ According to the Indictment, the alleged restrictive and discriminatory measures include (i) the denial of freedom of movement; (ii) the removal from positions of authority in local government institutions and the police, and the general dismissal from employment; (iii) the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes; (iv) unlawful arrest and/or the denial of the right to judicial process; and/or (v) the denial of equal access to public services.¹⁷⁰⁹

¹⁷⁰⁸ Indictment, para. 60(k). In relation to this specific charged form of persecution, the Accused requested that the Chamber dismiss paragraph 60(k) of the Indictment on the grounds that the acts of persecution described therein were not sufficiently grave to qualify as a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 5(h) of the Statute. The Accused further argued that paragraph 60(k) was so devoid of facts that it is impossible to prepare a defence to the allegations therein. Preliminary Motion to dismiss Paragraph 60(k) for Lack of Jurisdiction, 10 March 2009, paras. 5–6. On 28 April 2009, the Chamber issued a decision on this motion in which it dismissed, inter alia, the motion on the grounds that it did not raise a genuine jurisdictional challenge, or valid challenge to the form of the Indictment. The Chamber concluded that the underlying offences enumerated in paragraph 60(k) of the Indictment, when considered together, are capable of satisfying the equal gravity test and thus of amounting to persecution in terms of Article 5 of the Statute. Decision on Motions Challenging Jurisdiction, paras. 37–44, 81.

¹⁷⁰⁹ Indictment, para. 60(k).

536. It has been held that these restrictive and discriminatory measures can constitute persecution when considered in isolation or in conjunction with other acts amounting to persecution under Article 5(h) of the Statute.¹⁷¹⁰

3. Genocide

537. The Accused is charged with two counts of genocide under Article 4 (3)(a) of the Statute. Count 1 charges him with genocide against a part of the Bosnian Muslim and/or Bosnian Croat national, ethnical, and/or religious groups as such in the following municipalities: Bratunac, Foča, Ključ, Prijedor, Sanski Most, Vlasenica, and Zvornik, through (a) the killing of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including leading members of these groups; (b) the causing of serious bodily or mental harm to thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including leading members of these groups, during their confinement in detention facilities where they were subjected to cruel or inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, and beatings; and (c) the detention of thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, including leading members of these groups, in detention facilities, under conditions of life calculated to bring about their physical destruction, namely through cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, inhumane living conditions, forced labour and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.¹⁷¹¹

538. Count 2 charges the Accused with genocide against a part of the Bosnian Muslim national, ethnical, and/or religious group as such in Srebrenica, through (a) the killing of over 7,000 Bosnian Muslim men and boys of the Srebrenica enclave through executions; and (b) the causing of serious bodily or mental harm to thousands of Bosnian Muslims of Srebrenica, including, but not limited to, the separation of men and boys from their families and the forcible removal of the women, young children and some elderly men from the enclave.¹⁷¹²

¹⁷¹⁰ Brđanin Appeal Judgement, paras. 295, 297 (holding that (a) the denial of freedom of movement; (b) the denial of employment; and (c) the denial of the right to judicial process fall under the jurisdiction of the Tribunal as underlying acts of persecution for the purposes of Article 5(h) of the Statute). The denial of the right to proper medical care was also alleged in Brđanin, however, the Appeals Chamber did not consider it as the accused in that case was not convicted of the crime of persecution with respect to this specific allegation. Brđanin Appeal Judgement, para. 294, fn. 595 (referring to Brđanin Trial Judgement, para. 1076). See also Brđanin Trial Judgement, para. 1049. In addition, the Trial Chambers in the Stanišić and Župljanin and Krajišnik cases found that the same five specific restrictive and discriminatory measures alleged in paragraph 60(k) of the Indictment constituted persecution when considered in conjunction with other acts amounting to persecution. Stanišić and Župljanin Trial Judgement, Vol. I, paras. 91–92; Krajišnik Trial Judgement, paras. 736, 738–741 (citing to judgements issued by the Nuremberg Tribunal and by tribunals applying the Allied Control Council Law No. 10 which found that various acts committed against Jews were crimes against humanity, including the denial of freedom of movement, the denial of the right to judicial process, the denial of access to public services, and the invasion of privacy through arbitrary searches of homes).

539. The crime of genocide punishable under Article 4 of the Statute adopts the definition and list of punishable acts enumerated in Article II of the Genocide Convention.¹⁷¹³ These provisions of the Genocide Convention have been considered to form part of customary international law and to constitute jus cogens.¹⁷¹⁴ Genocide as defined in the Statute was thus a punishable crime under customary international law at the time of the acts alleged in the Indictment.

540. Article 4(2) of the Statute provides that the following acts constitute genocide when “committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such”:

- (a) killing members of the group;
 - (b) causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group;
 - (c) deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part;
 - (d) imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group; and
 - (e) forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.¹⁷¹⁵
- a. The group

541. Article 4 of the Statute protects national, ethnical, racial or religious groups “as such” (“protected group”). The crime of genocide pertains to the destruction of a race, tribe, nation, or other group with a particular positive identity, not to the destruction of various people lacking a distinct identity.¹⁷¹⁶ The group targeted for genocide thus cannot be defined in terms of a negative characteristic, such as “non-Serbs” for instance.¹⁷¹⁷ The determination of the composition of the group is necessarily made on a case-by-case basis.¹⁷¹⁸ When more than one group is targeted, the elements of the crime of genocide must be considered in relation to each group separately.¹⁷¹⁹

b. Actus reus

i. Killing members of the group

542. The requirements for “killing” referred to under Article 4(2)(a) are equivalent to those for murder under Article 5.¹⁷²⁰ Murder as an act of genocide requires proof of a result.¹⁷²¹ The elements of murder have already been detailed in the sections on murder as a crime against humanity and as a violation of the laws or customs of war.¹⁷²² A numeric assessment of the number of people killed is not required for the actus reus of genocide to be established.¹⁷²³

ii. Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group

543. Article 4(2)(b) refers to an intentional act or omission which causes serious bodily or mental harm to members of the protected group and requires proof of a result.¹⁷²⁴ The harm must go “beyond temporary unhappiness, embarrassment or humiliation”, and result “in a grave and long-term disadvantage to a person’s ability to lead a normal and constructive life”.¹⁷²⁵ It need not be permanent and irreversible.¹⁷²⁶

544. The Chamber notes that according to the Seromba Appeals Chamber “[t]o support a conviction for genocide, the bodily or the mental harm inflicted on members of a group must be of such a serious nature as to threaten its destruction in whole or in part.”¹⁷²⁷ However, in its assessment of the facts, the Seromba Appeals Chamber did not examine whether the evidence demonstrated that the inflicted harm was so serious as to threaten the group's destruction.¹⁷²⁸ Similarly, Trial Chambers of the Tribunal and the ICTR which recite the language in question have only examined the seriousness of acts without referring to any showing that the harm was such as to threaten the group's destruction.¹⁷²⁹ Moreover, the majority of trial judgements rendered prior to and after the Seromba Appeal Judgement consistently reiterate the language of Article 4(2)(b) of the Statute without requiring a showing that the harm was such as to threaten the group's destruction.¹⁷³⁰ Furthermore, in the instant case, the Appeals Chamber in the Rule 98 bis Appeal Judgement simply recalled Article 4(2)(b) without indicating the existence of an additional requirement.¹⁷³¹ In light of the foregoing, the Chamber is therefore of the view that there is no additional requirement that the serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group be of such serious nature as to threaten the destruction of the group in whole or in part. The degree of threat to the group's destruction may, however, be considered as a measure of the seriousness of the bodily or mental harm.

545. Determination of what constitutes serious harm depends on the circumstances of each case.¹⁷³² Examples of serious bodily or mental harm as an act of genocide include torture, inhumane or degrading treatment, sexual violence including rape, interrogations combined with beatings, threats of death, and harm that damages health or causes disfigurement or serious injury to the external or internal organs of members of the group.¹⁷³³ While forcible transfer does not of itself constitute an act of genocide,¹⁷³⁴ depending on the circumstances of a given case, it may cause such serious bodily or mental harm as to constitute an act of genocide under Article 4(2)(b).¹⁷³⁵

iii. Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part

546. The acts punishable under Article 4(2)(c) are construed as “the methods of destruction by which the perpetrator does not immediately kill the members of the group, but which, ultimately, seek their physical destruction”.¹⁷³⁶ Contrary to the acts prohibited by Articles 4(2)(a) and 4(2)(b), this provision does not require proof of that a result was attained; as such, it does not require proof that the conditions actually led to death or serious bodily or mental harm of members of the protected group.¹⁷³⁷ When such “a result is achieved, the proper charge will be paragraphs (a) or (b)” of Article 4.¹⁷³⁸

547. Examples of such acts include, but are not limited to, subjecting the group to a subsistence diet; failing to provide adequate medical care; systematically expelling members of the group from their homes; and generally creating circumstances that would lead to a slow death such as the lack of proper food, water, shelter, clothing, sanitation, or subjecting members of the group to excessive work or physical exertion.¹⁷³⁹ Yet, Article 4(2)(c) applies only to acts that are deliberately calculated to cause a group's physical destruction and, as such, these acts must be clearly distinguished from those acts designed to bring about the dissolution of the group.¹⁷⁴⁰

548. In the absence of direct evidence of whether the conditions of life imposed on the group were deliberately calculated to bring about its physical destruction, a chamber can be guided by the objective probability of these conditions leading to the physical destruction of the group in part.¹⁷⁴¹ The actual nature of the conditions of life, the length of time that members of the group were subjected to them, and the characteristics of the group such as its vulnerability are illustrative factors to be considered in evaluating the criterion of probability.¹⁷⁴²

c. Mens rea

549. The mens rea required for the crime of genocide—"intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group" as defined in Article 4 of Statute—has been referred to variously as, for instance, special intent, specific intent, dolus specialis, particular intent and genocidal intent.¹⁷⁴³ Genocide requires not only proof of intent to commit the alleged acts of genocide, but also proof of the specific intent to destroy the protected group, in whole or in part.¹⁷⁴⁴ Therefore, when genocide is charged through the framework of JCE I, the accused needs to share genocidal intent with other members of the JCE.¹⁷⁴⁵

550. In assessing evidence of genocidal intent, a Chamber should consider whether "all of the evidence, taken together, demonstrates a genocidal mental state", instead of considering separately whether an accused intended to destroy a protected group through each of the relevant acts of genocide.¹⁷⁴⁶ Where direct evidence of genocidal intent is absent, the intent may still be inferred

The Appeals Chamber stated that it was not persuaded that the Chamber's conclusions on genocidal intent were restricted to the physical perpetrators of the acts or that it failed to assess Karadžić's genocidal intent and that of other alleged JCE members. It went on to conclude that the Chamber's focus on physical perpetrators in relation to the allegations of genocide in Srebrenica under Count 2 did not demonstrate that the Chamber "necessarily considered that liability under JCE I requires a showing of the physical perpetrators' genocidal intent or that, in assessing the evidence of Count 1 of the Indictment, [it] failed to consider the genocidal intent of Karadžić and the other alleged JCE members". from all the facts and circumstances.¹⁷⁴⁷ Factors relevant to this analysis may include, but are not limited to, the general context, the scale of atrocities, the systematic targeting of victims on account of their membership in a particular group, the repetition of destructive and discriminatory acts, or the existence of a plan or policy.¹⁷⁴⁸ Display of intent through public speeches¹⁷⁴⁹ or in meetings¹⁷⁵⁰ may also support an inference as to the requisite specific intent.

i. Intent to destroy the group “as such”

551. The specific intent to destroy the group “as such” makes genocide an exceptionally grave crime and distinguishes it from other serious crimes, such as persecutions as a crime against humanity.¹⁷⁵¹ The term “as such” has great significance as it shows that the crime of genocide requires intent to destroy a collection of people because of their particular group identity based on nationality, race, ethnicity, or religion.¹⁷⁵²

552. For example, the Krstić Trial Chamber found that the destruction of a sizeable number of men would inevitably result in the physical disappearance of the Bosnian Muslim population at Srebrenica.¹⁷⁵³ The Appeals Chamber in that case upheld this finding, stating that “[t]he physical destruction of the men therefore had severe procreative implications for the Srebrenica Muslim community, potentially consigning the community to extinction”.¹⁷⁵⁴ The Krstić Appeals Chamber further held that “[t]he finding that some members of the VRS Main Staff devised the killing of the male prisoners with full knowledge of the detrimental consequences it would have for the physical survival of the Bosnian Muslim community in Srebrenica further supports the Trial Chamber’s conclusion that the instigators of that operation had the requisite genocidal intent”.¹⁷⁵⁵

553. The Genocide Convention and customary international law prohibit only the physical and biological destruction of a group, not attacks on cultural or religious property or symbols of the group.¹⁷⁵⁶ However, while such attacks may not constitute underlying acts of genocide, they may be considered evidence of intent to physically destroy the group.¹⁷⁵⁷ Forcible transfer alone would not suffice to demonstrate the intent to “destroy” a group but it is a relevant consideration as part of the Chamber’s overall factual assessment.¹⁷⁵⁸

554. Specific intent is distinguished from personal motive; however, the existence of a personal motive does not exclude the possession of genocidal intent.¹⁷⁵⁹

ii. “In whole or in part”

555. It is well established that where a conviction for genocide relies on the intent to destroy a group “in part”, such part must be a substantial part of the whole protected group.¹⁷⁶⁰ The targeted portion must be a “significant enough [portion] to have an impact on the group as a whole”.¹⁷⁶¹ The Krstić Appeal Chamber stated that in determining substantiality, the following considerations can be made:

The numeric size of the targeted part of the group is the necessary and important starting point, though not in all cases the ending point of the inquiry. The number of individuals targeted should be evaluated not only in absolute terms, but also in relation to the overall size of the entire group. In addition to the numeric size of the targeted portion, its prominence within the group can be a useful consideration. If a specific part of the group is emblematic of the overall group, or is essential to its survival, that may support a finding that the part qualifies as substantial within the meaning of Article 4.¹⁷⁶²

Furthermore, the area of the perpetrators' activity, control, and the possible extent of their reach should be considered.¹⁷⁶³ The applicability of these factors and their relative weight will vary depending on the circumstances of a particular case.¹⁷⁶⁴

B. LEGAL STANDARDS FOR INDIVIDUAL CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY

1. Liability under Article 7(1) of the Statute

556. The Indictment charges the Accused with individual criminal responsibility under Article 7(1) for having, inter alia, committed crimes referred to in Articles 3, 4, and 5 of the Statute.¹⁷⁶⁵ The Prosecution does not allege that the Accused physically committed any of the crimes charged personally.¹⁷⁶⁶ Rather, he is alleged to have participated in four JCEs.¹⁷⁶⁷

557. The Accused is alleged to have shared the intent for the commission of each crime encompassed within each of the JCEs,¹⁷⁶⁸ and to have made significant contributions to each of them.¹⁷⁶⁹ Alternatively, the Prosecution asserts that if the implementation of the objective of the Overarching JCE only included the commission of forcible transfer and deportation, the Accused was aware of the risk that genocide and persecution, as well as murder and/or extermination, were possible consequences of the implementation of that objective,¹⁷⁷⁰ and the Accused willingly took those risks.¹⁷⁷¹

558. The Prosecution further alleges that through the acts and omissions outlined in the Indictment,¹⁷⁷² the Accused is also responsible for planning,¹⁷⁷³ instigating,¹⁷⁷⁴ and/or ordering the crimes charged in the Indictment.¹⁷⁷⁵ According to the Prosecution, the Accused either "directly intended or was aware of the substantial likelihood that the execution of his plans and orders, and/or the carrying out of the the acts and conduct which he instigated, would involve or result in the crimes charged” in the Indictment.¹⁷⁷⁶

559. According to the Prosecution, the Accused’s acts and omissions also render him responsible for aiding and abetting the crimes charged in the Indictment.¹⁷⁷⁷ In this regard, the Prosecution submits that the Accused was aware of the probability that the crimes charged would be committed and that his acts or omissions would contribute to their commission.¹⁷⁷⁸

a. Commission through participation in a JCE

560. When two or more persons act together to further a common criminal purpose, the jurisprudence of the Tribunal recognises three forms of criminal responsibility which may accrue to all members of the group.¹⁷⁷⁹ The first, “basic” category of JCE encompasses situations where all participants, acting pursuant to a common purpose, possess the same criminal intention to effectuate that purpose.¹⁷⁸⁰ The second, “systemic” form of JCE pertains to organised systems of ill-treatment.¹⁷⁸¹ The third, “extended” type of JCE involves the liability of a JCE participant for a crime which falls outside the common purpose or design, but which is nevertheless a natural and foreseeable consequence of effectuating that common purpose.¹⁷⁸²

561. In order to find an accused criminally responsible on the basis of his participation in any of the three types of JCE, the following elements must be established: (i) the existence of a plurality of persons who act pursuant to a common purpose;¹⁷⁸³ (ii) the existence of a common plan, design, or purpose which amounts to or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute; and (iii) the participation of the accused in furthering the common design or purpose.¹⁷⁸⁴ The Chamber will discuss each of these requirements in more detail below.

¹⁷⁸² Tadić Appeal Judgement, para. 204 (as confirmed in Kvočka et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 83; Vasiljević Appeal Judgement, para. 99).

¹⁷⁸³ Action by a “plurality” of persons denotes the concerted action of two or more persons. See Tadić Appeal Judgement, paras. 195–226.

¹⁷⁸⁴ Tadić Appeal Judgement, para. 227 (as confirmed in Brđanin Appeal Judgement, paras. 364, 430; Stakić Appeal Judgement, para. 64; Kvočka et al. Appeal Judgement, para. 81; Vasiljević Appeal Judgement, para. 100; Krnojelac Appeal Judgement, para. 31).

562. The Appeals Chamber has held that the plurality of persons need not be organised in a military, political, or administrative structure,¹⁷⁸⁵ and it may be sufficient to identify the plurality as a category or a group rather than as individuals by name.¹⁷⁸⁶ However, the criterion used to identify the group must be sufficiently specific to prevent vagueness and ambiguity.¹⁷⁸⁷

563. All three forms of JCE require proof of the existence of a “common plan, design or purpose which amounts to or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute”.¹⁷⁸⁸ The existence of a common plan or purpose can be inferred from the fact that the plurality of persons acts in unison,¹⁷⁸⁹ and the plan may materialise extemporaneously rather than being previously arranged or formulated.¹⁷⁹⁰ Additionally, the Chamber must “specify the common criminal purpose in terms of both the criminal goal intended and its scope (for example, the temporal and geographic limits of this goal, and the general identities of the intended victims)”.¹⁷⁹¹ A JCE can come to embrace expanded criminal means, as long as the evidence shows that the JCE members agreed on such an expansion of means.¹⁷⁹² Such an expanded agreement need not be explicit, may also materialise extemporaneously, and can be inferred from circumstantial evidence.¹⁷⁹³

564. An accused must have participated in furthering the common purpose at the core of the JCE by assisting in or contributing to the execution of the common plan or purpose, but need not have performed any part of the actus reus of the crime charged.¹⁷⁹⁴ The accused’s contribution need not be sine qua non, without which the crime would not have been committed, nor must it necessarily be a substantial contribution to the JCE.¹⁷⁹⁵ However, the accused must “contribut[e] to the common purpose in a way that lends a significant contribution to the crimes”.¹⁷⁹⁶

565. The question of whether the accused significantly contributed to a JCE is a question of fact to be determined on a case by case basis.¹⁷⁹⁷ In determining whether an accused's conduct constituted a significant contribution to a JCE, the Chamber may consider the size of the criminal enterprise, the function(s) performed by the accused, and the accused's position as well as other relevant factors.¹⁷⁹⁸

566. A significant contribution to a JCE may consist of an act or, where there is a legal duty to act, an omission.¹⁷⁹⁹ While the Accused accepts that, in theory, an omission may constitute a significant contribution, by reference to the Mrkšić and Šljivančanin Appeal Judgement, he contends that “the Appeals Chamber has held that the actus reus for ‘commission by omission’ is a higher standard than for aiding and abetting by omission, namely, the accused must exert ‘concrete influence’ on the perpetration of the crime”.¹⁸⁰⁰ However, the Chamber observes that the relevant passages of both the Mrkšić and Šljivančanin Appeal Judgement as well as the Orić Appeal Judgement—to which the Mrkšić and Šljivančanin Appeals Chamber cited—primarily concern other forms of liability, namely aiding and abetting under Article 7(1) and superior liability under Article 7(3) of the Statute.¹⁸⁰¹ The Chamber considers that the relevant enquiry—which should be done on a case by case basis¹⁸⁰²—is whether an accused was obligated by law to act, and if so, whether such an omission significantly contributed to the JCE.¹⁸⁰³

567. In order to hold an accused criminally responsible where the person who carries out the actus reus of the crime charged is not a member of the JCE,¹⁸⁰⁴ there must be a link between that accused and such conduct.¹⁸⁰⁵ This link, which must be assessed on a case-by-case basis, is established if criminal responsibility for the other person's conduct can be imputed to one of the JCE members who, when using the other person, acted in accordance with the common plan.¹⁸⁰⁶ In such instances, “the crime in question”—meaning the crime with which the accused is charged—must also “for[m] part of the common criminal purpose”.¹⁸⁰⁷ This, in turn, may be inferred from the close co-operation of the accused—or any other JCE member—with the non-member in order to further the common criminal purpose.¹⁸⁰⁸ It is not necessary, however, to establish the existence of an additional understanding or agreement between the accused and the non-member to commit that particular crime.¹⁸⁰⁹

568. The mental elements differ substantially according to the relevant category of JCE.¹⁸¹⁰ Since only the first and third categories are charged in the Indictment, the Chamber will limit its discussion to the jurisprudence relevant to these forms of JCE.

569. With regard to the basic category of JCE, the accused must both share the intent to effect the common purpose of the JCE as well as intend the commission of the crime with which he is charged.¹⁸¹¹ Where an accused is charged with a crime requiring specific intent which allegedly formed part of the JCE’s common purpose, he and the other JCE members must share the requisite specific intent for that crime.¹⁸¹²

570. For a crime that falls outside the common purpose of the JCE (“extended crime”), an accused may nevertheless incur responsibility pursuant to the third category of JCE liability even when he does not share the intent to commit the extended crime if (i) he intended to participate in and contribute to the furtherance of the common criminal purpose, (ii) it was foreseeable to him that the extended crime might be perpetrated in carrying out the common purpose, and (iii) the accused willingly took the risk that the extended crime might occur by participating in the common purpose.¹⁸¹³ This is true even where the extended crime is a specific intent crime such as genocide or persecution.¹⁸¹⁴ Where that crime is genocide, the prosecution will be required to establish that it was reasonably foreseeable to the accused that an act specified in Article 4(2) would be committed and that it would be committed with genocidal intent.¹⁸¹⁵ Moreover, the possibility of the crime being committed must be sufficiently substantial as to be reasonably foreseeable, based on the information available to the accused at the time,¹⁸¹⁶ but an accused need not understand that the extended crime “would probably be committed”.¹⁸¹⁷ In other words, the accused must have sufficient knowledge that the extended crime was a natural and foreseeable consequence of the common criminal purpose.¹⁸¹⁸

b. Planning

571. To be found criminally responsible for planning under the Statute, the accused—either acting alone or with another—must have designed criminal conduct that is later carried out and which constitutes one or more crimes enumerated in the Statute.¹⁸¹⁹ The planning must have been a factor substantially contributing to the criminal conduct,¹⁸²⁰ but the Prosecution need not establish that the crime would not have been committed but for the accused’s plan.¹⁸²¹ The accused must intend to plan the commission of a crime or, at a minimum, must be aware of the substantial likelihood that a crime will be committed in the execution of the acts or omissions planned.¹⁸²²

c. Instigating

express or implied,¹⁸²⁵ it need not be direct or public,¹⁸²⁶ and it may consist of either an act or an omission.¹⁸²⁷ The accused's prompting must have been a factor "substantially contributing to the conduct of another person committing the crime", but the Prosecution need not prove that the crime would not have been committed but for such prompting,¹⁸²⁸ or that the accused had effective control or any other sort of authority over the perpetrator.¹⁸²⁹ The accused must intend to instigate another person to commit a crime, or at a minimum, he must be aware of the substantial likelihood that a crime will be committed in the execution of the act or omission instigated.¹⁸³⁰

d. Ordering

573. To be held criminally responsible for ordering the commission of a crime, an accused must have instructed another person to engage in an act or an omission,¹⁸³¹ and such instruction must have resulted in the commission of a crime.¹⁸³² The accused must have held a position of authority over the other person, but it need not be formal and may even be temporary.¹⁸³³ However, there must be "proof of some position of authority on the part of the accused that would compel another to commit a crime in following the accused's order".¹⁸³⁴ The order need not be in written or any particular form,¹⁸³⁵ nor must it be transmitted directly to the physical perpetrator.¹⁸³⁶ As with planning and instigating, it need not be shown that the crime would not have been perpetrated but for the accused's order,¹⁸³⁷ but the order must have had "a direct and substantial effect on the commission of the illegal act".¹⁸³⁸ The accused must intend to order a crime, or must be aware of the substantial likelihood that a crime would be committed in the execution of the act or omission ordered.¹⁸³⁹

e. Aiding and Abetting

574. Aiding and abetting is a form of liability in which the accused contributes to the perpetration of a crime that is committed by another person.¹⁸⁴⁰ The Prosecution must establish that the crime for which it seeks to make the accused responsible in fact occurred.¹⁸⁴¹

575. The physical element of aiding and abetting consists of acts or omissions "specifically directed to assist, encourage or lend moral support to the perpetration of a certain specific crime [...]".¹⁸⁴² This support must have a substantial effect upon the perpetration of the crime.¹⁸⁴³ Liability for "aiding and abetting by omission proper", which must be distinguished from aiding and abetting by tacit approval and encouragement,¹⁸⁴⁴ may only attach where an accused had both a legal duty to act and the means to fulfil this duty.¹⁸⁴⁵

576. Whether an act or omission had a substantial effect on the commission of a crime is a fact-based inquiry.¹⁸⁴⁶ The aider and abettor's conduct may occur in a location remote from the scene of the crime.¹⁸⁴⁷ It is unnecessary to establish that the crime would not have been committed without the contribution of the aider and abettor.¹⁸⁴⁸ Nor must the Prosecution prove the existence of a plan or agreement between the aider and abettor and the perpetrator; the latter may not even know of the aider and abettor's contribution.¹⁸⁴⁹ Finally, specific direction is not an element of aiding and abetting responsibility under customary international law.¹⁸⁵⁰ This means that there is no requirement of a showing that the acts of the Accused were specifically directed to assist, encourage, or lend moral support to the commission of the crimes.¹⁸⁵¹

577. The requisite mental element for aiding and abetting is "knowledge that the acts performed by the aider and abettor assist the commission of a specific crime".¹⁸⁵² The aider and abettor must be aware of the essential elements of the crime which was ultimately committed,¹⁸⁵³ including the perpetrators' state of mind and any relevant specific intent,¹⁸⁵⁴ although he need not share that specific intent.¹⁸⁵⁵ Moreover, an accused may be convicted for having aided and abetted a crime, including one which requires specific intent, even where the specific individuals who committed the crime have not been tried or identified.¹⁸⁵⁶ If an accused is aware that one or more crimes aiding and abetting may be perpetrated through an omission). would probably be committed, and one of these crimes is in fact committed, he is deemed to have intended the facilitation of the commission of that crime and is guilty as an aider and abettor.¹⁸⁵⁷

578. The Accused is also charged with individual criminal responsibility under Article 7(3) of the Statute on the basis that as the highest civilian and military authority in the RS, he was the superior of, and had effective control over, the Bosnian Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs who participated in the crimes alleged in the Indictment.¹⁸⁵⁸ It is alleged that the Accused knew or had reason to know that the alleged crimes were about to be committed or had been committed and that he failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent and/or punish these alleged crimes.¹⁸⁵⁹

579. Under Article 7(3) of the Statute, a superior may incur criminal responsibility with respect to a crime for which his subordinate is criminally responsible if the following three elements are established: (i) there was a superior-subordinate relationship between the accused and the perpetrator of the underlying crime; (ii) the superior knew or had reason to know that the criminal act was about to be or had been committed; and (iii) the superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the criminal act or punish the perpetrator thereof.¹⁸⁶⁰ A superior can bear responsibility under Article 7(3) with respect to the criminal conduct of his subordinates under “all other modes of participation under Article 7(1)”, namely the “planning, instigating, ordering, committing or otherwise aiding and abetting a crime” by his subordinates.¹⁸⁶¹

a. Superior-subordinate relationship

580. In order to establish that a superior-subordinate relationship exists between the accused and the perpetrator of an underlying crime, it must be proven that he exercised “effective control” over the perpetrator.¹⁸⁶² A superior is someone who possesses “the power or authority in either a de jure or a de facto form to prevent a subordinate’s crime or to punish the perpetrators of the crime”. In assessing whether there is a superior-subordinate relationship it does not matter whether the accused was a civilian or military superior.¹⁸⁶³ An evaluation of effective control is more a question of fact than of law and requires consideration of factors that show “that the accused had the power to prevent, punish, or initiate measures leading to proceedings against the alleged perpetrators where appropriate.”¹⁸⁶⁴

581. Factors to be considered in assessing whether a superior exercised effective control include, inter alia, (i) his capacity to issue orders and whether those orders were in fact followed,¹⁸⁶⁵ (ii) the authority to issue disciplinary measures, and (iii) the power to promote personnel and terminate positions held.¹⁸⁶⁶ The superior’s de jure authority “constitutes prima facie a reasonable basis for assuming that he has effective control over his subordinates” but still requires the Prosecution to prove that he exercised effective control.¹⁸⁶⁷

582. In assessing effective control what is relevant is whether the “superior has the material ability to prevent or punish the criminally responsible subordinate”.¹⁸⁶⁸ In this regard the Appeals Chamber has held:

Whether the effective control descends from the superior to the subordinate culpable of the crime through intermediary subordinates is immaterial as a matter of law; instead, what matters is whether the superior has the material ability to prevent or punish the criminally responsible subordinate. The separate question of whether – due to proximity or remoteness of control – the superior indeed possessed effective control is a matter of evidence, not of substantive law.¹⁸⁶⁹

583. Furthermore, for the purposes of liability under Article 7(3), the accused need not know the exact identity of a subordinate perpetrator.¹⁸⁷⁰

b. Knew or had reason to know

584. For the accused to be held responsible under Article 7(3), the accused must have known or had reason to know that the subordinate committed a crime or was going to do so.¹⁸⁷¹

585. Knowledge may be inferred from circumstantial evidence¹⁸⁷² but requires an assessment of the specific circumstances of each case and the “specific situation of the superior concerned at the time in question”.¹⁸⁷³

586. To prove that the accused had reason to know of crimes committed, it is necessary to show that he had information available to him which would have put him on notice of unlawful acts committed or about to be committed by his subordinates.¹⁸⁷⁴ In this regard “it must be established whether, in the circumstances of the case, he possessed information sufficiently alarming to justify further inquiry”.¹⁸⁷⁵ This information does not need to contain extensive or specific details about the unlawful acts committed or about to be committed.¹⁸⁷⁶ A failure by the accused to punish the past offences of his subordinates may be relevant to determining whether he “possessed information that was sufficiently alarming to put him on notice of the risk that similar crimes might subsequently be carried out by subordinates and justify further inquiry”.¹⁸⁷⁷

c. Necessary and reasonable measures

587. For the accused to be held responsible under Article 7(3), it must be established that he failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the commission of the crimes charged.¹⁸⁷⁸ Determining what measures are necessary and reasonable to prevent or punish crimes committed by subordinates is a question of fact and not of substantive law.¹⁸⁷⁹ The degree of effective control can be used to determine “the necessary and reasonable measures within the competence of a superior”.¹⁸⁸⁰

588. The measures which are “necessary” are those which are “appropriate for the superior to discharge his obligation” to prevent or punish the underlying crime, while “reasonable” measures are those “reasonably falling within the material powers of the superior”.¹⁸⁸¹ Reasonable and necessary measures can include reporting the matter to competent authorities where this report is likely to trigger an investigation or initiate disciplinary or criminal proceedings,¹⁸⁸² carrying out an effective investigation to establish the facts,¹⁸⁸³ issuing specific orders prohibiting or stopping the criminal activities and securing implementation of those orders,¹⁸⁸⁴ protesting or criticising criminal action and taking disciplinary measures against the commission of crimes.¹⁸⁸⁵

589. The duty to prevent a crime is distinct from the duty to punish a crime as it involves “different conduct committed at different times”.¹⁸⁸⁶ The failure to punish relates to past crimes committed by subordinates and the failure to prevent concerns future crimes of subordinates.¹⁸⁸⁷ The obligation to prevent or punish “does not provide an accused with two alternative and equally satisfying options” in that where the accused knew or had reason to know that subordinates were about to commit a crime and failed to prevent that crime, “he cannot make up for his failure to act by punishing the subordinates afterwards”.¹⁸⁸⁸

590. For the purposes of Article 7(3), there is no requirement of causality between the superior’s failure to prevent and the occurrence of the crime.¹⁸⁸⁹

d. Interaction between Articles 7(1) and 7(3)

591. Where both Article 7(1) and Article 7(3) responsibility are alleged under the same count, and where the legal requirements of both are met, a conviction should only be entered on the basis of Article 7(1) and the accused’s superior position should be considered as an aggravating factor in sentencing.¹⁸⁹⁰ The Appeals Chamber in Popović further specified that it was “improper to

IV. FINDINGS

A. MUNICIPALITIES COMPONENT

1. Facts

592. The Prosecution alleges that from at least October 1991 until 30 November 1995, the Accused participated in an overarching JCE to permanently remove Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat inhabitants from the territories of BiH claimed as Bosnian Serb territory by means which included the commission of the following crimes: genocide, persecution, extermination, murder, deportation, and inhumane acts (forcible transfer).¹⁸⁹² In this component, the Prosecution refers to the following municipalities: Bijeljina, Bratunac, Brčko, Foča, Rogatica, Višegrad, Sokolac, Vlasenica, and Zvornik (in relation to Eastern BiH); Banja Luka, Bosanski Novi, Ključ, Prijedor, and Sanski Most (in relation to the ARK); Hadžići, Ilidža, Novi Grad, Novo Sarajevo, Pale, and Vogošća (in relation to the Sarajevo area).¹⁸⁹³

593. The Prosecution alleges that under the direction of the Accused and the Bosnian Serb leadership, civilian, military, and paramilitary organs collaborated to take over municipalities and territories throughout BiH in order to establish Serb control and permanently remove non-Serbs by force or threat of force. It is alleged that the physical take-overs of the Municipalities began in late March 1992 and that during and after these take-overs, Serb Forces and authorities, acting under the direction of the Accused, killed and mistreated thousands of individuals and expelled hundreds of thousands, while others fled in fear of their lives.¹⁸⁹⁴

594. The Accused’s case in relation to the Municipality component is that (i) the Bosnian Serb leadership in Pale did not control events in the field and other organs of the RS;¹⁸⁹⁵ (ii) the Bosnian Serb leadership in Pale lacked meaningful communications with the Municipalities to be able to control events in the field;¹⁸⁹⁶ (iii) the Bosnian Serb leadership in Pale instructed Municipalities to protect the non-Serb civilian population;¹⁸⁹⁷ (iv) the Bosnian Serb leadership in Pale took all

(A) Charges

596. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Bijeljina as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.¹⁹⁰¹ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings during and after the take-over of Bijeljina;¹⁹⁰² killings related to detention facilities;¹⁹⁰³ and killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.¹⁹⁰⁴ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.¹⁹⁰⁵

597. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Bijeljina by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;¹⁹⁰⁶ (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as cruel and inhumane treatment;¹⁹⁰⁷ (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities in Bijeljina, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;¹⁹⁰⁸ (iv) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;¹⁹⁰⁹ (v) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;¹⁹¹⁰ (vi) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;¹⁹¹¹ (vii) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;¹⁹¹² (viii) the wanton destruction of private property including homes and business premises and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites;¹⁹¹³ and (ix) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.¹⁹¹⁴

598. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.¹⁹¹⁵ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that by the end of 1992 Serb Forces as well as Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Bijeljina in which they were lawfully present.¹⁹¹⁶ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, cultural monuments and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear while others were physically driven out.¹⁹¹⁷

(B) Lead-up

599. Bijeljina is a municipality located in the northeast of BiH in the Semberija region.¹⁹¹⁸ Approximately two-thirds of its municipal boundaries form part of the border between BiH and Serbia with the municipality bound by the Sava River to the north and the Drina River to the east.¹⁹¹⁹ Bijeljina is the closest municipality in BiH to Belgrade with one of the roads connecting Sarajevo and Belgrade crossing the municipality.¹⁹²⁰ Prior to the war, approximately 60% of the population in the municipality of Bijeljina were Bosnian Serbs and approximately 30% were Bosnian Muslims.¹⁹²¹

600. Bijeljina controlled access to the “Posavina Corridor” which was the only land link connecting Krajina, Western Slavonia and the western part of SerBiH with Serbia, and the establishment of this corridor formed part of the Strategic Goals.¹⁹²²

601. Following the formation of national parties in mid-1990, inter-ethnic relations in Bijeljina deteriorated.¹⁹²³ The SDS in Bijeljina was formed in July 1990 by Predrag Ješurić.¹⁹²⁴ Milan Novaković was the President of the SDS in Bijeljina¹⁹²⁵ and other members of the SDS leadership included Dragomir Ljubojević, Marko Stanković, and Dragan Vuković.¹⁹²⁶ Mirko Blagojević, an SDS member, established the Board of the SRS in Bijeljina.¹⁹²⁷

Defence evidence suggested that the figures provided by the “international experts” exaggerated the number of Bosnian Muslims in Bijeljina in 1991. D3125 (Stevo Pašalić’s expert report entitled “Ethnic Composition, Displaced Persons and Refugees from 27 Municipalities in the Territory of BiH, 1991-1997”, August 2012), paras. 8, 85–91; Stevo Pašalić, T. 35426–35434 (14 March 2013); P6198 (Diagram re percentage of Bijeljina population born before 1980). However, the Chamber notes that Pašalić and his methodology fails to successfully explain why he concluded that the international experts were in error in their calculation of the number of Bosnian Muslims in Bijeljina in 1991. In addition the Chamber notes that his evidence was marked by evasiveness and bias which substantially compromised the veracity of his evidence. The Chamber thus does not consider his evidence to be reliable in this regard.

The Chamber notes that the wording of several paragraphs in Kićanović’s statement was almost identical to the statement provided by another defence witness Cvijetin Simić. Milivoje Kićanović, T. 34879–34881 (6 March 2013); P6184 (Comparison of witness statements of Milivoje Kićanović and Cvijetin Simić). While Kićanović’s explanation for this does not seem plausible, the Chamber does not find that this completely undermines the content of their evidence. However, the Chamber has had regard to the identical wording of certain portions of their respective statements in assessing and weighing the evidence of both Kićanović and Simić.

602. Following the multi-party elections, in November 1990, the SDS won an absolute majority in Bijeljina but formed a coalition government with the SDA in which official positions were divided between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims.¹⁹²⁸ After 1991, people in Bijeljina started joining the SDS to keep their positions.¹⁹²⁹ Milorad Davidović who had been the Chief of SJB in Bijeljina was dismissed from his position as he did not join the SDS and was replaced by Ješurić.¹⁹³⁰

603. By mid-1991, ethnic divisions were rife between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs in Bijeljina.¹⁹³¹ Tensions in Bijeljina continued to increase following the war in Croatia¹⁹³² and even more so in September 1991 after Bosnian Muslims boycotted the JNA mobilisation and started leaving their units; this resulted in the JNA units being manned almost completely by Serbs.¹⁹³³ Inter-ethnic relations in the municipality were further strained in the lead-up to and following the referendum on the independence of BiH.¹⁹³⁴

604. At a meeting in Banja Luka on 11 February 1992, attended by senior officials including Mićo Stanišić and Mandić, there was discussion about the creation of a Bosnian Serb MUP; thereafter the SJB in Bijeljina was instructed by Mandić to begin preparations for this purpose.¹⁹³⁵

605. The existence of a Crisis Staff in Bijeljina was strongly contested by the Accused¹⁹³⁶ and Defence evidence suggested that there was no Crisis Staff in Bijeljina.¹⁹³⁷ However, the Chamber is satisfied, based on the evidence about the establishment and actions of the Crisis Staff, that there was a Crisis Staff in Bijeljina by the beginning of April 1992.¹⁹³⁸ In addition, local crisis staffs were also established in villages surrounding Bijeljina.¹⁹³⁹

606. Milan Novaković¹⁹⁴⁰ and Ljubiša Savić (“Mauzer”) were leaders in the Bijeljina Crisis Staff.¹⁹⁴¹ Members of the Crisis Staff were all either from the SDS or prominent local people who were loyal to the party.¹⁹⁴² The Crisis Staff took on authority which previously belonged to other municipal bodies and took on the role as “commanding body of defence and military forces” and also provided logistical support to the JNA which had barracks in Bijeljina.¹⁹⁴³ Initially, the Crisis

For evidence on the existence and actions of the Bijeljina Crisis Staff, see P6214 (Report of JNA 17th Corps, 7 April 1992), p. 1. When Filipović was asked about this order he was not very clear and tried to suggest that this was not the Crisis Staff; however, the Chamber does not find his answers convincing in this regard. Živan Filipović, T. 35808 (21 March 2013). Similarly, on cross-examination, Kićanović acknowledged that when the municipal Assembly could not be convened a municipal Presidency was set up comprising 10 people who managed the municipality, but he did not consider this to be a Crisis Staff. The witness was presented with a number of documents which made reference to the Bijeljina Crisis Staff (see P2626, P5587, P2855) but maintained that he was not aware of any Crisis Staff in Bijeljina. However, when questioned by the Chamber, Kićanović acknowledged that a Bijeljina SDS Crisis Staff probably did exist but that it was different from the municipal Crisis Staff. Milivoje Kićanović, T. 34886, 34888–34889, 34903–34907 (6 March 2013). Other witnesses were also shown documents with references to the Bijeljina Crisis Staff (P2626, P6211, P2629) but maintained that there was no Crisis Staff in Bijeljina. Cvijetin Simić, T. 35655–35660, 35667 (20 March 2013); Dragomir Ljubojević, T. 35900–35901 (22 March 2013). The Chamber does not find the witnesses’ answers in this regard to be convincing. The Chamber also received evidence about Biljana Plavšić meeting with the Bijeljina Crisis Staff which supports the fact that it did exist. See para. 626.

Staff met every day with only the closest group of leaders in attendance.¹⁹⁴⁴ It however evolved to become the Presidency of the Municipal Assembly¹⁹⁴⁵ and subsequently the War Presidency.¹⁹⁴⁶ There was a very close relationship between the Bijeljina branch of the SDS and the SDS party in Pale; and the SDS leadership, including the Accused and Krajišnik, often visited Bijeljina.¹⁹⁴⁷ The Bijeljina Crisis Staff kept the SDS Main Board informed of its activities.¹⁹⁴⁸ In addition, the Chief of the Bijeljina SJB reported to Mićo Stanišić on the situation in the municipality.¹⁹⁴⁹

607. In the two or three months leading up to the conflict, both sides established units and armed themselves.¹⁹⁵⁰ The SDS and SDA armed Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims respectively.¹⁹⁵¹ Weapons were distributed to supporters of the SDS by the village level crisis staffs.¹⁹⁵² By the time the conflict broke out in Bijeljina, an armed intervention unit had been formed by the SDS from villagers trusted by the party.¹⁹⁵³ Ješurić also sought and received material assistance from the Serbian MUP in the lead-up to the conflict.¹⁹⁵⁴ In contrast, by 11 April 1992 while there remained some armed Bosnian Muslims, most had handed in their weapons to the local authorities.¹⁹⁵⁵

Simić testified that the Bosnian Serb authorities were against the formation of illegal organisations and the arming of the population and when officers from the Bijeljina garrison who were members of the League of Communists secretly distributed weapons to civilians, the authorities asked that the weapons be returned to the barracks and the officers were held to account. D3133 (Witness statement of Cvijetin Simić dated 16 March 2013), para. 10. The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable and notes that Simić's evidence was marked by indicators which led to the conclusion that he withheld information from the Chamber, was evasive, and lacked sincerity.

608. As discussed earlier in this Judgement, the Serbian National Guard, was a unit commanded by Mauzer, and later known as Mauzer's Panthers.¹⁹⁵⁶ Mauzer was also commander of the SAO Semberija TO and operated in Bijeljina with the support of the Presidency of the Bijeljina Municipal Assembly.¹⁹⁵⁷ There was also a local paramilitary group of approximately 50 men affiliated with the SRS under the command of Mirko Blagojević in Bijeljina.¹⁹⁵⁸ Prior to the war, the SDS had called on the youth to attend Arkan's training camp across the Drina and later the Bijeljina Crisis Staff and Mauzer invited Arkan to the municipality after which his men arrived in Bijeljina.¹⁹⁵⁹ Plavšić at the 22nd session of the RS Assembly in November 1992 acknowledged that ¹⁹⁵⁷ P2884 (Article from List SAO Semberije I Majevice entitled "Semberija Lost for Alija's Islamic State", 15 June 1992), p. 4. The Chamber received evidence from Šešelj that Mauzer and his group were not under the control of the Accused or the Bosnian Serb leadership and he had heard the Accused complain about this group. D3665 (Witness statement of Vojislav Šešelj dated 1 June 2013), para. 47. The Chamber considers that Šešelj's assessment that Mauzer was not under the control of the Accused or the Bosnian Serb leadership to be his own opinion, and is therefore of little value.

But see D3665 (Witness statement of Vojislav Šešelj dated 1 June 2013), para. 45 (stating that not a single man was sent by the SRS from Serbia to Bijeljina and that the local SRS members who fought in Bijeljina were not under his control). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable given the interest of Šešelj in minimising his own involvement in this regard. The Chamber also notes that Šešelj himself granted the title of "Vojvoda" to Blagojević for his role in the Serbian Chetnik Movement and for his active participation in commanding units which operated in Bijeljina, Zvornik, and Brčko. See also D1442 (Conclusion of Bijeljina's Municipal Assembly Presidency, 29 May 1992) (which imposed a ban on engaging any individuals or groups which had not been invited by the legal authorities). However, Defence evidence suggested that no armed groups came to the municipality at the invitation of the municipal authorities. Svetozar Mihajlović, T. 35678 (20 March 2013); D3140 (Witness statement of Živan Filipović dated 18 March 2013), para. 13; Živan Filipović, T. 35800–35801 (21 March 2013); Cvijetin Simić, T. 35681–35682 (20 March 2013); The Chamber does not find the evidence of these witnesses to be reliable in this regard considering the other credible evidence received on this issue. In addition the Chamber notes that the evidence of Mihajlović and Simić was marked by contradictions and other indicators that they were not being straightforward in their testimony. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that Filipović's evidence on this point is contradictory in the sense that he testified that he did she had sent letters to many people including Arkan and others willing to fight in the RS for the “Serbian cause”.¹⁹⁶⁰

609. At the end of March 1992, there were two violent incidents at a Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb café respectively. In one incident a young Bosnian Serb threw a hand grenade into the Istanbul café, injuring a number of people.¹⁹⁶¹ This café was frequented by Bosnian Muslims and the young man had previously been beaten and kicked out of the Istanbul café following an argument.¹⁹⁶² In the other incident, a Bosnian Muslim set out from the Istanbul café on horseback on 31 March 1992, intending to throw a grenade at the Srbija café; this resulted in an exchange of fire between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs.¹⁹⁶³ Following these incidents, barricades were erected by Bosnian Muslims at all the important points in Bijeljina and were secured by armed men with the support of the SDA.¹⁹⁶⁴ On 31 March 1992 there were armed clashes and shooting incidents between armed Bosnian Muslims, and Serb Forces.¹⁹⁶⁵

(C) Events in early April 1992

(1) Take-over

610. By 1 April 1992, Bijeljina was completely surrounded by check-points.¹⁹⁶⁶ Members of the Bosnian Serb leadership in the municipality in a live radio broadcast asked for all citizens to get off the streets and lift the barricades; they also called for restraint.¹⁹⁶⁷ On 1 April 1992, negotiations between Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim representatives failed to reach an agreement on the lifting of barricades and fighting continued.¹⁹⁶⁸

611. The take-over of Bijeljina began on 1 April 1992 and the Serb Forces involved included Arkan's men, a local unit affiliated with the SRS under the command of Mirko Blagojević, Mauzer's unit, the local TO, the police, the JNA and the local Bosnian Serb population.¹⁹⁶⁹

612. Arkan's men came to Bijeljina on 1 April 1992 and, in co-operation with a local unit affiliated with the SRS under the command of Mirko Blagojević, took control of important town structures¹⁹⁷⁰ which were then guarded by the police.¹⁹⁷¹ Arkan's men and Mauzer's unit operated

The Accused submits that the meeting failed because the SDA representatives refused to negotiate due to their belief that they had gained control of the municipality. Defence Final Brief, para. 1381. The Chamber does not consider that the evidence in the record supports this proposition.

under the supervision of the Bijeljina Crisis Staff and started to remove the Bosnian Muslim barricades in the centre of Bijeljina¹⁹⁷² which resulted in clashes.¹⁹⁷³ Arkan's men also received the help of the local Bosnian Serb population who collected weapons that had been distributed to them from various depots.¹⁹⁷⁴ Members of the local TO were also present in Bijeljina town.¹⁹⁷⁵

613. On 1 or 2 April 1992, armed JNA reservists surrounded the town and columns of JNA tanks and other vehicles were seen in the area.¹⁹⁷⁶ On 1 April 1992, the Bijeljina Crisis Staff reported to the SDS Main Board about the imposition of a curfew and about the use of ethnically mixed patrols of the JNA to control vital buildings and areas in the town.¹⁹⁷⁷ The army barracks were blocked by Bosnian Serbs and Arkan's men who threatened to attack the JNA if it were to interfere in the conflict.¹⁹⁷⁸ Arkan also encouraged Bosnian Serbs to leave the army and join his formations after which a large number of reservists took their weapons and did so.¹⁹⁷⁹

614. On 2 April 1992, the Serbian flag was raised on the high-rise building in the centre of the city¹⁹⁸⁰ and by 4 April 1992, the town of Bijeljina was controlled by the SDS and Arkan's men.¹⁹⁸¹ Arkan was welcomed in Bijeljina and "treated like a god"; some of his men were given official positions and based themselves in the local SDS building; they accompanied regular police patrols for several days and were involved in arresting members of Bijeljina's SDA presidency.¹⁹⁸²

615. On 3 April 1992, the JNA 17th Corps reported that even though the situation in Bijeljina had "calmed somewhat" there was still "general chaos, anarchy and panic in the town" with rumours that Bosnian Muslims were being slaughtered.¹⁹⁸³

616. Arkan left Bijeljina on 6 April 1992, but some of his men came to Bijeljina after that date from time to time.¹⁹⁸⁴ In late April or early May 1992 some of Arkan's men had taken over the SUP and threatened the police.¹⁹⁸⁵ When Davidović reported to Petar Gračanin, the Federal Minister of the Interior, and Mićo Stanišić that Arkan's men had taken over the SUP, Stanišić commented that he knew, that nothing else could be done, and that's "how it ha[d] to be".¹⁹⁸⁶ Mićo Stanišić told Davidović that Arkan's men were in Bijeljina and Zvornik "helping to liberate territory they believed should become part of the [RS]" and that "there was an agreement with Arkan that whatever area they took, they could take any property, any war booty and that would have been the price to pay for their engagement there."¹⁹⁸⁷

However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Simić's evidence was marked by indicators which led to the conclusion that he was withholding information from the Chamber, was evasive and lacked sincerity. The Chamber cannot rely on Mihajlović's qualified evidence on this point as he simply stated that he did not know of anyone arresting members of the SDA presidency.

617. The Prosecution alleges that at least 48 civilians were killed in the town of Bijeljina on 1 and 2 April 1992.

618. The Chamber took judicial notice of the fact that at least 48 civilians, were killed by Serb paramilitaries during the Bosnian Serb take-over of Bijeljina¹⁹⁸⁸ and a total of 48 bodies, including those of women and children, were collected from the town's streets and houses, 45 of these victims were non-Serbs and none wore uniforms.¹⁹⁸⁹ The Chamber also took judicial notice of the fact that most of the dead had been shot in the chest, mouth, temple, or back of the head, some at close range.¹⁹⁹⁰

619. Witnesses also testified that civilians were killed in Bijeljina on 1 April 1992.¹⁹⁹¹ A total of 55 individuals who went missing from Bijeljina between 1 April 1992 and 15 September 1993 were exhumed from individual or mass graves in the area.¹⁹⁹² However, of these 55 exhumed bodies, only five are linked to this scheduled incident.¹⁹⁹³ The Chamber will not make a finding with respect to the remaining 50 exhumed bodies.

¹⁹⁸⁸ Adjudicated Fact 2243. The Chamber notes that the Accused's submits that there was paramilitary activity prior to Scheduled Incident A.1.1. The Accused also submits that at the time of the incident the "local and military forces" were in a state of disarray and could not prevent the incident from occurring. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1388. However, the Chamber does not consider that the evidence cited by the Accused or the other evidence received in this case supports the conclusion that the local forces were unable to prevent the incident from occurring. The Accused also cites to D3142 to support his proposition that a criminal report was filed against the perpetrators of the attack who could be identified. The Chamber notes that D3142 is a criminal report filed against Bosnian Muslims for armed rebellion.

KDZ446 testified about the killings of tens of people behind the SDS building and that he heard that some men were taken by Arkan's men to their garrison and shot: KDZ446, P29 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. S. Milošević), T. 21108. The database of the Missing Persons Institute of BiH included five individuals who had been exhumed and identified who were allegedly killed in Bijeljina in early April 1992 and who were linked by Mašović to Scheduled Incident A.1.1. 620. The Accused disputed (i) the number of Bosnian Muslim victims; (ii) their status as civilians; (iii) the circumstances in which they were killed; and (iv) the identity of the perpetrators, and tendered evidence in support.¹⁹⁹⁴ However, the Chamber does not find the Accused's arguments to be convincing or the evidence adduced by the Accused on these issues to be reliable. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber considered that the evidence of the witnesses was either based on speculation or hearsay information and when cross-examined the source of the information was unclear.¹⁹⁹⁵ The Chamber does not accept the self-serving video of Arkan that he only killed "Albanian extremists" in Bijeljina.¹⁹⁹⁶

621. A report of the 17th Corps of the JNA dated 7 April 1992 noted that the Bijeljina MUP had provided them with information that the conflict in Bijeljina had resulted in 43 casualties consisting of 28 Bosnian Muslims, two Bosnian Croats, eight Albanians, and five Bosnian Serbs and that some victims had been buried without identification.¹⁹⁹⁷ An article dated 10 April 1992 referred to the killing of 40 individuals in Bijeljina whose bodies were buried without religious rites.¹⁹⁹⁸

¹⁹⁹⁵ For example see Dušan Spasojević, T. 35839, 35842–35843 (21 March 2013); Dušan Spasojević, T. 35841 (21 March 2013) (private session); P2919 (Witness statement of KDZ023 dated 29 September 1996), p. 28.

Arkan in an interview suggested that after Serb Forces broke through to the hospital, Bosnian Muslims were treated fairly and those who did not carry weapons had no problems. P6211 (Four video clips of interviews with Arkan and others, with transcript), p. 5. However, the Chamber does not consider this media clip to be reliable for the purposes of making a finding in this regard. Similarly the Chamber does not regard Arkan's own denial of mistreatment to be reliable. See KDZ531, T. 15869, 15871–15872, 15932–15933 (1 July 2011) (closed session); D1459 (Video interview of Arkan in Bijeljina, April 1992); D3142 (Criminal report against Hasan Tirić), p. 22; P6211 (Four video clips of interviews with Arkan and others, with transcript), pp. 3–4; D1460 (Video interview of Arkan in Bijeljina, April 1992); D1461 (Video interview of Arkan in Bijeljina, April 1992). The Chamber also considered that KDZ531 testified that Arkan made unsubstantiated claims that Albanian extremists had arrived in the municipality. KDZ531, T. 15872 (1 July 2011) (closed session).

622. The Bijeljina SJB in a report to the Bosnian Serb MUP referred to 31 individuals who were killed at a barricade near the hospital in Bijeljina.¹⁹⁹⁹ The SJB report also suggests that six of the individuals named as victims of this incident²⁰⁰⁰ were killed by armed Bosnian Muslims.²⁰⁰¹ The Chamber does not accept the conclusion of the SJB report that 31 individuals were killed while “putting up armed resistance” at the barricade or that the six individuals were killed by Bosnian Muslims.²⁰⁰² In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the language used in the Bijeljina SJB report is highly inflammatory and one-sided, which undermines its reliability and the weight which can be attributed to it.²⁰⁰³ Similarly, while there are differing contemporaneous reports as to the number of individuals killed, the Chamber does not consider that these reports undermine the evidence that in total at least 45 non-Serb civilians were killed on 1 and 2 April 1992, that most of the dead had been shot in the chest, mouth, temple, or back of the head, some at close range and that the victims included women and children and were not wearing uniforms.²⁰⁰⁴ Considering (i) the nature of the injuries; (ii) that the victims did not wear uniforms and were identified as civilians; and (iii) that the victims included women and children, the Chamber finds that these individuals were not killed during armed clashes.

623. The Chamber also received evidence which referred to the killing of Bosnian Muslims after 2 April 1992.²⁰⁰⁵ However, beyond noting this evidence for the purpose of setting the general

It also refers to the crushing of barricades and Muslims who “have stained their hands with the Serbs’ blood”. D3142 (Criminal report against Hasan Tirić), p. 27. The Chamber also notes that on cross-examination Spasojević acknowledged that he did not know the source of the information which suggested that these Bosnian Muslims were killed while putting up armed resistance. background in Bijeljina after the take-over, the Chamber did not consider this evidence for the purpose of establishing the occurrence of crimes charged in the Indictment and the Accused's responsibility thereon.²⁰⁰⁶

624. The Chamber therefore finds that at least 45 civilians were killed by Serb Forces on 1 and 2 April 1992 in the town of Bijeljina.

(D) Developments in Bijeljina after take-over

625. Following the removal of barricades from the municipality, Serb Forces continued with a "global mopping-up" in Bijeljina until 6 April 1992.²⁰⁰⁷

626. On 4 April 1992 a commission consisting of, amongst others, Biljana Plavšić and Fikret Abdić, and high-ranking army officials visited Bijeljina to assess the situation.²⁰⁰⁸ The removal of bodies from the streets of Bijeljina was ordered by Serb Forces in anticipation of the visit of this delegation.²⁰⁰⁹ Plavšić visited the Bijeljina Crisis Staff and congratulated Arkan for saving the Bosnian Serbs and was filmed kissing and hugging Arkan.²⁰¹⁰ When, in the course of the visit, Plavšić asked Arkan to hand over control of Bijeljina to the JNA, he replied that he had not yet finished his “business” there.²⁰¹¹ At a dinner with UNPROFOR representative, Cedric Thornberry, on 20 April 1992, Plavšić described Bijeljina as a “liberated” town.²⁰¹²

627. After the fighting ended, the local authorities including the TO Municipal Staff returned to Bijeljina.²⁰¹³ The Bijeljina SJB began operations in accordance with the instructions and guidelines of the Bosnian Serb MUP.²⁰¹⁴ On 28 April 1992, the Presidency of the Bijeljina Municipal Assembly issued a decision which provided that only members of the active and reserve police forces and members of the armed forces should maintain public law and order and strictly prohibited the establishment of local check-points by civilians and unauthorised persons without the approval of the Bijeljina SJB.²⁰¹⁵

629. In April and May 1992, Bosnian Muslim employees were dismissed from their jobs and Bosnian Muslim members of the local municipal government were dismissed from their positions and expelled from their apartments.²⁰¹⁷ Family members of Bosnian Muslim intellectuals and leaders were dismissed from their positions and harassed.²⁰¹⁸ Bosnian Muslim police officers were

The Chamber does not consider Simić’s evidence in this regard to be of relevance to its assessment of the evidence on this issue given that the effect of the decision was to reduce the size of the Municipal Assembly to include only Bosnian Serb representatives.

631. Paramilitary formations were involved in mistreating and stealing from the population.²⁰²² More specifically, Arkan’s men destroyed property of individuals involved with the SDA,²⁰²³ engaged in looting, and went to the homes of wealthy Bosnian Muslims demanding money.²⁰²⁴ Bosnian Muslims feared for their lives if they refused the demands of Arkan’s men.²⁰²⁵ Croat

Arkan himself denied claims which he attributed to media controlled by the SDA that his men had come into the town, were terrorising and mistreating people and looting homes. D1459 (Video interview of Arkan in Bijeljina, April 1992); D1612 (Video footage of Arkan in “My Guest, His Truth”, July/August 1994), p. 11. The Chamber does not find this evidence reliable given that it is based on Arkan’s own interview where he has a clear interest in distancing himself from these incidents.

²⁰²⁵ P2848 (Witness statement of Milorad Davidović dated 22 June 2011), para. 117. The Accused submits that Arkan’s men fought against Bosnian Muslim, Bosnian Croat, and Albanian paramilitary units, that both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims were in a state of fear in Bijeljina and that Arkan publicly guaranteed safety to both the Bosnian Serbs and Muslims, see Defence Final Brief, confidential, paras. 1076–1077. In support, the Accused refers to a video which depicts a person who identified herself as a Muslim woman who refuted the allegations of looting, and destruction by Arkan’s men and that they did not fear them as they had come to help. D1462 (Video interview of Arkan and Bijeljina residents, April 1992); [REDACTED]. The Chamber does not find this video evidence to be reliable, as it is unclear under what circumstances the video was made and it companies were also looted by Arkan's men.²⁰²⁶ There was also an incident in June 1992 when paramilitaries raped two Bosnian Muslim women and paraded them naked through a town before they took them away by car and raped them again.²⁰²⁷

632. After some time, when the paramilitaries ran out of Bosnian Muslim houses to steal from, they started robbing Bosnian Serb houses and committed crimes against Serbs as well.²⁰²⁸ There were some difficulties in controlling the actions of paramilitaries.²⁰²⁹ However, the Chamber finds that paramilitaries were allowed to operate with impunity; all the police not aligned to the Crisis Staff or the SDS had been removed²⁰³⁰ and some of the crimes were carried out with the assistance of members of the SJB.²⁰³¹ In addition the paramilitaries continued to receive support from local Bosnian Serbs.²⁰³²

633. The Chamber concludes that it was only after paramilitaries started undermining the authority of the local institutions by forming their own parallel authorities²⁰³³ and also attacking Bosnian Serbs that the municipal authorities sought to exercise some real control over these cannot verify whether or not it was made for propaganda purposes and that in addition Arkan is present and accompanied by armed men in this video. The Chamber therefore does not accept the Accused's submission that this video demonstrated that Arkan did not create fear among Bosnian Muslims. The Chamber does accept, however, that some Bosnian Serbs also feared Arkan's men. [REDACTED]. The Chamber considered that Davidović's evidence was marked by indicators of reliability and sincerity and considered his evidence to be credible. The Accused in cross-examination of Davidović introduced a number of documents which related to a case against Davidović and his son in an attempt to attack his character and credibility (D1405, D1404, D1403, D1402, and D1401). Having considered this line of cross-examination by the Accused the Chamber finds that the cross-examination and the documents introduced by the Accused failed to cast doubt as to the character or credibility of Davidović.

units.²⁰³⁴ In this regard the Chamber notes that the Presidency of the Bijeljina Assembly imposed a ban in May 1992 on armed formations which arrived in the municipality without invitation by the legal authorities.²⁰³⁵ In addition on 11 June 1992, the Presidency of the Bijeljina Municipal Assembly issued an order that all armed formations in the municipality be placed under the single command of the VRS and tasked the MP with ensuring implementation of the order.²⁰³⁶

634. Davidović was tasked to lead a special unit of the Federal SUP to address problems with paramilitaries in northeastern BiH and arrived in Bijeljina on 27 June 1992.²⁰³⁷ While Davidović's unit came from the Federal SUP in Belgrade it was re-subordinated to the command in Bosnian Serb MUP.²⁰³⁸ Davidović's special unit, in co-ordination with Dragomir Andan from the Bosnian Serb MUP, disarmed and broke up the paramilitary formations in the area of the Bijeljina CSB and arrested those "most deeply involved in criminal activities".²⁰³⁹ Davidović had the support of Ratko Mladić to take these measures.²⁰⁴⁰ Following the arrival of Davidović and his unit, and until Šešelj stated that on a number of occasions the Bijeljina Municipal Board issued public statements and held press conferences which "condemned and severely criticised" the actions of Mauzer. D3665 (Witness statement of Vojislav Šešelj dated 1 June 2013), para. 46. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. It notes that Šešelj's testimony was marked by political commentary which limited its reliability. Furthermore, in light of other accepted evidence to the contrary and noting that it has no other evidence to suggest that the municipal authorities condemned the actions of these units other than this unsupported statement of Šešelj, the Chamber does not find Šešelj's evidence in this regard to be reliable.

The Chamber also finds that the local authorities prohibited the sale of alcoholic beverages to uniformed persons in the municipality. D1437 (Order of Bijeljina's Municipal Assembly Presidency, 8 April 1992). Mihajlović testified that the local authorities tried to prevent and punish crimes committed against non-Serbs. D3137 (Witness statement of Svetozar Mihajlović dated 17 March 2013), para. 14. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber found that Mihajlović's evidence was marked by contradictions and indicators that he was not straightforward in his answers to the Chamber.

635. Davidović also arrested some military personnel; complaints were then made to Mićo Stanišić, who instructed Davidović not to take action against members of the military as this should be done by the MP.²⁰⁴³ However, subsequently, Stanišić confirmed Davidović's authority²⁰⁴⁴ and requested the command of the Eastern Bosnia Corps to extend their "full cooperation" to him and to take measures against "possible perpetrators" in their ranks.²⁰⁴⁵ Following this, Davidović in co-operation with the Military Security Service from the Main Staff command and the MP arrested and prosecuted military personnel.²⁰⁴⁶

637. Despite these measures, there were difficulties in controlling Mauzer and his unit which opposed the attempts by Davidović and Andan to restore order in the municipality.²⁰⁵⁰ In one incident, the Bijeljina municipal authorities intervened and secured the release of Mauzer following pressure from his unit.²⁰⁵¹ Davidović made requests to the military command to control Mauzer's unit and while promises were made, no action was taken and Mauzer continued to have political support in the municipality and was close to the structures of power in the municipality.²⁰⁵² Davidović and his team were also threatened by Arkan's men.²⁰⁵³

639. The Chamber finds that there was some record and investigation of crimes committed against Bosnian Muslims by Bosnian Serbs;²⁰⁵⁶ however, some of the investigations were discontinued.²⁰⁵⁷ The Chamber finds that there was imbalance in the treatment of cases associated with the killing or mistreatment of Bosnian Muslims by Bosnian Serbs. Many incidents went unpunished or sentences were passed but not carried out.²⁰⁵⁸ This added to the fear and uncertainty of the Bosnian Muslim population and contributed to individuals leaving Bijeljina.²⁰⁵⁹ In addition, while proceedings were initiated against Bosnian Serbs for general crimes, no cases for war crimes against the civilian population were ever tried before the Bijeljina Military Court.²⁰⁶⁰

640. Spasojević testified that all crimes against non-Serb citizens of Bijeljina were handled by members of the SJB, that if the perpetrators were found they were handed over for prosecution, and that there was no pressure from government organs to cover up crimes.²⁰⁶¹ However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable given that he was contradicted on cross-examination and acknowledged examples of cases involving murder of Bosnian Muslims which were still pending.²⁰⁶²

(F) Schedule Detention Facility C.2.1

641. The Indictment refers to the use of the Batković camp as a detention facility at least between 1 June 1992 and 31 December 1995.²⁰⁶³

(1) Establishment of camp and arrival of detainees

authorities took over the hangars belonging to the agricultural company in Batković which was approximately 12 kilometres from Bijeljina towards the Sava River.²⁰⁶⁷

643. The order for the establishment of the camp provided that (i) Momčilo Despot be appointed commander of the camp (ii) the treatment of the prisoners of war be “in accordance with provisions of the international law of war”; (iii) the detainees be treated appropriately; (iv) unauthorised persons be prevented from entering the camp; and (v) the provision of food would be organised at the Corps Command level.²⁰⁶⁸ Despot ordered that records be kept of detainees and of items seized from them, including valuables and money.²⁰⁶⁹ He also ordered that detainees could be used for work, including maintenance and agricultural work, but not for work directly linked to combat operations, and that interrogations would be conducted by the Eastern Bosnia Corps.²⁰⁷⁰ This order also provided for a list of all detainees to be communicated to the Red Cross and for detainees to be treated humanely without violence, with “exemplary hygiene” and regular medical checks.²⁰⁷¹ While these rules were promulgated, the evidence below as to the conditions of detention and treatment of detainees indicates that the rules were not complied with.²⁰⁷²

644. The camp was guarded by VRS soldiers who were mainly from the military reserve²⁰⁷³ and the army had jurisdiction over the camp.²⁰⁷⁴ From August 1992, the commander of the Batković camp was Velibor Stojanović.²⁰⁷⁵

²⁰⁶⁹ D1449 (Instructions of Eastern Bosnia Corps, 2 July 1992), pp. 1–3. ²⁰⁷² But see Milorad Davidović, T. 15784–15786 (30 June 2011). While Davidović testified that Despot complied with these instructions, the Chamber does not find that this is entirely consistent with the other evidence on the conditions of detention and treatment of detainees. For example, the Chamber notes that P2891 (Instructions of the Eastern Bosnia Corps, 2 July 1992), p. 2, which was signed by Despot as commander of the camp, implicitly acknowledged that detainees were subject to forced labour.

645. From at least June until December 1992, Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained in the Batković camp.²⁰⁷⁶ The first groups brought to Batković were Bosnian Muslims after which Bosnian Croats were also brought to the facility.²⁰⁷⁷ The detainees held at the Batković camp originated from a large number of different municipalities, including Kalesija, Brčko, Ključ, Lopare, Rogatica, Sanski Most, Sokolac, Ugljevik, Vlasenica, Živinice, and Zvornik.²⁰⁷⁸ Some people were taken from their homes and transported in buses to the Batković camp.²⁰⁷⁹ Many were transferred from other detention facilities, including Sušica camp in Vlasenica and Manjača camp in Banja Luka.²⁰⁸⁰ Some individuals were detained for over a year.²⁰⁸¹

646. When KDZ603 arrived from Sušica camp he was in a hangar with approximately 1,600 Bosnian Muslims from various municipalities who were placed in groups depending on their municipality of origin.²⁰⁸² There were also some women, children, and elderly persons detained in a separate hangar.²⁰⁸³

647. On arrival in Batković, the detainees were ordered by Serb soldiers to empty their pockets of money and valuables and were forced to pass a cordon of soldiers who beat them with chains and batons before being taken to a hangar.²⁰⁸⁴ The detainees were informed by a platoon leader that they were “war prisoners” on Serb territory and had no rights.²⁰⁸⁵

648. Between 2,000 and 3,000 non-Serbs went through the camp after its establishment with new groups arriving when other groups left.²⁰⁸⁶ The exchange of detainees in groups of 50 to 100 began in August 1992.²⁰⁸⁷ In 1995, Bosnian Muslims from Karakaj²⁰⁸⁸ and Bosnian Muslims from Srebrenica, including elderly and children who were captured were brought to Batković.²⁰⁸⁹

(2) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

649. The detainees in Batković were forced to sleep on their sides on the concrete floor where they “were packed into the hangar like sardines”.²⁰⁹⁰ Initially two detainees would share a single military mattress but subsequently these mattresses were taken away and the detainees had to sleep on straw and hay.²⁰⁹¹

650. The detainees were forbidden from sitting with their legs crossed, and were required to seek permission before using the toilet or getting water.²⁰⁹² They had a makeshift toilet which was a 10 metre long dug-up hole which they could use during the day but not at night.²⁰⁹³ They were also required to seek permission before addressing the guards by making the three fingered Serb sign, bowing their heads to the ground, and saying “Sir Serb soldier let me address you”.²⁰⁹⁴ When detainees walked they had to have their hands behind their back and keep their heads bowed.²⁰⁹⁵

651. Sanitary conditions at Batković camp were poor and detainees were given little food.²⁰⁹⁶ The detainees received a slice of bread for breakfast, had some cooked food at lunch and boiled corn flour for dinner.²⁰⁹⁷ Given the lack of food, detainees sold valuables to soldiers “for just a few loaves of bread”.²⁰⁹⁸ Some detainees experienced extreme weight loss during their detention while four or five older prisoners died of starvation or exhaustion.²⁰⁹⁹

652. Bosnian Serb soldiers who came to the area were given access to the camp and allowed to enter the hangar whenever they wanted to beat the detainees.²¹⁰⁰ If a Bosnian Serb soldier was killed on the frontline, the soldiers would take revenge on the detainees.²¹⁰¹ The soldiers forced some of the detainees to hit each other, beat all of them randomly with different objects, and the number of blankets in the camp when the facility was closed in 1996, thus falling outside the time frame of the allegations in the Indictment with respect to the Batković camp.

Čekić disputed this adjudicated fact and testified that the food received by the detainees was the same as the VRS soldiers and they all had three meals a day and that the detainees had several showers and toilets. D3236 (Witness statement of Gojko Čekić dated 31 March 2013), para. 23. The Chamber does not consider that this evidence is of much weight given that Čekić was commander of the camp only from August 1994. The Chamber also found that Čekić’s evidence was marked by indicators of evasiveness and did not consider his evidence to be reliable in this regard.

²⁰⁹⁷ P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), para. 159. While Adjudicated Fact 2254 suggests that detainees were given little water, the Chamber accepts that in light of the evidence of Osmanović and that of Egrić, detainees did have access to water. There were approximately ten detainees accused by the guards of being “extremists” or “Alija’s specialists” who were subjected to daily beatings and additional mistreatment and some of these detainees died from these beatings.²¹⁰⁶ The detainees in this group were beaten at least three times a day, forced to beat each other, knocked over by fire hoses, and forced to have sexual intercourse with each other, often in front of other detainees.²¹⁰⁷ The guards were aware of these ²¹⁰⁷ P84 (Witness statement of Mirsad Kuralić dated 27 June 1996), p. 8. See also Adjudicated Fact 2256. Čekić disputed Adjudicated Fact 2256 and suggested that nobody beat the detainees or forced them to engage in degrading sexual acts and that the guards at the facility were “family men” or older people who would never do such things. Čekić also testified about the conditions in the camp and the absence of mistreatment of detainees in 1994. D3236 (Witness statement of Gojko Čekić dated 31 March 2013), paras. 4–5, 8–9, 11–12, 15–16, 20, 25. The Chamber does not find this evidence to be credible. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that Čekić was commander of the camp only from August 1994 and that when confronted with evidence of abuse and poor conditions in 1992, Čekić stated that he was not at the centre at the time and was not aware of it. The Chamber also noted that Čekić had an interest in minimising his involvement in any mistreatment of detainees. See Gojko Čekić, T. 36490–36491, 36493–36495, 36503, 36511–36512 (3 April 2013). The Chamber also found that Čekić’s evidence was marked by indicators of evasiveness and did not consider his evidence to be reliable in this regard. The Chamber also does not find Čekić’s evidence that many detainees “discretely asked not to be exchanged” as they were safer in the camp than in their own territory where they would be mobilised and sent to the frontline to be credible. See D3236 (Witness statement of Gojko Čekić dated 31 March 2013), para. 20.

Even though there was a doctor at the camp, the detainees in the Batković camp, including those who had heart attacks, were not provided with medical treatment or were refused medication and, as a result, a number of detainees died.²¹¹⁰ When a detainee complained of toothache, the doctor threatened to call the soldiers to pull out the tooth.²¹¹¹

655. The police would take away detainees for work at factories while VRS soldiers took the detainees away for labour on the frontlines.²¹¹² Detainees at Batković were forced to perform manual labour daily, including digging trenches, clearing mines and carrying munitions at the frontline, and burying bodies.²¹¹³ While compelled to dig trenches on the frontline the detainees were forced to sing Serb national songs and bury the dead.²¹¹⁴ On two occasions, the detainees worked on the frontlines when combat was ongoing. In one incident, a man named Ahmed Pašić was killed and, in December 1992, two detainees were wounded and two others were killed.²¹¹⁵ The detainees were forced to work in all weather conditions, including in extreme heat, which affected their health.²¹¹⁶ They were not allowed to refuse to work at Batković.²¹¹⁷ An order of the commander of the Batković camp implicitly acknowledged the practice of forced labour by outlining the procedure for guarding detainees who were “performing forced labour”.²¹¹⁸

(3) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

657. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from multiple locations were brought to and detained at Batković camp from June 1992 until 1995 by Serb Forces. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included lack of space, inadequate bedding, poor sanitary conditions, lack of food, and inadequate medical care. Detainees were subjected to regular beatings, sexual mistreatment and were forced to work at a number of locations in extreme conditions including on the frontlines digging trenches and clearing mines. The Chamber finds that some detainees died as a result of starvation, exhaustion or while working on the frontlines.²¹²⁰

(4) Scheduled Incident B.2.1

658. The Prosecution alleges that at least six men were killed in the Batković camp between June 1992 and June 1995.

659. A detainee known as “professor” was taken out one night by 10 guards, beaten through the night, and found dead the next day.²¹²¹ Executions were also carried out at the camp, with intellectuals and SDA leaders specifically targeted²¹²² and the bodies of detainees were removed from the hangar wrapped in blankets.²¹²³ Pašić saw two elderly men killed at the camp following on KDZ603’s evidence in this regard given that he never left the facility himself for the purposes of work in contrast to other witnesses, including Osmanović, who were personally forced to work.

P111 (Witness statement of KDZ044 dated 28 September 1994), p. 7 (under seal). Čekić testified that when he was commander of the camp from August 1994, he heard about the death of only two detainees at the camp and this beatings.²¹²⁴ Of the two elderly men, one was Zulfo Hadžiomerović,²¹²⁵ a 70 year old man accused of having a “U” tattooed under his arm; he was beaten on many occasions and in early July 1992 died as a result of a beating.²¹²⁶ Gligor and “Major” had started the beating and Veselin Nikolić and some police from Zenica joined and once Hadžiomerović died, other detainees were ordered to take the body out and load it onto a military truck.²¹²⁷ His body was covered with bruises, but men wearing doctors’ insignia in JNA uniforms arrived about an hour later and pronounced that he had died of natural causes.²¹²⁸ Two other men, including a jeweller named “Husein” and Ferid Zečević also died on or about the same day.²¹²⁹ While Osmanović did not see the beatings, Husein and Zečević had been beaten at the army barracks before their arrival at Batković and he saw both bodies placed outside and put onto a truck.²¹³⁰

660. Pašić also testified about the shooting of one detainee.²¹³¹ With respect to this shooting, in the late summer 1992, there was an investigation into the death of Muhamed Čudić but no one was charged.²¹³² involved two detainees who returned from work drunk and attacked a guard who shot them in “self-defence” and that there was an investigation into this incident. D3236 (Witness statement of Gojko Čekić dated 31 March 2013), para. 18; Gojko Čekić, T. 36524–36525 (4 April 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber recalls its credibility assessment in fn. 2096 in assessing Čekić’s evidence. In addition it was not clear whether Čekić was able to speak about killings which occurred before he was commander of the camp.

P2929 (Witness statement of KDZ531 dated 25 June 2011) (under seal), p. 11. The Prosecution notes that the man identified as Muhamed Čurtić by KDZ531 and as Husein by Osmanović to be the same individual. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G.

²¹³² P2929 (Witness statement of KDZ531 dated 25 June 2011) (under seal), p. 11. KDZ531 also testified about killings not linked to the Batković camp and the failure to charge anyone for these incidents: P2929 (Witness statement of KDZ531 dated 25 June 2011), p. 12 (under seal). However, given that these incidents relate to unscheduled detention facilities the Chamber will not make any findings in that regard.

(5) ICRC Visits

662. The ICRC first visited the Batković camp in August or September 1992, registered the detainees, and issued them with identity cards.²¹³³ Before the ICRC visits, all children, the elderly and those that had been beaten badly, including the group of ten men who had been targeted for additional beating and mistreatment, were taken away and hidden in other locations.²¹³⁴ These detainees were similarly hidden during the visits of journalists.²¹³⁵ In order to cover for the absence of detainees who had been hidden and the detainees who had been killed, other people including guards or police were substituted in their place.²¹³⁶

663. The detainees were also instructed to lie and tell the ICRC representatives that conditions were fine, that food was good, that they were provided with cigarettes, and had not been beaten.²¹³⁷ Anyone who did not say what they were instructed to say was beaten severely.²¹³⁸ While the ICRC provided the detainees with supplies, such as blankets, soap, shoes, gloves and cigarettes, the soldiers would take anything they wanted once the ICRC left the camp.²¹³⁹ However, the conditions at Batković did improve after the ICRC began to visit the facility.²¹⁴⁰ The ICRC was given access to and visited Batković camp until late 1995.²¹⁴¹

664. The Batković facility was disbanded in early 1996.²¹⁴²

²¹³⁷ Elvir Pašić, P59 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Tadić), T. 878, 890. Čekić testified that the ICRC maintained lists of detainees who only complained about the lack of showers and toilets after which the ICRC provided the material for extra showers and toilets were built at Batković. The Chamber does not find this evidence to be conclusive as to the actual conditions at Batković, given the credible evidence about the hiding of detainees and detainees being instructed to not complain about conditions.

(G) Scheduled Incident D.2

665. The Indictment refers to the destruction of three mosques in Bijeljina in the summer of 1992.²¹⁴³

666. Riedlmayer reported that the Atmačići mosque was almost destroyed.²¹⁴⁴ The Janjari mosque was lightly damaged and vandalised with graffiti with the initials of the SRS written on the walls in Cyrillic.²¹⁴⁵ The Srednja Trnova mosque was completely destroyed.²¹⁴⁶ There was evidence of blast damage to two of the mosques and the adjacent buildings to all three mosques were in good condition.²¹⁴⁷ While the Chamber relies on Riedlmayer for the purposes of finding that the mosques were destroyed, and the nature and extent of the damage to the mosques and surrounding buildings, it does not rely on his evidence as to when and who was responsible for the destruction of the mosques which fall outside his expertise and are based on informant statements which he received.²¹⁴⁸ Riedlmayer also reported on damage to other cultural monuments and sacred sites in Bijeljina,²¹⁴⁹ but given that these sites are not alleged in Schedule D of the Indictment, the Chamber will not make findings in this regard.

667. While KDZ531 testified that the destruction of the mosques was a “clear signal to non-Serbs” that they should leave Bijeljina, the Chamber considers this to be the witness’s speculation and will not rely on his opinion in this regard.²¹⁵⁰ KDZ531 also stated that in the summer of 1992, the Department of Urbanism and Construction supervised the destruction of religious and cultural Riedlmayer’s report, which is based on his visits to the sites in 2002 and on information he received from the Islamic Community of BiH and other sources, identifies the following mosques and the level of damage: Atmačići mosque (almost destroyed), Janjari mosque (lightly damaged), and Srednja Trnova mosque (completely destroyed). monuments in Bijeljina which was carried out by the engineering group of the 1st Krajina Corps.²¹⁵¹ He also stated that the rubble from destroyed religious and cultural monuments was removed with the assistance of Bosnian Muslims on work detail who were required to perform this work.²¹⁵² During his testimony, KDZ531 confirmed that he heard that the Atmačići mosque, the Janjari mosque, and the Srednja Trnova mosque had been destroyed.²¹⁵³ However, when questioned about how he knew that the mosques were destroyed by the engineering group of the 1st Krajina Corps, he qualified his statement and testified that his knowledge about who destroyed the mosques was based on unattributed hearsay and what he heard people and soldiers talking about as he had no direct knowledge about this issue.²¹⁵⁴ Having regard to the way in which KDZ531 qualified his evidence, the Chamber is not satisfied that it can rely on his evidence to establish who destroyed the mosques charged in the Indictment.

668. Therefore, based on its review of the evidence, while the Chamber finds that the Atmačići, Janjari, and Srednja Trnova mosques were destroyed, it does not have sufficient evidence to identify, beyond reasonable doubt, who destroyed those mosques. The Chamber is not satisfied that the evidence presented by the Prosecution with respect to Bijeljina is sufficient to allow for an inference to be drawn that Serb Forces destroyed these three mosques.

(H) Movement of the population from Bijeljina

The Chamber notes that Davidović does not identify who destroyed the mosque and his evidence does not appear to be linked to the specific mosques charged in the Indictment. In the Accused's submission in light of the presence of paramilitaries and the chaos in the municipality there is no evidence that the mosques in Schedule D.2 were destroyed by either the local authorities or the VRS. contributed to the fear among the Bosnian Muslim population.²¹⁵⁸ Mauzer in an interview stated that the Bosnian Muslims who had fled Bijeljina “will not come back and I would advise them not to”.²¹⁵⁹

670. By August 1992, there were approximately 17,000 Bosnian Muslims who remained in Bijeljina and 12,000 in Janja.²¹⁶⁰ Davidović testified that he was present when five days after his arrival in Bijeljina a plan was discussed “for the ethnic cleansing” of Bosnian Muslims who remained in municipalities, including Bijeljina and Zvornik.²¹⁶¹ Davidović testified that this plan was discussed by Mauzer, other members of the SDS, and the Bijeljina Crisis Staff and he informed Mićo Stanišić about the plan.²¹⁶² According to Davidović, the plan consisted of three phases. In the first phase, scheduled to start in September or October 1992, there would be a division of the city and the creation of an atmosphere of fear to convince the Bosnian Muslims to leave.²¹⁶³ In the second phase, Bosnian Muslims who refused to respond to the call for mobilisation would be fired from their positions, and would have their services cut and would be required to report for work obligation including on the frontlines.²¹⁶⁴ In the third phase, wealthy and intellectual Bosnian Muslims were to be targeted for humiliation by assigning them to menial tasks such as sweeping the streets.²¹⁶⁵

671. Having reviewed the evidence, the Chamber finds that this three phase plan existed and was discussed by Bosnian Serb authorities in Bijeljina and in accordance with this plan, Duško Malović’s special police unit, following the lead of Drago Vuković who was a member of the received reports of “ethnic cleansing” in Eastern Bosnia from late March through April 1992 which mentioned the involvement of the JNA in providing perimeter security while paramilitaries would enter settlements “commit demonstration killings and rapes as examples to villages that they would meet the same fate unless they left the area”).

The Chamber observes that Davidović in a prior interview did deny specific knowledge about the killing of Bosnian Muslim families, but contrary to the Accused’s submission this does not undermine his evidence with respect to informing Mićo Stanišić about the plan to remove the Bosnian Muslim population from Bijeljina. See Defence Final Brief, para. 1116; Milorad Davidović, T. 15589 (29 June 2011); D1407 (Official note of BiH’s Prosecutor’s Office in Sarajevo, 14 January 2008), p. 2.

Bijeljina Crisis Staff, instilled fear in the Bosnian Muslims who remained in Bijeljina by September 1992.²¹⁶⁶ The Chamber also finds that in accordance with the second and third phase of the plan Bosnian Muslims, including prominent Muslims who did not comply with demands for mobilisation or work obligation, were sent to Batković camp or expelled from the municipality.²¹⁶⁷ The police knew about this and condoned it and did nothing to prevent people from being taken to Batković camp or to prevent expulsions.²¹⁶⁸ The simultaneous execution of the three phases of this SDS operation caused large numbers of Bosnian Muslims to flee Bijeljina out of fear.²¹⁶⁹

672. The Bijeljina SDS also compiled a list of names of Bosnian Muslims to be expelled, including the wealthy, which was done with the help of Mauzer.²¹⁷⁰ Dragomir Ljubojević, the President of the Municipal Assembly and SDS leader, was responsible for drawing up the lists and co-ordinating the expulsions.²¹⁷¹ Aided by Mauzer's unit, Vojkan Đurković who was an SDS field

Defence witnesses disputed Adjudicated Fact 2264 and suggested that the SDS did not have such a plan nor had they heard of these things occurring in the municipality and that any problems Bosnian Muslims faced did not come from the authorities in Bijeljina which treated all citizens equally: D3133 (Witness statement of Cvijetin Simić dated 16 March 2013), para. 42; D3089 (Witness statement of Milivoje Kićanović dated 3 March 2013), para. 27; D3137 (Witness statement of Svetozar Mihajlović dated 17 March 2013), para. 21; D3141 (Witness statement of Dušan Spasojević dated 18 March 2013), para. 25. The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber concluded that the evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by insincerity, evasiveness, the withholding of information, contradictions, and bias.

Ljubojević disputed his involvement and denied that he ever planned or expelled Bosnian Muslims. Ljubojević also testified that he never received orders from the SDS leadership to expel non-Serbs from the municipality. He also testified that it was not in his zone of responsibility and that he was not present in the municipality because he was on sick leave. D3144 (Witness statement of Dragomir Ljubojević dated 18 March 2013), para. 11. However, the Chamber is not convinced that this evidence is reliable and finds that Ljubojević had a clear interest in distancing himself from the events in question. The Chamber noted that the witness was evasive in his testimony in this regard, which was marked by insincerity. His testimony is also contradicted by direct evidence that he was seen twice advocating the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims from Bijeljina. [REDACTED].

operative in Bijeljina as well as one of Arkan's men,²¹⁷² paid visits to those on the list in order to extort property from them.²¹⁷³ Đurković promised to take some Bosnian Muslims across the Drina for a fee while others who remained were "subjected to threats and intimidation."²¹⁷⁴ In some cases the residents were given ten-minutes to leave after which they were loaded onto trucks.²¹⁷⁵

673. Some Bosnian Muslims initially paid to be able to stay in Bijeljina.²¹⁷⁶ From the beginning of April 1992 until the end of the war, Ješurić, along with his counterpart in the Serbian MUP Puzović, arranged for the daily transport of Bosnian Muslims through Serbia to a third country, and those Bosnian Muslims who wanted to leave had to pay "exorbitant fees" to obtain the necessary travel documentation.²¹⁷⁷ Others were detained immediately, stripped of their valuables, and transferred to "no-man's land" between the warring factions, where they remained, sometimes for days, before being able to cross into Muslim-controlled territory.²¹⁷⁸

674. According to Defence witnesses, (i) there was no organised campaign for the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims from Bijeljina by the local authorities; (ii) Bosnian Muslims were not expelled and they voluntarily left combat areas and areas where Bosnian Muslims were no longer a majority;

However, the Chamber does not find that it can rely on this evidence in the absence of further corroboration given that Davidović in cross-examination acknowledged that Đurković was a person who liked to boast and he could not say how much truth there was in what he was saying and whether it was bragging or a lie. Milorad Davidović, T. 15728–15730 (30 June 2011). Đurković was also known as Puškar. Živan Filipović, T. 35799 (21 March 2013); Milivoje Kićanović, T. 34900 (6 March 2013).

(iii) Bosnian Muslims who wanted to stay, could do so and worked normally throughout the war; (iv) Bosnian Muslims requested to leave the municipality because of a number of factors, including the increasing number of Bosnian Serb refugees in the municipality and the increasing ethnic polarisation; (v) there was no list of Bosnian Muslim names identified for expulsion; (vi) Đurković was never a member of the SDS and while he took Bosnian Muslims to the demarcation line, he simply helped them to leave the territory upon their request; (vii) Đurković did not have a large unit of armed men that would be able to forcibly expel such a large group of Bosnian Muslims; and (viii) the authorities facilitated the voluntary departure of Bosnian Muslims, calling for measures to be taken against groups that were trying to disturb relations and pressure Bosnian Muslims to leave the municipality.²¹⁷⁹ However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber noted that this evidence was based to a large extent on the witnesses' own assumptions and speculation and that the evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by substantial contradictions and evasiveness. The Chamber also noted that this is contrary to the credible evidence which the Chamber received with respect to the involvement of Bosnian Serb authorities in the expulsion of the Bosnian Muslim population.²¹⁸⁰

675. A private agency staffed by the MUP but not formally part of the MUP was established to “expel non-Serbs and to confiscate their property”.²¹⁸¹ Many Bosnian Muslims were required to sign a statement which left all their property to the agency which subsequently put Serb refugees into these houses.²¹⁸² Abandoned Bosnian Muslim houses were looted at night by village guards who were under the control of the SDS Main Board in Bijeljina after which the property was taken to Serbia and the houses allocated to Serbs.²¹⁸³

Dragomir Ljubojević, T. 35906, 35917–35918 (22 March 2013). The Chamber does not find evidence that abandoned Bosnian Serb homes were also used for the accommodation of refugees undermines the evidence about the way in which Bosnian Muslims were forced to sign over their property. The Chamber also noted that Ljubojević showed signs of insincerity and evasiveness when questioned about the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims from Bijeljina.

676. Đurković was arrested after he expelled a Bosnian Muslim who was on good terms with senior SDS members who had established a military unit of Bosnian Muslims in the VRS.²¹⁸⁴ However, these proceedings were stopped and Đurković was released when he provided documents which suggested that he was authorised and had orders to expel Bosnian Muslim residents from Bijeljina.²¹⁸⁵ In July 1995, there was a request by the Bijeljina SJB to commence proceedings against Đurković for having expelled Bosnian Muslims without the knowledge of municipal authorities.²¹⁸⁶ However, the Chamber notes that this request relates to one specific incident in July 1995, and the evidence is equivocal as to whether or not these proceedings were concluded or whether Đurković was released.²¹⁸⁷ Filipović testified that Đurković was acquitted in BiH for forcibly expelling Bosnian Muslims.²¹⁸⁸ The evidence led, however, does not provide any detail about when these proceedings were concluded; further, the evidence does not reveal whether the proceedings related to a specific incident or time frame. The Chamber finds the evidence led on this issue to be inconclusive and lacking detail and does not consider that it establishes, as the Accused submits, that the accusations against Đurković were false.²¹⁸⁹

677. On 9 September 1992, the Bosnian Serb Assembly in Bijeljina issued a declaration inviting all citizens who had left their homes to return and assured citizens of “other nationalities” that their rights would be recognised and that all who were members of the “enemy forces” but who had not committed crimes against the Serb people would not be criminally prosecuted.²¹⁹⁰ While some Bosnian Muslims did return to Bijeljina,²¹⁹¹ even by May 1993 the number of Bosnian Muslims who were present in Bijeljina was limited²¹⁹² and by September 1993, the expulsion of the remaining Bosnian Muslims by Đurković and men under his command intensified.²¹⁹³ The same process of expulsions of Bosnian Muslims continued into August and September 1994.²¹⁹⁴

678. The systematic expulsion of Bosnian Muslims continued until the signing of the Dayton Accords with only 500 to 1,000 Bosnian Muslims remaining in Bijeljina by the time the Dayton Accords were signed.²¹⁹⁵ This resulted in Bijeljina effectively being turned into an “ethnically Serb town”.²¹⁹⁶

Ljubojević disputed the accuracy of this ICRC document. Dragomir Ljubojević, T. 35912 (22 March 2013). The Chamber does not find Ljubojević’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. The witness failed to explain why he considered the document to be inaccurate and simply stated that he was not aware of these incidents or the pattern of expulsions. The Chamber also noted that the witness’s evidence was marked by evasiveness and a lack of forthrightness in this regard.

Mihajlović testified that the Bosnian Serb leadership in Bijeljina never received instructions from the republican organs for the movement of non-Serbs from Bijeljina and that no such orders were issued to staff at the municipality level: D3137 (Witness statement of Svetozar Mihajlović dated 17 March 2013), para. 13. The Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber observed that the witness had an interest in distancing himself from alleged crimes in Bijeljina and that his evidence was marked by contradictions. Ljubojević also testified that by 1995 there were approximately 10,000 Bosnian Muslims who remained in the municipality and that he was not aware of the pattern of expulsions. Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.²¹⁹⁷ Under Count 1, the Prosecution further alleges that in certain municipalities, including Bratunac, this persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.²¹⁹⁸

681. Acts alleged to have been committed in Bratunac by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings during and after the take-over;²¹⁹⁹ killings related to detention facilities;²²⁰⁰ and killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.²²⁰¹ The Prosecution characterises these acts as killing, an underlying act of genocide, under Count 1; persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.²²⁰²

682. Other acts alleged to have been committed in Bratunac by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as well as the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution under Count 3.²²⁰³ In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that in scheduled detention facilities in Bratunac, thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel or inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, and beatings by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs; the Prosecution characterises this inhumane treatment as causing serious bodily or mental harm to Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, an underlying act of genocide.²²⁰⁴ In addition, under Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were detained under conditions of life calculated to bring about physical destruction, namely through cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, inhumane living conditions, and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.²²⁰⁵

683. Under Count 3, other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Bratunac by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs, include (i) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;²²⁰⁶ (ii) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;²²⁰⁷ (iii) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over of Bratunac, during arrests and detention and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;²²⁰⁸ (iv) the wanton destruction of private property, including homes and business premises, and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites;²²⁰⁹ and (v) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.²²¹⁰

President of the Executive Board was a Bosnian Serb and there was equal representation between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims on the Executive Board.²²²⁴ Senad Hodžić was appointed as head of the police in late 1991 and Džemo Hodžić was the Bosnian Muslim commander of the TO staff.²²²⁵ Over time, there were disagreements between the SDS and SDA regarding those who were recommended for certain posts.²²²⁶

688. From 1991, there was growing Bosnian Serb nationalist sentiment with increasing intimidation of Bosnian Muslims.²²²⁷ SDS members wrote slogans on street and traffic signs as well as on public and private property, which were derogatory towards Bosnian Muslims, including messages to the effect: “Muslims, Balijas, Turks move out, you’re going to be slaughtered”, “there is no Bosnia any more”.²²²⁸ Other slogans included the names of Slobodan Milošević, the Accused, “Chetnik” commanders from the Second World War and phrases such as: “This is Serbia, Greater Serbia”.²²²⁹ These developments coincided with SDS representatives stating that co-existence was not possible and that Bratunac was a “Serb municipality”.²²³⁰

689. There was also an increase in Bosnian Muslim rhetoric that Serbs should go to Serbia and that BiH belonged to the Muslims, which led to many Bosnian Serbs moving from Bratunac to Serbia.²²³¹ Tensions increased further when (i) there were attacks against Bosnian Serb leaders²²³² and SDS members; (ii) Bosnian Muslims boycotted the JNA mobilisation but started going to

At a meeting of the SDS Municipal Board of Bratunac in February 1991, Deronjić and others were chosen to conduct negotiations with the SDA.²²³⁵ At another meeting of the SDS Municipal Board on 12 April 1991, it was agreed that instructions would be requested from the SDS headquarters “regarding the referendum, our behaviour and functioning” and that the regional redrawing of municipal borders which was occurring in Banja Luka was “fully supported, and those questions should be posed in our areas as well”.²²³⁶ It was also noted that the Presidency of Bratunac should meet with the Accused urgently with respect to the questions raised.²²³⁷

691. In that period, there was increasing intimidation of Bosnian Muslim professionals and incidents where prominent Bosnian Muslim men were beaten.²²³⁸ Road-blocks were erected by Bosnian Serbs.²²³⁹ In the SJB there was greater distrust between Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb police officers.²²⁴⁰ Dževad Gušić, the President of the SDA in Bratunac, was subjected to intimidation and was shot at on a number of occasions while leaving his home.²²⁴¹ There was also shooting at night from Bosnian Serb villages at Bosnian Muslim villages and some Bosnian Muslims were taken from their homes and killed.²²⁴² There were also increasing confrontations and division between ethnic groups in the work place.²²⁴³

The Chamber rejects Đukanović’s evidence that, except for one order in relation to a humanitarian convoy from the Accused, there was practically no communication between Bratunac and Pale (D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), para. 51; Rodoljub Đukanović, T. 36147, 36169–36170, 36172–36173, 36178, 36179, 36191–36192, 36202, 36209–36210 (27 March 2013). Inter-ethnic relations deteriorated further in late August 1991, following failed attempts by SDS supporters, with the help of a JNA unit and members of the Bosnian Serb police, to demand military documentation from the Municipal Secretariat to identify the names of men who could be mobilised.²²⁴⁴ Their attempts to secure these military records were blocked by a large crowd of SDA supporters and Bosnian Muslim members of the police.²²⁴⁵ Following this incident there were increased inter-ethnic clashes in Bratunac,²²⁴⁶ which disrupted the coalition government.²²⁴⁷ would be an investigation.²²⁵⁰ However, Koljević subsequently went to the site and reassured Bosnian Serbs who had gathered there that the investigation would not take place; the Accused himself in a radio broadcast guaranteed that there would be no investigation.²²⁵¹ The increased tension contributed to a feeling of insecurity, which prompted both ethnic groups to start performing night guard duty around their homes.²²⁵²

694. The SDS issued an ultimatum before the Municipal Assembly was due to be convened; this insisted on a 50:50 power sharing arrangement even though they were in the minority.²²⁵³ The SDA accepted this ultimatum.²²⁵⁴

(1) Militarisation of Bratunac

695. Before the multi-party elections, the JNA had withdrawn the local TO weapons and placed them under their control.²²⁵⁵ In late August 1991, SDS officials, including Deronjić, and the JNA were involved in training and arming local Bosnian Serbs with these weapons.²²⁵⁶ At the end of 1991 and early into 1992, JNA military formations moved closer to Bratunac, and there was an increasing movement of military vehicles and personnel in the surrounding villages and hills.²²⁵⁷

²²⁵⁴ P3196 (Witness statement of Dževad Gušić undated), para. 10. Prior the multi-party elections, the SDS was able to lobby the deputies of the Municipal Assembly to change the statute of the Assembly to require a two-third majority for decisions which effectively prevented the SDA, after the elections, from passing any decisions without support from the SDS. Defence witnesses testified that Bosnian Serbs only began to buy weapons in response to the massive scale arming of the Bosnian Muslim population and also denied their own involvement in the distribution of weapons. D3126 (Witness statement of Jovan Nikolić dated 10 March 2013), para. 32; D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), paras. 24, 54; Rodoljub Đukanović, T. 36148–36149 (27 March 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber notes that the evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by extreme evasiveness, contradictions, and indicators of insincerity.

696. The SDA was also involved in the distribution of weapons to Bosnian Muslims²²⁵⁸ and a Bosnian Muslim crisis staff was established.²²⁵⁹ Bosnian Muslim villagers organised local guards.²²⁶⁰

(2) Division of municipal structures

697. In October 1991, following the Accused's declaration of a state of emergency of the SDS, an emergency meeting of the SDS Municipal Board of Bratunac was held.²²⁶¹ There, Deronjić informed those present about the SDS Main Board instructions.²²⁶² At this meeting, the SDS Crisis Staff of Bratunac was formed with Deronjić as its chief.²²⁶³ In addition, the President of the Executive Board of the Bratunac Municipal Assembly briefed the participants about preparations for regionalisation.²²⁶⁴ On 25 October 1991, the SDS Municipal Board gave authorisation to expand the SDS Crisis Staff.²²⁶⁵ The SDS Crisis Staff met on 26 October 1991 and discussed the formation of regions.²²⁶⁶

698. On 23 December 1991, the SDS Municipal Board held a meeting where the Variant A/B Instructions were presented.²²⁶⁷ Deronjić informed the members about the session of the SDS

Presidency and said that a decision had been reached to establish the SerBiH and that Variant B was envisaged for Bratunac since Bosnian Serbs were a minority in the municipality.²²⁶⁸ In accordance with these instructions, a decision was made to form the Bratunac Crisis Staff which would start working immediately.²²⁶⁹ The Bratunac Crisis Staff included the Commander of Police, representatives of the military, Ministry of Defence and “distinguished civilians”.²²⁷⁰ In addition to the Bratunac Crisis Staff, crisis staffs were also formed at the local commune level and they informed the Bratunac Crisis Staff about issues at the local level.²²⁷¹

699. On 30 December 1991, the first session of the Serbian Municipal Assembly of Bratunac was held, Ljubisav Simić was appointed as President of the Assembly, and Radoljub Đukanović was appointed as Chairman of the Executive Board.²²⁷² At this session a proposal to join the region of Birač was adopted and there was discussion about “regionalisation”.²²⁷³ Bratunac became part of the SAO Birač and Rodoljub Đukanović was elected to the Executive Council of the SAO.²²⁷⁴

700. At a meeting of the SDS Municipal Board on 22 January 1992, Deronjić stated that the policies pursued and advocated by Milošević, the Accused and Babić had “met with failure after failure” and that the objective of the SDS of preserving the SFRY was history.²²⁷⁵ At this same Defence witnesses testified that they were not aware of any meeting in Bratunac where the Variant A/B Instructions were discussed and the Bosnian Serb authorities resolved all problems on their own. Further, with respect to Simić, the Chamber notes that his evidence is qualified, given that he simply states that he did not know about such a meeting. In addition, Simić’s evidence was marked by contradictions and inconsistencies.

meeting, Deronjić demanded to meet with the Accused and Koljević in Bratunac and Simić alerted that if necessary the Bratunac leadership “will refuse obedience even to Sarajevo”.²²⁷⁶

701. On 24 February 1992, the SDS Municipal Board discussed the implementation in Bratunac of the second level of the Variant A/B Instructions.²²⁷⁷ At this meeting, it was noted that since the first phase of the instructions had been implemented, the second phase, which was a state of emergency, would be activated.²²⁷⁸ Deronjić read the instructions at the meeting and said that they imposed a duty to “act accordingly”. These instructions included creating a municipal Executive Board and forming a reserve structure of the Bosnian Serb police.²²⁷⁹ In addition local boards were tasked with reporting on measures taken with respect to safety and with the collection and storage of food in Bosnian Serb areas.²²⁸⁰ Deronjić also instructed that guard duties should be set-up and citizens should co-operate with the Bratunac Crisis Staff.²²⁸¹

702. At the 24 February 1992 meeting of the SDS Municipal Board, Branko Obrenović commented that he feared that the war would find them unprepared and that they needed to “activate the Crisis staffs that would take care of everything” and a war plan was needed.²²⁸² Deronjić agreed with this proposal.²²⁸³ It was also reported that contact with the army had been established and there was discussion about the formation of military units and training of individuals.²²⁸⁴

703. On 28 February 1992, the Serbian Municipal Assembly of Bratunac adopted the proposal to appoint one person to take on the role of national defence secretary and chief of the SJB.²²⁸⁵ At this meeting, Deronjić stressed the importance of setting up a Bosnian Serb police.²²⁸⁶

The Chamber refers to para. 698, where it found that the Bratunac Crisis Staff had already been established in December 1991. The Chamber finds that this reference in February 1992 relates to the activation of that crisis staff for the purposes of war. In accordance with the second phase of the Variant A/B Instructions, the Crisis Staff was given the responsibility for “organisation of defence”. 704. At a meeting with SDA representatives, Deronjić stated that “Serbs need to keep their own Serbdom, their own history, their own tradition, their own culture” and in order to do that they should live separately from the Bosnian Muslim people.²²⁸⁷ Deronjić explained “[w]e in the SDS have plans that were prepared. I even have certain instructions how to act with regard to these questions”.²²⁸⁸ After this, a meeting was held which was attended by directors of major companies, and Deronjić informed them that the Bosnian Serbs should live separately, that there were plans, and that Bratunac and BiH should be divided.²²⁸⁹

705. At the beginning of April 1992, in a meeting between SDS and SDA representatives, Deronjić reiterated that the police should be divided and that separate Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb police units should be formed.²²⁹⁰ When the SDA representatives opposed the idea as it would lead to greater tensions, Deronjić threatened that if they did not comply “Muslims would disappear”.²²⁹¹

706. Deronjić said that if the Bosnian Muslim representatives agreed to the division, it “would be the best way for the Muslims to prevent violence from breaking out”.²²⁹² The SDS representatives also promised that if the police was split, the JNA would remove weapons from the surrounding hills and the town and non-Serbs would be protected.²²⁹³

²²⁸⁹ Dževad Gušić, T. 17791 (24 August 2011). Gušić stated that when he spoke to an SDA official about the division of BiH, the SDA official said that the Accused had told him “we’ll have to split up. There’s no other way out” and the Accused insisted on this division even when he was told that Bosnian Serbs, Bosnian Muslims, and Bosnian Croats lived together in the same buildings. P3196 (Witness statement of Dževad Gušić undated), paras. 11–12. However, Gušić clarified that the SDA official later spoke to him and was not sure whether he had spoken to the Accused or to another official. Dževad Gušić, T. 17778–17779, 17783–17785, 17810 (24 August 2011). Given this qualification, and the hearsay nature of the evidence, the Chamber does not consider that it can rely on it solely, in the absence of further corroboration, to determine whether or not it was the Accused who made such a statement. Simić stated that the proposed division of the municipality contributed to easing tensions and improved security. D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), paras. 32–33. The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2268 as to why it does not consider Simić’s evidence as to the effect of the proposed division of the municipality to be reliable.

Gušić further testified that Deronjić said that the Accused himself had strongly pressured him to have the police in Bratunac divided and would be pleased if the division was agreed. However, the Chamber in the absence of further corroboration does not rely on this evidence with respect to the involvement of the Accused. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber had regard to evidence that while Deronjić was very close to the Accused, he often used the Accused’s name in negotiations “as a lever” to get agreement for his demands. 707. The SDA representatives initially refused to divide the police, following which the situation in Bratunac deteriorated even further.²²⁹⁴ However, on 8 April 1992, after Deronjić had guaranteed that there would be peace and security in Bratunac, the SDA agreed to the split.²²⁹⁵ This agreement also provided for equal numbers of Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim policemen and that both SJBs should guarantee the peace and safety of all citizens.²²⁹⁶ The decision on the separation of the police was adopted at a meeting of the Municipal Assembly.²²⁹⁷

708. The Bosnian Serb police left the police building and moved into the primary school next to the municipality building while the Bosnian Muslim police remained in the police station.²²⁹⁸ Following this separation, Milutin Milošević who had been working in Serbia was appointed as head of the Bosnian Serb police²²⁹⁹ and it was agreed that joint patrols would operate in Bratunac town while separate patrols would be carried out in Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim villages.²³⁰⁰

709. After the Bosnian Serbs established their own police force, they also set up additional barricades and check-points, and carried out attacks with firearms and explosives; two coffee bars, one owned by a Bosnian Muslim and another by a Bosnian Croat were blown up.²³⁰¹ Bosnian Muslims also established check-points around their villages.²³⁰²

710. Bosnian Serbs also asked for the division of Bratunac into two municipalities but the SDA representatives did not agree to this proposal.²³⁰³ It was practically impossible to divide the territory of the municipality given the distribution of Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim villages and of mixed villages, which were neighbouring each other.²³⁰⁴ The division of the police and of businesses, as well as the attempt to divide the municipality in general increased tensions between the communities.²³⁰⁵

(C) Take-over of Bratunac

711. There was increasing fear that Bratunac would be taken over by Serb Forces after news was received about what had happened in Bijeljina and Zvornik.²³⁰⁶ Given the increasing tensions in Bratunac, in April 1992 a joint meeting was organised by the SDA and SDS leadership with prominent citizens of Bratunac to discuss the political and security situation in the municipality.²³⁰⁷ Deronjić addressed those who attended this meeting and told them: “[i]f it has to be that conflicts break out all over Bosnia then we will do our best to ensure that Bratunac is the last place where this will happen”.²³⁰⁸ During this meeting the Bosnian Serb representatives were asked about why they “were rushing into war”, why the JNA was training “Serbian civilians” in the handling of weapons and why heavy artillery had been deployed and pointed at Bratunac.²³⁰⁹ The Bosnian Serb representatives gave vague responses and assured them that there was no need to worry.²³¹⁰ After this meeting it was decided that a joint-declaration would be issued by SDS and SDA representatives on the “peaceful co-existence” of all citizens in Bratunac in order to reassure the population.²³¹¹

712. The Bratunac Crisis Staff adopted a decision which proclaimed a state of emergency and provided that it would temporarily take over the competencies of the organs of the Assembly and the Executive Board, which would cease to operate.²³¹² On 13 April 1992, on the basis of the state of emergency,²³¹³ the Bratunac Crisis Staff decided that the Bratunac TO and the SJB would take over the defence of the Serb municipality of Bratunac.²³¹⁴

713. On 16 April 1992, following an order by the Presidency of the SerBiH, the Bratunac Crisis Staff issued an order for general mobilisation and also required military conscripts assigned to Bratunac TO units to immediately respond to the mobilisation.²³¹⁵ Only the Bosnian Serb population was mobilised and the Bosnian Muslim population did not receive the call-up papers.²³¹⁶

714. On or about 17 April 1992, Serb Forces entered the town of Bratunac without facing any resistance from Bosnian Muslims and formed a guard around the Hotel Fontana.²³¹⁷ The Serb Forces consisted of JNA troops from the Novi Sad and Užice Corps, TO members, and local reservists and were joined later by heavily armed paramilitary units from Serbia, including the White Eagles, Šešelj's men, and Arkan's men.²³¹⁸ Members of the SJB also provided support.²³¹⁹

In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2256 and notes that his evidence is equivocal as to who tasked the JNA with calming down the situation in the municipality. The Chamber does not find the evidence of Simić and Nikolić that the municipal authorities were not aware of, and were even shocked by the arrival of the paramilitaries to be reliable. Local Bosnian Serbs also joined the paramilitary units, including Arkan's men and the White Eagles, while others joined JNA reserve units²³²⁰

715. The Bosnian Muslim leadership in the municipality met to discuss the developments which were contrary to the assurances they had received from the SDS that no external unit would enter the municipality.²³²¹ Deronjić later informed the Bosnian Muslim leadership that some military formations had entered Bratunac and directed them to a meeting at the Hotel Fontana with the officers of the "Serbian army units".²³²²

716. At this meeting, the Bosnian Muslim representatives were told by officers, who wore JNA and camouflage uniforms, that Bratunac was a "Serbian municipality and that they had taken power, that Serbian laws would be introduced", that Bosnian Muslims could remain, and there would be no killings.²³²³ These officers warned however, that if a Bosnian Muslim "fired so much as a single bullet they would eliminate the whole of his family".²³²⁴ They told the Bosnian Muslim representatives to draw up a list of Bosnian Muslims in the municipality and that they would "settle accounts with them".²³²⁵ As the Bosnian Muslims left this meeting, they saw 40 to 50 uniformed local Bosnian Serbs being issued with weapons.²³²⁶ A deadline was also given for the surrender of weapons,²³²⁷ and non-Serbs then handed over hunting rifles and some private weapons.²³²⁸

717. On 19 April 1992, the Bratunac Crisis Staff issued a decision authorising the Bratunac SJB and Bratunac TO to disarm citizens.²³²⁹ While the decision did not specify which citizens were to be disarmed,²³³⁰ in practice only Bosnian Muslims were disarmed.²³³¹ On 25 April 1992, Mićo Stanišić reported that weapons were handed over in the area of Bratunac.²³³²

718. The Bosnian Muslim representatives met again with Deronjić who tried to convince them that “everything would be all right”.²³³³ However, on the same day, Deronjić arrived with some officers at the police station, kicked the doors open and searched for weapons.²³³⁴ One soldier threatened to throw a grenade if the Bosnian Muslim representatives did not obey and Gušić was ordered to compile a list of Bosnian Muslim extremists and nationalists by the next morning.²³³⁵ The police station was taken over, the members of the Bosnian Muslim police were disarmed and sent home, and the Bosnian Serb police and new civilian recruits started wearing their own uniforms with Serb insignia.²³³⁶

(D) Developments in Bratunac after take-over

719. On 17 April 1992, threatened by Serb paramilitaries and aware of the situation in other municipalities, the Bosnian Muslim leadership left Bratunac.²³³⁷ Serb soldiers looted abandoned Bosnian Muslim properties.²³³⁸

Defence witnesses testified inter alia that (i) the Bosnian Muslim police wanted to set up a new police station; (ii) the Bosnian Serb police only took over the police station after the Bosnian Muslim police had abandoned it. Rodoljub Đukanović, T. 36142 (27 March 2013); D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), paras. 36–37; D3126 (Witness statement of Jovan Nikolić dated 10 March 2013), para. 40; D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 7; D3115 (Witness statement of Branimir Tešić dated 9 March 2013), paras. 17–19, 43; D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), para. 38. Having reviewed their testimony, the Chamber does not find that their evidence with respect to the circumstances surrounding the take-over of weapons and the police building to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2248 and 2256 with respect to Đukanović and Nikolić. The Chamber further notes that the testimony of Branimir Tešić and Perić were also marked by extreme evasiveness, contradictions and indicators of bias and attempts to mislead the Chamber.

The Bosnian Muslim leaders while stopped at a check-point were provided an escort out of Bratunac. But see D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), para. 88. While Simić stated that he was not aware of any threats, this is not determinative of whether such threats were made. He did acknowledge that prominent Bosnian Muslims left after Bosnian Serb refugees from Srebrenica started arriving in the municipality. The Chamber finds however, that by July 1992, the Bosnian Muslim authorities had re-established some structures for Bratunac such as a TO, a War Presidency, and a military police and that measures were taken to establish Bosnian Muslim forces in the municipality. D4707 (Decisions of Bratunac TO Municipal Staff, 16 July 1992); D1596 (Order of ABiH General Staff, 10 July 1992), p. 1.

²³³⁸ Adjudicated Fact 2313. See also P3205 (Witness statement of KDZ605 dated 22 August 2011), paras. 33–34 (under seal). Defence witnesses testified that only paramilitaries were involved in looting and both Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim properties were looted and that the police prevented looting as much as they could. D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), para. 60; D3115 (Witness statement of Branimir Tešić dated 9 March 2013), para. 44; D3118 (Witness statement of Aleksandar Tešić dated 10 March 2013), para. 44. The Chamber does not find the evidence of these witnesses as to who was involved in looting, and whether the police tried to prevent looting to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 2248 and 2336 with respect to Đukanović and Branimir Tešić. Further

720. The situation in Bratunac was relatively calm between 18 and 29 April 1992. At that time, people were called back to work and allowed to move freely in the town but most of the Bosnian Muslim population had already left in that period and many did not return to work as they were too afraid.²³³⁹ The Bosnian Serb authorities also announced that Bosnian Muslims who left the area could come back, sign loyalty pledges to the new Bosnian Serb authorities in Bratunac, and be protected; however, if they did not return, “the safety of their personal property could not be guaranteed”.²³⁴⁰

721. The deadline for Bosnian Muslims to sign documents pledging their loyalty to the Serb Municipality of Bratunac was 29 April 1992.²³⁴¹ Most Bosnian Muslims had left Bratunac by this date.²³⁴² Most of those who remained signed these documents because they were afraid and felt they had no choice.²³⁴³ After this deadline had passed, Bosnian Muslim homes continued to be searched, their property stolen and more Bosnian Muslims were killed.²³⁴⁴

722. One or two days after the remaining Bosnian Muslim population had signed these loyalty oaths, announcements were made with the use of loudspeakers on military vehicles that all men were to assemble in town.²³⁴⁵ A JNA officer accompanied by a dozen soldiers told the Bosnian Muslims that all weapons had to be surrendered in order for their freedom and safety to be guaranteed.²³⁴⁶

The Chamber also notes that the evidence that both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs left Bratunac is not inconsistent with Adjudicated Fact 2312. 723. After the Serb Forces arrived in Bratunac, Bosnian Muslims in factories and municipal bodies were fired from their jobs and all key positions in the local government were taken over by Bosnian Serbs.²³⁴⁷ At the 17th session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly on 26 July 1992, Rajko Dukić stated that he hoped they would not be judged for having expelled all Muslim judges from the municipalities of Vlasenica, Bratunac, and Zvornik.²³⁴⁸ Serb Forces began patrolling Bratunac and took away the most prominent Bosnian Muslims, some of whom were detained at the Vuk Karadžić School.²³⁴⁹

724. On or around the night of 9 May 1992, there was shooting mostly from the direction of Bratunac towards Srebrenica and the village of Mihaljevići, which was above the Drina on the border with Serbia, was burnt.²³⁵⁰ Following this incident, a number of Bosnian Serb families moved to Serbia.²³⁵¹ Soldiers and paramilitaries were everywhere in Bratunac and Arkan's men were stationed at the Jasen hotel.²³⁵²

725. A large number of Bosnian Serb refugees from Srebrenica arrived in Bratunac in May 1992 and entered abandoned Bosnian Muslim homes.²³⁵³

726. On 17 June 1992, the appointment of members of the War Commission of Bratunac was confirmed by the Accused.²³⁵⁴ At the 43rd Session of the Bosnian Serb Government on 29 July 1992 it was reported that the security and political situation in Bratunac and Foča was "extremely complex" and that "all necessary steps should be taken to prevent conflict and protect the population".²³⁵⁵

D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), para. 47. While the Chamber finds that the arrival of these refugees created difficulties in the municipality, it does not consider that Simić's evidence that the civilian authorities were not functional to be reliable. 727. However, by November 1992, at a meeting attended by Bosnian Serb leaders, including Branko Đerić and Bogdan Subotić, it was reported that the entire territory of Bratunac was under the control of Bosnian Muslim forces.²³⁵⁶

(E) Attacks on surrounding villages

728. In the days following the take-over of Bratunac town, Bosnian Serb paramilitary units went to the Bosnian Muslim villages surrounding Bratunac starting from the villages closest to the town and moving outwards.²³⁵⁷ The JNA and Bratunac TO were involved in disarming Bosnian Muslim villagers throughout Bratunac municipality.²³⁵⁸ During these disarming operations paramilitaries “harassed locals and pillaged abandoned Muslim homes”.²³⁵⁹ They entered the villages and asked for weapons to be handed over. The villages were then attacked and set on fire while the villagers were sent to the Bratunac Football Stadium.²³⁶⁰ Many villagers were killed during these attacks.²³⁶¹

729. In the village of Voljevci, barricades were set up.²³⁶² Prominent and educated people from the village were taken away and people were killed.²³⁶³ The population surrendered weapons in compliance with the ultimatum issued.²³⁶⁴ In May 1992, individuals who introduced themselves as the representatives of the “Serb people” came to Voljevci and told the population that they could no longer live in the village; they had to leave, go to the local commune in Pobrđe; and sign a statement to the effect that they were leaving their homes and property voluntarily and would never return there again.²³⁶⁵ The population was told they would be evacuated by bus towards Kladanj for their safety and security.²³⁶⁶ Some Bosnian Muslims decided not to sign the papers, and left the village for Srebrenica.²³⁶⁷

730. On 10 May 1992, Serb Forces attacked the Bosnian Muslim villages of Suha and Mihaljevići, near the town of Bratunac.²³⁶⁸ The village of Mihaljevići was set ablaze.²³⁶⁹

731. The village of Krasanpolje was also attacked on 10 May 1992.²³⁷⁰ Houses were burnt, there was shooting, and a number of people were killed.²³⁷¹ After the attack on Krasanpolje, Bosnian Muslims in the village of Vitkovići were told that it would be safer for them to flee to the woods, which they did.²³⁷² The villagers returned to Vitkovići after they were told the situation had calmed down.²³⁷³ The next day, the Bosnian Serb police patrolled Vitkovići to ensure the population remained in the village.²³⁷⁴ Armed local Bosnian Serbs dressed in camouflage uniforms surrounded the village.²³⁷⁵ The Novi Sad Corps entered Vitkovići in search of weapons.²³⁷⁶ On 17 May 1992, Serb Forces shelled the Muslim settlement of Konjević Polje, near Hrnčići, and attacked it on 27 May.²³⁷⁷

Soldiers then started looting the houses and cattle.²³⁸⁰

(1) Scheduled Incident A.3.1

733. The Prosecution alleges that at least 12 people were killed in the village of Hranča between 3 and 9 May 1992.

734. Hranča is a village located to the west of Bratunac.²³⁸¹ The Chamber took judicial notice that on 3 May 1992, members of the Bratunac TO surrounded the Muslim village of Hranča and torched 43 houses.²³⁸² Over the following week, they attacked and arrested residents of Hranča. They captured nine villagers, and killed four of them, including a six year old girl.²³⁸³

735. The Chamber also took judicial notice that on 9 May 1992, members of the Bratunac TO shot eight Muslims.²³⁸⁴ However, with respect to the killing of these eight victims, the Chamber is not satisfied that it has sufficient evidence pertaining to their status and the circumstances in which they were shot and killed to make a finding with respect to this incident.

²³⁸⁴ Adjudicated Fact 2318. The Chamber notes that this figure corresponds to the number of individuals identified by Mašović who were reported to have gone missing on 9 May 1992 from Hranča and exhumed from a mass grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 2–5. Defence witnesses testified that there was a “firefight” following a Bosnian Muslim attack on a JNA column and also testified about those involved in this incident. D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), para. 39; Rodoljub Đukanović, T. 36142 (27 March 2013); D3126 (Witness statement of Jovan Nikolić dated 10 March 2013), para. 43; D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 10; D3174 (Witness statement of Vujadin Stević dated 23 March 2013), para. 13; D3118 (Witness statement of Aleksandar Tešić dated 10 March 2013), paras. 20, 23, 46; D3115 (Witness statement of Branimir Tešić dated 9 March 2013), paras. 22–23; D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), para. 56. See also D3690 (Witness statement of Nedo Nikolić dated 8 June 2013), paras. 8, 11; D1644 (Video footage of attack on JNA troops). Having reviewed this evidence, the Chamber does not consider the evidence of these witnesses in this regard to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 2248, 2256, 2268, 2336, 2338, and 2342 and also notes that their evidence is to a great extent based on hearsay information. See also Mušan Talović, T. 17660–17661 (22 August 2011) (denying any knowledge of an attack on a JNA

736. A total of 14 individuals from Hranča were exhumed from mass graves.²³⁸⁵ Six of them are reported to have gone missing after 9 May 1992 and as such cannot be linked to this scheduled incident.²³⁸⁶

737. The Chamber therefore finds that at least four people were killed by Serb Forces in the village of Hranča between 3 and 9 May 1992.

(2) Scheduled Incident A.3.2

738. The Prosecution alleges that at least 65 men were killed in the village of Glogova on or about 9 May 1992.

739. The village of Glogova, which had a majority Bosnian Muslim population prior to the conflict, is located approximately 10 kilometres from Bratunac.²³⁸⁷ From 1 April 1992, members of the Bosnian Serb police walked around Glogova with loudspeakers and called on people to surrender weapons and promised their safety if they did so.²³⁸⁸ Villagers were invited to surrender their weapons to the local SDS authorities.²³⁸⁹ As Bosnian Muslim villagers surrendered their weapons, JNA soldiers from the Novi Sad Corps shot in the air with automatic weapons.²³⁹⁰ The villagers were instructed to continue their daily activities without fear but Mušan Talović was told by his employer that he would receive a phone call if he was required at work.²³⁹¹

740. On 8 May 1992, following the killing of Goran Zekić, a prominent SDS member and Judge,²³⁹² in an ambush by Bosnian Muslims, the Bratunac Crisis Staff met and planned an attack column). In any event, the Chamber does not consider that the occurrence of an attack against a JNA column is of much significance.

²³⁸⁵ P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 2–5.

²³⁸⁶ The Chamber notes that two other individuals referred to by the Prosecution as victims of Scheduled Incident A.3.1 were reported as having gone missing on 9 May 1992 from locations other than Hranča and therefore cannot be linked to the scheduled incident. See Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G.

on the village of Glogova the following morning.²³⁹³ Deronjić told the Bratunac Crisis Staff that the village of Glogova would be encircled and the Bosnian Muslims would be disarmed.²³⁹⁴

741. Milenko Katanić received call-up papers before the attack on Glogova and proceeded to the municipal building.²³⁹⁵ Deronjić informed Katanić that Goran Zekić had been “murdered” and that an operation was being prepared and that it would be launched against Glogova.²³⁹⁶ Deronjić also said that the purpose of the operation was to defend the line “so if Muslims started retreating towards Srebrenica” they would be arrested and prevented from retreating.²³⁹⁷

742. On 9 May 1992, Serb Forces, including the JNA and Bratunac TO units, surrounded Glogova; there was no armed resistance to the Serb advance because the village had already been disarmed.²³⁹⁸ Apart from the JNA and Bratunac TO units, volunteers²³⁹⁹ and armed members of the SJB were also part of this operation.²⁴⁰⁰ The stated plan was for the Novi Sad Corps to enter Glogova in APCs and disarm the population, with the TO units stationed around the village to Katanić for example testified that the decision to attack Glogova had been made before the killing of Zekić, but his death accelerated the operation. P4374 (Witness statement of Milenko Katanić dated 11 October 2011), para. 26; Milenko Katanić, T. 24455–24456 (9 February 2012). Katanić stated that he did not think that Deronjić ordered or was aware that such a large number of people would be killed in Glogova or that Deronjić considered it to be a legitimate military target. The Chamber finds this to be speculative opinion and of limited weight. See also D3118 (Witness statement of Aleksandar Tešić dated 10 March 2013), para. 22.

prevent anyone from trying to escape with weapons.²⁴⁰¹ At sunrise, Serb Forces entered the village. There was then shooting and houses were set on fire.²⁴⁰²

743. Mušan Talović's cousin came to his house and told him that the hamlet of Tarat had also been attacked.²⁴⁰³ Talović's neighbours gathered at his house and 23 men decided to hide in the underbrush at a nearby creek.²⁴⁰⁴ When Meho Delić joined this group, the Bosnian Serb soldiers who were chasing him, found the hidden Bosnian Muslims and ordered them out at gun-point.²⁴⁰⁵ The Bosnian Muslim men were ordered to put their hands on their heads and were searched for weapons. Talović's pistol was confiscated and they were then ordered to walk to a field and line up.²⁴⁰⁶ One of the Bosnian Serb soldiers contacted their "Vojvoda", Najdan Mladenović, by radio and asked what they should do with the captured "Balijs".²⁴⁰⁷ The soldiers were instructed to take the Bosnian Muslim men to the centre of Glogova in front of the supermarket. Mladenović would then decide what to do with them.²⁴⁰⁸

744. En route, the soldiers provoked the Bosnian Muslims by saying that "this is a Serb country" and that they "should be expelled".²⁴⁰⁹ The men were lined up against the wall of the supermarket and ordered to put their hands up and stand in that position for half-an-hour.²⁴¹⁰ Many Bosnian Serb soldiers were gathered in the area near the supermarket.²⁴¹¹ These soldiers were not regular

The Chamber does not consider that Katanić's observation that he did not know whether this was part of the assignment or whether individuals set fire to homes on their own accord to be of much weight. Similarly, the Chamber places no weight on Stević's assumption that the shooting and fire indicated that Serb Forces met with resistance. The Chamber does not find Stević's evidence that he did not know anyone named Mladenović and that the Bosnian Muslims were ordered to stand against a wall for their own protection to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2342. It more specifically notes that Stević was contradicted by evidence that both he and Mladenović were members of the SDS Municipal Board. 746. Three of the Bosnian men from the group were taken away in Mladenović’s car.²⁴¹⁷ After this, Mladenović told Dragan Stević to “[e]xecute the punishment and kill them all”.²⁴¹⁸ The remaining 20 Bosnian Muslims were taken by four Bosnian Serb soldiers armed with rifles and automatic weapons and ordered to line up on the riverbank with their faces towards the river.²⁴¹⁹ This group included two boys who were 11 and 13 years old; the rest were young men.²⁴²⁰ The soldiers then started to shoot at the men.²⁴²¹ Talović and a man named Šećo Delić, though injured, were the only two men who survived this shooting.²⁴²² When the shooting started, Talović was hit, Talović testified that two of those who were taken away by car were killed on the same night. However, the Chamber does not consider that Talović’s evidence is sufficient to make a finding with respect to the killing of these two individuals.

²⁴¹⁸ P3188 (Witness statement of Mušan Talović dated 14 July 2011), paras. 31, 34. The men who were sent to Mladenović’s car were Mustafa Golić, Sejid Ibišević, and Almaz Talović. The men who were returned to the main group were Mušan Talović and Dževad Ibišević.

The men who were taken to the river were identified as Mušan Talović, Hušo Junuzović, Abid Junuzović, the son of Abid Junuzović, Redo Delić, Meho Delić, Bego Delić, Dževad Ibišević, Kemal Ibišević, Ilijaz Ibišević, Ramo Ibišević, Sabrija Ibišević, Mustafa Ibišević, Mujo Ibišević, Muharem Ibišević, Selmo Omerović, Mirzet Omerović, Šećo Delić, a man with the surname Gušić, and a man with the surname Hasibović. Mušan Talović, T. 17668 (22 August 2011). Of these names identified by Talović, 10 bodies were identified by Mašović as having been exhumed from a mass grave. he fell into the river unconscious, and was washed down the stream; when he awoke there were bodies on and around him.²⁴²³

747. As Talović and Delić returned to the village, they found 68 bodies in three piles.²⁴²⁴ In one of the piles were the bodies of the men who had been shot along with Talović and Delić. The bodies were all of people from Glogova, 24 of whom Talović could identify by name, and included two women.²⁴²⁵ Having regard to the circumstances surrounding the attack on Glogova and the evidence about the capture and execution of villagers, the Chamber is satisfied that the bodies that Talović and Delić saw in the village were killed by Serb Forces in a similar manner. When Talović returned to his home, he saw that his house had been burnt down and found approximately 100 women and children gathered in his yard.²⁴²⁶ The survivors split in two groups and left the village with one group heading in the direction of Konjević Polje while the other group headed to Srebrenica.²⁴²⁷ Bosnian Serbs were involved in the collection and movement of the bodies with tractors.²⁴²⁸

748. The Chamber took judicial notice that approximately 65 inhabitants of Glogova were killed during the operation and that most of the buildings in the village were then burned.²⁴²⁹ The

The witness confirmed that the name Selmo Omerović appears twice, once on this list and once on the previous list referred to in fn. 2419 because they were two different people. Mušan Talović, T. 17642 (22 August 2011). Of these names identified by Talović, nine were identified by Mašović as having been exhumed from individual or mass graves. ²⁴²⁹ See Adjudicated Fact 2320. Defence witnesses testified inter alia (i) that during the fighting in Glogova there was mayhem as paramilitary units also joined and that 25 people of military age were killed by volunteers who sought revenge; (ii) the Bratunac Crisis Staff intended to disarm and not kill civilians; (iii) some people were killed during the operation to disarm Bosnian Muslim “extremists”; and (iv) Serb Forces were under strict orders not to kill anyone unless attacked. D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), paras. 42, 48, 51; D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 11; D3126 (Witness statement of Jovan Nikolić dated 10 March 2013), para. 46. See also D3690 (Witness statement of Neđo Nikolić dated 8 June 2013), paras. 9–10; D3115 (Witness statement of Branimir Tešić dated 9 March 2013), para. 25; Branimir Tešić, T. 35259 (12 March 2013); D3174 (Witness statement of Vujadin Stević dated 23 March 2013), para. 15. Having reviewed this evidence, the Chamber does not find the testimony of the relevant witnesses to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 2248, 2256, 2336, 2338, and 2342. The Chamber further notes that when challenged on villagers from Glogova who were not killed were taken into the custody of the Serb Forces and transported to the Bratunac Stadium; the able-bodied men were separated and taken to the Vuk Karadžić School while the women and children were loaded on buses and taken to Bosnian Muslim controlled areas.²⁴³⁰

749. The Chamber therefore finds that at least 65 Bosnian Muslims were killed by Serb Forces in the village of Glogova on or about 9 May 1992.

(F) Actions of paramilitaries

750. The municipal authorities faced problems with paramilitaries and volunteers who arrived in Bratunac, tried to take power, terrorised the population²⁴³¹ and did not accept the command structures or local authorities.²⁴³² In contrast, volunteers who came to the municipality and placed themselves at the disposal of the JNA or joined the Bratunac Brigade were welcomed.²⁴³³ For instance, representatives of the volunteers were also included in the War Staff of Bratunac which was proclaimed on 8 May 1992.²⁴³⁴ Đukanović and Deronjić were involved in bringing volunteers from Vukovar to Bratunac.²⁴³⁵

751. On 1 May 1992, the Bratunac Crisis Staff decided that all volunteers who did not want to place themselves under the command of the army would be expelled from Bratunac and forbade all paramilitary formations, “illegal citizens”, and other groups who illegally possessed weapons from

Simić testified that the local authorities tried unsuccessfully to prevent some volunteers from arriving in the municipality. D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), paras. 42–45. However, the Chamber does not find Simić’s evidence to be entirely reliable in this regard. acting in the municipality.²⁴³⁶ The Bratunac Crisis Staff also issued a decision that if paramilitaries did not comply with the decision to leave the municipality, military formations would be ordered to intervene.²⁴³⁷ Despite these orders, the paramilitary units did not leave the municipality.²⁴³⁸ On 6 May 1992, the Crisis Staff issued a decision that all paramilitary formations should leave Bratunac by the next day, however, Bosnian Serb citizens rallied in support of the paramilitary units.²⁴³⁹

752. The Bratunac Crisis Staff issued a number of other decisions in May 1992, including restrictions on the sale of alcohol, and measures to combat looting, smuggling, and the illegal movement by individuals into apartments.²⁴⁴⁰

753. Following an inspection by the Romanija-Birač CSB in August 1992, it was reported that the Bratunac SJB had been involved in investigating and documenting war crimes committed against Bosnian Serbs.²⁴⁴¹ This report also indicated that while volunteers had become involved in

Branimir Tešić testified that when filing criminal reports no distinction was made based on ethnicity. However, when confronted with these documents which suggested that the SJB was successful in conducting war crimes investigations into crimes committed by Bosnian Muslims and did not mention investigations into crimes committed by Bosnian Serbs, he distanced himself and claimed that this was not his job. Branimir Tešić, T. 35264–35268, 35284 (12 March 2013). Having regard to his evasiveness on the issue and apparent contradictions, the Chamber does not find Tešić's evidence to be reliable in this regard. The Chamber also refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2236. However, the Chamber finds that in May 1992, the police were involved in preventing the rape of a Bosnian Muslim woman. “robberies and troublemaking”, Ljubisav Simić said that the police should be engaged to prevent further lootings since Bosnian Serb houses were now being looted too.²⁴⁴²

754. In September 1992, paramilitaries remained in Bratunac and the SJB, with the assistance of the military and civilian authorities, sought to place them under the command of the VRS.²⁴⁴³ On 17 December 1992, it was reported that there were still a number of paramilitary formations in the zone of responsibility of the Bratunac Brigade and they were only there to loot.²⁴⁴⁴ On 29 December 1992, the Accused ordered the establishment of military rule in Bratunac.²⁴⁴⁵

755. On 1 February 1993, Deronjić delivered a speech at a meeting of the SDS Municipal Board attended by the RS commissioner, Jovo Mijatović.²⁴⁴⁶ Deronjić provided an overview of events from 1 April 1992 and assessed that, with the assistance of the SDS Main Board and local boards, operations had been carried out very well in the municipality.²⁴⁴⁷ At this same meeting, objections were voiced to the SJB due to their “indolence” with respect to crime prevention, in particular in relation to the unauthorised appropriation of property, which was sometimes covered up or allowed.²⁴⁴⁸ The SDS Main Board thus proceeded to pass a no-confidence vote in the chief of the SJB. Jovo Mijatović then nominated Ljubiša Borovčanin as the commander.²⁴⁴⁹

756. The municipal authorities continued to face problems with paramilitaries, including a paramilitary unit which, in March 1993, was involved in looting and had no respect for the Bosnian Serb civilian and military authorities in Bratunac.²⁴⁵⁰ Momir Nikolić reported on the activities of this paramilitary unit, demanded that they stop mistreating members of the Bratunac Brigade, and asked that they be withdrawn from the municipality.²⁴⁵¹

(G) Detention facilities in Bratunac

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.6.1

757. The Indictment refers to the use of the Bratunac Football Stadium as a detention facility from at least 10 to 18 May 1992.²⁴⁵²

758. The Bratunac Football Stadium was located close to the Bratunac SJB and the Vuk Karadžić School.²⁴⁵³

759. Following the attack by Serb Forces on Mihaljevići and Suha on 10 May 1992, male villagers were arrested and taken to the Vuk Karadžić School, while women and children were taken to the Bratunac Football Stadium.²⁴⁵⁴ Serb Forces drove Bosnian Muslims from their homes and told them not to lock their doors and to head to Bratunac.²⁴⁵⁵ Through loudspeakers, the men were threatened that if they did not surrender the women and children would be killed.²⁴⁵⁶ Those who surrendered formed a column and were led on foot towards the Bratunac Football Stadium by Bosnian Serb reserve soldiers, including local Bosnian Serbs wearing JNA uniforms.²⁴⁵⁷ The Bosnian Muslims were reassured by one soldier that nothing would happen to them, that they would be taken to the stadium for their own protection, and that they would be protected from Arkan's men.²⁴⁵⁸

760. On or about 17 May 1992, villagers from Vitkovići were taken by bus to the Bratunac Football Stadium, along with a third bus filled with villagers from Krasanpolje and other villages close to Bratunac.²⁴⁵⁹

D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), para. 44. The Chamber does not find Đukanović's evidence with respect to what he tried to do and what he was told about the Bosnian Muslims who he saw outside the Bratunac stadium to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2248.

761. After the attack on Glogova,²⁴⁶⁰ Deronjić informed the Bratunac Crisis Staff that he had information that “volunteers had gathered the Muslim population at the stadium in Bratunac” and some men had been taken out to the Vuk Karadžić School.²⁴⁶¹

762. Milenko Katanić was able to speak to a commander of a paramilitary group and secure the release of his best man who had been detained at the stadium.²⁴⁶² Thousands of Bosnian Muslims, including women, children and the elderly,²⁴⁶³ were detained at the Bratunac Football Stadium before being transported to locations such as Tuzla.²⁴⁶⁴ People were being constantly brought to and taken away from the stadium from Bratunac and surrounding villages.²⁴⁶⁵ Soldiers used loudspeakers to call out names of people who would be taken away from the stadium.²⁴⁶⁶ Money, jewellery, and identification documents were taken away and soldiers threatened children that they would cut off their ears if they did not give them their earrings.²⁴⁶⁷ One man was also beaten and stabbed.²⁴⁶⁸

763. After being held for some time, the Bosnian Muslims in the stadium were informed via loudspeaker that they had to move; they were taken to buses and trucks outside the stadium, and told they were going to Tuzla.²⁴⁶⁹ A large number of soldiers separated the able-bodied men and sent the women and children to the buses which headed to Tuzla; the men were taken under guard the bus. The Chamber notes that this killing is not charged pursuant to Schedules A or B of the Indictment. See fn. 13.

Tešić stated that Deronjić had gone to the stadium and asked the paramilitaries not to mistreat people. D3118 (Witness statement of Aleksandar Tešić dated 10 March 2013), para. 24. While the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were taken from the Bratunac Football Stadium and detained in Pale, in the absence of further evidence, it does not consider that it can rely on Smajš’ hearsay evidence alone to establish that detainees were mutilated at the Bratunac Football Stadium by Serb Forces. For evidence relating to the detention in Pale Gym, see Scheduled Detention Facility C.19.2.

to the Vuk Karadžić School.²⁴⁷⁰ Women and children from Suha who could not fit on the buses were told to go home and return the next morning to be taken by bus to Tuzla.²⁴⁷¹ They were warned not to leave and told that if they complied they would guarantee the lives of their husbands.²⁴⁷² From mid-May 1992 on, detainees held at the Bratunac Football Stadium were forced on buses and sent to Vlasenica municipality where some men were detained at the Vlasenica municipal prison.²⁴⁷³

764. The Chamber therefore finds that in mid-May 1992, Bosnian Muslims from Bratunac and surrounding villages, including women, children and the elderly, were brought to and detained at the Bratunac Football Stadium by Serb Forces. The Bosnian Muslims were detained at this location until their transportation to other municipalities or detention facilities. Detainees were threatened and their valuables were confiscated and at least one man was beaten and stabbed.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.6.2 and Scheduled Incident B.4.1.

765. The Indictment refers to the use of the Vuk Karadžić School as a detention facility at least between 1 May and 31 December 1992.²⁴⁷⁴ The Prosecution alleges that approximately 50 people were killed while being detained at the Vuk Karadžić School between 10 and 16 May 1992.²⁴⁷⁵

(a) Arrival of detainees and control of facility

766. After the arrival of Serb Forces in Bratunac, some prominent Bosnian Muslims were brought to the Vuk Karadžić School and detained there.²⁴⁷⁶ Groups of volunteers would select individuals from the Bosnian Muslim population in Bratunac, interrogate them, and then bring them to the Vuk Karadžić School.²⁴⁷⁷

767. On 10 May 1992, after the attack on Krasanpolje by paramilitaries, over 500 Bosnian Muslim men from villages in Bratunac were detained in the Vuk Karadžić School.²⁴⁷⁸ On 11 May 1992, the Bratunac TO brought approximately 250 of Hranča's inhabitants to the municipal hall of Bratunac and from there, approximately 60 men were taken to the school.²⁴⁷⁹ Further, as mentioned, a very large group of able-bodied Bosnian Muslim men were separated from women and children held at the Bratunac Football Stadium and taken under guard to the school.²⁴⁸⁰ This group included some elderly men.²⁴⁸¹ On the same day, hundreds of men were brought to the school in groups every hour.²⁴⁸² The people detained at the school were Bosnian Muslim civilians; some were captured while they were trying to escape but most were rounded up from their homes by Bosnian Serb soldiers.²⁴⁸³

768. There were approximately 30 soldiers on guard around the school.²⁴⁸⁴ The soldiers were wearing reserve military uniforms and carried automatic and semi-automatic rifles.²⁴⁸⁵ Some of Arkan's men were present when Bosnian Muslims were brought to the school.²⁴⁸⁶ Bosnian Serb officials, including Deronjić and Momir Nikolić, also visited the school and the gym where the detainees were held.²⁴⁸⁷ Detainees were threatened to give statements indicating their involvement in the distribution of arms and the killing of Bosnian Serbs.²⁴⁸⁸

²⁴⁷⁸ See Adjudicated Fact 2325.

²⁴⁷⁹ Adjudicated Fact 2327. Simić denied any knowledge of this incident and stated that the municipality building was unable to accommodate that many people. D3398 (Witness statement of Ljubisav Simić dated 7 April 2013), para. 91. The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 2268 in concluding that it does not find Simić's evidence with respect to the transfer and detention of residents from Hranča to be reliable. In addition his evidence on this issue is qualified, in that he denied any personal knowledge about this incident.

(b) Conditions of detention, treatment, and killing of detainees

769. Detainees at the Vuk Karadžić School were severely mistreated and beaten repeatedly.²⁴⁸⁹ For example, on 9 May 1992, after the attack on Glogova, Mustafa Golić was taken to the school and severely beaten.²⁴⁹⁰ Similarly, a former Bosnian Muslim policeman was taken out and beaten.²⁴⁹¹ On 11 May 1992, detainees were severely beaten in the sports hall with, inter alia, iron tubes, heavy wooden sticks, and a rifle butt.²⁴⁹² One of the detainees was threatened before being cut with a knife.²⁴⁹³ Detainees were thrown to the ground, kicked, and some were beaten till they lost consciousness while others were killed.²⁴⁹⁴ These killings and mistreatment were carried out by three soldiers while other soldiers guarded the door or stood in the corridors or at the entrance to the school.²⁴⁹⁵ Some of the soldiers inside the school identified themselves as Arkan's men and told the detainees they were paid to do what they were doing and would make more money if they killed more people.²⁴⁹⁶ One of the detainees was saved from further mistreatment by a soldier who knew him and was told that he could be taken to the Bratunac Football Stadium but that he and ²⁴⁸⁹ Adjudicated Fact 2326. See also KW12, T. 44746 (9 December 2013). Mičić stated that the members of the military police did not see any detainees being beaten, did not hear any shots, or see any bodies near the school. D3196 (Witness statement of Dušan Mičić dated 24 March 2013), paras. 7, 12. The Chamber does not find Mičić's evidence with respect to the mistreatment of detainees to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber notes that his evidence was marked by contradictions and indicators that he was not being forthright in his testimony. In addition the Chamber notes that the value of Mičić's evidence in this regard is further undermined given that he stated that he did not go to the school himself.

²⁴⁹⁰ P3188 (Witness statement of Mušan Talović dated 14 July 2011), paras. 31, 40.

²⁴⁹¹ P3205 (Witness statement of KDZ605 dated 22 August 2011), para. 83 (under seal).

²⁴⁹² P3205 (Witness statement of KDZ605 dated 22 August 2011), paras. 57, 60 (under seal).

²⁴⁹³ P3205 (Witness statement of KDZ605 dated 22 August 2011), para. 60 (under seal).

²⁴⁹⁶ P3205 (Witness statement of KDZ605 dated 22 August 2011), paras. 59, 75 (under seal); KDZ605, T. 17897, 17904 (25 August 2011). The other soldiers included locals from Bratunac and from Serbia.

other Bosnian Muslims would have to go from there to Tuzla because Bosnian Serbs were going to live in Bratunac.²⁴⁹⁷

770. A man who identified himself as Goran Zekić's father came to the school on one occasion and said that "300 people had to pay for the death of his son".²⁴⁹⁸ When an individual named Zaim Huseinović from Potočari was identified, he was questioned about who killed Zekić and Arkan's men in Potočari; he was then beaten and fell to floor.²⁴⁹⁹ A man named Krke intervened to stop the beating but once Krke left, Huseinović was hit several times until his brains spilled out and he died.²⁵⁰⁰ On his arrival at the facility, KDZ605 saw five or six bodies including the body of Safet Karić who was lying on his stomach in the toilet.²⁵⁰¹

771. A soldier who called himself Zoka and was known as the "Macedonian", would often come in and out of the sports hall, mistreat, and kill detainees.²⁵⁰² Zoka was accompanied by two others, including a man from Serbia named Bane Topolović who identified himself as one of Arkan's men and a man who identified himself as "Dragan from Milići".²⁵⁰³ These men, along with other guards, beat the detainees severely for three days with steel rods, tubes, handles from rakes and shovels.²⁵⁰⁴

772. The detainees were told to squeeze into the sports hall and when they told the guards that they would not all fit, the guards told them that whoever was left outside the door would be killed. Approximately 10 to 20 of the men were taken outside; there was then screaming and gunfire.²⁵⁰⁵ The detainees were taken to one side of the sports hall and "stacked almost up to the ceiling"; they were then beaten, provoked, and asked if they still wanted their independence. Some of the detainees were made to sing "Chetnik" songs and display the "Serb three-finger sign".²⁵⁰⁶ Topalović, Dragan, and Zoka identified the main Muslim priest in Bratunac, Mustafa

Mujkanović.²⁵⁰⁷ He was ordered to take off his coat so that he could be beaten more easily; he was then forced to sing “Chetnik” songs, drink beer, and join the men in the corner of the hall who had to make the “Serb three-finger sign”. When Mujkanović refused to make this sign and showed only two fingers, he was stabbed in the throat by Bane Topalović and was taken out to the hangar.²⁵⁰⁸ Mujkanović showed signs of life as he was taken out and shot.²⁵⁰⁹

773. A military commander in JNA uniform entered the room and ordered the three soldiers to stop beating the detainees. Seven or eight detainees at the bottom of the pile were found to have died of suffocation.²⁵¹⁰ The military commander ordered that the detainees be given food and water and he shouted at the soldiers saying: “What are you doing to these people?”²⁵¹¹ After this, the Bosnian Serb guards told the detainees that their fight against the paramilitaries had not been successful thus far but that the “Bosnian Serb leadership” would soon be able to throw them out.²⁵¹²

774. However, after the commander left, the three soldiers returned and started calling out names of detainees at random, after which those called out were severely beaten or killed.²⁵¹³ People who worked in the school and intellectuals from Bratunac were also called out and some men were killed.²⁵¹⁴ KW12 estimated that approximately 20 detainees were beaten and then killed in his presence.²⁵¹⁵ The soldiers played Serbian music, drank a lot of beer, and made the detainees swear against the Bosnian State and President and sing “Chetnik” songs.²⁵¹⁶ On the first day of these killings and acts of mistreatment, the detainees were not given any food.²⁵¹⁷ On the second day the guards were ordered to provide the detainees with food and water, and some sandwiches and juice were thrown into the room but it was only sufficient for half of the detainees.²⁵¹⁸

775. When detainees were beaten they were threatened and subjected to political comments such as “You wanted a state: here is a state for you”, “where is now your Alija to save you?”, “Where is Naser, your liberator?”²⁵¹⁹ In one incident, the shape of a cross was cut on the arm of one detainee with a knife.²⁵²⁰ If detainees made eye-contact with Topalović he would call them out and they would be beaten.²⁵²¹

776. Topalović beat some of the detainees to death.²⁵²² For example, Ramo Karić was called out, beaten, and shot in the elbow by Topalović before being beaten again, this time to death.²⁵²³ Ahmet Salkić was selected and called “Ustasha”. He was hit on the forehead close to the eye before falling to the ground and sustaining another blow. His body was then carried out by the detainees.²⁵²⁴ Hajrudin Čomić was ordered to kneel down and place his forehead on the floor before Topalović shot him in the back of his lower neck with a pistol.²⁵²⁵ The beatings and killings continued through the night and KDZ605 saw at least 50 Bosnian Muslims killed with the use of different objects, including wooden handles, iron pipes, iron bed legs, and pistol butts.²⁵²⁶

777. One old man was beaten and killed after he was told that his son had shot at Bosnian Serb troops.²⁵²⁷ Another man named Džemo Hodžić was accused of being a military expert and of arming the Bosnian Muslims; he was beaten until the soldiers thought he was dead and then he was placed on a truck with bodies.²⁵²⁸ When Hodžić was found to be still alive, he was then taken back inside, beaten, and then stabbed to death.²⁵²⁹ Several men detained at the Vuk Karadžić School were taken out by the guards and killed.²⁵³⁰ For example, Mensur Husić was brought to the school and beaten.²⁵³¹ Husić screamed and begged not to be killed. ²⁵³⁴ [REDACTED]. The Chamber received evidence about the exhumation and disappearance of a large number of Bosnian Muslims from Bratunac in 1992. P4854 (Updated Table 1 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 1; P4852 (Report of Amor Mašović, 20–21 October 2009), p. 3; P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp 1-107; D2250 (Ewa Tabeau’s report entitled “Deaths and Disappearance of BiH Muslims 1992–1995,” 25 April 2012); Ewa Tabeau, T. 28411–28412 (2 May 2012); Ewa Tabeau, T. 28411–28412 (2 May 2012); Dževad Gušić, T. 17780–17781 (24 August 2011). However, the Chamber will not rely on this evidence in the absence of a positive connection with a scheduled killing incident charged in the Indictment.

779. On 14 May 1992, following a decision of the Bratunac Crisis Staff, approximately 400 Bosnian Muslim detainees were packed onto trucks and buses,²⁵³⁸ transported to Pale under the escort of the MP and civilian police, and from there transferred to Bosnian Muslim controlled territory.²⁵³⁹

(c) Conclusion

780. The Chamber therefore finds that hundreds of Bosnian Muslim men, including the elderly, were detained by Serb Forces at the Vuk Karadžić School in May 1992. Detainees were subjected to severe beatings, including with iron tubes, wooden sticks and rifle butts, and some were stabbed. Detainees were held in cramped conditions and on one occasion some detainees died of suffocation. Detainees were also subjected to acts of humiliation and threats while detained at the school. A number of detainees died following beatings while others were taken out and shot. The Chamber finds that in total at least 50 detainees were killed by Serb Forces while detained at the Vuk Karadžić School between 10 and 16 May 1992.

(H) Scheduled Incident D.6

781. The Indictment refers to the destruction of four cultural monuments and sacred sites in Bratunac between April and May 1992.²⁵⁴⁰

782. The Chamber took judicial notice that four Muslim monuments in Bratunac municipality were heavily damaged or completely destroyed between April and June 1992, including the mosque in Bratunac town and the mosque in Glogova, which was demolished with explosives during the Krajišnik*, T. 15395–15396. For evidence relating to treatment of detainees in Pale, see Scheduled Detention Facility C.19.2. Defence witnesses also testified that the Bosnian Muslims could not be returned to Bratunac and were transferred to Pale to save and protect them from the volunteers when the Bratunac Crisis Staff heard about the killings. D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), paras. 46, 48; D3118 (Witness statement of Aleksandar Tešić dated 10 March 2013), paras. 26, 31. However, having reviewed the evidence, the Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber also had regard to its credibility assessment in fn. 2236 above and also notes that the evidence was marked by indicators that the witnesses in question were seeking to distance themselves from any responsibility with respect to events at the Vuk Karadžić School.

²⁵⁴⁰ These are the Bratunac town mosque, Glogova mosque, a Qur'an school in Glogova, and the Islamic archives of Bratunac.

attack on 9 May 1992.²⁵⁴¹ During attacks on Muslim villages, including Glogova, Serb Forces deliberately torched and destroyed mosques.²⁵⁴² The Bratunac town mosque, the Islamic archive in Bratunac and the Qur'an school in Glogova were completely destroyed while the Glogova mosque was heavily damaged.²⁵⁴³

783. Therefore the Chamber finds that four cultural monuments and sacred sites were heavily damaged or completely destroyed by Serb Forces between April and June 1992.

(I) Movement of the population from Bratunac

784. The increasing intimidation and the reports that Bosnian Serbs were being armed by the SDS and JNA prompted people to slowly move out of Bratunac even before the conflict began.²⁵⁴⁴ In the months leading up to the conflict in Bratunac, Bosnian Serbs, consisting mostly of women, children and the elderly left the municipality.²⁵⁴⁵ Large numbers of citizens also left Bratunac out of fear after the armed conflict began in Bijeljina and Zvornik.²⁵⁴⁶ As discussed above, following the killing of Goran Zekić by Bosnian Muslims in May 1992, Serb Forces launched a number of attacks against Bosnian Muslim villages.²⁵⁴⁷ The killing of Goran Zekić at the beginning of May 1992 created great fear and caused both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims to leave Bratunac.²⁵⁴⁸

Riedlmayer surveyed a total of 12 religious sites in Bratunac which were destroyed but the Chamber notes that only four are charged in the Indictment.

²⁵⁴⁵ P3196 (Witness statement of Dževad Gušić undated), para. 75; P3205 (Witness statement of KDZ605 dated 22 August 2011), para. 29 (under seal). Gušić also stated that Bosnian Serbs claimed to be leaving Bratunac because they were in danger but they were in fact leaving in order to achieve a number of objectives, including to allow them be placed under a unified command to later occupy Bratunac. The Chamber places no weight on the views and speculation of Gušić's and KDZ605 views as to why the Bosnian Serbs left Bratunac.

²⁵⁴⁶ D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 6; D3690 (Witness statement of Neđo Nikolić dated 8 June 2013), para. 6. municipality.²⁵⁵⁰ Bosnian Muslims left Bratunac and surrounding villages out of fear, inter alia, of the paramilitaries.²⁵⁵¹ Other Bosnian Muslims were forcibly moved out of their villages.²⁵⁵² The last group of Bosnian Muslims left after Bosnian Serb refugees arrived in Bratunac.²⁵⁵³

786. In mid-April 1992, after Serb Forces had entered Bratunac, some Bosnian Muslims asked for permission from Bosnian Serb municipal officials to leave Bratunac for Tuzla and were allowed to do so.²⁵⁵⁴ The Bosnian Serb authorities were requested to secure escorts and passes for their safe passage by Bosnian Muslim leaders.²⁵⁵⁵ A large number of permits were issued for both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs to leave the municipality.²⁵⁵⁶ At that time, a large group of Bosnian Muslims gathered in front of the municipality building and asked to be escorted to Konjević Polje and then police patrol escorted this group.²⁵⁵⁷ While Bosnian Muslims may have asked to leave the municipality, the Chamber finds that these requests were not made voluntarily when considering the surrounding circumstances in which they left after Serb Forces had entered Bratunac.

787. A municipal commission was established in Bratunac, which drew up a list of all Bosnian Muslim houses and sealed them off and when Bosnian Serb refugees arrived they were accommodated in these houses.²⁵⁵⁸ However, when large numbers of refugees arrived, some of the ²⁵⁵⁷ D3194 (Witness statement of Rodoljub Đukanović dated 24 March 2013), para. 33. While the Chamber finds that the Bosnian Serb authorities arranged for the transport of Bosnian Muslims, the Chamber does not find the evidence of Defence witnesses that this demonstrated that the authorities were simply respecting the wishes of the Bosnian Muslims who voluntarily wanted to leave the municipality to be reliable. D3126 (Witness statement of Jovan Nikolić dated 10 March 2013), para. 41; D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 8. See also D3690 (Witness statement of Neđo Nikolić dated 8 June 2013), para. 6; D3852 (Witness statement of Mirko Perić dated 1 July 2013), para. 12; D3174 (Witness statement of Vujadin Stević dated 23 March 2013), paras. 25–27; Vujadin Stević, T. 36043–36045 (26 March 2013). houses were broken into and the head of police was criticised for failing to prevent these property crimes.²⁵⁵⁹

788. In late May or early June 1992 the Bratunac Brigade called on Bosnian Muslims who did not want to fight a war to return to their homes and live normally.²⁵⁶⁰ However, by June 1992, with the exception of a few individuals there were no Bosnian Muslims in Bratunac.²⁵⁶¹

789. On 6 June 1992, the Accused, Mladić, and Koljević were informed by Ostojić that there were “no Muslims in Bratunac municipality”.²⁵⁶² The Accused was at a meeting in Zvornik on 30 June 1992 when Simić said that only two Muslims remained in Bratunac.²⁵⁶³

790. As discussed in more detail in Section IV.C.1.a., while Serb Forces were successful in taking over and holding town centres in municipalities including Bratunac, pockets in the surrounding countryside, which had a Bosnian Muslim majority population, remained under the control of Bosnian Muslim forces.²⁵⁶⁴ Bosnian Muslim forces in the second half of 1992 and early 1993 launched an offensive in which they took control of territory in Bratunac.²⁵⁶⁵ The counter-offensive by the VRS in spring 1993 prompted the movement of the vast majority of the Bosnian Muslim civilians who remained in Konjević Polje and thousands fled towards Srebrenica.²⁵⁶⁶

791. Having considered the totality of the evidence and assessed the circumstances in which departures occurred, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave Bratunac.

(A) Charges

792. In relation to Brčko, the Prosecution has limited the allegations in the Indictment to crimes associated with Luka camp.²⁵⁶⁷

793. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Luka camp as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.²⁵⁶⁸ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed at Luka camp by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings related to the detention facility as well as killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment.²⁵⁶⁹ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.²⁵⁷⁰

794. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Luka camp by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse as cruel or inhumane treatment;²⁵⁷¹ (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence as cruel and inhumane treatment;²⁵⁷² (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;²⁵⁷³ (iv) unlawful detention;²⁵⁷⁴ and (v) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields.²⁵⁷⁵

²⁵⁶⁷ See Prosecution Submission Pursuant to Rule 73 bis(D), 31 August 2009, fn. 14; Pre-Trial Conference, T. 467 (6 October 2009); Rule 73 bis Decision, para. 6; Decision on Fourth Adjudicated Facts Motion, para. 28; Hearing, T. 16607, 14 July 2011 (recalling that while the Prosecution may lead general evidence relating to the take-over of Brčko, it should not present evidence pertaining to incidents alleged to have occurred in Brčko during the take-over and in detention facilities which were struck out of the Indictment after the Rule 73 bis Decision and noting that with respect to the alleged Municipalities JCE, given the large number of municipalities remaining in the Indictment and the number of crimes alleged to have occurred therein, there is no need for the Prosecution to present evidence relating to crimes struck out under Rule 73 bis in order to present its case on the pattern of events across the municipalities).

The Chamber notes that in footnote 8 of paragraph 60(i) of the Indictment, the Prosecution specifies that it will not allege criminal responsibility for plunder of property in municipalities including Brčko. The Chamber further recalls that the Prosecution in its closing arguments clarified that with respect to footnote 8 of the Indictment, it did not allege criminal responsibility for both appropriation and

(B) Lead-up

795. Brčko is a municipality in northeastern BiH on the border with Croatia along the Sava River.²⁵⁷⁶ In 1991, the population of Brčko consisted of approximately 45% Bosnian Muslims, 25% Bosnian Croats, and 20% Bosnian Serbs.²⁵⁷⁷ Inter-ethnic relations deteriorated in Brčko after the formation of national parties, the organisation of political rallies in Brčko,²⁵⁷⁸ the outbreak of war in Croatia and Slovenia and the referendum on the secession of BiH.²⁵⁷⁹ From the autumn of 1991 there was an increasing militarisation of Brčko with weapons distributed to residents of all ethnicities²⁵⁸⁰ and the arrival of paramilitary units.²⁵⁸¹

796. In December 1991 the President of the SDS in Brčko, Milenko Vojinović received and read out the Variant A/B Instructions²⁵⁸² after which (i) the Serb Municipal Assembly of Brčko was formed and Đorđe Ristanić was appointed as President;²⁵⁸³ and (ii) a Crisis Staff was formed with Boško Maričić as its president.²⁵⁸⁴ plunder in certain municipalities, even though the footnote only referred to plunder. Prosecution Closing Argument, T. 47694 (30 September 2014). The Chamber further notes that the Prosecution does not allege criminal responsibility for forcible transfer or deportation in Brčko. Indictment, fn. 6.

See D3072 (Witness statement of Pero Marković dated 1 March 2013), para. 19. However, in light of the evidence received about the existence and role of the Crisis Staff in Brčko, discussed for example in paras. 829 and 833, the Chamber does not accept this evidence.

797. In the lead-up to April 1992, preparations were made for the establishment of a Bosnian Serb SJB in Brčko.²⁵⁸⁵ There were also discussions and an agreement between the SDS and SDA on the physical division of Brčko following an SDS proposal.²⁵⁸⁶

798. On 30 April 1992, the pedestrian and railroad bridges that connected Brčko with Croatia were blown up in twin explosions.²⁵⁸⁷ On or about 1 May 1992 Serb Forces numbering approximately 1,000 men launched an attack on Brčko.²⁵⁸⁸ The Serb Forces involved in this attack included Serb units of the JNA, over 500 men from Bijeljina consisting of uniformed units, active and reserve police officers, soldiers, military reserves, a TO battalion, Ljubiša Savić's ("Mauzer") Serbian National Guard, Arkan's men, the White Eagles and the Radicals commanded by Mirko Blagojević.²⁵⁸⁹ The Serb Forces initially met with armed resistance from groups using light infantry weapons but they quickly took control of the town.²⁵⁹⁰

(C) Scheduled Detention facility C.7.2

799. The Indictment refers to the use of the Luka camp as a detention facility at least from 7 May 1992 until mid July 1992.²⁵⁹¹

(1) Establishment and control of camp

800. Luka Camp was located in the vicinity of the Brčko SJB building²⁵⁹² and consisted of hangars or warehouses which had been previously used for the storage of goods.²⁵⁹³ From early May 1992, many military-aged non-Serb men from Brčko municipality were taken to Luka Camp and detained in a hangar, after having been separated from women, children and the elderly.²⁵⁹⁴ The men were brought to the camp from various locations in Brčko including the barracks,²⁵⁹⁵ the Laser Company,²⁵⁹⁶ the mosque,²⁵⁹⁷ the Brčko hospital,²⁵⁹⁸ and the police station.²⁵⁹⁹ Bosnian Muslims were taken to the mosque from their homes during searches for weapons which were conducted by armed men who had disguised their faces with paint or black stockings.²⁶⁰⁰ This

Members of the Brčko SJB and others in police uniforms were present at Luka Camp or visited there.²⁶⁰³ In addition, soldiers in JNA uniforms, other men in camouflage uniforms, including those with the insignia of Arkan, as well as members of the Serbian SUP would also come to the camp.²⁶⁰⁴ Goran Jelisić was in charge of the camp²⁶⁰⁵ and introduced himself to the detainees as the “Serbian Adolf Hitler”.²⁶⁰⁶ Jelisić wore a blue police uniform and later wore a military camouflage uniform.²⁶⁰⁷ Towards the end of May 1992, Jelisić was replaced by a new director named Konstantin Simonović who was a policeman from the Brčko SJB.²⁶⁰⁸

802. In early May 1992, the Brčko War Presidency was informed by the Chief of the Brčko SJB and Brčko residents that people were being detained at Luka Camp with no legal grounds and that they were mostly Bosnian Muslims from Brčko who were brought there by Serb Forces.²⁶⁰⁹ Veselić in agreement with the War Presidency sent police inspectors to Luka Camp to identify what was happening there and to officially question people about the reason for their detention; some detainees were then released and some were issued with passes to leave the camp.²⁶¹⁰ Some of the detainees were also released when Bosnian Serb acquaintances came and asked for their release, but this did not happen very often and, in some cases, they were re-arrested and detained after their release.²⁶¹¹ This demonstrates that detainees were released in a selective manner, based on personal connections and that there still remained a significant number of Bosnian Muslims who were detained at Luka Camp. Ristanić visited Luka Camp on one occasion to secure the release of some detainees, but he did not visit the camp again.²⁶¹²

803. From around June 1992 some detainees from Luka Camp were taken to Batković camp in Bijeljina.²⁶¹³ When Davidović and his team arrived in Brčko in July 1992 he went to Luka Camp and found approximately 60 to 70 Bosnian Muslims, including children detained, in a hangar.²⁶¹⁴ These detainees were released.²⁶¹⁵

²⁶¹² Đorđe Ristanić, T. 16722–16723 (15 July 2011). The Chamber received contrary evidence which suggested that Ristanić was angry when Kaurinović reported that some of the detainees had been released and that he ordered that the detainees be kept in detention for the purposes of exchange. Petar Kaurinović, T. 34138–34140 (20 February 2013); P6147 (Excerpt from record of interview with Petar Kaurinović, undated), pp. 2–3. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber observed that Kaurinović's evidence was marked with contradictions and evasiveness and it was of the view that he was not a frank and forthcoming witness.

(2) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees²⁶¹⁶

804. The detainees were held in a hangar in crowded, unsanitary conditions.²⁶¹⁷ Some detainees were lying on cardboard and on the concrete floor on both sides of the hangar.²⁶¹⁸ Their personal documents and valuables were seized by the guards on arrival.²⁶¹⁹ Detainees were not allowed to leave the camp and had to ask for permission from the guards each time they wanted to go outside to use the toilet or drink water.²⁶²⁰ When detainees were given permission to go to the toilet and take some water they were beaten.²⁶²¹ Gaši was told that he would be given one tablet to treat the diarrhoea he was suffering from, for each Muslim “extremist” he named.²⁶²²

805. The detainees were told by Jelisić that they would be interrogated, that those who were found to be “guilty” would be killed and the others would be released.²⁶²³ Jelisić boasted to the detainees that he had killed many people at Luka Camp thus far and that he would continue to do so.²⁶²⁴ He also told the detainees that he had been given the green light to do whatever he wanted to the Bosnian Muslim detainees and that it was his duty to hate and “eradicate the Muslim people” as there were too many of them.²⁶²⁵ The Chamber received evidence that Jelisić was unpredictable and not of sound mind.²⁶²⁶ However, this is not medical evidence and simply reflects an observation about the nature of Jelisić’s conduct; it does not amount to a medical diagnosis which the Chamber could rely on to make a finding in this regard.

²⁶¹⁶ The Chamber received evidence about the nature and conditions of detention and mistreatment of detainees at other locations in Brčko. P58 (Witness statement of Sakib Husrefović dated 27 May 1995), pp. 5–7; Milorad Šehovac, T. 31353–31355, 31361–31363 (12 and 13 December 2012); P6043 (Map of Bosanski Samac marked by Milorad Šehovac); Adjudicated Fact 2347. P2848 (Witness statement of Milorad Davidović dated 22 June 2011), para. 115. However, the Chamber does not accept this evidence in the absence of further corroboration as it is not clear on what basis Davidović reached his conclusion in this regard.

806. Detainees were frequently verbally abused, threatened, and beaten by the guards at the camp, sometimes with mace like weapons or wrenches.²⁶²⁷ Two of the detainees, were nicknamed the “Muslims snipers” and were taken outside and beaten daily. One of these detainees was a mentally disabled man named “Jovo”.²⁶²⁸ Some of these detainees were beaten by a man named Enver who introduced himself as a “Chetnik”.²⁶²⁹ On one occasion Enver grabbed a man by the neck and kicked him,²⁶³⁰ Enver then carved a cross on his forehead with a knife and the man fell to the ground bleeding.²⁶³¹ On one occasion, a man was brought into the middle of the room where newly arrived detainees were present and beaten fiercely until his screams stopped.²⁶³² Jelisić told the detainees that this “is just an example of what could happen to you”.²⁶³³ Detainees were also ordered to beat each other.²⁶³⁴ The detainees were called “balijas”, a “Turkish gang, a fictitious people, a non-existent people” and told that they would all be killed or exterminated.²⁶³⁵ They were also forced to sing “Chetnik” songs which were played.²⁶³⁶ Jelisić and Ranko Češić took part in the beating of detainees.²⁶³⁷

808. On one occasion Češić interrogated a female detainee and intimidated her by firing an automatic rifle in her direction.²⁶⁴¹ Češić then drove her out of the camp and raped her at knife point in a vehicle.²⁶⁴² After this Češić said he would take her to the bridge, cut her throat and throw her into the river.²⁶⁴³ Češić was then stopped by a man who identified himself as “Dragan”, who berated Češić for taking out a detainee without permission.²⁶⁴⁴ The female detainee was then taken by Dragan to the SUP where she was interrogated by Veselić, taken to the Brčko hospital and then driven back to Luka Camp with three other detainees.²⁶⁴⁵ The female detainee was taken to a room and raped again by two soldiers.²⁶⁴⁶ When in this room, she saw a woman lying on the floor undressed and heard the screams of another woman.²⁶⁴⁷ From 5 to 19 May 1992 while detained at the camp, the female detainee was raped on a continuous basis.²⁶⁴⁸ On 19 May 1992, some detainees outlined the nature of their rape and mistreatment to a military officer who visited the camp with Veselić, after which the mistreatment stopped with a guard posted at the entrance to the detainees’ rooms.²⁶⁴⁹

809. As detailed below, the mistreatment and beating of the detainees continued even after Jelisić told them about receiving an order to prohibit such acts.²⁶⁵⁰

²⁶⁵⁰ See para. 822. The Chamber received evidence that Kaurinović in the few days he was at the camp only heard about one incident of mistreatment which he passed on to Veselić and that Veselić said they would try to do everything to prevent such incidents and restore order in Luka but that the paramilitaries had absolute power and could do what they wanted. Petar Kaurinović, T. 34136–34137, 34146 (20 February 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber observed that Kaurinović’s evidence was marked with contradictions and evasiveness and concluded that he was not a frank and forthcoming witness.

810. Some detainees were forced to serve soldiers food, clean their offices and toilets with their bare hands and were also taken from the camp to clean Bosnian Muslim houses in the town for the use of Bosnian Serb families who would return.²⁶⁵¹ Detainees were also forced to carry bodies, and were beaten and taunted when doing so.²⁶⁵²

(3) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

811. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Serb Forces brought to and detained non Serbs, including women, children, and the elderly at Luka camp from May to June 1992. The Chamber further finds that the detainees were held in poor conditions. These included lack of space, adequate bedding, and poor sanitary conditions. The Chamber also finds that detainees were regularly and viciously subjected to beatings by Serb Forces at Luka camp. Finally, the Chamber finds that female detainees were raped while at the camp.

(4) Scheduled Killing Incident – B.5.1

812. The Prosecution alleges that a number of men were killed at Luka camp between 8 May and 6 June 1992.²⁶⁵³

813. On numerous occasions, groups of detainees at Luka camp were taken out of the hangar and summarily executed.²⁶⁵⁴ While at the camp, one detainee saw a document entitled “People to be executed”, which listed approximately 50 prominent, educated, or wealthy Muslims and Croats.²⁶⁵⁵ On 9 May 1992, Jelisić brought Stjepo Glavočević, a Bosnian Muslim, into the hangar, while he was holding the man’s severed ear, he then struck Glavočević with a sabre, killing him.²⁶⁵⁶ Jelisić also took two Bosnian Muslim men from Bijeljina out of the hangar and later ordered two other detainees to move their bodies to a pile of other bodies.²⁶⁵⁷ Jelisić also shot two men named Jasminko and Cita.²⁶⁵⁸

While Gaši uses the phrase “collected volunteers” to sweep the streets and do other jobs in town, in light of the other evidence, and the circumstances of their detention, the Chamber does not accept that the detainees performed this work voluntarily. However, the Chamber notes that this type of forced labour is not charged in the Indictment, which only covers forced labour at the frontlines.

814. During the night of 11 May 1992, four detainees were called out of the hangar, and other detainees could hear the blows, the detainees moaning and begging as they were beaten and cursed outside the hangar.²⁶⁵⁹ One of the detainees was instructed to lie down and lean his head against a grate, after which a “silenced shot” was heard, followed by the “blunt sound of a blow against the concrete”.²⁶⁶⁰ This was repeated in the following days, with groups of four detainees taken out approximately 25 to 30 times with only one or two detainees returning from each group.²⁶⁶¹

815. The guards would yell that the detainees should come out by themselves and on the second or third day of his detention, KDZ010 “volunteered” to go out, after about ten groups of four “volunteers” had left the hangar.²⁶⁶² Outside they were beaten and cursed, after which they were lined up against the wall with their heads bent down and hands behind their backs.²⁶⁶³ One man was pulled out of the group of four by a man identified as “Ivan” who was also known as “Repić” and ordered to lie on the asphalt and place his head on a grate after which he was shot by Jelisić.²⁶⁶⁴ On one occasion the guards entered the hangar and asked if any of the detainees were married to Serb women, and when one man stood up and was taken outside, the detainees could hear that he was verbally abused, beaten and then ordered by Jelisić to lie down and put his head against the grate; a gun shot was then heard.²⁶⁶⁵ On another occasion Gaši saw “four civilians” being taken out of an office at Luka Camp and saw Češić shooting at their backs after which two men fell to the ground.²⁶⁶⁶ On yet another day, a detainee dropped a bottle of water, soldiers beat him fiercely, and Jelisić took him to a grate where he was killed in the same way as the other detainees.²⁶⁶⁷

816. At the end of every night a group of seven or eight detainees were called out to clean the blood outside the hangar.²⁶⁶⁸ Detainees were also ordered to carry bodies into a refrigerated

817. On one occasion, approximately 50 civilians were lined up near the entrance to the warehouse after which a blast of gunfire, moans and the sound of bodies falling onto the concrete could be heard.²⁶⁷³

818. There was an agreement between the War Presidency and Veselić, the Chief of the Brčko SJB, under which the bodies collected from Luka Camp would be identified.²⁶⁷⁴

819. While the Chamber received evidence which suggested that the Bosnian Serb authorities in Brčko were not aware of events or killings at Luka Camp until much later, the Chamber is not satisfied that Kaurinović was able to adequately explain a prior inconsistent statement which suggested that the Crisis Staff was in charge of the town and would have known about events at the camp.²⁶⁷⁵ Kaurinović was also confronted with and did not adequately explain evidence that tended ²⁶⁷⁴ Đorđe Ristanić, T. 16816 (18 July 2011). The Chamber also received evidence about steps taken by Bosnian Serb authorities for the identification of 60 Bosnian Muslims killed by paramilitaries. However, it is not clear whether or not these killings relate to Luka Camp, therefore the Chamber will not make any findings in this regard. Petar Kaurinović, T. 34115–34116, 34125–34129 (20 February 2013). The Chamber received other evidence about disappearances, killings and burials of victims in mass graves in Brčko. See P1607 (RS Ministry of Justice report on prisons and camps on the RS territory, 22 October 1992), p. 3; D3105 (Witness statement of Slobodan Avlijaš dated 9 March 2013), para. 27; Slobodan Avlijaš, T. 35196 (11 March 2013); P3023 (Witness statement of Đorđe Ristanić dated 15 June 2011), paras. 189–191, 202–205, 214–217, 220–223; Đorđe Ristanić, T. 16726, 16730, 16736 (15 July 2011); P4854 (Updated Table 1 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 1; P4852 (Report of Amor Mašović, 20–21 October 2009), pp. 3, 11. See also P87 (List of Commissions for Exchange, 1992) (under seal). However, this evidence cannot be directly connected to events at Luka Camp, and so the Chamber will not be making findings in this regard.

²⁶⁷⁵ D3003 (Witness statement of Petar Kaurinović 17 February 2013), paras. 22–23; Petar Kaurinović, T. 34116–34117, 34120–34121 (20 February 2013). Ristanić was also unclear about whether and when he received information about the killings which were reported to have occurred at Luka Camp; he claimed that he only heard rumours and later through stories reported in the media and from people who had been in the camp about what happened there. Given his equivocal answers in an attempt to distance himself from knowledge of these to contradict his evidence that the police were unable to control the activities of paramilitaries in the camp.²⁶⁷⁶ This contradictory evidence revealed that the police themselves were actually involved in the killing and mistreatment of detainees.²⁶⁷⁷ The evidence about lack of knowledge about events at Luka Camp on the part of the Bosnian Serb authorities is also not consistent with evidence that in June or July 1992, Dr. Milan Novaković who was the President of the Bijeljina Municipal Board of the SDS “announced on radio that the Jelisić ‘factory’ was the most productive (at expulsion and murder of Muslims) at the time”.²⁶⁷⁸

820. Ristanić testified that with respect to the Bosnian Serb municipal authorities “we either didn’t have [the] strength or willingness” to stop Jelisić.²⁶⁷⁹ While the Chamber accepts that the Bosnian Serb authorities were not willing to stop Jelisić it does not accept the suggestion that they did not have the power to do so.²⁶⁸⁰ In this regard the Chamber notes that Jelisić was eventually removed from the police, but there was no investigation of the alleged crimes and he was simply transferred to a military unit.²⁶⁸¹ In addition the Chamber received evidence of an Eastern Bosnia Corps report which suggested that Ristanić himself was aware about murders which had been committed in the municipality and did not care about preventing the information from leaking “because there were much larger graves in Prijedor”.²⁶⁸² While Ristanić denied the specific detail contained in this report, the Chamber accepts that it supports the other evidence received which suggests a level of awareness by the Bosnian Serb authorities about crimes committed in the municipality and attempts to cover them up.²⁶⁸³

821. In this regard it was also reported that the commander of the Brčko barracks, Colonel Durđević and the Corps Staff were informed of these events “in order to prevent leakage of information” but that they responded that this was a matter for the civilian authorities.²⁶⁸⁴ This report also noted that organs from the Army and SUP and Simo Radovanović, who was one of Captain Dragan’s instructors, suggested that the civilian authorities “do this properly to prevent

information leakage”.²⁶⁸⁵ This report also observed that the next action was to “officially admit in front of the international community that a certain number of Muslims and Croats for whom we would have to prove that they had been working on ethnic cleansing of Serbs from these areas”.²⁶⁸⁶ The report stressed that “absolutely correct documentation” had to be established for these Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats for presentation to representatives of the international community who were expected to visit Brčko very soon.²⁶⁸⁷ The report mentioned that the “next phase would be public trial of two or three extremists with all possible publicity” for the international reporters.²⁶⁸⁸

822. The killings at Luka Camp continued until on or about 16 May 1992 when Jelisić entered the hangar with Major Džurković and a captain wearing a JNA uniform and said that they had received an order that the killing and mistreatment of detainees were prohibited after which the names and personal details of the detainees were recorded.²⁶⁸⁹ However, contrary to this order, the mistreatment and beating of the detainees continued.²⁶⁹⁰

823. In light of the evidence above, the Chamber finds that a large number of non-Serb men were killed by Serb Forces at the Luka Camp between at least 9 May 1992 and 16 May 1992.

(D) Problems with paramilitaries and law and order

824. The Bosnian Serb local authorities had difficulties in controlling paramilitary groups which entered and operated in Brčko; these paramilitaries attacked or mistreated police, army officers, soldiers and civilians and placed pressure on the SJB and other municipal structures.²⁶⁹¹ The paramilitaries issued an ultimatum for the “removal of the entire management team of the Brčko SJB” which was complied with by the local authorities out of fear.²⁶⁹²

825. The Brčko SJB faced structural problems in carrying out investigations and had shortages in vehicles, equipment and communication facilities.²⁶⁹³ Proposals were made to recruit new personnel, re-organise management, and remove individuals from reserve police units who had been charged with criminal acts, to cancel all unauthorised positions, and to improve co-operation with the military security, neighbouring SJB’s and the Serbian MUP.²⁶⁹⁴ The Brčko War Presidency leadership sent a summary of the situation in Brčko to the RS Presidency to identify the results achieved and the problems that needed to be resolved.²⁶⁹⁵

826. Between 29 May and 12 June 1992, employees of the Serbian MUP inspected and offered professional assistance to the Brčko SJB with respect to the failure to perform its basic functions.²⁶⁹⁶ Dragan Andan was sent to Brčko to rebuild the SJB structures and organisation; he also attempted to eliminate the operations of paramilitary groups such as the Red Berets in Brčko and in doing so had ongoing struggles with the local political structures and paramilitary groups.²⁶⁹⁷

827. On 2 June 1992, the Brčko SJB established an organisational structure for the police station, appointed commanders and assistant commanders and outlined the tasks and obligations of personnel in preserving public law and order and protecting property.²⁶⁹⁸ An agreement was reached that all detention measures “be recommended and submitted in writing” to the head of the

828. Over 150 policemen from the frontlines were withdrawn to form a functioning patrol in the town of Brčko and other measures were taken to gather information on crimes committed including property offences, violent and sex crimes.²⁷⁰⁰ Given that a large number of crimes had also been committed by members of the SJB, it was agreed that the gathering of information would continue once the armed conflict was over and necessary measures would be taken against the persons in question at that time.²⁷⁰¹

829. In the summer of 1992, given the increasing security problems in northeast BiH including in Brčko, the SerBiH MUP requested the Federal SUP to send the police and Milorad Davidović to the area to stabilise the security situation and establish the normal functioning of organs of internal affairs.²⁷⁰² Davidović was asked by the leaders of the Crisis Staff in Brčko to come to Brčko to re-establish law and order.²⁷⁰³ This followed a request from the Accused that a special unit be sent to Brčko to address the problems with paramilitaries.²⁷⁰⁴

830. Davidović located, disarmed and arrested the Red Berets including their leader “Žika” and the Božić brothers who had identification from the Serbian MUP.²⁷⁰⁵ After he arrested some of the Red Berets, Frenki Simatović phoned Davidović twice, cursed him and asked how he had the right to act in that way.²⁷⁰⁶ The Chief of the SJB was arrested and beaten by members of a paramilitary unit and Ristanić himself was detained by paramilitaries wearing red berets in late July or early

August 1992 for bringing people from Bijeljina to Brčko to introduce order.²⁷⁰⁷ The paramilitaries expressed their anger and threatened Ristanić because their men had been arrested.²⁷⁰⁸

831. Davidović was transporting the arrested paramilitaries to Bijeljina when he received a radio call which demanded the immediate release of the Red Berets and informed him that the members of the Crisis Staff were being held hostage and one person would be killed every half an hour if the demand was not complied with.²⁷⁰⁹ VRS Lieutenant Colonel Milinković, also pleaded with Davidović to release the arrested men or otherwise the Red Berets would kill him.²⁷¹⁰ Davidović refused to comply with these demands and took the arrested persons to Bijeljina.²⁷¹¹

832. Davidović returned to Brčko the next morning and was informed that the members of the Crisis Staff had been released, after which 90 Red Berets were arrested, of which 80 were from Serbia.²⁷¹² The arrested individuals were placed on buses and transported across the border to Sremska Rača and handed to representatives of the Serbian MUP.²⁷¹³

833. Davidović established curfews and check-points in Brčko with the support of the Crisis Staff, engaged the active duty policemen and was able to restore some law and order within three days of taking control of the Brčko SJB.²⁷¹⁴ An agreement was reached between the VRS and the SDS regarding the command of the area which allowed Davidović and his team to move back and forth between Bijeljina and Brčko to maintain stability.²⁷¹⁵

iv. Foča

(A) Charges

834. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Foča as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.²⁷¹⁶ Under Count 1, the Prosecution further alleges that in certain municipalities, including Foča, this persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.²⁷¹⁷

835. Acts alleged to have been committed in Foča by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings during and after the take-over of Foča,²⁷¹⁸ killings related to detention facilities; and killings committed during and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.²⁷¹⁹ The Prosecution characterises these acts as killing, an underlying act of genocide, under Count 1; persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.²⁷²⁰

836. Other acts alleged to have been committed in Foča by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as well as the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution under Count 3.²⁷²¹ In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that in scheduled detention facilities in Foča thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, and beatings by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs; the Prosecution characterises this inhumane

(B) Lead-up

839. Foča is a large municipality in eastern BiH located to the southeast of Sarajevo in the region of Podrinje.²⁷³³ Prior to the war the population of Foča was approximately 40,000 and consisted of about 52% Bosnian Muslims, 45% Bosnian Serbs, and about 3% who were Montenegrin.²⁷³⁴ While Foča was ethnically mixed, there were neighbourhoods in Foča town and villages in the municipality which could be identified as predominantly Bosnian Muslim or Bosnian Serb.²⁷³⁵

840. Inter-ethnic relations in Foča deteriorated following the formation of national parties and after the multi-party elections with increasing divisions and suspicion on all sides.²⁷³⁶ Petko Čančar was elected President of the SDS, but was later replaced by Miroslav Stanić.²⁷³⁷ Rallies were held by both the SDS and SDA,²⁷³⁸ this disrupted inter-ethnic relations further and led to rumours that the territory of the municipality, the companies, and institutions would be split along ethnic lines.²⁷³⁹ Relations further deteriorated after war broke out in Slovenia and Croatia²⁷⁴⁰ and the two

On 3 April 1992, the Statute of the Serb Municipality of Foča was promulgated and stated that the municipality was part of the SAO Herzegovina.²⁷⁵¹ This statute provided that the boundaries in the municipality “may be modified only keeping with the will of the local Serbian people” and also stipulated that the Serb Municipality of Foča was to enforce the laws of the SerBiH and the SAO Herzegovina.²⁷⁵² Pursuant to the terms of the statute, the Crisis Staff of the Serb Municipality of Foča (“Foča Crisis Staff”) was established on the same day²⁷⁵³ and Miroslav Stanić was appointed as its president.²⁷⁵⁴ Bosnian Muslims also established a crisis staff in Foča.²⁷⁵⁵ The Foča Crisis Staff operated from the Bosnian Serb neighbourhood of Čerežluk²⁷⁵⁶ and was required to take over the duties of the Municipal Assembly during an imminent threat or state of war.²⁷⁵⁷

(2) Militarisation of Foča

847. By January 1992 all Bosnian Muslim reservists had left the JNA base at Ustikolina following orders of the SDA.²⁷⁵⁹ At that time, in addition to regular JNA troops a significant number of Serb reservists came to the JNA barracks and were provided with supplies.²⁷⁶⁰

848. In the months before the outbreak of the conflict in Foča, both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims began to arm themselves, though Bosnian Serbs were better prepared.²⁷⁶¹ Bosnian Serbs armed themselves surreptitiously at first, distributing weapons by truck in the evenings, or from local businesses.²⁷⁶² Immediately prior to the outbreak of the conflict, the distribution of arms to Bosnian Serbs was done openly.²⁷⁶³ On 17 March 1992, the Executive Board of the Serb Assembly of Foča sent a letter to the JNA General Staff urgently requesting that a JNA garrison be stationed in Foča.²⁷⁶⁴

849. The SDS and Gojko Janković were involved in military preparations and formed several units in the municipality.²⁷⁶⁵ Stanić, who was also a member of the SDS Main Board, was the commander of the Tactical Group of Foča and became known as the “First War Commander” in the Pljevaljčić disputed the extent to which the Bosnian Serbs were armed and testified that only one reserve complement of Bosnian Serbs was armed and that Bosnian Serbs had access to hunting weapons but only took infantry weapons from warehouses when the conflict broke out. Trifko Pljevaljčić, T. 32299–32300, 32333 (21 January 2013). However, the Chamber notes that when confronted with evidence which suggested that the Bosnian Serb population was being armed, Pljevaljčić maintained that Gojko Janković was not involved but denied all knowledge about the formation of four battalions under the organisation of the SDS in 1991 and claimed he was not aware of what the Foča Crisis Staff did in forming units. Trifko Pljevaljčić, T. 32335–32336 (21 January 2013); P6082 (Proposal of Foča Territorial Group, 13 August 1993), p. 1. In light of these equivocal answers and the other evidence received on this issue, the Chamber does not accept Pljevaljčić’s evidence about the extent to which Bosnian Serbs were being armed in Foča. The Chamber is however, satisfied that Bosnian Muslims were also armed to some extent and that Bosnian Muslim paramilitary formations, such as the Patriotic League and Green Berets, were present in Foča before clashes broke out. municipality.²⁷⁶⁶ Another significant leader in Foča was Marko Kovač, a former JNA officer²⁷⁶⁷ who subsequently took over from Stanić as the commander of the Tactical Group.²⁷⁶⁸ Stanić and Kovač reported on behalf of the Tactical Group to Mladić²⁷⁶⁹ and this unit was transformed into a unit of the VRS in May 1992.²⁷⁷⁰ The Tactical Group reported to the Herzegovina Corps,²⁷⁷¹ which in turn reported on the activities of the Tactical Group to the VRS Main Staff.²⁷⁷²

(C) Take-over of Foča

850. On 2 March 1992, the SDS Municipal Board of Foča sent a letter addressed to the office of the President of the SDS Crisis Staff in Sarajevo indicating that they were “ready to carry out any order”.²⁷⁷³

851. On 4 March 1992, at a meeting between representatives of the SDA and SDS, negotiations concluded with an agreement to lift blockades which had been erected by both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs and to hold an extraordinary session of the Municipal Assembly to discuss the political and security situation.²⁷⁷⁴ There were also discussions between Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim representatives about the division of Foča into two municipalities and the division of power.²⁷⁷⁵

852. In early April 1992, Stanić, was heard on Radio Foča saying that it was no longer possible for Bosnian Serbs to live with their Bosnian Muslim neighbours, that they could not be woken every morning by the hodža from the mosque, and that there was a danger that the Bosnian Serb population would be circumcised.²⁷⁷⁶ Stanić also stated the Bosnian Serb position that “the Drina would never become a border but a windpipe between two lungs”, which was a reference to the RS and Serbia.²⁷⁷⁷ Other messages were broadcast by radio to the effect that “the time had come for the Serbs to settle accounts with the balijas once and for all, and that the Serbs would no longer allow their ribs to be broken. They will no longer allow their children to be circumcised”.²⁷⁷⁸ These radio broadcasts created further divisions in Foča.²⁷⁷⁹

853. Despite these negotiations, armed clashes began in Foča on 6 April 1992 when the results of the referendum on the independence of BiH were published.²⁷⁸⁰ By 7 April 1992, there was a presence of Serb Forces on the streets, and some people failed to report for work, fearful of the rising tensions in the town.²⁷⁸¹ After the conflict broke out there were calls by the military authorities for mobilisation of the Bosnian Serb population from loudspeakers.²⁷⁸² A number of Bosnian Serbs were mobilised on 7 April 1992 and issued with weapons and that night, Bosnian Serbs took over the Foča radio station, the warehouse of the regional medical centre, and the TO warehouse where weapons were stored.²⁷⁸³

854. On 7 April 1992, the President of the Serb Municipality of Foča made a public announcement that in accordance with decisions made by the Bosnian Serb Assembly, all organs of the Serb municipality would become operational.²⁷⁸⁴ This same announcement called “upon the Serbian people and other civilians to maintain composure and common sense” and observed that TO units and the SJB would maintain public law and order, protect people and property, and prevent the presence of paramilitary formations in the Serb Municipality of Foča.²⁷⁸⁵ It also appealed to all citizens, including Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs, not to move out of Foča and for those who had left to return.²⁷⁸⁶

855. Serb Forces deployed heavy artillery weapons on elevated sites around Foča.²⁷⁸⁷ On the morning of 8 April 1992, Serb Forces commenced the main attack on the town of Foča, with a combination of infantry fire and shelling from artillery weapons directed primarily at predominantly Muslim neighbourhoods.²⁷⁸⁸ They proceeded to take over Foča area by area, including the areas of Donje Polje and Šukovac where there was resistance by Bosnian Muslim forces.²⁷⁸⁹ The Foča Crisis Staff issued orders for the taking of certain positions, which were implemented by Serbs Forces.²⁷⁹⁰ The Serb Forces that took part in the attack included local soldiers as well as soldiers from Serbia and Montenegro, the Foča Tactical Group and paramilitaries, including the White Eagles.²⁷⁹¹ The attack continued for six or seven days, although the worst shelling and damage took place in the first few days.²⁷⁹² The attack resulted in large numbers of wounded civilians, most of whom were Bosnian Muslims.²⁷⁹³

²⁷⁸⁶ KDZ239, T. 18983, 18985 (16 September 2011). KDZ239 testified further that this was just a trap and the announcement was made “to increase the number of those who were caught” and those Bosnian Muslims who returned believing it to be safe “fared badly”. However, the Chamber does not rely on KDZ239’s assessment, which is based on his speculation.

Adjudicated Fact 741 indicates that the shelling was from Kalinovik and Miljevina. However, Vujičić testified that this was not possible given that Kalinovik was 40 kilometres away and thus out of range. Milutin Vujičić, T. 32145 (17 January 2013). While Vujičić’s evidence was marked by evasiveness and some aspects were unreliable, the Chamber considers that his evidence does cast some doubt as to the precise origin of fire. However, this does not undermine the evidence that Serb Forces launched the artillery attacks in question.

²⁷⁸⁹ See Adjudicated Fact 743. Donje Polje was also the location of the Bosnian Muslim crisis staff in Foča. KDZ017, T. 19878 (4 October 2011); Adjudicated Fact 730. ²⁷⁹⁰ KDZ379, T. 18834, 18836 (15 September 2011); P3476 (Video clip of interview with Miroslav Stanić, with transcript). Mladenović testified that the goal of the Foča Crisis Staff was simply to “save the people” and deal with resources, supply and production. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), paras. 20, 26; Radojica Mladenović, T. 36626–36627, 36684 (5 April 2013). The Chamber does not consider that it can rely on Mladenović’s evidence in this regard given that his evidence was marked by significant contradictions and evasiveness which undermined his credibility and showed bias.

²⁷⁹³ See Adjudicated Fact 744. Defence witnesses testified that (i) Serb Forces were able to “liberate” Foča with few casualties on both sides; (ii) the White Eagles and JNA never took part in the conflict; (iii) civilians were not killed in the first few days; (iv) there was no heavy artillery fire at Foča; (v) Bosnian Serbs only fought with light arms until June 1992; (vi) the shelling by Bosnian Muslims caused panic and prompted large numbers of both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims to head towards Montenegro and Serbia; and (vii) Serb Forces were

856. The Chamber finds that there were clashes between Serb Forces and Bosnian Muslim forces but before long Serb Forces had control of the town.²⁷⁹⁴ During the conflict, many civilians hid in their homes, basements, or with relatives while others left Foča altogether for their safety.²⁷⁹⁵

857. During the attack, some neighbourhoods were destroyed and Bosnian Muslim homes were set on fire by Serb Forces.²⁷⁹⁶ Bosnian Muslim homes were also set on fire by Serb Forces at that time as well as after the town had been secured.²⁷⁹⁷ Some of these houses were looted before being set on fire.²⁷⁹⁸ Some Bosnian Muslim houses were destroyed and were beside an untouched Serb apartment identified with a note saying “Serb apartment — do not torch”.²⁷⁹⁹ Fire engines protected Bosnian Serb houses while Bosnian Muslim houses burned.²⁸⁰⁰ Other Bosnian Muslim

However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that the evidence of the relevant witnesses was either based on speculation alone, or marked by evasiveness, contradictions, negative demeanour and indicators that they were trying to mislead the Chamber. These factors undermined their credibility and in light of the other evidence received, the Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable.

²⁷⁹⁶ See Adjudicated Fact 902. See also Adjudicated Fact 813.

²⁷⁹⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 902; KDZ239, P3336 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 1188–1189. For example Donje Polje, the largely Muslim neighbourhood of Šukovač, and Bosnian Muslim houses in Kamerici and in Granovski Sokak were burned as was the old town neighbourhood of Prijeka Čaršija with its oriental-Islamic style market and Muslim houses in Pilipovići and the neighbouring village of Paunci. Adjudicated Facts 903, 904, 909. See also P90 (Witness statement of KDZ216 dated 8 June 1998), p. 12 (under seal); KDZ216, P69 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Kunarac), T. 3367–3368 (under seal); P502 (Video clip of a man and destroyed houses). While KDZ239 testified that Bosnian Muslim homes were set on fire in order “to frighten the local population to flee the town”, the Chamber does not rely on his opinion in this regard. The Chamber notes that the evidence adduced by the Defence does not dispute the destruction of Bosnian Muslim homes, but challenges the systematic nature of the destruction and seeks to blame Bosnian Muslim Forces for instigating these events. Mladenović testified that (i) Bosnian Muslim houses were not systematically torched during the attack on the town; (ii) the torching of houses was started by Bosnian Muslim units; (iii) the military command issued an order which involved sealing abandoned properties and prohibiting destruction and looting of property; and that (iv) the burning of houses by both sides got out of control when Bosnian Muslim forces started burning houses. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), paras. 46, 56; Radojica Mladenović, T. 36615–36616, 36679, 36697 (5 April 2013). While the Chamber finds that some Bosnian Serb homes may have been burnt (see KDZ239, P3336 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 1188–1189), it does not consider Mladenović’s evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Mladenović’s evidence was marked by contradictions, extreme evasiveness and bias which undermined his credibility.

²⁸⁰⁹ D3319 (Belgrade Radio news report, 8 April 1992); Radojica Mladenović, T. 36704 (5 April 2013). Ostojić was the state commissioner for Foča Municipality until this authority was transferred to Vojislav Maksimović on 4 June 1992 by a certificate signed on behalf of the Accused. See also P90 (Witness statement of KDZ216 dated 8 June 1998), p. 16 (under seal). [REDACTED]. In addition the Chamber received hearsay evidence that Velibor Ostojić attended meetings in Foča during the attack in April 1992 and said that there should be no negotiations, that “they should all be killed” and that they should “slaughter anything that is human”. KDZ017, T. 19868–19870, (4 October 2011) (private session), T. 19872 (4 October 2011). See also Radojica Mladenović, T. 36636–36638 (5 April 2013) (acknowledging that Ostojić was present at some time during the take-over of Foča); KDZ379, P3332 (Transcript from *Prosecutor v. However, having weighed the relevant evidence, the Chamber, while satisfied that Ostojić did attend some meetings during the conflict in Foča, is not satisfied that it can make a finding about what Ostojić said at those meetings based on this hearsay evidence.

and destroyed.²⁸¹¹ For example, the village of Brod was attacked on 20 April 1992, after the village authorities did not respond to a Foča Crisis Staff demand that the village surrender.²⁸¹² Similarly around 28 April 1992, Serb Forces attacked Ustikolina where Bosnian Muslims had tried to form resistance, after which the Serb Forces set fire to Bosnian Muslim houses there.²⁸¹³

860. On 30 April 1992, Ostojić reported to the Bosnian Serb government that Ustikolina was “liberated” and that the civilian authorities had “control over the overall situation”.²⁸¹⁴ Thereafter, Serb Forces continued attacking and destroying Muslim villages along the Drina while the population fled.²⁸¹⁵ Ostojić continued to report on progress of the military action in Foča to republican level organs.²⁸¹⁶ By around the end of April 1992, Serb Forces had control of the municipality.²⁸¹⁷

861. In June 1992, Serb Forces continued to attack, loot, and burn down Bosnian Muslim villages in Foča.²⁸¹⁸ During these attacks Bosnian Muslim villagers were rounded up or captured, and sometimes beaten.²⁸¹⁹ For example, in Miljevina, Serb Forces set the surrounding Muslim villages on fire and arrested Bosnian Muslim civilian males.²⁸²⁰

(D) Events after the take-over of Foča

862. After the take-over, the municipality was run by the Foča Crisis Staff until the municipal assembly was able to function.²⁸²¹ Immediately after the take-over, restrictions were imposed on the non-Serb inhabitants.²⁸²² Between 10 April 1992 and the beginning of June 1992, large-scale arrests of non-Serb civilian men, mostly of Muslim ethnicity, were carried out throughout Foča.²⁸²³ Non-Serbs were arrested throughout the municipality. Bosnian Muslim men were rounded up in the streets, separated from the women and children and from the Bosnian Serb population.²⁸²⁴ Others were arrested in their apartments or in the houses of friends and relatives, taken away from their workplaces, or dragged from their hospital beds and detained at multiple detention facilities.²⁸²⁵ Upon arrest and during transportation to detention facilities, they were referred to by Serb soldiers by the derogatory term “balija”, cursed, and beaten.²⁸²⁶

²⁸²⁰ See Adjudicated Fact 754. According to Defence witnesses, when soldiers were mobilised into the Serb Forces they were informed about provisions of Geneva Conventions which were contained in the rules of conduct and an official announcement was read out to soldiers informing them that when mopping up villages the civilian population, homes and property were “completely off limits and that every transgression of these units would be strictly punished”. D2767 (Witness statement of Milutin Vujičić dated 14 January 2013), paras. 14–15; Milutin Vujičić, T. 32133, 32145–32146 (17 January 2013). Considering that Vujičić’s evidence was marked by indicators of evasiveness and attempts to mislead the Chamber, the Chamber does not find that this evidence is reliable.

863. The Foča hospital continued to function and treated both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs and civilians of all ethnicities who sought shelter there at the start of the conflict.²⁸²⁷ On one occasion, a Bosnian Serb soldier severely kicked three patients in Foča hospital and beat them with a chair after learning that they were Muslim and the beating stopped only when a doctor intervened and called the police.²⁸²⁸

864. In April and May 1992, Bosnian Muslim households were searched by the Bosnian Serb MP or soldiers, including for weapons and money.²⁸²⁹ Bosnian Serb houses were not searched, or at most were searched superficially.²⁸³⁰ Bosnian Muslims were ordered to surrender their weapons while Serbs were allowed to keep theirs.²⁸³¹ Many of the Bosnian Muslims gave up their personal weapons so that they would not be accused of participating in the conflict.²⁸³²

²⁸²⁹ See Adjudicated Fact 776. See also Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7888. The Chamber notes that D1684 (Order of Foča Crisis Staff) is an order by the Foča Crisis Staff to the MP to disarm and take into custody any person involved in theft in the town and to “prohibit any misuse and conduct unbecoming a soldier”. However, given that the order is undated, this limits its probative value.

865. From April 1992, Bosnian Muslims were laid off from their jobs or were prevented or discouraged from reporting to work.²⁸³³ Restrictions were placed on the movement of non-Serbs and announcements were made over the radio and with a loudspeaker on a police car that Bosnian Muslims were not allowed to move about.²⁸³⁴ At the same time, the Bosnian Serb population could move around freely, with the exception of a night curfew from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. imposed on all inhabitants.²⁸³⁵ Bosnian Muslims were forbidden to meet with each other, and had their phone lines cut off.²⁸³⁶ Restrictions imposed resulted in them being under virtual house arrest.²⁸³⁷ Military check-points were established, controlling access in and out of Foča and its surrounding villages.²⁸³⁸

866. Paramilitary formations were present in Foča, including units known as Tuta's Group, Pero's group, Brane Čosović's group, Gojko Janković's group, and Zaga's unit which was led by Dragan Kunarac, a.k.a. Zaga.²⁸³⁹ Paramilitaries were involved in looting gold, jewellery, and money from homes.²⁸⁴⁰ Commanders of these units would visit Kovač.²⁸⁴¹ However, by May 1992

²⁸³³ See Adjudicated Facts 770, 771.

²⁸³⁴ See Adjudicated Fact 772. Defence witnesses disputed this adjudicated fact and testified that it was dangerous for all citizens to walk around and that there were no restrictions on the movement of the non-Serb population except during the curfew when all citizens were subject to movement restrictions. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), paras. 25, 57; D3128 (Witness statement of Veljko Marić dated 16 March 2013), para. 25. The Chamber does not consider that this evidence is reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that Mladenović's evidence was marked by multiple contradictions and extreme evasiveness. With respect to Marić, the Chamber notes that he simply states that Adjudicated Fact 772 is not correct and that it was dangerous for all citizens to walk around but does not expressly address whether or not there were additional restrictions imposed on Bosnian Muslims.

²⁸³⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 772.

²⁸³⁶ See Adjudicated Fact 773. Radojica Mladenović disputed this adjudicated fact and testified that it was not possible to selectively disconnect phone lines. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), para. 58. The Chamber does not consider that it can rely on this evidence as it was marked by multiple contradictions and extreme evasiveness which undermined his credibility.

See also Radojica Mladenović, T. 36673 (5 April 2013) (testifying that these units "acted in concert with regular units of the army"). Defence witnesses testified that paramilitary groups (i) came to the municipality randomly for the purposes of plunder; (ii) were not considered welcome by the civilian and military authorities; and (iii) killed both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), paras. 42–43; Mitar Rašević, T. 46813–46815 (11 February 2014); Trifko Pljevaljčić, T. 32332–32333 (21 January 2013); D2767 (Witness statement of Milutin Vujičić dated 14 January 2013), para. 10; Milutin Vujičić, T. 32124 (17 January 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In this regard, with respect to Vujičić the Chamber notes a contradiction in his evidence. On the one hand, Vujičić states that the paramilitary formations were completely unknown to him, but he knew that they killed people regardless of ethnicity. Similarly, the evidence of Mladenović that these groups came randomly is contradicted by his evidence that some of the units "acted in concert with the regular units of the the authorities attempted to expel paramilitary formations from the municipality.²⁸⁴² In July 1992, Mićo Stanišić instructed the special unit led by Davidović and Andan to establish law and order in Foča and to take measures against paramilitaries who were disrupting the functioning of the legal authorities.²⁸⁴³

(1) Scheduled Incident A.5.2

867. The Prosecution alleges that a number of civilians from the village of Jeleč were killed between 1 and 5 May 1992.

868. Jeleč is a village about 22 kilometres from Foča near Miljevina. Jeleč was shelled, attacked by infantry, and taken over by Serb Forces on 4 or 5 May 1992.²⁸⁴⁴ Serb Forces set Jeleč on fire after which the population fled to a nearby forest. Muslims who stayed in their homes or who tried to escape were killed.²⁸⁴⁵ Other male Bosnian Muslim villagers were captured and detained before being transferred to the KP Dom Foča.²⁸⁴⁶

869. The Chamber therefore finds that a number of civilians from the village of Jeleč were killed by Serb Forces between 1 and 5 May 1992.

(2) Scheduled Incident A.5.4

870. The Prosecution alleges that a number of people hiding in the woods near Mješaja/Trošanj were killed in early July 1992.

army". In addition the evidence of these witnesses is marked by multiple other contradictions and extreme evasiveness, which undermine their credibility.

²⁸⁴⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 761. See also Adjudicated Fact 752. The Prosecution refers to Mašović's evidence with respect to the exhumation of one individual who it links to this incident. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G, Foča, Scheduled Incident A.5.2. Mašović refers to one individual from Jeleč who went missing on 4 May 1992 and who was exhumed from a grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 6. However, the Chamber is not satisfied that, in the absence of further evidence it can link the named individual with this scheduled incident based on Mašović's evidence and will therefore not rely on this exhumation evidence for the purposes of entering findings with respect to this incident. Mladenović testified that Jeleč was a stronghold of the Patriotic League and Serb Forces "liberated" the village after previous failed attempts to negotiate for the return of weapons and to avoid clashes. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), para. 41. Similarly the Accused made a submission that the casualties in Jeleč were collateral damage in a military operation. Defence Final Brief, para. 1771. However, the Chamber does not consider that Mladenović's evidence or the Accused's unsupported submission contradicts the evidence which relates to the conduct of the members of Serb Forces who entered Jeleč, burnt down the village, forced villagers to flee, and killed those who remained in their houses or who tried to escape.

²⁸⁴⁶ See Adjudicated Fact 761. See Scheduled Detention Facility C.10.1 for evidence relating to detention and treatment at KP Dom Foča.

871. On 3 July 1992, the Bosnian Muslim village of Mješaja/Trošanj, situated between Foča and Tjenštište, was attacked by Serb Forces including units led by Gojko Janković and Radomir Kovač.²⁸⁴⁷ Kovač was a member of Čosović's group.²⁸⁴⁸

872. At the time of the attack, some Bosnian Muslim villagers in Trošanj continued living in their houses but would sleep in the woods at night and only return to their homes during the daytime.²⁸⁴⁹ They were afraid because they saw other Muslim villages burning and felt targeted as Muslims.²⁸⁵⁰ The Chamber also took judicial notice that three villagers in Mješaja/Trošanj were killed during the initial attack.²⁸⁵¹ However, the Chamber does not have sufficient evidence as to the circumstances surrounding the deaths of these three individuals during the attack on the village to make a finding in this regard.

873. After capturing a group of about 50 Muslim villagers, Serb Forces separated the men from the women. The women were chased down a hill towards the village and seven detained men were beaten and then killed.²⁸⁵² Serb soldiers hit the villagers with rifle butts and tree branches, kicking them, and calling them "Ustashas" and one of the Muslims lost an eye as a result of the beating.²⁸⁵³

²⁸⁴⁷ See Adjudicated Facts 763, 2398. The Chamber received evidence that Janković went to villages to identify how Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs could be rescued and that there had been previous attempts to negotiate the surrender of weapons in the village of Trošanj and assurances given to Bosnian Muslims who surrendered their weapons. Milutin Vujičić, T. 32128 (17 January 2013); D3316 (Agreement between Trošanj Muslim representatives and Foča authorities, 24 April 1992), p. 1. However, the Chamber does not accept that this evidence is reliable or can be connected with this incident. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Vujičić's evidence was marked by evasiveness and indicators that he was attempting to mislead the Chamber, which resulted in his credibility being undermined. In addition, the Chamber notes that Mladenović acknowledged that he may have not been properly informed about all events in the village and denied any knowledge of evidence which suggested that Bosnian Muslims did in fact hand over weapons. Radojica Mladenović, T. 36655–36656 (5 April 2013). The Chamber therefore does not consider that Mladenović's evidence casts any doubt on the evidence received which relates to the conduct of Serb Forces during the attack.

²⁸⁵¹ See Adjudicated Facts 765, 2398, 2399.

²⁸⁵² See Adjudicated Facts 765, 2398, 2399, 2401. The Prosecution refers to Mašović's evidence with respect to the exhumation of one individual who it links to this incident. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G, Foča Scheduled Incident A.5.4. Mašović's evidence is that ten bodies which were exhumed from a mass grave at Trošanj are linked to individuals who went missing on 1 May 1992. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 6. The Chamber notes that this date is not consistent with the evidence which suggested that these killings occurred in July 1992. In addition, in the absence of further evidence, the Chamber cannot link the named individual with this scheduled incident based on Mašović's evidence and will therefore not rely on this exhumation evidence for the purposes of entering findings with respect to this incident.

²⁸⁵³ See Adjudicated Fact 2400.

Some Bosnian Muslims from the village were taken to detention facilities including KP Dom²⁸⁵⁴ and the Worker's Huts at Buk Bijela.²⁸⁵⁵

874. The Chamber therefore finds that Serb Forces killed at least seven Bosnian Muslim civilians from the village of Mješaja/Trošanji in July 1992.

(E) Detention Facilities in Foča

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.10.6

875. The Indictment refers to the use of the TO military warehouses at Livade as a detention facility between 14 and 17 April 1992.

876. In mid-April 1992, many Bosnian Muslim civilians who were arrested in the centre of Foča or other areas of the town were taken and detained at the TO military warehouses at Livade.²⁸⁵⁶ Those detained included several doctors and medical staff from Foča hospital and members of the SDA who were arrested by soldiers, including members of the TO and soldiers in camouflage JNA uniforms.²⁸⁵⁷ During the arrests, several of the detainees were severely beaten and injured while others had their hands tied before being taken away.²⁸⁵⁸ In mid April 1992, approximately 80 to 100 men were detained in hangars at the facility.²⁸⁵⁹ This figure did not include the women and children who were separated and taken to other hangars.²⁸⁶⁰ Most the people detained were Bosnian Muslims and one was a Bosnian Croat.²⁸⁶¹

877. Some detainees who arrived at the facility had already been severely beaten.²⁸⁶² Veselin Čančar was the commander of Livade and was heard cursing and threatening the detainees.²⁸⁶³ A boy who was captured in the town of Foča and brought to Livade, was tied to a fence and beaten with ropes.²⁸⁶⁴ While the detainees could not see the beating, they could hear the blows, his screams and the “rope piercing the air”.²⁸⁶⁵

878. KDZ239 testified that the conditions at the facility were very poor, there “was a lot of humidity there. Hygienic conditions were poor, also food was not good, and this was not a good place to stay either. Conditions were poor”.²⁸⁶⁶ The Chamber does not consider that KDZ239’s evidence in this regard provides sufficient detail to allow the Chamber to make a finding as to the conditions of detention at this facility. On 17 April 1992, all the male Bosnian Muslim civilians detained at Livade were transferred to the KP Dom Foča.²⁸⁶⁷

879. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serbs were brought to and detained at the TO military warehouses in Livade in mid-April 1992 and that some of the detainees were beaten there.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.10.1

880. The Indictment refers to the use of the KP Dom Foča as a detention facility from 18 April 1992 until at least 31 December 1992.²⁸⁶⁸

(a) Arrival of detainees and control over the detention facility

881. Before the war KP Dom functioned as a prison with a capacity of between 600 and 800 detainees.²⁸⁶⁹ However, many of these detainees were released or escaped in the lead-up to the war.²⁸⁷⁰ Bosnian Muslims who had been arrested were transferred to the KP Dom Foča from mid-April 1992.²⁸⁷¹ For example, all Bosnian Muslim civilians detained at Livade were transferred to the KP Dom in mid April 1992.²⁸⁷² When this group arrived there were already between 40 and 60 detainees in one room.²⁸⁷³ After a few days the names and professions of the detainees were recorded by one of the guards.²⁸⁷⁴ Towards the end of April 1992, detainees were taken from the Velečevo prison to KP Dom. At the entrance of the KP Dom there was a bus filled with women and children.²⁸⁷⁵ A group of about 20 Bosnian Muslims from Foča who had fled were arrested in Montenegro and brought to KP Dom in May 1992 under the escort of police from Foča.²⁸⁷⁶ After a few days, 50 to 60 other Bosnian Muslims civilians were brought from Foča and surrounding villages to the facility.²⁸⁷⁷ More non-Serb detainees were brought to the facility in June 1992.²⁸⁷⁸ Some Bosnian Serbs were also detained at the facility primarily for breaches of military discipline.²⁸⁷⁹

882. Even though Bosnian Muslims had been transferred to the facility from mid-April 1992, it was only on 4 July 1992 that the KP Dom Foča was formally established following a decision by the government of the SerBiH.²⁸⁸⁰ Members of the municipal level military and civilian authorities visited the facility.²⁸⁸¹ Both the Ministry of Justice and the military authorities in Foča had responsibility and exercised control over the facility.²⁸⁸² However, it was the military authorities at

While the Chamber accepts that there may have been difficulties in communication, Rašević's evidence that there was no contact between the KP Dom on the one hand and the Minister of Justice and the Republican

KP Dom that had the power to make decisions concerning which non-Serb detainees would be detained in, and released from, the facility.²⁸⁸³ The military authorities at KP Dom could also make decisions about which persons would be permitted to enter the facility, and had some power over the appointment of persons to work assignments at the facility.²⁸⁸⁴ Krnojelac was kept informed about who was to be detained by the military authorities and who was to be released²⁸⁸⁵ and was obliged to forward requests for release of these detainees to the Foča Crisis Staff or the Foča Tactical Group.²⁸⁸⁶ Krnojelac did forward some requests for release of Bosnian Muslim detainees to the Foča Crisis Staff and to the Foča Tactical Group and some requests were approved after the detainees had been processed.²⁸⁸⁷

883. Bosnian Muslim civilians who were arrested by Serb Forces were detained at KP Dom for periods lasting from four months to more than two and a half years.²⁸⁸⁸ They were not detained on any legal grounds and their continued detention was not subject to review by Serb authorities.²⁸⁸⁹

Defence witnesses testified that the KP Dom Foča and other detention facilities (i) were "reception facilities" which were used by the Bosnian Serb authorities to protect and guarantee the security of these civilians from uncontrolled paramilitary and criminal elements; (ii) Bosnian Muslims who were held at these centres could ask for permission from the guards to either leave the municipality or to return to their villages to care for livestock or buy food from the shops. D2767 (Witness statement of Milutin Vujičić dated 14 January 2013), paras. 31, 33; Milutin Vujičić, T. 32097, 32133 (17 January 2013); Trifko Pljevaljčić, T. 32313–32316, 32344 (21 January 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that Vujičić's evidence was marked by evasiveness and indicators that he was seeking to mislead the Chamber which undermined his credibility in this regard. With respect to Pljevaljčić's evidence on this issue, he testified in general terms and the Chamber is not satisfied that it pertains specifically to those detained at KP Dom Foča.

²⁸⁸⁹ See Adjudicated Facts 826, 827. Mitar Rašević testified that no detainee was brought to the facility without being referred by the army command with appropriate documentation which listed the grounds for detention. D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), paras. 29, 43; Mitar Rašević, T. 46816 (11 February 2014). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted contradictions in the testimony of Rašević in this regard and his denial of knowledge that documentation used for the detention of individuals contained standard wording which suggested that they were captured in war operations, when they were actually civilians. Mitar Rašević, T. 46777–46780

Investigators from the MUP came to the KP Dom to interrogate detainees.²⁸⁹⁰ The Chamber also received evidence that in February 1993, Slobodan Avlijaš sent a letter to penal and correctional facilities, including the KP Dom Foča, noting that the Ministry of Justice had been informed that people were detained without detention orders from a competent court. Avlijaš requested these correctional facilities to inform the Ministry about the number of detainees and those who did not have detention orders and to release the latter.²⁸⁹¹ However, ultimately, the Bosnian Muslim detainees were not suspected, charged, tried, or convicted for any crime before being detained or while detained at the KP Dom²⁸⁹² nor were they advised of their rights before or during their detention.²⁸⁹³ After the conflict started, the overwhelming majority of those detained at the facility were Bosnian Muslims, these included doctors and medical health workers, journalists, former KP Dom employees, managers, police officers, and other civilians.²⁸⁹⁴ No consideration was given to age, state of health or civilian status. The detainees ranged from 15 to almost 80 years of age.²⁸⁹⁵ In addition to the mainly civilian population at the KP Dom, there was a small number of Bosnian Muslim soldiers kept in isolation cells separately from the civilian detainees.²⁸⁹⁶

884. In mid-April-1992, the facility was run by the Užice Corps of the JNA.²⁸⁹⁷ Apart from members of the Užice Corps, the civilian police, and people from Serbia were also present at the (11 February 2014); P6656 (Excerpt from Mitar Rašević's testimony before BiH State Court, 11 December 2007), pp. 5–6. Similarly, the Chamber notes contradictions in Krnojelac's evidence on this issue. He initially testified that he was told people were detained there because they were Bosnian Muslims but later retracted this statement. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from *Prosecutor v. ²⁸⁹⁴ See Adjudicated Facts 830, 832. Marić also testified that in the middle of July 1992, Bosnian Muslim staff left the hospital but were not forced to do so. Marić was challenged about this evidence and maintained that non-Serb employees of the hospital were not expelled or detained at the KP Dom Foča but then acknowledged that one of his colleagues did end up at the facility. Veljko Marić, T. 35597–35599 (19 March 2013); P6206 (Order of Foča Tactical Group, 4 July 1993). In light of this inconsistency, the Chamber will not rely on the witness's assertion that no Bosnian Muslim employees of the hospital were detained at the KP Dom.

²⁸⁹⁵ See Adjudicated Fact 832. See also KDZ239, P3336 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 1217. Rašević testified that (i) there were no people under the age of 18; (ii) he did not recall seeing people over the age of 60 or 65 at the facility; and (iii) all detainees whether they were prisoners of war or convicts were treated the same regardless of ethnicity. D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), para. 43; Mitar Rašević, T. 46753, 46776–46777, 46783 (11 February 2014). The Chamber does not consider Rašević's evidence to be reliable in this regard. The Chamber notes that Rašević himself acknowledged that he did not know the situation until mid May 1992 when he returned to the facility and was inconclusive in his testimony when confronted with evidence which suggested that elderly detainees, women and children had been detained at the facility. people”.²⁹²⁴ Detainees were locked in their rooms except for meals and work duty.²⁹²⁵ The detainees were deliberately housed in cramped conditions. Even though the KP Dom had the capacity to house more than the maximum number of non-Serbs detained at the facility, the detainees were crowded into a small number of rooms.²⁹²⁶ Solitary confinement cells designed to hold one person were packed with up to 18 people at a time, making it impossible for the detainees to move around the cell, or to sleep lying down.²⁹²⁷ Because of the overcrowding, not everyone had a bed or even a mattress, and there were insufficient blankets.²⁹²⁸ Bedding was insufficient or non-existent.²⁹²⁹ The only bed linen provided was that left-over from former convicts, and these items were never washed or changed throughout 1992.²⁹³⁰

890. Hygienic conditions were deplorable and washing facilities minimal.²⁹³¹ Detainees only occasionally were given soap to wash their clothes in cold water.²⁹³² Access to baths or showers, with no hot water, was irregular at best.²⁹³³ There were insufficient hygienic products and ²⁹²⁷ Adjudicated Fact 843. Rašević also testified that the solitary confinement cells were small but contained a bed, toilet and sink and it was not possible for 18 people to be placed in these rooms and detainees were only placed in solitary confinement for misdemeanours. D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), paras. 8, 21–22. The Chamber does not find Rašević's evidence in this regard to be credible. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its earlier assessment in fn. 2926 regarding the credibility of Rašević's evidence.

²⁹³³ Adjudicated Fact 845. Defence witnesses testified that water problems were fixed and measures were taken to allow for the heating of water to allow detainees to bathe. D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), para. 17; Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7668–7669. The Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber notes the equivocal nature of these requests and the unreliability of evidence given by Krnojelac considering his interest in minimising his own responsibility for the conditions of detention at the facility as he claimed to have not actually entered the premises where people were detained. The Chamber also refers to its earlier assessment in fn. 2926 regarding the credibility of Rašević's evidence.

toiletries.²⁹³⁴ Due to the poor hygienic conditions and since the detainees did not have an opportunity to bathe or change clothes there was a major problem with lice.²⁹³⁵

891. Non-Serb detainees were held in rooms with insufficient heating during the harsh winter of 1992, no heaters were placed in the rooms, windowpanes were left broken and clothes made from blankets to combat the cold were confiscated.²⁹³⁶ Stoves and furnaces had been produced to heat the offices in the administration building, and there was sufficient raw material for such furnaces to have been provided for the non-Serb detainees.²⁹³⁷

892. Any attempts made by non-Serb detainees to improve their living conditions in the camp were punished with solitary confinement.²⁹³⁸ Acts which resulted in beatings or periods in the isolation cells included efforts to get additional food or access to warm water, and attempts to communicate with each other, the guards, or the outside world.²⁹³⁹

893. The effect of the cold on the detainees was exacerbated by the fact that while they received two meals a day, the food was poor.²⁹⁴⁰ A large number of the Bosnian Muslim detainees experienced severe weight loss and saw their medical condition deteriorate.²⁹⁴¹ While non-Serb detainees were fed starvation rations leading to severe weight loss and other health problems,²⁹⁴²

²⁹³⁴ Adjudicated Fact 845. The Chamber finds that hygienic conditions did improve to some extent by 1993 but the allegations with respect to KP Dom are limited to the end of 1992. KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2979.

The Chamber also received evidence that furnaces were only provided to non-Serb detainees by the ICRC in October 1993. Adjudicated Fact 849. However, given that this falls outside the period of alleged detention at KP Dom, the Chamber does not consider this to be of significance. Bosnian Serb detainees received army rations with extra meat and vegetables and did not suffer the extreme weight loss of non-Serb detainees.²⁹⁴³ ²⁹⁴³ KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2952–2953; see Adjudicated Facts 852, 853. Defence evidence was adduced to suggest that (i) the military command provided for food for the detainees in general and there was no distinction made in the food prepared for Bosnian Muslim detainees; (ii) the Bosnian Serb authorities provided extra food and supplies when requested; and (iii) there were no complaints regarding lack of food. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from *Prosecutor v. While the Chamber accepts that some requests for supplies were made, this does not cast doubt about the credible evidence received as to the discrimination between the food received by Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb detainees. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber notes the equivocal nature of these requests and the unreliability of evidence given by Krnojelac considering his interest in minimising his own responsibility for the conditions of detention at the facility. The Chamber also notes that Rašević's evidence was highly qualified and he admitted that he did not know whether some people received more or less food when distributed. Mitar Rašević, T. 46794–46795 (11 February 2014).

894. Apart from a short period at the beginning of their detention at the KP Dom, Bosnian Muslim detainees were denied any contact with the outside world or with their families, and (for a long time) with the ICRC.²⁹⁴⁴ By April 1992, detainees were not allowed to receive visits and therefore could not supplement their meagre food rations and hygienic supplies.²⁹⁴⁵ From mid-July 1992, the conditions of detention deteriorated even further.²⁹⁴⁶ On one occasion after Krnojelac's son was wounded in June or July 1992, the guards and staff at KP Dom were angry and as a result the detainees received the bare minimum of food.²⁹⁴⁷ While there was a general shortage of food in Foča during the conflict, there was a deliberate policy to feed the non-Serb detainees barely enough for their survival while the Bosnian Serbs in the facility received normal meals.²⁹⁴⁸ Left-over food from the Bosnian Serb detainees, if any, would occasionally be given to the non-Serb detainees.²⁹⁴⁹

²⁹⁴⁴ See Adjudicated Fact 827. Milorad Krnojelac testified that Bosnian Muslim detainees had visitors, that visitors were only prohibited for a few days when there was lice outbreak, and that it was the military command which authorised these visits. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7676, 8109. However, the Chamber does not consider Krnojelac evidence to be reliable in this regard given his interest in minimising his own responsibility for the conditions of detention at the facility.

895. While the KP Dom had its own medical clinic and detainees had access to a physician,²⁹⁵⁰ medical care was inadequate and medicine was in very short supply.²⁹⁵¹ A basic medical service was provided but those in need of urgent medical attention were left unattended or given insufficient treatment.²⁹⁵² At least one detainee died as a result of poor medical care.²⁹⁵³ Detainees who were kept in isolation cells and solitary confinement were denied all access to medical care.²⁹⁵⁴ Non-Serb detainees who arrived at the KP Dom with injuries sustained prior to or in the course of their arrest were not given access to medical treatment, nor were non-Serb detainees who were severely beaten during interrogations at the KP Dom.²⁹⁵⁵ KDZ017 asked for medical treatment but was not taken to the clinic until he met with Rašević.²⁹⁵⁶ The Chamber finds that while detainees had access to some basic medical treatment not all detainees were treated. Further, the treatment in many cases was inadequate.

896. The shortage of food, basic hygienic conditions, and medicine in KP Dom had a significant impact on detainees who were sick.²⁹⁵⁷ The condition of the sick detainees, including those who had heart conditions, deteriorated while they were detained at KP Dom.²⁹⁵⁸ Poor living conditions and lack of medication also contributed to detainees suffering multiple bouts of pneumonia.²⁹⁵⁹ The authorities in the facility received complaints from detainees regarding the food, the poor ²⁹⁵¹ Adjudicated Fact 854; KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2949–2950. Krnojelac testified that (i) the medical facilities at KP Dom were adequate and detainees had regular access to doctors and nurses; (ii) there was no distinction between the treatment of Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim detainees; and (iii) detainees were taken to hospital if necessary. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7665–7668, 8116. The Chamber does not find Krnojelac’s evidence to be reliable given that he disclaimed knowledge of most matters related to detainees and then claimed that he knew about the provision of medical care. Krnojelac’s evidence in his own case also demonstrated a clear interest in minimising his involvement and downplaying the poor conditions of detention at the facility.

KD017 and KDZ239 testified about the death of Ešad Hadžić who died from internal bleeding after his medication finished and that threats were made by the guards who were asked to help. Veljko Marić testified that he did not believe any detainee died at the KP Dom because of lack of medical treatment but acknowledged that he did not know what was happening at the facility as he did not have occasion to see it. D3128 (Witness statement of Veljko Marić dated 16 March 2013), paras. 17–20; Veljko Marić, T. 35599–35601 (19 March 2013). In light of Marić’s qualification that he did not always know what was happening at the facility, the Chamber does not consider that it can rely on his evidence in this regard.

897. In July 1992, to prevent detainees from escaping, the inner compound of KP Dom was mined by a group of soldiers under the orders of Foča Crisis Staff member Milun Milanović who was accompanied by Krnojelac.²⁹⁶¹

898. Whenever the ICRC arrived at KP Dom, a group of detainees, which included prominent men from Foča, was taken away and hidden in a cellar until the ICRC left.²⁹⁶² In October 1992, the ICRC demanded that it be allowed to have private conversations and examine prisoners at KP Dom without the presence of official organs from the facility, but this request was rejected until they were able to do the same for Serb prisoners in Goražde.²⁹⁶³ Conditions in the facility would improve for a day or so after the ICRC visited.²⁹⁶⁴ When a film crew accompanied by Rašević visited, the detainees were given meals which were “a bit more plentiful” and when another film crew visited, the detainees were ordered to clean all the premises in the facility in the days leading up to the visit.²⁹⁶⁵

(c) Mistreatment of detainees

899. On arrival, one group of detainees was met by a group of uniformed soldiers who cursed, kicked, and hit them with rifle butts.²⁹⁶⁶ On entry into the KP Dom the detainees were searched and had their identity cards, money, jewellery and watches seized.²⁹⁶⁷ Individuals or groups of armed soldiers were allowed into KP Dom during the first months of the detention of non-Serb Krnojelac testified that the reason the mines were laid was to protect property and not to prevent detainees from escaping and that the order was simply given to him by Todović to sign. The Chamber notes contradictions in Krnojelac’s evidence as to the reason why the mines were laid and who was responsible. The Chamber does not find his evidence in this regard to be credible.

²⁹⁶² KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2897; KDZ239, P3336 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 1267–1268; KDZ239, T. 18992(16 September 2011). Mitar Rašević denied knowledge that detainees were hidden during ICRC visits. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7707–7708; Mitar Rašević, T. 46801–46802 (11 February 2014). However, the Chamber notes that when confronted with his prior statement Rašević acknowledged that detainees were taken away by the army before the ICRC visits but claimed the staff at the KP Dom were not involved. In light of this contradiction, the Chamber finds Rašević’s evidence on this issue to be unreliable. Similarly the Chamber noted that Krnojelac attempted to distance himself from all knowledge of mistreatment of detainees or conditions of detention.

civilians.²⁹⁶⁸ The guards were also involved in the beating of non-Serb detainees.²⁹⁶⁹ The MP was also allowed to enter the facility, remove detainees, and beat them.²⁹⁷⁰

900. From April until July 1992, beatings took place on a frequent and systematic basis.²⁹⁷¹ The guards called out the names of detainees on a list and took them to other rooms or buildings where they were beaten.²⁹⁷² Detainees were also regularly interrogated by guards, soldiers or police officers and would often be beaten or mistreated during this process.²⁹⁷³ For example, eight detainees from the Marinkovići area in Foča were beaten and ill-treated after their arrival at the facility.²⁹⁷⁴ They were taken out three or four days after their arrival to give statements and when they returned, they could not stand as they had been badly beaten “on the orders of the investigators”.²⁹⁷⁵ Detainees were punched, kicked, and beaten with batons.²⁹⁷⁶ Some beatings

KP Dom guards identified as involved in these beatings, included Dragomir Obrenovnić, Milenko Burilo, Zoran Matović, Vlatko Pljevaljčić, Predrag Stefanović, Jovo Savić, Radovan Vuković, Milovan Vuković, Milivoj Milić and Milenko Elčić. See Adjudicated Fact 858. Rašević testified he was not aware that these guards were involved in mistreating detainees and he was therefore not able to launch an investigation, all the more because there was no organised or systematic mistreatment. See also Mitar Rašević, T. 46766, 46788–46791, 46807 (11 February 2014); P6657 (Sketch of KP Dom marked by Mitar Rašević); D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), paras. 25–27, 30, 35. The Chamber does not find Rašević’s evidence in this regard to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its earlier assessment in fn. 2926 regarding the credibility of Rašević’s evidence. The Chamber also notes that on cross-examination Rašević acknowledged that he had no information about the conduct of others during interrogations and detainees may not have dared to report it and that there was some mistreatment by military police during interrogations but that he took measures to stop night time interrogations unless ordered by the army commander. Mitar Rašević, T. 46766–46767 (11 February 2014); D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), para. 26; Mitar Rašević, T. 46792 (11 February 2014). Rašević himself testified that he intervened during the interrogation of a detainee after which the beating stopped and he saw that he was bleeding which is in conflict with his testimony that he never saw detainees being beaten. Mitar Rašević, T. 46796 (11 February 2014). In light of these contradictions and indicators of bias, the Chamber does not consider Rašević’s evidence to be reliable in this regard.

See also Mitar Rašević, T. 46766–46767 (11 February 2014). Rašević himself testified he could not do his job efficiently in maintaining security over the facility because he was often away from the KP Dom and that there was some mistreatment. D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), para. 23; P6655 (Excerpt of Mitar Rašević’s interview with OTP), p. 5; Mitar Rašević, T. 46768–46769 (11 February 2014). The Chamber does not find Rašević’s evidence about his inability to maintain security in the facility seeking, to minimise his own involvement, to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its earlier assessment in fn. 2926 regarding the credibility of Rašević’s evidence.

lasted for several hours²⁹⁷⁷ and detainees were beaten all over their bodies, including on the soles of their feet with a baseball bat.²⁹⁷⁸ Detainees were tied by chains and belts while they were beaten²⁹⁷⁹ and in one case a detainee was cut on his neck and ear with a knife.²⁹⁸⁰ Many were returned to their rooms with visible wounds and bruises resulting from the beating.²⁹⁸¹ Some were unable to walk, stand or talk for days after the beatings.²⁹⁸² Detainees were also beaten while lining up for lunch or while being taken back and forth through the compound.²⁹⁸³ One of the detainees hanged himself in the premises of KP Dom.²⁹⁸⁴ Apart from the physical effects of detention at KP Dom, detainees continued to suffer ongoing psychological effects which required psychiatric treatment.²⁹⁸⁵

²⁹⁷⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 870. Krnojelac testified that he never saw any detainees who had visible signs of beatings nor did he ever hear any moans, screams or cries of pain and that he was never told about any beating. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7677–7678. The Chamber notes that Krnojelac's evidence is directly contradicted by evidence that detainees met with him and complained about their treatment. KDZ239, P3336 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 1271–1280. In addition the Chamber does not consider Krnojelac's evidence to be credible in this regard given his evidence is marked by indicators that he was seeking to minimise his own involvement in the mistreatment at the facility.

²⁹⁷⁸ See Adjudicated Fact 871. Other detainees who in the summer of 1992 were called out and severely beaten by KP Dom guards or soldiers included Ramo Džendušić, Nail Hodžić, Emir Frašto, Husko or Husein Rikalo, Nurko Nisić, Esad Kiselica, Latif Hasanbegović, Aziz Hasković, Halim Seljanci, Kemo or Kemal Isanović, a young man by the last name of Čedić, and Emir Mandžo. 901. Detainees heard the groans and screams of those who were being beaten and physically abused and this lasted until mid-July 1992, thus creating fear among them.²⁹⁸⁶ The beating began at dusk and would continue into the night and sometimes till daylight.²⁹⁸⁷ When the beating stopped, victims were sometimes taken to an isolation cell.²⁹⁸⁸ On one occasion in October 1991 when soldiers from outside the facility beat detainees and ordered them to lie on the ground, this was watched by Rašević and the guards did not intervene.²⁹⁸⁹

902. Detainees were forced to work while detained at KP Dom and were engaged in work at the farm, bakery, furniture factory, or in gardening and selling wood.²⁹⁹⁰ Detainees were placed on lists to be taken under guard to work in hospitals, mines, hotels, and sometimes the MP would escort them to work.²⁹⁹¹ Todović, who was in charge of labour affairs, gave guards the list of work assignments to be carried out by the detainees.²⁹⁹² On a couple of occasions, a detainee who refused to work was beaten and taken to an isolation cell.²⁹⁹³ However, some detainees were not required to work at the facility.²⁹⁹⁴ Two detainees were ordered to drive vehicles to detect landmines.²⁹⁹⁵

Rašević testified that he never saw this incident and that if he received information about it, it was only in verbal form otherwise it would have been documented. D4307 (Witness statement of Mitar Rašević dated 2 February 2014), para. 42. The Chamber does not find Rašević's evidence in this regard to be credible given his attempt to distance himself from mistreatment and knowledge of mistreatment of detainees.

²⁹⁹⁰ KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2896; KDZ239, T. 18992 (16 September 2011). Krnojelac testified that (i) some Bosnian Muslim detainees were taken out to do work but he was told that these detainees wanted to work voluntarily as they preferred this to spending time in the detention facility; (ii) they worked regular hours and received food; and (iii) he was not aware of detainees being used for trench digging on the frontline or used to search for mines. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7692–7696, 7698–7699, 7914. The Chamber does not find Krnojelac's evidence to be reliable in this regard, given that he qualifies this evidence based on what he was told. The Chamber notes that this is also contrary to his evidence relating to his lack of knowledge or involvement in affairs relating to detainees and also notes that Krnojelac acknowledged that some detainees were involved in working on his house which had burnt down during the conflict. Krnojelac was also unable to adequately explain why Bosnian Muslim detainees were engaged in the economic unit given that there was no reform element required for this category of detainees, see Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7821–7822; D2730 (Decision of SerBiH Presidency published in Official Gazette, 12 May 1992), p. 3. (d) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

903. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serbs from multiple locations were brought to and detained at KP Dom Foča by Serb Forces from mid-April 1992 until at least 31 December 1992. The detainees were held in poor conditions. These included lack of space, inadequate bedding, poor sanitary conditions, insufficient heating, lack of food, and inadequate medical care. Detainees were subjected to regular beatings, and were forced to work at a number of locations. The Chamber finds that at least one detainee died as a result of the inadequate medical care at the facility.²⁹⁹⁶

(e) Scheduled Incident B.8.1

904. The Indictment refers to the killing of over 200 detainees at KP Dom Foča between June and December 1992.

905. In some instances after detainees had been taken out to be beaten, other detainees heard the sound of pistol shots, as well as the sound of vehicles moving.²⁹⁹⁷

906. Groups of detainees, generally young people, were taken out of the KP Dom by either regular police or MP and disappeared.²⁹⁹⁸ This included one group consisting of 35 detainees, another group of 23 detainees,²⁹⁹⁹ and a group of detainees suffering from untreated mental ²⁹⁹⁶ This finding does not include the persons alleged to have been killed in Scheduled Incident B.8.1, which is discussed below. Further, witnesses also testified about the death of detainees after 31 December 1992 but this falls outside the alleged period of detention charged in the Indictment with respect to this facility. Krnojelac testified that he heard that Halim Konjo had committed suicide and that a commission came to carry out an investigation and that he was never told about or aware of detainees disappearing overnight. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 8114–8115. The Chamber does not consider Krnojelac's evidence in this regard to be reliable given that he sought to minimise his involvement in the facility and distance himself from anything to do with detainees.

KDZ017 knew that these individuals were missing after having spoken to the relatives of some of them who told him that they were never seen alive again. See Adjudicated Fact 900. The group of 23 detainees who were taken out and disappeared included Ismet Pasović, Nurko Kušić, Hamdo Bićo (who was exhumed from an individual grave), Halim Konjo, Halid Konjo, three brothers named Rikalo, Karabegović, Adil Granov, Zulfo Veiz, Krunoslav Marinović, Asim Mezbur (who was exhumed from a mass grave), Hajro Sabanović, Dr. Aziz Torlak (who was brought to the facility by the Užice Corps), Esad Kiselica, and Ismet Deleut. conditions.³⁰⁰⁰ When the detainees spoke to the guards about the disappearances, they would claim that they knew nothing and that others were making the decisions.³⁰⁰¹ Some of the detainees were called out from lists and taken out on the pretext that they were going to be exchanged, but these were not exchanges and with a few exceptions, they were not seen again.³⁰⁰² These disappearances were confirmed through contact with families, other detainees, or the ICRC.³⁰⁰³ Witnesses testified that approximately 400 to 450 men “disappeared” in these exchanges. Only approximately 200 detainees who remained at KP Dom survived.³⁰⁰⁴ For example, in September 1992, between 35 to 60 detainees were selected by KP Dom guards from a list and taken out of the facility in two groups but never returned and were never seen again.³⁰⁰⁵

907. Four groups, each consisting of nine detainees, were taken to the main building for interrogation.³⁰⁰⁶ The first group of detainees was taken out three or four days after 12 June 1992

While Rašević stated that detainees were taken away for exchange according to lists provided by the army and he did not notice large groups of detainees going missing, he acknowledged on cross-examination that some detainees disappeared in these “exchanges” and sometimes that detainees were taken away without permission. The Chamber finds that Rašević's evidence only serves to confirm that some detainees did disappear in these apparent exchanges and that the Military Police was involved in taking away detainees but in light of the credibility assessment of Rašević in fn. 2926, the Chamber does not place any weight on his testimony that they were taken away without permission and that he did not notice large groups of detainees going missing.

³⁰⁰⁴ KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2894–2895; KDZ239, P3336 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 1265–1266, 1315. Krnojelac testified that he was never told about any killings except for two suicides in the facility. Milorad Krnojelac, D2716 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 7677–7678. The Chamber does not consider Krnojelac's evidence to be credible in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its earlier assessment in fns. 2889, 2900, and 2928 regarding the credibility of Krnojelac. Radojica Mladenović testified that nobody from the military or civilian leadership asked or ordered that any crime be committed and they actually required compliance with international conventions and that it was possible that some paramilitary units did not comply and that any killings in Foča were isolated cases and the authorities tried to prevent them and carried out on-site investigations into specific cases. D3314 (Witness statement of Radojica Mladenović dated 1 April 2013), para. 40; Radojica Mladenović, T. 36612 (4 April 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence or shifting of responsibility to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Mladenović's evidence was marked by multiple contradictions and extreme evasiveness. In addition, the Chamber notes that when confronted with evidence of killings at KP Dom Foča, the witness qualified his answer and claimed that he was not a witness to what happened at the KP Dom. Radojica Mladenović, T. 36663–36664 (5 April 2013).

The sequence of events was the same for these groups as it was for each of the detainees in the first group, viz. nine detainees were taken out, the sound of beatings, KDZ017 could identify Ismet Karahasanović (who was exhumed from a mass grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 80). The Chamber notes that this name is not listed as a Schedule B.8.1 victim on Mašović's table), Suad Islambasić, Zaim Čedić, Ismet Pačo (who was exhumed from a mass grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 80), Mehmed Sofradzija (who was exhumed from a mass grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 83). The Chamber notes that this name is not listed as a Scheduled Incident B.8.1 victim on Mašović's table), Hasan Džano, Ramo Džendušić, Alija Dželil, Rasim Kajgana in this group. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution lists both Ramo Džendusic and Ramo Djendušić as separate victims of Scheduled Incident B.8.1. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G. However, the Chamber is not satisfied that the evidence cited supports that these are two different victims.

followed by a single shot.³⁰¹² None of those taken away in groups as described above returned or were seen alive again.³⁰¹³

908. During and after the beating of detainees, guards of the KP Dom were seen carrying blankets into the administration building and removing what appeared to be bodies in those blankets.³⁰¹⁴ A vehicle also left the facility and returned 10 to 15 minutes later and was cleaned by men in green-grey uniforms.³⁰¹⁵ Detainees who were sent to clean, saw blood and bloodied instruments in the rooms where the beatings occurred.³⁰¹⁶

909. The Chamber took judicial notice of the exhumation of 62 male bodies from a mass grave on Maluša Mountain at a site called Jama Piljak.³⁰¹⁷ However, with the exception of one body which had a name card indicating that the individual was last seen at the KP Dom, the Chamber has insufficient evidence to link these bodies with this scheduled incident.³⁰¹⁸ Mašović's evidence regarding the exhumation of bodies from mass or individual graves corroborates the evidence of witnesses who identified 16 individuals who were taken from the facility and disappeared and whose names also appear on Mašović's list of exhumed bodies.³⁰¹⁹

910. In assessing the overall number of persons killed at KP Dom Foča, the Chamber has considered the (i) witness testimony that between 400 and 450 detainees were taken from KP Dom Foča for purported exchanges but disappeared; (ii) witness testimony that multiple groups of Rašević testified that he never saw any bodies being moved from the KP Dom and that to his knowledge nobody was ever killed at the KP Dom but he acknowledged that he was not aware of whether there was mistreatment during interrogations or whether people were killed outside the facility. In light of these qualifications, the Chamber does not attribute any weight to Rašević's evidence on this issue. KDZ017 having contacted the families of Nurko Nišić, Halim Konjo, Ešad Kiselića, Salem Bičo, Adil Granov (from the third group) was told that they were never seen alive again. Mašović identified that Salem Bičo was exhumed from an individual grave, while Ramo Đendušić, Alija Dželil were exhumed from mass graves. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 81–82, 107. See Adjudicated Facts 887, 899. ³⁰¹⁹ P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 81–82, 107. Mašović identifies the names of 159 individuals who went missing from KP Dom Foča who were exhumed from mass graves or individual graves. However, the Chamber is not satisfied that in the absence of further evidence it can rely on Mašović's evidence to link the exhumed bodies to Scheduled Incident B.8.1.

detainees were taken out of the facility and shot; (iii) exhumation records which confirm that some of the identified individuals who went missing from KP Dom Foča were exhumed from mass graves or individuals graves.

911. The Chamber therefore finds that, over 200 detainees, as alleged were killed at KP Dom Foča by Serb Forces between June and December 1992.

(3) Scheduled Detention Facility C.10.4

912. The Prosecution refers to the use of worker's huts at Buk Bijela as a detention facility in July 1992.³⁰²⁰

913. Some women from the village of Mješaja/Trošanj were taken by Serb soldiers to a detention centre at Buk Bijela, where Gojko Janković was in charge.³⁰²¹ There, Serb soldiers repeatedly raped Muslim women and girls.³⁰²² Girls, women, and some elderly men who were at Buk Bijela were transported by bus to Foča and kept in the Foča High School.³⁰²³ During this transfer, some Bosnian Muslim women tried to complain to the police, including the police chief Dragan Gagović, but no action was taken.³⁰²⁴

(4) Scheduled Detention Facilities C.10.5 and C.10.7

914. The Prosecution refers to the use of the Partizan Hall³⁰²⁵ and Srednja škola – Foča High School³⁰²⁶ as detention facilities during 1992.

915. The Muslim civilians held at the Partizan Sports Hall and Foča High School were kept in unhygienic conditions, without hot water, and were provided with insufficient food.³⁰²⁷ Their freedom of movement was curtailed; they were not allowed to go to any other territory or to go back to their houses.³⁰²⁸ They were guarded and lived in an atmosphere of intimidation.³⁰²⁹ All this was done in full view, in complete knowledge and sometimes with the direct involvement of the local authorities, particularly the police forces.³⁰³⁰

916. Mitar Šipčić, a member of the Foča Crisis Staff,³⁰³¹ was in charge of the guards at the Foča High School.³⁰³² Guards worked in shifts to prevent the detainees from escaping, but they did not prevent soldiers from entering the facility.³⁰³³ Soldiers and policemen would come constantly, sometimes several times a day; they would point at women and girls or call them by their names, take them out and rape them.³⁰³⁴ The women had no choice but to obey those men and those who tried to resist were beaten in front of the other women.³⁰³⁵ At Foča High School, the girls and women were generally taken for a few hours and returned, sometimes overnight, and some of them were taken away every day.³⁰³⁶ After about 10 to 15 days, most of the women from Foča High School were transferred to the Partizan Hall.³⁰³⁷

917. The Partizan Hall was guarded by police officers.³⁰³⁸ At Partizan Hall, some women were taken out of the facility on multiple occasions and raped by soldiers.³⁰³⁹ One woman estimated that during the 40 days of detention at both Foča High School and Partizan Hall, she was raped approximately 150 times.³⁰⁴⁰ The guards at Partizan Hall and Foča High School did not try to prevent soldiers from entering.³⁰⁴¹ The chief of Foča police, Dragan Gagović, was seen at Foča High School and Partizan Hall.³⁰⁴² Gagović, was one of the men who came to detention facilities, ³⁰²⁹ Adjudicated Fact 813. Mitar Rašević testified that the Partizan Hall was a reception centre from where people could be transported in the direction they wanted to go. Mitar Rašević, T. 46815–46816 (11 February 2014). The Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the witness was evasive and contradicted by reference to his prior testimony.

However, the Chamber does not find Mladenović’s unsubstantiated assertion that the perpetrators were processed and punished or that the Bosnian Serb authorities resolved the problem at the facility to be credible. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber also noted that Mladenović’s evidence was marked by multiple contradictions and extreme evasiveness.

³⁰⁴¹ See Adjudicated Fact 796.

³⁰⁴² See Adjudicated Fact 795. Milutin Vujičić who was engaged as a guard at the Partizan Hall in late April or early May 1992, testified that (i) guards were ordered to strictly guard the facility and to prevent anyone from being taken out of the facility particularly at night; (ii) it was recommended that civilians go to the Partizan Hall including Partizan Hall and the Foča High School, to take women out and rape them.³⁰⁴³ On 23 October 1992, a group of women and children who had been detained for a month at Partizan Hall, were transported by bus to Goražde.³⁰⁴⁴

(5) Scheduled Detention Facility C.10.2 and other evidence of rape and other acts of sexual violence during and after the take-over of Foča

918. The Indictment refers to the use of Karaman's house in Miljevina as a detention facility at least between August and October 1992.

919. Dragoljub Kunarac's unit also known as the Zaga Detachment received orders from the Foča Tactical Group.³⁰⁴⁵ Other members of this group included Dragomir "Gaga" Vuković, and Jagos Kontić.³⁰⁴⁶ Kunarac removed many Bosnian Muslim women and girls from various detention centres, including the Partizan Hall.³⁰⁴⁷

920. The girls and women, who were selected by Kunarac or by his men in August 1992, were systematically taken to the soldiers' base in a house in Ulica Osmana Đikića where girls and women were repeatedly raped by Kunarac's men and Kunarac himself during the night.³⁰⁴⁸ Some women were gang-raped in the same house by soldiers while another woman was taken to a separate room by "Gaga" who ordered her to have sex with a 16 year old boy.³⁰⁴⁹ Kunarac was fully aware that the women were raped by other soldiers.³⁰⁵⁰ Some of the women were taken out for their own safety; (iii) women were allowed to leave facilities during the day and were guarded at night; and (iv) nobody was taken away from the facility while he was at the facility. D2767 (Witness statement of Milutin Vujičić dated 14 January 2013), para. 11; Milutin Vujičić, T. 32095–32096, 32131–32132 (17 January 2013). The Chamber does not find Vujičić's evidence to be of much significance given that he was only at the facility for four days and he did not know who took over the guarding of the facility or what happened after he left. The Chamber finds that his evidence that those who took over the facility also had to obey the order which he received is pure speculation and has no basis or foundation.

³⁰⁴³ See Adjudicated Facts 814, 795. Mladenović expressed his view that he did not believe that Gagović would have acted in this way. Radojica Mladenović, T. 36651 (5 April 2013). and raped in an abandoned house in Trnovače by Kunarac and another soldier.³⁰⁵¹ Kunarac also took a girl from the Kalinovik High School, and raped her in a house in an area known as Aladža.³⁰⁵²

921. Some of the women from Partizan Hall and Kalinovik High School were at some point moved to different houses and apartments where they continued to be raped and mistreated.³⁰⁵³

922. Girls under the age of 20 from the village of Partizan were detained in an apartment which was under the control of Zaga and his men.³⁰⁵⁴ Zaga's men raped the girls and women in the apartment in front of each other.³⁰⁵⁵ Some girls were raped by several of Zaga's men at the same time and this was watched by Zaga.³⁰⁵⁶ Ranko Radulović, who was from Montenegro under the command of Zaga, also violently raped a 16 year old girl.³⁰⁵⁷ One victim was taken to the basement, stripped, threatened with a knife and then raped by one of Zaga's men.³⁰⁵⁸ The girls who had been raped heard that they had to be given to Pero Elez and were taken to Karaman's house in Miljevina.³⁰⁵⁹ At Karaman's house, soldiers had easy access to women and girls whom they raped.³⁰⁶⁰ Radovan Stanković was in charge at the Karaman's house.³⁰⁶¹ On 3 August 1992, Kunarac went to Ulica Osmana Đikića where he took four women, and drove them to Miljevina.³⁰⁶² There, the women and girls were handed over to soldiers who brought them to Karaman's house where they were constantly raped.³⁰⁶³ Some women were detained at Karaman's house for several months to over a year.³⁰⁶⁴ Girls who were brought to Karaman's house were "divided between the men, like property", with Pero Elez deciding which girl went with which soldier.³⁰⁶⁵ There were Radojica Mladenović, T. 36653 (5 April 2013); P6267 (Radovan Karadžić's Order, 7 April 1995), pp. 1–2. The Chamber does not rely on the conviction by the BiH court for the purposes of factual findings in this case.

about five or six women in Karaman's house who cooked and cleaned for the soldiers.³⁰⁶⁶ The women did not feel free to leave the house due to the presence of many soldiers.³⁰⁶⁷ Women were also taken to a house in Trnovaca and raped openly by soldiers including Zaga.³⁰⁶⁸

923. Considering the above, the Chamber finds that women and girls were brought to, detained and subjected to acts of sexual violence by members of Serb Forces at multiple locations in Foča, including at Scheduled Detention Facilities C.10.2, C.10.4, C.10.5 and C.10.7.

(F) Scheduled Incident D.10

924. The Indictment refers to the destruction of two mosques in Foča at least between April and August 1992.³⁰⁶⁹

925. Several mosques in Foča town and municipality were burned or otherwise destroyed.³⁰⁷⁰ Bosnian Serb fire brigades stood by and watched as mosques burned.³⁰⁷¹ The Aladža mosque dating from 1555 and under UNESCO protection was blown up and the rubble was removed from the site by the end of the war.³⁰⁷² In August 1992, KDZ216 heard a huge detonation at night and she was told that this was the mosque being destroyed.³⁰⁷³ The blast broke the windows of the house and KDZ216 heard that it was "Zaga again".³⁰⁷⁴ KDZ216 later saw that the mosque was demolished.³⁰⁷⁵

926. Riedlmayer reported that the Aladža mosque was completely destroyed.³⁰⁷⁶ It was destroyed by explosives, and only traces of the foundations remained and the site had been levelled by a bulldozer with all building materials removed but the adjacent buildings were only lightly damaged.³⁰⁷⁷ Since the end of the conflict, the site of the Aladža mosque was used as a parking lot for buses and littered with rubbish. The house adjacent to the mosque site was burned and fragments of the razed mosque were found dumped in the Cehotina river and buried under rubble and refuse at sites near the Drina river.³⁰⁷⁸ The mosque in Jeleč was burned and its minaret destroyed and only parts of the perimeter walls and rubble remained at the end of the war.³⁰⁷⁹

927. Vujičić acknowledged that Serb Forces attacked the mosques but claimed that they were attacked because Bosnian Muslims, including snipers, were fighting from the mosques which were also used to store weapons and for training.³⁰⁸⁰ However, the Chamber notes that when Vujičić was challenged on cross-examination and presented with Riedlmayer's report which suggested that the Aladža mosque was destroyed in August 1992 and was razed to the ground when there was no fighting, Vujičić's answers were evasive and unconvincing.³⁰⁸¹ In addition Vujičić's evidence was marked by evasiveness and other indicators which undermined his credibility. The Chamber therefore does not consider his evidence to be reliable with respect to the reason why the Serb Forces attacked the mosques in Foča.

928. Considering the above evidence the Chamber finds that Serb Forces destroyed the Aladža mosque and the Jeleč mosque between April and August 1992.

(G) Movement of the population from Foča left out of fear for their safety after Serb Forces took over parts of Foča where they lived.³⁰⁸³ In order to leave they had to arrange for certificates from the local police and sign a form transferring their property to the “Bosnian-Serb Republic”.³⁰⁸⁴

930. Following the fall of Foča, a large number of civilians moved from Foča towards Ustikolina and a group of between 300 to 500 people consisting almost exclusively of Bosnian Muslims sought shelter in the JNA depot.³⁰⁸⁵ However, Pero Mihajlović who was the SDS representative in Ustikolina, instructed the personnel at the JNA depot that they should not receive Bosnian Muslims and if they continued to house Bosnian Muslims at the compound “he would send people who were paid to cleanse that area”.³⁰⁸⁶ On the night of 25 April 1992 there were clashes in the vicinity of the depot after which most of the Bosnian Muslims left towards Goražde before Serb Forces captured the depot.³⁰⁸⁷

931. In May 1992, buses were organised to take civilians out of Foča.³⁰⁸⁸ The Chamber finds that some Bosnian Muslims did request to leave the municipality after which the Bosnian Serb authorities arranged for their transportation out of the municipality.³⁰⁸⁹ However, the Chamber also finds that even if Bosnian Muslims signed documents which indicated that they wished to leave, ³⁰⁸³ See Adjudicated Fact 2410; KDZ017, P3568 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krnojelac), T. 2770, 2773–2774. However, the Chamber does not consider this to be reliable evidence. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that Mladenović was contradicted and evasive on a number of occasions during his testimony. Similarly the Chamber does not accept the speculative and unsubstantiated evidence that it was Bosnian Muslim propaganda about the threat faced by the Bosnian Muslim population which caused panic and prompted Bosnian Muslims to leave the municipality. See also Adjudicated Fact 757. The Chamber also received contrasting evidence about whether or not there were armed members of the SDA in this group of Bosnian Muslims and the reason why Serb Forces took control of the depot. However, the Chamber does not consider that this affects the predominantly civilian character of the Bosnian Muslims who had taken shelter in the depot. this was a product of pressures put on them and the surrounding circumstances in the municipality, including attacks against Bosnian Muslims and their homes.³⁰⁹⁰

932. Defence witnesses testified that Bosnian Muslims who left by convoy left voluntarily, that they were not expelled, and did not flee from the Serb Forces. In addition, according to these witnesses, the Bosnian Muslims who remained were given shelter and the civilian authorities treated them fairly, in the same way as Bosnian Serb citizens, and did not confiscate their property.³⁰⁹¹ However, the Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable in light of the other evidence received as to the surrounding circumstances in Foča. The Chamber also notes that Pljevaljčić was challenged on cross-examination and it was suggested that his evidence about whether the people left voluntarily was hearsay.³⁰⁹² While Pljevaljčić adhered to the content of his evidence, the Chamber considers his evidence to be purely speculative and does not rely on his assessment as to the voluntariness of these departures. Similarly the Chamber does not consider Vujičić's evidence pertaining to the voluntariness of the departure of Bosnian Muslims and the treatment of those who remained to be credible. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that Vujičić's evidence was marked by evasiveness and indicators that he was trying to mislead the Chamber and lacked forthrightness. In addition, there were contradictions in his evidence which on the one hand suggested that Bosnian Muslims left voluntarily and on the other that the municipality became almost exclusively Serb after the break-out of clashes. While the Chamber received evidence which suggested that Bosnian Serb authorities issued a public statement inviting those who had left Foča to return, it does not have sufficient detail as to the circumstances or timing of this invitation for it to be considered of any significance.³⁰⁹³

933. At the session of the Bosnian Serb Assembly held from 24 to 26 July 1992, greetings were extended to "liberated Foča".³⁰⁹⁴ At this same session Vojo Kuprešanin spoke about the danger of losing Foča which would allow the establishment of the "green transversal".³⁰⁹⁵ In August 1992, the remaining Bosnian Muslims in Foča, mostly women and children, were taken to Montenegro³⁰⁹⁶ and by mid-August 1992 there were almost no Bosnian Muslims in Foča.³⁰⁹⁷ In April and May 1993, Petko Čančar reported to the Bosnian Serb Assembly that not a single Bosnian Muslim was in Foča, that every part of the municipality was controlled by Bosnian Serbs, and that there was “only one people” living in Foča and “one religion” being practised there.³⁰⁹⁸

934. Having considered the totality of the evidence and assessed the circumstances in which departures occurred, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave Foča.

v. Rogatica

(A) Charges

935. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Rogatica as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.³⁰⁹⁹ Acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Rogatica by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings related to detention facilities and killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.³¹⁰⁰ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and as murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.³¹⁰¹

936. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;³¹⁰² (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in

³¹⁰⁰ Indictment, para. 60(a)(ii). The acts of murder and extermination in Rogatica are restricted to killings related to detention facilities, including those resulting from cruel and inhumane treatment. See Scheduled Incidents B.16.1 and B.16.2. The Chamber notes that a scheduled incident pertaining to killings which allegedly occurred during and after the take-over of Rogatica was withdrawn from the Indictment. scheduled detention facilities, as cruel and inhumane treatment;³¹⁰³ (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities in Rogatica, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;³¹⁰⁴ (iv) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;³¹⁰⁵ (v) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;³¹⁰⁶ (vi) forced labour at frontlines and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;³¹⁰⁷ (vii) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;³¹⁰⁸ (viii) the wanton destruction of private property including homes, business premises, and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites;³¹⁰⁹ and (ix) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.³¹¹⁰

937. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.³¹¹¹ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that, by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Rogatica in which they were lawfully present.³¹¹² It is alleged that from March 1992 restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, cultural monuments and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear while others were physically driven out.³¹¹³

connections from Serbia to Sarajevo traversed Rogatica.³¹¹⁵ Prior to the war, the majority of the population in Rogatica was Bosnian Muslim, making up approximately 60% of the population, while Bosnian Serbs accounted for approximately 38% of the population with a few other nationalities making up the remainder.³¹¹⁶ In Rogatica town Bosnian Muslims constituted 64% of the population while 33% were Bosnian Serbs with very few Bosnian Croats.³¹¹⁷

939. Inter-ethnic conflict arose in Rogatica following the creation of national parties.³¹¹⁸ In Rogatica, the SDA and the SDS were formed in the first half of 1990 and in early September 1990 respectively.³¹¹⁹ Sveto Veselinović was elected president of the SDS in Rogatica and was also the president of the SDS Romanija Regional Board.³¹²⁰ The SDA won the most seats in the 1990 elections;³¹²¹ however, an agreement was reached in 1991 between the SDA and SDS as to how specific posts in the municipality should be filled.³¹²² A multi-party government was formed under which Adil Lutvić, a Bosnian Muslim, was elected President of the municipality and the President of the Executive Board was a Bosnian Serb named Mile Ujić.³¹²³ Tomislav Batinić was elected Vice President of the Municipal Assembly.³¹²⁴ Ismet Osmanović, a Bosnian Muslim, became Chief of the SJB, the Commander of the SJB was Ramiz Alajbegović, and the deputy Chief of the SJB was a Bosnian Serb, Mladen Vasiljević.³¹²⁵

940. Disagreements arose between the SDS and the SDA about the division of functions and there were protests that the SDA had violated the inter-party agreement on the division of power.³¹²⁶ A joint government continued to function until as late as mid-1991; however, co-operation deteriorated after the SDA municipal leadership started supporting the secession of BiH.³¹²⁷ Police, coffee shops, restaurants, bars, businesses, and clubs became divided along ethnic lines.³¹²⁸

941. In mid-1991, during political rallies that were held and attended by thousands, Bosnian Serbs delivered nationalist speeches.³¹²⁹ This sentiment was reflected in the speeches of SDS officials who said that the time had come for the Serbian people to unite and create an “integral state”, that they would not allow the secession of BiH, that Serbs and Muslims could no longer live together, and that they wanted to “create a Serbian state, once and for all”.³¹³⁰ Veselinović stated that the Bosnian Serbs were “ready and [...] 1941 will never be repeated”.³¹³¹ These rallies and speeches created insecurity amongst the Bosnian Muslim population.³¹³² Inflammatory statements were also made by Bosnian Muslim leaders.³¹³³

Sveto Veselinović stated that the rhetoric at the majority of pre-election gatherings was not inflammatory and that the need for maximum co-operation between the SDS, the SDA, and other parties was stressed. D2950 (Witness statement of Sveto Veselinović dated 15 February 2013), para. 3. The Chamber finds that Veselinović’s evidence that the majority of pre-election gatherings were not inflammatory is not inconsistent with inter-ethnic hatred being fueled at some rallies.

942. Inter-ethnic relations further deteriorated when war broke out in Croatia and Bosnian Muslims refused to fight in the TO but went to Croatia for training.³¹³⁴ At a gathering at a stadium in Rogatica, JNA officers made an announcement that Bosnian Muslim reservists were no longer needed and that Bosnian Muslims who did not want to fight in Croatia were not to come back.³¹³⁵ From January to February 1992, members of the SDS travelled to Bosnian Serb villages and informed the Bosnian Serbs that there was “a Muslim threat” and they should be prepared to protect themselves; this encouraged Serb nationalism.³¹³⁶

(1) Militarisation of Rogatica

943. As early as 1990 the weapons stored in the TO headquarters in Rogatica were moved to the barracks in Han Pijesak and placed under the control of the JNA.³¹³⁷ Towards the end of 1991, there was an increased presence of JNA troops in Rogatica.³¹³⁸ From this time, the 1st Mountain Battalion of the JNA was deployed to Bosnian Serb areas of Rogatica. At night, they armed local Bosnian Serbs with the assistance of the Bosnian Serb political and military officials.³¹³⁹ Bosnian Serbs also started organising village guards at night in the second half of 1991.³¹⁴⁰

Members of the SDS were also involved in transporting weapons to local communes, where they were distributed to surrounding villages.³¹⁴¹ This distribution of weapons continued in the spring of 1992,³¹⁴² and local Bosnian Serbs also started wearing military uniforms.³¹⁴³ Mladen Vasiljević was involved in these arming operations³¹⁴⁴ as was Rajko Kušić who was a member of the SDS Main Board.³¹⁴⁵

945. The SDA was also involved in arming the Bosnian Muslim population and in forming Bosnian Muslim units from late 1990.³¹⁴⁶ There was also a mobilisation of the police reserve which primarily included Bosnian Muslims.³¹⁴⁷ The Chamber also received evidence about actions by Bosnian Muslims, including attacks against Bosnian Serbs.³¹⁴⁸

However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber found that the evidence of Andrić was marked by evasiveness and indicators that he was not completely forthright in his testimony in this regard. With respect to Batinić, the Chamber noted that he simply stated that he did not know about the arming of Bosnian Serbs by the JNA and claimed that given his position he “would probably have known if something like that had happened”. D2930 (Witness statement of Tomislav Batinić dated 11 February 2013), para. 17. The Chamber finds this to be purely speculative and is not convinced that it can rely on this evidence. With respect to Veselinović, the Chamber noted conflicting statements which undermined the reliability of his evidence on this issue.

946. There was a close relationship between the Bosnian Serb officers in the 216th Mountain Brigade of the JNA and members of the SDS leadership. The latter would often come to the brigade's barracks and meet its Commander Dragomir Milošević.³¹⁴⁹ As Chief of Staff of the 216th Mountain Brigade, Asim Džambasović discussed these visits and irregularities relating to the control of weapons with Dragomir Milošević and the Commander of the 4th Corps of the JNA, but no action was taken.³¹⁵⁰ As early as January 1992 Bosnian Serbs started refusing to take orders from non-Serb officers in the JNA.³¹⁵¹

947. In March 1992, volunteers were mobilised but given the Bosnian Muslim boycott of the mobilisation, Bosnian Serbs became predominant in the JNA.³¹⁵² Following this mobilisation, two Bosnian Serb battalions of the 216th Mountain Brigade were formed and members of the SDS assisted in this mobilisation.³¹⁵³ A Bosnian Serb TO was formed in March 1992 after the Rogatica

TO split by agreement into Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Serb parts.³¹⁵⁴ The Bosnian Serb TO had access to weapons from the former Rogatica TO³¹⁵⁵ and was subsequently integrated into the Army of the SerBiH pursuant to a decision of the Presidency of SerBiH on 19 May 1992.³¹⁵⁶ In March 1992, volunteers arrived from Serbia in military and civilian vehicles, and were housed, fed, and supplied in the JNA barracks.³¹⁵⁷ In the spring of 1992, there was an increase in JNA equipment such as artillery, canons, tanks, armed vehicles, and columns of infantry passing through Rogatica.³¹⁵⁸

948. Kušić was described as the “commander of all military matters in Rogatica”.³¹⁵⁹ In late February or early March 1992 a military formation was organised in the predominantly Bosnian Serb village of Borike under the command of Kušić³¹⁶⁰ who had close connections with both the Accused and Krajišnik.³¹⁶¹ Even though Kušić’s unit was not formally listed in the JNA records it operated under the auspices of Dragomir Milošević³¹⁶² and was formed within the 1st Battalion, which was commanded by Radomir Furtula.³¹⁶³

949. In April 1992, Kušić stated that “he and the JNA had to defend Serbian people and Serbian land”.³¹⁶⁴ At first Kušić’s unit consisted of approximately 40 to 50 men, described as “SDS activists”.³¹⁶⁵ Members of this unit wore camouflage uniforms and carried automatic weapons, and included members of the reserve police.³¹⁶⁶ Kušić’s unit was initially known as the Rogatica Brigade and, when the VRS was formed, it became part of the SRK.³¹⁶⁷ On 22 May 1992, the Command of the SRK issued an order which acknowledged the formation of the Rogatica Brigade under the command of Kušić and provided for its restructure.³¹⁶⁸ Kušić was able to arm the Rogatica Brigade from JNA weaponry of the 1st Battalion.³¹⁶⁹ The Rogatica Brigade consisted of three infantry battalions and smaller support units for communications, logistics, medical care, and MP.³¹⁷⁰ Kušić also formed units in Seljani, Mesići and Pešurići, which included SDS supporters and individuals brought from Serbia, including the White Eagles.³¹⁷¹ Later, when the Drina Corps was formed in November 1992, the Rogatica Brigade became the 1st Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade of the Drina Corps.³¹⁷²

950. Members of the Rogatica Brigade mistreated and terrorised the Bosnian Muslim population and conducted patrols on roads.³¹⁷³ They also entered villages and fired weapons into the air in order to threaten Bosnian Muslims.³¹⁷⁴ In addition there were incidents of shooting at Bosnian Muslim houses and mosques which, together with the arming of the Bosnian Serbs, intimidated local Bosnian Muslims.³¹⁷⁵ Members of the Rogatica Brigade also entered villages, sang nationalist songs, carried out searches of Bosnian Muslims, and seized vehicles.³¹⁷⁶ Bosnian Serb soldiers also harassed Bosnian Muslims by making derogatory remarks.³¹⁷⁷ Džambasović complained on a number of occasions to higher commanders about these incidents, but no action was taken, and he was actually warned by Furtula that he should not enforce discipline.³¹⁷⁸ With time, Džambasović was progressively stripped of his duties and authority; on 6 April 1992, he was told that his safety could not be guaranteed and he left the JNA.³¹⁷⁹

951. The presence of the Rogatica Brigade forced the Bosnian Muslim police to withdraw from Borike and caused further anxiety amongst the Bosnian Muslim population.³¹⁸⁰ The Bosnian Serb police and the Rogatica Brigade also engaged in looting from Bosnian Muslims.³¹⁸¹ The Accused, as President of the Presidency of the SerBiH, was informed in March 1992 that due to the actions of the Rogatica Brigade, Bosnian Muslims sought protection from the Rogatica SJB.³¹⁸²

this incident, Bosnian Muslims set up barricades in Rogatica and demanded the withdrawal of the Rogatica Brigade.³¹⁸⁴ On 24 March 1992, the Bosnian Serbs also erected barricades.³¹⁸⁵ Serb Forces sealed off the town of Rogatica using armoured vehicles and tanks, blocked all roads, prevented the movement of the Bosnian Muslim population and cut their phone lines and utilities.³¹⁸⁶ The Rogatica Brigade manned the check-points at the entrance to most Bosnian Serb villages and Bosnian Muslims who tried to pass through the check-points faced difficulties.³¹⁸⁷ The erection of barricades on both sides and the media in BiH contributed to the instillation of fear and anxiety in the population.³¹⁸⁸

953. From the latter half of May 1992, the citizens of Rogatica could no longer receive BiH television and were thus limited to Serbian-based television and radio broadcasts.³¹⁸⁹ Certain broadcasts emphasised that Bosnian Serbs who were threatened in BiH should join together, mobilise and join the Army of the SerBiH.³¹⁹⁰ These calls to mobilise were made “in the name of the Serb Republic and the presidency” and the Accused.³¹⁹¹

The Assembly of the Serb Municipality of Rogatica was established in on December 1991³¹⁹⁶ in accordance with the Variant A/B Instructions.³¹⁹⁷ At the inaugural session of the Rogatica Serb Municipal Assembly held on 26 December 1991, Batinić, an SDS leader, was proclaimed President of the municipality.³¹⁹⁸

956. Towards the end of 1991, following a request of the SDS Main Board, an SDS Crisis Staff was formed in Rogatica to monitor the situation and inform the party leadership “if there was a dramatic turn of events”.³¹⁹⁹ The Rogatica Crisis Staff was established at a session of the SDS Main Board on 8 April 1992 and Milorad Sokolović was appointed its president.³²⁰⁰ The Rogatica Crisis Staff was composed of Bosnian Serb members of the joint municipal organs and included prominent Bosnian Serbs who were not members of the SDS.³²⁰¹ As such, it was an expansion of the SDS Crisis Staff.³²⁰²

957. The Rogatica Crisis Staff operated from the beginning of the war and was authorised to adopt decisions falling under the jurisdiction of the Rogatica Serb Municipal Assembly.³²⁰³ The Rogatica Crisis Staff was tasked with co-ordinating the work of all municipal administrative organs during a state of war or when under threat of imminent war.³²⁰⁴ The Rogatica Crisis Staff had direct oral and written contact with the Presidency and ministries of the SerBiH, the Bosnian Serb Government, the army, and the police.³²⁰⁵ There was co-operation between the Rogatica Crisis Staff and the Bosnian Serb TO, and later with the VRS.³²⁰⁶ In August 1992, the Executive Board was formed and the Crisis Staff ceased to exist.³²⁰⁷

958. On 24 March 1992 approximately 3,000 armed Serb soldiers under the leadership of Kušić threatened to open fire on the town of Rogatica unless the municipality and the SJB were divided along ethnic lines that night.³²⁰⁸ These soldiers wore different uniforms, including the uniforms of ³²⁰⁵ P2835 (Report of Rogatica Crisis Staff, April–June 1992), pp. 5–6. Defence witnesses testified that there was no contact with the leadership in Pale between April and June 1992. D2909 (Witness statement of Mile Ujić dated 9 February 2013), para. 39. See also Tomislav Batinić, T. 33677 (14 February 2013). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be of much weight given that the witness's evidence was qualified by what was known to him. In addition when challenged on cross-examination Ujić acknowledged that it would have been the President of the Crisis Staff who had contact if any, and he did not know whether there was such contact. Mile Ujić, T. 33451 (12 February 2013). The Accused also cited to the loss of electricity in Rogatica for five months as a factor which exacerbated the problems with communication. Defence Final Brief, para. 2950, referring to D2909 (Witness statement of Mile Ujić dated 9 February 2013), para. 35; D2930 (Witness statement of Tomislav Batinić dated 11 February 2013), para. 25; Sveto Veselinović, T. 33912 (18 February 2013). The Chamber does not consider that the evidence presented supports the conclusion that communication problems were exacerbated by this loss of electricity particularly in light of the other evidence received regarding communication between municipal and higher authorities.

Mile Ujić testified that both Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim troops threatened to attack the town if it was not divided. Mile Ujić, T. 33451–33452 (12 February 2013). However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that when Ujić was shown a document where he wrote to the Accused only about the threat of the Serb TO to attack the JNA, the TO, and included paramilitary formations from Serbia such as the White Eagles.³²⁰⁹ The town was blocked from all sides and there was sporadic firing which continued until morning when it eased.³²¹⁰ The Deputy Prime Ministers and the Bosnian Serb MUP were informed about the developments and were immediately requested to come to the municipality in order to reach a negotiated solution to the conflict.³²¹¹ Džambasović, along with the commander of the JNA 4th Corps, General Đurđevac, and Dragomir Milošević went to Rogatica and after speaking to both sides, secured the removal of most of the barricades.³²¹²

959. In April and May 1992, the Rogatica Crisis Staff was involved in negotiations with the Bosnian Muslim leadership, and formed commissions for the demarcation of territory and division of power within the municipality.³²¹³ In these negotiations even communes with mixed populations were delineated as Serb territories with the agreement from the Bosnian Muslims who sought to avoid conflict.³²¹⁴ During negotiations, the SDS representatives said they would report to the Main Board of the SDS in Pale.³²¹⁵

960. Some reserve police officers who had been brought into the SJB by the SDS insisted that it was impossible to work together with Bosnian Muslims, that there could be no co-existence and that the Bosnian Serbs would get their own institutions.³²¹⁶ These police officers threatened to join the JNA, which they said would be on their side, and stated that if the Bosnian Muslims offered resistance they would have no chance and would be expelled.³²¹⁷ SDS representatives sought to divide the SJB and the TO and by March 1992, Bosnian Muslim representatives agreed to this partition.³²¹⁸ The division of the police was implemented by Mladen Vasiljević in accordance with orders from the SAO Romanija and with orders issued by the Serb Municipality of Rogatica, and the Rogatica Crisis Staff.³²¹⁹

961. 962. Kušić wanted to attack Rogatica and this brought him into conflict with the Bosnian Serb civilian authorities; as a consequence, as representatives of the civilian authorities, Veselinović, Ujić, and Batinić, tendered their joint resignation to the Accused on 25 March 1992.³²²⁴ Bosnian Serbs were alarmed by these resignations and left the city centre out of fear, a new government was

However, the Chamber finds that the consensual nature of the division is undermined by credible evidence that during these negotiations, Bosnian Muslim negotiators agreed to the division of the municipality in order to avoid war and to gain time to prevent an attack and that Bosnian Muslims were intimidated and from late 1991, Kušić threatened that if Bosnian Muslims did not agree to the division of the territory they would have no future in the area and would be attacked if they did not leave or pledge loyalty to the Bosnian Serb authorities. 963. In negotiations between Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim representatives at the beginning of May 1992, local SDS leaders, including Batinić and Milorad Sokolović, demanded that control of the whole municipality be handed over to the SDS.³²²⁶ Bosnian Muslim representatives objected to this demand.³²²⁷ On 2 May 1992, an agreement on the division of Rogatica into Serb and Muslim municipalities was reached and adopted at a joint session of the Municipal Assembly.³²²⁸ This agreement did not cover Rogatica town and such a decision was never adopted given the events which unfolded in the municipality.³²²⁹ On 18 May 1992, the Rogatica Serb Municipal Assembly abrogated the original agreement on the division of the municipality alleging that the Bosnian Muslim side had avoided attempts to implement that agreement.³²³⁰ This occurred one day after the Accused, Mladić, and Krajišnik held a meeting with representatives of municipalities, including Rogatica, and discussed the creation of a Bosnian Serb state in BiH, stating that the time had come for the demarcation of areas between the national groups.³²³¹

965. The killing of Dražen Mihajlović in an ambush on 22 May 1992 and the refusal of the Bosnian Muslim forces to return his body resulted in clashes.³²⁴⁰ Following this incident, both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims moved their families out of the town as did the Bosnian Muslim leadership to areas where they were a majority.³²⁴¹ In addition, the Rogatica Crisis Staff was expanded to approximately 15 people and Sokolović was elected President.³²⁴²

966. The town of Rogatica was in a valley and was surrounded by artillery positions manned by Bosnian Serbs; a road was built approximately a month before the attack, which encircled the town and allowed for artillery and weapons to be transported.³²⁴³

967. The town of Rogatica was attacked on or about 22 May 1992 for seven continuous days by artillery, anti-aircraft, and infantry weapons, with the artillery primarily hitting the centre of town and Bosnian Muslim neighbourhoods, while Bosnian Serb areas of the town were not shelled.³²⁴⁴ A large part of the town centre was destroyed in this attack.³²⁴⁵ By the date of the attack, the Bosnian Serb population had left Muslim-majority areas and moved to Serb parts of the town and Bosnian Serb women and children had been evacuated to Serbia.³²⁴⁶

968. The shelling began at noon and came from the direction of surrounding hills and villages.³²⁴⁷ On the first day, the shelling lasted three or four hours, which forced Bosnian Muslims to take shelter in their cellars and in neighbouring houses when their houses were damaged.³²⁴⁸ The first attack consisted of mortars, anti-aircraft guns, tanks, artillery and heavy machine guns.³²⁴⁹ There were clashes with Bosnian Muslim forces, which put up armed resistance in the town in the days following the first shelling.³²⁵⁰ As discussed above, the town had been blockaded.³²⁵¹

Following the clashes on 22 May 1992, Serb Forces took control of some areas of the town while the larger part of the town remained under Bosnian Muslim control.³²⁵²

969. After Rogatica was shelled, members of the 5th Užice Corps were posted in Mesići and a group of 300 Arkan's men and White Eagles was posted in Borike, ready to start operations as soon as Kušić so ordered.³²⁵³ Šešelj's men were also involved in the attack on Rogatica and had arrived at the JNA barracks a few weeks before the attack.³²⁵⁴ Members of the active and reserve police were also involved in this operation.³²⁵⁵ All armed groups which arrived in Rogatica were placed under the command of the Rogatica Brigade.³²⁵⁶

970. In the days following the initial attack on Rogatica, Serb Forces entered the town, going from street to street; tanks and APCs would come to the town on a daily basis and fire at the mosques, at Bosnian Muslim houses and into the cellars where Bosnian Muslims were hiding.³²⁵⁷ Serb Forces also threw hand grenades before making forceful entry into houses, firing automatic weapons as they did so, ordering out groups of Bosnian Muslims who were in hiding, and detaining them.³²⁵⁸ Serb Forces also sprayed chemicals into buildings and fired incendiary rounds which ignited the chemicals; this forced Bosnian Muslims out of the cellars.³²⁵⁹ Men were separated from the women and forced to lie down as they were kicked and beaten by the soldiers who demanded that they hand over any weapons.³²⁶⁰ Serb Forces entered the town and used flame throwers to set houses on fire; this process continued house by house, until large parts of the town were destroyed and Bosnian Muslim houses were burned.³²⁶¹ This pattern continued until Serb Forces took full control of the town.³²⁶² By the end of July 1992, Rogatica was under the control of the Rogatica Brigade.³²⁶³ Many Bosnian Muslims fled and took refuge in the square.³²⁶⁴

971. The take-over of Rogatica was planned and executed by the SRK and Mladić was informed of it.³²⁶⁵ The Main Staff issued a directive which gave the corps commanders “a broad opportunity for self-initiative” and directed them to “establish lines”, leaving it to the “corps commander, the commanders of brigades, and lower-ranking units, to make corrections in the lines of defence”; Rogatica was taken because it “was deep within the territory that was under the control of the Serbs”.³²⁶⁶

(D) Attacks on surrounding villages

972. On or about 22 May 1992 and the following days, many of the Bosnian Muslim villages in Rogatica Municipality were attacked and came under fire.³²⁶⁷ For example, the Bosnian Muslim village of Mađer, which is six kilometres from Rogatica,³²⁶⁸ came under heavy small arms fire from the surrounding hills.³²⁶⁹ The surrounding villages of Kovalj, Vragolovi, Kopljevići, Orahovo, Šljedovići, and Čubrići were also attacked.³²⁷⁰ Following these attacks, Bosnian Muslims started leaving their villages out of fear,³²⁷¹ with some escaping to Žepa and Kozići.³²⁷²

973. Two or three days after the shelling of the villages, infantry attacks were also launched against some of these villages.³²⁷³ Kušić reported to the “Supreme Command” of the SerBiH that on 22 May 1992 villages in Rogatica which were described as “enemy strongholds” were attacked and that the enemy was “crushed with losses and casualties”.³²⁷⁴ Villages from which weapons had been handed over were not shelled.³²⁷⁵ On 23 May 1992, Kušić ordered units to hold positions and to conduct “čišćenje” or “mopping up” operations in villages with mixed populations,³²⁷⁶ and for all units “to carry out destruction of personnel without hesitation” and “to open fire from all available weapons”.³²⁷⁷

974. When Bosnian Muslim representatives asked that the attacks against Bosnian Muslim settlements be stopped, they were told that the only way to stop the attacks was if weapons were surrendered by a set deadline.³²⁷⁸ Following these discussions the attacks intensified and Bosnian

³²⁷⁸ P3279 (Witness statement of KDZ606 dated 1 September 2011), para. 97 (under seal). Defence witnesses testified that (i) villages were only attacked following provocations and attacks against Bosnian Serb villages; (ii) were considered military targets if there was fire coming from them; (iii) Bosnian Muslim villages were first asked to surrender their weapons, and it was only when they refused that they were attacked and taken over by Serb Forces; (iv) villagers were warned about the possible attack and only a very small number of people

Muslim homes were burnt down in villages including Bjelogorci, Pašić Kula, Šljedovići, Ovlagije, Seljani, Živaljevići, Kovanj, Lepenica, Kramer, Tičijak, Mala Žepa, and Biljino Polje.³²⁷⁹

975. There was a Bosnian Muslim minority in the village of Seljani, where the local recreation hall was converted into barracks used by local Bosnian Serbs and members of the White Eagles.³²⁸⁰ Bosnian Muslim houses were targeted by infantry fire.³²⁸¹ During the shelling, Armin Baždar and his family took shelter in the woods; his father was told by a Bosnian Serb friend that Bosnian Muslim men and women had been arrested and that Bosnian Muslim men had been taken in the direction of Pješevica.³²⁸² There were no military facilities in the village.³²⁸³

976. In the few days following the attack on Seljani, Serb Forces wearing camouflage uniforms, red berets, and SDS insignia and carrying automatic weapons went from house to house and ordered Bosnian Muslims to move in together to allow for greater control of the Bosnian Muslim population.³²⁸⁴ As a result, four or five families numbering about 20 people were living together; Serb Forces patrolled the area and kept them “under control”.³²⁸⁵ Until August 1992, they were “placed under a sort of house arrest”, were not allowed to go to work or buy food, and could only

While the Chamber accepts that there had been requests for villages to disarm prior to attacks by Serb Forces, the Chamber does not consider the remainder of this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber notes that evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by inconsistencies, contradictions, and evasiveness and indicators that some were not forthright in their testimony in this regard.

Lelek testified that the village of Seljani was a majority Bosnian Serb village and that it was not attacked. Milovan Lelek, T. 34428 (27 February 2013). (E) Events after the take-over of Rogatica

978. Veselinović entered Rogatica five or six days after the take-over of the town and headed a commission which was formed by the Rogatica Crisis Staff to accommodate and help refugees and to ensure the safety and security of abandoned properties.³²⁹⁰ The commission took measures to regulate unauthorised movement into abandoned homes. However, groups of Serb refugees arrived in August 1992, and after Plavšić arrived in Rogatica and asked refugees to be accommodated in the town, people moved into abandoned homes and took away household items.³²⁹¹

979. On 1 August 1992, Kušić as commander of the Rogatica Brigade issued an order to combat the illegal use and destruction of “war booty” and required the submission of criminal reports against individuals who failed to respect the order.³²⁹² At a Rogatica Serb Municipal Assembly meeting on 19 August 1992, the further distribution of these abandoned homes as temporary

On 23 November 1992, Batinić wrote a letter to the SJB in Rogatica requesting their full engagement in ensuring public law and order to create conditions for the normal life and work of the organs of authority, including the prevention of misappropriation of property, unlawful seizure of apartments, and businesses and the personal safety of citizens.³²⁹⁵

(F) Detention facilities in Rogatica

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.21.1

981. The Indictment refers to the use of the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School as a detention facility at least between 1 May and 31 September 1992.³²⁹⁶

(a) Arrival of detainees and control over detention facility

982. The Veljko Vlahović Secondary School was located in the Bosnian Serb part of Rogatica.³²⁹⁷ After the shelling of Rogatica, which started on 22 May 1992, Bosnian Muslims were detained at the school for periods of up to three and a half months.³²⁹⁸ In the first month the school held approximately 400 people, and of this group, only 70 to 90 were men.³²⁹⁹ Thereafter, many new detainees arrived at the school and the number of people held grew to 1,100.³³⁰⁰ All the detainees in the school were Bosnian Muslims except for two Bosnian Serb women who were married to Bosnian Muslims and one Bosnian Serb family whose sons did not want to fight in the army.³³⁰¹

983. A few days following the attack on Rogatica on 22 May 1992, loudspeakers were used to order the Bosnian Muslim population of the town to gather in the central square, where a group of armed Bosnian Serb soldiers demanded that they sign loyalty oaths or surrender documents to the Bosnian Serb authorities and move to the school for their personal security.³³⁰² The group of soldiers included a captain wearing a regular JNA uniform and seven or eight other uniformed persons wearing camouflage uniforms³³⁰³ Following these announcements at least 200 to 300 unarmed Bosnian Muslims gathered in the town square.³³⁰⁴

984. Živojin Novaković, a VRS soldier, was told that the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School was too small to accommodate this large group of people and was asked to release the Bosnian Muslims since the Serb Forces already had control of the town.³³⁰⁵ After making a radio call, Novaković said that this was not possible and that “the town would be cleansed”, that the Bosnian Muslims would all have to proceed to the school, that “anyone found in the town would be killed”, and that he had received an order that all Bosnian Muslims should be taken to the school.³³⁰⁶ Novaković told the Bosnian Muslims that they would only have to stay a few days in the school until the situation calmed down and that they all had to go to there “to avoid the cleansing”.³³⁰⁷

985. Following this, Bosnian Serb police and soldiers in olive-green camouflage uniform entered homes and removed those who did not comply with the orders to go to the school.³³⁰⁸ During this process men were beaten³³⁰⁹ and Bosnian Muslims, including women and children who had been captured in shelters, were taken to the school and detained there for a few days.³³¹⁰ At the beginning of June 1992, 200 to 300 people surrendered at the school when the area they were in was shelled.³³¹¹ Upon their arrival, they discovered that there were already 100 people at the school and that two detainees were drawing up a list of detainees.³³¹² On 11 June 1992, the command of the Rogatica Brigade reported that large numbers of Bosnian Muslim civilians were arriving every day and were “finding shelter” in the school.³³¹³ The Chamber finds that the reference to Bosnian Muslim civilians seeking “shelter” at the school is a mischaracterisation and that those who were at the facility were detained there.³³¹⁴ In early August 1992, local Bosnian Serb soldiers continued to enter Bosnian Muslim houses and transfer groups of Bosnian Muslims to

The Rogatica Brigade also reported to the command of the SRK on 15 June 1992 that a large number of Bosnian Muslims (mainly women and children) were arriving in the town daily and they were being moved to the secondary school. P5485 (Report of Rogatica Brigade, 15 June 1992).

³³¹⁴ P3405 (Witness statement of KDZ051 dated 17 September 2011), para. 39; KDZ051, T. 19397–19398 (22 September 2011). Defence witnesses testified that (i) no more than 200 to 250 people passed through the school until August 1992; (ii) the people in the school were not treated as detainees; (iii) the people were not brought to the school by force and the Bosnian Muslim population who stayed behind in the town and expressed loyalty and were not willing to fight were asked to move to the school; (iv) the school was a shelter or a safe house used to protect people from murder and mistreatment which could accommodate 1,100 people; (v) the school was used as a collection centre until August 1992 when the people were asked whether they wanted to remain in Rogatica or whether they wanted to change their place of residence after which they were sent to their desired location; (vi) the civilian authorities asked the Brigade to act in accordance with international conventions; (vii) after Rogatica was “liberated” at the end of July 1992, the Bosnian Muslims at the school were able to go to their houses and take things that were left there, but they did not dare to go when there was still fighting because of the Bosnian Muslim forces; and (viii) the civilian police was at the school and would prevent anyone from entering the compound and mistreating the civilian population. However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be credible considering the reliable first-hand accounts of detainees. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber noted that the evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by inconsistencies, contradictions, evasiveness and indicators that some were not forthright in their testimony. More specifically the Chamber observed that it was not clear how Lelek could testify about these issues given that in his own admission he never entered the facility during the relevant period. Milovan Lelek, T. 34389 (27 February 2013). The Chamber also found that Lelek’s evidence was marked by contradictions and indicators that he was misleading the Chamber. The Chamber also noted inconsistencies in the evidence of Ujić with respect to the school and cannot rely on his evidence in this regard. The Chamber also noted that Batinić side-stepped questions with respect to the school and does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard.

the school.³³¹⁵ In mid-August 1992, Serb Forces entered the village of Mađer and Bosnian Muslims were arrested and taken to detention facilities, including the school.³³¹⁶

986. The guards at the school included Bosnian Serb police, paramilitaries, and soldiers.³³¹⁷ The school operated under Kušić's command.³³¹⁸ Kušić visited the school on a number of occasions and the detainees had to address him as "Vojvoda".³³¹⁹ Kušić taunted some of the young male detainees that he would mobilise them to "defend Serbdom".³³²⁰ During one of his visits, Kušić addressed approximately 200 detainees and told them they were not co-operating sufficiently, that he was facing a deadline from Pale, and that he was "running late with the cleansing of Rogatica", which could cause problems when he was required to report to the leadership in Pale.³³²¹

987. The paramilitaries in the school included a man nicknamed "Noka" who was one of Arkan's men, and others who spoke the Ekavian dialect.³³²² The Rogatica SJB reported in August 1992 that there were problems with the treatment of those at the school and that neither the military nor the civilian authorities wanted to take responsibility.³³²³ The detainees were not free to leave, as guards were posted on the perimeter of the school compound and soldiers manned a sniper's nest near the building.³³²⁴ The doors of the school were "fastened with a thick chain" and the detainees had been

However, the Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable given that Lelek acknowledged that he had not entered the school and never talked to any Bosnian Muslims who had been at the school even though he gave evidence about conditions in the facility. He was also confronted with a prior statement where he denied any knowledge warned that the whole area around the school had been mined in the event that anyone tried to escape through a window.³³²⁵ Nobody could enter the school unless the soldiers or paramilitaries brought them in.³³²⁶

988. Batinić visited the school once, and when asked by a detainee what would happen to them, he said that it was too late, that everything would be destroyed, and that all the detainees would be killed.³³²⁷

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

989. People were detained in the classrooms in terrible conditions.³³²⁸ Some detainees did not have anything to eat for days and when food was provided it was very limited.³³²⁹ The food and washing facilities were “grossly inadequate” and the sleeping facilities were non-existent with over 40 people, including women and children sleeping in one room.³³³⁰ Detainees had limited access to water; for example one detainee was only able to wash himself once in the three and a half months he was detained at the school.³³³¹ The jewellery of the detainees was taken.³³³² The guards also forced detainees to sign papers stating that they had “voluntarily joined the Serbian Orthodox religion”.³³³³ Detainees were subjected to “serious mental and physical abuse” by Bosnian Serb ³³²⁸ P127 (Witness statement of Alija Isaković dated 22 January 1999), p. 4. In contrast, Batinić himself testified that after he returned to the town, his priority was to visit the school and that when he visited, he spoke to the people and distributed cigarettes to them and he heard that they were provided food and were safe there. D2930 (Witness statement of Tomislav Batinić dated 11 February 2013), para. 26; Tomislav Batinić, T. 33682 (14 February 2013). The Chamber finds that Batinić’s evidence with respect to the school is marked by contradictions in that he first claimed that he never heard that Bosnian Muslim civilians were taken from their villages by the Brigade Command and taken to the school but when confronted with documents which showed that the Brigade Command did inform him he acknowledged that he remembered these letters but denied that the civilian authorities ordered them to do so. Batinić’s attempt to distance the civilian authorities from these events is contrary to the document which suggests that civilians were separated from “extreme combatants” and gathered at the school with the approval of the Municipal Assembly of Rogatica. Tomislav Batinić, T. 33683–33685 (14 February 2013); D2914 (Response of 1st Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade, 30 November 1992). Having regard to these contradictions, the Chamber cannot rely on Batinić’s evidence with respect to events at the school.

police and armed individuals in uniforms who entered the facility.³³³⁴ Detainees were taken to the third floor and the cellar where they were questioned and where pliers were used to mistreat them.³³³⁵

990. At night soldiers would bang on the walls and open the doors violently, flash their flashlights onto the faces of detainees, choose women and girls at random, say they were being taken for questioning but they would take them away to be raped.³³³⁶ The other detainees could hear the women and girls screaming for help.³³³⁷ Women and girls as young as seven, as well as a 13 year old boy were taken out of the classrooms almost every night for a period of two and a half months and raped by the police and soldiers who guarded the camp.³³³⁸ Some of the women were also taken from the school to flats and apartments in other parts of town, where they were also raped.³³³⁹

991. When one of his female relatives was taken away, a male detainee tried to follow her but could not; he was later taken by two men to the cellar and shown where she had been raped.³³⁴⁰ This detainee was taken to the cellar almost every day and he could see chains that were for leading cattle, as well as traces of blood and could smell the “stench of sperm and sweat”.³³⁴¹ He was also raped two and a half weeks after being detained; he was brought to the basement at least 30 times

³³³⁴ P3405 (Witness statement of KDZ051 dated 17 September 2011), paras. 51, 67; see Adjudicated Facts 2509, 2510. D2909 (Witness statement of Mile Ujić dated 9 February 2013), para. 28. The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable or of significance given that Ujić visited the school only on one occasion and it is unclear when he went and to how many people he spoke about their treatment. The Chamber also found inconsistencies in his evidence with respect to the school.

and raped on almost every occasion.³³⁴² He was tied to a desk, he was verbally abused, pliers were used to mistreat him, and he was raped by police truncheons and similar objects.³³⁴³

992. Some of the detainees at the school were ordered to work; they dug trenches, collected garbage, carried ammunition, made machine-gun nests, and buried corpses.³³⁴⁴ Detainees who did not work fast enough or do exactly as they were instructed were beaten, insulted, and threatened.³³⁴⁵ When a Bosnian Serb tank was hit by an anti-tank mine which killed the driver and injured other soldiers, Kušić came to the school with soldiers and collected four to five Bosnian Muslim men who “were taken to be a sort of human shield for the Serb soldiers so they could pull out their dead and wounded from the tank”.³³⁴⁶

993. At the end of June 1992, a group of between 200 and 300 people were taken from the school, placed on buses and trucks, and told that they were being taken to Bosnian Muslim territory.³³⁴⁷ They were escorted by Bosnian Serb police.³³⁴⁸ The convoy was stopped by local Bosnian Serbs and members of the White Eagles who separated men between the ages of 16 and 65 from the women and children.³³⁴⁹ The women and children were transported out of the municipality while the men were eventually taken to other detention facilities in other municipalities including the Sušica camp in Vlasenica,³³⁵⁰ the Batković camp in Bijeljina,³³⁵¹ and the Kula Prison in Ilidža.³³⁵² The women and children were loaded onto buses and trucks “like cattle” and taken to Hreša where they were later exchanged.³³⁵³ On 16 August 1992, a person named Kojić from the Bosnian Serb MUP came to the school and ordered that all “loyal” Muslims

(c) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

994. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serb civilians including women and children from Rogatica were brought to and detained at the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School from at least May 1992 until August 1992. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included inadequate food, overcrowding, and limited access to water. Detainees were subjected to beatings and mental abuse and were forced to work at the frontlines. Both male and female detainees were also subjected to acts of sexual violence.

(d) Scheduled Incident B.16.1

995. The Indictment refers to the killing of a number of men taken from the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School between June and September 1992.

996. Between June and September 1992, groups of male detainees were taken out of the school to a location behind the school, after which shooting was heard and the detainees did not return.³³⁵⁵ After many detainees disappeared from the school those who remained were told that they would all be killed and that they would all disappear.³³⁵⁶

997. The Chamber therefore finds that a number of men taken from the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School between June and September 1992 were killed by Serb Forces.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.21.2

998. The Indictment refers to the use of the garage of Novica Andrić as a detention facility on or about 14 August 1992.

The Chamber is not satisfied with the provenance of this document and will not rely on it for the purposes of a finding in this regard.

³³⁵⁶ P3405 (Witness statement of KDZ051 dated 17 September 2011), para. 93

999. The garage of Novica Andrić was located in the village of Kosovo, approximately four kilometres from the village of Mađer, and was used as a place of detention.³³⁵⁷ On 14 August 1992, Šefik Hurko, his mother, father, and cousin were arrested by four Bosnian Serb soldiers in the village of Mađer and brought to the garage of Novica Andrić.³³⁵⁸ There was a large group of armed men in uniforms who were identified as “Chetniks”.³³⁵⁹ These men wore beards and cockades, as well as skull and cross-bone insignias.³³⁶⁰ Šefik Hurko and his family were ordered by four soldiers to go into the garage.³³⁶¹ These four soldiers behaved in a professional manner and did not beat or mistreat the detainees.³³⁶² Hurko testified that when he and his family entered the garage they sat on a bench and other soldiers entered, including a man with a moustache who introduced himself as Rajko Kušić.³³⁶³ Hurko was beaten on arrival in the garage.³³⁶⁴ Kušić ordered Stojan Perković and Brane Krsmanović to search them.³³⁶⁵ After a packet of bullets and a pistol was found, Perković and Krsmanović beat Hurko and his father.³³⁶⁶ Krsmanović told Hurko’s father to “stick his tongue out”, took a knife to cut his tongue off, and then started to cut his ears.³³⁶⁷ Perković hit Hurko on the head with the packet of bullets, cursed him, and forced him to eat three or four of the bullets.³³⁶⁸

³³⁶³ Šefik Hurko, T. 18364–18365 (5 September 2011). The Accused tried to suggest that other people introduced themselves as Rajko Kušić but the witness did not know anything about this and only knew that the person introduced himself as Kušić. Šefik Hurko, T. 18363–18364 (5 September 2011). Given that Andrić himself acknowledged that Kušić was there the Chamber places no weight on the Accused’s suggestion that this could have been a misidentification. Novica Andrić, T. 34454 (28 February 2013).

³³⁶⁴ Šefik Hurko, T. 18367 (5 September 2011). Andrić testified that his garage was used as a shelter to protect Bosnian Muslims from acts of revenge by Bosnian Serb soldiers and that the Hurko family only stayed in the garage for a short time, they were not mistreated or abused and were allowed to leave but had nowhere safer to go. D3038 (Witness statement of Novica Andrić dated 23 February 2013), paras. 10–11, 13; Novica Andrić, T. 34447, 34453–34457 (28 February 2013); D3039 (Photograph of a garage); D3040 (Photograph of a garage). See also D3041 (Photograph of a house); D3042 (Photograph of a house). The Chamber does not consider Andrić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber noted inconsistencies in Andrić’s evidence and found that his evidence was marked by evasiveness as well as indicators that he was not candid with the Chamber. More specifically Andrić denied any knowledge that Perković had pled guilty and was convicted for the crimes committed in the garage; the Chamber also noted an inconsistency between his evidence that the Hurko family members were not detained and his testimony that they were in military detention and prisoners of the army.

1000. Hurko was singled out by Kušić and taken out of the garage with a gun pointed at his back; he could still hear them beating his father when he went outside.³³⁶⁹ Hurko was questioned by Kušić about Bosnian Muslim forces before being taken back into the garage.³³⁷⁰ When he was taken back inside Hurko saw his father on the floor, covered in blood with both his ears cut.³³⁷¹ Perković stabbed Hurko in the hand with a knife and attempted to slash his throat.³³⁷² Kušić watched this whole incident³³⁷³ and ordered that Hurko and his family be taken to Rogatica,³³⁷⁴ after which they were taken to the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School.³³⁷⁵ Perković received an award during the first anniversary of the “liberation” of Rogatica.³³⁷⁶

1001. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that a Bosnian Muslim family was detained at the garage of Novica Andrić on or about 14 August 1992 and that the male members of the family were beaten, stabbed, and mistreated by Serb Forces.

(3) Scheduled Detention Facility C.21.3

1002. The Indictment refers to the use of Rasadnik as a detention facility at least between August 1992 and October 1994.

(a) Arrival of detainees and control over detention facility

1003. The Rasadnik detention facility was located at a factory farm which had been used before the war to house farm animals.³³⁷⁷ The building where people were detained had been previously used for cattle exhibitions.³³⁷⁸

1004. On 5 August 1992, approximately 20 Bosnian Muslim men and one boy aged 14 who had been separated from the women and children at the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were taken to Rasadnik.³³⁷⁹ They were detained in two rooms with boarded up windows.³³⁸⁰

1006. On the evening of 16 August 1992, detainees who had been previously held at the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School were brought to Rasadnik.³³⁸⁵ The men were separated from the women.³³⁸⁶ Some detainees received better treatment because they were friends of Kušić's or because they co-operated with the Bosnian Serbs.³³⁸⁷ Detainees were also brought to the facility in October 1992³³⁸⁸ and there were reports that Bosnian Muslims were still being held at the facility in 1995.³³⁸⁹ However, given that the Indictment only alleges detention until October 1994 at Rasadnik, the Chamber will not make findings with respect to detention after this date.

1007. Rasadnik was guarded by the civilian police of Rogatica and the warden of the facility was Miloš Vojanović.³³⁹⁰ The guards wore camouflage or olive grey uniforms and automatic weapons of the JNA.³³⁹¹ After 1 November 1992, the guards at the detention facility were replaced by soldiers who called themselves “Chetniks”, and JNA officers from Serbia would also visit the facility.³³⁹² Kušić visited the camp on several occasions in 1992 and 1993 and gave the impression that he had “100% control” over the facility.³³⁹³ The Eastern Bosnia Corps command and the command of the 4th Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade were informed about the capture and detention of Bosnian Muslims in Rogatica, including at Rasadnik.³³⁹⁴

1008. Defence witnesses testified that (i) Rasadnik was a military detention facility where both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs were detained and questioned; (ii) the Bosnian Muslims detained at this facility were suspects who had weapons when their villages were searched or had fired at Bosnian Serb villages; (iii) some civilians may have moved to the camp when the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School closed; (iv) there was no mistreatment of detainees; and (v) the facility was a reception centre.³³⁹⁵ The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its discussion above relating to the credibility assessment of the relevant witnesses.³³⁹⁶ More specifically, the Chamber notes that Lelek was shown a list of captured Bosnian Muslims from Rogatica and asked whether they were prisoners, but Lelek maintained that they were placed in Rasadnik because the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School was closed.³³⁹⁷ Lelek was confronted with evidence that civilians including elderly women were detained and died at Rasadnik, and Lelek confirmed that there were civilians detained there but insisted that he did not understand why elderly civilians would be killed there.³³⁹⁸ In light of these inconsistencies the Chamber does not consider Lelek's evidence to be reliable in this regard.

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1009. While the detainees were held at the facility, the windows were boarded up.³³⁹⁹ The detainees had no running water and their access to the water which was kept in containers outside was at the discretion of the guards; they also had no toilet and had to be escorted outside by guards.³⁴⁰⁰

1010. All the newly arrived detainees were beaten by a guard called Šolaja.³⁴⁰¹ Severe beating of detainees was common place at the facility.³⁴⁰² Detainees were interrogated in a small room and in the course of the interrogations were beaten on their heads and stomachs with rifle butts; the room was left bloody from the beatings.³⁴⁰³ Dragomir Kanostrevac was among those involved in the interrogations and beatings.³⁴⁰⁴ Later, interrogations were carried out by Novak Džida who was dressed in civilian clothes.³⁴⁰⁵ Kanostrevac and Džida were on the list of active policemen working at the Rogatica SJB in May 1992.³⁴⁰⁶

³⁴⁰⁰ P3289 (Witness statement of KDZ607 dated 1 September 2011), para. 18 (under seal). In contrast Ujić testified that detainees at Rasadnik had access to toilets and warm water. D2909 (Witness statement of Mile Ujić dated 9 February 2013), para. 29. Having reviewed this evidence, the Chamber is not convinced that Ujić was in a position to know about the specific conditions of detention at Rasadnik. The Chamber is therefore not convinced that it can rely on his evidence in this regard. In addition, the Chamber noted contradictions in the evidence of Lelek with respect to the Rasadnik facility and therefore does not accept his evidence with respect to the conditions of detention and treatment of detainees. Milovan Lelek, T. 34386 (27 February 2013). Similarly, on cross-examination, Andrić could not confirm whether or not Bosnian Muslim women, including a 101 year old, was detained at Rasadnik because his job did not involve going into the buildings but he acknowledged that Bosnian Muslim civilians were detained at the facility. Andrić denied knowledge of old women who died after a year of detention at Rasadnik on the basis that he only came there rarely and was not aware of all things that happened there. Novica Andrić, T. 34460–34464, 34479–34481 (28 February 2013); D3038 (Witness statement of Novica Andrić dated 23 February 2013), para. 17 (stating further that the detainees received the same food as the staff and soldiers at the facility). Having regard to the inconsistencies and evasiveness in Andrić's evidence, the Chamber does not consider that Andrić's evidence is of much weight in this regard particularly given his claim when questioned that he was not aware of many things which happened in the facility.

1011. From 16 August to 1 September 1992, Hurko was not beaten, but around 2 a.m. on 1 September, his father was taken to the warden's office for questioning and he could hear his father being beaten through the wall.³⁴⁰⁷ When Hurko saw his father the next day, he could see that his father's face was swollen from the blows.³⁴⁰⁸ After half an hour, Hurko was taken to a room and was threatened by Vojinović to answer all questions truthfully if he wanted to keep his "head on his shoulders".³⁴⁰⁹ When Hurko was questioned about the location of trenches and mines and denied any knowledge about the matter he was beaten as the question was repeated.³⁴¹⁰ Hurko was beaten on the back with a baton and when he fell down a guard nicknamed "Buco" jumped on him. When he lost consciousness, a bucket of water was poured on him and the beating stopped.³⁴¹¹

1012. Both Hurko and his father were taken away from the camp by Bosnian Serb police to the Rogatica SJB. Hurko arrived at the Rogatica SJB after his father and saw his father covered in blood.³⁴¹² At the Rogatica SJB, Hurko was threatened before being forced to sign a statement about his father's involvement in organising specific meetings in Rogatica.³⁴¹³ Hurko was then returned to Rasadnik where his mother told him that his father had been seriously beaten. As a result of the beating, his father could not move for the next 15 days.³⁴¹⁴

1013. Although Mile Bojat, who was the warden at Rasadnik for a month,³⁴¹⁵ told the detainees that there would be no more maltreatment under his command, the mistreatment continued.³⁴¹⁶ Bojat was replaced by Vinko Bojić in October 1992.³⁴¹⁷ Bojić, who wore a MP uniform took over command of the facility and was involved in the severe beating of detainees.³⁴¹⁸ During beatings, Bojić would order the detainee to lie on the floor and would jump on him.³⁴¹⁹ In beating Alija Isaković Bojić broke six of Isaković's ribs. He also carved a cross on Isaković's chest with a hunting knife, pushed lit cigarettes into his ears and cursed Isaković and called him a “Turk”.³⁴²⁰ Bojić carved 30 crosses on the body of Bećir Ćutarija, burned him with cigarettes, pulled his teeth, jumped on him, and forced him to swallow two bullets.³⁴²¹ Bojić also allowed other “Chetniks” to beat the detainees; the maltreatment of the detainees worsened when Bosnian Serb soldiers were killed in clashes with Bosnian Muslims.³⁴²²

1014. Isaković was beaten on another occasion for two days and two nights by two men known as Brđanin and Šolaja and on other occasions by Mišo Vojinović, Rajak and Ikončić.³⁴²³ Other guards who beat the detainees included Bojić’s brother, Branko Planojević, and Sorak.³⁴²⁴ In July 1993, Hurko heard the beating of a captured member of the ABiH; Hurko himself was beaten around 10 July 1993, when the chief of the SJB in Rogatica and his deputy visited the camp.³⁴²⁵ Some detainees died following the beatings.³⁴²⁶ Other detainees were taken away, after which the sound of beating followed by a gun shot were heard.³⁴²⁷

1015. The ICRC visited Rasadnik on 28 July 1993 and after being assured that the detainees could speak frankly and in confidence, Hurko told the representatives that their situation was difficult, that they had been taken to the frontlines, that they did not have enough food, and were being sexually mistreated.³⁴²⁸ After about three days, Hurko was beaten by Bojić in a manner which he describes as “bestial”, stating: “He put his pistol in my mouth. He pulled hair from my armpits and inserted it in my mouth. He extinguished cigarettes on me and ordered me to eat the extinguished cigarettes. He ordered me to remove my clothes. He then hit me in my ribs with a knife handle.”³⁴²⁹ One of Hurko’s ribs was broken while Bojić asked him about everything he had complained about to the ICRC.³⁴³⁰ Bojić then brought in Hurko’s father and asked him if he wanted to go to a third country, which reflected what he had told the ICRC, and then ordered Hurko to beat his father.³⁴³¹ Hurko could only hit his father five or six times as he was out of strength after which Bojić said: “If you don’t want to, I will” and continued to hit his father 15 to 16 times until he fell down.³⁴³² Two 65 year old men were also beaten badly.³⁴³³

1016. Women were also taken out at night and were forced by Bojić to strip and perform sexual acts with elderly detainees,³⁴³⁴ after which Bojić would take the women to another room.³⁴³⁵ Several Bosnian Muslim women who had been detained at Rasadnik told Hurko that Bojić had raped them.³⁴³⁶

1017. Bojić also forced “male prisoners to perform unnatural sexual acts”.³⁴³⁷ This included an incident in or around February 1993 where Bosnian Muslim men and women detainees were ordered to undress, dance and perform sexual acts in front of Bosnian Serb soldiers who wore ammunition belts and “skull insignia”.³⁴³⁸ Over the course of one or two hours, the Bosnian Soldiers took the naked women one by one to another room for a period of approximately 20 minutes.³⁴³⁹ Four women were taken away that day while other women were taken away in the following days.³⁴⁴⁰

1018. Bosnian Muslim detainees were taken to the town of Rogatica each day and forced to clean up broken glass and construction material work in places that had been shelled.³⁴⁴¹ Detainees were also forced to clean and paint Bosnian Muslim apartments to prepare them for Serbs who would be moving into them, as well as to move furniture and belongings out of Bosnian Muslim homes into

³⁴⁴⁰ [REDACTED]. “new Serb occupied residences”.³⁴⁴² Some detainees were also taken from the camp to dig trenches³⁴⁴³ while others were taken to unload lorries at the Sladara barley factory.³⁴⁴⁴

1019. In mid-July 1993, ten detainees and two captured ABiH soldiers were taken from the camp by truck to the village of Starčiči.³⁴⁴⁵ The detainees were instructed to recover the bodies of 17 soldiers in an area which was mined.³⁴⁴⁶ A Bosnian Muslim named Mirsad Omanović who was meant to know the positions of the mines, was told to lead them.³⁴⁴⁷ When one man hit a land mine and lost a leg, Bojić stabbed Omanović, cursed the detainees’ “Baliija mothers”, and shot Osmanović.³⁴⁴⁸ Hurko and another detainee were ordered to bury the body in a shallow grave.³⁴⁴⁹ After this incident the detainees spent three days in the area and found the 17 bodies and buried them there.³⁴⁵⁰

1020. Some detainees were exchanged from the facility³⁴⁵¹ while others were transported to Batković camp.³⁴⁵² In July 1993, 30 detainees were selected for a proposed exchange and taken towards Bijeljina.³⁴⁵³ However, this exchange did not occur and the detainees were returned to Rasadnik, after which Kušić came to the facility, cursed the detainees and said “Alija doesn’t want you, I don’t know what to do with you, I’ll invite the International Red Cross to send you where you want, and if they don’t want you, I’ll kill you all.”³⁴⁵⁴ On 30 April 1994, 12 male detainees and a large number of women and children were transported by bus from Rasadnik to Kula by Dragan Bulajić, the president of the Serbian Commission for Prisoner Exchange.³⁴⁵⁵

(c) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1021. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that non-Serbs from Rogatica, including civilians and some ABiH soldiers, were brought to and detained at Rasadnik from at least August 1992 to October 1994. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included limited access to water. Detainees were subjected to mental abuse and beatings and some detainees died following those beatings.³⁴⁵⁶ Detainees were forced to work on the frontline. Both male and female detainees were also subjected to acts of sexual violence.

1022. The Indictment refers to the killing of at least 27 men taken from detention facilities at Rasadnik on 15 August 1992.³⁴⁵⁷

1023. On 15 August 1992 Radisav Ljubinac (a.k.a. “Pjano”) went to a work site and told Bosnian Muslim detainees who were working at the site that under the orders of Kušić they were to leave their work and would be taken “to where the action was”.³⁴⁵⁸ Pjano drove a mini-bus carrying approximately 27 Bosnian Muslim detainees and was accompanied by other Bosnian Serb soldiers.³⁴⁵⁹ Some of these detainees had been asked to declare their loyalty to a Serb state.³⁴⁶⁰

³⁴⁵⁵ P3267 (Witness statement of Šefik Hurko dated 1 September 2011), para. 49.

³⁴⁵⁶ This finding does not include the persons alleged to have been killed in Scheduled Incident B.16.2, which is discussed below.

1024. The detainees were driven to a meadow and were met by Miša Krsmanović a.k.a “Pipa”.³⁴⁶¹ When they arrived Pjano swore and asked where Kušić was.³⁴⁶² The detainees were driven to the frontline at Duljevac and stopped at a spot where there was a group of “Chetniks” who had beards, long hair, and were wearing caps with Serb insignia.³⁴⁶³ The detainees were ordered to get out of the mini-bus one by one.³⁴⁶⁴ As the detainees got off the bus, one of the Bosnian Serbs said: “[T]hese should be immediately slaughtered” and one who was wearing a yellow headband and was named Dragoje Paunović who was called Špiro,³⁴⁶⁵ said that he would decide.³⁴⁶⁶

1025. Špiro was commander of a unit of the Rogatica Brigade.³⁴⁶⁷ The 10 to 15 Bosnian Serb soldiers were wearing grey, olive, and camouflage uniforms.³⁴⁶⁸ Špiro ordered the soldiers to tie the men’s hands behind their backs and to have them walk down a fenced alley towards the frontline.³⁴⁶⁹ Špiro ordered the Bosnian Serb soldiers to advance towards the frontlines with the detainees.³⁴⁷⁰ Two or three Bosnian Muslim men were ordered to walk in front of the Bosnian Serb soldiers towards the frontline.³⁴⁷¹ When shooting started two of the Bosnian Muslim detainees were wounded.³⁴⁷² Thereafter, the Bosnian Muslim men were led along a dirt road for 50 metres and then towards a field and ordered to stop.³⁴⁷³ When they crossed a meadow three Bosnian Serb soldiers with automatic rifles faced them; Špiro asked how many were wounded and when he was told that some were wounded, he said “I have a lot more” and then ordered a Bosnian Serb soldier to kill them.³⁴⁷⁴ The Bosnian Serb soldier then shot at the front of the line of detainees.³⁴⁷⁵ When some of the younger people in the group pleaded for mercy Špiro cocked his automatic rifle and shot bursts of fire at the group of men and three other soldiers also opened fire.³⁴⁷⁶

³⁴⁶¹ P3289 (Witness statement of KDZ607 dated 1 September 2011), para. 28 (under seal). While the Accused on cross-examination tried to show an inconsistency between the witness’s statement and his court testimony on this issue, the Chamber found that the Accused did not accurately quote the witness’s statement and that conflicting statements were not established to any degree. The Chamber is therefore satisfied with the witness’s evidence in this regard. See KDZ607, T. 18517 (7 September 2011) (private session).

1026. After the shooting, those who survived were moaning, after which Špiro ordered that all those who were still alive should be finished off.³⁴⁷⁷ The Bosnian Serb soldiers walked around and shot potential survivors.³⁴⁷⁸ After Bosnian Serb soldiers spotted one detainee sitting up, they opened a burst of gunfire and killed him.³⁴⁷⁹ Baždar, who was among the Bosnian Muslim men who were shot at, survived. While Baždar was laying face down under the body of his dead uncle, he heard a radio conversation where a person who identified himself as Rajko Kušić asked Špiro “who’s shooting?”.³⁴⁸⁰ Ujić also found out about this incident either on the same day or the day after.³⁴⁸¹

Ujić testified that this execution was carried out by Špiro on his own accord, but that nobody approved of this incident at the Brigade Command, Corps Command or Supreme Command levels. He also testified that he did not report the incident to the Accused nor was he aware of whether anyone else reported the incident to the Accused. Mile Ujić, T. 33470, 33473–33477 (12 February 2013). However, the Chamber does not consider Ujić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. The Chamber noted that Ujić’s evidence was marked by contradictions and inconsistencies and his evidence demonstrated a clear interest in minimising the awareness and involvement of the Bosnian Serb authorities in the incident.

1027. The BiH Research and Document Agency reported on the exhumation of 24 bodies from a mass grave site at Duljevac, Rogatica, in September 1998 which was carried out pursuant to a decision of the Sarajevo Cantonal Court.³⁴⁸² Bullet cases were retrieved from the mass grave and in the vicinity of the grave.³⁴⁸³ The 24 bodies were identified following a post-mortem examination.³⁴⁸⁴ KDZ607 confirmed that the names listed in the exhumation report corresponded to the names of the people he identified as the victims of this incident.³⁴⁸⁵ The bodies were returned to families for burial after they identified the exhumed bodies.³⁴⁸⁶

1028. The Chamber therefore finds that 24 Bosnian Muslims who had been taken from Rasadnik were killed by Serb Forces on 15 August 1992.³⁴⁸⁷

1029. The Indictment refers to the destruction of five mosques in Rogatica at least between June and December 1992.³⁴⁸⁸

1030. In the days following the initial attack on Rogatica on 22 May 1992, tanks and APCs came to the town on a daily basis and fired at targets including the mosques.³⁴⁸⁹ While KDZ051 was detained at the Veljko Vlahović Secondary School, he saw Bosnian Serb soldiers go past in a tank carrying a black flag with the skull and bone insignia and the tricolour flag of the RS heading in the direction of a mosque in town.³⁴⁹⁰ After some time, KDZ051 heard “a couple of blows or knocks”, and then ten minutes later, the tank returned.³⁴⁹¹ That same afternoon, KDZ051 heard that the mosque had been partially destroyed; on the next day, the tank returned with others and destroyed it completely.³⁴⁹²

The Chamber notes that it received another report which listed 26 people who were killed in this incident. P3283 (List of Bosnian Muslim civilians killed in Rogatica), p. 7. The Chamber is not satisfied with the provenance of this document and will not rely on it for the purposes of a finding in this regard.

1031. By the end of 1992 the two mosques in Rogatica, named Čaršijska and Arnaudija,³⁴⁹³ were completely destroyed.³⁴⁹⁴ The buildings adjacent to the mosques remained in good condition.³⁴⁹⁵ Bosnian Muslims were taken to sites and forced to clear the rubble of both mosques which had been “razed to the ground”.³⁴⁹⁶ The Chamber therefore finds that Serb Forces destroyed the Arnaudija and Čaršijska mosques in the town of Rogatica between June and December 1992.

³⁴⁸⁸ Arnaudija mosque, Čaršijska mosque (the Chamber notes that the Indictment refers to the Čaršija mosque but considers this to be a reference to the same mosque), three mosques in the area of Vragolovi.

Defence witnesses testified that (i) the Green Berets assembled around the mosques; (ii) the mosques were used by Bosnian Muslim forces for the storage of anti-tank mines; (iii) sniper nests were located near the mosques; (iv) the mosques may have been hit during clashes; and (v) Serb Forces were instructed not to destroy any religious facilities. The Chamber notes that it is unclear when this video was taken and is not satisfied that it can be used to support a finding that machine gun nests were near mosques but does suggest damage to a mosque in Rogatica). The Chamber does not find this evidence to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the evidence that some of the mosques were completely destroyed while adjacent buildings remained in good condition undermined the testimony of the witnesses that they were destroyed in clashes. In addition the Chamber refers to the credibility assessment of the relevant witnesses in fns. 3142 and 3208 as to why the evidence of these witnesses is unreliable in this regard.

1032. Three mosques in the Vragolovi area were also destroyed.³⁴⁹⁷ While the Chamber relies on Riedlmayer for the purposes of finding that the mosques were destroyed, and the nature and extent of the damage to the mosques and surrounding buildings, it does not rely on his evidence as to when and who was responsible for the destruction of the mosques which fall outside his expertise and are based on informant statements which he received. Therefore, while the Chamber further finds that three mosques in the Vragolovi area were also destroyed, it has insufficient evidence to determine when they were destroyed and who was responsible for their destruction.

(H) Movement of the population from Rogatica

1033. In the period leading up to the attack on Rogatica, Bosnian Muslims were harassed, searched, and “insulted on religious and ethnic grounds”; thereafter most of them stopped going to work.³⁴⁹⁸ The security situation became more complicated in April 1992.³⁴⁹⁹ The shortages in food and necessities caused panic and prompted people to take refuge outside the municipality, including in Serbia.³⁵⁰⁰ Both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs left because of fear, which was exacerbated in May 1992 due to increasing insecurity and shooting incidents.³⁵⁰¹ Bosnian Serbs left the town en masse and found accommodation with relatives on the outskirts of town or in houses in Bosnian Serb villages or hamlets outside town.³⁵⁰² Since the majority of the Bosnian Serb inhabitants had moved out of the town, the organs of the Serb Municipality of Rogatica also relocated.³⁵⁰³ When the Bosnian Serb families started moving out of the town, this made the ³⁴⁹⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 2513. Riedlmayer’s report, which is based on his visits to the sites in 2002 and on information he received from the Islamic Community of BiH and other sources, identifies the following mosques and the level of damage: Arnaudija mosque (completely destroyed), Čaršijska mosque (completely destroyed), Vragolovi mosque (heavily damaged): P4070 (Attachment to the expert report of András J. Bosnian Muslim population nervous about what would happen to them.³⁵⁰⁴ A significant number of Bosnian Muslims left the town.³⁵⁰⁵

1034. Prior to the attack on Rogatica, Bosnian Serb men had already taken their military positions outside Rogatica and Bosnian Serb women and children had moved out of the area; as a result the only people remaining were Bosnian Muslims and a few Bosnian Serbs.³⁵⁰⁶ Some Bosnian Muslims who tried to escape their villages were arrested by Serb Forces and taken to Sokolac.³⁵⁰⁷

1035. The shelling of downtown Rogatica, which had a majority Muslim population, prompted Bosnian Muslims to move out from the town centre and columns of people began moving through Kozarde.³⁵⁰⁸ The Chamber has also described above the number of Bosnian Muslims who gathered in Rogatica town and who were taken to Veljko Vlahović Secondary School.³⁵⁰⁹ A group of between 1,500 and 2,000 Bosnian Muslims left following the shelling of the town and arrived in the Bosnian Muslim village of Vragolovi where there were approximately 5,000 to 6,000 displaced Bosnian Muslims.³⁵¹⁰ Bosnian Muslims from the villages around Rogatica also went to Vragolovi while others continued towards Goražde.³⁵¹¹ Bosnian Muslims were threatened and warned of forthcoming “cleansing”.³⁵¹² They were told that they would be allowed to leave the area and that buses to Visoko and Zenica would be provided, as this was where Bosnian Muslims were “supposed to live”.³⁵¹³ When he visited Rogatica in August 1992, Bowen was told that the expulsion of Bosnian Muslims was led by Kušić.³⁵¹⁴ Bowen also interviewed Bosnian Muslims who were former residents of Rogatica who spoke to him about killing, forcible evacuation and the rape of young women.³⁵¹⁵

1036. Some Bosnian Muslims were moved out of Rogatica in an organised way.³⁵¹⁶ At the end of November 1992 Kušić stated that the Municipal Assembly had lists of “loyal Muslims” in Rogatica and also lists of “the ones who were sent away from Rogatica in the previous months during combat activities”.³⁵¹⁷ There was also an increasing number of Serb refugees arriving from other areas of BiH who were accommodated in the abandoned homes of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs.³⁵¹⁸ By the end of June 1992, more Bosnian Muslims left Rogatica given that the Bosnian Serbs “were terrorising the people” and creating conditions in which “it was impossible for the Muslims to continue to live in the area.”³⁵¹⁹ The Bosnian Muslim civilian authorities and police from Rogatica withdrew from the town.³⁵²⁰

1037. On 26 June 1992, Tomislav Šipčić, as Commander of the SRK, issued a written warning to the Rogatica Brigade Command in which he said: “Kušić, I strictly forbid you to take any action on your own unless I personally approve, particularly any form of mopping up of anybody’s villages. For the last time, I am warning you to refrain from massacre, rampaging, abusing the innocent population of any nationality.”³⁵²¹ Despite this order, Kušić retained his position in the Rogatica Brigade, but the order did result in some improvement in his conduct.³⁵²²

³⁵¹⁶ KDZ051, T. 19380 (22 September 2011). Batinić denied that the Rogatica Crisis Staff or the Bosnian Serb leadership adopted a position, rendered a decision on the forcible moving out of the Bosnian Muslim population, or incited any other institution to do so. D2930 (Witness statement of Tomislav Batinić dated 11 February 2013), paras. 18, 35 referring to P2835 (Report of Rogatica Crisis Staff, April – June 1992); Tomislav Batinić, T. 33673 (14 February 2013). However, the Chamber does not find Batinić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching this conclusion the Chamber noted Batinić had an interest in minimising his own involvement in events in Rogatica and that the witness was evasive and his evidence was marked by contradictions.

³⁵¹⁷ D2914 (Response of 1st Podrinje Light Infantry Brigade, 30 November 1992), p. 1. Defence witnesses testified that Bosnian Muslim villages which expressed loyalty to the Bosnian Serb authorities and handed over their weapons were protected. D2930 (Witness statement of Tomislav Batinić dated 11 February 2013), paras. 27, 29–30; Tomislav Batinić, T. 33689, 33711 (14 February 2013); D2909 (Witness statement of Mile Ujić dated 9 February 2013), para. 32; Mile Ujić, T. 33462–33463 (12 February 2013); Milovan Lelek, T. 34377–34379 (27 February 2013). The Chamber does not find this evidence that Bosnian Muslim villages were protected to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that Batinić acknowledged on cross-examination that Bosnian Muslims did not remain in these villages throughout the war and that in October 1994 the last remaining Bosnian Muslims left the municipality but he claimed that they left at their own request. When Batinić was confronted with documents which suggested that these last remaining Bosnian Muslims were forcibly expelled by Bosnian Serb soldiers who came to their homes he claimed he did not know that this was happening. The Chamber found a contradiction in Batinić’s evidence that Bosnian Muslims were leaving at their own request and his denial of any knowledge about how they were moved from their homes and his acknowledgement that they lived in fear and the authorities were unable to keep everything under control. Tomislav Batinić, T. 33691–33695 (14 February 2013). The Chamber also refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 3142 and 3208 as to why the evidence of the relevant witnesses are unreliable in this regard.

1038. In July 1992, 1,500 Bosnian Muslims escaped from Vragolovi to Goražde after the former was shelled by Serb Forces.³⁵²³ In August 1992, almost all Bosnian Muslims who had taken refuge in Vragolovi left the village after they received a warning about another attack.³⁵²⁴

1039. The Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslim population were forced to leave Rogatica following immense pressure put on them, given the surrounding circumstances in the municipality including inter alia (i) attacks against their homes; (ii) shelling of villages; (iii) destruction of mosques and other property; (iv) forcible arrest and removal from their homes; (v) detention in multiple detention facilities; as well as (vi) mistreatment and killings. While the Chamber received evidence that orders were issued which called for the protection of members of the population who handed over weapons, this does not undermine the evidence received with respect to lack of voluntariness in the departure of the Bosnian Muslim population.³⁵²⁵

1040. Bosnian Muslim women, children and elderly continued to be expelled from Rogatica even until October 1994 when the last remaining Bosnian Muslims left the municipality.³⁵²⁶ By the time the Accused delivered a speech at the RS Assembly on 28 August 1995 there were almost no Bosnian Muslims in Rogatica.³⁵²⁷

³⁵²⁵ D2910 (SRK Order, 22 October 1992), p. 1; D2911 (SRK Order, 12 July 1992); D95 (Instructions from RS Presidency to presidents of municipalities in Goražde area, 14 July 1992). The Chamber received evidence that in a UNCHR memorandum dated 17 August 1994, General Soubirou expressed his belief that the “forced eviction of civilians in Rogatica which was covered by the media as ethnic cleansing” was part of an agreement between the parties. D950 (UN report re meeting with General Soubirou, 17 August 1994), p. 2. The Chamber does not consider that the opinion of General Soubirou in this context is of much weight given that he simply states that this was his belief without any indication of the basis of his opinion. It is also not clear whether his observation relates to the whole course of the conflict in Rogatica or a specific incident in 1994. The Chamber also notes that when Bowen was shown this document, he testified that when he interviewed those who left Rogatica, they told him about the difficulties they faced including killing, forced evacuation, and rapes. Jeremy Bowen, T. 10254–10255 (14 January 2011). The Chamber also refers to its finding in paras. 1033–1035 regarding the lack of voluntariness in the departure of the Bosnian Muslim population.

the take-over of Sokolac,³⁵²⁹ and killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.³⁵³⁰ The Prosecution also characterises these killings as extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.³⁵³¹

1042. Other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed by Bosnian Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in Sokolac include (i) torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;³⁵³² (ii) rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities as cruel and inhumane treatment;³⁵³³ (iii) the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, including the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care, or hygienic sanitation facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment;³⁵³⁴ (iv) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;³⁵³⁵ (v) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;³⁵³⁶ (vi) forced labour at the frontline and the use of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats as human shields;³⁵³⁷ (vii) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;³⁵³⁸ (viii) the wanton destruction of private property including homes and business premises and public property, including cultural monuments and sacred sites;³⁵³⁹ and (ix) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.³⁵⁴⁰

1043. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.³⁵⁴¹ In this regard, the Prosecution alleges that Bosnian Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Sokolac in which they were lawfully present by

1044. Sokolac is a municipality in eastern BiH located to the east of Sarajevo and to the west of Rogatica.³⁵⁴⁴ According to the 1991 census, the municipality of Sokolac had approximately 15,000 inhabitants, of whom around 66% were Bosnian Serbs and 33% were Bosnian Muslims.³⁵⁴⁵

1045. Following the multi-party elections in late 1990, the SDS won 29 of the 50 seats in Sokolac and an inter-party agreement was reached with the SDA under which positions of authority were divided between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims.³⁵⁴⁶ The agreement on the distribution of posts in the SJB was confirmed at a meeting of the MUP.³⁵⁴⁷ Multi-ethnic patrols of reserve army and police were also formed at that time.³⁵⁴⁸

1046. From the beginning of 1991, there were increasing inter-ethnic tensions and fear amongst Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs.³⁵⁴⁹ In January 1992, a meeting was held between SDS and SDA representatives to discuss the deterioration of the political and security situation.³⁵⁵⁰ Tensions were further exacerbated at the beginning of 1992.³⁵⁵¹

1047. From 1991 to spring 1992, both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims were being armed in Sokolac.³⁵⁵² The 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade of the Army of SerBiH was established on 21 May 1992 and was made up of local conscripts from Sokolac, Han Pijesak, and the surrounding area and all members of the TO were mobilised into the brigade.³⁵⁵³ Radislav Krstić was the commander of this brigade.³⁵⁵⁴

1048. Around March 1992, check-points were erected in Sokolac on important roads or at locations leading to the direction of Olovo and armed Bosnian Serbs in uniforms were placed at those check-points.³⁵⁵⁵ Bosnian Muslims were stopped, taken away or mistreated at these check-points.³⁵⁵⁶

1049. During April 1992, several paramilitary units were based in Sokolac town and its surrounding villages.³⁵⁵⁷ These units included Arkan's men, the White Eagles, and some local groups.³⁵⁵⁸ Other informal groups were also present in the municipality.³⁵⁵⁹

Chamber also received evidence about attacks against Bosnian Serb villages by Bosnian Muslims. ³⁵⁵² The Chamber heard evidence that (i) the SDS and JNA were involved in the distribution of weapons and uniforms to Bosnian Serbs; (ii) the SDA was involved in the arming of the Bosnian Muslim population; (iii) units of the Patriotic League and the Green Berets were formed in Sokolac; and (iv) the reserve forces of the TO and the 216th Mountain Brigade of the JNA were mobilised and a JNA rocket unit was moved to Sokolac. ³⁵⁵⁵ P131 (Witness statement of Asim Hamzić dated 25 March 1996), p. 5; Adjudicated Fact 2673. The Chamber received Defence evidence which suggested that there were no barricades in Sokolac at all and that the only armed formations in March 1992 were members of the TO. D3175 (Witness statement of Dragomir Obradović dated 24 March 2013), para. 27. The Chamber does not accept this evidence and in reaching this conclusion, the Chamber considered that Obradović's evidence was marked by deliberate evasiveness and was contradictory on a number of occasions. Furthermore, the Chamber noted that this point was contradicted by other Defence evidence which suggested that there were reserve police check-points manned by a special purpose unit of the SJB that was removed from the police after complaints were made about its actions, and which therefore corroborates the existence of such check-points. D3206 (Witness statement of Milovan Bjelica dated 30 March 2013), paras. 61, 67; D3222 (Minutes from session of Sokolac Crisis Staff, 20 April 1992), p. 8.

³⁵⁵⁷ See Adjudicated Fact 2675. The Chamber is not satisfied that there were no paramilitary formations in Sokolac, as suggested by the evidence led by the Defence. D3206 (Witness statement of Milovan Bjelica dated 30 March 2013), paras. 53, 63. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber considered that in this respect, the evidence of Bjelica was marked with partisanship and bias and could not be relied on in relation thereto.

1050. Measures for the creation of a separate Bosnian Serb police in Sokolac started in early 1992. In February 1992, two days after the establishment of a “Serbian collegium” of the MUP to be managed by Momčilo Mandić,³⁵⁶⁰ Mandić instructed Zoran Cvijetić, Chief of the Sokolac SJB, and other heads of security centres to have a meeting with all senior executives of the MUP in their area of responsibility and report back to him.³⁵⁶¹ Some time in March or April 1992, Cvijetić dismissed all Bosnian Muslim members of the police force and established a separate Bosnian Serb police.³⁵⁶² By April 1992 only Bosnian Serbs remained on the payroll of the Sokolac SJB.³⁵⁶³

1051. The Sokolac Crisis Staff was established in April 1992, and its first session was held on 6 April 1992.³⁵⁶⁴ At this first session, Milan Tupajić, an SDS member and president of the municipal assembly, was appointed as its president.³⁵⁶⁵ The Crisis Staff consisted of the President of the Municipality, the President of the SDS Municipal Board, the chief of police, and other members of the SDS and the SDP and was designed to take over the functions of the municipal assembly when it was unable to convene due to emergency situations.³⁵⁶⁶ The Crisis Staff was tasked with maintaining the functioning of authority, commercial, and social life at the municipality level, collaborating with the police in Sokolac, the command of the army and the Bosnian Serb government on all vital issues.³⁵⁶⁷ All important decisions of the SDS Main Board that needed to individuals or organised groups attempted to enter the municipality.³⁵⁷³ Despite these measures there was evidence that orders of the Crisis Staff were not being respected,³⁵⁷⁴ and that the SJB was not functioning adequately and was either unable or unwilling to control increasing lawlessness against civilians notably by unofficial groups.³⁵⁷⁵

1053. On 20 April 1992, the TO was mobilised.³⁵⁷⁶ On 21 April 1992, the Crisis Staff ordered that measures be taken against individuals who did not respond to the call for mobilisation and for individuals who deserted their TO and JNA units.³⁵⁷⁷ Around that period, there were discussions between the Sokolac Crisis Staff and Bosnian Muslim representatives on how to resolve important issues with respect to the establishment of authority and order and resolve problems in the municipality.³⁵⁷⁸ The Crisis Staff adopted conclusions which called (i) on individuals who had temporarily left the municipality to return to their homes without fear; (ii) on Bosnian Muslims to return to their jobs; and (iii) for good inter-ethnic relations to be maintained.³⁵⁷⁹ Apart from conscripts who required approval from the Secretariat of National Defence, other citizens were able to move freely without passes.³⁵⁸⁰ On 7 May 1992, the Crisis Staff concluded that Bosnian Muslim workers should be allowed to engage in their regular jobs but that in the event of provocation the workers would be suspended in accordance with the law.³⁵⁸¹ The Crisis Staff decided on 15 May

1992 that a public call would be made for citizens who had been “exiled” to return to Sokolac and that those who did not return before 22 May 1992 would be prohibited from returning.³⁵⁸²

1054. By mid-May 1992, there were approximately 4,000 Bosnian Serb refugees in the Sokolac area which added to the atmosphere of “fear and uncertainty” with minor incidents involving Bosnian Serb refugees targeting Bosnian Muslims who remained in Sokolac.³⁵⁸³ Initially, some of the Bosnian Serb refugees moved into abandoned homes without permission and on 22 April 1992, the Crisis Staff prohibited the unlawful and unauthorised occupation of premises, save in the event of “justifiable need” when approval of the use of premises could be granted by the Crisis Staff following an inventory of their contents.³⁵⁸⁴ On 22 May 1992, the Crisis Staff allocated all vacant premises for the temporary use by refugees according to criteria set by the Red Cross of Sokolac after an inventory of the contents carried out by a committee created for this purpose.³⁵⁸⁵

(C) Attacks against Bosnian Muslim villages

1055. At a meeting of the Sokolac Crisis Staff on 15 May 1992, Drago Mačar, as Chief of Staff of the TO, indicated that plans for disarming certain villages had been made.³⁵⁸⁶ Following its formation the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade took over all the activities and assignments of the TO Staff and was involved in disarming Bosnian Muslim villages.³⁵⁸⁷ There was not a positive response to calls for the voluntary surrender of weapons and there was armed resistance to attempts to disarm Bosnian Muslim villages.³⁵⁸⁸

The Chamber also received evidence that the Municipal Board of the SDS formed a Personnel Commission for the nomination of candidates to managerial positions and decided that Bosnian Muslims workers may work and receive tasks. During the period from the end of July to the end of September 1992, the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade attacked and destroyed several Muslim villages in Sokolac municipality, including Pihlice, Kaljina, Sahbegovići, Mangurići, and Meljine.³⁵⁸⁹ The village of Meljine was attacked by Serb Forces using tanks and howitzers from the village of Knežina.³⁵⁹⁰ Attacks began with artillery fire, followed by infantry incursions.³⁵⁹¹ As soon as the first actions commenced, the Bosnian Muslim women, children and elderly started withdrawing from their villages towards Olovo after facing verbal abuse and harassment.³⁵⁹²

(1) Scheduled Incident A 13.1

1057. The Prosecution alleges that at least 40 men were killed in the village of Novoseoci on or about 22 September 1992.

1058. The village of Novoseoci is roughly eight to nine kilometres away from the town of Sokolac and four to five kilometres from the Rogatica-Sokolac cross-road.³⁵⁹³ It consisted of 60 to 70 houses inhabited by Bosnian Muslims.³⁵⁹⁴

1059. In the spring of 1992, Mačar came to Novoseoci and asked the men in the village to turn in any weapons they might have, whereupon the men handed over hunting rifles and other weapons including pistols.³⁵⁹⁵ The disarming of villagers continued on 27 July 1992, as Momčilo Pajić, a Bosnian Serb from Sokolac and Velemir Elez, a journalist, came to Novoseoci to request the hand-over of weapons,³⁵⁹⁶ and told the Bosnian Muslim men of the village that they should go on with their weapons, they should comply because they could not resist the VRS forces and that he could not offer them protection from events which were occurring in other municipalities). See also D3206 (Witness statement of Milovan Bjelica dated 30 March 2013), paras. 44, 64; D3175 (Witness statement of Dragomir Obradović dated 24 March 2013), paras. 7, 14, 30; Dragomir Obradović, T. 36080–36082, 36111 (26 March 2013).

1060. On 19 September 1992, Krstić reported to the Main Staff that active combat operations would be conducted aimed at liberating Bosnian Serb villages and surrounding areas from Bosnian Muslim “extremists”.³⁵⁹⁹ On 22 September 1992, members of the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade surrounded Novoseoci.³⁶⁰⁰ Munira Selmanović was among the Bosnian Muslim villagers who were instructed to gather in a nearby valley and told they would be transferred soon to “Metaljka”, which was a meadow above the village.³⁶⁰¹ Instructions were given by soldiers to some of the gathered Bosnian Muslims to go to the village and inform everyone to go to “Metaljka”.³⁶⁰² When Selmanović was sent back to her house, she saw soldiers looting property including furniture from her home.³⁶⁰³ Approximately 100 women and children and about 44 men from Novoseoci ultimately gathered at “Metaljka” and were surrounded by approximately 100 Bosnian Serb soldiers in military uniforms, who pointed their weapons at the villagers.³⁶⁰⁴ The soldiers read out the names of the villagers to identify whether everyone was present.³⁶⁰⁵

1061. Momčilo Pajić appeared to be in charge and asked the villagers whether they still had any weapons and said that the houses of the village were going to be searched.³⁶⁰⁶ Pajić then said he was awaiting orders from Sokolac, and he told the villagers to remain still while he went there.³⁶⁰⁷ Pajić, after returning, read out an order, saying that women and children, as well as the elderly were to be sent to Sarajevo by bus, while able-bodied men were to remain and undertake mandatory work.³⁶⁰⁸ The former were assembled and walked from “Metaljka” to the entrance of Novoseoci where they were ordered to get on a bus parked near the mosque.³⁶⁰⁹ Pajić entered the bus to check if any of the men had also got in, after which the bus was driven to Hreša, where the passengers were ordered to walk to Sarajevo.³⁶¹⁰ After this incident no Bosnian Muslims remained in the village of Novoseoci.³⁶¹¹ KDZ607 was told that all the houses in Novoseoci had been destroyed.³⁶¹²

1062. Krstić informed the Main Staff on 22 September 1992 that “[d]uring the day, the village of Novoseoci was cleansed”.³⁶¹³ On the following day, Krstić reported that units were searching for and destroying straggling groups which had escaped the villages that had been “mopped up”, including Novoseoci.³⁶¹⁴

The Chamber notes that P5438 uses the term “čišćenje”, which is translated as either cleansed or mopped up. The Chamber received evidence which suggested there was no police investigation of this incident as it had no jurisdiction over the army. See Dragomir Obradović, T. 36096, 36102–36103 (26 March 2013); D3175 (Witness statement of Dragomir Obradović dated 24 March 2013), para. 20. However, Obradović was unable to adequately explain why the police in this case did not carry out an investigation into this serious incident when it did carry out initial investigations of misdemeanours perpetrated by VRS members. In addition while Obradović testified that the civilian authorities did not inform higher organs about this incident, given that the witness merely expressed his own opinion, the Chamber is not satisfied that the witness would have known whether or not the higher organs had been informed.

³⁶¹⁴ D3192 (Report of 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade, 23 September 1992), p. 2. The Chamber received evidence to suggest that Krstić issued the order to kill these civilians. D3206 (Witness statement of Milovan Bjelica dated 30 March 2013), para. 57; Milovan Bjelica, T. 36454–36455 (3 April 2013). However, this evidence is based on Bjelica’s assumption following a conversation with a third person. The Chamber does not accept this conclusion given the absence of any further corroborating evidence.

Ivan Polje.³⁶¹⁶ Following exhumation of the Ivan Polje site, 42 male bodies were received for post-mortem examinations and it was estimated that the age of the bodies ranged from 12 to 85, with the majority aged between 30 and 60.³⁶¹⁷ 36 of the 38 Bosnian Muslim men identified by Selmanović who remained in Novoseoci were found among the remains of 42 bodies exhumed from the gravesite at Ivan Polje.³⁶¹⁸ No military clothing was found.³⁶¹⁹ Personal belongings were found, and one body carried a miniature Koran.³⁶²⁰ Evidence of gunshot injuries were found in all of the 42 bodies, 38 having been shot multiple times.³⁶²¹ With the exception of one case where the skull was missing, all of the other 41 men died from gunshot injuries.³⁶²² The exhumation report conclusions are consistent with the majority of the bodies being shot from behind with high velocity weapons.³⁶²³

1065. The Chamber therefore finds that approximately 40 Bosnian Muslim men were killed by Serb Forces in the village of Novoseoci on or around 22 September 1992.

Following this incident at Novoseoci, Tupajić tendered his resignation as president of the municipality. However, members of the Municipal Board asked him to withdraw his resignation as it could have a detrimental effect or be viewed as condemnation of the policies at the time. After Tupajić's car was blown up he decided to continue performing his duties. P5249 (Letter from Milan Tupajić to Sokolac SDS Municipal Board, 9 October 1992); Milan Tupajić, P5238 (Transcript from *Prosecutor v. In light of (i) the evidence about Tupajić's knowledge of events in Novoseoci, and steps taken to prevent his resignation; and (ii) the internal inconsistencies in the evidence of the relevant Defence witnesses, the Chamber does not accept Defence evidence that nobody from the municipal authorities knew about this incident and that when they did find out they all condemned it. See D3206 (Witness statement of Milovan Bjelica dated 30 March 2013), para. 57; Milovan Bjelica, T. 36455–36456 (3 April 2013); D3175 (Witness statement of Dragomir Obradović dated 24 March 2013), para. 20; Dragomir Obradović, T. 36074, 36094–36095 (26 March 2013).

(2) Scheduled Incident D.20

1066. The Indictment refers to the destruction of five mosques in Sokolac at least between August and September 1992.³⁶²⁴

1067. All five mosques in Sokolac municipality, namely in Knežina, Kruševci, Kaljina, Novoseoci, and Koštica, were blown up or destroyed during attacks on these villages.³⁶²⁵ The destruction of the mosques was seen by Bosnian Serbs as a way in which Bosnian Muslims would “lose a motive to return to their villages”.³⁶²⁶

1068. More specifically, the mosque in Novoseoci was blown up by the 2nd Motorised Romanija Brigade.³⁶²⁷ Bogdan Jovanović together with some other Bosnian Serbs was seen placing explosives around the mosque known as ‘Selimija’ in Knežina which was completely destroyed in a large explosion and four other mosques were destroyed at about the same time.³⁶²⁸ Remains of a destroyed mosque were found at the Ivan Polje garbage dump.³⁶²⁹

1069. Therefore the Chamber finds that five mosques were destroyed by Serb Forces between August and September 1992.

³⁶²⁵ Adjudicated Fact 2684. See also Milan Tupajić, P5238 (Transcript from Prosecutor v. Krajišnik), T. 15431; P4070 (Attachment to the expert report of Andrés J. Riedlmayer, entitled “Destruction of Cultural Heritage in BiH” prepared for the Karadžić case, formatted records), pp. 312–322; P4069 (Cultural destruction database), records 332–335. While Asim Hamzić stated that Aleska Krsmanović was among the individuals responsible for the destruction of the mosques, the Chamber considers that it is uncorroborated hearsay evidence and is not satisfied that it can rely on this alone to make a findings that Krsmanović was responsible. P131 (Witness statement of Asim Hamzić dated 25 March 1996), p. 8. The Chamber does not accept Defence evidence that (i) mosques in border villages of Sokolac were used for combat operations; (ii) that members of the Patriotic League hid and distributed weapons from these facilities; (iii) these mosques were destroyed during the war, in an environment of chaos in remote villages by individuals and informal groups; or (iv) that the municipal authorities did not know or approve of their destruction and had no control over the territory where these mosques were located. D3206 (Witness statement of Milovan Bjelica dated 30 March 2013), paras. 55, 64; D3175 (Witness statement of Dragomir Obradović dated 24 March 2013), paras. 26, 30. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber considered the evidence of the two relevant defence witnesses was unreliable given their evidence was marked by inconsistencies and indications of partisanship and bias. In addition the evidence received with respect to the attack on Novoseoci contradicts the Defence evidence that mosques were destroyed in an environment of chaos or by individuals or informal groups. (D) Detention Facilities in Sokolac

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.23.2

1070. Around 20 July 1992, four Bosnian Serbs dressed in MP uniforms and travelling an APC arrested a Bosnian Muslim teacher named Gagula, and brought him to barracks in Knežina where he was interrogated and beaten by one of the officers.³⁶³⁰ Gagula was then transported to the Slaviša Vajner Čiča Elementary School by local Bosnian Serb soldiers where he was detained with 13 other detainees until 3 October 1992.³⁶³¹ On his arrival at the school, Gagula was again interrogated and beaten by Bosnian Serb soldiers.³⁶³²

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.23.1

1071. On 3 October 1992, detainees, including Gagula, were transferred to the former elementary school in Čavarine.³⁶³³ The facility was under the responsibility of the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade.³⁶³⁴ Bosnian Muslims were arrested and detained there by the 2nd Romanija Motorised Brigade without any charges or legal grounds.³⁶³⁵ Conditions were harsh with insufficient food and ³⁶³² See Adjudicated Fact 2679. Obradović testified that a military detention unit was set up at the Sokolac primary school at the beginning of October 1992 for approximately 10 days after which it was relocated to Čavarine; however, on cross-examination, he acknowledged that he had not been to the facility, that he simply heard about it and did not know what the conditions were and could not say how long the facility operated. D3175 (Witness statement of Dragomir Obradović dated 24 March 2013), para. 25; Dragomir Obradović, T. 36113–36115 (26 March 2013). Similarly, the Chamber does not accept Bjelica's evidence that the school was used for the questioning of Bosnian Muslims suspected of involvement in sabotage or terrorist actions, that the detainees were treated humanely, and that conditions were satisfactory. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber considered that Bijelica's evidence was unreliable given that it was marked by indications of partisanship and bias. In addition Bijelica acknowledged on cross-examination that he did not know why a 62 year old woman was detained and that he assumed that the facilities did not have the required hygienic and other facilities. The witness was also contradicted on cross-examination and acknowledged that hygiene conditions were not satisfactory. In addition, the witness's evidence with respect to the conditions in these facilities was qualified and he acknowledged on cross-examination that he never visited these facilities. (E) Movement of the population from Sokolac

1072. By the end of 1992, the majority of Bosnian Muslims had left the municipality with as few as 30 to 40 families remaining.³⁶³⁹ The departure of some Bosnian Muslims in Sokolac followed attacks on Bosnian Muslim villages and verbal abuse and harassment.³⁶⁴⁰ In some cases Bosnian Muslim women, children and elderly were separated and ordered to board buses taking them away from their villages.³⁶⁴¹ Bosnian Muslim men were not allowed to leave with their families.³⁶⁴² Milan Tupajić also advised a Bosnian Muslim to find a safe place to hide as he was afraid that he might be harmed due to the “ethnic cleansing” which had already begun in many of the surrounding villages; Bosnian Muslims then started to move mainly to the areas of Olovo, Tuzla, Visoko, Vareš, Kladanj, and Kakanj.³⁶⁴³

1073. The Chamber does not accept Defence evidence which suggests that Bosnian Muslims voluntarily left the municipality on a temporary basis and returned after the war was over.³⁶⁴⁴ In reaching that conclusion the Chamber notes that by 1997 very few Bosnian Muslims had in fact returned to Sokolac.³⁶⁴⁵ In addition the Chamber considered that in this respect, the evidence of Bjelica and Obradović was unreliable due to inconsistencies in their evidence and some degree of evasiveness in their testimony; there were also indications of partisanship and bias. The Chamber also finds inconsistencies in Obradović’s evidence received about when, why and the circumstances in which Bosnian Muslims from the village of Vrhbarje left and does not accept that this is an

1075. The Chamber notes that although for the purpose of the Indictment, the Prosecution lists Scheduled Incident A.14.2 under Višegrad Municipality, the killing incident charged therein is alleged to have occurred in the municipality of Sokolac.³⁶⁴⁷ There are no other charges in relation to Višegrad municipality.³⁶⁴⁸

1076. With respect to Scheduled Incident A.14.2, the Prosecution alleges that on 15 June 1992, following their expulsion from Višegrad, approximately 48 civilians were killed at a place near Paklenik near the village of Kalimanići, in Sokolac municipality. The Prosecution charges Scheduled Incident A.14.2 as persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.³⁶⁴⁹

1077. Višegrad is a municipality in eastern BiH,³⁶⁵⁰ which had a predominantly Muslim population before the war.³⁶⁵¹ In the spring of 1992, tensions increased in Višegrad and militarisation of the municipality ensued where both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs organised themselves militarily.³⁶⁵² The security situation in Višegrad on 24 March 1992 was described as “complex and dramatical”.³⁶⁵³ At the beginning of April 1992, barricades were set up by both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims.³⁶⁵⁴ At the time, many Bosnian Muslim villagers fled to Višegrad town and later from there to Goražde; Bosnian Muslim men then organised a defence group for Višegrad.³⁶⁵⁵ Around the same time, a paramilitary unit from Serbia arrived in the village of Dobrun.³⁶⁵⁶

1078. By 10 April 1992, it was reported that the situation in the Višegrad sector was “extremely serious” and “[l]awlessness and anarchy reign[ed]”.³⁶⁵⁷ Threats were made by Bosnian Muslims to blow up the hydro-electric dam if the JNA did not prevent attacks by paramilitary formations against Bosnian Muslims.³⁶⁵⁸ On 11 April 1992, there was an armed attack allegedly by “Serbian armed formations” on Višegrad with 30 mortar bombs launched at the town; individuals evacuated to surrounding slopes and to the army barracks in Uzamnica.³⁶⁵⁹

1079. By 20 April 1992, the Užice Corps of the JNA had entered Višegrad and taken control of all important positions;³⁶⁶⁰ thereafter the situation started returning to normal for a while and the population which had left began returning to their homes.³⁶⁶¹ The Užice Corp left Višegrad on or about 18 May 1992. Following the departure of the Užice Corps, paramilitary formations arrived in the municipality, including the unit known as the “White Eagles” led by Milan Lukić, and joined those which had come earlier.³⁶⁶² The paramilitaries held power in the municipality.³⁶⁶³

(C) Scheduled Incident A.14.2

1080. After the withdrawal of the Užice Corps, the situation changed and became more dangerous for local Bosnian Muslim men.³⁶⁶⁴ The Chamber heard evidence about attacks against Bosnian Muslim hamlets and the killing of Bosnian Muslims in Višegrad in May and June 1992 but since they are not charged in Schedules A or B of the Indictment, the Chamber will not enter findings with respect to these incidents.³⁶⁶⁵

1081. Ferid Spahić attended a meeting on 13 June 1992 in Bosanska Jagodina with local Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims from other villages.³⁶⁶⁶ At that meeting, the Bosnian Muslims were informed that the “ethnic cleansing of the Muslims was already going on” and they were encouraged to leave for their own safety with a convoy departing the next day.³⁶⁶⁷ Ljupko Tašić, who wore a camouflage uniform at the meeting, seemed to be in charge of the organisation of the convoy.³⁶⁶⁸ Tašić stated that the convoy had been announced officially on Radio Višegrad, that the “Red Cross” was also involved, and that the convoy would be escorted by Bosnian Serbs from the region whom the Bosnian Muslims knew and trusted.³⁶⁶⁹ This message was subsequently conveyed from hamlet to hamlet in the surrounding area.³⁶⁷⁰

1082. On the morning of 14 June 1992, approximately 100 to 150 Bosnian Muslims from the surrounding area gathered at the bus station in Bosanska Jagodina and left in a convoy of two buses and a truck towards Višegrad where approximately three other buses and two trucks joined the convoy.³⁶⁷¹ Other Bosnian Muslims joined the convoy as it made its way to Višegrad.³⁶⁷² They were allowed to take identification documents, clothing, money, and limited personal belongings.³⁶⁷³

1083. In Višegrad, in front of the Višegrad Hotel by the old bridge, the buses and trucks were parked and those on the convoy were registered and given the option of choosing whether they wanted to head in the direction of Skopje, Olovo or Kladanj, and they all chose Skopje.³⁶⁷⁴ Three other buses and two trucks joined the convoy while a number of soldiers in different uniforms were walking around.³⁶⁷⁵ Milan Lukić attempted to get Esad Kustura, also known as “Zenga”,³⁶⁷⁶ off one of the buses, but Ljupko Tašić talked Lukić out of it.³⁶⁷⁷

1084. The convoy of buses and trucks left Višegrad before 11.00 a.m. on 14 June 1992 and there were escorts armed with automatic weapons on each bus.³⁶⁷⁸ Željko Tašić, a policeman who served in the Višegrad SJB in June and July 1992, followed the convoy in his car.³⁶⁷⁹ The convoy did not head in the requested direction of Skopje and the Bosnian Muslims were told by guards at a check-point and by the driver of the bus that they had to bypass Rogatica and were going to Olovo through Sokolac.³⁶⁸⁰ A journalist who stopped the convoy was told by the drivers that there were about 700 to 800 Bosnian Muslims in the convoy.³⁶⁸¹

1085. The convoy drove through Seljane, near Rogatica, and Sokolac before arriving in Išarića Brdo in the municipality of Olovo.³⁶⁸² At Išarića Brdo, the convoy was surrounded by armed soldiers dressed in camouflage uniforms who said that the younger men could not continue and had to return.³⁶⁸³ Željko Tašić told those in the convoy not to worry and that their return was only for the purpose of a prisoner exchange.³⁶⁸⁴ Approximately 49 Bosnian Muslim males were thus separated and left on the buses, while the women, children and some of the older men in the convoy were asked to leave the buses and go to Olovo on foot.³⁶⁸⁵ The separated Bosnian Muslim men were then driven back to Sokolac, where they were gathered in one bus parked outside the police station and spent the night on the bus watched by two guards.³⁶⁸⁶

1086. On the morning of 15 June 1992, the Bosnian Muslim men were driven in the direction of Rogatica.³⁶⁸⁷ On the way, a soldier wearing a Montenegrin Serbian Guard cap entered the bus, called the Bosnian Muslim men “Ustaša”, asked which of them was “Zenga”, and cursed him.³⁶⁸⁸ He told the driver of the bus to leave “Zenga” to him, but left.³⁶⁸⁹

1087. The bus stopped in front of a factory in Rogatica, two soldiers entered and ordered those on the bus to hand over their documents, valuables, and money.³⁶⁹⁰ Another bus was parked close by.³⁶⁹¹ An APC stopped in front of the bus holding the Bosnian Muslim men and there were approximately 10 soldiers standing around.³⁶⁹² Slaviša Vukojičić, a blonde man in civilian clothes, arrived in a small car, followed by the soldier in the Montenegrin Serbian Guard cap mentioned earlier.³⁶⁹³ A young blindfolded man whose hands were tied behind his back was pulled out of the car, hit in the stomach, and pushed onto another bus.³⁶⁹⁴ When “Zenga” was identified, the soldiers took him off the bus, kicked, and beat him.³⁶⁹⁵ Other Bosnian Muslim men were ordered off the bus and beaten by Vukojičić,³⁶⁹⁶ All this was done in the presence of Željko Tašić.³⁶⁹⁷ After asking who the Bosnian Muslims were, Vukojičić shouted: “You cattle come out” and ordered them to run onto the bus where the young man had been taken.³⁶⁹⁸ The detainees were taken off the bus one by one and their hands were tied behind their backs with “half steel wire” so tightly that every movement caused pain.³⁶⁹⁹ Some of the Bosnian Muslims were randomly beaten by Vukojičić during this process.³⁷⁰⁰ After each Bosnian Muslim was tied they were returned to the bus; the bus then headed back in the direction of Sokolac with three Bosnian Serb soldiers onboard and an additional car driven by Vukojičić escorting the bus.³⁷⁰¹ One of the soldiers said they were going to exchange 50 Muslim men for 10 Serb men.³⁷⁰² There were approximately 50 to 52 men on the bus at that time.³⁷⁰³

1088. The bus reached a forest location called Paklenik, in Sokolac municipality, on the border with Rogatica.³⁷⁰⁴ It stopped near a hill close to a small clearing and Vukojičić drove away in his car for a while before returning.³⁷⁰⁵ The Bosnian Muslims were forced to sing a “Chetnik” song and were told that “thanks to Alija” they could not live together any longer.³⁷⁰⁶ After Vukojičić returned and talked with the soldiers, the bus drove off again with approximately 11 soldiers walking in two columns next to the bus.³⁷⁰⁷ The bus stopped after about 100 metres, and the Bosnian Muslim men were ordered to get out of the bus, line up two-by-two, and walk on a forest path leading up to a hill.³⁷⁰⁸ One soldier asked “Zenga” and Spahić how many “Serb soldiers” they had killed and beat “Zenga”.³⁷⁰⁹ When other soldiers told him not to beat “Zenga” that hard, he said that they would discuss this after seeing what conditions those Serbs waiting to be exchanged were in.³⁷¹⁰

After being ordered to walk in a line with their heads bent down for approximately 100 to 200 metres, the Bosnian Muslims were ordered to stop as they reached a clearing.³⁷¹¹ About nine soldiers lined up in two half circles around a bush.³⁷¹² In addition to Predrag Milisavljević, Spahić also identified Boriša Čeho, who was wearing a blue reserve police uniform, standing close to the site.³⁷¹³ The first 10 Bosnian Muslim men from the column were ordered to step up “towards” the soldiers standing around the bush and Predrag Milisavljević started shooting at the first two Bosnian Muslims in the column with an automatic rifle.³⁷¹⁴ The Bosnian Muslim men fell into a pit after being shot.³⁷¹⁵ After the first 10 Bosnian Muslims from the column were shot, the two soldiers at the end of the column were called over by Vukojičić to join the other soldiers in the front.³⁷¹⁶ When the second group of ten men was being lined up to be shot, Spahić managed to 1090. John Clark reported on the exhumations carried out with respect to the Paklenik Cave.³⁷¹⁹ The Chamber finds that the Paklenik cave site was located in a forest in the area near the village of Kalimanići in Sokolac municipality and is the same location referred to by Ferid Spahić as the pit into which the Bosnian Muslim men fell after being shot.³⁷²⁰ The post-mortem examination team received 73 whole male bodies.³⁷²¹ They estimated that the ages of the bodies exhumed ranged from 15 to 75, with 74% aged between 30 and 55.³⁷²² Of the 73 whole bodies found at Paklenik, 66 were identified, and 19 of the 66 identified bodies matched with the names of the 23 Bosnian Muslims on the bus who were identified by Ferid Spahić.³⁷²³ In addition to the 23 Bosnian Muslims who Spahić named, he also identified without naming them, the two sons of Musa Omerović and the two sons of Ismet Kustura and two of these bodies were also identified in the exhumation.³⁷²⁴ At least 21 of the bodies exhumed from the Paklenik cave site are not linked to Scheduled Incident A.14.2.³⁷²⁵

1091. Clothing that was not military was still present on all of the exhumed bodies.³⁷²⁶ Personal items were found on many of the victims, including watches, spectacles, combs, keys, money, cigarette lighters, and four miniature Korans.³⁷²⁷ A large number of the bodies exhumed from the cave were found with their hands tied behind their backs with wire.³⁷²⁸ None of the bodies were blindfolded and there were no other obvious objects of restraint.³⁷²⁹

1092. Gunshot injuries were found in 57 out of the 73 bodies.³⁷³⁰ Bullet casings were found and other injuries resulted from shotguns and shrapnel.³⁷³¹ Evidence of blunt trauma was found in some of the bodies which had probably occurred before death.³⁷³² There was also evidence that some of the men were still alive when thrown in the cave and died from the resulting injuries.³⁷³³ For 11 of the 73 bodies, it was not possible to determine the cause of death.³⁷³⁴ The Chamber is satisfied based on the large percentage of the shots fired which struck the trunk or head of the bodies that the shots were not random.³⁷³⁵ The Chamber is also satisfied that the pathological evidence suggests that many of the victims had been shot from behind which is consistent with

(2) Conclusion

1093. Considering (i) Spahić's evidence that the number of Bosnian Muslims taken to the execution site was between 50 to 52; (ii) that Spahić survived the execution; (iii) that 66 of the whole bodies exhumed from the mass grave were identified but that at least 21 of those identified bodies are not linked to Scheduled Incident A14.2; and (iv) that there were seven bodies exhumed from the mass grave which were not identified, the Chamber finds that approximately 45 Bosnian Muslim civilians were killed near Paklenik, close to the village of Kalimanići, in Sokolac municipality by Serb Forces on 15 June 1992.

(A) Charges

1094. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity was committed in Vlasenica as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.³⁷³⁷ Under Count 1, the Prosecution further alleges that in certain municipalities, including Vlasenica, this persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.³⁷³⁸

1095. Acts alleged to have been committed by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs in Vlasenica include killings during and after the take-over;³⁷³⁹ killings related to detention facilities and killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.³⁷⁴⁰ The Prosecution characterises these acts as killing, an underlying act of genocide, under Count 1; persecution, a crime against humanity, ³⁷³⁶ P4106 (John Clark's expert report entitled "Report of the Chief Pathologist, Paklenik Cave and Ivan Polje Grave-Sites (2000)", 30 July 2002), p. 8. According to the report 42 were shot from behind, 9 from the side, 8 from the front, and 28 from an unknown direction. under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4; murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.³⁷⁴¹

1096. Other acts alleged to have been committed in Vlasenica by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as well as the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution under Count 3.³⁷⁴² In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that in scheduled detention facilities in Vlasenica thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, and beatings by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs; the Prosecution characterises this inhumane treatment as causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups, an underlying act of genocide.³⁷⁴³ In addition, under Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups were detained under conditions of life calculated to bring about physical destruction, namely through cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, inhumane living conditions, forced labour, and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.³⁷⁴⁴

1097. Under Count 3, other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Vlasenica by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include (i) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;³⁷⁴⁵ (ii) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;³⁷⁴⁶ (iii) forced labour at the frontline and the use of human shields; (iv) the appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;³⁷⁴⁷ (v) the wanton destruction of private property including homes and business premises and public property;³⁷⁴⁸ and (vi) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.³⁷⁴⁹

1098. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer, respectively, as crimes against humanity.³⁷⁵⁰ The Prosecution alleges that, by the end of 1992, Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs had forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Vlasenica in which they had been lawfully present.³⁷⁵¹ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear while others were physically driven out.³⁷⁵² It is further alleged that acts of forcible displacement continued in Vlasenica between January and March 1993 when Serb Forces attacked the Cerska area of the Vlasenica municipality.³⁷⁵³

(B) Lead-up

1099. Vlasenica is a municipality in eastern BiH located to the south of Zvornik and to the west of Bratunac and Srebrenica.³⁷⁵⁴ Prior to the war the population of Vlasenica was approximately 34,000 and consisted of about 55% Bosnian Muslims, 42% Bosnian Serbs, and 0.1% Bosnian Croats.³⁷⁵⁵ The town of Vlasenica itself had a population of between 6,000 and 7,000.³⁷⁵⁶

³⁷⁴⁸ Indictment, para. 60(j). The Chamber notes that there are no cultural monuments and sacred sites with respect to Vlasenica in Schedule D of the Indictment.

In the multi-party elections in 1990, for the Vlasenica Municipal Assembly, the SDS won 27 seats, the SDA won 26 seats, and seven seats were won by other parties.³⁷⁵⁹ After this election, the SDS and SDA divided leadership posts between them.³⁷⁶⁰ For example, the SDS selected Milenko Stanić as President of the Assembly³⁷⁶¹ and Izet Redžić was selected by the SDA as President of the Executive Board.³⁷⁶² The chief of the SJB was a Serb named Rade Bjelanović while the second in command was a Bosnian Muslim, Fadil Turković.³⁷⁶³ With time, there was increasing disagreement between Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim representatives in the Assembly.³⁷⁶⁴

1101. Inter-ethnic relations in Vlasenica deteriorated after conflict broke out in Croatia.³⁷⁶⁵ Tomislav Savkić, the president of the Vlasenica SDS,³⁷⁶⁶ delivered speeches which emphasised that

Serbs were under threat as they would be killed and eliminated from BiH when an Islamic state was formed. These speeches instilled fear amongst the Bosnian Serb population.³⁷⁶⁷ Redžić attended a meeting with Milenko Stanić where Stanić declared: “The moment [BiH] is proclaimed a sovereign state, we will draw up our borders in blood”.³⁷⁶⁸ Inflammatory speeches were also delivered at SDA rallies.³⁷⁶⁹

1102. In 1991 Bosnian Muslims started leaving the JNA and boycotted the mobilisation upon instructions of the SDA leadership.³⁷⁷⁰ After this boycott, there was a mobilisation of local Bosnian Serbs.³⁷⁷¹ In the spring of 1991, military units were formed in Bosnian Serb villages and there was an increased presence of uniformed men, including those wearing cockades and carrying automatic weapons.³⁷⁷² For example, after the outbreak of war in Croatia in 1991, units were formed by the SDS in Vlasenica with between 1,200 and 1,500 troops located at a garrison formed in the Bosnian Serb settlement of Milići.³⁷⁷³ These units erected barricades, wore “Chetnik insignia” and cockades, maltreated people, and “instilled fear among the Muslim population”.³⁷⁷⁴

1103. In the autumn of 1991, both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims were arming themselves.³⁷⁷⁵ In the second half of 1991, night watches were organised in villages and while they were initially mixed, they separated with time due to growing distrust between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs.³⁷⁷⁶

1104. Weapons were brought to and stored in the Bosnian Serb village of Tišća and then taken by SDS members to Vlasenica town and secretly distributed to the local Bosnian Serb population to ensure that every Bosnian Serb home had a weapon.³⁷⁷⁷ Milenko Stanić was informed of which villages had to be provided with weapons and SDS members in Bosnian Serb villages were provided with weapons by Bjelanović.³⁷⁷⁸

1105. Starting in the summer of 1991, Redžić made contact with Dragomir Milošević, Commander of the JNA barracks in Han Pijesak. He discussed the situation in Vlasenica and the possibility of mobilising the TO, composed of both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs, which could protect all citizens.³⁷⁷⁹ Dragomir Milošević in response said that “a Muslim cannot be given

However, the Chamber notes that Redžić’s evidence on this issue was equivocal and he could not comment on the content of documents which related to Bosnian Muslim military formations in the municipality. Similarly, Osmanović simply testified that he was not aware of Bosnian Muslim military formations but did not rule out the possibility that they existed. The Chamber therefore does not rely on their evidence in this regard.

a rifle, because that rifle would be turned against the Serbs”.³⁷⁸⁰ In the first days of April 1992, a large number of soldiers and reservists were present in Vlasenica. Tanks, artillery, and armed vehicles from Milići, Han Pijesak, and Šekovići, were deployed, which created concern among the Bosnian Muslim population.³⁷⁸¹ There was also shooting during the day and night.³⁷⁸²

1106. On 21 April 1992, the Bosnian Serb authorities mobilised the Bosnian Serb population of Vlasenica through the Vlasenica TO. Additional JNA units also arrived in the municipality from Šekovići, and volunteers were also deployed.³⁷⁸³ Dragomir Milošević visited the units deployed in Milići. He explained the presence of this unit, by saying that the “Serbs should have the military that would protect them”.³⁷⁸⁴ Other leaders, including the Accused, Biljana Plavšić, Nikola Koljević and other high level SDS leaders visited the units located in Milići.³⁷⁸⁵

1107. The reserve police force in Vlasenica consisted of 70 to 80% Bosnian Serbs.³⁷⁸⁶ An order of the Presidency of SRBiH which directed police chiefs to ensure ethnic balance in the reserve police force at the municipal level was not respected by Bjelanović in Vlasenica.³⁷⁸⁷

Redžić further testified that the purpose of these visits was for the Accused, in co-operation with SDS officials, to prepare the Bosnian Serb people to fight their neighbours. However, it is not clear on what basis Redžić knew this information and the Chamber will not rely on Redžić’s assessment in this regard.

³⁷⁸⁶ Izet Redžić, T. 17709 (23 August 2011). The Accused tendered a document which suggested that less than 10% of police candidates nominated for a training course in March 1992 were Serb. D1647 (Order of SerBiH MUP, 12 March 1992). The Chamber notes that the document only refers to two names which relate to Vlasenica and does not consider that this undermines the credible evidence of Redžić regarding the composition of the reserve police force.

the Executive Council of the SAO Birač reached a conclusion that “[i]n order to take over power in the area of the Birač SAO as efficiently as possible” it was necessary to take stock of the situation, including with respect to infrastructure and the economic situation in the region.³⁷⁹⁰ After the formation of the SAO Birač, the municipalities in the region, including Vlasenica, established their own crisis staffs.³⁷⁹¹

1109. On 4 April 1992, following the instructions of the SDS Main Board, the Municipal Board of the SDS in Vlasenica passed a decision establishing a crisis staff of the Serb Municipality of Vlasenica (“Vlasenica Crisis Staff”) and Milenko Stanić was appointed President.³⁷⁹²

1110. Negotiations between Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim representatives took place from 30 March until 11 April 1992.³⁷⁹³ The SDS representatives prepared a proposal and placed

³⁷⁹² P6121 (Decision of Vlasenica’s SDS Municipal Board, 4 April 1992), p. 1; P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), para. 40. See also P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 19 (under seal); D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), paras. 9–10. The SJB Chief of Vlasenica and the Commander of the TO were also members of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff. But see D2932 (Witness statement of Tomislav Savkić dated 11 February 2013), para. 34; Tomislav Savkić, T. 33777–33779 (15 February 2013). The Chamber notes that Savkić disputed the date on which the Vlasenica Crisis Staff was created. However, the Chamber finds his evidence in this regard to be equivocal and marked by contradictions. Similarly Stanić did not recall that the Vlasenica Crisis Staff met before 21 April 1992 and testified that it did not function in its full capacity as some members moved to the newly formed Milići municipality. Stanić was confronted with documents which suggested that the Vlasenica Crisis Staff was functioning and issued decisions before that date but he maintained it only started sitting after 21 April 1992 and that some of the documents produced by the Crisis Staff were drafted in the secretariat of the Municipal Assembly. He also drew into question the authenticity of the stamps used on the documents. D2982 (Witness statement of Milenko Stanić dated 16 February 2013), paras. 29–30; Milenko Stanić, T. 34007–34011, 34047–34048 (19 February 2013); P6137 (Decision of Vlasenica Crisis Staff, 19 April 1992); P6138 (Decision of Vlasenica Crisis Staff, 19 April 1992); P3214 (Decision of Vlasenica Crisis Staff, 19 April 1992). Having regard to the weight of evidence received, and the equivocal nature of Stanić’s evidence, the Chamber is satisfied that the documents issued by the Vlasenica Crisis Staff are authentic. Defence witnesses also testified that the Vlasenica Crisis Staff only operated for a short period of time. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), paras. 12–13; D2982 (Witness statement of Milenko Stanić dated 16 February 2013), paras. 30, 32. However, considering credible evidence about the actions of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, and considering the credibility assessment of the relevant witnesses in fn. 3791, the Chamber does not find their evidence to be reliable with respect to the dissolution of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff. The Chamber does find however, that by 17 June 1992 a War Commission for Vlasenica was established. P5486 (RS Presidency Confirmation of Appointment of Members of the War Commission in Vlasenica, 17 June 1992).

pressure on Bosnian Muslims to agree to a division of Vlasenica into three parts: Serbian Vlasenica, Muslim Vlasenica, and Milići municipality.³⁷⁹⁴ Redžić was instructed by Alija Izetbegović to prolong the negotiations to allow as many Bosnian Muslims as possible to evacuate from Vlasenica to Bosnian Muslim majority areas.³⁷⁹⁵ Savkić threatened that, if the Bosnian Muslims refused the partition or stalled the negotiations, armed intervention would follow and that there were “tanks ready to shed blood”.³⁷⁹⁶ Bosnian Muslims were also asked to return their weapons.³⁷⁹⁷ During these negotiations, Milenko Stanić told Redžić that there “were no more possibilities” and that he had orders which had come from “higher up”, which he was simply obeying.³⁷⁹⁸

1111. In an attempt to protect the Bosnian Muslim population from possible attacks, the Bosnian Muslim representatives eventually agreed to the proposed division of the municipality.³⁷⁹⁹ The Savkić testified that this demonstrated that the SDA leadership was probably planning to attack Vlasenica. D2932 (Witness statement of Tomislav Savkić dated 11 February 2013), para. 36; Tomislav Savkić, T. 33749–33750 (15 February 2013). However, the Chamber finds that Savkić’s evidence in this regard is purely speculative and does not rely on his evidence in this regard. The Chamber also received a note handwritten by Redžić, which referred to organising Bosnian Muslim defence. The document also included a typewritten addition which suggested that the note confirmed that the SDA “had a plan ready for taking over power in nearly all segments of life”. D1656 (Handwritten document by Izet Redžić), p. 1. See also Decision on Accused’s Motion to Admit Documents Previously Marked for Identification, 4 November 2011, para. 14. While Redžić acknowledged that the handwriting on the document was his, he testified that the type written addition was used to create a “false picture” and that the date was a forgery. Izet Redžić, T. 17742–17743 (23 August 2011). Having regard to Redžić’s evidence in this regard and the uncertain provenance of the type-written additions, the Chamber does not rely on the typewritten additions to support the suggestion that the SDA had a plan to take-over power in Vlasenica but finds that there were preparations for Bosnian Muslim defence in Vlasenica. The Chamber further finds that there were rumours about the possibility of a forceful take-over of Vlasenica by Bosnian Muslims. KDZ033, T. 18031 (29 August 2011) (closed session).

In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the testimony of Čeliković was marked by inconsistencies and the testimony of Stanić was marked by evasiveness and other indicators that the witness was not forthright nor candid in this regard.

1112. On 13 April 1992, Milenko Stanić reported to the Bosnian Serb Assembly that the Vlasenica Municipal Assembly would adopt the protocol on the agreement for the territorial delineation of the municipality and urged all citizens who had fled Vlasenica to return to their homes; negotiating teams were urged to pay special attention to the balance of urban settlement and to “enable each member of a particular nation to become part of his or her ethnic community”.³⁸⁰² While the decision on the division of the municipality was adopted, only the decision on the establishment of the Milići municipality was verified as Bosnian Muslim representatives did not want to implement the agreement.³⁸⁰³ In a briefing attended by Mladić in June 1992, Milenko Stanić reported there were still problems with the delineation of the municipalities of Vlasenica and Milići.³⁸⁰⁴

(C) Take-over of Vlasenica

1113. On 19 April 1992 the Vlasenica Crisis Staff adopted a decision to take-over power in the territory of the Serb Municipality of Vlasenica.³⁸⁰⁵ On the same day, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff proclaimed that there was an imminent threat of war and that it would assume the functions of the Đurić testified that these decisions were adopted by the Vlasenica Crisis Staff because of (i) the departure of Bosnian Muslims from the municipality; (ii) poor inter-ethnic relations and the large quantity of weapons which were held by citizens; and (iii) the fact that the joint assembly could not function. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), paras. 18–21. Stanić also testified that the creation of the Serb Municipality of Vlasenica was not intended to mean an ethnically pure municipality. Milenko Stanić, T. 34041–34042 (19 February 2013). The Chamber does not consider this evidence, so far as it relates to the motivation or reasons behind these decisions, to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that evidence of the relevant witnesses was marked by contradictions, evasiveness and indicators that they were withholding information from the Chamber. For the Chamber’s analysis and conclusion with respect to the reason for the take-over of Vlasenica, see Section IV.A.3: Overarching JCE and the Accused’s responsibility.

1114. On or about 21 April 1992, the Bosnian Serb police, the TO³⁸¹⁰ and 200 JNA soldiers from the Novi Sad Corps with the assistance of armed local Serbs took control of Vlasenica.³⁸¹¹ The White Eagles also came to Vlasenica at the beginning of the conflict but their operations were limited to the vicinity of the bauxite mine in Milići.³⁸¹² The Serb Forces took control of the municipality premises, the police station, the post office, the bank, the court, factories, and the medical centre.³⁸¹³ Serb flags were “hoisted around town, and very loud Serbian nationalist music was playing through the public address system”.³⁸¹⁴ The Vlasenica Crisis Staff was involved in the co-ordination of the take-over with the JNA and continued to command and control units in the Defence witnesses also testified that the role of the JNA was to separate “warring sides in case of an armed clash” and that Serb Forces entered Vlasenica to pre-empt a Bosnian Muslim operation to attack Vlasenica. D3007 (Witness statement of Zoran Jovanović dated 18 February 2013), para. 22; D2932 (Witness statement of Tomislav Savkić dated 11 February 2013), para. 37. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that the testimony of the relevant witnesses was marked by evasiveness, bias, insincerity and indicators that they were withholding information from the Chamber.

1115. There was no armed Bosnian Muslim resistance to the take-over of Vlasenica and no casualties.³⁸¹⁶ Members of the Novi Sad Corps came to Vlasenica following reports that Bosnian Serbs had been killed but found these reports to be false and treated the Bosnian Muslim population fairly.³⁸¹⁷ The “liberation” of the town of Vlasenica on 21 April 1992 marked the start of combat operations in the area and; a number of villages in the municipality were also “liberated”.³⁸¹⁸

1116. Members of the SDA leadership had already left Vlasenica before the take-over,³⁸¹⁹ but after the take-over SDA members were brought into custody and asked for weapons; other Bosnian Muslims were also arrested.³⁸²⁰

(D) Developments in Vlasenica after take-over

1117. After the take-over, the seat of the Serb Municipality of Vlasenica was moved to the Boskit office building in Vlasenica town.³⁸²¹ Thereafter, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff took control of life in Vlasenica.³⁸²²

³⁸¹⁵ P2636 (Report of 1st Vlasenica Light Infantry Brigade, 19 December 1994), p. 1. Defence witnesses disputed the veracity of this report and testified that the Vlasenica Crisis Staff did not co-ordinate the take-over and that the author of this report was not in Vlasenica at the time. Tomislav Savkić, T. 33774–33777 (15 February 2013); Milenko Stanić, T. 34017–34019 (19 February 2013). However, the Chamber does not consider the testimony of the witnesses to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that their testimony was marked by contradictions, evasiveness, and indicators that they were not completely forthright in their evidence. The Chamber thus has no reason to doubt the veracity of this report.

The Chamber notes that the Adjudicated Fact also refers to the setting up of a “Serb Crisis Staff” after the take-over. However, the Chamber notes that this is not consistent with evidence cited in para. 1109 about the formation of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff before this date.

(1) Control of movement and other restrictions

1118. From April 1992, Bosnian Serb police, acting under the authorisation of an SDS member,³⁸²³ established check-points on all access roads towards Vlasenica and on local roads to villages.³⁸²⁴ The Vlasenica Crisis Staff issued passes for people to move around town and introduced a curfew.³⁸²⁵ In order for Bosnian Muslims to pass check-points, move around or leave the municipality they had to be issued a travel pass by the Bosnian Serb municipal authorities.³⁸²⁶ Even if they did have such passes, they were often arrested and detained. On the other hand, Bosnian Serb citizens did not have to obtain movement passes.³⁸²⁷ Bosnian Muslims who were involved with the SDA or other Muslim organisations were not issued such passes.³⁸²⁸ Transit passes were usually only issued to women, children and the elderly with able bodied men only able to secure such passes if they had connections or had substantial amounts of money to pay for such passes, particularly if they wanted to leave the municipality.³⁸²⁹

1119. Graffiti appeared on the houses of eminent Muslims with the words “Ustasha”, “Muslims out”, “We will slaughter”, “Out”, and “This is Serb, this is Serbia”.³⁸³⁰ Following the take-over, three houses belonging to Bosnian Muslims, including the commander of the police, were torched

D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), para. 65. ³⁸²⁷ P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 22 (under seal). The Chamber does find however, that Bosnian Serb conscripts also needed a military pass in order to leave the municipality. KDZ033, T. 18062–18064 (31 August 2011) (closed session). The Chamber notes that Stanić himself was issued passes. D2984 (Travel passes issued to Milenko Stanić). One of the passes issued to Stanić was in his capacity as a military conscript. The Chamber finds that the issuance of passes to Bosnian Serb military conscripts does not undermine the evidence that there were additional restrictions faced by Bosnian Muslim civilians which did not apply to Bosnian Serbs. Defence witnesses testified that passes were issued on request to everyone regardless of ethnicity to allow them to move around freely due to war operations. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), para. 64; D2982 (Witness statement of Milenko Stanić dated 16 February 2013), para. 33; D2983 (Vlasenica Crisis Staff travel pass); Milenko Stanić, T. 33990–33991 (19 February 2013). in broad daylight and the fire brigade was prevented from taking action.³⁸³¹ Bosnian Muslims unlike Bosnian Serbs had limitations on the amount of money they could withdraw from the bank.³⁸³² Bosnian Serbs started boycotting Bosnian Muslim cafés and shops, there was gun fire at night and increasing intimidation; altogether this created fear among the Bosnian Muslim population.³⁸³³ The intimidation included the beating, arrest and questioning of Bosnian Muslim men, including Bosnian Muslim intellectuals and people of influence. In addition, television broadcasts from Sarajevo were cut and Bosnian Muslims were threatened that they should not go to work.³⁸³⁴ Members of the Bosnian Serb police selected the houses of wealthy Bosnian Muslims and took away their property.³⁸³⁵ The cars of some Bosnian Muslim detainees were also confiscated by the Bosnian Serb police.³⁸³⁶ Non-Serb intellectuals, political leaders and the wealthy who had not fled before the conflict began were the first to be “forcibly removed” from Vlasenica.³⁸³⁷

1120. Muslims working in state-owned companies and other public services in Vlasenica municipality were dismissed from their jobs.³⁸³⁸ Muslim shop-keepers feared keeping their

³⁸³⁸ See Adjudicated Fact 2686; P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 24 (under seal). Defence witnesses testified that (i) Bosnian Muslim were not dismissed from their jobs; (ii) some workers no businesses open, and the salaries of the Bosnian Muslim workers of the local bauxite mine were stopped. Their Serb colleagues on the other hand, continued to receive salaries.³⁸³⁹ On 14 May 1992, the local bauxite mine announced that “not a single Muslim should return to work”.³⁸⁴⁰ In August 1992, at one company, an announcement was made that the Vlasenica Crisis Staff had ordered Bosnian Muslims to return to work and that those who were absent would lose their jobs and property.³⁸⁴¹

(2) Confiscation of weapons and interrogations

1121. The Vlasenica Crisis Staff issued an ultimatum for the surrender of weapons by 21 April 1992 and guaranteed the security of citizens who complied with this deadline.³⁸⁴² Bosnian Muslims were ordered to surrender their weapons to the Serb authorities or face arrest.³⁸⁴³ The Bosnian Serb police went through town and called for the surrender of all weapons and stated that while the army was there for protection, force would be used against those who did not comply.³⁸⁴⁴ Following this announcement, groups of Bosnian Muslims handed over their hunting and personal weapons to the SJB.³⁸⁴⁵ Following this hand over, the Bosnian Serb police began arresting Bosnian Muslims who were suspected of still possessing weapons.³⁸⁴⁶ From 27 to 30 April 1992, orders longer reported for work; and (iii) companies started operating at reduced capacity and cancelled work arrangements for workers who did not show up at work and such notices were also given to Bosnian Serbs. D2982 (Witness statement of Milenko Stanić dated 16 February 2013), para. 18; D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), para. 62; D2922 (Witness statement of Savo Čeliković dated 10 February 2013), para. 4; Savo Čeliković, T. 33550–33551 (13 February 2013). ³⁸⁴⁶ P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 20 (under seal). KDZ033 also stated that many of these arrests were a pretext for gaining information including where money had been hidden. However, the were issued by the TO which noted that Bosnian Muslims still possessed illegal firearms in a number of villages and the Vlasenica TO decided in co-operation with the SJB to “mop up the terrain” to seize these weapons. The Vlasenica TO commander ordered that in carrying out this operation, measures should be taken to “prevent unnecessary casualties and wounding”.³⁸⁴⁷

1122. On 19 May 1992, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff issued an instruction to the Commander of the TO and the Chief of the SJB to control the entry of armed persons into the town.³⁸⁴⁸ All Bosnian Serb members of the Vlasenica TO Staff moved to the Serb Municipality of Vlasenica.³⁸⁴⁹

1123. By mid May 1992, the JNA had withdrawn but left behind its equipment, armoured vehicles, tanks and weapons, which were given to local Bosnian Serbs.³⁸⁵⁰ While the JNA was in Vlasenica, the focus was in forcing the Bosnian Muslims to surrender their weapons, but when the JNA left there was a shift towards rounding up, detaining and interrogating Bosnian Muslims.³⁸⁵¹ Bosnian Muslims were arrested in their homes and taken for interrogation.³⁸⁵² At first those taken for interrogation were on lists which identified people suspected of being involved in the arming of Bosnian Muslims or owning weapons.³⁸⁵³ Over time however, “for all practical purposes almost every single Muslim was brought in for interrogation”; some were released while others were not.³⁸⁵⁴

(3) Establishment of Bosnian Serb SJB

1124. The Vlasenica Crisis Staff decided to disarm the active duty and reserve members of the joint police force, the reserve police was mobilised, and a new Bosnian Serb SJB was formed.³⁸⁵⁵ In May 1992, Mane Đurić replaced Bjelanović as the Chief of the Vlasenica SJB, and Bjelanović became the SJB Chief in Milići municipality.³⁸⁵⁶ Radenko Stanić was the Commander of the SJB and the Assistant Commander was Dragomir Šargić.³⁸⁵⁷ While the Vlasenica Crisis Staff informed Bosnian Muslims that they could continue their employment, in practice, Bosnian Muslims were dismissed from their positions in the municipal authorities and the police.³⁸⁵⁸ After these dismissals the police became a “Serb only body” with police officers wearing a white patch with an eagle and a white ribbon on their sleeves.³⁸⁵⁹ Joint police or joint security organs were no longer organised.³⁸⁶⁰ Đurić, in a briefing attended by Mladić in June 1992, reported that an SJB had been set up and was involved in confiscating weapons.³⁸⁶¹

(4) Formation of Special Platoon

1125. Bosnian Serbs received summons for mobilisation and a platoon was formed, which was named the Special Police Platoon.³⁸⁶² This platoon, which consisted of between 20 to 30 men who had no previous police experience; they had criminal records³⁸⁶³ and refused to place themselves under the command of the Vlasenica TO.³⁸⁶⁴ The Special Police Platoon was commanded by Đurić stated that people continued to work until mid-April 1992 but then Bosnian Muslims stopped coming to work at the TO out of fear. D2967 (Witness statement of Momir Đurić dated 16 February 2013), para. 11. The Chamber does not consider that evidence that some Bosnian Muslims stopped coming to work out of fear is inconsistent with others being dismissed from their jobs. Đurić testified that Bosnian Muslim police decided of their own accord not to return to work and were not given decisions on termination of employment or sent on forced leave. However, he was confronted and contradicted by reference to his prior testimony where he testified that all Bosnian Serb police officers were re-employed while Bosnian Muslims were laid off or told to take annual leave and it was done to change the ethnic composition of the police. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), para. 25; Mane Đurić, T. 35063–35065 (7 March 2013) (private session). In light of these contradictions, the Chamber does not consider Đurić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard. See also KDZ033, T. 18044 (29 August 2011) (closed session). While KDZ033 testified that to his knowledge Bosnian Muslims left the MUP of their own accord, the Chamber finds his answers in this regard to be equivocal.

Miroslav Kraljević and was within the organisational structure of the SJB.³⁸⁶⁵ Members of the Special Police Platoon received payment from the SJB and reported daily to Kraljević at the SJB.³⁸⁶⁶ They were under the command of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff.³⁸⁶⁷

1126. The Special Police Platoon engaged in illegal activities and mistreated Bosnian Muslims.³⁸⁶⁸ For example, members of the Special Police Platoon would beat Bosnian Muslims during interrogations.³⁸⁶⁹ In mid-June 1992, they looted goods from Bosnian Muslim homes while conducting searches and in one case moved into an abandoned Bosnian Muslim house.³⁸⁷⁰ Bosnian Muslims who remained in their homes were interrogated to identify people considered to be Muslim leaders in the municipality³⁸⁷¹ and were also harassed by members of the police who came to their homes at night and demanded money.³⁸⁷² The Special Police Platoon conducted these operations on a daily basis and sometimes at night.³⁸⁷³ Đurić and Radenko Stanić initially permitted members of the Special Police Platoon and reserve police to loot non-Serb property and misappropriate non-Serb houses.³⁸⁷⁴ The Special Police Platoon was disbanded in August 1992.³⁸⁷⁵

While this platoon was disbanded, its commander and his deputy remained employed by the MUP. This order also required that individuals who committed crimes be dismissed from the MUP and be put at the disposal of the VRS. (5) Take-over of surrounding villages

1127. After the take-over of Vlasenica, representatives of the Bosnian Serb authorities drove from village to village and used megaphones to call on all Bosnian Muslims to hand over their weapons.³⁸⁷⁶

1128. The Special Police Platoon first took-over “several villages” on the road from Vlasenica to Milići.³⁸⁷⁷ Kraljević received orders for operations against Bosnian Muslim villages from Radenko Stanić.³⁸⁷⁸ The aim was to “cleanse” the area of Bosnian Muslims and Kraljević instructed the Special Police Platoon that the “territory had to be 100 percent clean and that none of the Muslims should remain in the area”.³⁸⁷⁹

1129. In May and June 1992, the Special Police Platoon, led by Kraljević, conducted two operations, one in Sušica, and another in Gradina and other Muslim hamlets in the municipality, occasionally encountering armed resistance.³⁸⁸⁰ In accordance with Kraljević’s instruction, the Special Police Platoon set Bosnian Muslim houses on fire.³⁸⁸¹ In the village of Piskavice only the homes belonging to Bosnian Muslims were torched while the Bosnian Serbs continued to live in their houses.³⁸⁸²

1130. In early May 1992, Kraljević ordered the Special Police Platoon to conduct an operation in Turalići, during which the village was “burnt almost entirely to the ground”.³⁸⁸³ In late May 1992, Kraljević ordered the Special Police Platoon to take-over the village of Gradina and the surrounding area.³⁸⁸⁴ The Gradina operation was discussed in an informal meeting at the SJB building attended by officials, including Đurić and Radenko Stanić.³⁸⁸⁵ On the morning of the operation, inhabitants were instructed by loudspeaker to surrender their weapons and warned that if they failed to do so, military action would be taken.³⁸⁸⁶ The Special Police Platoon was supported by police officers from the Vlasenica SJB and a VRS unit with a tank and two APCs.³⁸⁸⁷

1131. The members of the Special Police Platoon were ordered by Kraljević to search for weapons, detain men who surrendered for questioning, kill those men who tried to escape, and send women and children to Vlasenica town.³⁸⁸⁸ After the escape of a Bosnian Muslim man, Kraljević instructed the Special Police Platoon not to take any more male Muslim prisoners alive.³⁸⁸⁹ There were armed clashes with Bosnian Muslims during the take-over of Gradina.³⁸⁹⁰ After Bosnian Muslims fled, Serb Forces torched many Bosnian Muslim homes in Gradina and surrounding villages.³⁸⁹¹ Some men were arrested, detained and then transferred to Sušica camp.³⁸⁹² Following the attack on Gradina, Serb Forces took part in operations in the villages of Borići, Barice and Hrastovac.³⁸⁹³

1132. On 7 June 1992, the Command of the Eastern Bosnia Corps issued an order to secure Milići, protect the Milići–Vlasenica route, and “mop up” the Birač territory of remaining enemy forces.³⁸⁹⁴

1133. In early June 1992, the Special Police Platoon was ordered to return to Gradina where they burnt down the remaining non-Serb houses and then almost all Bosnian Muslim houses in the area were destroyed.³⁸⁹⁵ This second operation covered a larger area, including the Bosnian Muslim villages from Drum to the north.³⁸⁹⁶ The Special Police Platoon, members of the TO, SJB Milići, members of the VRS and local Bosnian Serbs took part in the operation.³⁸⁹⁷ Kraljević explicitly ordered the units to torch all Bosnian Muslim houses because “you can see for yourselves that if we don’t set fire to these houses, they’ll return later on”.³⁸⁹⁸ After this operation, the area of Gradina

1134. The Special Police Platoon proceeded to “cleanse” the villages of Drum, Piškavica, Alihodžići and Pustoše.³⁹⁰¹ Local Bosnian Serbs were involved in the looting of Bosnian Muslim villages.³⁹⁰² During these operations, Serb Forces, including the Special Police Platoon, took-over the Bosnian Muslim villages of Dragaši, Dzemat, Drum, Alihadžić, Piskavice, Pijuć, Gradina, Turalići, Zaklopača, Kašaha, Nedeljiste, Peševina, Hodžići, Mršići, Smajići, and Kuljančić.³⁹⁰³ Following these take-overs the non-Serb inhabitants escaped to Kladanj, Cerska and other villages while the others were captured and taken to Sušica camp.³⁹⁰⁴ Some Bosnian Muslim men who were captured were interrogated and beaten.³⁹⁰⁵

(a) Scheduled Incident A.15.2

1136. Zaklopača was a Bosnian Muslim village located approximately six kilometres from Vlasenica.³⁹⁰⁶ The village was the only Bosnian Muslim village in the area and was surrounded by Bosnian Serb villages.³⁹⁰⁷

1137. In the lead-up to the attack on the village, reserve soldiers gathered and there was a large number of soldiers in the area; they initially wore the regular JNA uniforms but later added “Četnik insignias” and cockades.³⁹⁰⁸ Out of fear, Bosnian Muslims left their homes and started hiding in the woods at night.³⁹⁰⁹

1138. Approximately 10 to 15 days before the attack on Zaklopača, the village was visited by a delegation of Bosnian Serb leaders who demanded the surrender of weapons and assured the population of their security if the weapons were surrendered.³⁹¹⁰ The licensed weapons held by Bosnian Muslims in the village were also confiscated by Bosnian Serb police.³⁹¹¹

1139. On 3 May 1992, the nearby Bosnian Muslim village of Žutica was burned down and a bus full of people who had been expelled from the village following the attack by Serb Forces was brought to Zaklopača.³⁹¹² Many of the men from Žutica had been severely beaten. They described how Serb Forces had attacked the village, arrested men, and raped women, which caused fear.³⁹¹³

1140. On 15 May 1992, the Birač Brigade issued an order for its units to take co-ordinated action with the Birač TO to “restore control over the territory”.³⁹¹⁴ On 16 May 1992, Serb Forces entered in four or five army vehicles and one police car and attacked the village.³⁹¹⁵ Some of the soldiers

The Serb Forces included members of the police, men wearing JNA uniforms, camouflage uniforms and civilian clothes. had long beards and wore cockades on their uniforms; others covered their faces with masks.³⁹¹⁶ After a soldier fired a signal flare, the attack on the village commenced with extensive automatic gun-fire.³⁹¹⁷ There was no organised defence in the village to this attack.³⁹¹⁸

1141. Sead Hodžić passed the house of Murat Hreljić and saw a body with multiple bullet wounds lying in a pool of blood and another body in the garden.³⁹¹⁹ Hodžić saw five other Bosnian Muslims being shot and killed.³⁹²⁰ Hodžić saw other bodies as he passed through the village and was warned by Elvira Hreljić to run away because the Serb Forces were going through the village and killing all the men.³⁹²¹ Sead Hodžić was shot at as he ran away.³⁹²² Haso Hodžić was caught by two soldiers and brought back to his home, questioned about whether he had any weapons, and when he denied having any weapons he was shot and killed by a soldier.³⁹²³ Sporadic gunfire continued from different places in the village. Serb Forces then stole some cars and withdrew.³⁹²⁴

(18 February 2013). Savkić refused to explain how no Bosnian Serbs were killed in Zaklopača if it was an attack on both ethnicities, see Tomislav Savkić, T. 33787–33791 (15 February 2013).

³⁹¹⁸ Sead Hodžić, T. 18435 (6 September 2011). Trišić testified that there was confusion as to who was attacking the village and he saw Bosnian Serbs firing into the woods from their houses. He also stated that it was a spontaneous attack. He testified that the police did not participate in the attack, the authorities did not know about the incident, and he heard that there was an investigation into the incident. D3048 (Witness statement of Božidar Trišić dated 24 February 2013), paras. 12, 14–15, 23, 26; Božidar Trišić, T. 34511 (28 February 2013). However, the Chamber does not find his evidence to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Trišić's evidence was marked by inconsistencies, which undermined his evidence in this respect. For example on cross-examination, he acknowledged that this was his guess and did not know who the attackers were and acknowledged that while he did not see police participating in the attack it could have happened. Božidar Trišić, T. 34505–34508 (28 February 2013).

³⁹¹⁹ P3285 (Witness statement of Sead Hodžić dated 24 May 2000), para. 36. Hodžić stated that he learned that the body was Salim Avdić's. However, there is no indication of how the witness found out and the Chamber does not place any weight on this aspect of his evidence.

³⁹²⁰ P3285 (Witness statement of Sead Hodžić dated 24 May 2000), para. 22. The people identified as having been shot were Rifet Hodžić, Mujo Hodžić, Salko Salihović, Bajro Salihović, and Becir Hodžić; Sead Hodžić, T. 18462 (6 September 2011). See also P418 (Witness statement of Mersudina Saim-Hodžić dated 24 May 2002), p. 3.

³⁹²¹ P3285 (Witness statement of Sead Hodžić dated 24 May 2000), para. 36; Sead Hodžić, T. 18453 (6 September 2011). Trišić testified that (i) no Bosnian Muslims who stayed in their homes were killed and that only those who were outside or tried to flee were killed; (ii) he did not see police cars during the attack. D3048 (Witness statement of Božidar Trišić dated 24 February 2013), para. 29; Božidar Trišić, T. 34505–34507, 34513 (28 February 2013). The Chamber does not consider that Trišić's evidence pertaining to whether he saw police cars to be significant. However, the Chamber does note his admission that Bosnian Muslims who were outside or tried to flee were killed. Savkić also testified that this incident was not a planned operation but acknowledged on cross-examination that this was his guess and did not know who the attackers were.

1142. Mersudina Saim-Hodžić saw many bodies lying around the village and estimated that approximately 80 people were killed that day.³⁹²⁵ When the survivors returned they saw the bodies of at least 58 men and those of some women and children; they were all from Zaklopača.³⁹²⁶ Scattered in groups around the village, most of the bodies bore gunshot wounds through the mouth.³⁹²⁷ The Chamber notes at least two of those killed were members of an ABiH unit.³⁹²⁸

1143. After the incident, men wearing gas masks and protective equipment arrived in the village and used a mechanical digger, tractor, and trailer to dig a mass grave; they then wrapped the bodies in sheets and threw them into the grave.³⁹²⁹ The bodies were moved from the first grave to another location after Bosnian Serbs moved into the village.³⁹³⁰

1144. Very few males from the village survived the attack.³⁹³¹ The villagers who had survived gathered together and left in trucks to Gradina with two of the wounded women taken to Vlasenica hospital.³⁹³² One of the trucks was stopped at a Bosnian Serb check-point where three Bosnian

The bodies Sead Hodžić saw and identified included Ibrahim Hodžić, Huso Hodžić, Mersudin Hodžić (16 years old), Hamdija Hodžić, Haso Hodžić, Bećir Hodžić, Ibro Hodžić, Safet Hodžić, Muhamed Hodžić, Ibiš Hodžić, Đulsuma Hodžić (a woman), Behadil Hodžić, Fadil Hodžić, Ismeta Hodžić (a woman), Sedin Hodžić (16 years old), Sadmir Hodžić (12 years old), Admir Hodžić (9 years old), Admira Hodžić (4 or 5 years old), Fail Hodžić's wife, Mujo Hodžić, Salih Hodžić (10 years old), Enisa Hodžić (a woman), Ismet Hodžić, Rifet Hodžić, Meho Hodžić, Admira Hodžić (12 years old), Asim Hodžić (3 years old), Anesa Hodžić (7 years old), Alija Hamidović, Osman Hamidović, Bego Hamidović, Hašim Hamidović, Asim Hamidović, Senaid Hamidović, Hamed Hamidović, Fata Hamidović (a woman), Zada Hamidović (a woman), Murat Hreljić, Muradif Hreljić, Salko Salihović, Bajro Salihović, Mujaga Salihović, Osman Salihović, Fatima Salihović, Edin Salihović (13 years old), Edina Salihović (10 years old), Nedžad Salihović (13 years old), Mustafa Mahmutović, Šaban Avdić, Mustafa Avdić, Salim Avdić, Raif Dugalić, Šaha Dugalić, Mustafa Berbić, Fatima Berbić, Junuz Selimović, Adem Selimović, and Salih Selimović. Mersudina Saim-Hodžić also identified 59 people who were killed. P418 (Witness statement of Mersudina Saim-Hodžić dated 24 May 2002), pp. 5–6. In addition to some of those listed above she also identified the following individuals: Makbula Hodžić, Velida Hodžić, Ades Hodžić, Adesa Hodžić, Sajma Hodžić, Senahid Hamidović, Asko Hamidović, Edina Hamidović, and a female named Hamidović. Of these named individuals, 50 were identified by Mašović as having been exhumed from a mass grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 55–57. See also P4856 (Appendix B to the Prosecution Pre-Trial Brief filed on 18 May 2009 marked by Amor Mašović), pp. 8–9.

³⁹²⁸ D2942 (Request of ABiH 1st Žepa Brigade, 13 February 1995). The Chamber notes that Savkić's evidence with respect to whether those who were killed in the village were members of an armed Bosnian Muslim group is equivocal and thus not of much weight. See also Tomislav Savkić, T. 33823–33831 (15 February 2013); D2943 (Recommendation sent to Alija Izetbegović, 23 June 1995), p. 6.

Muslims were arrested, taken away, and never seen again while the women were allowed to head to Gradina.³⁹³³ The Chamber has insufficient evidence to conclude whether or not Serb Forces killed the three Bosnian Muslims who disappeared during the transportation.

1145. Bosnian Muslim survivors from Zaklopača stayed in Gradina until it was also attacked by Serb Forces.³⁹³⁴ They then took shelter for a few days in the woods; a large number of women and children surrendered to Bosnian Serbs and were taken to Sušica camp before being transferred to Cerska and Kladanj.³⁹³⁵

1146. Considering the above, the Chamber finds that at least 60 people, including women and children, were killed in the village of Zaklopača by Serb Forces on or about 16 May 1992. While at least two of those killed were ABiH soldiers, the Chamber found that (i) many of the victims were women and young children; (ii) some of the victims were shot while trying to escape or after they had been captured by Serb Forces; and (iii) most of those killed had gun shot wounds through the mouth. The Chamber therefore finds beyond reasonable doubt that those killed by Serb Forces were civilians or had been rendered hors de combat.

(b) Scheduled Incident A.15.1

1147. The Prosecution alleges that at least 20 men were killed in the village of Drum on or about 2 June 1992.

1148. Drum was a Bosnian Muslim village in the commune of Piskavica³⁹³⁶ and was surrounded by a number of Bosnian Serb villages.³⁹³⁷ Armed Bosnian Muslims had established a check-point in the village at the beginning of 1992 and there was shooting from the village.³⁹³⁸

³⁹³³ P3285 (Witness statement of Sead Hodžić dated 24 May 2000), para. 47. The people who were taken away were identified as Meho Hamidović, Edin Hamidović (10 years old), and Pašan Selimović. See also P418 (Witness statement of Mersudina Saim-Hodžić dated 24 May 2002), p. 5 (stating that Meho Hamidović and Edin Hamidović were killed).

There were only two Bosnian Serb houses on the outskirts of the village.

In the Accused's submission, the village of Drum was a legitimate military target. Defence Final Brief, para. 1436.

1149. In late May 1992, Bosnian Serb police confiscated a few hunting weapons held by Bosnian Muslims in the village.³⁹³⁹ Houses of Bosnian Muslims were searched multiple times by Bosnian Serbs who claimed to be searching for weapons, but the searches had the effect of intimidating the population.³⁹⁴⁰ Bosnian Serb police went through the village and used a megaphone to tell the Bosnian Muslims that they had to hand over all their weapons or else their homes would be burned down and the men would be arrested.³⁹⁴¹

1150. On 2 June 1992, Serb Forces attacked Drum.³⁹⁴² Serb Forces first entered the village and, at approximately 7 a.m., when an APC with a heavy calibre machine gun opened fire, the soldiers attacked the village.³⁹⁴³ While some Bosnian Muslim villagers may have had weapons, there was no armed resistance to the attack by Serb Forces on Drum.³⁹⁴⁴ The Special Police Platoon patrolled the village in search of Bosnian Muslim men who may have hidden in houses and shot at them whether or not they were armed.³⁹⁴⁵

1151. Soldiers dragged people out of their homes and killed them in plain sight with machine guns.³⁹⁴⁶ More than 20 Bosnian Muslim males were killed in a few minutes with only three male residents surviving the attack.³⁹⁴⁷ The women and children were gathered and held at gunpoint

While the Chamber finds that there were armed Bosnian Muslims in Drum, the evidence accepted by the Chamber does not support the conclusion that the whole village was a legitimate military target or justifies the manner in which the attack against the village was carried out. In this regard the Chamber does not find the evidence of witnesses Đurić, Savkić, Stanić, and Andrić about the extent to which Bosnian Muslims were armed to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 3791, 3813, and 3894 with respect to the relevant witnesses.

³⁹⁴³ P3262 (Witness statement of KDZ603 dated 30 August 2011), paras. 8–10 (under seal); see Adjudicated Fact 2695.

³⁹⁴⁴ KDZ603, T. 18135, 18137–18138, 18157 (1 September 2011). The Chamber notes that KDZ603 when questioned further stated that he did not know about or see the distribution of weapons in Drum. KDZ603's testimony is qualified based on what he knew, and does not rule out that there were weapons held by Bosnian Muslims in Drum at some point before the attack on the village which he was not aware about. The Accused submits that the credibility of KDZ603 is questionable given his inconsistent testimony with respect to the incident. Defence Final Brief, confidential, para. 1436 citing to P3262 (Witness statement of KDZ603 dated 30 August 2011), para. 5 (under seal); KDZ603, T. 18143, 18145 (1 September 2011). The Chamber does not see any merit in the Accused's submission. The Chamber has had regard to the totality of KDZ603's evidence, including the references cited by the Accused, and does not consider that there are any inconsistencies which would affect the credibility of this witness with respect to his evidence pertaining to this incident.

before being sent by bus to Sušica.³⁹⁴⁸ As the villagers were ordered onto the bus they faced a “barrage of insults” as to their “Muslim ethnicity”.³⁹⁴⁹ The villagers were taken to Sušica under the guard of the reserve police.³⁹⁵⁰ After this date there were no Bosnian Muslims left in Drum.³⁹⁵¹

1152. While Osmanović was detained at the prison building in Vlasenica he was taken with three other Bosnian Muslim detainees to Drum to bury 22 bodies.³⁹⁵² Osmanović knew four of the deceased men personally³⁹⁵³ and observed that all but one of the bodies had a single gunshot wound between the eyes.³⁹⁵⁴ Osmo Hodžić had been shot in the chest.³⁹⁵⁵ All the victims were Bosnian Muslims between the ages of 18 to 65 and were wearing civilian clothes.³⁹⁵⁶ The bodies had been arranged next to each other in front of the local bar, which was owned by a Bosnian Muslim.³⁹⁵⁷ The guards instructed Osmanović to search the bodies for valuables and documents before they were loaded onto a tractor and taken to the Muslim cemetery near the Boksit stadium and buried in a hole.³⁹⁵⁸ Lime was poured over the bodies before they were covered.³⁹⁵⁹ even if they had heard about the incident they were unsure whether the Bosnian Muslims were armed or had provoked the attack. Svetozar Andrić, T. 41672 (22 July 2013); D2982 (Witness statement of Milenko Stanić dated 16 February 2013), para. 37; Mane Đurić, T. 35082 (7 March 2013); D3853 (Witness statement of Zvonko Bajagić dated 5 July 2013), para. 26. The Chamber does not find the evidence of these witnesses to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessments for the relevant witnesses in fns. 3791 and 3894. In addition the Chamber notes that the evidence of Bajagić was also marked by contadictions, evasiveness and indicators that he was not forthright in his testimony in this regard.

KDZ603 saw approximately 20 bodies in Drum and was able to positively identify the bodies of Goro Salihović, Braco Salihović, Osmo Hodžić, Nedžad Hodžić, Jasmin Kičić, the brother of Jasmin Kičić, Huso Aličević, Meho Jahić, Ekrem Jahić, Hadžo Malešević, Fadil Salihović. The bodies of Osmo Hodžić, Huso Aličević, Meho Jahić, Ekrem Jahić and Fadil Salihović were identified by Mašović as having been exhumed from a mass grave, while Nedžad Hodžić was exhumed from an individual grave. ³⁹⁵⁸ P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), para. 93. The Chamber does not accept Đurić’s evidence that the Bosnian Serb police were requested to provide protection and ensured the proper burial of Bosnian Muslims killed in Drum. The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 3791 as to why Đurić’s evidence is not reliable in this regard. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), para. 44; Mane Đurić, T. 35006, 35030–35031 (7 March 2013). The Chamber does note however, that Đurić himself acknowledged that some of the victims were Bosnian Muslim civilians.

1153. Considering the above, the Chamber finds that at least 20 Bosnian Muslim men in the village of Drum were killed by Serb Forces on or about 2 June 1992.

(6) Scheduled Incident B.18.4

1154. The Prosecution alleges that at least 29 men were taken away from the Civil Defence Building and killed on the side of the road near the village of Nova Kasaba between May and June 1992.³⁹⁶⁰

1155. On 17 May 1992, Bosnian Muslims were taken from villages surrounding Bratunac and, in three full buses, were brought to Bratunac town. They were then transferred to Vlasenica.³⁹⁶¹ They were loaded onto buses by Bosnian Serb police and accompanied by an armed guard in each bus and a police car.³⁹⁶² After their arrival in Vlasenica, a group of Bosnian Serb soldiers approached the buses; they wore camouflage uniforms with balaclavas or stockings over their faces,³⁹⁶³ they also wore patches, including those of Arkan's men and of the White Eagles. The soldiers ordered all the men to line up in front of the buses.³⁹⁶⁴ The men were made to sing "Serbian nationalist songs" and to give the three-fingered Serbian salute and those who refused were beaten.³⁹⁶⁵ One of the detainees was kicked and beaten when questioned about a military backpack he was wearing.³⁹⁶⁶

1156. The elderly men in the group were sent back to the buses while approximately 34 men of military age and five minors were taken to the MUP prison and detained for several days.³⁹⁶⁷ On arrival, the group was held in a small room and severely beaten.³⁹⁶⁸ Two of the men were taken back to the buses with the women, children and elderly who were taken to Kladanj.³⁹⁶⁹ The remaining Bosnian Muslims were beaten during the day and night with batons, tubes, and rifle butts

by Bosnian Serb soldiers.³⁹⁷⁰ They were not provided with any food or water until the second day.³⁹⁷¹

1157. On 21 May 1992, this group of Bosnian Muslims, with the exception of the five minors, was taken out by two policemen and told they would be exchanged.³⁹⁷² The detainees were asked to hand over all their personal belongings before being loaded onto a bus to be taken towards Nova Kasaba.³⁹⁷³ One detainee was cursed and beaten “wildly” by a soldier called “Makedonac” when he was found to have not handed over a wristwatch.³⁹⁷⁴ As the Bosnian Muslims were waiting to leave, four cars with the insignia of a skull on their doors arrived and uniformed men, including a man named Pero Mitrović, got out.³⁹⁷⁵ There was also an armoured vehicle with soldiers parked near the bus, the soldiers entered the bus and made the Bosnian Muslims sing “Chetnik” songs.³⁹⁷⁶ The bus was then led by the armoured vehicle and followed by the cars towards Bratunac.³⁹⁷⁷

1158. The column of vehicles stopped at the entrance to Nova Kasaba, and the soldiers got out of their vehicles; Makedonac told the detainees to get off the bus in groups of four or five.³⁹⁷⁸ The detainees in the first group were killed on the spot as they got off the bus.³⁹⁷⁹ The other groups of detainees were ordered to get off the bus and run across the fields where they were then shot with automatic rifles and a machine gun mounted on the armoured vehicle.³⁹⁸⁰ Suad Džafić was in the last group; he was hit by gunfire and wounded in four different parts of his body but survived.³⁹⁸¹ Mitrović and Makedonac shot any survivors they found in the head.³⁹⁸² As Mitrović and Makedonac got closer to Suad Džafić he could hear an argument which suggested that the execution should not have taken place on the main road. The soldiers were then ordered to leave immediately; this allowed Suad Džafić to escape.³⁹⁸³ Of the 29 Bosnian Muslim men who were killed, Suad Džafić was able to identify 21 relatives and neighbours.³⁹⁸⁴ The Milići SJB reported to CSB Sarajevo on 3 August 1992 about this incident and stated that the summary execution was carried out by the Vukovar Detachment, which was a paramilitary group.³⁹⁸⁵

1159. The Chamber therefore finds that approximately 29 Bosnian Muslim men were taken from Vlasenica, on or about 21 May 1992 and killed by Serb Forces.

(E) Detention Facilities in Vlasenica

(1) Scheduled Detention Facility C.25.1

1160. The Indictment refers to the use of SJB building in Vlasenica as a detention facility at least between May and July 1992.³⁹⁸⁶

(a) Arrival of detainees and control over the detention facility

1161. The SJB building was located in the centre of Vlasenica.³⁹⁸⁷ The police officers who worked at the SJB building went from door to door, interrogating non-Serbs, bringing them to the SJB building and demanding money.³⁹⁸⁸ Bosnian Muslims were arrested in their homes by reserve police officers and taken to the SJB building with no explanation as to the reason for their arrest.³⁹⁸⁹

³⁹⁸³ P3263 (Witness statement of Suad Džafić dated 31 August 2011), paras. 55–58, 66 (stating that Rahman Karić and Sado Muhić also survived).

³⁹⁸⁴ P3263 (Witness statement of Suad Džafić dated 31 August 2011), paras. 60–63, 65; Suad Džafić, T. 18204 (1 September 2011) (testifying that of the 32 men taken for execution, 29 were killed). The identified individuals are Mehmed Džafić, Ibro Džafić, Hamed Džafić, Osman Džafić, Fahrudin Džafić, Fejzo Džafić, Mirsad Džafić, Huso Džafić, Samir Džafić, Šahin Suljić, Himzo Suljić, Izo Suljić, Suljo Suljić, Ramiz Karić, Arif Karić, Ismet Salihović, Ragib Salihović, Galib Ahmetović, Hidajet Alic, Ibro Suljagić, Alija Suljagić. Each of these 21 named individuals was identified as having been exhumed from a mass grave. P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), pp. 95–96. See also P4856 (Appendix B to the Prosecution Pre-Trial Brief filed on 18 May 2009 marked by Amor Mašović), pp. 29–30; P3264 (Report of Milići SJB, 3 August 1992), pp. 1–2.

³⁹⁸⁵ P3263 (Witness statement of Suad Džafić dated 31 August 2011), para. 67; P3264 (Report of Milići SJB, 3 August 1992), pp. 1–2. While the report also suggested that the Milići SJB was unable to protect these people from the execution as the Vukovar Detachment was heavily armed, the Chamber places no weight on this attempt by the SJB to distance itself from the incident. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted the testimony of Džafić that he saw no attempts by the police to protect the detainees and in fact one policeman had said “[l]et me kill them all now.”

³⁹⁸⁶ The Prosecution submits that the evidence shows that the facility operated in May and June 1992. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B.

1162. The first non-Serbs who were detained and interrogated at the SJB building were intellectuals, SDA members, and wealthy individuals. While some were detained for a couple of days, others were detained longer. Some were released and re-arrested.³⁹⁹⁰ Members of the Vlasenica SJB were involved in interrogations including members of the Special Police Platoon.³⁹⁹¹

1163. In May 1992, members of the Special Police Platoon were ordered by Kraljević to take all able-bodied men from the predominantly Bosnian Muslim suburb of Sušica to the SJB building to be questioned about weapons.³⁹⁹² A total of 50 Bosnian Muslim men, including some elderly and underage boys were rounded up in this operation.³⁹⁹³

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1164. Bosnian Muslims were detained and mistreated in a small cell of the SJB building by the Bosnian Serb police for several days.³⁹⁹⁴ When Osmanović was detained in this cell, there were over 20 Bosnian Muslims, including some children, who were locked in these cramped conditions for three to four hours. 10 men were then taken to another room.³⁹⁹⁵ None of these individuals had taken part in military activities.³⁹⁹⁶

1165. A number of reserve police officers were also involved in the mistreatment of Bosnian Muslim detainees at the SJB building.³⁹⁹⁷ Members of the Special Police Platoon were also allowed to enter the SJB building and were involved in the beating of the detainees.³⁹⁹⁸ Detainees were taken out either in groups or individually for interrogations during which time they were beaten.³⁹⁹⁹ They had their arms and legs tied and were beaten over the course of about 10 days with police batons, metal pipes, grips of guns, and metal chains.⁴⁰⁰⁰ Detainees were also cut on multiple places of their body with knives and in one case a detainee had salt rubbed into those wounds.⁴⁰⁰¹

1166. While occasionally, the detainees were allowed to have food from their homes, they were frequently hungry.⁴⁰⁰² On one occasion the detainees were given food and it was spoiled.⁴⁰⁰³ The detainees did not have any access to any medical care and the conditions of detention were poor.⁴⁰⁰⁴ While the detainees had access to water in the basement of the building, they were beaten en route.⁴⁰⁰⁵ The detainees did not have beds and slept on concrete tiles.⁴⁰⁰⁶ Osmanović described the atmosphere as one of “suffering, misery, of pain”.⁴⁰⁰⁷

(c) Conclusion on conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1167. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslim civilian men as well as some children and elderly, were arrested in their homes and detained at the Vlasenica SJB building in May 1992 by Serb Forces. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included lack of food, bedding, no medical care, and over-crowding. Detainees were subjected to beatings with batons, metal pipes, chains and other objects. Some detainees were cut with knives during their detention.

(d) Scheduled Incident B.18.3

1168. The Indictment refers to the killing of one man in SJB building on or about 22 May 1992.

1169. On or about 22 May 1992, Džemal Ambešković, an ex-policeman who had helped organise the referendum for an independent BiH in Vlasenica,⁴⁰⁰⁸ was pushed into a room, and other detainees saw his face and stomach were bruised.⁴⁰⁰⁹ After some time, Stevan Mumović, who wore ⁴⁰⁰⁰ P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), paras. 70, 78; see Adjudicated Fact 2699. The Chamber places no weight on Đurić’s evidence that some detainees assaulted inspectors during interviews and thus had to be “physically overpowered”. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), paras. 45–47. The Chamber does not find this evidence to be plausible. The Chamber also refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 3791 in concluding that Đurić’s evidence in this regard was unreliable.

a “war police” patch, told Ambešković to get out of the room. As Ambešković stepped out of the room he was struck on the back of his head, he fell to the floor, and then a single pistol shot was heard.⁴⁰¹⁰ After he was killed three of the detainees were ordered by a member of the reserve police force to “get out and load this shit”, given a plastic bag, and ordered to load the body onto a van.⁴⁰¹¹ After the body was loaded onto the van, the detainees were beaten as they went up the stairs.⁴⁰¹²

1170. The Chamber therefore finds that on or about 22 May 1992 a Bosnian Muslim man was killed by a member of the Serb Forces at the Vlasenica SJB building.

(2) Scheduled Detention Facility C.25.2

1171. The Indictment refers to the use of the Prison building in Vlasenica as a detention facility at least between June and July 1992.⁴⁰¹³

(a) Arrival of detainees and control over detention facility

1172. The prison in Vlasenica was close to the SJB building and the commander of the prison was a man named Branislav Sokanović; he was a police officer of the Vlasenica SJB.⁴⁰¹⁴ The guards at the prison were Bosnian Serb police and included reserve police officers.⁴⁰¹⁵

1173. Beginning in May 1992, Bosnian Muslims were arrested and detained for several days at the Vlasenica prison by Bosnian Serb police.⁴⁰¹⁶ These included a group of approximately 30 non-Serb men from Bratunac and a significant number of other non-Serbs from Vlasenica.⁴⁰¹⁷

The Accused himself acknowledges that the evidence presented confirms that a man was killed at this facility on or about 22 May 1992 but asserts that no evidence was introduced to link this killing with anyone at the Republican level. ⁴⁰¹² P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), para. 76. The Chamber received evidence of other killings of individuals who had been detained at the facility. P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), paras. 164, 166 (under seal). The Chamber notes that these killings are not charged pursuant to Schedules A or B of the Indictment. See fn. 13.

⁴⁰¹³ The Prosecution submits that the evidence shows that the facility operated in May and June 1992. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix B, p. 56.

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1174. The Vlasenica prison was designed to hold approximately 20 to 50 detainees.⁴⁰¹⁸ Despite this capacity, about 150 Bosnian Muslim men were held in very poor conditions in five rooms of the Vlasenica prison.⁴⁰¹⁹ Osmanović was transferred to the Vlasenica prison on 2 June 1992 and was detained there until 18 June 1992.⁴⁰²⁰ On his arrival Osmanović was searched, stripped of his valuables, and placed in a cell with other Bosnian Muslim men.⁴⁰²¹

1175. The Bosnian Muslim detainees had to sleep on wooden pallets on the floor or on shelves as there were no beds.⁴⁰²² They received food from their homes and from acquaintances and once received left-over food in the prison.⁴⁰²³ While at the Vlasenica prison the detainees did not have access to medical care or medication.⁴⁰²⁴

1176. Detainees were taken out of the Vlasenica prison by Bosnian Serbs in camouflage uniforms to loot valuables from Bosnian Muslim homes.⁴⁰²⁵ The detainees were also taken out to bury bodies and dig trenches on the frontline between Vlasenica and Kladanj⁴⁰²⁶ and also to carry out other work such as chopping wood.⁴⁰²⁷

1177. Detainees were either interrogated at the prison or taken to the nearby SJB building.⁴⁰²⁸ Some detainees in the prison were subjected to prolonged and severe beatings. They were also Đurić testified that the facility was used because there were people under investigation who had to be imprisoned. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), para. 49. ⁴⁰²⁶ P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), paras. 89, 93–98. See also Adjudicated Fact 2704. Detainees were taken away in JNA military trucks by Bosnian Serbs in olive grey uniforms. The Chamber notes that there was no fighting at the time when detainees were taken to dig trenches. P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 61 (under seal).

⁴⁰²⁸ P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 163 (under seal). For evidence on treatment at the Vlasenica SJB building, see Scheduled Detention Facility C.25.1.

threatened and subjected to intimidation.⁴⁰²⁹ When the commander of the Vlasenica prison, Sokanović, was present, the detainees were treated fairly but when he was not there conditions worsened and the detainees were beaten.⁴⁰³⁰ When Sokanović was absent, the detainees were only allowed to use the toilet once or twice a day and were beaten en route.⁴⁰³¹ Detainees were kicked and beaten with batons, rifle butts, machine guns, metal bars, sticks, and thick plastic pipes.⁴⁰³²

1178. After the death of Kraljević's brother, uniformed individuals came to the prison and proceeded to take revenge on the detainees and subjected them to further mistreatment.⁴⁰³³ In addition civilians and uniformed individuals, were brought to or allowed to enter, the facility to beat the detainees and the guards did not provide the detainees with any protection.⁴⁰³⁴

(c) Conclusion

1179. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslim men were arrested and detained at the Vlasenica prison from May to June 1992 by Serb Forces. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included over-crowding, inadequate medical care and bedding. Detainees were forced to work at a number of locations and, for example, were used to bury bodies, and dig trenches. Detainees were subjected to beatings with batons, metal bars, guns, pipes, and other objects.

The Chamber notes that the above killings are not charged pursuant to Schedules A or B of the Indictment. See fn. 13.

(a) Arrival of detainees and control over the detention facility

1181. Sušica camp was close to the town of Vlasenica on the road from Sarajevo to Belgrade and consisted of sheds owned by a forestry company prior to the war.⁴⁰³⁵ The facility was taken over and used for the storage of TO weapons and a hangar was then used to detain persons brought to the camp.⁴⁰³⁶ The camp was established on 31 May 1992 by an order issued by the VRS 1st Infantry Brigade Commander, acting pursuant to a decision of the SAO Birač on regulating the “moving out of the Muslim population”.⁴⁰³⁷

1182. Both the VRS and the Vlasenica SJB brought Bosnian Muslims to the camp and had responsibility over the facility, and the SJB determined in practice how the camp functioned.⁴⁰³⁸ The camp warden was Veljko Bašić and the facility was guarded by members of the police, the Special Police Platoon, and the VRS.⁴⁰³⁹ Bašić and his deputy would visit the camp almost every morning and update a list which recorded the personal details of any new detainees who had arrived

Defence witnesses testified that this order related to the organisation of the camp and the maintenance of law and order rather than to its establishment and that the SAO Birač was not involved in the moving out of the non-Serb population and there was no such decision. Svetozar Andrić, T. 41681–41684 (22 July 2013); Milenko Stanić, T. 34022–34024 (19 February 2013). Stanić maintained this position even when confronted with a magazine article which referred to the Government of the SAO Birač passing a decision on the movement of Bosnian Muslims from the area, see P6030 (Article from Javnost entitled “Serbian Region of Birač: Borders Determined”, 6 June 1992). See also Tomislav Savkić, T. 33786–33787 (15 February 2013) (testifying that the author of the article was not properly informed). at the camp and would then deliver those updated lists to the Vlasenica SJB.⁴⁰⁴⁰ The Sušica camp was equipped with a telephone and radio used for communicating with the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, the Vlasenica Battalion command, and the Vlasenica SJB.⁴⁰⁴¹ The SJB and the Vlasenica Crisis Staff received regular reports on the situation at the Sušica camp.⁴⁰⁴² The Vlasenica Crisis Staff also made decisions concerning the camp and detainees, such as decisions on release, visits by international representatives, and exchanges.⁴⁰⁴³

1183. In June 1992, Dragan Nikolić was put in charge of Sušica camp; he introduced himself to the detainees as the camp commander and said that he was “god and the law”.⁴⁰⁴⁴ Dragan Nikolić was a member of the Special Police Platoon and reported to Kraljević.⁴⁰⁴⁵ Other members of the Special Police Platoon would also come to the camp and were involved in questioning the detainees.⁴⁰⁴⁶

1184. The Chamber took judicial notice that the camp operated for four months until September 1992.⁴⁰⁴⁷ The first group of detainees which was brought to the facility included 300 male and female Bosnian Muslims from Šekovići municipality who had been detained by members of the MP and brought to Sušica in late May or early June 1992.⁴⁰⁴⁸ The VRS and Bosnian Serb police, including members of the Special Police Platoon, then brought other Bosnian Muslims from

⁴⁰⁴⁹ P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), paras. 67, 80 (under seal). Defence witnesses testified that (i) the municipal authorities decided to convert the TO facilities into a reception centre where Bosnian Muslims who had not left the municipality could be housed for their own protection; (ii) most Bosnian Muslims accepted the offer made by the municipal authorities for their temporary accommodation in the Sušica camp, until they could be transported to their location of choice; (iii) Sušica was not a camp but a reception centre which also housed Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Croats; (iv) some Bosnian Muslim families would go to Sušica at night and return to their homes during the day. Having regard to the weight of evidence, including the surrounding circumstances in the municipality and considering the credibility assessments of the relevant witnesses in fn. 3791, 3813, 3858, and 3894, the Chamber does not consider this evidence to be reliable. The Chamber also received a report which described Sušica camp as a “holding centre” to receive both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs who had voluntarily expressed a desire to leave the municipality and stated that the camp met the basic conditions for their temporary accommodation. P3250 (Report of Vlasenica SJB, 1 September 1992). In light of the weight of evidence and also considering KDZ033’s testimony as to the accuracy of P3250, the Chamber does not rely on this report’s characterisation of the nature, purpose of, and conditions at the Sušica camp. P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 91 (under seal). However, the Chamber finds that there were some people who came voluntarily to the camp as they expected faster transport from there out of Vlasenica to Bosnian Muslim controlled territory. 1185. Approximately 1,000 Bosnian Muslims were brought to the Sušica camp in the space of a few days.⁴⁰⁵⁵ During their transportation to the camp, Bosnian Muslims were threatened and subjected to racial slurs.⁴⁰⁵⁶ On arrival at the camp, the details of the detainees were recorded in a notebook.⁴⁰⁵⁷

1186. The vast majority of the detainees were civilians.⁴⁰⁵⁸ The women, children and elderly men were separated from the men and transported towards Kladanj while the men were detained in a hangar after being searched.⁴⁰⁵⁹ The identification papers and valuables of the detainees were confiscated.⁴⁰⁶⁰ The women were asked to sign a document saying that they were leaving Vlasenica of their own free will and those who refused to sign were threatened with being beaten or killed.⁴⁰⁶¹ Thereafter, only approximately 20 women remained at the camp, with approximately 800 women and children transported in buses, trucks and lorries from the camp over two days.⁴⁰⁶²

Contrary to this finding that the vast majority of the detainees were civilians, the Accused submits that only those who had been “involved in activities against the Bosnian Serbs” were involuntarily detained at the camp. Defence Final Brief, confidential, para. 1437, [REDACTED]. However, the evidence cited by the Accused does not support this proposition. For example [REDACTED] testified that some men were released “after it was probably established that they had not been involved in any activities against the Serb authorities”; the Chamber finds this to be pure speculation. With respect to the evidence of [REDACTED] cited by the Accused, there is no reference to this issue in the witness’s evidence.

Women were detained in a separate building near the hangar and with time there were fewer and fewer women detained there.⁴⁰⁶³

1187. On 7 June 1992, the Command of the Eastern Bosnia Corps reported to the Main Staff of the VRS, that in the area of Vlasenica they held around 800 prisoners.⁴⁰⁶⁴ In mid June 1992, the Birač Brigade Command reported to the Command of the Eastern Bosnia Corps that it was “necessary to urgently resolve the issue of prisoner camps” given the large number of detainees which endangered the safety situation in the town.⁴⁰⁶⁵ By mid June 1992 there were between 500 and 600 detainees at the camp.⁴⁰⁶⁶ The number of detainees fluctuated with detainees brought in and others taken away, with on average between 150 and 200 detainees at the camp, reaching a peak towards the end of June and the beginning of July 1992. Approximately 400 detainees were then transferred to the Batković camp in Bijeljina.⁴⁰⁶⁷ In total, approximately 2,000 to 2,500 Bosnian Muslim men, women, children and the elderly passed through the camp.⁴⁰⁶⁸

(b) Conditions of detention and treatment of detainees

1188. While Bašić and his deputy delivered updated lists of detainees to the company which prepared the food for camp detainees,⁴⁰⁶⁹ detainees at the camp were insufficiently fed. Water was very scarce, sanitary conditions were poor, and medical care was not provided.⁴⁰⁷⁰ In the first two or three days after his arrival, Osmanović and the detainees were brought food from their homes but this depended on the good will of the guards and the warden; if Nikolić was not in a good mood

they would not get any food.⁴⁰⁷¹ The detainees were provided with one meal a day which was served on 10 plates and the over 500 detainees had to eat from these plates which were not washed.⁴⁰⁷² The food was left-over from what the soldiers had eaten,⁴⁰⁷³ which was sour.⁴⁰⁷⁴ One cup of drinking water was distributed twice a day to the detainees.⁴⁰⁷⁵

1189. The detainees were held in a big hangar and slept on the concrete with planks⁴⁰⁷⁶ with no heating in the camp.⁴⁰⁷⁷ There were no beds in the camp⁴⁰⁷⁸ and the detainees were forced to sit on the concrete floor.⁴⁰⁷⁹ Some of the detainees had a blanket on which they slept.⁴⁰⁸⁰ In mid-June there was a terrible stench due to the inadequate toilet facilities.⁴⁰⁸¹ In the morning the detainees were taken in groups, ordered by the guards to line up and run to urinate in the Sušica river and to defecate behind an improvised shelter of two blankets.⁴⁰⁸² Detainees were sometimes beaten so they could not relieve themselves.⁴⁰⁸³ If detainees wanted to relieve themselves during the night they had to use a pot, which quickly filled which meant that the detainees simply relieved themselves in their pants and had no place to clean themselves.⁴⁰⁸⁴ Over time the detainees were engaged in the construction of toilets, were given sponges and blankets and provided with food supplies.⁴⁰⁸⁵

1190. Dragan Nikolić subjected the detainees to all kinds of mistreatment, including frequent beatings.⁴⁰⁸⁶ Some detainees would be beaten every day by Dragan Nikolić because they were accused of being members of the SDA and having weapons. Dragan Nikolić also threatened to kill them if they did not reveal the location of weapons.⁴⁰⁸⁷ He would beat the detainees with a truncheon, a pistol butt or kick them with his army boots. In one case he broke the ribs of a detainee.⁴⁰⁸⁸ On other occasions, Nikolić would force detainees to kneel on the floor and put his knife or a bayonet into their mouths to scare them during interrogations.⁴⁰⁸⁹

1191. Galib Smajlović and Dževad Šarić were taken out on several occasions from the hangar and beaten.⁴⁰⁹⁰ On or about 25 June 1992, Smajlović and Šarić were taken out by multiple guards including Dragan Nikolić, and then screaming was heard.⁴⁰⁹¹ Smajlović was dragged back into the hangar unconscious after being beaten outside.⁴⁰⁹² There were dark bruises on Smajlović's body and Šarić was very pale and was holding his stomach.⁴⁰⁹³ On another occasion in June 1992, Reuf Rasidagić was questioned by Nikolić and told "you will piss blood if you don't talk".⁴⁰⁹⁴ Rasidagić was beaten by Nikolić over four of five days and began to urinate blood and he begged Nikolić to kill him, but was told that one bullet cost money.⁴⁰⁹⁵

1192. Some detainees were also tied to a drain outside the hangar and had to kneel on sharp stones with their hands tied above their heads until they fainted.⁴⁰⁹⁶ Some were ordered by Nikolić to sit for 40 hours in a puddle of water with their hands behind their heads and legs spread on the ground as they were kicked and beaten.⁴⁰⁹⁷ On other occasions, Nikolić would cock an empty pistol, point

Jovanović on cross-examination maintained that he was not told about the murder, torture and sexual assault of detainees and that he did not witness the rape of a woman contrary to the statement of a victim who identified a Zoran Jovanović at the scene. In light of this cross-examination and considering its credibility assessment in fn. 3813, the Chamber does not find Jovanović's evidence to be reliable in this regard.

1193. Some detainees were interrogated at the camp itself while others were taken for interrogation to the Vlasenica SJB or other locations and some returned severely bruised after being beaten.⁴⁰⁹⁹ The interrogations were for the most part conducted by members of the Special Police Platoon⁴¹⁰⁰ while members of the Vlasenica SJB would take notes.⁴¹⁰¹ Some detainees were questioned about military operations and security issues while others were simply subjected to mistreatment for the purpose of obtaining their money.⁴¹⁰² The group of detainees from the area of Šekovići were frequently interrogated and physically abused by members of the Šekovići unit.⁴¹⁰³

1194. July 1992 most of the detainees were engaged in physical labour.⁴¹⁰⁸ The detainees who were taken for work left the camp at 7 a.m. and returned at about 5 p.m. or 6 p.m. in the evening.⁴¹⁰⁹ They performed several types of labour, including burial of bodies, digging of trenches, and carrying of munitions at frontlines.⁴¹¹⁰

1196. Further, each day a group of detainees was taken to the VRS barracks to work on renovations⁴¹¹¹ while others were sent for physical labour at factories, businesses and roads or were engaged in agricultural work while others were used to clean the houses abandoned by non-Serbs.⁴¹¹² These houses were looted and cleaned before Bosnian Serb refugees moved into them.⁴¹¹³ On one occasion detainees were ordered to set fire to the goods which had been looted from a Bosnian Muslim house⁴¹¹⁴ and on another occasion were forced to load onto a truck the rubble from the Vlasenica mosque which had been destroyed.⁴¹¹⁵ The detainees were afraid for their lives and of being beaten if they refused to work.⁴¹¹⁶ Some detainees taken for work

While the Chamber finds that detainees may have received better provisions while on work assignment, in light of the circumstances of detention including the beating and mistreatment, and the direct evidence of Osmanović that detainees were afraid to refuse work, the Chamber does not consider that the detainees from the camp voluntarily performed the work assignments. KDZ033 himself was equivocal and could not confirm whether or not the labour was forced or not.

1197. Every day a list was drawn up indicating the number of detainees needed on a given day for work.⁴¹¹⁸ When the detainees returned, the detainees list would be checked to confirm that all the detainees had returned; if a detainee was missing, the camp would inform the Vlasenica SJB and the person who took the detainees away would then explain whether the detainee had been released, taken to the SJB or killed.⁴¹¹⁹

(c) Transfer of detainees and inspection of camp

1198. In June 1992 the VRS prepared a strictly confidential report on the security at Sušica camp.⁴¹²⁰ This report also indicated that it was “impossible to apply any disinformation or cover-up measures because it is a public place” and that everyone was practically informed about the “number and structure of prisoners”.⁴¹²¹ In this regard, the report suggested that in order to “prevent informing the public about the prisoners’ appearance and the conditions they live in”, any attempts to take in recording devices or conduct interviews must be prevented and “extensive movement must be prohibited”.⁴¹²² In addition, the report indicated that visits of any type and the bringing of food and other material to the prisoners “must be prohibited” and recommended relocation of the camp.⁴¹²³

1199. Detainees were only released after receipt of written orders from officials, including the VRS security officer, the SJB chief, the Special Police Platoon commander.⁴¹²⁴ Despite being told they would be exchanged,⁴¹²⁵ able-bodied men were transferred to the Batković camp in three

1200. When representatives of an international organisation were scheduled to visit the Sušica camp, the Vlasenica SJB instructed those responsible for the camp that the detainees should be moved to another location urgently.⁴¹²⁸ In July 1992, representatives of international organisations visited Sušica camp.⁴¹²⁹ During these two visits, Nikolić managed to conceal many detainees and the true state of the conditions of detention.⁴¹³⁰ Before the arrival of international representatives, the detainees who remained in the camp were instructed to hide their belongings and were hidden in the forest.⁴¹³¹ A similar visit was carried out on 2 September 1992 by the CSCE, but the guards at the camp did not have enough time to hide the detainees before the international representatives accompanied by a Bosnian Serb delegation arrived.⁴¹³² However, there were only 30 or 40 detainees in the camp at the time and when questioned by the international representatives the detainees stated that they were just waiting for transport and had received fine treatment at the camp.⁴¹³³ However, the CSCE reported, inter alia, that the detainees had been held for more than two months, that they were fearful and reluctant to speak openly in front of the guards and seemed “haggard, pale and thin” but their state of nourishment could not be assessed as they were dressed in heavier clothing.⁴¹³⁴ After the visit Velibor Ostojić said that they would no longer have to hide

1201. Based on the above, the Chamber finds that from late May until the end of September 1992, large numbers of Bosnian Muslim civilians, including women, children and the elderly, were brought to and detained at Sušica camp by Serb Forces. At one point, women, children and the elderly were transported out of the municipality while the men continued to be detained. Their identification papers, money, and valuables were confiscated. The detainees were held in poor conditions which included lack of food, limited access to water, no bedding, poor sanitary and hygienic facilities, and no medical care. Detainees were subjected to frequent beatings with truncheons, guns, knives and were also subjected to other mistreatment and threats. Women at the camp were raped. Detainees were also forced to dig trenches and to carry munitions at the frontlines.

(e) Scheduled Incident B.18.1

1203. The Chamber took judicial notice that nine detainees in the Sušica camp were killed by camp guards or died from mistreatment and that these deaths were reported to warden Bašić with no consequences.⁴¹³⁸ After these killings, the detainees were simply removed from the list of 1204. During one of the nights on or about of 21 June 1992, Dragan Nikolić and Goran Tešić entered the hangar and took out a pensioner named Durmo Handžić and another detainee named Asim Zildžić, and then screaming was heard.⁴¹⁴¹ Handžić was questioned about the location of his son. The two detainees were then beaten with a spade and a pipe and kicked while they were lying on the ground.⁴¹⁴² Detainees were ordered to pour water over Handžić and Zildžić for them to regain consciousness. They were then carried back to the hangar.⁴¹⁴³ Zildžić's face was severely beaten, his eye was coming out of the socket, and he was spitting blood.⁴¹⁴⁴ Other detainees helped to wipe blood from Handžić's body as he moaned and sobbed.⁴¹⁴⁵ Zildžić and Handžić died shortly after being brought back to the hangar and other detainees were ordered to bury their bodies in unmarked graves.⁴¹⁴⁶

1205. On or about 25 June 1992, Dževad Šarić was taken out and killed with a sub-machine gun⁴¹⁴⁷ and detainees were ordered to take away his body and wash and cover the traces of the SJB was informed and the body was buried at the Muslim cemetery.⁴¹⁵⁷ Galib Musić was also beaten to death in the first half of July 1992.⁴¹⁵⁸

(f) Scheduled Incident B.18.2

1208. The Prosecution alleges that up to 140 detainees were killed in Sušica camp on or about 30 September 1992.

1209. By way of background to this incident, the Chamber notes that on 29 September 1992, the funeral for 29 Bosnian Serb soldiers killed by ABiH forces, was held at the Orthodox church in Vlasenica.⁴¹⁵⁹ Over 1,000 people attended the funeral, including the Bosnian Serb leadership from the municipality and from Pale, namely the Accused, Velibor Ostojić, Nikola Koljević and Svetozar Andrić, amongst others.⁴¹⁶⁰ Speeches were given at the funeral; the speakers and the crowd “were very agitated and embittered” by the death of the Bosnian Serb soldiers.⁴¹⁶¹ The Accused in his speech said: “Nor must we forget their executioners and attackers. I do not know if I am allowed to say that we must not forgive either. Who knows how many times this century our brothers, who are no brothers at all, have been at our throats. They assault our good men. But the Lords sees that and has given us strength to resist [...]”⁴¹⁶²

1210. The Accused gave an interview on the day of the funeral and said “We are concerned about Muslims, we want them to have their own territory. Since we wanted to separate from them, since we see that we can’t live together any longer. But, if they do not proclaim a realistic objective concerning territories, they may lose everything.”⁴¹⁶³

1211. After the funeral at around 9 or 10 p.m., Bosnian Serb police officers carrying automatic rifles arrived at the Sušica camp with a truck.⁴¹⁶⁴ At that time, approximately 140 to 150 non-Serb detainees remained at Sušica camp.⁴¹⁶⁵ The police officers said that they had been instructed by Mane Đurić to remove the detainees as soon as possible, that they should pack their belongings and that they would probably be transported to the frontline where they would be released.⁴¹⁶⁶ The police officers also presented a written order from the SJB Chief to the guards instructing them to hand over the detainees.⁴¹⁶⁷ The detainees were hurried to gather their belongings as quickly as possible and were loaded onto the truck in groups of 30 to 40 persons and taken towards Vlasenica town.⁴¹⁶⁸ The detainees who were taken in the first group were called out from a list of names.⁴¹⁶⁹ Approximately one and a half or two hours later the police officers returned with the empty truck and called out the names of the next group of detainees who were also loaded onto the truck.⁴¹⁷⁰ This process repeated itself with three or four groups of detainees taken away in the truck in this manner with the last group taken away in a small bus accompanied by a group of Bosnian Serbs wearing police and military uniforms.⁴¹⁷¹

1212. The Chamber took judicial notice that three MUP officers arrived at the Sušica camp, removed all 140 to 150 inmates in four loads, and killed them.⁴¹⁷² This included 41 non-Serb detainees who were taken away and killed by the Bosnian Serb police at Debelo Brdo.⁴¹⁷³ This

The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 3858 as to why Đurić's evidence in this regard is found to be unreliable. The Accused acknowledged that 140 to 150 people were taken from Sušica and killed but submitted that this was an impulsive act of revenge which was not the result of his visit or speech. incident was reported to members of the Vlasenica Crisis Staff, who took no action except to order the dismantling of the camp, the destruction of any documents, and the concealment of any traces of the existence of the camp.⁴¹⁷⁴

1213. The Chamber therefore finds that approximately 140 detainees were taken from Sušica camp on or about 30 September 1992 and killed by Serb Forces.

(F) Movement of the population from Vlasenica and appropriation of property

1214. A large number of both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs left Vlasenica in the lead-up to 21 April 1992.⁴¹⁷⁵ The departure of both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims increased when conflict began in Bijeljina and Zvornik.⁴¹⁷⁶ The mass departure of the Bosnian Muslim population from Vlasenica started at the beginning of April 1992 with most people leaving for Kladanj, Tuzla, and Živinice.⁴¹⁷⁷ Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim representatives went to Tuzla and appealed to the population to return, but when this failed the Bosnian Muslim leadership also left Vlasenica.⁴¹⁷⁸

The Chamber does not consider this to be inconsistent with the evidence regarding the movement of the population. Similarly the Chamber places no weight on the assessment that Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim populations relocated of their own initiative to villages where they were a majority and that this

1215. Redžić had contact with Izetbegović about allowing Bosnian Muslims a chance to flee Vlasenica.⁴¹⁷⁹ After the Bosnian Serb TO entered Vlasenica on 21 April 1992, some of the Bosnian Muslim population left for Kladanj and Tuzla.⁴¹⁸⁰ The Bosnian Serb authorities were asked for help in providing transport for people who were requesting to leave the municipality. Many inhabitants were then transported in the direction of Kladanj while others left in their own vehicles or by bus.⁴¹⁸¹

1216. The day after the JNA left Vlasenica in May 1992, local Bosnian Serbs fired mortar shells at the Bosnian Muslim villages of Pijuci, Džamdžići and Bare.⁴¹⁸² Following these attacks the Bosnian Muslims from these villages headed in the direction of Kladanj, Živinice and Cerska.⁴¹⁸³ Paramilitaries also used force which placed pressure on Bosnian Muslims to leave the municipality.⁴¹⁸⁴ Before being transferred from Vlasenica in May 1992, women from Zaklopača were made to sign statements that they would give their houses and property to the Bosnian Serbs.⁴¹⁸⁵

1217. On 19 May 1992, the Vlasenica Crisis Staff instructed the Commander of the TO and the Chief of the SJB that those who wanted to leave Vlasenica and who are “of no interest” to the SJB could do so after obtaining a permit.⁴¹⁸⁶ In order to be issued a pass to leave an individual had to sign a statement saying that they were leaving of their own free will.⁴¹⁸⁷ In accordance with this instruction, Bosnian Muslims queued outside the municipality building and before being issued a pass to leave the municipality had to sign a statement saying they were leaving of their own free will and that they were voluntarily surrendering their rights to their property.⁴¹⁸⁸ Osmanović's mother, who refused to sign this document, was denied permission to leave the municipality, was forcibly moved out of her house, and taken to Sušica.⁴¹⁸⁹

The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 3791 above as to why it does not consider Stanić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard.

1218. From May to October 1992, non-Serbs moved from Vlasenica and this movement related mainly to the town of Vlasenica and the central and central-northern parts of the municipality which had a majority Bosnian Muslim population.⁴¹⁹⁰

1219. Bosnian Muslims from villages that were taken over by Serb Forces in May 1992 gathered at the Vlasenica bus station or football stadium with their belongings waiting for an opportunity to leave the municipality.⁴¹⁹¹ While the Bosnian Serb authorities referred to this as "voluntary departure", these people were fleeing the municipality out of fear for their lives.⁴¹⁹² At some point the Bosnian Serb authorities did allow some Bosnian Muslims to return to their villages, but their homes had already been burnt down and almost destroyed.⁴¹⁹³

1220. In October 1992 there were very few non-Serbs,⁴¹⁹⁴ who had married Bosnian Serbs, who remained in Vlasenica town and by the end of 1992 there were approximately 150 Bosnian ⁴¹⁸⁸ P3227 (Witness statement of KDZ033 dated 7 April 2010), para. 23 (under seal); P3212 (Witness statement of Ibro Osmanović dated 23 August 2011), para. 58. Đurić acknowledged that Bosnian Muslims left fearing for their safety but they did so voluntarily and did not have any pressure put on them and that both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims had to sign documents saying they were leaving voluntarily. D3093 (Witness statement of Mane Đurić dated 3 March 2013), paras. 40–41. The Chamber does not find Đurić's evidence in this regard to be reliable. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 3858. Defence witnesses testified that (i) a commission was formed which sealed and subsequently assigned abandoned Bosnian Muslim homes for the temporary accommodation of Serb refugees to prevent property from being stolen; (ii) citizens could request that their houses be exchanged and the municipal authorities would approve such exchanges after checking to see that such contracts were done properly and not under coercion; and (iii) when the conditions were right, properties were returned to their original occupants. The Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fn. 3791 and 3813 as to why it does not find the evidence of these witnesses to be reliable to the extent that this suggests that these measures were taken to prevent property from being stolen, to prevent coercion, and to facilitate the return of property.

Muslims left in Vlasenica⁴¹⁹⁵ who had not been taken into detention.⁴¹⁹⁶ The Chamber has discussed above the detention of Bosnian Muslims in Vlasenica.⁴¹⁹⁷

1221. As discussed in more detail in Section IV.C.1.a, while Serb Forces were successful in taking over and holding town centres in municipalities including Vlasenica, pockets in the surrounding countryside, which had a Bosnian Muslim majority population, remained under the control of Bosnian Muslim forces.⁴¹⁹⁸ Bosnian Muslim forces in the second half of 1992 and early 1993 launched an offensive in which they took control of territory in Vlasenica and tried to link with Bosnian Muslim forces in Cerska.⁴¹⁹⁹ The counter-offensive by the VRS in spring 1993, prompted the movement of the vast majority of the Bosnian Muslim civilians who remained in Cerska and thousands fled towards Srebrenica.⁴²⁰⁰

1222. The Chamber finds that Bosnian Muslims were forced to leave the municipality, albeit in some cases, they may have left out of fear following the arrival of Bosnian Serb refugees or even requested to leave the municipality.⁴²⁰¹ Even if the Bosnian Muslims requested to leave the municipality the Chamber finds that this was still involuntary considering the surrounding circumstances in which they left the municipality.

(A) Charges

1223. Under Count 3, the Prosecution alleges that persecution, a crime against humanity, was committed in Zvornik as part of the objective to permanently remove Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats from the Municipalities.⁴²⁰² Under Count 1, the Prosecution further alleges that in certain municipalities, including Zvornik, this persecutory campaign included or escalated to include conduct that manifested an intent to destroy in part the national, ethnical and/or religious groups of Bosnian Muslims and/or Bosnian Croats as such.⁴²⁰³

1224. Acts alleged to have been committed in Zvornik by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include killings during and after the take-over;⁴²⁰⁴ killings related to detention facilities; and killings committed during, and deaths resulting from, cruel and inhumane treatment at scheduled detention facilities.⁴²⁰⁵ The Prosecution characterises these acts as killing, an underlying act of genocide, under Count 1; persecution, a crime against humanity, under Count 3; extermination, a crime against humanity, under Count 4, murder, a crime against humanity, under Count 5; and murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war, under Count 6.⁴²⁰⁶

1225. Other acts alleged to have been committed in Zvornik by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs include torture, beatings, and physical and psychological abuse, rape and other acts of sexual violence, during and after the take-over and in scheduled detention facilities, as well as the establishment and perpetuation of inhumane living conditions in detention facilities, as cruel or inhumane treatment, an act of persecution under Count 3.⁴²⁰⁷ In relation to Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that in scheduled detention facilities in Zvornik thousands of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats were subjected to cruel or inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, and beatings by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs; the Prosecution characterises this inhumane treatment as causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups, an underlying act of genocide.⁴²⁰⁸ In addition, under Count 1, the Prosecution alleges that members of the Bosnian Muslim and Bosnian Croat groups were detained under conditions of life calculated to bring about physical destruction, namely through cruel and inhumane treatment, including torture, physical and psychological abuse, rape, other acts of sexual violence, inhumane living conditions, forced labour and the failure to provide adequate accommodation, shelter, food, water, medical care or hygienic sanitation facilities.⁴²⁰⁹

1226. Under Count 3, other acts of persecution alleged to have been committed in Zvornik by Serb Forces and Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs, include (i) forcible transfer or deportation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from their homes;⁴²¹⁰ (ii) unlawful detention in scheduled detention facilities;⁴²¹¹ (iii) appropriation or plunder of property, during and after the take-over, during arrests and detention and in the course of or following acts of deportation or forcible transfer;⁴²¹² (iv) the wanton destruction of private property including homes and business premises and public property including cultural monuments and sacred sites;⁴²¹³ and (v) the imposition and maintenance of restrictive and discriminatory measures.⁴²¹⁴

1227. Under Counts 7 and 8, the Prosecution alleges deportation and inhumane acts (forcible transfer), respectively, as crimes against humanity.⁴²¹⁵ The Prosecution alleges that, by the end of 1992, Serb Forces as well as Bosnian Serb Political and Governmental Organs forcibly displaced Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats from areas in Zvornik in which they were lawfully present.⁴²¹⁶ It is alleged that from March 1992, restrictive and discriminatory measures, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment, torture, rape and other acts of sexual violence, killing, destruction of houses, cultural monuments and sacred sites, as well as the threat of further such acts caused Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats to flee in fear while others were physically driven out.⁴²¹⁷

(B) Lead-up

1228. Zvornik is a municipality in eastern BiH.⁴²¹⁸ It is located on the Drina river, which marks the boundary between BiH and Serbia.⁴²¹⁹ Prior to the war approximately 60% of the population in the municipality were Bosnian Muslims and approximately 38% were Bosnian Serbs.⁴²²⁰

1229. Prior to the formation of national parties in mid-1990 inter-ethnic relations in Zvornik were good.⁴²²¹ The SDS in Zvornik was formed in September 1990 and Branko Grujić was elected president.⁴²²² Following the multi-party elections, in November 1990, the SDA won an absolute majority of the votes in Zvornik but a coalition government was formed between the SDA and the SDS.⁴²²³ Official positions were divided between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs in accordance with the election results. For example, Abdulah Pašić was appointed president of the municipality, Jovan Ivanović was appointed chairman of the Executive Board of the Municipal Assembly, Osman Mustafić was appointed chief of the SJB while Dragan Spasojević was appointed commander of the SJB.⁴²²⁴

1230. In the summer of 1991, the Accused attended an SDS rally in Zvornik,⁴²²⁵ after which the SDS and SDA issued a joint declaration which expressed the need to maintain peace in the municipality and called for greater tolerance between ethnic groups there.⁴²²⁶ However, tensions in Zvornik increased from then on, caused by a number of factors including (i) SDA political rallies calling for the secession of BiH;⁴²²⁷ (ii) disputes about the SDA outvoting the SDS and personnel Defence witnesses disputed the date when the Zvornik Crisis Staff was created and testified that the purpose of its creation was to find a peaceful solution and to normalise relations through political discussions and to prepare for the danger that elected bodies could be blocked from discharging their functions. Having analysed this evidence, the Chamber does not find it to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion, the Chamber noted that the evidence of Grujić, Ivanović and Zelenović was marked by indicators of bias, evasiveness, insincerity and extensive contradictions.

⁴²³⁹ KDZ555, T. 17227 (16 August 2011); KW317, T. 39333–39334 (5 June 2013). However, witnesses also testified that there was no monitoring of the implementation of these instructions from a higher level, and that it was only selectively implemented in Zvornik after identifying elements which suited the municipality and excluding those aspects which could not be implemented in the municipality. KDZ555, T. 17234–17235 (16 August 2011) (private session), T. 17280 (16 August 2011), T. 17339 (17 August 2011); D3724 (Witness statement of Branko Grujić dated 22 June 2013), para. 18; Branko Grujić, T. 40367 (25 June 2013); KW317, T. 39333–39334 (5 June 2013). The Chamber does not find the evidence of these witnesses to be reliable with respect to the manner in which the Variant A/B Instructions were implemented in Zvornik. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the testimony of the relevant witnesses was marked by extreme evasiveness, attempts to distance themselves from prior statements, and indicators of bias. For example Grujić was contradicted on cross-examination by reference to his prior testimony and interview where he suggested that the Variant A/B Instructions were mandatory and that the Zvornik Crisis Staff reported back, received, and implemented additional instructions from the republic level. Grujić ultimately acknowledged that Jovo Mijatović was tasked with conveying all conclusions and decisions of the Zvornik Crisis Staff to the appropriate levels and would convey all instructions from the republic level. ⁴²⁴¹ P2591 (Decision regarding the formation of the Serbian Municipality of Zvornik, 27 December 1991), pp. 1–2. Witnesses testified the establishment of the Serbian Municipality of Zvornik and its Assembly was not for the purpose of creating a Serbian state or to take-over Bosnian Muslim territory, but to assist with negotiations, to allow the municipality to function in a crisis situation, and to ensure the protection of Bosnian Serbs. They also testified that while preparations were made, individuals were appointed to their positions and Serb institutions were created, they were not activated until 1992 when the conflict broke out. D3724 (Witness statement of Branko Grujić dated 22 June 2013), paras. 19, 21; KDZ555, T. 17344 (17 August 2011); D3654 (Witness statement of KW317 dated 26 September 2012), paras. 23–24, 26 (under seal); KW317, T. 39409–39410 (6 June 2013); Jovan Ivanović, T. 39844–39845 (12 June 2013); D3692 (Witness statement of Jovan Ivanović dated 9

1234. From early January 1992, employees of the SJB were in regular contact with the Steering Committee of the SDS and were instructed to gather support and prepare for the formation of a Serb SJB.⁴²⁴⁵

1235. The SDS took the position that the municipality and town should be divided geographically between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims but could not reach an agreement with the SDA.⁴²⁴⁶ On 15 March 1992, the Assembly of the Serb Municipality of Zvornik proclaimed the Serb Municipality of Zvornik, consisting of parts of the town, villages and communes where Bosnian Serbs were in the majority.⁴²⁴⁷ On the same date the Serb Assembly of Zvornik decided to join the SAO Majevisa-Semberija.⁴²⁴⁸ These decisions were made in accordance with the second level of the Variant A/B Instructions, which had been activated by the Accused at a meeting attended by a representative from Zvornik.⁴²⁴⁹

The Chamber refers to its assessment in fns. 4237 and 4239 as to why it cannot rely on the evidence of these witnesses with respect to the purpose of creating the Serb Municipality of Zvornik and when the Serb institutions were activated. Similarly the evidence of KW317 in this respect was also marked by attempts to distance himself from prior statements and contradictions which undermined his evidence in this regard.

The Chamber notes that when Vasilić was cross-examined about the percentage of the territory of Zvornik which was identified as being Serb he distanced himself from his prior interview where he estimated that it was 80%. Marinko Vasilić, T. 39920–39924 (13 June 2013); P6405 (Excerpt from Marinko Vasilić's interview with OTP, 21 October 2002), p. 2. The Chamber notes that Vasilić was extremely evasive when questioned and claimed he was not aware of the decision to form the Serb Municipality of Zvornik which listed the territories which it would comprise even though he had previously stated that he heard about the decision. In light of these contradictions and evasiveness the Chamber does not find Vasilić's evidence to be reliable in this regard.

“ethnic Serbs”.⁴²⁵⁰ In late March 1992, local youth were given assignments by Bosnian Serb police to erect barricades at specific locations, secure important facilities in Karakaj, and seize bridges.⁴²⁵¹

1237. At the end of March 1992, a decision was adopted by the Bosnian Serb Assembly, calling on the Bosnian Serb police to separate by 1 April 1992.⁴²⁵² On 4 April 1992, Bosnian Muslim forces attacked a column of JNA soldiers in Sapna, Zvornik municipality.⁴²⁵³ Following this incident, the Bosnian Serb authorities decided barricades would be erected in Karakaj and active and reserve SJB personnel who were Bosnian Serbs would be called up.⁴²⁵⁴ On 5 April 1992, Mandić sent a dispatch to Zvornik, noting that the MUP was being divided into Serb and Muslim components and ordered the movement of the Bosnian Serb institutions to Karakaj.⁴²⁵⁵ Karakaj was an industrial settlement located to the northeast of Zvornik.⁴²⁵⁶ Following this instruction, the police stations in the municipality, were divided into Serb and Muslim parts.⁴²⁵⁷

⁴²⁵⁰ P3151 (Decision of Zvornik’s Assembly, 15 March 1992), pp. 1–2. KDZ555 testified that this was a local measure that was not connected with the Variant B instructions. KDZ555, T. 17237–17239 (16 August 2011); KDZ555, T. 17344 (17 August 2011). However, the Chamber does not find KDZ555’s evidence to be reliable with respect to this issue. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that the evidence of KDZ555 was marked by indicators of extreme evasiveness, bias and contradictions.

The Chamber finds that Grujić was contradicted with respect to his evidence pertaining to this dispatch and does not find his evidence with respect to this issue to be credible. The Chamber finds however, that in the lead-up to the split of the police force, there had been increasing divisions and disputes between Bosnian Serb and Bosnian Muslim police including on issues relating to training in Croatia and mobilisation of reserve police stations. KDZ555, T. 17347 (17 August 2011). However, in light of its credibility assessment in fn. 4239, the Chamber does not consider that it can rely on KDZ555’s evidence in this regard.

1238. At a meeting of the SDS on 5 April 1992, Mile Mijić was appointed as chief of the SJB and Spasojević as its commander.⁴²⁵⁸ By 6 April 1992, following the orders of Spasojević who ordered the withdrawal of all Bosnian Serb police with their vehicles and equipment,⁴²⁵⁹ the Bosnian Serb MUP, the TO and the Zvornik Crisis Staff relocated to the Alhos building in Karakaj.⁴²⁶⁰ The Zvornik Crisis Staff met every day starting from 4 or 5 April 1992 and discussed how to take control of Zvornik, how to restore organs and authorities and how to organise armed formations.⁴²⁶¹

1239. On 10 April 1992, following the suggestion of Marko Pavlović,⁴²⁶² the Zvornik Crisis Staff formed the Interim Government of the Serb Municipality of Zvornik, after which the Zvornik Crisis Staff ceased operating and the other bodies of government were disbanded.⁴²⁶³ Grujić was chosen as acting chairman of the Interim Government which consisted of members of the SDS.⁴²⁶⁴

Mijić was replaced by Miloš Pantelić and Spasojević was replaced by Marinko Vasilić. In mid-June 1992, Pantelić was replaced by Vasilić and Momčilo Marić became the new commander. In turn, Vasilić was replaced by Milorad Lokanjcević at the end of July 1992.

The Chamber refers to its assessment in fns. 4237 and 4239 as to why it cannot rely on the evidence of these witnesses in this regard. Vasilić's evidence was also marked by contradictions and inconsistencies which undermined the reliability of his evidence in this regard.

(2) Militarisation of Zvornik

1240. From early 1992, both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims were arming themselves, but the Bosnian Serbs were better armed as they received support from the JNA.⁴²⁶⁵ The Bosnian Serb police also enabled the transport of weapons, ammunition and other material.⁴²⁶⁶ Towards the end of February 1992, at a meeting chaired by Grujić and attended by JNA officers and the military commander for Zvornik, Zoran Jovanović, there was a discussion about the formation of a military unit for the area of Zvornik.⁴²⁶⁷ Grujić also discussed the possibility of a Bosnian Serb attack on the town.⁴²⁶⁸ After this meeting, weapons were distributed by Jovanović to the homes of Bosnian Serb managers of businesses, factories, and municipal organs.⁴²⁶⁹ In early spring 1992, Bosnian Serb officials from Zvornik received weapons from Croatia and Serbia, which were distributed to the villages around Zvornik.⁴²⁷⁰

1241. On 4 April 1992, the Command of the 17th Corps of the JNA reported that in municipalities, including Zvornik, there was a real danger of deterioration in the security situation and there was a threat of inter-ethnic conflict.⁴²⁷¹

1242. Following the attack against the JNA column on 4 April 1992,⁴²⁷² Arkan's men were asked to come urgently to the municipality.⁴²⁷³ On the night between 5 and 6 April 1992, Arkan's men, other paramilitaries, soldiers from Serbia, and local Bosnian Serb police constructed barricades and check-points.⁴²⁷⁴ These check-points were manned by Serbs wearing camouflage uniforms⁴²⁷⁵ and some Bosnian Muslims were stopped at check-points, searched, and beaten.⁴²⁷⁶ Bosnian Muslims also erected barricades on the bridge from Zvornik to Serbia.⁴²⁷⁷ Bosnian Serbs also formed village guards in areas where they lived and set up barricades around their villages.⁴²⁷⁸

1244. Grujić and Spasojević were among the Bosnian Serb officials who invited and paid for paramilitaries to come to Zvornik.⁴²⁸³ Between 5 and 8 April 1992, paramilitary units from Serbia arrived in Zvornik. These included the White Eagles led by Aždaja;⁴²⁸⁴ the unit led by Vojin Vučković, known as Žučo, and his brother Dušan Vučković (a.k.a. Repić);⁴²⁸⁵ the Red Berets led Defence witnesses testified that (i) they had never heard about such an invitation by the Crisis Staff; (ii) Grujić did not invite the paramilitary formations into Zvornik; and (iii) they did not know who called these units. D3724 (Witness statement of Branko Grujić dated 22 June 2013), para. 55; Branko Grujić, T. 40363–40364, 40383–40384 (25 June 2013); P6414 (Excerpt from Branko Grujić's interview with OTP, 15 July 2002), pp. 4–5; D3723 (Witness statement of Čedomir Zelenović dated 22 June 2013), para. 35; Čedomir Zelenović, T. 40321–40325 (24 June 2013), T. 40338 (25 June 2013). The Chamber does not find the evidence of Grujić and Zelenović to be reliable in this regard. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber noted that Grujić had an interest in downplaying his own role and involvement with the paramilitaries and his testimony in this regard was marked by inconsistencies and contradictions. Zelenović simply stated that he had not heard of such an invitation and when cross-examined on the issue of support to paramilitaries by local authorities he was evasive.

(C) Events in early April 1992

(1) Take-over

1248. On 6 April 1992, the Zvornik Crisis Staff issued a decision declaring a state of war in the territory of the Serb Municipality of Zvornik, temporarily taking over the responsibilities of the municipal organs, and assigning defence duties to the Zvornik TO and parts of the reserve SJB.⁴³⁰⁵

1249. The attack on Zvornik began on or about 8 April 1992.⁴³⁰⁶ The units which took part in the attack included Arkan's men, SRS volunteers,⁴³⁰⁷ members of the police, Zvornik TO and the JNA, and men from groups belonging to Niški, Pivarski, Žučo, Gogić, as well as the White Eagles.⁴³⁰⁸ Pavlović and Peja were involved in planning and commanding the attack.⁴³⁰⁹ The Bosnian Serb police were ordered by Spasojević to follow Arkan's men during the attack and to patrol, occupy, Witnesses testified that only a small number of Karakaj TO members helped in the lifting of the blockade, that the JNA was not involved at all, that Arkan's men launched the attack to lift the blockade of Zvornik but nobody in the municipal government, including the Zvornik Crisis Staff, had requested or authorised the attack. The Chamber finds the evidence of Grujić and KW317 about who was involved in authorising or conducting the attack on Zvornik to be unreliable. In reaching that conclusion the Chamber refers to its credibility assessment in fns. 4237 and 4239. The Chamber also notes that it is contradicted by other credible evidence about the involvement of Pavlović and Spasojević in the operation as well as the participation of the Bosnian Serb police and the Zvornik TO in the attack. It is also not consistent with measures taken by the Zvornik Crisis Staff in the lead-up to the attack.

and secure important facilities in the town.⁴³¹⁰ Arkan's men entered the SUP building, took all documents and equipment and destroyed everything else.⁴³¹¹ After the initial attack, about half of Zvornik was under the control of Serb Forces and over the following 20 odd days, almost all of the remaining territory of the town also came under their control.⁴³¹² A Bosnian Muslim part of the municipality remained around Sapna.⁴³¹³

1250. There were clashes between Serb Forces and Bosnian Muslim forces on 8 April 1992 and Serb Forces launched an artillery attack; they shelled the town, including with heavy mortars.⁴³¹⁴ The town of Zvornik fell quickly following the attack by Serb Forces.⁴³¹⁵ Bosnian Muslims who were hiding in their homes heard on radio that the Patriotic League defence lines had been broken but initially were unable to leave Zvornik because of shelling.⁴³¹⁶ However, on the evening of 8 April 1992, when there was a lull in the shooting, approximately 10,000 people, the majority of whom were Bosnian Muslims, managed to leave Zvornik with most crossing to Mali Zvornik.⁴³¹⁷

1251. Buildings in the town of Zvornik were burnt, windows were broken and there were traces of shooting on the walls.⁴³¹⁸ Armed soldiers wearing black uniforms were seen entering buildings; houses were either hit with mortars or set on fire.⁴³¹⁹ During the attack, paramilitaries, including Arkan's men, were involved in looting.⁴³²⁰ By the morning of 9 April 1992, Zvornik was under the control of Serb Forces; a Serbian flag was flying over the main mosque and Serbian music was played through the loudspeakers on the minarets.⁴³²¹ In the following days, the Chief of the CSB in Bijeljina,⁴³²² and the Bosnian Serb municipal leadership and military commanders⁴³²³ were informed that Zvornik was under the control of Serb Forces and “had been liberated”. Grujić reported on the situation in the municipality to the SDS Main Board.⁴³²⁴ Milorad Davidović was told by Mićo Stanišić that Arkan’s forces were in Zvornik and Bijeljina and “helping to liberate territory [that] they believed should become part of [the RS]”.⁴³²⁵

1252. After the take-over of Zvornik, Arkan’s men, members of the JNA, and SRS volunteers withdrew⁴³²⁶ but other groups lead by Žučo, Pivarski, Niški, and Crni remained in town.⁴³²⁷ After Arkan’s departure Pavlović took on a commanding role with the paramilitaries.⁴³²⁸

(2) Scheduled Incident A.16.1

1254. The Prosecution alleges that at least 15 people were killed in the town of Zvornik between 9 and 10 April 1992.

1255. During the attack on Zvornik, Arkan’s men “piled dozens of dead bodies”, including the bodies of children, women, and elderly persons onto four or five trucks while other bodies remained in the streets and outside houses.⁴³³³ Among those killed was Fehim Kujundžić, the director of the Karakaj Technical School,⁴³³⁴ Muhamed Zaimović, a municipal judge,⁴³³⁵ and the three sons of Rasim Karaosmanović.⁴³³⁶

Given this qualification, the Chamber does not consider Grujić’s evidence with respect to the nature and number of casualties in Zvornik to be of much weight. In addition considering that Grujić’s evidence was marked by multiple contradictions and evasiveness, the Chamber does not consider Grujić’s evidence to be reliable in this regard.

1256. On the morning of 9 April 1992, approximately 10 Serb soldiers in camouflage uniforms, masks and fingerless black gloves detonated the door leading to a basement in a building on Filipa Kljajića street.⁴³³⁷ A group of over 30 men, women and children were sheltering at this location, and the soldiers ordered them to surrender any weapons and then forced them out to the street at gun point.⁴³³⁸ During this process, men and women were separated and 15 men were lined up against the wall of the apartment building after which a burst of gunfire was heard.⁴³³⁹ The women were forced to walk away from the scene by the soldiers.⁴³⁴⁰ KDZ023 was later told by other women that they had seen the dead bodies of the men who had been taken out of the cellar in front of the apartment building.⁴³⁴¹ KDZ059 also heard that many men had been killed on Filipa Kljajića street, including Taib Futović and his son.⁴³⁴²

1257. When KDZ023 sought information from Branko Grujić about the men who had been separated, she was told that there was no longer a place for them in Zvornik.⁴³⁴³ When she returned to the scene a week later she found her husband's hat and son's sports shoes, which were covered in blood, and saw that there was blood on the wall, which was also "peppered with bullet holes".⁴³⁴⁴ Bosnian Serb authorities were involved in organising the collection of civilian bodies for burial.⁴³⁴⁵

The Chamber notes that the Prosecution connects these two individuals to Taib Hudović and Asim Hudović whose bodies were exhumed from a mass grave according to Mašović. Prosecution Final Brief, Appendix G referring to P4853 (Updated Table 2 to the Report of Amor Mašović), p. 57. The Chamber is not satisfied that these bodies can be linked to the evidence of KDZ059.

The Chamber also received evidence that approximately 120 bodies of those killed between 8 and 23 April 1992, were stored in a warehouse at the Alhos building until they were buried in a mass grave. KDZ610, T. 27190 (29 March 2012) (private session); P4837 (Witness statement of KDZ610 dated 27 March 2012), paras. 22–27, 31 (under seal); P4841 (Letter from FBiH Commission for Missing Persons, 30 July 2007). However, the Chamber notes that this period extends beyond the allegations in the Indictment for the purposes of this scheduled incident and that it has insufficient evidence to link these bodies with this incident. The Chamber also received evidence about the disappearance and killing of non-Serbs and the exhumation of mass graves in Zvornik. P4841 (Letter from FBiH Commission for Missing Persons, 30 July 2007); P4903 (Crni Vrh Exhumation Report by Derek Congram, 14 November 2003); D2250

1258. The Chamber therefore finds that at least 15 people were killed by Serb Forces on or about 9 April 1992 in the town of Zvornik.

(D) Events in other villages in Zvornik municipality

1259. As mentioned above,⁴³⁴⁶ after the attack on Zvornik, many Bosnian Muslims left Zvornik and headed to other villages in the municipality. From then on, paramilitary units were involved in operations against Bosnian Muslims in these villages in which they arrested individuals and detained them in facilities, which were then taken over by the police.⁴³⁴⁷

(1) Kula Grad

1260. Kula Grad is a town located to the southwest of Zvornik.⁴³⁴⁸ On 8 April 1992, there were between 5,000 and 6,000 Bosnian Muslims from Zvornik town in Kula Grad when an attack was launched.⁴³⁴⁹ Kula Grad was shelled from a JNA tank unit causing casualties in the town which prompted some of the Bosnian Muslims to flee towards Tuzla.⁴³⁵⁰ Bosnian Muslim forces in Kula Grad resisted a number of attacks by Arkan's men on the village.⁴³⁵¹ On 26 April 1992, Serb Forces, including paramilitaries, and local police, launched an early morning attack on Kula Grad

The Chamber will not rely on this evidence in the absence of a positive connection with a scheduled killing incident charged in the Indictment.

(2) Kozluk

1261. Kozluk is a town approximately 20 kilometres from Zvornik⁴³⁵⁵ which had a majority Bosnian Muslim population before the war.⁴³⁵⁶ Bosnian Muslims from the neighbouring Bosnian Muslim villages of Šepak and Skočić had fled to Kozluk on account of their fear of Serb Forces who had been demanding the surrender of weapons.⁴³⁵⁷ Following the take-over of Zvornik, Kozluk was completely surrounded by Serb Forces, who set up barricades in surrounding villages and cut off exit routes.⁴³⁵⁸

For the same reasons the Chamber does not consider Grujić's evidence reliable with respect to other events in Kozluk, including the treatment of the Bosnian Muslim population, the voluntariness of their departure from Kozluk, and the attack on Kozluk. mid-June 1992, the citizens of Kozluk were subjected to acts of intimidation, which included shooting and throwing of grenades.⁴³⁶¹

1263. The Bosnian Serb authorities tried to prevent the Bosnian Muslim population from leaving towards Tuzla;⁴³⁶² however, by the end of May 1992 a large number of Bosnian Muslims had managed to leave Kozluk, including 5,000 to 6,000 people who returned to their homes in Šepak and Skočić and approximately 3,000 people who left for foreign countries.⁴³⁶³

1264. In June 1992, Bosnian Muslim police officers in Kozluk were forced to surrender their weapons and uniforms,⁴³⁶⁴ after which there was extensive shooting near the town.⁴³⁶⁵ In the lead-up to the attack on Kozluk, Bosnian Serb paramilitary units started training local Serbs.⁴³⁶⁶ The local Serbs were told by Pavlović to mark all Serb houses so they would not be shot at.⁴³⁶⁷ Pavlović organised and ordered an attack on Kozluk on the morning of 21 June 1992.⁴³⁶⁸ Between 20 and 25 June 1992, a large number of Bosnian Serb soldiers, TO and paramilitary units entered Kozluk in military vehicles; during this period some Bosnian Muslims were beaten and their goods were looted.⁴³⁶⁹ The strong military presence including tanks, the attacks on local citizens, and the burning of property, increased the pressure on the Bosnian Muslim population to leave.⁴³⁷⁰

1265. Fadil Banjanović was summoned to meet with Grujić and Jovo Mijatović on or about 26 June 1992 at the Kozluk police station.⁴³⁷¹ He was informed that the authorities could no longer guarantee the safety of the Bosnian Muslim population. He was told that the Bosnian Muslims had to leave the town within an hour and that everything, including transportation, had been organised.⁴³⁷² Mijatović told Banjanović that “an all-out attack was being prepared on Kozluk”, that there “could be a massacre”, and all Muslims would be killed if they did not move out.⁴³⁷³

1266. The operation to move out the Bosnian Muslim population was ordered by Pavlović⁴³⁷⁴ and carried out by the commander of the MP known as “Studen”.⁴³⁷⁵ Soldiers forced Bosnian Muslims to gather in the centre of town, while beating and opening fire at them.⁴³⁷⁶ People from the nearby locality of Skočić were also ordered to assemble in the centre of Kozluk.⁴³⁷⁷ Bosnian Serb soldiers registered the names of the Bosnian Muslims who had gathered, told them that they could not take any personal belongings, and forced them to sign statements that they gave up their property.⁴³⁷⁸

1267. After this, a convoy⁴³⁷⁹ of buses, trucks, trailers and cars took almost 2,000 villagers from over 500 households from Kozluk to Šabac in Serbia, where they were transferred to trains to the Serbian-Hungarian border. From then on, Serbs who had fled other locations were settled in Kozluk.⁴³⁸⁰

The Chamber refers to fns. 4237 and 4239 as to why it does not consider KW317’s evidence as to the circumstances in which the Bosnian Muslim population left Kozluk to be reliable. Further, the Chamber notes specific contradictions, attempts to minimise his own involvement and his acknowledgement on cross-examination that Bosnian Muslims did not move of their own free will. KW317, T. 39362–39365 (6 June 2013).

1268. Documents and statements were provided which stated that Bosnian Muslims from Kozluk had explicitly, and without any duress, requested resettlement.⁴³⁸¹ However, Banjanović stated that these documents did not reflect the actual situation and that while “[t]hey wrote this letter saying that we were doing everything voluntarily, but in fact, they expelled us. We left in trucks, in buses. The stoning, the beating, the killings [were] not an act of benevolence but an act of expulsion. Why would 5,000 people leave their homes?”⁴³⁸² Having reviewed the evidence, the Chamber finds that the Bosnian Muslims did not leave voluntarily, and even if some had provided statements which indicated that they left voluntarily, these statements were given in intimidating and violent circumstances, which negated the voluntariness of these departures.

1269. From April 1992, Serb Forces attacked or took over a number of villages including Dugi Dio,⁴³⁸³ Snagovo,⁴³⁸⁴ Divič,⁴³⁸⁵ Đulići which was also known as Bijeli Potok,⁴³⁸⁶ and Liplje.⁴³⁸⁷ Women and girls from the village of Liplje were raped by Serb Forces.⁴³⁸⁸ During some of these attacks Serb Forces set fire to houses, destroyed mosques and cut the electricity supply.⁴³⁸⁹ These attacks prompted the Bosnian Muslim population to flee their villages,⁴³⁹⁰ after which Bosnian Serbs moved into Bosnian Muslim homes.⁴³⁹¹ When some Bosnian Muslims who had fled Divič tried to return they were turned away by Serb Forces.⁴³⁹²

1270. In late April 1992, Bosnian Muslims of Kostijerevo, following a demand by Serb Forces handed over weapons.⁴³⁹³ Similarly, in the second half of May 1992, the Zvornik Crisis Staff called for the surrender of weapons which was complied with by villages, including Đulići, Šetići, Klisa, Kaldrane, Sjenokos, Drina, Kučić-Kula, Mrakonci, Durakovići, Lupe, Tršić, and Petkovci.⁴³⁹⁴

1271. Some villages were attacked multiple times until they fell to Serb Forces.⁴³⁹⁵ In late May 1992, between 400 and 500 Bosnian Muslims from Divič, including women, children and the elderly, were forced onto buses by Yellow Wasps and taken to Crni Vrh where they were allowed to leave for Bosnian Muslim territory on foot.⁴³⁹⁶

1272. On or about 28 May 1992, the Bosnian Serb Crisis Staff in Sapna, announced that all residents of Šetići and 13 other hamlets should gather in Klisa to be moved to Živinice.⁴³⁹⁷ After this announcement Serbs warned their Bosnian Muslim neighbours, that they would be killed and that they should flee towards Klisa.⁴³⁹⁸ As a result more than 4,000 people, including women and children, gathered at Klisa and some headed towards Međeđa and Tuzla.⁴³⁹⁹

On 30 May 1992, Serbian Radio Zvornik, informed all citizens of the Drinjača-Kostijerevo commune to stay in their homes and co-operate with the “army” which would arrive.⁴⁴⁰⁸ Then, soldiers dressed in the JNA reserve uniform arrived, firing shots.⁴⁴⁰⁹ About 150 people, including women and children, were gathered and ordered to form a column before being escorted to the cultural centre in Drinjača.⁴⁴¹⁰

(E) Developments in Zvornik after take-over

(1) Measures imposed in Zvornik

1275. On 8 April 1992, the Zvornik Crisis Staff imposed a curfew on all civilians⁴⁴¹¹ and issued an order for the general mobilisation of all adults in the Serb Municipality of Zvornik.⁴⁴¹² Both Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Serbs were issued with passes by the military authorities allowing free movement and all citizens were required to have these passes. Paramilitaries would stop people to check these passes.⁴⁴¹³

1276. Some Bosnian Muslims were prevented from going to work, and those who attempted to do so, were stopped at a barricade in Karakaj, slapped, insulted, and sent home.⁴⁴¹⁴ After the conflict broke out, some Bosnian Muslims were fired from their jobs⁴⁴¹⁵ and Bosnian Muslim judges were expelled from the municipality.⁴⁴¹⁶ In April 1992, Bosnian Serb authorities called on both Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims to return to work and live in Zvornik, declaring it was safe to do so.⁴⁴¹⁷ However, Bosnian Muslims who did return were taken in for interviewing,⁴⁴¹⁸ had to register,⁴⁴¹⁹ and in order to remain employed, had to sign a pledge of loyalty to the Bosnian Serb authorities.⁴⁴²⁰ Some Bosnian Muslims after being questioned by the police were kept effectively under house arrest, and in one case in May 1992, Serb Forces called out the names of Bosnian Muslims who

KDZ023 testified that the registration was only a pretext and those who returned and registered were killed. However, the Chamber considers KDZ023's evidence in this regard to be speculative. were still living in a building in Zvornik.⁴⁴²¹ White Eagles also searched Bosnian Muslim apartments, at times using violence.⁴⁴²²

1277. In May 1992, an agency was established which was authorised to execute exchanges of real estate between residents of Zvornik and other municipalities.⁴⁴²³ Through this commission the abandoned property of Bosnian Muslims was seized and distributed to Bosnian Serbs who had moved to Zvornik.⁴⁴²⁴ By August 1992, Bosnian Serb authorities in Zvornik did take measures to move out individuals who unlawfully moved into property and to investigate cases of plunder of property.⁴⁴²⁵

1278. On 6 June 1992, Mladić issued an urgent directive to secure communications from Sarajevo to Zvornik and mop up or cleanse the zone of “remaining enemy groups”.⁴⁴²⁶ More specifically the Eastern Bosnia Corps was directed to secure road access and to mop up or cleanse Birač of remaining “enemy forces”.⁴⁴²⁷ This directive also stated that “maltreating of civilian unarmed population is strictly forbidden and prisoners must be treated pursuant to [the] Geneva Convention[s]”.⁴⁴²⁸ The Command of the Eastern Bosnia Corps issued an order to the Zvornik Brigade on 7 June 1992, which reflected this directive and also strictly prohibited the maltreatment of the unarmed civilian population.⁴⁴²⁹

1279. On 17 June 1992, the Accused confirmed the appointment of five members of the War Commission of the Serb Municipality of Zvornik, which was to disband the Interim Government

(2) Actions of paramilitaries

1280. On 18 April 1992, the Interim Government issued an order to form a special unit tasked with securing the territory of the Serb Municipality of Zvornik.⁴⁴³² This special unit was referred to as the Igor Marković unit and was later known as the Yellow Wasps.⁴⁴³³ Members of the Yellow Wasps would regularly report to the Zvornik Crisis Staff.⁴⁴³⁴ The Yellow Wasps had close cooperation with, and were issued arms by, the TO⁴⁴³⁵ and were subsequently under the command of the Zvornik Brigade.⁴⁴³⁶ In May 1992, the Zvornik TO was transformed into the Zvornik Brigade, which formed part of the Eastern Bosnia Corps.⁴⁴³⁷ Žučo reported to, and received orders from, the Brigade command.⁴⁴³⁸ Pivarski's Group received orders from Pavlović although it was under the command of the Zvornik Brigade as was Niški's Group.⁴⁴³⁹ When volunteers and paramilitaries arrived in Zvornik they reported to the Zvornik Crisis Staff and were sent to the TO to be deployed.⁴⁴⁴⁰ Members of paramilitary and volunteer units were on the payroll of the Zvornik TO or Zvornik Brigade and were paid by municipal bodies, including the TO Staff and Zvornik Crisis Staff, which also paid for their transportation to Zvornik.⁴⁴⁴¹ Pavlović had a major role in arming

1281. Before being integrated into the Eastern Bosnia Corps, the Zvornik TO worked in parallel and in co-operation with the Zvornik Brigade, which allowed both Pavlović and the Zvornik Brigade commander to issue orders to military units in Zvornik.⁴⁴⁴⁵ In June 1992, Pavlović was appointed commander of “the single military and territorial command” of the Serb Municipality of Zvornik.⁴⁴⁴⁶

Defence witnesses testified that the local authorities did not dare enter into a more detailed analysis of who was on payment lists because of fear and that they were forced to provide logistical support by the paramilitaries. However, the Chamber notes that on cross-examination Grujić was challenged about this testimony and did not adequately explain why he had not previously mentioned this theory that payments were made under coercion. Branko Grujić, T. 40390 (25 June 2013); P6415 (Excerpt from Branko Grujić's testimony before Belgrade District Court, 30 November 2005), pp. 9–10. The Chamber further notes that Grujić's evidence was marked by multiple contradictions and evasiveness and does not consider it to be reliable in this regard. Zelenović was shown P2913, which showed Grujić requesting payment from the republican authorities for members of the TO without mentioning any coercion. The Chamber does not consider Zelenović's evidence to be reliable in this regard considering that his testimony was marked by evasiveness.
